

U.S. Opens Counter-Attack Against Russian Charge of American 'War-Mongering'

NEW YORK, Sept. 20 (AP)—The United States opened its counter-attack tonight against Russian charges of "war-mongering" in this country, in a strong answer the U. S. said the whole Soviet declaration was a "jibe" and an "absolute falsification of American motives."

The United States also gained strong support from France in the United Nations assembly and simultaneously appear-headed a drive to try to force the United Nations Security Council to take the case through the Security Council. The attack was launched Thursday on the assembly floor by Andre Y. Vichinsky, No. 2 man in the Soviet foreign ministry.

Austin told the American Association for the Protection of the Rights of the People of the Soviet Union at a dinner at the Waldorf Astoria hotel that "we refuse to believe it was Mr. Vichinsky's intention to offend the honor of our country." It was the first formal policy reaction from a ranking member of the U. S. delegation to the assembly.

Russ "Learn" Of Difference With America

MOSCOW, Sept. 20 (AP)—Accounts of Secretary Marshall's and Andrei Vishinsky's speeches to the U. N. general assembly have brought home with full force to the Russian people existing differences between the United States and the Soviet Union.

Up to now the Soviet people did not believe that the two nations were working in harmony or anything like that but the security of cleavage was not so apparent to them as today.

Expressions of Soviet citizens in the wake of the speeches reflected these thoughts.

Uncertainly about the future peace of the world, the United States government is not against war with the Soviet Union and in some cases has even expressed a preference for war with Russia.

A general letdown over the possibility of worldwide cooperation through the United Nations.

The Soviet Union is not a ally during the war—has now turned against the Soviet Union.

However, persons abroad would be mistaken in feeling the current situation and the general assembly activities have brought any hysteria here. They have not.

From this to the correspondents has reported that from everything one sees and hears in the Soviet Union there is certainly no preparation nor anticipation of war. That still holds.

They were selected as the "model" American community in connection with the observance.

"War, I think, are to a considerable extent the consequence of what thinking, fact-finding and understanding the problem during peacetime," McNamary said.

He added that "every military man who knows how wasteful war is desperately hopes that the peace builders will be as realistic and long-minded in their task of construction as the soldier must be to win victory."

HOW TWAIN IS GETTING "JUST TOO BIG"

Mayor H. G. Lauterbach, to our way of thinking, is quite right in his statement that Twin Falls is getting "just too big" for part time city officials.

The mayor previously had gone on record as favoring a city manager form of government and he re-affirmed his position in a talk before the Kiwanis club Thursday.

The city council members, he told the Kiwanians, plan "to sound out the voters" on inauguration of the city manager plan next spring.

"Because of the growth of the city it is no longer a part time job for a mayor, city councilman or any other city official," the mayor reasoned. "We need more efficiency in the local departments, including police and fire. We need full time sanitary and meat inspectors instead of sharing the present ones with the state as we now do. The streets, the waterworks and many other things need repair or replacement and it is just too much for a part time official to do this."

The people of Twin Falls, the Times-News believes, should give the mayor's suggestion serious consideration. The present city administration is demonstrating good faith by proposing the change instead of attempting to perpetuate itself in office by re-election under the present form of government.

We have ample time to study the city manager plan from all angles. Let's consider it level-headedly and arrive at some sensible conclusion instead of dividing ourselves into rival factions for a knock down and drag out.

LET'S KEEP IT ATTRACTIVE

We can understand why residents along Blue Lakes boulevard north have protested the erection of two apartment buildings in that vicinity.

The structures in question are being re-modeled from housing units from the Hunt project, and what they will be like when completed is naturally of much concern to property owners along that thoroughfare.

Unfortunately, Blue Lakes boulevard is the only attractive entrance to our city. Through lack of foresight or for some other reason the other main entrances are unsightly affairs to say the least. Shacks, junkyards and other eyesores have been permitted to spring up as to give motor travelers a poor impression of our city.

