

FPC Rejects New Request for Delay In Power Hearing

WASHINGTON, July 8 (AP)—A second attempt to suspend the hearing on Idaho Potomac's application to build three dams in Snake river failed Wednesday.

C. Girard Davidson, representing intervenors who favor a government dam in Hells Canyon, moved to suspend the federal power commission's hearing on the company's application to build three dams on federal grounds. The application is deficient.

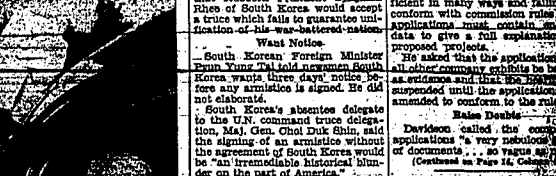

Examiner William J. Costello, presiding at the hearing which began Tuesday, rejected the motion.

He said intervenors troops march on the government and would materialize much in the manner of the June 17 uprising which shook the red world and brought Soviet armored legions pouring into East Berlin.

Try Peaceful Approach
This time, however, the East Germaners are trying a peaceful approach.

Three Chick children riding in the car escaped injury. They are Charles Robert, 6, Melvin Ray, 4, and Ruth Ann, 14.

Also investigating the collision were two men in uniform. One of the two said wheat and oats were 2 cents a bushel and potatoes 10 cents a bushel. Alfalfa and clover seeds and dry beans were considerably more.

Showing increases were 1 cent per bushel; alfalfa hay 10 cents per ton; hogs 10 cents per hundred.

Postmaster Inspects Mailbox Damage

Prosecution Looms for Vandalism of Rural Mailboxes in Twin Falls Area

Defacing of Twin Falls rural area mailboxes is reaching serious proportions and persons responsible for the vandalism face government prosecution, Postmaster W. W. Francis, declared Wednesday.

Mailbox vandalism was reported May 18 and complaints have continued to pour into the Twin Falls postoffice as an alarming rate.

Some 12 mailboxes within one mile on Osterloh street were damaged Saturday and Sunday evening. Additional boxes two miles south of the Rock creek bridge were damaged Tuesday evening. Damage has been confined to ripping name-plates off the top of the boxes. However, mailboxes have been uprooted and damaged in other sections.

Francis pointed out the wave of mailbox vandalism has been reported to the federal postoffice inspection department for investigation. He declared persons apprehended for defacing mailboxes will be prosecuted to the fullest extent of the law.

The U. S. civil code provides ample penalties for those convicted of defacing mailboxes or facilities. The code states, "Whoever, having charge or control of any conveyance, deposits any letter box or other receptacle intended or used for the receipt or delivery of mail on any main route or breaks open the same or willfully or maliciously injures, defaces or destroys any mail deposited therein shall be fined not more than $2,000 or imprisoned not more than five years, or both."

Francis asks the cooperation of rural mail-patrons in apprehending persons responsible for damaging mailboxes. Anyone with information regarding defacing of the boxes is urged to contact the Twin Falls postoffice.

Rupert Office of FIA Discussed

RUPERT, July 8.—The possibility of a FIA office for Rupert by Aug. 1 was discussed at the city council meeting Tuesday night. By Homer Allen, national field representative, Washington, D. C., and J. Magley, Idaho-Utah director, Salt Lake City, C. Bendixen, state field representative, Idaho Falls, and Bert Gardner, Cassia county FIA superintendent.

Allen said that it was estimated that new settlers on the north side project would require fifty loans this fiscal year.

A delegation from the Idaho Realty and Weight-addition-housing project asked for a new estimate on the proposed improvement district, stating that the first estimate of $61,250 with an alternative plan down to about $55,000 was too high.

A meeting has been called with the Chamber of Commerce for Tuesday to consider the request of the improvement district.

Changes Verdict BOISE, July 8 (AP)—The Idaho supreme court in a 3-2 decision, Tuesday reversed an industrial accident compensation decision awarding workmen's compensation benefits to the children of Selah E. Dunn, who died July 23, 1951, while working on Cabinet George dam.

Justice William D. Keeton, in the majority decision, held that "without something more" than death while on the job being shown, it is not compensable in an industrial accident proceeding.

Savant Blames "False Rumors" For Dormitory Policy Concern

MOSCOW, July 8 (AP)—The president of the University of Idaho blamed "false rumors" Tuesday for the concern expressed by Sen. Clark Hamilton, D. Washington, over cooperative dormitory policies at the university.

President J. E. Buchanan said the proposed changes are to assure adequate diet and sanitation standards. The university, he said, is continuing to promote cooperative living and to keep dormitory costs among the lowest.

A joint committee was set up to work out changes after some students objected to administration proposals, the report said.

Decker reported that the university owns the buildings and sponsors the share-the-work cooperatives. He noted the sororities and fraternities are independently owned with their own advisors.

