Reds Agree to Accept U. N.'s Exchange Bid

(From Page One)

Minor all women and girls straight through the police at Farmington, Idaho, Saturday, accepting General Clark's Feb. 23 proposal for such an exchange.

The note coupled with the acceptance a request for resumption of the peace talks, broken off Oct. 8 when the reds refused to yield to the allied view that no war prisoner should be sent home against his will.

The red move came at a time when world communists, led by Moscow, were new to some extent to be trying to lessen tensions, but whether this fitted into the pattern was not yet clear.

Even as the war was made, the war in Korea reached its highest pitch in five months.

General Clark viewed the red move with caution.

"We are going to study this offer very closely," he said.

"We want to be sure there isn't anything in it we don't understand."

Red China's Peiping and North Korea's Pyongyang radio understood their emphasis by speaking over and over, in English, Japanese, Korean and Chinese, broadcasts of the red acceptance covered only the sick and the wounded, a mere fraction of war prisoners held by the United States.

The reds claim they hold 13,000 allied POWs, including about 3,500 American. The United States claims to hold 12,224 Chinese and North Koreans, of which 1,106 are civilian internees and 12,119 POWs.

The Wisconsin speaker said the dairy farmer is not responsible for high prices of dairy products. He said somebody else was to blame, a price that agriculture has been responsible for the high standard of living in the United States.

said. The fire department was unable to stop the flames because no water was in irrigation ditches at the time.

Swartley was in Filer at the time and another daughter, Marilyn, 12, was at school.

The house was one of the first erected in the area. The Swartleys rent the farm from Van Cliffer, who is an uncle from Gen. George S. Patton.

Clarence Kalbfleisch and Mrs. David Thornton, who owned the spud cellar fire and notified the fire department. Clarence Kalbfleisch, the owner, was having lunch in Filer.

Fierman had to clean out all irrigation ditches and turn water into it before they could fight the fire. They were not able to save a truck and two tractors stored in the cellar. The fire spread to nearby buildings and the house.

A northwest wind prevented the flames from spreading. Had the wind been blowing from the southeast, the entire group of buildings might have been consumed, officials said.

Clarence Kalbfleisch was not sure on the value of his losses or if he had insurance.

Fully wiring was blamed for the fire. Joyce Swartley had complained of the lights flickering the night before the fire.

She and her mother had been preparing her clothes for her return to the high school in Idaho Springs, O. Sunday. Her luggage was among the items saved.

Mr. Swartley was given for the spud cellar blaze.

and is scheduled to submit the report Friday.

Another major topic up for discussion, Jones said, will be problems relative to the abolition of county boards of education in 28 counties. The 1963 legislature approved legislation to abolish the county boards and county superintendents in those counties which are completely reorganized.

Local school district officials and county officials are given additional reports on the subject, and are carefully planned and coordinated, Jones said.

Several delegations are expected to discuss school reorganization problems with the board April 11, Jones said.

The board will be recognized at its Pocatello meeting with Dr. A. H. McCabe, St. Maries, taking office for the first time. He was appointed recently to succeed Paul Jessup, Wallace.

James E. Graham, Reburgh, will succeed J. C. McGarvey, Orofino, as president of the board. Mrs. Margaret Campbell, New Meadows, will become vice president and John Remenberg, Burley, secretary, under the board's policy of rotating offices.

Mrs. Estelar F. Rhodes, 55, died in front of her home at 2513 Ninth avenue north about 11:35 a.m. Saturday. Dr. J. Woodson Creed, county coroner, attributed death to a heart attack.

Odd 3-Train Crash Takes Lives of 22

ern Limited across the tangled wreckage in its path and piled head long at 80 miles an hour, causing a wrecker of twisted steel and broken bodies.

After long, anguished seconds of the sound of steel on steel, grinding and tearing, the pieces came to rest, but briefly.

Breaths started to come from the coaches strewn like carelessly dumped pile of fumed posts. But for a little while, the mumbled sobs of the unburied among the 420 people involved in the wrecks wouldn't function. For a few minutes, no one did anything.

The wrecked cars, threatening like alligators in the rapid-fire impacts, had shredded off telephone poles. There was no communication with the rest of the world.

A railroad man—his heart nearly bursting—ran three miles to carry word of the catastrophe and to summon outside aid.

But passengers and trainmen alike pitched into rescue efforts along the route outside help could come. They poked through the tangled coaches. About 150 passengers were helped. More than 60 later were taken to hospitals.

The source of the Rio Grande is in the San Juan mountains of southern Colorado.

HOSIERY—MAY FLOOR

TUCKER'S NATIONAL WHIRLIGIG

(Every Sunday the Pioneer Washington newspaper con- sidered the most reliable news source in the Northwest...)

WASHINGTON—Why is the so tolerant toward congress?" asks Mrs. E. A. Houston, Tex. "Instead of opposing or returning their party to power, the Republicans are showing him around. They are trying to wreck his administration before it is even started. They don't let it crack down. The people are behind him."

Answer: I receive many questions in this vein, expressing admiration for the President and hostility toward congress, and asking why Eisenhower does not assert himself more positively. My answer, may I say, is based, in part at least, on the President's own thoughts on this subject.

