Bill Hops Barrier On Congressional District Changes

BOISE, Feb. 5 (AP)—A Republican sponsored bill to redraw the boundary between Idaho's congressional districts to place the first hurdle in the way of the Idaho House of Representatives. The house in a preliminary mood, overrode the recommendation of the committee that the bill not be printed. Chairman of the printing committee, Rep. R. L. Clark, said the vote was unanimous. He said the committee felt the proposal was "not justified."

After the committee's recommendation was ready, Rep. Percy Swisher, R., Bannock, asked unanimous consent of the house that the bill be printed. Rep. Allen Govey, R., Oneida, objected.

Democrats called a caucus. After the caucus there was a brief debate in which Rep. Govey, R., Oneida, termed the bill "a piece of legislation" and "a piece of legislation."

The bill, proposed by Swisher and five other Republicans, would transfer the heavily Republican Ada county to the first district, which Democrats control. The bill would shift the first to the second.

The senate, meanwhile, after debate which occupied practically all of its morning session, voted 31-1 to virtually abolish commercial fishing in Idaho.

Specifically the measure proposed by the senate bans commercial fishing on Lake Pend Oreille and Clark Fork rivers in north Idaho. It would become effective June 1, 1968.

The house passed by a 21-10 vote without dissent, a memorial to Congress requesting the use of power revenues to pay for reclamation.

Rep. George Crookham, R., Canyon, chairman of the reclamation and irrigation committee, said the memorial "opens the way for a study on basin-ecological financing, which exists in every basin except the Snake."

Although he voted for the memorial and was one of its sponsors, Rep. H. Grant Gardner, R., Payette, told the house "We are doing something here in essence that we as a legislature are very loath to do as a legislature."

The chairman of Idaho's internal tax structure committee urged the legislature last night to enact a 2 percent sales tax in the first session instead of "postponing the day of reckoning. We know it is an important subject and it is politically most desirable to do it at a wide berth," Ralph H. Wickberg told a joint meeting of the senate and house chambers.

Wickberg said the committee would "create a revenue system that would hold up under the years with major changes."

Officials Fail To Agree for Cut on Taxes

WASHINGTON, Feb. 5 (AP)—There is disagreement among officials who should know best as to where, if ever, the American taxpayer will get a break.

Moreover, the officials who believe a tax cut may come relatively soon are outnumbered and outranked by officials who cannot see a tax cut coming for a long time.

President Eisenhower is among those who believe the government's spending may continue to climb, and if it is correct in that, tax cuts are a long way off. Mr. Eisenhower is supported by Budget Director Paul F. Brundage.

Treasury Secretary George M. Humphrey is fearful that the President's Budget may prove to be a disaster for the United States unless tax and spending are reduced. He does not forecast disaster tomorrow or next day.

Humphrey's argument is that the long haul United States trend of high taxes and big spending will get the country into serious trouble in time. Brundage estimates that tax reduction is three to five years away. That is a long time, perhaps time enough to put Humphrey's theory to a test.

Rep. Joseph W. Martin, Jr., R-Mass., is one of those who expects substantial tax reduction soon. "It will come," he said recently, "because we will carefully screen our spending and eliminate waste and extravagance."

PERILOUS NAVIGATION

The conflict within the Eisenhower administration over the size of the new federal budget dramatizes the deep difficulties which beset government in this age of great domestic growth and continuing foreign peril.

In the long run, the efforts of high officials to rationalize the conflict will hardly be remembered. The differences themselves seem likely to continue and perhaps be accentuated.

Probably they exist—and will exist—not only between man and man but within individual minds. For they reflect a genuinely powerful dilemma.

A good many respected public men urge with force that there is danger in excessive bigness, whether it be in government or industry. They would limit government growth to tight check, fearing the control over human life that goes with enlarging government.

They believe, too, that if government can't trim its sails and cut its debt in times of booming prosperity, then it never can. They think federal savings should reach the level where debt and tax reductions are possible.

They see a serious inflationary menace in any other path.

No one interested in sound government, in a solvent nation free of major inflation, can doubt the need of good federal financial management.

But, side by side with these necessities are the pressures upon government to do more, to spend more.

