Science Finds New Drug to Fight Disease

NEW YORK, July 26 (AP)—Medical science with the development of a new drug has scored a breakthrough in the battle against the virus, a tiny germ that causes many diseases in human, animal and plant life.

One of the drugs is known as thiazilyl, a member of the sulfa family. The other is streptomycin, a cousin of streptomycin.

Both received wide attention in recent days as a result of reports on their use in the treatment of a variety of viral diseases, including poliomyelitis. The reports were the most encouraging ever received in the search for an agent, or agents, that would go after the virus as the body's own defenses are unable to kill off diseases caused by bacteria.

Scientists for many years have been able to study bacteria as that type of germ which can be grown in culture, and its production watched under a microscope. It has been a different story with the virus.

Unlike bacteria, viruses are dependent on living cells and none is able to grow in the absence of living cells. Furthermore, once they get into a cell, they multiply and "bores in," and in most cases even anti-bodies—house-cleaners of the body—cannot reach them.

This discovery of thiazilyl and streptomycin, however, was proof that some types of virus can be run down—and further research work may produce still more powerful anti-viral drugs—agents that may be the answer to the common cold, which is a virus disease. Measles, mumps, eye-infections, polio, and forms of venereal disease—now resistant to chemicals—may be turned into minor ailments.

Truman Catapulted Into Impressive Company

When President Truman took over as the nation's top executive, he was catapulted into conferences of world-wide importance. Here he is shown with Winston Churchill and Stalin at Potsdam.

Truman's Foreign Policy Record One Of Turning Over Job to Able Officials

By PETER EDSON
NEA Staff Correspondent

The outstanding fact about President Harry S. Truman's administration record in foreign policy is that, by and large, he has let people who knew more about it than he did run it.

Historians will record some pretty important developments in U. S. foreign policy in the first four post-war years. The so-called Truman doctrine of aid to communist-threatened countries in danger of losing their independence, the so-called Marshall plan for aid to Europe, U. S. trusteeship over the Pacific islands, the British loan, unification of western Germany and currency reform in that area, the shaping of atomic energy policy at home as well as abroad, the Rio and Bogota Pan-American conference delegations, the Geneva and Havana conferences which drafted the international trade organization charter, the San Francisco conference which drafted the United Nations charter, the setting up of the United Nations as a going concern.

Practically the first thing Harry Truman had to do when he took over the presidency after Roosevelt's death was make the decision on whether to go ahead with the San Francisco conference.

He decided it should go on. What's more, he prevailed upon Stalin to attend Molotov to the conference to signify Russia's full participation. What's still more, when Molotov arrived in Washington on his way to San Francisco, he saw the President three times. In these conferences, Mr. Truman talked to Molotov in pretty tough terms, telling him—for the first time that anyone had dared to lay down the law to the Russians—just what they could and could not have in the United Nations charter. As long as Mr. Truman confined his conduct to foreign policy to his simple and direct support of policies worked out by his experts, the President got along all right. In the selection of his top advisers and administrators in foreign affairs, the President's record generally is good. He inherited E. S. Sietzin as secretary of state, Nicholas Stettinius upstairs in the first U. S. representative at the United Nations. Mr. Truman appointed James F. Byrnes secretary of state. Byrnes spent most of his time away from his office, conferring in the council of foreign ministers and getting agreement on the first peace treaties with Italy, Hungary, Rumania, Bulgaria and Finland. In his absence, the man who ran the state department was Under Secretary of State Dean Acheson. And the real credit for planning and directing the major constructive policies of the Truman administration probably belongs to Acheson more than to anyone else.

It was Acheson who played the initial role in the work of the United Nations committee that shaped U. S. policy on international control of atomic energy. It was Acheson who—recognizing the importance of keeping the Dardanelles free from complete Russian monopoly control—first saw the need for bolstering up Greece and Turkey and so conceived what later became known as the Truman doctrine. It was Acheson who made the first speech outlining the need for further aid to western European nations.

Secretary of State George Marshall repeated this idea in a speech at Harvard on June 5, 1947, shortly after Acheson had resigned from office to work any longer in government pay. British Foreign Minister Ernest Bevin picked up the idea and accepted it from Marshall's speech, and so it became known as the Marshall plan. Marshall had succeeded Byrnes as secretary of state in 1947 after a few years in China, trying to get the communists and nationalists to unite. In general, Mr. Truman let Marshall run foreign policy and the state department and his conduct of the office has had popular support.