In the first place, "the" is not a creature or vengeful person, as his two predecessors were in their relations with the legislative branch of the govern- ment.

He could not have been such a successful commander of the allied forces in Europe during World War II, or of SHARP, if it had not been for his calmness and understanding and congenial nature. He now relies on those same qualities to restore orderly government to Washington.

WANTS TO COOPERATE—Although I don't think Eisenhower is a keen student or philosopher of govern- ment, I believe he has a precise concept of the relationship between the white House and congress.

Unlike FDR and Truman, he does not want to domi- nate. He wants to cooperate. In the long run, the Republican social and economic policy is a deal- fair deal program got through congress since FDR's abortive 1938 "purge" of hostile business.

It also disagrees with the present capitalist hill Republican social "agenda" around. His relations with the acknowledged leaders—Speaker Martin, House Majority Leader Bullock, Senators Taft and Knowland—have been excellent.

The only man out of step appears to be "Joe" Mc- Carthy, known "The" well. I predict he eventually will persuade the senator from Wisconsin to fall in line in the rest rack.

BRADLEY NO ARMY POLITICIAN—"Please tell me how General Bradley's military and political careers are related?" writes Mr. K. Concord, N. H. "I know that he is a fine soldier. But it seems to me that he is not a firm or aggressive politician. Is he what you call an army politician?"

Answer: "Brad," as Eisenhower calls him, was an excellent field commander. He did not have Patton's dash or Blair, but he was a good soldier. He was a commander of a higher officer. In Europe, of course, his superior was Eisenhower. They were 1918.

Bradley is too honest and humble to be an "army politician." But he is so called by his present honors that he is not so called by his military heart. However, Bradley has become a minor figure at Washington in so far as military problems are concerned. He will not soon be in the White House, no matter how much he enjoys the nominal title, is Dwight David Eisenhower. It is inconceivable that our first military President would call an army politician so low as to manage our war machine.

WOMEN YEARN FOR HONORABLE POSITION—"This may be a silly question," writes H. S. Brooklyn, "but who is the new and official hostess since the Republican social and economic policy is a deal- fair deal program got through congress since FDR's abortive 1938 'purge' of hostile business."

Answer: "Brad," as Eisenhower calls him, was an excellent field commander. He did not have Patton's dash or Blair, but he was a good soldier. He was a commander of a higher officer. In Europe, of course, his superior was Eisenhower. They were 1918.

Views of Others: JORDAN'S FAIR TRADE VETOS. Gov. Len B. Jordan's vetoes of bills amending two Idaho sales practices laws would seem to be justified by a philosophy of free competition.

They declared that the law "does not in any way conflict with the free enterprise system of doing business. Instead, it sets the stage for a system which results in the survival of the 'fittest' and acts as a control of practices carried on by the unfair, monopolistic competition of the discount and one-price business."

A GREAT ORGANIZATION. The writer considers it a real privilege to have been among the guests at the annual banquet of the state FFA convention at the American Legion hall in Twin Falls Friday evening.

Never has he been so favorably impressed with a large group of young men as he was on this occasion. It was an inspiration indeed to witness the manner in which the 300 FFA boys in attendance conducted their meeting. They were conscientious, clean-cut and gentlemanly in every respect... all in significant contrast to the reaction one gets too often in contact with present day youth.

L. A. Thomas, one of the best known educators in Idaho, was also a guest at the banquet and he, too, expressed himself as being exceptionally proud of the FFA boys. Identified with education in Idaho for 33 years, 12 years as superintendent of schools at Kinnear and presently as superintendent of Class A District No. 2 at Meridian, which includes 12 grade schools and two high schools, Mr. Thomas is in position to appraise the FFA organization objectively.

He attributes the high type of young manhood in this organization to the type of teachers and the type of men selected for these vocational ag jobs. These teachers and advisers, he believes, are "doing the outstanding job in modern education."

In any event, as Mr. Thomas points out, these boys are demonstrating vocational education at its best. They are being indoctrinated into the fundamental and dignified business.

The manager of one of the local hotels, at which 40 of the FFA boys happened to be staying, added the following observation: "It is a real pleasure to have guests like these boys because they are so considerate and well-mannered. It would be good to have our athletic coaches could imbue the same spirit in young people as the ag teachers do."

POT SHOTS

ANENT CURIOSITY. Dear Ed Show: I don't believe I'd like your job because my curiosity would raise hell. Do you really ever wonder, Ed, who in creation can do that?

Who in thunder wrote that stuff? Did it mean it, or was it a bluff? But you can't raise much fuss and fume because you use a hom-de-plume.

P. B. I'll bet you can't even guess whether I'm a man or woman, young or old—or can you, huh?

F. S. Not only a woman could be so curious and the handwriting indicates about middle age.

F. X. I'd rather be a Negro (Los Angeles) than a white man with a more insistent obligation have lacked the acumen to say "the exaggerated charges are largely based on racial appraisals and in many instances are styled after exposures in the Daily Worker."