We already have a vast new highway program voted. Defense expenditures remain high. The demand for foreign aid likewise. And new obligations for schools, more hospitals, and other national needs are in the offing.

The predicament is plain. Government cannot retrench and add programs at the same time.

If it is going to go forward into new areas of operation, it is going to build cost. As it does, tax cuts become less and less likely. Indeed, the more evident prospect is for higher taxes and even more borrowing.

That is the puzzle facing the Eisenhower administration today. It will confront any administration of whatever political party.

Some believe we should just acknowledge that in a huge and growing land a whopping government is inescapable and there's nothing we can do about it.

Others feel we must yield ground with glacial slowness as the pressures upon government mount.

On balance, the Eisenhower administration seems to fall somewhere in between. But in landing on this middle ground it perhaps inevitably reflects strongly the arguments on both sides.

NEVER-ENDING SPY HUNT

No realist imagines that spying by a potential enemy ceases simply because a few of his agents have been caught—even though they be key ones.

Soviet spying in the United States did not end with the capture, conviction and execution of Julius and Ethel Rosenberg. It merely proceeded along other avenues, with different people performing Moscow's chores.

The ever-alert FBI now has seized three more Red agents, Jack and Myra Sobie and Jacob Albam. They are charged with conspiring to steal documents "connected with the national defense of the United States."

There were indications the trio had links with a spy apparatus which had operated in Washington during World War II under one V. M. Zudilin, then a Soviet embassy secretary. The latter is no longer in this country.

According to the FBI, Sobie is his replacement and a "dominant figure in the ring" presumed to be functioning currently within our borders.

Again, no matter how these people make out in court, this is not the end of Russian spying on our soil. There will be others.

Nevertheless, it can be gratifying that the FBI maintaining ceaseless vigilance and succeeds so frequently and effectively in disrupting Soviet espionage activities. It cannot be much comfort to Moscow that an American agency exists which has often wrecked its delicately contrived spy network.

HELEN NO HANDICAP

When Gov. Robert B. Meyner of New Jersey married the attractive Helen Stevenson, no professional politician was blind to the fact that he thereby added a few cubits to his long-range political prospects.

Meyner comes up for reelection this year. He may or may not face stiff Republican competition. If he wins again in the fall, he is bound to get some consideration for the presidential spot in 1960. And all agree that it helps mightily to be a "family man."

Some people object to this, saying that we elect a president to run the country, and a family. That's true enough. But it can't be overlooked that the president is more than chief executive.

He is the nation's ceremonial head and as such a symbol of stability. In the manner of the British royal family, since the office is so constituted, it is inevitable that millions will look to the president for demonstration of the soundness and continuing vigor of our major social institutions.

TUCKER'S NATIONAL WHIRLIGIG POT SHOTS

WASHINGTON—The most striking phenomenon at Washington within the last few years has been the sharp shift of the pendulum of power from the conservative to the liberal faction in the Eisenhower administration. Bizarrely, the liberal faction has been the Republican party to slightly left of center, as FDR did with the Democrats during the 1933-35 recovery.

Eisenhower has appointed conservatives with men of his own persuasion. From the policy-making departments to the chairman of the Republican National Committee, the liberal faction has been the conservative advisers within the cabinet and on Capitol Hill to men more favorable to his ideas for "modernizing" the GOP.

The transformation has affected major policies in the domestic and foreign fields. It has affected the budget, the foreign aid bill, the defense bill, the economic bill, the education bill, the labor bill, the housing bill, the health bill, the social security bill, the tax bill, the foreign aid bill, the defense bill, the economic bill, the education bill, the labor bill, the housing bill, the health bill, the social security bill, the tax bill.

LIBERALISM REJECTED IN FOREIGN AID DEMANDS

It shows up in the 5 billion dollars he has asked for foreign economic aid. This is a far larger sum than such influential officials as Treasury Secretary Humphrey and Herbert Hoover, Jr., former undersecretary of state, thought necessary or advisable.

It breaks out again in the 5 billion dollars which the White House asks for subsidies, partly payments and soil bank advances to the farmers. Here again, the President is far more generous than Secretary Humphrey and Herbert Hoover, Jr., former undersecretary of state, thought necessary or advisable.

