TUCKER'S NATIONAL WHIRLIGIG

WASHINGTON—Primary elections so far held in nine states suggest that the voters still are in a relatively conservative mood at this stage in President Eisenhower's middle-of-the-road administration. It is a strange contrast from the situation and sentiment in Great Britain, where the Labor party has won a majority of the national and municipal elections.

In primaries involving house members in nine states, only one has been defeated on the Democratic or Republican side. And, from its behavior so far on major legislative issues, this has been a cautious Congress. Save for the McCarthy hearing, it has been a model of restrained decorum.

DEFEATED IDOL—The identity and ideology of the single defeated candidate is significant. He was Rep. Robert Crosser, Cleveland, Ohio, who has been a Democratic labor activist for many years, or ever since the days of Tom Johnson and Newton D. Baker, Woodrow Wilson's secretary of war and general handymen. A house member for 38 years, Crosser was the idol of the liberal and labor groups.

In reporting his defeat, the astute and well edited weekly of the Railway Brotherhood, Labor, said: "Railroaders don't need to be reminded that Bob Crosser, in all of his 38 years in the house, has been their friend through thick and thin."

CONSERVATIVE TREND—There are other portents of a conservative trend twist. In the Ohio contest for the Republican senatorial nomination, Rep. George H. Bender won out. Bender was a leading and vocal Robert A. Taft scouter and cheer leader at the 1952 national convention. He now likes Eisenhower.

Across the line, in Illinois, Joseph Meek captured the Republican nomination for United States senator against stiff opposition. A retail store lobbyist at Springfield and elsewhere, a conservative and generally considered a Taft-McCarthy man, Meek had the secret backing of the state and national GOP organizations. He will oppose Sen. Paul H. Douglas, an ultra-liberal, next fall.

"LEN" HALL'S SENSE OF HUMOR—It is fortunate for Leonard W. Hall, Republican national chairman, that he can appreciate political jokes at his own expense. His opponent, Democratic National Chairman Stephen A. Mitchell, has no sense of humor. He is, perhaps, the most austere figure on the national political scene today.

"Len" has been the butt of Republican operators' criticism for his inability to "throw the rascals out" and hand federal jobs to their field workers. He has done his best on this ticklish assignment, but the "businessmen and administrators" in the cabinet, not being clubhouse Republicans, will not co-operate.

Recently, when Democratic politicians assembled for the Truman dinner, they noted that "Mike," the doorman at the capital's principal political hotel, was still on the job.

"Len Hall" one of them remarked, "hasn't been able to get a dog man's job for an Eisenhower Republican or Democrat!"

PRIVATE CLASH—Although Britain seems to be veering toward the American "get tough" policy in Indochina, London, Washington and Athens have a private and unpublicized quarrel over Cyprus, the strategic Mediterranean island which guards such important gateways as the Suez canal, the Dardanelles straits and the eastern end of the island.

The British took over Cyprus and made it a crown colony in 1914. It was once owned by Greece, and the population consists of Greeks and Turks. In a post World War II plebiscite, they voted for a return to Greek ownership.

But England refuses to recognize or honor that decision, although the United States assumed responsibility for the independence and rebuilding of the Athens government when London notified Truman that it could no longer carry the financial burden.

British abandonment of Cyprus, together with a French grant of full independence to Indochina, would help to refute Moscow's argument that we are fighting to preserve the colonial system.

TEACHERS OVERLOOKED

One aspect of the supreme court's unanimous decision outlawing school segregation which has not yet been given consideration is what happens to the teachers.

All the emotional utterances on this far-reaching reform have so far been in the nature of speculation on how the politicians, the parents and finally the pupils themselves—in about that order—will adapt themselves to the new situation.

Enough time has now elapsed for everyone concerned to get a few nights' sleep and view the problem with more calm than was at first manifest. One thing is clear. Nothing is going to happen precipitously.

The schools will reopen next fall pretty much as in the past. It will be October before the supreme court hears arguments on what kind of a decree it should hand down to put the new system into effect. It will be some months after that before the order is issued. There must be another full school year in which to make the transition.

In areas where there is a natural economic segregation of rich and poor, or a housing segregation that hangs over from old restrictive covenants, there may be no great problem. There will be predominantly white schools and predominantly colored schools pretty much as they are today.