F. Y. The disgraceful and, for a time, dangerous incident wherein a pass Negro kooch dancer was momentarily held in a mob of white men, but actually unemployable because they are brutal, drunken, irresponsible.

The poor cops take desperate chances and make many arrests in the name of law and order. They are, in fact, a standing proof of abandoned character.

But a policeman who cracks a skull with a stick or the butt of his rifle in a fight against odds is a rotten apple to be made an example of.

There are areas of New York where many of the population are not only habitually unemployed, but actually unemployable because they are brutal, drunken, irresponsible.

The cops discuss these matters as if they were a matter of course. They know them, but the suppression of basic facts puts the cop at a disadvantage when he should get the benefit of every doubt.

New York policemen are superior to the same number of "soldiers" taken at random. The requirements for admission to the force and the proportion of rejected persons are so high that it is much more important to law-abiding citizens than it is to the cops themselves.

Therefore, the pros should examine warily this crack attempt to arouse pity for bad actors who get a "second chance" for a "third time" and complete their career.

IT'S THE DOGGING. Dear Ed: It's not the waiting for fishing season to open, it's the tough time you have dogging housecleaning. No, during the waiting period, I'm a Two-Gun Feie.

FAMOUS LAST LINE. "He spends most of his time figuring out ways to convince the boss he's doing a bear-up job." CHEVYMAN IN THE FOURTH ROW.

HOW THINGS APPEAR FROM PEGLER'S ANGLE

The uproar over charges of brutality against New York policemen has been hidden the fact that here is an attempt by the federal government to take jurisdiction in its business.

It is an unfortunate fact that the New York policemen as a corps have to cope with a dangerous situation made the more so by a steady reliance of press and public to suppress important factors in the growth of violent crime in the streets, parks and subways.

The poor cops take desperate chances and make many arrests in the name of law and order. They are, in fact, a standing proof of abandoned character.

Story of Power, Water in Western States Indicative of Surge in Economy

(From Para One)
When you put together those facts about the five-year period after World War I, you can't help but be amazed at the progress that has been made in the past three years, the astounding picture begins to emerge.

The reason electricity and water are good barometers of an economy is this:

As industry comes into an area, the demand for power and water goes up. As population increases, the electricity "load" goes heavier. And more important, when the individual home uses more power every year, it becomes more difficult to keep the lines from overheating, which, in turn, means the buying power of the average man has gone up and so has his standard of living.

Water Project Aid Confined To West Area

WASHINGTON, March 22 (AP)—The government's reclamation program is confined to the 17 arid and semi-arid states of the west, and Alaska.

The program was authorized by a law signed in 1902 by President Theodore Roosevelt and started out with irrigation of crop lands as virtually its only objective.

Through the years it has been broadened to include hydroelectric, such as hydro-electric power production, flood control, protection and maintenance of fish and wildlife, recreational facilities, municipal water supplies and navigation benefits.

Originally the states in which federal reclamation projects could be carried out in cooperation with state and local interests included only Arizona, California, Colorado, Idaho, Kansas, Montana, Nebraska, Nevada, New Mexico, North Dakota, Oklahoma, Oregon, South Dakota, Utah, Washington and Wyoming.

Later Texas and Alaska were added.

In addition to the projects constructed in the 17 states by the reclamation bureau, the army engineers also carry on flood control activities in some, and hydro-electric power is produced by some army dams.

When they like to garden in El Centro, farmers have to pray for water. Down here we order it on the telephone.

Water is so precious they do everything to make it go further.

In Arizona they use the same water from the city river to irrigate four or five times. It runs in the ditches, sinks, is pumped back and used again until finally the salt content comes too great, and they let it free.

Along the coast, they build fresh-water "dikes" against the static pressure of the Pacific ocean. They recharge underground basins, tap underground rivers. They know how to wash a field that has acquired too much alkali.

When you ask why the water was financed this way, rather than by going to the federal government, they reply, "We were born 30 years ago."

Two major battles, both of extreme significance to the country as a whole, are in the courts.

California and Arizona finally have gone to the supreme court to settle their long-standing argument about the Colorado river water rights.

The King's river case also holds immense implications for federal power policy.

That fight is between the interior department and the Pacific Gas and Electric company. The company obtained a license from the federal power commission (FPC) 30 years ago, but since generating units were planned to build others, then interior contended it has the right to withdraw power and restore it for power purposes.

The phenomenon began a new upsurge after World War I. War demands had held back expansion of the use of appliances of many kinds.

It was like taking a heavy weight off a plant root system. When the fighting ended, American economy shot upward and outward in all directions.

Water is being used on the mountains they shove it to heights of 1,100 feet—about the weight of the Empire State building, plus its television tower.

You think all this, there isn't enough water to go around.

That is, there isn't enough in terms of the future. The calendar on the engineer's desk is set 20 years ahead. He has to plan now for the power and water needs of the community in 1956, America's greying fast, and these problems exist everywhere, but they are especially acute in the west.

The interior department, through various component agencies, such as the reclamation bureau and three power administrations, handles the sale of all federally-produced power outside the Tennessee valley authority area, where the TVA is the marketing agency.