Hamilton, who released his letter while Buchanan was away, also asked why the new Ethel Steel house coop for women was not opened last spring. Decker said it was completed April 11, but not furnished and that a move that late in the semester would have upset the schedule.

Decker said, "but students living in the coops on the campus—there is one for men and another for women—have been trying their own food and baring their own cook. Some objected strongly to any changes."

Society Places Grave Marker

An eight-foot concrete marker was placed on the grave of John Day, Revolutionary war veteran, at service held Saturday at the graves on highway 26 about 10 miles northwest of Idaho Falls. The grave of John Day has been identified by a small marker, but the permanent marker was erected by the DAR and SAR, according to Mrs. Grandville G. Allen, Twin Falls, state DAR regent. As part of the service, Mrs. Allen gave the story of John Day. Day was born in Virginia in 1741 and was given 200 acres of land in Kentucky for his services in the Revolutionary war in 1811. He joined the Wilson Price Hunt party and came to Idaho. He lost one of his men at Methuen when a boat capsized.

Service Held

CAREY, July 8.—Burial service for the late Mrs. Mary Ann Carey was held at the direction of Charles Haskell. Program for the evening consisted of talks by Claude Kirkland, Clyde McCham, Mrs. Harold Harris, Cecil Smith and Lyndon Adamson. Music was furnished by Mrs. Lynn Tyler, who played an organ solo. Arlen Dilworth, recently released from the northwestern states mission, will report the activities of his mission during the church services next Sunday.

Idaho Interscholastic Activities Group Believes Program Justified

BOISE, July 8 (P)—E. F. Grider, secretary of the Idaho High School Interscholastic Activities association, said Tuesday his group feels it can "justify our extra-curricular program."

Officials of the association have been asked to meet with the state board of education on Monday to discuss whether athletic and other extra-curricular activities are interfering with school work. "It's a fine opportunity for the state board of education members to get acquainted with our program," Grider said. "We think we have extra-curricular activities well in hand."

Grider and Don Merrill, Rigby, president of the association, will meet with the board.

Allan B. Jones, state superintendent of public instruction, said he would like to know full details of the extra-curricular program and the time it takes to complete.

gram," Grider said. "We think we have extra-curricular activities well in hand."

Grider and Don Merrill Rigby, president of the association, will meet with the board.

Alton B. Jones, state superintendent of public instruction, said the board wants to know full details of the extra-curricular program; "whether or not serious inroads are being made in the scholastic program."

—Jones said the state board is not being critical of operation of the extra-curricular activities but merely wanted to obtain a better understanding of their operation.

He said the state board wanted to know "what and who determine the program" as it affects regulation and control, tournaments and festivals, and distances to be traveled by participating schools.

In a letter to directors of the activities association, Jones said the wide board of directors that he wanted to have "must include representatives from all segments of the community, if any are to be received about basketball games Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday nights, and "the effort upon the total functions of the smaller schools."

Grider said he felt sure the board would get all the facts, the extra-curricular activities program would be justified.

The Interscholastic Activities association, Jones said, saves the taxpayers thousands of dollars a year by relieving the State Department of Education of the necessity of maintaining a state basketball

The boy fighter, as the little Italian became known in his unexpected sweep into the finals, couldn't control his tee shots through 35 mph gusts of wind in the morning and after lunch his putting went completely sour.

On the first 18 holes over the $465-yard, par 71 Birmingham Country club course, Birza sprayed his tee shots into the rough seven times. On the first nine holes of the final round, he missed four putts

Burkemo, four up with five to play and three up with three to go, let Torza stay alive with some crallo-play. Walter went over par on the 29th, which he three-putted: the 32nd and 34th, where he hit

The PGA is worth $5,000 in immediate cash for Burkemo. It also gives him an automatic spot on the U. S. Ryder cup team which meets Britain's best at Wentworth, England, in the fall.

As runnerup, Torza collects $3,000, the first big purse he ever won.

Narrow Gauge Railroads Which Helped To Conquer West Nearing Last Divide

Denver, July 9.—The narrow gauge railroads, which helped conquer the west, are nearing their last divide.

A few of the toylike trains still are taking little trips on three feet of the Denver and Rio Grande system in the canyon-cut mountains of southern Colorado and in New Mexico. One still runs in California. Elsewhere the west they already conquered has been abandoned.

A few, however, are still in operation. Some are still in the hands of the railroads which built them. Others are in the hands of the state or the federal government. Some are in the hands of the people.

Four lines and a few short branches, which deliver a specific product to a specific market are the survivors of more than 100 narrow gauge roads which once laced the west's high country. Other sections had narrow gauges too, some years ago. Records show them in the west as early as 1880. Some are still operating, but it was the remnants of the west that brought them to the end of the line.

Where the San Juan express, complete with club car, once slipped snowy crags between Alamosa and Durango, Colo., crossing the New Mexican border a half-dozen times in 200 miles—now only an occasional bottled freight puffing by. Its sister line, south from Durango 50 miles to Farmington, N. Mex., exists on crumbs of an old gas boom.