Up until now no such developments have sprung up to mar the attractiveness of Blue Lakes boulevard. This wide artery leads past some of the city's most impressive homes on its way to the rim-to-rim bridge, Snake river and other points of scenic interest.

If there is any way possible for Twin Falls to control at least this one entrance so it will remain a credit to the city, we should take such steps without fail. Civic pride should demand such action.

COMMITTEEMEN SPEAK UP

Those advocates of "government-run everything" naturally favor proposals to extend Bonneville power lines into southern Idaho, even though the distance involved might not make such transmission feasible.

It was encouraging to learn that several members of the house public lands committee, on a junket through western irrigation districts, took issue with bringing power into southern Idaho from the "far north."

Such a plan would only result in delaying the construction of multiple-supply irrigation and power projects in Idaho, the objecting representatives maintained.

"If you continue to sabotage power in south Idaho," Rep. A. L. Miller of Nebraska told Franzer, "Banks, Columbia basin project manager, 'I am not for you.'"

Then, as could be expected under our present system of governmental duplicity, Banks passed the buck by saying that Bonneville was not a part of the reclamation bureau and he was not responsible for Bonneville's acts.

The government is so eager to get into the power business that it makes itself look ridiculous at times.

INDIA'S FORGOTTEN WAR

Even if one cuts in half the reported number of casualties in India's communal rioting, the sum far exceeds that of the U.S. and armed clashes which so far have engaged the United Nations' attention. Yet, so far as we know, this sanguine civil war has not even been mentioned in U.N. sessions.

We cannot believe that the tens of thousands of men of no interest in the U.N. because they were not killed in an international war. It may be, however, that the organization feels that it has no right to intervene under the present provisions of the charter.

If that is the case, it may be hoped that some day the U.N. will permit the organization to take action if any such civil slaughter should recur, even if it is powerless to stop the present one.

TUCKER'S NATIONAL WHIRLIGIG

FACTIONS—An ironic and amusing aspect of the Eisenhower and MacArthur "amicidities" for the Republican presidential nomination in 1946 is that they have served to bring into official notice two political factions. Oddly enough, both men's full-officers believe that they would be only too happy to run for President. Hence under certain conditions.

The Pacific breaks down into a rivalry between MacArthur's associates on the Pacific front and Eisenhower's buddies in the European sector. MacArthur has always complained that "Mac" never gave them sufficient credit for transportation and blasting way from Australia to Tokyo, not to profess to be neutral. Having no candidate but his own, it supports the army chief of staff.

MACARTHUR—General MacArthur's command is the more active of the two groups. They have button-holed and propagandized every congressman, civilian and soldier in the area since the close of the conflict, inquiring about their men's chances and advancing his claims.

They are making a headlong dash toward the prospective return to the states early next year, his triumphant reception and a possible address before Congress. They expect that it will give a jolt to the politicians and the public, making clear that, although not an active secker after the nomination, he would take it if he can get it.

The chief difference between the two camps is the disclaimed ambitions, based on his mild disclaimers at press interviews in Washington and Columbus University, has set MacArthur men to top up their efforts on our Japanese commanders' behalf.

TEST—The Democratic high command is none too happy over the first fruits of its outcasted alliance with organized labor as a result of the losses in Pennsylvania's recent general election. President Truman's political strategists are inclined to view the political union as a two-edged weapon that cuts both ways.

It is admitted that the GOP played a smart game in this contest. They latched and tempted the Greenbackers and the anti-communists with the test of popular sentiment on the Tait-Hartley law. They invited the opposition to send campaigners into the streets, and the anti-communists political lions fell for the scheme.

That was their major blunder inasmuch as they never had a chance in this few-Grundy, Republican area.

BACKGROUND—Once the labor organizers and organizers had committed themselves to invasion of the cities and towns, the GOP raised the old cry of "outside agitators." This was the old cry of "outside agitators" that has been used for years.

As FDP's unsuccessful purge demonstrated, the voters will always respond to this trick. They trooped out to vote in the past, but the anti-communist might have fared better with a smaller turnout.