If this delegation of authority—giving a man a job and then letting him run it—is the test of a good administrator, then President Truman may be said to have that talent. Marshall's defects—in China, in the United Nations, in the council of foreign ministers attempting to write Germany and Austria peace treaties—are entirely pardonable. Probably no human being could have done better.

Under the bi-partisan or non-partisan conduct of foreign policy, Marshall had the advice and collaboration of the best Republican minds—Ambassador Austin at U. N., Senator Vandenberg, John Foster Dulles and others. Solutions were impossible simply because the Russians would not cooperate. That is neither to Truman's credit nor discredit.

It is when Mr. Truman has tried to take a direct hand in foreign policy that the results have not been too happy. This is a judgment frequently made by any schoolboy's hindsight is better than the most gifted statesman's foresight.

But the results of the Potsdam conference in July, 1945, where Mr. Truman and Byrnes met Stalin and Molotov, Churchill and Acheson in the only post-war conference of the big three now shows rather clearly that too many things were left to chance and later settlement. This was the conference that was to build up the war on Germany, reparations, Japan, Korea, Europe—everything. It just hasn't worked.

The same is true on the handling of Palestine and Chinese affairs. Aside from his messages to congress, President Truman's most important foreign policy declaration was his navy day address in New York in 1945. It was largely a re-

State's Third Party Urges Bonus, CVA

BOISE, July 26 (AP)—Idaho's Progressive party has gone on record favoring the creation of a Columbia valley authority and a bonus for veterans.

Sam R. Evans, national committee man, said the Idaho Progressive party will be organized formally at Lewiston Aug. 10, at which election for the party's presidential candidates will be selected. Candidates for congress and U. S. senate also may be chosen at the convention.

Evans said the party, which nominates Henry Wallace for President and Glen H. Taylor for vice president at Philadelphia the past week-end, favors a state veteran bonus of $10 a month for domestic service and $15 a month for foreign duty. The bonus would not exceed $500 to any veteran.

The party's platform also includes: Enactment of an Idaho fair labor standards act and a public contract act.

Increasing benefits to injured workers to $35 weekly and unemployment compensation payments to $30 weekly.

"Little Wagner Act" Enactment of an Idaho "little Wagner act" for the protection of the Idaho mine safety code.

Extension of rural electrification to every farm unit.

Enactment of a graduated land tax to discourage excessive land holdings and to encourage family type farm ownership.

Holding old age pensions to $100 a month and lowering the age limit from 65 to 60 years.

Repeal of the 1947 drug act. Abolition of the Idaho public assistance law.

statement of the principles of the Atlantic charter.

Mr. Truman himself has contributed little new to foreign policy, though his administration has gone steadily ahead on the bi-partisan program laid out before he became President. And if reflected, there is no reason to believe he would not continue along that road.

Next: Truman, the human.

Accusal Leads to Suit for $50,000

CHICAGO, July 26 (AP)—Sue McWhorter, 19, has charged in a $50,000 damage suit that her former employer, Montgomery Ward company, wrongly accused her of stealing 20 cents.

Mrs. McWhorter, who was a clerk in a retail store of the mail order house, said she was forced to admit the theft. A store detective locked her in an office for six hours, and would not release her until she confessed, her circuit court suit charged.

When she was paraded before employees as a thief, she said, and discharged. She claims damages because the accusation has kept her from getting another job.

Army Readies Blast Damage Tests in Utah

DUGWAY, Utah, July 26 (AP)—Civilian and army experts today completed the delicate task of placing instruments that will measure the effects of underground explosions when the army's "operation underground" begins tomorrow.

The operation will continue for several weeks at test sites in sand and sandstone formations near Dugway in the western Utah desert, in limestone country at Buckhorn wash in central Utah and in granite cliffs in Unweap canyon in southwestern Colorado.

2,500-Pound Charge Blast explosions tomorrow will be of 220 and 2,500 pound mine installations in the clay and sand banks west and south of Dugway. Later experiments will use up to 320,000 pound TNT at a time.

The TNT will be set off in holes dug near tunnels and shafts in which various sample structures—such as miniature war plant foundation walls—have been installed.

To Study Effects The effects on the samples, plus the readings of the instruments, will be carefully analyzed for guidance in preparing specifications for any bomb-proof structures desired by the government.

Representatives of the army's corps of engineers, in charge of the operation, shied away from any mention of atomic weapons in connection with the tests, except to emphasize that none will be actually used.

However, it was obvious that the army could use the data collected during the experiments to get an idea what would happen should an atomic missile bury itself near a war plant, then explode.