This will apply to most of the 17 southern states where segregation has been legal, and to the big northern cities like New York, Chicago and Detroit with their black belts. The problem will be concentrated largely on the fringe areas.

POLITICS CRIPPLES PACT

Evidently President Eisenhower has reconciled himself to the fact that he cannot this year get more than the customary one-year extension of the reciprocal trade agreements act.

He had asked for a measure extending the reciprocal authority for three years, and granting him as well further discretionary powers in the adjustment of tariff rates. The bill set forth the major recommendation of the President's commission on foreign trade, which studied the problem for several months.

The principal reason the White House proposals have been set aside, at least until next session, is that they are regarded as sure to precipitate a bitter fight within the Republican party between high and low tariff factions. In this election year, party leaders on Capitol Hill and elsewhere believe they cannot afford to widen the schism that already is plaguing the party in other ways.

POT SHOTS

REAL EFFORT COMING UP

If it doesn't rain Tuesday, we might just as well resign ourselves to a long, hot, dry, windy summer.

If that Golden Jubilee parade isn't good for a rainstorm, then nothing will do it. Unless everyone decides to make an all-out effort for rain. This could be done by: 1. Everyone washing cars on Monday and Tuesday morning.

2. Everyone planning a picnic for immediately after the parade.

3. And if those measures aren't effective, we'd just as soon call it quits.

See you at the parade Tuesday and don't forget your umbrella! Mrs. Weatherman (Twin Falls)

SMALL MIRACLE

We were miles out in the desert and hadn't seen anything except sagebrush and rocks for a long time. Then a lone jackrabbit broke into a run along the road. I stopped and took a couple of quick shots at the bounding critter, missing, naturally. Said the wife: "Good! Anything that can live out here deserves to get away!" Cockeyed Marksman (Twin Falls)

SHE'S GOTTA NIBBLE!

Dear Fourth Row: All of a sudden, it has dawned on me with full force that "Spinster Yet" over Buhl way is fishin' in earnest and has a nibble, namely me! Dunno just how I got in this fix, but as of now I'm taking evasive steps to get off the hook before it's too late.

Boy, that was close! Just goes to show you how subtle these dames can be. There I was, just havin' a little harmless fun in Pot Shots letters and all of a sudden she's asking for identification and a fixin' to set the hook!

But before I check out, here's a word of advice to pass on to Spinster Yet: Keep the high heels on, gal. High heels topped by a shapely gam have caught more guys than truck shoes. And all those poor innocent little bachelors would do well to memorize that and remember it when their eyes stray.

Old Bachelor (Twin Falls)

P. S. I wear blinders.

THAT'S LOGICAL, ETC.

Dear Pot Shots: Seems "Modern Miss" and "Modern Missus" are at the extremes of this business of opening car doors, etc.

You might just as well look at the thing realistically, etc. Car doors, etc., are something that young fellows open for girls while the girls are still chasing them, etc. After the girls catch them, etc., car doors, etc., are something the girls have to open for themselves.

But after all, isn't opening car doors, etc., a small price to pay for someone who's going to spend the rest of his life bringing home the bacon, etc.?

HOW THINGS APPEAR FROM PEGLER'S ANGLE

NEW YORK—A man who used to run a battery of slot machines in a privately-owned, public-fee golf course has written me about this phase of his business. People, he says, love to play slot machines and I agree, and I insist that they should have access to slots to play as much as they like.

Congress did not have the courage to lay it down in a federal law that people should be forbidden to gamble on slot machines. Congress knew it would Westbrook Pegler look ridiculous if it said that anyone caught cranking a quarter or a nickel into a machine should get from one to 10 years or a $10,000 fine. So congress adopted a subterfuge, forbidding the interstate transportation of an extremely intricate and interesting mechanical device. That machine, of itself, is as innocent as a sewing machine, a typewriter or an automobile.

If congress has a duty to impose criminal penalties for the interstate transportation of such a machine just because it can be used for gambling, then congress is remiss in the same duty in failing to provide the same verboten as to playing cards and dice and the transmission of race results and odds. Nobody above the age of childhood plays cards or shoots craps for fun. Some people become obsessed with bridge, a most unsocial, angriying game.