Contrariwise, industrial and anti-union interests felt they had to obtain a vote of confidence in the Tait-Hartley act. They worked harder and spent more money than they would have in a dull, listless, non-partisan campaign. It was the old trick of the popular GOP nominee won by a larger majority than his predecessor had received in less turbulent years.

It was the Democrats who were in the center of support but keeping it in the background. They do not want the Pennsylvania performance duplicated through the nation in next year's presidential and congressional elections.

RESPONSIBILITY—The Marshall plan for both immediate and long-range assistance to Europe's anti-communist countries has already become a political football even before the program has been formulated. The Democrats in the House for some time past have clean congress want to assume responsibility for vast loans until they have discovered the popular and political reason to the proposal.

During his long absence in South America, President Truman drafted Secretary Marshall to pinch-hit for him. Although Mr. Truman's latest wish is that test case no need for a special session, Mr. Marshall thinks otherwise. The chief executive depends on the war chest's profits to sell the idea to the country.

Mr. Truman has also been waiting on two other developments. His scouts are canvassing the nation for money to discover whether the billion needed is popular. He also hopes that the special, congressional committee now investigating Europe's needs might be able to provide the money.

DETERMINED—Capitol hill Republican bosses—Speaker Martin, Senate President Pro Tem Vandenberg and Chairman Taft—are determined not to stick out their necks. They insist that the Democratic administration assume all responsibility for moving that they kill any prospect of 1948 tax reduction, cause commodity shortages and boost prices even higher on the eve of the presidential election.

This is the inside story of the on-again-off-again maneuvering at Washington on the Truman-Marshall plan.

VIEWERS OF OTHERS

THE INFINITE

It is an appealing idea summer exercise for the mind to examine what science has done for the universe of the microscope. When the stars brought nearer by the telescope, the solar system with its planets and their moons revolving around the sun, it was not long until solar system were detected, each with its own satellite. This led to the discovery that research suggested the existence of universes, each revolving around another common center.

Is that center God? Is the constant revolving motion of the universe a sign of deity? Or is it merely the expression of the will of God? Does the microscope provide the proof?

When atomic research proceeded to fusion of the atom, science, coincidentally, at least, adopted the Albert Einstein theorem of many years ago that matter and energy are the same thing in different forms. Within each subdivision of matter are microscopic universes, all in constant revolving motion. In the atomic explosion, the radiant energy is the creation of stellar universes. For a time, the atom was believed to be the tiniest of all entities. But the atom was split. In the case of the uranium, the atom is not uranium. One pound of the matter, science says, might be atomized in less than a minute, releasing a thousand hours of energy. Thus the atom began to appear like a billion or more universes of different sizes whirling around another common center.

POT SHOTS

SHORTER, CONT'D.

Dear Pot Shorter:

During the war we were told to save material, hence wore short dresses, and now we are told to buy more; what is necessary so we can avoid inflation.

It is impossible to make our present skirts longer with narrow hems and who has enough extra dough to give away good suits and dresses and buy new ones for $25 to $50? Even during the war, women with "souls" were not allowed to cover 'em up. Not all women dress to suit other women—some wear have a little consideration for what the men like, too.

HOW THINGS APPEAR FROM PEGLER'S ANGLE

NEW YORK—Something in his sagacious experience of his life, perhaps in a classroom at a state university, perhaps in a luncheon room, to the truth the common man has heard that the constitution guarantees religious freedom.

Obviously, were it shown that Henry Wallace agreed with this monster and were Henry sworn as a witness, the defense might lead the common man, gazing and gloating, through all the slobbery, amuse-ment-park chambers, golf and caves of Henry's old septic house. Some pictures of these lunar haunts frequented by certain people in normal souls had been seen in the exhibits of Henry's old guru, Professor Roetlich, Louis Horch, New York regional director of the department of commerce by Henry's religious chamber, golf and resort, had had these paintings to be holy and therapeutic and therefore above price.

He lost a lot of money, however, found himself hard up, and a vacant employer, would sell or trade a whole gallery of the old master's work for cash (no reasonable offer refused) or what have you?