WATCH YOUR STEP IN THE MOUNTAINS.

When driving down long, steep mountain roads, if you are in doubt as to how steep the hill may be, the safest plan is to go into second or low before starting down. One of the most common faults in hill climbing is to stay in high gear too long. This is a bad practice and sometimes dangerous. It's a common cause of overheating and "vapor lock."

'SHOWING OF FORCE'

There is something disturbing about the number of newspaper stories on the Berlin crisis datelined Berlin, Frankfurt, Paris and London, and the few stories on the same subject datelined Washington. There is also something disturbing about the abundance of statements by high army brass in Germany and the scarcity of statements by President Truman and American officials in London, and the few stories on the same subject datelined Washington. There is also something disturbing about the abundance of statements by high army brass in Germany and the scarcity of statements by President Truman and American officials in London, and the few stories on the same subject datelined Washington.

With the dispatch of the first notes to Moscow by the western powers, the Berlin situation ceased to be a local issue and became one of top government policy—which it always had been in fact, if not in appearance. It was one world summit conference. Washington considered its importance as limited as the area in which this struggle is taking place.

Such an impression is undoubtedly wrong. Yet the army newspaper Stars and Stripes quoted unidentified American officials in London, and the few stories on the same subject datelined Washington. There is also something disturbing about the abundance of statements by high army brass in Germany and the scarcity of statements by President Truman and American officials in London, and the few stories on the same subject datelined Washington.

President Truman would not be in the White House now except for them. When he ran for senate reelection in 1942, the Republican machine in Oregon, but his early association with that crowd and organization was hurting him. He had a terrific political fight.

LAWYERS—The brotherhood did the same thing for Senator Barkley when he was hard pressed for the senate in 1926. In the house he had fathered the measure which established the railway labor board, as well as many other laws on behalf of the men who work on the railroads.

COST—An economy minded reader, V. S. of Concord, N. H., wants to know how much the special session called by President Truman will cost the taxpayers.

When you're willing to admit it when you're all wrong, your friends will think you're all right.

TUCKER'S NATIONAL WHIRLIGIG

Every Monday this veteran Washington correspondent devotes his column to answering questions of general interest about the White House and the administration. Questions may be sent direct to Mr. Tucker at 4015 Hillcrest place, Chevy Chase, Md.

WASHINGTON—I have read many stories, including your article, about the reaction to the two presidential tickets. In view of the tremendous influence of this vote how do you think the voters will react in 1948?

ANSWER: I do not believe there is a solid or maneuverable labor vote in the country. The voters in 1936, when they lined up almost unanimously behind Roosevelt, or in 1940, when they elected William Franklin Roosevelt, were definitely for Mr. Roosevelt because of his efforts on their behalf.

BEFORE discussing this question in detail, I would say that President Truman's labor vote has had the same history since 1932. One reason for this has been the presence of Henry A. Wallace in the race, and the fact that the Communist and leftist groups, the latter, as labor leaders in their respective states admit, have good records.

SIGNIFICANT—Two recent developments, however, suggest there are more compelling reasons for a split of this influential element of the electorate. They are: 1. The fact that the Communist Party is now in the exciting period of the Democratic convention, but I regard them as extremely insignificant.

POLY—When John L. Lewis was asked to comment on the Democratic platform's demand for repeal of the Taft-Hartley act, he replied gruffly that he would not attend the job of helping to measure off the statute books.

INFIDENTIAL—The Truman-Barkley combination should win a majority of the votes of one group of workmen which is extremely influential when it comes to the election of the president.

LAWYERS—The brotherhood did the same thing for Senator Barkley when he was hard pressed for the senate in 1926. In the house he had fathered the measure which established the railway labor board, as well as many other laws on behalf of the men who work on the railroads.

COST—An economy minded reader, V. S. of Concord, N. H., wants to know how much the special session called by President Truman will cost the taxpayers.

When you're willing to admit it when you're all wrong, your friends will think you're all right.

CAUSE AND EFFECT
School authorities have bombarded the American public with convincing statistics that the birth rate is definitely on the upgrade. Now come commentators in the realm of domestic relations who tell us that for 1947 the U. S. divorce rate was the lowest in 10 years.

Republican had done sabotage, but that would be unlikely. They both have measured this thing and discounted the political effect of it long ago and neither would bother to do much dirt in this quarter.