California and Arizona finally have gone to the supreme court to settle their long-standing argument about the Colorado river water rights.

The King's river case also holds immense implications for federal power policy.

Apparently about 1,000 persons are moving to California every day, and this is not all.

Chicago in population by the 1960 census. Proportionately, the increase there may be even greater. All the western states envision a future of mammoth dimensions.

Nor is it only in population. California is building up at a rate that astonishes even the western Chambers of Commerce. Not too many years ago Los Angeles was mainly a winter resort, with hardly a factory tower on the horizon.

But in California state agencies and individuals have related fiercely some proposals to the interior department. In the hearings on the celebrated King's river case, a lawyer for one of the irrigation agencies mentioned that "we are dealing with an archaic repayment system." He noted instances in which a project would not pay off in less than an estimated 32 years, others in which it never would pay off.

The case is complicated and has a long history.

Basically, however, it revolves around the use of something over 22 million acre-feet of water from the Colorado. An acre-foot equals about 22,800 gallons, enough to cover one acre of land to a depth of one foot.

The FPC had granted Pacific Gas and Electric a license, saying the reserved lands would be used for power purposes under the license.

There the tawny deserts, beautiful and dangerous stretch away to the farthest horizons. In some places, they are dotted with cactus, greasewood and mesquite. Mostly, though, the deserts are sheer sand, lonely, wind-swept.

On the edge of the desert are semi-arid areas. They get some rainfall but far too little to support the farms and cities that have grown there. Without bringing water from great distances, the desert would overtake them in swift and savage strides.

Theoretically, when one area gets no industry another area must lose it. If American economy were static, that would be true. But while new factories are going up in the west they also are going up in, for example, the Tennessee valley and the deep south and Texas. And—remember that, especially in a hemisphere—the program for more kilowatts covers every other corner of the United States.

Expansion brings controversy. It changes economic patterns. And in the west people are watching with intense interest its effect on the policies of the administration voted into office last November.

The case is complicated and has a long history.

The case is complicated and has a long history.

The case is complicated and has a long history.

It was because, preliminarily, the southwest is a "water civilization." For the time being, the people there have fairly well solved the problem of electric power in normal water years. A major drought could cause brownouts because much production capacity is hydro-electric.

But for 50 years, and especially today, much of their thinking and planning has been pinned tight to the question: "Can we get water? How much will it cost?"

For this reason, among others, many westeners look for some significant changes, both in policy and in method.

As to method, some in the west believe it may take the form of higher standards of feasibility for new projects, a lighter system of requirements for the states, and that with the feasibility of many great projects. They claimed the departments favor schemes that are economically sound and concealed costs in mysterious methods of accounting.

In California's recent 47-day drought plowed furrows of worry in many a farmer's face.

All over the west are ingenious circulatory systems, the pumps like beating hearts, the canals and ditches like arteries and capillaries that carry water through the body of the land. Only this is life sustained.

Arizona has a cash income from farming today 19 times greater than it had 20 years ago. The figure reaches toward 420 million dollars, according to University of Arizona figures.

The expansion was made possible by a highly-developed system of carrying water over great distances to the farmer's field. During the winter, while much of America is hibernating, the desert farmer puts in garden vegetables and fruit crops.

FFA Leaders Elected; Star Award Given

 Association dairy improvement contest.

Featured speaker of the evening was Dr. D. R. Theophilus, dean of the University of Idaho college of agriculture. Speaking on "Tomorrow's Challenge," Dr. Theophilus pointed out that a farmer is a man who produces food and fiber for a profit and explained that his cost per animal or acre is the farmer's biggest concern today.

The dean observed crop production on a national scale has improved 45 per cent per acre over the last 20 years. He said Idaho's wheat production has stepped up 20 per cent, potatoes 30 per cent, beans 43 per cent, sugar beets 72 per cent and milk and butterfat 20 per cent.

He explained the increases have come through improved farming methods and refinement in animal and plant breeding.

Continuing, he pointed out today's rapid advance will require a huge increase in farm production by 1975. And there is not enough usable land in the country to do it by increasing the acreage alone.

Dean Theophilus contended the increase must come from present acreage which can be increased by using practices which are known to be right.

In stating another challenge, he told the youths that farming is becoming more specialized and is demanding a big business approach. In order to be a good farmer "you must be a successful businessman," he said.

Urging the youths to prepare themselves for their future roles, he stated they did not have to go to college to learn improved farming methods but added there was no better device today for preparing for the future.

Concluding, he said, "You must prepare yourselves to do your duty as farmers and citizens and do your best as a farmer so we can bring the level of knowledge and application closer together to best meet the challenge."

Dr. Theophilus was introduced by William Kerr, state director of vocational education and also FFA adviser. Before introducing the dean, Kerr spoke briefly on the history of vocational education in Idaho.

Earlier in the evening Kirk Bush, president of the Idaho Vocational Association, presented an award in recognition of his 30 years in vocational education. Bush said it was the first award of the kind made in the state.

Each of the eight district star farmer award winners was introduced by their district president.