You might experiment with a Himalayan sunset, rather like I-10-10-10 surprise, on a mild case of rash, but Horch would bluntly advise you not to waste your time anything as serious as compound hemorrhage.

Now Horch, an apostate, has become a mocking bird. He seers and ridicules. I don't scold or ridicule, but I confess to some remark at Henry's cost because he obviously feels that recantation would imply that he once was there with Louis in the spell of a squinted Mahatma.

He doesn't want to confess to that. Bloom, an old carnival grifter from the days of the miracle spot remover and the little gem potato peeler, was a bit of a mission-stiff himself, like the hallooing whoop on the Bowery who whiff for the goal of stew and a flop on winter nights.

The laminary was in old Sol's corner gallery of the old master's work for cash (no reasonable offer refused) or what have you?

never let old Roetlich catch his eye to put the whammy on him.

Wallace aims his message exclusively to the common man. The common man is an unidentified but, unfortunately, numerous American with a vote but without the sense to realize that a fellow who embraces one's own fabric and every denied him might be too amenable for great public responsibility.

Mac's "Twin Nations" is better than his strange furia against Mary Baker Eddy and her teaching. The Mormons fought skepticism every inch of the way to Desert and paid back the brutal gentile in his own coin, the old-time religion, and eternally damned.

If I didn't think both cults were rubbish, I would be unfaithful to the old-time religion, and eternally damned.

This King's X of the last 20 years is a mistake. The clergy keep lead and nimble only by competition and the anti-trust division might want to look at evidence of a "civilized gentleman's agreement here."

THE ALBIE IRIAH ROSE OF PERMITTER, Healey and Lapidus theme is devoted to banality these days, especially in the lyrics and in the Broadway charity racket. It means simply that Americans are too ignorant to know what they are doing.

3 List 'Unworthy' Opposition To Changing of Street Names

Editor Times-News: It has been said by an advocate of changing street names and numbers that "reasons advanced so far against the changing of the street names have not been worthy of consideration." It is my opinion that the reasons advanced for the above statement, as outlined below, are of three reasons advanced.

The many hundreds of business houses, homes and quantities of household effects are covered by insurance policies. These policies in nearly every instance list the street or avenue number at which the insured property is located. If the street or avenue is changed in name or number, the insurance policy will not be correct. The Standard Map Company, at the expense of insurance companies, has published voluminous street maps showing the location, for rate-making purposes, of the properties at various street numbers. If street numbers are changed, these maps will be practically worthless, and the insurance companies will be lost.

Our telephone directories would not correctly list the location of a person's business or home until a new directory was issued. The telephone people would be put to the trouble and expense of matching up street and avenue names and numbers with the new when the new directory is issued. That would be a tremendous job.

The people who have sold and agreed to deliver to various business houses, much needed money, have recently spent a great deal of money getting names and present addresses of residents, but because of the threat of street names and numbers changing, dare not proceed with the printing and delivery.

Recreation Hall Needed for Kids, Girl, 13, Declares

Editor Times-News: I think this town needs to have a recreation center for kids from the seventh grade up.

Every time someone new comes to town, he always asks what there is to do in this town and all you can say is "nothing but skate" and during this weather, who wants to skate?

And children wouldn't be getting into trouble if we had a place like that.

It's no wonder that kids around here get into trouble because there's no place they can go.

PHYLLIS SHEPARDSON (Age 13, about 14) Twin Falls

Spend Money for Needs Instead of Names, She Says

Editor Times-News: With part of our city water supply being cut off, it's not too late to do something about it. Our mayor still thinks about changing the names of streets to "benefit the city in the long run."

We must plan for tomorrow, not just for today. He continues to state, at a recent meeting:

"What better planning for tomorrow than to properly mark our city streets as they are now named and to obtain a decent, adequate water supply? More people complain about our horrible-tasting water than about the streets. What about our future citizens and our present water supply?"

Also, we have very poor sidewalks around these bumpy and neglected streets.

