BIG VOTE, WE HOPE

Heavy registrations of voters for the Nov. 4 elections are causing fear in some quarters that there may be a jam-up at the polls.

Best indications are that between 50 and 60 million people will cast their ballots, as compared with 40 million in 1948.

Those figures, in themselves, are grounds for suspecting some feet are getting ground, and worse yet that long delays in getting into voting places may cause some people to say, "Oh, the heck with it!"

In some of the states requiring annual registration, the heavy turn-out of registrants produced exactly that result. There were too few registering places, too few officials on duty, and hence too many people just would not put up with the inconvenience.

So, with admirable forethought in resolution, individuals and organizations have taken concerned themselves most with getting out the vote are going into action.

Among these is the American Heritage foundation, which is conducting one of the biggest non-partisan national campaigns to get people to the polls.

The foundation is putting the heat on local election boards to provide enough adequately manned voting places. Individual citizens also can bring adequate influence to bear on election officials.

Actually, there's good cause for all this hubbub about getting out the vote. In 1948 only 51 per cent of the Americans who could have voted did so. But that same year in Italy 89 per cent of those eligible voted.

Last year in England it was 88 per cent. There are other countries where the vote is taken, like Belgium, 80, Sweden, 80. And in America, remember, only 51.

General Eisenhower says those who can vote but don't "are voting by default for minority rule." Governor Stevenson asks people to make the choice for themselves.

So let's don't get caught with our arrangements down. With all indications pointing to a record vote, let's not allow present-day conditions for voting keep people from exercising one of their most valuable rights. Let's try to insure that everyone who wants to vote can vote, with a minimum of wasted time and other inconveniences.

BYRD AND MORSE

There should be no misunderstanding about the attitude of Sen. Harry F. Byrd of Virginia, even though he did urge Virginians to vote for General Eisenhower in his recent radio address.

By telling his constituency, which gave him an unprecedented majority in the 1952 primary, that they were "too intelligent" to need his advice, he gave them shrewd praise.

Senator Byrd, to our way of thinking, is one of our ablest public officials. Save for the ultra-liberal fringe, a majority of the senate press would give him the highest opinion.

It should be remembered that Senator Byrd, at the invitation of Governors Talmadge and Byrnes of Georgia and South Carolina, respectively, touched off the revolt against Truman's "spineless" in Atlanta and Charleston more than a year ago.

It is interesting to note that the Democrats are trying to make capital of Sen. Wayne Morse's resignation from the Republican party, although the Oregon senator has been regarded all along as a ragged-edge Republican at best.

But the Democrats are not so enthusiastic about Senator Byrd's support of General Eisenhower, nor about his condemnation of the present administration generally. And Sen. Byrd has shown no inclination to desert the Democratic party.

Any way one looks at it, Senator Byrd's attitude toward the Truman administration is far more significant than anything Senator Morse might do or say. The two men are in a different league altogether.

CONFUSING PROBLEM

The problem now confusing the experts—and it will be a major headache for the president—is the question of investment in production, transportation and distribution plans—when all this spending stops to the production of goods.

What will happen to the American economic system—employment, wages, prices, purchasing power, the cost of living, the balance of payments, investment in production, transportation and distribution plans—when all this spending stops to the production of goods?

Although they have not met this question head-on in the campaign speeches, Governor Stevenson and General Eisenhower recognize it. They have given their views on it in the past.

Stevenson's policy—The Democratic nominee, now that he has embraced almost all the fair deal economic and social policies of the Truman administration, has a record in the key factor in the campaign, would continue a program of federal expansion.

He would limit the 20-25 billion dollar vacuum by increasing the government's large contributions in every field—military, foreign, social, health and housing.

Under Stevenson, judging from the promises he has given and the pledges made on his behalf by Truman, the government would remain big and expensive in accord with the Roosevelt-Truman pattern of the past.

Truman-Secretary Snyder recently said he saw no need for a change in the present 20 billion dollar public debt or the present peak tax burden, and there was no rubric for this politically unpleasant issue.

Eisenhower-Taft offers—as against this plan—General Eisenhower offers the hope of a last slash equaling the 20 or 25 billion dollars he expects can be trimmed from the federal budget within two years.

