WASHINGTON, May 17 (AP) - The public health service said today it will take until mid-July or August to finish the free polio inoculation program for the nation's nine million first and second graders. Only then will the government's new voluntary distribution plan go into effect. And only then will more than seven million other children from 5 through 9 begin getting their Salk shots. This represents a sharp and discouraging setback in the vaccination timetable. But health service officials still expressed confidence that most 4-through-9 youngsters will receive their two shots before the polio season hits its peak in August and September.

Dr. Leonard Schele, U.S. surgeon general, said today this estimate could be thrown out of either side. He said that the decision to halt shots briefly during the season peak because of the possibility of triggering the onset of polio where it already is incubating. But he said there is no present recommendation to do that. He said the problem would be considered in the vaccination timetable. WASHINGTON, May 17 (AP) - The Idaho health department has listed a ninth case of polio following association with an individual who received Salk vaccine. Department officials said 7-year-old Terry Turner, American Falls, was hospitalized in Pocatello with paralysis of the legs. He had been in close contact with a 7-year-old brother who received a shot of the anti-polio vaccine. The Turner boy was one of four so-called secondary cases reported yesterday. Others included: Mrs. Ina Beard, 32, Mountain Home, whose 6-year-old daughter was vaccinated. Larry Kendall, 13, Oxford, who became ill after a 7-year-old member of his family was inoculated. Allen Anderson, 8, Caldwell, whose sister had received vaccine. Another child, Gayle Roger Eaton, 6, Nampa, was reported as the 17th case among Idaho youngsters who were vaccinated, and still another case was reported from Lewiston, but the latter was believed to be a "true polio."

The health department has postponed indefinitely its mass inoculation program for about 22,000 children until it has completed an investigation of the vaccine-connected cases—all of which have been reported since April 26. WASHINGTON, May 17 (AP) - The Senate today passed a bill to repeal the 1934 act which eliminated a provision of the 1934 act under which a farmer is denied soil conservation payments unless he complies with acreage allotments on basic crops—corn, wheat, cotton, tobacco and peanuts. TUCKER'S NATIONAL WHIRLIGIG POT SHOTS

WASHINGTON—America's vast foreign aid program, which has been expanded in the last two years so as to commit us to defend and rehabilitate 30 million people in 49 countries of three widely separated continents, today faces the most serious opposition since its inauguration in 1947 by Gen. George C. Marshall, Dean Acheson and Harry S. Truman.

Even erstwhile supporters of the plan to rebuild our allies in the cold war, the United States, are questioning President Eisenhower's new demand for $3 billion dollars for fiscal 1950. The critics are not alone in their protesting. National arguments leveled against another huge donation by American taxpayers are these:

WHAT WAS FIRST PROPOSED—(1) When the program was proposed in Marshall's Harvard address in 1947, it was promised that for every dollar of aid, the recipient would pay for one cent of a total cost of about 17 billion dollars. Now, Eisenhower and Harold E. Stassen, say that it must be spent and administered by the recipient.

(2) The vast expenditure of money, according to foreign observers, has not succeeded in winning friends for the United States. Many of the major beneficiaries are our enemies, and oppose our policies overseas.

(3) Permanent outpouring of American funds, in view of our financial straits, is unbalanced budget, will fall into the hands of the Russians, and bear out the forecast of George Eastman that the United States to spend itself into "destruction."

TWO CRITICS OF OUR FOREIGN AID—The foreign aid program was recently criticized by two spokesmen so well qualified that their comment has made a profound impression on congress. The two were Hugh C. Downs, former director of the National Bureau of Economic Research, and Indro Montanelli, editor of a leading Italian newspaper.

Grant characterizations continued and a "nationalist" venture.

DUBIOUS FRIENDSHIPS—Some of this friend-ship aid has been liberally distributed, as indicated during the Truman police action in Korea, where American battle casualties totaled about 140,000 men, while streams of strategic war materials flowed to the "Red" forces.

"And, despite the enormous expenditure of American lives and wealth in Korea, our military commanders were prevented by the United States and the United Nations from winning the war, the first example of its kind in American history."

In effect, former Minister Grant fears that the United States may "broke" in an unsuccessful effort to "buy" friends and allies.

ITALIAN OPINION—Editor Montanelli explains why he has not been able to make friends with dollars.

"Why," he asks, "is America so unpopular even in the neutral zone of liberated Europe? It is not because they have taken from us neither ships nor cannon nor food; they treated our prisoners well and they have given us millions of dollars."

"Unfortunately, all these claims on our gratitude are obscured by one defect of which there isn't the slightest hope: they have given us no aid, because it's in their blood. It's constitutional."

AMERICANS "BETTER INTENTIONED"—Then there is the case of the United States. It may not feel pleasantly on American ears—or congress:

"It is the craze for improving us, for making us try every way to get a better job, a better life, a better country. The great inescapable crime of the Americans is that they are really better than we Europeans."

"We should have more intelligent, more cultured, capable, refined or courageous. I only say that they are better intentioned, ready to sacrifice the individual for the common good, more candid, more self-critical, more open to see the good rather than the bad side of things."

In other words, our foreign friends do not want to be recognized as our equals, they like and admire it. It is a lesson which Stassen's bureaucracy of overseas do-gooders and uplifters need to learn; although it may be too late.

VIEWPOINTS OF OTHERS

RESIDENTS OF CALVESTON, WHICH WILL HOLD A MUNICIPAL ELECTION next month—or of any other city—might pause to ponder the civic situation at Calveston, Tex., as it develops.