Y ES, more families heat water electrically! In fact, nearly half of the homes in the Snake river valley have electric water heating. There are several reasons, of course. Electric water heating is clean, it's automatic, it's completely safe, and it costs so little at Idaho Power's low electric rates—50 gallons of tap-ready hot water takes only a dime's worth of electricity.

Valley Scouts Tell of Outing in Wilderness

of trail. Much of the trail was through dense woods, areas and shale rock. Underbrush in the wooded area had to be cleared and the rock section leveled. The trail was supervised by Campbell and Larsen.

Terry said four Scouts were detailed every day to cook all the meals for the group. Several meals consisted of trout caught by the boys.

The trail crews did not work on Saturday or Sunday. During this period, Scouts would hike, fish and participate in Explorer Scout activities.

Church services, planned and supervised by the Scouts, were held under the pines on the two Sundays in camp. A fine raising ceremony preceded activities every day.

Terry pointed out the Scouts caught so many fish while in camp they started to throw them back into the river. The largest fish was 23 inches long. They caught rainbow, cutthroat and bull trout and white fish. Scouts saw salmon swimming up the river for spawning, but did not catch any.

Nature and history lectures were given the Scouts while working on the trail building by Campbell, who is a forestry student at the University of Idaho.

During the two-week camp, Scouts learned to identify 30 types of trees, shrubs and flowers. The information was used in passing conservation and forestry merit badge tests.

One evening, without the Scouts' knowledge, Forest Ranger Larsen set a small fire in the wooded area near the camp. Terry said the Scouts quickly responded when they spotted the flames and extinguished the fire with supervision.

Highlights of the camp included motoring of six boats floating down the river. It was learned they were placed in the middle fork of the Salmon river at Bear valley and were returned to fishermen to the main fork of the river.

Another diversion was when the Scouts learned to plane and crashed at Indian creek with Dietrich men and a Halley pilot. Several Scouts hiked six miles to view the crash.

One evening, several boys who the forest ranger spotted the tracks of a cougar with several young kittens.

Terry said two of the Scouts had built a pioneer type lean-to and were going to the night away from the main camp. But after spotting the cougar tracks, they changed their minds.

When asked if they thought they would be any safer in camp, Terry said, "No, but the cougar comes up here, he'll have more to choose from."

Scouts also spoiled a bear cub, several deer and numerous smaller forest animals while in camp.

Scouts taking the trip include George Bird, Jerome, Bob Probasco, T. C. Leckie, Max Eldredge, Son Owens and Richard Stronoff; Buhl; Edward Novacek, Castleford; Dick King, Shoshone; Dean Haxnell and Vern; Wayne, Wayne Parron, Richfield; Marvin Gillette, Twin Falls; and Dolo Hawkins, Leto; Roy Hoakins, Clifford; Jackson and Wallace Moore, Pocatello.

How Do We Ever Get Into Such Predicaments?

Navy Leaders Set Plans for Air Expansion

By JAMES J. STREBIC
AP Aviation Reporter

WASHINGTON, July 26 (AP)—Naval aviation leaders have decided on two steps to make the carrier force better prepared for emergency.

1. Air squadrons will be expanded in size and the planes grouped into more squadrons to provide more experience for squadron commanders, executive officers, etc.

2. Training will be intensified so that every air crew is qualified for all-weather and night operations.

The general effect of this latter step is to bring the entire naval aviation combat force to what hereafter has been the highest level of proficiency for specialized groups.

Squadrons aboard the largest carriers, known as CVB's, now have 36 fighters or 20 attack (bomber) planes. Squadrons aboard the next largest class, known as CVS, have 20 fighters or 16 attack planes.

Each type has been carrying about two squadrons of each. This would give the giant CVB's, such as the Midway and Coral Sea, perhaps 108 combat planes. A CV usually has about 80 planes.

Under the new plan, CVB fighter squadrons will be cut to 20 planes and CV fighter squadrons will be reduced to 16. However, each class of carrier will have five squadrons in a group, so that the total of aircraft aboard will be little changed.

Naval officers believe this will increase the efficiency of individual pilot training and increase the responsibility assigned to pilots with respect to squadron duties.

If expansion became necessary the first step would be to fill out squadrons to their usual size.

For the second phase of improved readiness, the navy is commission-

Henry Not Envious of British Royal Family—It Never Rests

By HENRY McLEMORE

LONDON, England.—I always travel on what is known as "a shoe-string" and usually finish up on a journey on contributions.

But today, from the combination piggy-bank and money belt I always wear while traveling, I took a pound note and mailed it to their majesties at Buckingham palace.

