

Drivers Told To Watch for Blind People

(From Page One)
The cars whizzed by, their drivers ignoring the signal.
"And," grumbled Wiley, "after he did get across the street, some fool pedestrian bumped into him!"
"What's to stop you from losing your car?" Wiley declared, "I continued. 'Think it over the next time you bully your way past a handicapped pedestrian; you might be on your knees and not your horns.'"
Turning to another physical disability, the deputy sheriff recited a brake manufacturer's slogan: "Rely on your brakes and not your horns."
"Sure, with a discourteous attitude, and that's what you are, a discourteous person, on some unsympathetic pedestrian or another driver and scare him clear into the next county," Wiley declared, "but deaf people just aren't scared by horns they can't hear."
"And," he continued, "What's to keep you from losing your own hearing in a car wreck?"
The deputy sheriff pointed out there's not much point in blowing a horn to clear the road if the car doesn't have the brakes to stop in case a handicapped person can't get out of the way.
State law not only requires that a vehicle have brakes adequate to stop and hold it, but that the brakes be kept in good working order. Frequent traffic safety check-ups reveal a surprisingly large number of vehicles have brakes that are next to useless.
Describing another type of handicapped person requiring courtesy and watchfulness on the part of drivers, Wiley requested, "Give the crippled and the aged a chance. Car drivers who sometimes spend a lot of time on crutches. Before causing out the man on crutches for holding up traffic, remember it wouldn't take much of an accident to put you on crutches tomorrow."
He tripped and falls under your car," he admonished "an agile person has a chance to get out of your way if your manners are such that he has to, but a cripple or an elderly person doesn't have that chance. You can't avoid a creasing up on you, but you can avoid crippling accidents."

Instructor of Blind People Asks Caution

participate in the traffic and take of everyday life on the street. It is the obligation of the blind person to serve this notice, and then it is the duty of the drivers to recognize it and act accordingly. In other words, it says, 'Brother, I can't see what you're doing, so watch out!'
Crawford explained that some blind persons feel that the canes are a "mark" of a "stigma" and refuse to carry them. As they are recognized by the state law as a standard protection to the blind, he believes that such a feeling has no real foundation.
He cited an incident which occurred in his former home community, Salt Lake City, where a young blind woman refused to carry a cane and was struck by a car as she was boarding a bus. This tragedy, which struck the driver nearby as severely as the blind woman, might have been avoided by use of a cane.
Among the most dangerous traffic situations a blind person may encounter is that in which much of an accident to put you on crutches tomorrow."
He tripped and falls under your car," he admonished "an agile person has a chance to get out of your way if your manners are such that he has to, but a cripple or an elderly person doesn't have that chance. You can't avoid a creasing up on you, but you can avoid crippling accidents."

Rigid Controls Being Relaxed For Annapolis

By HAL BOTTLE
ANNAPOLIS, Md., Aug. 1 (UP)—Midshipmen at the U. S. Naval academy are being treated less like prisoners and more like men these days.

The century-old center of American naval training is streamlining its teaching program and giving its midshipmen more freedom in order to prepare Uncle Sam's future fleet officers for the broader demands of the post-war world.

The old tradition of rigid discipline that practically ordered every movement of a midshipman's life was relaxed in 1945 when the academy under the day he graduated goes back many decades.

Developed slowly from the founding period in 1845, when cadets were rowdy and difficult to control. For over a century they often gambled up poker and engaged in pitched battles with the Annapolis caddy. Once they hanged a mathematics teacher in effigy and escaped court martial for insulting a superior officer only by pointing out that he was a civilian. So congress made him an officer and raised his pay $400 a year.

The cadets of that day took their shore education so lightly that only 299 of the first 1,209 admitted ever graduated.

Critics Complained
But the thumb of authority gradually came down more heavily as standards were raised. Some critics complained that the martinet-like discipline tended to iron out the individuality and initiative the midshipmen would need if they ever commanded ships in battle. They said there had developed too big a gap between the rigid and tradition-regulated life that midshipmen led in the academy and the more flexible human give-and-take life that awaited them in their future careers.

Rear Admiral James L. Holloway, Jr., present academy superintendent, is closing that gap.

Damages 15 Cents In Hazelton Fire

HAZELTON, Aug. 1—Jerome's fire department was called to a fire at 1 p. m. Thursday at the Fletcher Oil company in Hazelton when flames spouted from the tank of a gasoline delivery truck. The fire department was called to the gas-fueled flames destroyed nothing more than a few pints of gas. First reported by an attendant at the oil company, the flames were coming from an opening in the top of the large delivery truck. Fearing a major fire and possible explosion, the attendant summoned the fire department. When the firemen arrived a coal thrower over the opening extinguished the blaze in a matter of seconds. Damage totaled about 15 cents. The coal was undamaged.

Expanded NLRB Pledges to Make Labor Act Work

WASHINGTON, Aug. 1 (UP)—The five-man national labor relations board today pledged "deep determination" to make every provision of the Taft-Hartley labor act "work as effectively as possible." The board issued that statement as its first act after two new members—Abe Murdock and J. Copeland Gray—and a general counsel took their oaths of office this morning.

The board also appealed to labor and management to work together with full recognition of each other's rights and the needs and rights of the public. Earlier the general counsel, Robert N. Demham, said in an interview he "can't commend" the decision of some unions to ignore the reorganized NLRB—but that he recognized it as a "normal reaction." Demham said he felt "the same, balanced judgment of the union leadership for which I have a great deal of respect," will eventually realize that unions have more to gain than lose by continuing to channel complaints and requests through the labor board.

State Guard Unit Planes Set Boise 'AAF Day' Show

BOISE, Aug. 1 (UP)—Planes of the Idaho national guard's 100th fighter squadron will stage an air show at Gowen field late today in observance of the 40th anniversary of the army air forces.

A feature will be the expected arrival of Capt. William Coburn of the 190th who will take off today from Hamilton field in an effort to set a new speed record between San Francisco and Boise.

Coburn, who flew yesterday from Boise to the coast city over the route he plans to follow today, said he would leave about 8:30 p. m. (MST). He will fly a P-51 regulation model fighter.

The present record of one hour, 46 minutes, 28 seconds for the 514-mile route was set in 1939 by Frank W. Fuller of San Francisco who flew a low-winged Seversky plane. The 190th will stage an hour long display of tactical and simulated combat flying by the fighters, twin engine bombers, C-47 transports, AT-6 trainers and an L-6 liaison plane.

Another feature of the observance will be the inauguration of a direct Boise to Reno flight by the United Air Lines. The flight will link the Idaho capital city directly with California.