The money it would cost our taxpayers to rename streets could go a long way in paying for either of the suggested improvements. The names that are proposed for changing the names of streets in any part of the city are in the same state of confusion as Twin Falls if street markings had been neglected for so long a time as ours have been.

Idaho Ranks Fourth in Traffic Deaths; T-N Drive Appreciated

Editor Times-News: Clippings from your paper concerning accident prevention work are being forwarded to my desk, and I take this occasion to thank you and your paper for your interest and effort. The Idaho chapter of the National Safety Council is continually striving to enlist others in efforts of this kind, and we feel justified in exerting all pressure available in order to prevent accidental deaths in Idaho, for, at the present time our state is listed in the National Safety Council records as the fourth best "killer" state in the union.

With the intelligence available in all of our drivers and a desire on the part of most users of our highways to comply with regulations, we are forced to admit that stringent enforcement of our local and state laws is the best solution to our statewide traffic problem. The Idaho Safety Council will attempt, at the next legislature, to have passed a driver examination law which will subject to some extent in screening drivers. I have had occasion to analyze the traffic accident reports, and as I read of the not too varied, but very foolish, actions that cause our traffic fatalities I wonder if this thinking animal called "man" has full use of all his faculties when he sits behind the wheel of a car.

A bird, house-trained like a cat, will starve to death when forced to forage for itself, and we say it lacks brains. A barn-fed Jersey cow would most likely starve to death if forced to exist as our white-faced Hereford exists on the range, and we say the cow lacks brains. Our automobile drivers are no different.

Life in MAGIC VALLEY

By INEZ PUCKETT
A stamp's a tiny, flimsy thing,
But it's a mighty thing,
And yet 'twill roam the world for you
Easily where you tell it to.

To find out a woman's age—if she won't tell you—tell her to do this: Write down the number of the month in which she was born, multiply it by two, add five, multiply the result by 50, and add the number of the month she was born; the other two digits will give you her age.

Mrs. John Bliss lives in Tula, but she came to south Idaho in a covered wagon. The Bliss' sought mining land, prospected in winter, helped with crops in summer.

"We used to live where Crystal Springs ranch is now," said Mrs. Bliss. "Lots of fun in those days, as you know. We had picnics and go boating in the lake. We had a lot of oldtimers who enjoyed this way of life. Some of the oldtimers who enjoyed this way of life were the Smalls and the Daquitas. In summer we helped Charlie Arthur make hay. In those days Mrs. Bliss had a mail route from a place called Abbey to Crystal Springs. Summer and winter I drove a Mormon hack to the river," she laughed.

"I used to hunt my home-made boat (surveyors often swiped it) and row over with the mail. I did this every Thursday and Saturday, in all kinds of weather." Mrs. B. is a slender, perky woman. Imagine her rowing that chumpy boat over the Snake, with her pouch of mail carefully protected from wind and snow! Just another example of the stuff Idaho's pioneer women are made of! (Grammar friends please excuse repetition on end of sentence.)

Meet Gordon and Alice Buckley, folks, the first couple to build a foundation for their new home over at Hunt. Gordon and Alice, who came from Nampa, were some of the lucky ones on the recent government giveaway. These kids, both with brown hair, twinkly blue eyes, and boundless ambition.

"Being lucky in this land drawing is still a dream we can't believe," said Gordon. "I haven't done any thing to deserve this." Sam. (He only gave six years of his young life to the navy, serving in both European and Pacific theaters throughout the war.) These two aren't daunted by the hardships of pioneering in 1947; with love and spunk they know a home can be made out there in the lonely sagebrush.

Alice isn't fustling about skirt lengths and the color of nail polish; she's too busy helping shovel earth, mix cement, grub sagebrush. Gordon leaves the squabbling over money, oil, and land, to the politicians. With his strong young hands, on his own piece of land, he's busy making a dream come true.