EISENHOWER'S CHANGED ATTITUDE—Most significantly, the changeover appears in Ike's attitude toward financial and economic questions. Despite his efforts to limit government growth, the President has broken with Secretary Humphrey's philosophy and with that of Arthur Burns, former Secretary of the Federal Reserve, by favoring more expansive economic policy.

When a slight recession developed in 1954, there were demands within the administration and in Congress for a pump-priming operation. But Humphrey and Burns, then in the White House, would resist without emergency action. They maintained that the principal danger was inflation, and they supported the state's tight money program. Humphrey even opposed deficit spending to ward off a depression.

But Ike and Burns' successor, Raymond Saulnier, now question the Humphrey-Burns caution. The President says he will do anything the Constitution permits to prevent an economic crisis. In his 1957 report, Saulnier said that continued tight money might jeopardize Ike's plans for school construction, home building and highway expansion. His ideas are reminiscent of Jackson-Hopkins days.

MITCHELL'S SYMPATHY FOR UNIONS—In every other field, Ike has moved leftward. At Interior, Fred A. Seaton has a broader outlook on natural resources than his predecessor, Douglas McKay. He would restrict costly federal lands, Commerce Secy. Clegg would attempt to run the labor department, James P. Mitchell shows unusual sympathy for unions for a Republican cabinet member. So has the reorganized supreme court, which now has three Eisenhower appointees.

Other liberals mobilized by Ike are Christian A. Huter as undersecretary of state, Prof. Arthur Larson as head of the United States Information Service, and Gen. Alfred M. Gruenther. Gruenther now heads the State Dept. but he has even more sympathy for the military in place of Defense Secy. Charles E. Wilson, another ultraconservative.

NEW GROUP OF CONGRESSIONAL ADVISERS—Finally, Ike has a new circle of congressional advisers. He no longer relies on such leaders as the senate majority leader, William F. Knowland, Sen. Styles Bridges, president pro tem of the senate, or Rep. Charles A. Halleck of Indiana. He listens to men more sympathetic to his second-term effort to make the GOP more responsive to national needs and to international changes.

PRIVATE COLLEGE AT RISK

Idaho's senate took the initial step toward disposition of the idle state property at SICC this week by approving after heated debate a bill which would authorize the state land board to lease well the property to a non-profit organization for a private institution.

The bill still has the house to hurdle before it goes to the governor. The measure doesn't specify what type of institution it is to be used for, but debate until now has been on the use of the property for a private college, a corporation formed by the Church of Christ, for use as a college.

Opponents charged that the bill was a "great giveaway" of state property. We can't see the logic of that argument. A few more years of idleness and there will be nothing left at SICC to "give away." Already, it is going to be costly to put the facilities back in shape for use. In fact, the church proposing to use the facilities has made tentative plans to invest more than one million dollars in the plant. Thus far, the state has made no reasonable proposal for use of the buildings and certainly, with present financial conditions faced by the legislature, it would be virtually impossible to get anything more than token appropriation for any type of state institution.

Thus, a costly, the buildings at SICC should be put to beneficial use, and so far no better idea has been submitted than that offered by the Church of Christ—Millsdale County News.

TEN MILLION MORE JOBS

If competition for labor develops as intensively as the department of labor forecast in the coming eight years, little fourfold increase must be expected. Ten million more workers than at present, the department estimates, will be needed to fill the jobs necessary to sustain the expansion of our population and economy. More than half the new workers will be women, who will fill a greater variety of jobs than ever before, and many of the rest will be persons over 45, an age group rapidly increasing in size as life expectancy lengthens.

A complex of factors now stands in the way of full utilization of women and over-45 workers in the labor force. Humanitarian motives have always dictated a wise offering of opportunities to these groups. Butly pragmatic motives will be expected to prevail. If the labor department's forecast is correct.

The organization which most sensibly prepares to make use of all productive labor regardless of sex, age or race must be the organization most likely to be left in the lurch for labor force between now and 1965. R. Louis Ford-Danbach.

CATTLEMAN PLAY IT SMART

The nation's cattlemen, meeting in Phoenix, Ariz., this week, have been considering each other on their good sense, as good fortune, or both, in keeping government out of their business. Don C. Collins, president of the American National Cattlemen's Association, said:

"Their production must remain free if we are to avoid more trouble than what we have now. With drought and the cattle population.