Wishing to keep the gift a no money one, I signed it Henry McLEMORE.

Their majesties, and the other members of the royal family, are vastly underpaid. No matter what their pay envelopes contain on the last Friday of each month, it isn't nearly enough. They would have my entire sympathy were they to strike for higher wages, or slip down to Soho and pawn a crown or two.

One has only to read the court circular and such magazines as The Tatler and Sketch to realize what never-ending ordeals are suffered by those who spend their time in Buckingham's big boarding house.

The only time they have themselves is when they are asleep, and they must not get much sleep. They are on display almost as much as Nelson's statue in Trafalgar square, but unlike Nelson they can't set their faces in one position and let it go at that. They must laugh, smile, show amazement, surprise and all the other emotions except displeasure.

The court circular, which runs in papers like the Times and the Observer each day, tells where the king and queen, the royal princesses, the Duke of Edinburgh and others are, and what they are doing.

The Tatler, Sketch and other magazines record the goings-on in their pages.

Theirs is a schedule which would break down a combination Lionel Stronoff and marathon runner. How the queen manages to keep on the pump side is a mystery to me, what with all the trotting along she does with the king. In the few days I have been here they have spent days tramping around agricultural fairs at York and Inverness, Scotland; have entertained at numerous garden parties; paraded before crowd, but not at the price the Buckingham folk have to pay.

"The bell ringing at this frightful hour produces such rage that my physical health is in danger, and such wicked thoughts that my soul is in even greater peril," Dr. Craddock said.

SYMBOL OF SAFETY

Completely New! For years you've seen cars gradually improved through annual model changes. But in this car you step into an entirely new automotive age... years and years ahead of conventional cars in performance, in economical operation, in safety, and—mark this—in value, too.

The Tucker has dozens of exciting engineering features, any one of which would be a major model change in a normal year... features completely new, yet completely proved in fifteen years of rigid tests.

The Tucker is a longer car and more luxurious than others in the medium price field. It is only five feet high from top to roof. It has, not 100, not 120, but 166 horsepower of smooth, effortless rear-engine power.

And what a joy to drive! No engine heat, fumes, or noise flowing back through the passenger compartment because the engine is in the rear. Ordinary traction jolts and jars either eliminated or unbelievably softened by the exclusive new rubber torsional wheel-suspension. A car, at last, with solid four-wheel stability, geared to the road.

Clover Couple Wed in Recent Evening Nuptial

CLOVER, July 26—A double ceremony performed at the Clover Trinity Lutheran church uniting Hilda Meyer, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Meyer, and Ira Archer, son of Mr. and Mrs. Roy T. Archer, both Clovers.

The Rev. W. F. Dannenfeld, pastor of the church, read the marriage vows at 6 p. m. Sunday, July 11, and the Rev. Robert Diehl, pastor of the bridegroom, gave the wedding address.

Lighted tapers and tall baskets of white lilies were the background decor for the wedding.

Maid of honor was Alma Meyer, sister of the bride, who was a bridesmaid. Bridesmaids included Mrs. Edna Meyer in a green formal, Mrs. Paul Meyer in a pink formal, Patricia Hawkins, sister of the groom, in a white formal, and Ann Archer wearing a yellow formal.

Savant Avows Common Folk Worst Crooks

By MICHAEL O'NEILL, JR.
CHICAGO, July 26 (UP)—Many "ordinary citizens" are so dishonest they make professional criminals look like amateurs, a sociologist said today.

"This is one of the painful facts of our time," said Prof. Joseph Lohman.

Over down everybody has a touch of larceny in him, Lohman said. It shows among even the most "respectable" people, he said.

Lohman, who teaches at the University of Chicago, cited surveys to show that amateur law-breakers carry off more loot every year than all of the nation's professionals.

Department stores report their customers and clerks are so dishonest they have to make price adjustments to allow for the thousands of dollars they lose annually.

It is common knowledge, Lohman said, that housewives sometimes turn to slipping quarter pounds of butter into their purses to avoid paying high prices.

Ordinary people, he charged in a business deal, he said. They have come to expect it and often blame themselves for being a "sucker" rather than accuse the croaker.

Americans look on professional criminals as a special class responsible for all the crime in the country. Lohman people they don't believe that some of the things they do would merit prosecution if they were caught.

"As a matter of fact," he said, "some of the lowest racketeers in the country have taken their cues from John Q. Public. For instance, they never went into gasoline coupon racket during the war until ordinary citizens had been cheating on their ration cards for some time."