Mayor-elect George Roy Clough of Galveston apparently was in a frank mood as he chatted with reporters about his plans for city government after he takes office.

Clough and prostitution in Galveston, he said, were "here to stay," and "the boys will be reasonable."

"I believe it's possible to put these fellows on their honor," Clough said. "I've found most of them trustworthy—and they pay their bills a hell of a lot better than some of our critics."

The city's activities, Clough added, will be encouraged to move "out of the downtown hotels and back in the district" (Galveston Post Office street).

There has been a protest in Galveston, where a man named Christ, said the mayor-elect, Christ tried to stop prostitution and failed, he added, "so why should I try?"

But, announcements of municipal government plans are likely to shock many residents of Galveston as well as residents of other cities. The mayor-elect's policy is to reduce the city's expenses by a slightly different than his campaign promises during his heated nine-month campaign against his opponent over a radio station which he owns. Doubtless, a good many Galveston residents are beginning to worry now about just what kind of mayor they elected on Tuesday.

One far removed from the scene can only speculate of course, about the causes and effects. But the Calveston situation seems in some ways to fit into a woe-filled familiar pattern.

Clough was elected Thursday by a margin of 8,400 to 10,000 over his opponent, the late Y. G. Wright, Jr., who had served for four two-year terms.

That means that 12,000 Galveston voters went in this Tuesday to choose between one kind of mayor and another.

In the 1930 election, Galveston was credited with a population of 60,000. Galveston county had a population of 100,000.

In the 1932 presidential election, Galveston county cast 17,715 votes for President Eisenhower and 19,068 votes for Roosevelt. The laws require a total of 20,000.

Assuming that at least half those votes came from the city of Galveston, it would appear that this Galveston city could send 10,000 voters to the polls to vote the next time. But only 12,000 votes from the city were cast. Thus, at least 8,000 voters failed to vote in all in Galveston Tuesday as voted in the 1932 election.

It is difficult to escape the conclusion that the residents of Galveston now have almost precisely the kind of city government which they deserve. —Lewis D. Young

CRITICAL POINT

The Oregon liquor control commission will pick up a few persuasive permits in the current session as a result of its prior efforts to comply with the legal, in effect, liquor laws. The report reveals that the liquor permit business is not the unbridled market place that it is so commonly considered. However, those who would have been the beneficiaries of the liquor permit to attack their critics at the old prices resulting in a loss of the liquor market and a substantial loss in revenue.

Future legislators cannot easily, however, look on the state's liquor monopoly as an inexhaustible source of revenue. There is a point of diminishing returns. There are those who are in all states enterprises.—Portland Oregonian.

"WASHINGTON CALLING" BY MARQUIS CHILDS

VIENNA—As so often in the remote past this city is once again the focus of the world's attention. By negotiating a peace treaty after years of stubborn refusal. Soviet Russia has accepted the Austrian's feel at last momentary relief. It is gratifying to Moscow for their freedom from the yoke of the East.

More than two years ago, in his speech before the National Assembly of the Republic of Austria, the late Austrian Chancellor Schuschnigg, predicted an Austrian peace treaty as one way in which Russia might demonstrate the sincerity of the communists' continued interest in Europe for peace. Repeatedly, Secretary of State Dulles and other policy-makers have put the same stress on many occasions. It is gratifying to see the treaty the Soviets have made various moves that add up to a definite peace offensive.

The situation in Europe has vastly improved, in the far east the danger of the colored past has left the west with some very serious hazards for the future. With great difficulty during the NATO meeting in Paris Dulles and Premier Faure and their assistants finally worked out an agreed program about the danger of South Viet Nam and the anarchy and civil war threatening the precarious government of Premier Diem.

But the changes actually taking place in the world cannot be denied. The danger of the colored past has left the west with some very serious hazards for the future. With great difficulty during the NATO meeting in Paris Dulles and Premier Faure and their assistants finally worked out an agreed program about the danger of South Viet Nam and the anarchy and civil war threatening the precarious government of Premier Diem.

Prudden said one-half ton of feed per acre is available from this type of grass while on some Idaho ranges, not more than 50 pounds of grain is produced. He said Shoshone Idaho gives one of the greatest opportunities in the west for improving rangeland.

A large part of the range area will produce more than five pounds of grain per acre in range feed lands. Defense Seen For Criticism In Power Bid WASHINGTON, May 17 (AP)—Interior department officials this week will defend the administration's power policies against criticism that they are nullify laws enacted to benefit electric cooperatives and public bodies.

Undersecretary Clarence D. Davis and Regional Solicitor James D. Ciesinger, Denver, are slated to testify at a hearing resuming tomorrow before a house subcommittee on government operations.

Testimony Heard
Last week the subcommittee, investigating the administration's power policies, heard critical testimony from witnesses who administered the department's policies under the preceding Democratic administration.

Davis and Ciesinger will be questioned about the repeal last year of a transmission arrangement regulation—target of testimony last week by former Assistant Secretary C. G. Davidson, former Solicitor Martin G. White and former power division chief Walton Seymour.

The interior regulation required that surplus capacity of private transmission lines crossing public lands be made available to carry power from federal plants to rural cooperatives, municipalities and other preferred customers.

In questioning the former officials, subcommittee lawyers and Democrats on the subcommittee sought to show that the preferred customers will suffer because the government asserts plans to turn the power from its dams over to private utilities.

They tried to bring out that the utilities will be in position to take over power from federal plants because no new federal transmission lines are planned and the companies cannot be forced to carry the power without the regulation.

The questioners also attempted to show that laws are violated, or at least nullified, by present officials of the department.