I have known cultured individuals of considerable means who have played for blood and have made a steady profit at it. One I have in mind is the late Frank Crowninshield, of Vanity Fair. A more courteous, interesting man I never met, but at bridge he was a hateful little devil. However, bridge was his pleasure and I didn't have to play with him and didn't.

Only a down in congress would think of introducing a bill to outlaw bridge as a federal crime, but there is no essential difference between a bridge deck and the slots. This pestiferous law was slipped over on us in panic in consequence of the Kefauver burlesque as an easy means of smothering racketeering which had sprung up in localities where politicians and police officials were taking graft for permitting violations of local laws.

Of course, such local laws were being violated but that is no legitimate business of the U. S. congress. And, if it were, the honest way to intervene would be to pass a law to punish such grafters.

The informant who has been pouring his heart out to me reminds me that these things produced, in a painless way, the profit which enabled many legitimate clubs and veterans' outfits as well as social centers of the armed services to render pleasant and desirable accommodation to many individuals.

I don't know any reliable figures on the subject, but I have an impression that on the average the slots never took much money away from many individuals. They took a little from a lot of players and the loss was spread thin among many with the result that these centers could sell good cheap meals at little or no profit.

That law did not affect machines already in the possession of operators in the several states but the common law resulting from the national hearings in New York states that local officials in most of the states to fussy activity. Dead-letter laws were dusted off and the slots went into hiding in clubs where poker and bridge are still played openly for high stakes. They are still out of sight in most jurisdictions.

The remedy here should start in the city councils and state legislatures. Even now, federal law exacts a license fee for slots presumed to have been planted in the several states before the law was passed, so our Uncle Sam finds himself collecting a fee under one law for permitting criminals to operate a machine which is condemned as immoral in another law. It would be no more immoral to sell federal licenses to prostitutes.

In Chicago and outlying Cook county there has been from time to time a "syndicate" of gangsters which was believed to have paid $50 a month graft on each machine to local officials. But the money should have gone into the public treasury under proper license and, if the Kefauver testimony was true, it would have added a sizeable amount to the public revenues.

Perhaps it would not be as much as $50 a month under public license because the "syndicate" slots often are geared to yield no more than 60 per cent to the players. However, the higher the yield to the players, the more they play. When a machine is too "tight" the play falls off.

I have said that I like to play slots and roulette. I doubt however that I would make a career of it if both were legalized and I would not go running to the cops if I lost because I know what I am doing and I would play to win.

It would be much more reasonable to adopt a federal law against interstate commerce in pistols but we haven't. A few years ago I bought a 22 target pistol from Mr. and Mrs. Sandy Sturm, Westport, Conn., who were running a little factory and doing a mail-order business. Poor Sandy died and I am not sure whether his dear little widow carried on or gave up. Do you know who she is? She is the former Paulina Longworth, the daughter of the late Nick and Theodore Roosevelt's daughter, Alice.

Undisputed Champs of American Wilds

In my book, the undisputed fighting champs in their weight divisions among our new world land mammals are:

Flyweight: shrew; height at shoulder, 1 inch, weight 1/25 pound. Featherweight: weasel; height at shoulder, 3 inches, weight 3/4 pounds. Middleweight: wolverine; height at shoulder 15 inches, weight, 30 pounds. Heavyweight: grizzly bear; height at shoulder, 64 inches, weight, 1,200 pounds.

The grizzly, largest animal on earth, whose family includes the big brown and the giant Alaska bears, is without doubt the most powerful beast in America and the most dangerous. This king of bears, who can reach 12 feet standing on his hind legs, fears nothing that walks, unless it be man or another grizzly. When they meet, they growl.

Despite his enormous bulk, he is surprisingly agile. On a straightaway he can travel 30 miles an hour.

When angry, one swift blow with his front paw can crack the back of an elk or moose and, when called upon, he can carry the whole carcass in his powerful jaw.

In the gold rush days of California, grizzlies were often pitted against bulls and bison. Sometimes the bear was not interested and could not be goaded into fighting. An aroused grizzly, however, would break the bull's neck with one flick of its giant paw. (In one encounter, an enraged longhorn bull managed to gore the bear to death and then collapsed and died of his own wounds.)

