

County Tax Cut Set by Board in Figure for 1954

County citizens will be favored with an 11 cent county property tax cut, the Twin Falls county board decided Monday, in setting the county's 1954 assessed property tax levies. The 1954 county tax levies will be $1.06 against $1.17 for each $100 worth of assessed property. Throughout the county the reduction would be 10.9 percent. The county's taxpayers, the board said, Twin Falls County Clerk Thomas Stivers, said the first half of the county's tax levies would be due by October 15.

Bid for Ballot in Junior College Okayed by State

The state board of education approved Tuesday petitions for an election in Twin Falls county for the creation of a junior college district in the county. Under the law, the county commissioners now must set a date for the election.

Frank I. Palmer, the only member of the county commission who could be located immediately said, "We probably need a junior college but I feel the public should be properly informed as to the issue at hand and should know first of all how much this thing is going to cost before they decide one way or another."

Palmer said the date for the election probably will be discussed at a meeting of the commissioners' board. He said he thought it would be fine if the college could be located at the site of the old Junior High School.

When Lyle Lowder, Murliugh teacher and chief proponent for junior college in Twin Falls, said he would like to see a junior college in Twin Falls, he said "I feel the public should be properly informed as to the issue at hand and should know first of all how much this thing is going to cost before they decide one way or another."

Paper Claims Navy to Help Defend Post

NEW YORK, Sept. 14 (AP)—The New York Herald Tribune said today in a Washington dispatch the Eisenhower administration has ordered the U. S. seventh fleet to give "full logistic support" to Chinese Nationalist forces defending the island of Quemoy.

"These instructions," the newspaper said, "which were issued a short time ago through the joint chiefs of staff and the office of naval operations, do not rule out a more active role for American forces as the later date."

"However, they are considered to be a strong statement of the administration's position, given the degree of Chinese Nationalist strength on the island. Bond and another support."

Prober Looks Tired as Long Hearings End

WASHINGTON, Sept. 14 (AP)—Sen. Joseph R. McCarthy looked somewhat tired but relieved when the Senate hearings finally ended. "We tired statements into television cameras and delivered communiques to reporters. But some of the usual squawking seemed to be missing, and this is understandable."

Year Is Bugging
This has been a bugging year for the 46-year-old congressman. He has been the object of two major Senate investigations. He has run several turbulent inquiries of his own. He has been the target of attacks in the Senate, the center of a dozen controversies and the subject of a national debate. All this could induce thoughts of just rest. But McCarthy says he expects his immediate future to be just about as busy—if not quite as hectic—as the last few days.

Plenty of Work
He said he has a "tremendous backlog of work" on his investigating subcommittee which had to drop its regular pursuits last September to look into the Army-McCarthy dispute. He also said he has a "vast number of requests to speak in congressional and senatorial campaigns" and "would like nothing better than to accommodate them."

"It's a question," he said, "whether it's more important to bring the story of communist infiltration to the American people or to expose communists. I haven't had a chance to look into the Army-McCarthy dispute."

Limited Help Seen Enough To Hold Isle

WASHINGTON, Sept. 14 (AP)—President Eisenhower presumably has been advised by the military that they are confident Quoy Island could be defended from any red invasion attempt with U. S. sea and air power alone—if there is a political decision for such intervention.

Military officials attending the unusual Sunday session of the national security council in Denver reportedly reported that the move by the Chinese forces to land on Quoy, here by the Asiatic mainland, could be repelled with out help from American ground forces.

Related to Formosa Secretary of State Dulles, just back from the far east, told newsmen there that the defense of Quoy is related to the defense of Formosa and is being studied in that light.

Dulles said it is primarily up to the nation's military chiefs to decide and recommend whether effective protection of Formosa requires U. S. defense of Quoy. If a decision should be made to defend Quoy, Pentagon strategists would rely on the gunfire and planes of the big seventh fleet and the fighters and fighter-bombers of the air force.

Crash Transport
The objective would be to crush the transport and air and ground support of a red invasion fleet before it could reach the shores of the nationalist-held island, not to attempt to match the communist troop manpower in invasion beach battle. The United States learned in Korea of the vast and costly commitment of ground forces needed to fight red China's hordes of infantry.

However, some of the other disadvantages of the Korean campaign might attend any action for the defense of Quoy if the decision were made to confine it solely to defensive fighting.

AEC Apparently Ends Secret Sessions Excluding Newsmen

WASHINGTON, Sept. 14 (Special)—The U. S. atomic energy commission apparently has abandoned its two-year-old "secret" strategy with the press corps here.

This largely has been done by the instant, and often solo, efforts of Pat Munroe, Washington correspondent of the Twin Falls Times-News.

AEC Chairman Lewis L. Strauss called the first press conference Thursday, since he assumed office last July. A record crowd of some 75 reporters showed up and at the end of an hour's sitting, Strauss said simply, "Let's have another soon."

Munroe started his protests to AEC when former Chairman Gordon Dean abandoned regular press sessions. Dean's reasoning then was that "the more progress we make in the H-bomb program and others, the less we'll say about it."

Dean did hold a final conference when he was succeeded by Strauss but not much was said.

Munroe asked President Eisenhower repeatedly at White House press conferences when regular sessions by the commission with the press would be resumed.

Hope of such resumption came with the statement by the President last December to the United Nations that "the atomic facts of life" must be made available to the freed peoples of the world to help them retain their freedom.

But nothing happened. Strauss and other officials of the commission were increasingly unavailable to the press.

Munroe quoted the President's statement to the U. N. at White House press conference last March. The results were equivocal. With in a couple of weeks the President

Segregation Issue Makes Ohio River Look 100 Years Wide to Some Folks

By BEN PRICE
LOUISVILLE, Ky., Sept. 14 (AP)—The Ohio river flows past here and some say it is 100 years wide.

On this, the southern side, is a tradition of white supremacy and racial segregation.

On the northern side, the tradition essentially is one of equality and freedom, though discrimination still exists, stemming from community pressures rather than the law.

The farther south you go from the Ohio, the wider the river appears to some people who believe that it would take 100 years more to bridge the gap.

There are people here, however, who do not hold with the 100-year theory.

Mrs. Robert B. Hinklebein is one. Mrs. William E. Yeager is another.

Each has seven children, six of whom are school age. Mrs. Hinklebein is white, Mrs. Yeager is Negro.

They believe that, given time and patience, any problems arising from the ending of segregation, especially in the public schools, can be worked out with a minimum of trouble.

Last May the U. S. supreme court ruled unanimously that legal segregation in the public schools was discriminatory and hence unconstitutional.

Since then the question for the south has been how and when to end segregation.

There is a widely shared theory among race relations authorities in the region that, generally speaking, segregation will be ended in various localities at a rate in direct proportion to the number of Negroes compared to the number of whites.

The theory also holds that desegregation will spread like rock ripples in a pond from the border states southward—again generally speaking.

ing—and will come first in communities with a long history of cordial race relations.

On the basis of this theory Louisville should be among the first cities to solve the problem.

Everyone to whom I talked believed that the most orderly way to solve the problem is to desegregate the schools first.

Louisville has an estimated population of 401,280 and roughly 16 per cent of the total is Negro.

Louisville has a record of interracial largely economic heart-of-the-city.
