That seems clearly to have been the case in Germany. A recent statement by the former head of Nari air research changes the traditional pic-ture of the thorough, orderly German mind. Research, says this statement, had pienty of money and equipment but no official sym-pathy. The intuitive Hilter distrusted the scientists. Skurish underlings aped him, while government factions and rivalries, helped stille scientific research. We had factions and rivalries, too, but they were aired by the press and commented on without fear. Fublic opinion was informed and free to speak. And public opinion count-ed, even in the rather undemornite process of aupplying and conducing a war. Freedom had a practical advantage over fear. This is borre out in interesting testi-mony given by Albert Speer, the last Nasi pro-

Tesh. This is borne out in interesting test-mony given by Albert Speer, the last Nasi pro-duction boss. Replying to an American questioner's re-mark that "we had too much criticism" in America, Bpeer sadd: "It is better to have too much criticism than none. ... Free criticsm ... eliminates its own dangers... However, when the gov-erned ... have lost the impulse to report to their superiors, then the danger of mental isolation at the top becomes very great, and the true effect of the orders that have been given,casse to be known there." That is the practical opinion of an appar-ently amart Naal. And with it he explodes the myth of the efficiency of a dictatorship wartime. It was democracy, not dictatorship, which kept a vigilant watch with a strong ight, which send once dire to the bet-