A story is told how a grizzly in his natural habitat tackled and killed not one bison bull but four, one after the other. The first three were dispatched with a single stroke each but the fourth managed to wound the bear—nonetheless it was the bear that walked away from the battle.

As for the king of bears fighting the king of beasts (the lion) it is said that a fight between these two was staged in California and that the bear won, but the encounter was not a fair one. A more aggressive lion, a wolverine which stands taller—up to 6 feet—than a grizzly, he drives his own kill—not only one bear or three.

As a rapacious killer, the bloodthirsty lion, weighing only three inches at the shoulder and weighing only six to ten pounds, will not hesitate to attack neither man nor beast. When I once interrupted a stalk of a mouse, he growled and I must confess I may bleed.

This bloodthirsty animal, just for killing—killing a mouse—many animals as big as himself with hot blood. For his slon of murder, he has long equipment: Long sharp long supple—strong—muscles. His strength is enough to overcome animals times his own size. He is slender like a cat, he is a mouse into its burrow.

As for the fire-breathing lion, without a doubt, weighing less than a grizzly, this fellow is one of the fiercest fighters. This little assassin who kills his prey within eight hours, will kill a lion that is smaller than his size. And emerge victorious.

But in judging the fighting weights of two continents in the weight division, one must consider the time of the year—is it the season? Are they in the inclination to fight—are they raged? And are they in the condition? These conditions I feel that the grizzly, wolverine and shrew cannot be judged in their divisions.

Exhibit of 87 Paintings Set By Librarian

An exhibit of 87 paintings of sports and wildlife by contemporary American artists will be displayed at the Twin Falls municipal library Wednesday through June 15 by the Twin Falls branch of the American Association of University Women.

The exhibit consists of paintings from the Ford Publications collection of 2,000 American paintings. It includes two paintings, "Swimming in the Lochs, Idaho," and "Fishing in the Selway River" by Alfred Dunn, former Twin Falls resident.

Also on display will be a painting "Backyard Boat Dock" by Richard Bragg, born and raised at Salmon.

All of the paintings are concerned with sports, wildlife or the enjoyment of nature. Subjects are not spectator events like football, but participation sports such as fishing, skiing and boating.

The paintings are selected from a group assembled by the Ford Motor company over the past several years of reproduction in its publications.

Exhibits will be held from 9 a. m. until 5 p. m. Monday through Saturday during exhibition dates. The municipal library also will be open from 11 a. m. to 1:30 p. m. June 6 to accommodate church groups.

Dunn is an associate professor on the staff of the department of art and architecture at the University of Idaho. He was graduated from Twin Falls high school in 1928 and the University of Idaho in 1933.

He received his masters degree at the California College of Arts and Crafts and was a commercial artist in Seattle for five years. He is a member of the Puget Sound group of the Northwest Watercolor society and a regular contributor to the Ford Times.

A selected list of art books will be available at the library in conjunction with the exhibit, reports Ralph Secord, city librarian.

Books and their authors include "Voices of Silence" by Melroux; "Arts and Life in America," Larkin; "Artists and Illustrators of the Old West," Tait; "Paintings," Cernase; "Romance of Chinese Art," Hobson; "World Famous Paintings," Kent; "Paintings of Michelangelo," Buonarroti; "Paintings," Renoir; "Paintings," El Greco; "Enlightenment of Art in America," Shoolman; "History of Classic Painting," Basin; "History of Modern Painting," Basin; "Flowers in European Painting," Salinger; "Modern American Painting," Boswell; "Primer of Sculpture," Silvercray; and "World History of Art," Cheney.

Better Chance Of Senate OK On Issue Seen

WASHINGTON, May 31 (AP)—Senate Republican Leader William F. Knowland said today senate approval of President Eisenhower's public housing program is "more likely" as a result of fresh opposition to public housing from southern Democrats.

The senate is scheduled to start debate Thursday on its omnibus committee's version of an omnibus housing bill. The house already has passed its version.

U. S. Would Help

The senate bill would authorize federal help for construction of a maximum of 135,000 public housing units a year. Mr. Eisenhower requested authority for $5,000 a year. The more liberal provision was originally sponsored by Sen. Burnet R. Maybank, D. S. C., long a leading senate advocate of public housing programs.

