Farm Electrification

ELECTRICITY AGRICULTURE Go Hand in Hand in The Snake River Valley

It was 30 years ago this summer when Idaho F commenced its program of farm electrification. Interrupted by the first World War, the building of Hnes was recounted during the twentics. Even the depression of the 1930's did not halt this work.

During the recent wartime the extension of farm electrification was limited in accordance with conservation rules, but many farms received electricity at that time to assist in the vital production of foods.

Today Idaho Power Company serves over 90 per cent of all farms in its service area, and is utilizing available manspower and materials to finish the job.

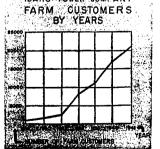

The company assumed the responsibility, thirty years ago, of supplying all the electric needs of its territory, both in towns and on farms. The chart shows how consistently we have in-creased our service to farm customers.

Farm customers served by Idaho Power Company enjoy the me low rates as town and city domestic customers and taxes paid on our 5547 miles of rural lines are a major constribution to school districts and other branches of local, state and federal rovernment.