Says he: "In a few years, when my neck aches, I'll have you and you a chair and a cup of tea instead of a sagebrush stump and a drink from a canteen." Says she: "I don't think they can play a concerto, but I'll dance on their points, without silent plus years of training. But almost everything," says "Tango" book reviewer, Robert van Gelder, think he can write. It's just a matter of taking the time, or assembling "materials." "This wild assumption has baffled writers for years," says Van Gelder, and sometimes it has moved them to near-murder. He adds that it's tough on the nerves of a scribbler, after he's slaved from youth to acquire a technique, to have some layman tell him, "I've always thought I'd write a book sometime; my great-grandpa had a wonderful life. It certainly should be written."

To himself the writer recalls his hours of sweat, maybe over just one paragraph, and thinks bitterly, "Oh yeah!" This critic says the big mistake the layman makes is assuming that writing is mostly getting "material." Yet all authors know the subject matter is swimming everywhere like germs. The difficult thing is to get it on paper with that beautiful, beautiful, beautiful, looks so simple, and is so often beyond the reach of even the best talent.

U. S. Finding Joint Income Tax Popular

WASHINGTON, Sept. 20 (AP)—A lot of folks would like to see the tax benefits of the community-property system extended to married couples throughout the country by next August and the treasury is hearing about it.

Treasury department officials here said a special "feel" for words, here are a few comments some of them gave to his question: "Is writing a letter to the editor?" "I have a definite gift, yet writing is agony. I stay at the typewriter eight hours every day. If I turn out six pages and get three I consider decent. I'm satisfied. Often I have only a few lines left to write."

Ernest Hemingway: "To write at all one must be born with imagination. I'm pleased if I get one page which has a sense of timing, and an understanding hand. But even so, most of it is tough going. I spent 17 months on a daily 7:30 a. m. to 2:30 p. m. schedule to write 'For Whom The Bell Tolls'."

Thomas Mann: "Every day I begin after breakfast, write until noon. I'm pleased if I get one page which is worth saying."

Van Gelder says there is only one way to learn whether a writer is good (though any obvious talent should have started showing up in grammar school, and that's not your business on paper, and so if an editor will pay hard cash for it!

The doctors declare that how long you will live depends on your grandparents. If you come from a long-lived family, barring disease and accident, you too will be long-lived. But here's a venerable Chinaman who claims to know the secret. He owes it all to observing the following rules:

1. Talk like a pigeon
2. Rest like a turtle
3. Sleep like a dog
4. Eat and always have contentment in your heart."

At 10:30 the lights were still burning in the room where the city council members were gathered. They were in the room for the problems of that meeting. Did the people of Magic Valley appreciate the benefits of the city council? Did the members of the council appreciate the problems of the city? Did the members of the council appreciate the problems of the city? Did the members of the council appreciate the problems of the city?

"My horse is so polite that he stops at each fence and lets me go over it." . . . Jimmy Duranite said that.

Driver Pays Fine To End Jail Term
Balance of a $100 fine and court costs of $3 was paid Saturday by Elton Hodins after he had spent 12 days in the city jail.

Hodins was fined by Municipal Judge J. O. Pumphrey Sept. 8 for driving on a suspended license and was unable to pay the fine at that time. The balance, with time in jail deducted, amounted to $13.

One stop sign violator and two speeders were also fined by Judge Pumphrey Saturday.

Mrs. Gordon Gray, 132 Fillmore street, pleaded guilty to charges of driving on a suspended license at the junction of Fifth avenue north and Addison avenue and was assessed a fine of $10, plus $3 court fee. She is reported by the arresting officer to have slowed down at the intersection, shifted gears but did not stop.

Richard H. Walle and Dean C. Edwards were assessed $18 and $20, respectively, plus $3 costs, on charges of speeding.

Nation's Food Budget to Set All-Time High

WASHINGTON, Sept. 20 (AP)—The agriculture department estimated today that American households will spend a record-breaking $35,000,000,000 for food this year—17 per cent more than they did in 1945.

But it added that the average American still is spending less for food in proportion to his income than he spent during the prewar period 1935-39.

At the same time, the labor department reported that the cost-of-living rose 2.1 per cent in the first seven months of this year. These figures covered the period up to the signing of the new cost-of-living contract and the start of the current round of price boosts in coal, steel and other industries.