They are Clenden Merrill, south upper Snake; Monte Peterson, Windfall; Monte Peterson, Bill Penco, Wilder, western Idaho; Bob Valentine, Kimberly, south Magic Valley; James Wright, Nampa; Boise Valley; Sherman, Good Hope, north Idaho; Keith Olney, Oregon, southeast Idaho; and Roscoe Ward, East River, east Idaho.

Honorary state farmer degrees, which are presented to agriculture teachers, businessmen and school principals and superintendents, were awarded to five men. They are John D. Frank, Twin Falls; school superintendent; Pete Genarussa, farmer and state legislator from Carey; L. A. Thomas, Meridian school superintendent; Chase Pond, vocational agriculture instructor at Idaho Falls; Charles Luther, vocational agriculture instructor at Jerome; and Ralph Edwards, Boise executive secretary of the Idaho FFA.

The degrees are presented annually for outstanding service and support of the FFA.

A eight-state high school youth, Edson Deas, was awarded the Idaho Potato Grower's association $150 first prize as winner of the annual potato growing contest. Brent Matzura, Tulo, received the $70 second prize and Davy Carlson, Perth, won $30 for third place.

Elas Spaulding, Rexburg, won the awards for the association. Leonard Manwaring, assistant manager of the Upper Snake River Valley Dairy association, made the dairy improvement contest awards for the association.

First prize, $25, went to Wayne Siddows, Ribley, James Hugh Park Sholley, was the winner of the $25 second prize. John Cannon, Blackfoot, received third prize of $20 and O. Lemarr Barrus, Sugar-Salem, $25 for fourth place.

Jean Curtis, Burley, president of the Idaho Future Homemakers of America, was a guest at the meeting and spoke briefly. John S. Fildhusen, Twin Falls, former agricultural

Care of Your Children

By ANGELO PATRI

Dear boys and girls: You had to live alone. Whether you make people happy or sad by your actions or whether you are successful or unsuccessful. Being unselfish brings happiness for you.

Be in mind that you are as dependent on others as they are on you, and that the rules that sometimes seem to apply your style are what help make for an enjoyable association. When you are told to do this, and stop that; when you are being helped to live in peace and happiness with others. And remember too, that while virtually everybody wants to be first, if you are second, or third, or even further behind, take it cheerfully—a good sport.

Does your child have bad eating habits? Is he a food fussy? Dr. Fater explains the reasons in his book "The Baby's Food Book." To obtain a copy, send 25 cents in coin to his office—Times-News, P. O. Box 29, Sutton, N. York 13, N. Y.

FIVE MAGIC VALLEY YOUTHS WIN INTERMOUNTAIN AAU TITLES

Sports FROM ALL ANGLES

BY MARION DUNN

They were in the meet almost unnoticed by Magic Valley fans because they were representing a Utah school, but two boxing bouts almost stole the show at the Intermountain AAU boxing championships in Salt Lake City.

The two, Charles Doane, 19-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Chauncey Doane, and Owen Ewan, 18-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Ewan - won a series of championships while fighting for the Brigham Young university team.

But the fact that their own school is in the division titles is just as interesting as the story behind their winning.

Doane, a 125-pounder, had four previous scraps under his belt. He won a 125 in four fights and that is his own number of fights going into the meet.

Doane's opponent, Arthur Cunden, Salt Lake City, had a record of 17-20-10. He had a win over Arthur Cunden, Salt Lake City, that gives him one win and one loss in two amateur fights.

The two boys said they are going to try to start an amateur fight club in Rupert when they come home from their freshman year at BYU this summer.

While the five Magic Valley youngsters who won crowns are taking their well-deserved bows, two local youngsters are also going to fight in the AAU matches Saturday.

Gene Turley, younger brother of Woody, fought the fight because he was too young for the junior division in which he would have been placed.

The Magic Valley Cowboys will open spring training April 8 and that is the date that the team will be leaving for the state.

Incidentally, that $11,000 was nearly $10,000 pre-paid for bought from former owner Maury Doer.

Before any more time goes by, it is appropriate that a note of congratulation be sent.

Turley, Doane Get Awards as Best Pugs in Divisions

SALT LAKE CITY, March 28 (AP)—Five Magic Valley boxers claimed championships after an arduous final-round night in the Intermountain AAU tournament here Friday night.

Woody Turley, Magic Valley Boxing club; Cy Sheperdson, Twin Falls Boys club; Virgil Skinner, Magic Valley Boxing club; Charles Doane, Rupert, and Owen Ewan, Rupert, were awarded title trophies.

In addition Turley was named the outstanding boxer in the junior division and Doane was the outstanding senior division boxer.

Skinner was the only fighter who came through the matches unscathed. He won the 167-pound junior division title without throwing a punch since he was the only one in the weight.

Turley scored a TKO win over Ralph Wallis, Granger, Utah Boys club, in 127 of the second round; Sheperdson got a TKO over Charles Morris, Provo, Utah, in 27 seconds of the third round; Doane defeated Art Cunden, Salt Lake City, in 178-pound senior division title.

These victories gave Magic Valley boxers a clean sweep of their first amateur titles. The youngsters who reached the last night's round missed walking off with the championship titles.