The cattlemen recognize that widespread drought and unusually large supplies of cattle to be disposed of now create problems. But there are difficulties which cattlemen are hopeful of whipping out.

Some one has a gate down and prevents a political action, and in some instances, a gate is closed, that should be open, more of them realize. There's no more in that mind.

To keep up their courage, if that ever becomes necessary, they need only look across the fence at the other side of agriculture where the bureaucrats have taken over. Omaha World-Herald.

HOW THINGS APPEAR FROM PEGLER'S ANGLE

CHICAGO—A long time ago, over in the west side region now called Midway, Peg Pegler, Toledo, started an ad-less paper called the Pegler. With a half dozen young rag-lab reporters who were always writing up characters from the streets and bolting of the flophouses.

One night Pegler, a skinny red-head, named Don McLeod, who had been a "beatnik" and always carried a slab of pie, came in with a ragged name called Andy Purness.

Andy Purness, the first labor leader I ever met and the only one that I recall who actually was concerned to the cause of the poor, ignorant stuff.

When the weather closed down and the lake boats were boarded up for the winter, the sailors, who were mostly Scandinavians, all called Pegler, headed for West Madison and South Clark and South State, to hold up until the next gale. Pegler and Purness, from the west country and the railroad gangs, boomed in and they all drank punch and got reaching drunk.

McGregor disappeared in Mexico and we heard that Pancho Villa had shot him.

Andy Purness died suddenly in the street. Pegler and Purness, who died of a heart attack a few days ago, was, in his way, a monument to Andy. In the hearings under old Bob La Follette, who put through the seamen's act, Andy said sailors were the rakish and scrappiest of hell. They were and he fought for them so well that nowadays they feed like passengers on the liners and spend so much time toiling up their overtime and windmilling over laws and regulations that a great deal of the work which used to be done at sea by sailors now comes into the dock and is parcelled out to guys in the hall as chores. Still, there were more sailors than jobs so Pegler and Purness, the sailors of the Seafarers' International union developed a side-

THEY'RE GIVEN UP

Dear Shooter:—Some of your readers can remember the days when it was illegal to have any fish under six inches in length in your possession. Then the rule was relaxed to the point where you couldn't have more than a certain number of the minnows. And now I hear you can have a legal limit of minnows.

What happened to all the fishing? And is the new rule just another way of saying no one's going to catch anything larger except on rare occasion?

Already I can see the next development. Landing boats soon will be made from mosquito netting so that "big one" won't slip through.

GENTLEMEN IN THE FOURTH ROW

NEVER-ENDING SPY HUNT

No realist imagines that spying by a potential enemy ceases simply because a few of his agents have been caught—even though they be key ones.

Soviet spying in the United States did not end with the capture, conviction and execution of Julius and Ethel Rosenberg. It merely proceeded along other avenues, with different people performing Moscow's chores.

The ever-alert FBI now has seized three more Red agents, Jack and Myra Sobie and Jacob Albam. They are charged with conspiring to steal documents "connected with the national defense of the United States."

There were indications the trio had links with a spy apparatus which had operated in Washington during World War II under one V. M. Zudilin, then a Soviet embassy secretary. The latter is no longer in this country.

According to the FBI, Sobie is his replacement and a "dominant figure in the ring" presumed to be functioning currently within our borders.

Again, no matter how these people make out in court, this is not the end of Russian spying on our soil. There will be others.

Nevertheless, it can be gratifying that the FBI maintaining ceaseless vigilance and succeeds so frequently and effectively in disrupting Soviet espionage activities. It cannot be much comfort to Moscow that an American agency exists which has often wrecked its delicately contrived spy network.

HELEN NO HANDICAP

When Gov. Robert B. Meyner of New Jersey married the attractive Helen Stevenson, no professional politician was blind to the fact that he thereby added a few cubits to his long-range political prospects.

Meyner comes up for reelection this year. He may or may not face stiff Republican competition. If he wins again in the fall, he is bound to get some consideration for the presidential spot in 1960. And all agree that it helps mightily to be a "family man."

Some people object to this, saying that we elect a president to run the country, and a family. That's true enough. But it can't be overlooked that the president is more than chief executive.