The Eisenhower-Taft slash seems to be that, with this extra money in the consumer's pockets instead of the government's, the economy will expand in a way that it will maintain employment and purchasing power at a safe and sound rate—in short, that the economy will be in a "healthy" operating condition at the same speed and level as now.

This assumption is inherent in "it" operation—debt reduction, tax cuts, and the like—operating a property which is not based on war. Besides the limit-for-change issue, this pledge appears to have been the "Republican" answer.

ECONOMIST'S WARNING

Non-political economists do not object, either, although they do agree with "It's" insistence on the possibility of a gross reduction in the budget two or three years hence.

But they also warn that our economy will suffer severely, as Stalin prophesied at the recent Communist meeting in Moscow.

General Eisenhower's withdrawal of 20-25 billion dollars from the annual budget in 1949, and the consequent reduction in government expenditures, will be kept in production use by the Stevenson or Eisenhower method will be determined on Nov. 4 in the election of both a new President and congress.

THE GREAT BETRAYAL

What is the great betrayal in government probably is the most important issue to be decided by voters on Nov. 4. How did the Roosevelt and Truman administrations get into the position they are in today?

It is interesting to note that the Democrats are trying to make capital of Sen. Wayne Morse's resignation from the Republican party, although the Oregon senator has been regarded all along as a ragged-edge Republican at best.

But the Democrats are not so enthusiastic about Senator Byrd's support of General Eisenhower, nor about his condemnation of the present administration generally. And Sen. Byrd has shown no inclination to desert the Democratic party.

Any way one looks at it, Senator Byrd's attitude toward the Truman administration is far more significant than anything Senator Morse might do or say. The two men are in a different league altogether.

SOME DUPLICITY HERE

Most popular stories in German magazines these days are flattering accounts of the private lives of ex-Nazi leaders. The latest series of this kind to find wide reader appeal in Germany is a picture magazine article about former Propaganda Minister Joseph Goebbels and his wife Emma.

The pictures show him with his minister, collecting butterflies, and giving candy to children, like a nice guy.

A report on this new trend in German journals has just been made to the state department by Wilson Hicks and Will Connell, two U. S. picture magazine editors who were sent abroad to survey West German publications.

To keep American officials in Germany happy, the Germans describe the former Nazi officials as bad men in the text, but the pictures always portray them as gentle, kindly people.

There isn't anything American or other allied officials could do about censoring these German publications even if they wanted to.

Always complaining about not getting ahead may mean that there's a washbone where your backbones should be.

Council Ousts Police Judge; Asks for Bids

DULLE, Oct. 28—Call for bids on two new projects in Twin Falls Monday night at a special meeting of the city council and Al Jones was expelled of his duties as police judge as of Nov. 30.

Mayor Tom Smith reported to the council that the plan of the council office in the offices of the police was refused by Judge Jones even though the judge was offered a raise in pay. Mayor Smith said Judge Jones also refused to resign. The council then moved to relieve the judge of his duties and to appoint Duane.

The city inspector problem was discussed again, since merchants were reported to be unhappy because the inspector had been removed. It was removed because of complaints from residents concerning long lines from burning paper and refuse.

The council decided that the ordinance requiring the city to remove garbage did not extend beyond garbage which was contained in metal containers of not more than 20-gallon capacity. Fire Chief Bob Stewart said merchants cannot keep cardboard containers behind their places of business until they become a fire hazard and he warned them against burning refuse without a permit. No permits are granted for any open fires in alleyways, he said.

Ten-minute parking holes were approved for the Vogue cleaners and the New-Kay Laundry. Restricted parking also was established in front of the police station. The council also was asked to add industrial lots for R. R. Lora.

The next council meeting will be held Nov. 11.

Ray Kalaber, Twin Falls, Scout executive, spoke on the importance of supporting Harry L. Barstler, recently appointed Boy Scout finance drive chairman. In the campaign which will open Nov. 1, Kalaber also explained the efforts to be put forth by Boy Scouts in distributing Liberty Bells and other reminders on Nov. 1. Representing the district at the meeting were Norman Nielson, Butte district commissioner; Olen Lewis, Butte, finance chairman; John Harris, Butte, chairman of health chairman; and Lloyd Smith, Oakley, Scout commissioner for the Snake river area council.