Doane and Ewan both fought under the colors of Brigham Young university where they are training.

Two other local youngsters, Darrell Finck, Gooding, and Bill Pennek, Magic Valley Boxing club, lost out in Thursday night's semifinal rounds.

Turley was one of the smoothest performers in the meet as he boxed with considerable finesse, using a hard, jolting jab.

Turley's final fight with Wallis, Gooding, was a close one. Turley, for no count in the first round and then supplied the clincher early in the second round.

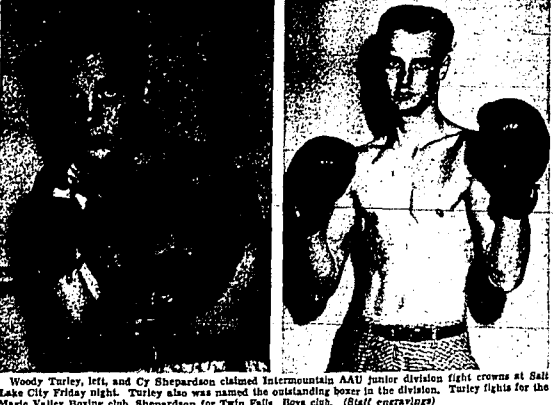

Sheperdson was almost as impressive. The first round with Morris was hard, close and well fought.

Sheperdson had this opponent in trouble three times in the second round and then went to work early in the third for the title.

Doane had a tough enough three rugged fights to get his title. He defeated Gene Williams, Tooele, Utah, in the first round.

Williams' opponent, Ogden Hays and Jess Moser, Ogden Hays' final one fight in the meet was his final one against Cunden.

Claim AAU Ring Titles

Woody Turley, left, and Cy Sheperdson claimed Intermountain AAU junior division fight crowns at Salt Lake City Friday night. Turley also was named the outstanding boxer in the division. Turley fights for the Magic Valley Boxing club, Sheperdson for Twin Falls Boys club. (Staff engravings)

Hydroelectric Plant Effect on Fish Studied by Magic Valley Sportsmen

If you are a fisherman or are naturally curious, maybe you've wondered at some time or another what affect the hydroelectric plants have on fish in Snake river.

"We know there are different effects from the power dams. In fact, some are caught on the Boise-Payette drainage but few are taken on Snake river, but they are there ready to be caught."

"We haven't reached any conclusions as to the effect of the power dams on the fish yet. The study is too comprehensive and too long for that. We think it will take two years to get all the facts gathered."

"We will collect material for a year. Then we'll analyze it on a quarterly and yearly basis and work out what it's all about until we are completely finished."

Helping the two men in the project are Lew B. Mountain, Home, and Forest Hauck, fish biologist.

The men are making a study of the available fish feed and how the fish are taking advantage of it.

The four men made one collection during the winter low water. Another will be taken during the high water of May or June.

It is a long, painstaking project, but when it is over the fishermen will be the winner with a thorough knowledge of just how fish are doing in Snake river.

Four Cage Stars On All-Star Team IDAHO FALLS, March 28 (AP)—Four upper Snake river valley high school youths have been named to represent the sixth district in the annual East-West all-star basketball game in Boise next summer.

Named to the east team were Lockyer, 6 foot, 6 inch Idaho Falls; and to the west team were Miller, 6 foot, 6 inch Idaho Falls; and to the east team were Lockyer, 6 foot, 6 inch Idaho Falls.

SHOSHONE, March 28—State Sen. Jack M. Murphree, club county, told members of the Shoshone Rod and Gun club here Friday that all was not well in the state's game department and that inquiries into several phases of the department should be made as soon as possible.

Murphy, a member of the senate fish and game committee that recently held hearings on the state's game department, told an inside story of the committee's investigation into the game department.

About 125 persons attended the meeting. Murphy said he had gone into the investigation of the game department with an open mind and a feeling that all was right within the game department.

"Not because some of them aren't fine men, but because of the political situation that might arise," he said.

"As to new inquiries into the department's activities he said an investigation should be made of the predatory game fund, now under the control of the director, and that a rearrangement should be made.

"While he was fired on the expected to turn out for the game department," he said.

"Murphy said he had no recollection of any of the department's activities as director," he said.

SHOSHONE, March 28—Dietrich and Shoshone high school opened the pre-season baseball schedule Friday with Dietrich taking a 4-1 victory.

The hitters were way ahead of the pitchers on both sides. Shoshone was limited to one hit by two Dietrich hurlers while three Indians pitched up only two hits to the winners.

Neither team was able to score in the first inning. Dietrich broke the spell in the top of the sixth.

Catcher Ernie McClure swung at the ball and hit the pitcher get away from him. McClure then made home run by Dale Bymanster, only extra base blow of the game.

Shoshone scored a single run in the last of the same frame when Dale Williams singled, solo scored and scored on an infield error.

Officers Are Relected by Cattle Group

HAILEY, March 28—Frank Knight was reelected president of the Idaho Cattle Raisers' Association at a meeting at Carey Wednesday afternoon.