He is the nation's ceremonial head and as such a symbol of stability. In the manner of the British royal family, since the office is so constituted, it is inevitable that millions will look to the president for demonstration of the soundness and continuing vigor of our major social institutions.

His Golden Anniversary at the Wheel!

In Texas, there is a gentleman who is currently driving out his fiftieth year at the wheel of a Cadillac car.

In New Jersey, there is another gentleman who has purchased every year model that Cadillac has produced over the past fifty-three years.

These are simply dramatic examples of one of the most remarkable triumphs in all motordom: that once a man takes the wheel of a Cadillac, he usually remains at the wheel of a Cadillac.

To be sure, a motor car would have to offer many unique virtues in order to win so generous a place for itself in the affections of so many.

And, in the case of Cadillac, we think these virtues are self-evident.

There is, first of all, quality. No effort of design or craftsmanship is ever spared to make Cadillac the finest possible motor car.

There is beauty and luxury. The car's magnificent styling and interior coachwork have, over the years, brought Cadillac an undiminished majesty and elegance that are entirely its own.

Then there is performance. In fact, Cadillac engineering has served the industry's constant inspiration and taskmaster.

Finally, there is reputation. Never in automotive history has another motor car sustained such an abiding public conviction in its own goodness.

Amly without question, all of these basic Cadillac ingredients have this year reached their richest harvest.

So whether you've been at the wheel of a Cadillac for half a century . . . or have yet to spend your first hour in the "car in new" . . . you should see and drive this newest of Cadillacs.

Need we say more?

South's Flood Region Swept In More Rain

By United Press
A persistent band of showers continued to bludge the flood-damaged Southeast today, and colder weather spread from the Ohio valley into the Northeast.
Rain and drizzle pelted much of the area south of a line from Kansas and Oklahoma eastward into the Carolinas. One of the worst storms dumped more than an inch of rain at Memphis, Ark., in less than an hour last night.
The continuing showers brought new flood dangers to northeastern Mississippi, northern Georgia and Alabama.
Warmer weather from the north-central section of the nation pushed into the Midwest, although Grand Rapids in upper Michigan reported a low of 13 below zero overnight in advance of the milder air.
Mostly fair weather prevailed over the Southwest; but rain soaked the Oregon and Washington coast and spread into northern California. The rain turned to snow flurries inland, dumping relatively light amounts in Idaho and Montana and into the northern plains.

Border Block Moves Taken For Hungary

VIENNA, Feb. 5.—Communist Hungary sealed its border with Marshal Tito's Yugoslavia today and ordered mixed patrols of Hungarian and Russian soldiers to shoot anyone trying to escape.
Budget Radio announced that five countries along the border had been declared a prohibited area and could be entered only with special documents.
The radio broadcast an interior ministry announcement which said "thousands of persons" have appeared in the border zone recently with the obvious intention of crossing illegally into Yugoslavia.
"This has endangered the security of the country, and the security forces therefore have received orders to close traffic in the Yugoslav border zone," the announcement said.
More than 15,000 Hungarians have fled to Yugoslavia since the start of the revolution in October. More than 100,000 others have crossed into Austria.

Burley-Minico Game Is Highlight Of Cage Schedule

The red hot race for the Big Seven conference basketball championship has drawn the attention of Magic Valley fans this week and mid-week games promise to keep the race at its current sizzling pace. With every team in the loop having won at least two games and all of them beaten at least twice, it's an "anything can happen" situation, which is perfectly normal in the Big Seven.

Cage Schedule Is Revised

A schedule change in the city basketball league was announced Monday. The game between Community Builders and Cain's, originally slated for Wednesday, was moved to Thursday. The revised schedule has Moose lodge No. 308 playing Fair Clear store at 9 p. m. Wednesday and National Guard playing Moose lodge No. 612 at 10 p. m. Community Builders and Cain's square off at 8 p. m. Thursday and Walters play Moose lodge No. 612 at 10 p. m.

North Carolina Still Rated as Top Quintet

By The Associated Press
It's North Carolina all the way again in the weekly college basketball ratings, but Kansas refuses to wilt. With the Still, that is. Due largely to Wilt Chamberlain's invaluable contributions, Kansas' victory over Iowa State last week made a stronger impression on the voters than North Carolina's easy decision over little Western Carolina. It wasn't enough to shake Carolina's hold on first place in the Associated Press poll of sports writers and broadcasters, but the Jayhawks picked up enough points to make the race closer.