The long passenger train, left on narrow-gauge threads 45 miles from Durango to Silverton, historic gold and silver camp, runs a time a week for three months each summer. Its patrons are mostly tourists.

The surviving California narrow gauge is the Central Valley branch of the Southern Pacific, carrying 71 miles between Lave and Keller in Inyo county. It only runs a three-times-a-week freight, mostly carrying cattle. The route is a remnant of the old Carson and Colorado railroads which headed up into Nevada.

All have a bleak future. Officials hope they may hang on for another few years. Some railroad fan clubs talk of trying to get the Durango-Silverton line made a national monument.

The diminutive roads have been a long time dying. Some were built in the pioneering '70s and '80s and passed their prime by the end of the century.

Gen. William Jackson Palmer, Colorado Springs, was in effect their patron saint. When Colorado was still a territory in 1871 he began building the Denver and Rio Grande and decided on a 3-foot width between the rails instead of the 4-foot 8 1/2 inches which became standard gauge.

Palmer's decision could moot later narrow gauge routes in the Rockies, although varying widths were tried. One was only two feet.

There were many reasons for the narrow gauge in the early west. Construction was cheaper because ties and rails could be lighter. In fact, the old Walla Walla and Columbia river line in Washington and Oregon started using 2-by-6 timbers as rails, later capping them with iron.

Roadbeds could be laid along defiles too narrow to accommodate standard gauge. The lines could snake up mountainsides on steep grades, and could make dizzying halting turns—such as the Georgetown loop of the old Georgetown, Breckenridge and Leadville line in central Colorado, where the track would back above itself.

Rolling stock was smaller and lighter and consequently less expensive. The Rio Grande's first locomotive, the Montezuma, was only 33 feet long from cowcatcher to tender and the engine weighed only about 12 1/2 tons and the empty tender another 2 1/2.

The early narrow gauge passenger coach was only about 30 feet long, 7 feet wide and a little over 10 feet high. Passengers sat two on one side of the aisle and one on the other for half the car. Then the seating was reversed, to preserve balance. A typical boxcar was 24 feet long and narrower than the coach, but could carry twice its four-ton weight.

Creak passenger trains on main lines through the mountains today use four- to 50-foot steel units, for power and have passenger cars up to 90 feet long. The average box car is about 50 feet long.

Eventually, the most profitable narrow gauge lines emerged: the standard-gauge operations as terminal cities prospered. Notable is the present main line of the Denver and Rio Grande Western between Denver and Salt Lake City.

Woe piled up over the years for the roads which remained narrow gauge. Borens—played out—mining camps which some were built to tap. Dreams of new cities at timberline failed to materialize. Every product brought down on a narrow gauge had to be rehandeled when it reached the main lines. Gradually equipment wore out and there wasn't enough money to replace it. Taxes gnawed into receipts. But it was the paved highway, with its trucks and automobiles, which really sealed their doom. Motor travel became faster and easier and each advance killed another line.

Most of these death throes were played out before judges or commissioners who had to forget nostalgia and face hard reality.

The little trains always have been close to the hearts of the people. They meant a link between remote, star-jacked hamlets and the outside world. Many acquired pet names. Even the whistle of the little trains spelled romance for lonely ranchers. This Colorado public utilities commission actually received protests against abandonment from people who simply liked "to hear" the whistle.

Probably no other narrow gauge went through such agonies as the end as the Rio Grande-Southern, the last of whose tracks were being torn out this summer. The fight for life was symbolic of many roads. Before it vanished it won a place in American railroad lore as the "Challenger" line.

The road was built in 1881 and pierced 170 miles through the steep, forbidding San Juan mountains in extreme southwest Colorado. Steam drillings as metal mining declined. For more than two decades the road struggled in receivership.

One receiver evolved a rail coach powered by automobile motor to keep passenger traffic and mail shipment alive. This hybrid kinked was dubbed "The Challenger Goose" and the name stuck and spread—until the line's real name was all but forgotten.

Cancellation of the Goose's mail contract in 1900 proved the coup de grace. For years it hadn't even paid any taxes. Stock and bond certificates had sentimental value only.

A discontinuance order turned out by the Colorado public utilities commission on St. Valentine's day, 1931, became the Goose's obituary. Also in a sense, it was a requiem for all narrow gauges.

Commissioner John H. Barry, a native of the area, wrote the death sentence. Now he felt about it can be summed up from a closing passage, describing how the elements seemed to feel about man's intrusion into the mountains:

"In the winter they heaped snow to unimaginable depths. Then they sent avalanches crashing down their bare surfaces to cover up, bury and kill them—the trees, dismembering them. In the summertime they did the same with torrential downpours of rain. These were not the only weapons they used. Lightning, biting cold winds, hail, and even the sun's rays. It has been a long night, but we as well as the mountains admit that these mighty forces have conquered us."