Other officers also reelected are Lytle Huston, vice president; Guy Meacham, secretary, and Alfred A. Brethren and Verie Loveland, directors.

Reporting on the meeting Knight said the vast grazing area of the park had been observed from both the air and on foot and that options as to how long drinking water would be available for cattle differed.

Sherman Smith believed water would be ample to last 50 days. Dave Baird, who roods over different sections, thought it might last from 40 to 45 days. Guy Meacham and Knight did not think it would last long enough to pay unless heavy rains occur during the spring months.

Knight said the grass is just starting to grow and is not yet low enough for cattle to graze. Lovell Meacham and Sherman Smith will act as riders again this season.

Knights said drilling a well for drinking water for cattle was discussed. While this has been attempted several times in the past only a small bore has been made through the lava. Knights appointed Cecil Smith, Carey, and Joe Schodde, Burley, to investigate the possibilities of drilling a well.

Life in MAGIC VALLEY

With the days getting shorter and the sun's rays beginning to "rot" the snow as the lower altitudes of the valley cut their "laws" girls are ransacking the attics and basements for their jumping ropes and adults are scanning their seed catalogues. In addition there is a group of persons known as "rock hounds" who are sharpening their eyes and ears wondering just how long it is going to be before they can get away to the high hills.

Rocks are so common most people rarely think much about them but the whole story of our earth is told in them. Many of them are 125,000,000 years old. Herbert Westcott, KETC-TV, who has been a rock hound for many years, claims they open the door to high adventure just around the corner from anyone's home.

Perhaps the most common rock to be found in the MAGIC Valley is quartz in its many forms.

In describing quartz, Westcott claims it is a tree with many branches. The branches are divided into three parts. In one part are the impure forms, in another the clear and colorless forms and in the third are the impure forms. When quartz is clear and colorless it is known as rock crystal and this is found in abundance throughout southern Idaho. If a small amount of titanium is present the rock is a rose color and the result. While some of this beautiful stone has been found in this section of the country it is more abundant in the Black Hills of South Dakota.

Amethyst is quartz with a violet color caused by the presence of small quantities of manganese. Westcott explains that to be suitable for cutting into gems the color must be deep or the small pieces will appear almost colorless.

Another variety of crystalline quartz is citrine, better known as topaz. It obtains its clear yellow color from the presence of organic matter. The last variety of the crystalline branches of the tree is smoky quartz. Its cloudy brown color is caused by hydro carbon in the web.

Westcott says there are three impure forms of the crystalline quartz and that they have no value other than price of possession. They are not adapted to cutting and polishing. They are known as agate quartz crystals which include the thin needle-like crystals of rutile. Another variety is selenite quartz which is covered with and penetrated by iron oxide. Many specimens of the third variety, aventurin, are very showy. They are speckled by inclusions of small particles of mica and hematite. Many rock hounds use pieces of these rocks in their rock gardens, around their fish ponds and throughout their yards for decorations.

In the non-crystalline group, Westcott explains, agate is perhaps the most common. Agate is a banded or cloudy Chalcedony which is formed by nature in a "rock" river valley. Layers of different color representing deposits from water carrying silica and impurities in layers. Eventually the cavity has been filled with silica and impurities and when the mass is freed by the weathering away of the surrounding rock these banded masses are found.

Chrysoprase is the name for the apple green stone used in many jewelry. Its color comes from the presence of nickel oxide. It is an uncommon variety and has long been prized because of its use in jewelry. If a clear red color has been taken up by the quartz it is known as Carnelian. This was one of the first stones used for ornamental purposes and for engraving in ancient times.

When quartz has absorbed a greenish blue from iron to create a green it will attract more than just the Irish. If this stone has small red spots of Jasper it is termed bloodstone or heliotope. It is a gem stone and has intrinsic value.

Then, Westcott says, there is Jasper. Most any beginner in hunting rocks can come home with some fairly nice specimens of this tree of the quartz family. Some stories are a deep red, others a brown and many are green.

Flint is an impure brown Chalcedony, the color being caused by organic matter. Chert and Horsestone are simply impure varieties of flint. They are brown in color and are not used to much advantage by rock cutters and polishers. All of the non-crystalline forms are known as Chalcedony. Chalcedony was termed as precious in the ancient town of Chalcedon in Asia. Many nearly opposite Constantinople. The stones often contain stains resembling bits of petrified moss and plants. Other localities where three are found, besides in the Rocky mountains, are in the heart of basaltic rocks in Scotland, Ireland and Iceland.

Not too long ago a number of old books were on display in the HAGGERMAN public library. Some of them were more than a century old. For example, a Bible owned by Mrs. V. W. Carson. Mrs. Carson says the old book, published in 1822, originally was owned by her grandmother, Mrs. Julia Casilo Ferguson in Fiqua, O.

Mrs. Ferguson moved to Cairo, Ill. and then to Toppa, Kans. in 1828. The Bible then was given to Mrs. Carson and brought to Idaho in 1887. Mrs. Carson thinks the Methodist journal, published in 1834, traveled the same route to Idaho.