Withdraws Support

Maybank withdrew his support from the whole principle of public housing last week, however, because of a supreme court decision which in effect upheld a policy of racial non-segregation in public housing projects. Other southern senators shared his viewpoint.

Knowland said, however, that he did not expect all Democrats to turn against public housing. He said he believed acceptance of Mr. Eisenhower's recommendation now was more likely than the more liberal program approved by the committee.

In 1970, the U. S. labor force was 14.9 per cent female and 75.1 per cent male compared to 27.51 per cent female and 72.5 per cent male in 1950.

Forthcoming Primary Elections Show Idaho Due for Many New Legislators

By The Associated Press

With the primary election more than two months off, one thing already is certain about Idaho's next legislature: there will be a lot of new legislators.

An Associated Press survey shows few formal announcements, but several key lawmakers either definitely are not running or are seeking other offices.

Lt. Gov. Edson Deal, once considered a likely gubernatorial candidate, says he will not enter the political race this year.

Speaker of the house T. H. Young is bidding for reelection as a Republican from Canyon county, and house minority leader Max Hanson, Camas county, is expected to run again. However, majority leader Arthur Wilson, Cambridge, is now state land commissioner.

Sen. William Moore, Latah county, president pro tem for part of the last session, will not seek reelection, but his successor, Clyde Starr, Lemhi county, is expected to run again as senate majority leader Earl Wright, Clark county.

Senate Democrats will be hardest hit. Minority leader O. J. Buxton, Teton county, has said he won't seek reelection, but some political circles say he will reconsider. Definitely out for the next session, however, are Sens. Glenn Bandelin, Bonner county, William Costley, Lewis, Ernest Gaffney, Benewah, and Clark Hamilton, Washington.

Bandelin, as assistant minority leader, was a key man in parliamentary maneuvers at the last session. He and Gaffney are seeking the Democratic nomination for lieutenant governor. A former senator, Earl Seelberg, Butte county, is the only announced Republican candidate for the post.

Hamilton is after the Democratic nomination for governor.

Still to be heard from on the Republican side are such veterans as William Detweiler, Jerome county, Carl Irwin, Twin Falls, Tom Heath, Presburg, and K. C. Barlow, Cassia.

A. W. Naegle, Bonnellville, will seek a second term, and Dr. Raymond White, Ada, is expected to seek reelection. Most of eastern Idaho's Republican senators—Les Murdock, Bligham, Harvey Schwendiman, Fremont, Seth Burstedt, Custer, Kenneth Thatchler, Madison, and Hyrum Moss, Jefferson—are expected to run again. Ray Lukenaga will not run again from Canyon county.

Democrat John Raser has filed for another term from Kootenai county, and Andreas Aikele, who unseated Seelberg in Butte in 1952, is expected to run again.

Don Joseph is after the Democratic nomination to replace Hamilton in Washington county, and Mark Richardson, Priest River restaurant operator, is out for the nomination to succeed Bandelin in Bonner. W. H. Drevlow is out to move up from the house to the senate in Lewis county. George Brooks, Kendrick grain dealer who was in the senate six years ago, is seeking the Democratic nomination in Latah county.

In the house, Paul Vernon is the only one of Ada county's four representatives expected to seek reelection. David Deane, chairman of the state affairs committee, says he won't run again. Merlin Young is running for district judge, and Jack Hawley is an assistant U.S. district attorney.

Rep. Claude Burtenshaw, Rexburg, is giving up his Madison county seat to run for the Democratic nomination for U.S. senate. Except for him, most of eastern Idaho's representatives are expected to run again.

Elton Hampton and Harold Snow, Latah county Republicans, have announced as have Republican Ray Robbins, Mindoka, and Democrat Dan Emery, Nez Perce.

There's been no announcement yet from Kootenai county's Republican incumbents—Grant Potter and Mrs. Sadie Johnson—but two Democrats have announced: Thomas Wood, who ran for congress on the Progressive party ticket in 1948, and Mrs. Leona Frandsen, wife of County Chairman M. E. Frandsen.

Paul A. Eke, unsuccessful candidate for the Democratic nomination for first district congressman in 1948, is seeking the Democratic nomination in Latah.

Church Chiefs Move to Mend Split in Ranks

MONTREAL, N. C., May 31 (AP)—The south's Presbyterian leaders today followed up their adoption of a desegregation policy with a move to mend a denominational split which that issue caused after the Civil war.

