Atten, Morse and Ves, along with four strongly pro-labor Democrats. There is no black-and-while simplicity about such things as industry-wide bargain-ling, the claced shop, union shop and main-tonance-of-membership agreements. They are complex matters in which both the pros and the antis have some persuasive argu-ments at their disposal. Their merits need a thoughtul, dispassionate restudy in the light of the mast fended se xerelence.

and the the start of the second secon

mentation of business and eventual destruc-tion of the profit system. Henry Mayer, counsel for independent unions of telephone and utility workers, dis-misses the moot question of the closed shop thus: "The insistence that the so-called closed shop is an infringement of an indi-vidual's liberty is completely insincere, since depends upon the collective barganing strength acquired through association with other workers."

other workers." Mr. Hollander counters, but does not refute, the charge that there are labor monopolies by saying that "the real monopolies in this country are the giant componions ruled by a handful of financiers."

OMNIPOTENT GENERALITY

that the military man thinks only in terms of force." It seems to us that we need be less afraid of 'the military man' and his way of thinking than of the sort of mind that, with one broad sweep of a generality, can judge and condemn a class, nation, race or religion. Such thinking is easy and contagious. It is remarkably efficient in one way, since one (dea--usually borrowd-can serve for a mil-lion men as well as it can for one. Thus we hear that habor or labor icaders always do so and so, and industry always does something else. We hear great segments of our popula-tion lumped into Republicans or new dealers, reactionaries or liberais, and assigned a com-mon emotion.

ion imper and there are a sugged a com-mon emotion. The same thing is done for the Jews, the Russiana, the Germans, or wheever happens to be the object of the seneralizers attention. It is this sort of thinking on which dema-gogues feed. It is a powerful simulant to mass bigotry and the popular will to make war, Adol Hiller, it will be recalled, took full advantage of it. The general's generality quoted above is probably not dangerous in itself, although we don't think it is any truer than other gen-gendings. It is rather, a symptom of a type of thinking that always is explosive and is par-fering on the symptom of a type of albeidy contains an explosive atom.