Since that time, the department's wholesale price index has gone up more than three per cent. Wholesale prices are eventually reflected in the cost-of-living index.

The agriculture department said rising prices and consumer insistence on more and better quality food will contribute to the tremendous increase in the family food bill this year. Americans also are eating out less, increasing their home food costs.

So far this year, the department said, consumers are spending about 21 per cent of their income for food. That compares with 18 per cent last year and 22 per cent in 1935-39.

Bean Stocks Told to Hold

Comparable data for other recent periods are not available. In the past the bureau reported holdover stocks on a statewide basis.

Mountain Home Bombing Ranges Become Targets

People, bombardiers and aerial gunners of the Idaho air national guard will use four bombing ranges at the Mountain Home army air field for practice beginning next month. Brig. Gen. Leon W. Johnson, 15th air force commander, announced Saturday.

Two of the four ranges will be used for dive bombing and the other two for air-to-ground gunnery and air-to-air gunnery.

An agreement for the joint use of the bombing ranges was worked out last week by representatives of the fourth and 15th air forces, national guard and Mountain Home air field.

Air-to-air gunnery, practice, will take place over the "craters of the moon" target area and joint use of the target area is expected to begin Oct. 1, the announcement said. No practice would be started, however, until danger areas are re-established.

1946 Registration Passed at U. of I.

MOSCOW, Sept. 20 (AP)—When the fall registration machinery came to a week-end halt at the University of Idaho at noon today 3,293 students had completed registration. This is 295 more than had registered by Saturday noon a year ago.

Yet to register are an estimated 2,500 graduate students and a large number of regular students who have been too busy with fraternity pledging and the first football game this afternoon to get lined up for their studies. University registration always continues through the first week of school.

First classes begin Monday.

Those attending will be drawn from throughout the eight south central Idaho counties.

Smaller Sized Spud Seen in Early Freeze

BOISE, Sept. 20 (AP)—Idaho's famous baked potatoes may be smaller than usual, D. A. Stubbelfield, commissioner of agriculture, forecast in commenting on the early freeze that nipped Idaho's crops. Stubbelfield pointed out that a late freeze in June set back the potatoes about 14 to 18 days and the premature frost, about two weeks earlier than the normal first killing freeze, had curtailed the potato growing season this year. "Although we won't know until the crop is dug, there's a probability there will be a lot of small potatoes this year instead of the large baker," the agriculture commissioner declared. The potato acreage in the state was small this year compared to past seasons and the acreage in other states also has dropped off, Stubbelfield said. He predicted a good market price for potatoes this fall in view of the anticipated crop shortage and small size of the potatoes. Stubbelfield had no estimate of the crop damage throughout the state because of the early frost, but noted that alfalfa and corn crops in the Boise-Caldwell area were badly damaged. Conservation Men Hit Idea Of Authority

KANBAS CITY, Sept. 20 (AP)—The National Water Conservation conference was in recess today as it opposed to regional valley authority "to the exclusion of effective participation by states and local interests."

The measure was one of 17 to come out of the two-day conference attended by representatives from 33 states. Carrying out the theme of the conference, the delegates opposed to the authority of the federal government took the position of championing state rights against federal encroachment in water resource matters.

Another resolution recommended that congress establish a commission to review the whole field of land and water conservation. It stated that such a commission was urged to "accomplish the highest use of these great natural resources for the best interests of the nation and keeping with our form of government."

The commission was urged to seek passage of federal legislation "to renounce the powers attributed to the federal government by the supreme court in the California case." This referred to the supreme court's decision that the federal government has paramount interests in the waterlands.

Another resolution urged that the bureau of reclamation be returned to "those experienced and qualified for such work," as tabled by a unanimous vote after several delegates objected, saying that the measure was a "travestious insult" which they considered out of place.

Alban J. Parker, Springfield, Va., was elected president of the conference. Other officers named include E. W. Rising, Boise, Ida.