Oldtime "Gun Slinger" Dies At Age of 96

PORT WORTH, Tex., Feb. 5 (U.P.)—Harry H. Haisell, 96, trail driver, Indian fighter and author who credited his long life to numerous guns and the ability to use them, died at his home here Sunday.

Haisell, who said he got his first six-shooter when he was only 7, was born in Clarksville, Tex., and resided in Texas and New Mexico many years.

Later he wrote nine books, including an autobiography, about life in the cattle trails in the 19th century.

"I recall now," he wrote in 1941, "that from 1870 to 1900, the habit of being well armed saved my life on several occasions."

By the age of 11, Haisell was a regular trail driver from Texas.

On several occasions, he used his six-guns and rifle to fight off Indians.

Haisell said one of his closest scrapes came on Christmas eve, 1880, in south-western New Mexico.

He had driven his stock into a small valley with only one entrance and bedded them down near midnight. He spotted a group of Apache riding toward him in the moonlight.

Haisell said he mounted his horse, held the reins in both hands and fired a six-gun in each hand as he charged the group. The Indians, believing a large band was attacking them, fled.

Haisell said he later learned the famous Geronimo had been in the lead and the band had just ambushed a stage coach.

Haisell was a member of the Founders club of Southern Methodist university.

Speaker Reviews History for Church Through Its Leaders

CAREY, Feb. 5.—Data concerning the former presidents of the LDS church were reviewed by Elder Preston L. Nibley during the general conference sessions of the Boise stake Sunday.

All conference sessions, both Saturday and Sunday, were conducted by Stake President Valdo D. Benson. Congregational singing was led by Kenneth Cook and accompanied by Margaret Pyrah.

During the morning session Elder Nibley told the LDS church historians office came to possess only 125 pages of the manuscript named by Oliver Cowdery when he translated the Book of Mormon.

"These of Elder Nibley's afternoon talk was about the lives of the nine men who have served since 1830 as presidents of the church."

Joseph Smith, the first president of the church, also was its youngest. Under him the church was organized and a missionary system started.

After his death the church was led by Brigham Young, who brought 154,000 persons across the plains to Utah. He served as president for 33 years, the longest term of any church leader.

Under the next church president, John Taylor, the practice of holding quarterly conferences in each stake was started. The next church leader, Wilford Woodruff, communicated with the church.

Lorenzo Snow, one of the apostles of the church, was the next president. He began his ministry when he was 54 years old. The next church leader served as its head for 18 years. Joseph P. Smith was the son of Hyrum Smith, brother of the founder of the growing church. The next president was Heber J. Grant who began his career as a boy by selling newspapers. By the time he was 21 he had made a name for himself in the insurance field. He acted as church president for 26 years.

George A. Smith, the next president, began his term when he was 75 years old.

Elder Nibley said the present leader, David O. McKay, "is something special. If a president was made to order, he is it. He is educated to be a teacher, refined and wise."

Elder Nibley is an authority on the lives of outstanding men in church history. He is the author of many biographies and works in the office of historical records of the church.

Accompanying him from Salt Lake City was a member of the church.

Studebaker-Packard matches the superior performance of its built-in Supercharger with the most effective brakes on the road.

Today's higher horsepower, greater weight, higher speeds demand brakes with extra margins of safety. Here are four important ways that Studebaker-Packard gives you this additional safety:

1. Largest brake linings. 105.3 square inches of brake lining are carried by the Studebaker Golden Hawk - largest, safest brake lining area per pound of car of any automobile made today!
2. Air-cooled drums. Heat robs brakes of their effectiveness. Studebaker-Packard was first with specially "finned" air-cooled brake drums that actually double the effective cooling surface.
3. Self-Centering. The entire, oversized brake lining area is automatically brought into uniform contact with the drums. Reduces wear and assures unswerving, straight line stops.
4. Self-Emerging. The forward motion of the car itself helps apply the brakes. You get greater safety, easier pedal action.

Better brakes, superior acceleration, surer handling add up to Command Performance. Drive the '57 Studebakers and Packards at your dealer's, today.