The question before the general assembly of the Presbyterian Church of the U. S. (southern) was whether to adopt a plan of unification with two other branches of the denomination.

Plan Approved

The plan, under study since 1938, recently was approved by the governing bodies of the Presbyterian Church in the U. S. (northern) and the United Presbyterian Church of the United States.

The plan must be approved by the third general assembly and submitted to the Presbyteries throughout the nation before a merger of the three groups totaling nearly 3,500,000 members can be completed.

The general assembly of the southern group, now holding its 94th annual session, voted 286 to 180 Saturday in favor of ending segregation throughout its jurisdiction over 18 states and the district of Columbia.

Decision Looms

Another policy decision facing the assembly here was a proposed change in the church's stand on remarriage of divorced persons.

Present policy in the southern branch prohibits a minister to marry a couple if either is divorced unless shown blameless in the divorce action.

The nuptial vows were read in the Relief society room of the LDS church as the couple stood before the fireplace. The mantle was decorated with peonies, iris and roses.

The bride wore a gown of white nylon lace and net fashioned with a full skirt. The lace bolero jacket was designed with a Peter Pan collar. The long-sleeves were pointed at the wrists. Her fingertip veil of nylon net was held by a halo band of seed pearls. She carried a white orchid surrounded by red rosebuds with a white Bible. The bride carried a 1935 birthdate penny in her shoe.

Mary Lou Shupe, sister of the bride, was maid of honor, and Ian Reid, Salt Lake City, served as best man.

Background music was played by Sharon Warner. Laura Harding was soloist, accompanied by Gloria Moss.

For her daughter's wedding, Mrs. Shupe chose a white and blue nylon afternoon dress and wore a corsage of gardenias and red roses.

Following the wedding ceremony a reception was held in the recreation hall, Mrs. Don Childers, Mrs. Delbert Olson, Bette Weatherston, Marsha Washburn and Alice Terry were in charge of the serving table and gifts. Donna Jones took care of the guest book.

Mrs. Lewis, a 1935 graduate of Jerome high school, is an accountant at the LDS hospital in Salt Lake City. Lewis is a student at the University of Utah where he is majoring in education. He also served in the army air force.

Program selections during the reception included vocal solos by Keith Johanson, and Mrs. Cecil Durrant and vocal duets by Mrs. Ruth Burnham and Mrs. Evan Glines, accompanied by Gloria Moss. Mrs. Fred Webster gave a reading and Mrs. John Hodam played accordion selections.

Out-of-town guests included Mr. and Mrs. P. G. Standbys Made In Modern Style

By DOROTHY ROE Associated Press Fashion Editor

In all the fanfare surrounding the new miracle fibers, some of the old standbys are managing to create considerable excitement of their own.

A case in point is fiber C—that's for cotton. One of the oldest fabrics known to man, it is holding its own this year against the new and flashy competition of the man-made fibers, and even is winning increased acclaim.

Some of the most spectacular uses of cotton this season are in the handsome cotton tweeds widely used in coats and suits designed for year-round wear.

Perfect for town or travel, summer or winter, spring or fall, are well-bred and beautifully detailed suits in cottons that look like wool and have many of its talents for resisting wrinkling and tailoring well.

Bold plaid cotton tweed is being used also in some of the most distinguished coats of the year, which look equally at home in town or country.

New weaves and finishes have made cotton one of our most popular and versatile fabrics, used by top designers for everything from formal evening gowns to tailored coats and suits.

Care of Your Children

By ANGELO PATRI

A 15-year-old girl, only child of a widow, has written a letter to me asking for guidance in relation to her mother. What she wanted and needed was someone to whom she could confide her hopes, fears and girlish troubles. She wanted a friend in her mother. Her mother, busy earning a living for both, had no time and I fear, little sympathy with her child's longing for motherly affection, longing for sympathetic understanding, for interest in problems of a young girl's life, offered nothing of this.

"I do my best to help. I know mother has little money, so I do not ask for anything. I saved my lunch money and bought a few articles I needed. I like to keep fresh, and neat and clean, like other girls I meet, so I bought a deodorant, a cake of soap, a nail board. When my mother saw them she said, 'You're silly. You don't need beauty aids. All anybody needs is soap and water. Don't worry about being beautiful.'"