Mrs. John Stark displayed an arithmetic book published in 1858. Mrs. Stark says her parents were high school teachers in Newark, Ill., in 1855. Her parents moved to Adrian, Mo., 63 miles from Kansas City, and then to Gopher county, Neb., in the fall of 1857.

The book was given to a Mrs. Stark in 1884 and taken to Mesa, Colo., in 1893.

The "Farm Ballads," dated 1873 and owned by Mrs. Edna Martine Evans, was written by Will Carleton. It is from a set of three books, one titled "Farm Legends," published in 1875, and the second, "Farm Festivals," published in 1882.

"The Gospel Psalms," dated 1861, also was displayed by Mrs. Evans. Mrs. Evans says both of the books were owned by her grandfather and started west from Bushnell, Ill. but took a detour by going to South Dakota in 1850. Mrs. Evans' parents brought the books to Idaho in 1899.

The public library in Hagerman was started by Mrs. Martin Curran and Mrs. Mary Martin in 1921. The Civic club helped to sponsor it, donating desks and chairs. Mrs. Curran and Mrs. Martin contacted just about every family in Hagerman valley and when the library was opened more than 500 books had been donated. Mrs. Florence Abbott donated a full set of classics.

Mrs. Earl Allen was the first secretary of the library board. Others on the first board were Mrs. Martin, Mrs. Curran, Mrs. Elizabeth, Mrs. Florence Abbott, Elias Condit and George McKeen. The present librarian is Mrs. Isabelle Morgan.

"What Is Palm Sunday?"

By DONALD R. BLACKSTONE (Pastor, First Presbyterian Church)

Every year about this time, one often hears this question, "What is Palm Sunday?"

This is a very natural question and the truth is that a great many Christians who are not conversant with any of the Bible stories know the whole answer. The reason is that usually on Palm Sunday in the churches the scriptures are read from Matthew or Mark or Luke. These all picture the Palm Sunday spectacle.

But they do not tell us very much of the background of that spectacle. That is supplied by John. No one can adequately understand Palm Sunday unless he reads the 11th chapter of John and the first 19 verses of the 12th chapter.

"What is Palm Sunday?" It is a day which commemorates an important incident in the life of Jesus Christ.

Palm Sunday was a day of popular acclaim in his own small way. It was much like General Eisenhower's return to New York following the VE day. It was the same kind as General MacArthur's return to the United States following the VJ day. On these days there were shouting crowds and shouting and in the midst of each, the and commanded Lazarus to come out of the tomb. To the amazement of all, Lazarus came out and was restored to his family.

It is impossible to exaggerate the excitement which this event caused among both Jesus' friends and enemies. To escape it, Jesus and His disciples withdrew to the town of Ephraim some distance away. After staying there a number of days they returned and had dinner with Mary and Martha and Lazarus. Jesus returns revived the excitement of the raising of Lazarus. And as Jesus left Bethany, riding on a donkey, the townspeople of Bethany, who had witnessed what Jesus had done for Lazarus, lined the road and spread it with palm branches.

Shouting, "Hosanna, blessed is He who comes in the name of the Lord, even the King of Israel."

So, Palm Sunday was a public recognition of the greatness and uniqueness of Jesus Christ.

How could this apply to us? On Palm Sunday we could express our appreciation of the greatness and uniqueness of Jesus Christ.

So, Palm Sunday was a public recognition of the greatness and uniqueness of Jesus Christ. We can't live the road over which He rides. But we can gather in His churches and sing His praises.

Pruett Flays Skeptics for Their Doubt

By J. HUGH PRUETT
Astronomer, Extension Division
Oregon Higher Education System

One of the perplexing problems confronting the present writer is how to deal with the occasional correspondent who considers the astronomer as all wrong and that having very little study in science and mathematics has discovered the solution to the universal mysteries.

Dr. Pruett

The late Dr. E. B. Frost, of the Vortek Observatory, told him at the close of one of his public lectures a woman was heard to say, "I don't believe a word of it! They just don't know a thing about it!"

Few today take this extreme attitude. Multitudes with little opportunity to study the intricate methods used in determining the distances, motions and temperatures of the heavenly bodies believe the scientific discoveries are worthy of respect.

Novel Method

Sunburned T. F. Man Returns From Trek to Summer Resort

Lots of people enjoy the woods and mountains in the summer, but it's a mere handful who get back off the beaten path in winter. Those who do claim it's worth the effort.

Shirley Kirk, Twin Falls, is an example. He returned Wednesday from a trip to the real backwoods. Hardships, sunburn and all. He says he's "tough" to go again.

Kirk's trip was for business but he says it was a pleasure. He sold the Cape Horn lodge at Cape Horn about the time he was away but the sale of the lodge was only the cause that made the trip possible. He left Stanley on the 24th but didn't get back to Twin Falls until Wednesday night.

It was snowing in Stanley when Kirk and the two persons from Boise to whom he sold the lodge left the mountain in community Salco Tuesday morning. Kirk, former Twin Falls resident, piloted the snowplow used for the trip.

The quarter made 12 miles that day. Then they had to turn around and return to Stanley. The loose snow on top of the backpacked snow was too fluff for the snow-