Now girls of any sense and understanding know they must keep "fresh," neat, clean and as "attractive" as possible. By "attractive" they mean that they shall look well enough to have people smile when they see them, even take a second look. Girls long to be markedly lovely and that is as it should be. I am all for the deodorant, the shining hair, the bright skin and the flashing smile. They spell health of body and mind, a state of well-being that indicates fitness, ability to live with other people in a wholesome fashion.

Then, too, girls need the sympathetic understanding of their mothers who are their closest friends. They want their mothers' approval. They want their words of understanding, appreciation, their "wonderful," "too bad," "you did well," "you should not have said that." Mothers are anchors for their teenage daughters.

A girl having her first love affair wants to talk about it to someone whom she can trust with the biggest secret she has ever felt. Who but mother? If she fails the child, she hurts her, and she hurts herself far more by cutting off her daughter's life from her own. The time has come when the roles are reversed and mother turns toward the daughter. If, through the years there has been no sympathetic communion between them, there can be none in old age, and a lonely old age is the price of the lonely teenage child endured.

All mothers are busy. Many are burdened. Even so, time and energy must be spared for the young daughter who has reached the place where she needs the spiritual support of her mother.

Have your children reached the "dilemma"? How to meet this problem and help your children in the right direction is discussed by Dr. Patri in his booklet No. 304, "Your Children and Other People." To obtain a copy, send 25 cents in coin to him, c/o Times-News, P. O. Box 99, Station G, New York 19, N. Y.

U. S.-Russian Atomic Snarls Discouraging

WASHINGTON, May 31 (AP)—The deadlock between Russia and the United States over President Eisenhower's proposed atomic-for-peace plan became publicly complete today as the discouragement of U. S. officials who had hoped for some progress.

Publication in the Moscow newspaper Pravda of the Soviet government's position of the atomic talks upset these talks, not so much because of the familiar arguments used as because the Russians are now treating the atomic negotiations as simply another aspect of the wide-open conflict between the Soviet union and the west on many issues.

State Secretary Dulles is known to have been favorably impressed by the fact that the Soviets had refrained from propaganda discussions of the atomic negotiations. These talks resulted from Eisenhower's proposal to the United Nations last December for American-Russian cooperation in setting up an atomic pool for peaceful purposes.

Russia countered by expressing willingness to exchange views on the President's pool plan provided the United States would in the meantime discuss an agreement banning the use of atomic weapons.

U. S. officials indicated they were not averse to talking with the Russians about this in order to get discussions going in detail on the Eisenhower plan. It was obvious that they hoped to persuade the Soviets to join in the peace pool without insisting on the weapons agreement as a pre-condition.

Take Your Time

As a grim warning to take it easy on the way home from your holiday, this broken utility pole resembles a cross over the twisted wreckage of this car which hurled a man to his death on state route 125 near Amelia, O. The car hurtled into the pole at high speed. (NEA telephoto)

No Objection Heard Upon Buhl Budget

BUHL, May 31—The city council heard no protests on the 1954-1955 city budget at a public hearing Friday night in the council chambers of the city hall. This completes action toward making the $154,632.50 budget law.

The council passed an appropriation ordinance providing $68,220 for the general fund, $41,185 for the water works, $8,560 for street lighting, $2,920 for the library, $4,000 for the cemetery, $18,000 for the special street fund, $500 for the municipal band, $1,000 for the airport, $465 for the bond interest fund, $3,000 for the bond sinking fund, $2,392.50 for the municipal sewer interest fund, $4,000 for the sewer interest fund and $1,760 for the LID guarantee.

The present budget is $4,000 less than that for fiscal 1953-1954 but the 49-mill levy is the same.

Motorist Reports Dropping Meteor

IDAHO FALLS, May 31 (AP)—A motorist says he saw what seemed to be a meteor dropping a few miles east of Idaho Falls.

Malcolm Davis, employe of a radio station, said he was driving in Idaho Falls when he saw what "looked like a streak of mercury" sailing across the sky from east to west.

He said the object broke in two while he watched, and the two silver streaks dropped suddenly to the west, possibly in the New Sweden area.
