Chamber's Chief Urges Continued Activity for T.F.

Although the Twin Falls Chamber of Commerce has a long record of accomplishments in the past, it can't stand still, it must prepare to keep pace with the times, says President A. F. Nelson. That is the chamber story which has been told to some 250 leading Twin Falls citizens in group meetings held in preparation for the chamber's program to "Keep Pace With Tomorrow."

"Close analysis says Twin Falls has tremendous potential and future is opportunities are grasped and used now," Nelson declares. "We need new foreign and domestic markets to secure more jobs and stabilize our economy. We must move ahead on the foundation set up by the Chamber of Commerce in recent years," he adds.

Nelson points out that the day-to-day activities of the chamber, while often unglamorous, still add up to a tremendous volume of work during the course of a year. He notes that the chamber office serves as an information bureau, gives statistical information, handles news and publicity matters more than 28,000 mailings annually, handles 12,000 phone calls.

Other notable activities include committee meetings, housing studies and investigations of varied nature. In addition, the chamber maintains a library of Public relations and publications from the U. S. department of commerce.

"These are functions we are inclined to take for granted," Nelson says, "but they are important and add up to a tremendous volume every year."

"Our Chamber of Commerce cannot point to its past record with a good deal of pride," Nelson continues. "We are a viable record."

As part of the record, Nelson lists the chamber's program, daily events, the office staff and a program. In the line of legislation, he points out the chamber has been responsible for the responsible for state and national legislation, forestry and taxation.

41 Formosans Charged With Staging Riots

TAIPEI, June 14 (AP)—Nationalist China has indicted 41 persons, including five former communists, for instigating the anti-American riots that wrecked the U. S. embassy here May 24. Premier O. K. Yu announced today.

Yu told parliament to other suspects have been released.

Yu presented his government's first report on the trial of U. S. M. Sgt. Robert O. Reynolds and the riot which followed his release.

The premier said U. S. military authorities in Formosa were reluctant to press a court-martial case against the 42-year-old Colonel. He said it was only after pressure from the nationalist government that Reynolds was tried.

The U. S. embassy refused to comment on Yu's statement.

The premier said in his 20,000 word report to the legislature that the riots were "entirely unorganized and unplanned mob action and no other complicating factors were involved."

The 41 indicted persons will be court-martialed under the martial law declared in ending the riots, Yu said.

A U. S. military court tried Reynolds for voluntary manslaughter last month, two months after he shot and killed Liu Chi-Jan outside his home in the suburbs of Taipei on March 20.

Cost Survey Planned for Cassia Areas

BURLEY, June 14—Cost estimates to install water conservation measures in east Cassia county will be prepared by soil conservation officials as a result of three days of surveys and meetings this week in the Almo, Elba and Albion areas.

SOCS, bureau of land management and forest service officials conducted the meetings and went over the land with ranchers, locating possible reservoir sites and studying means to conserve water through various types of vegetation.

Officials at the meetings were J. Thumason and A. P. Dyer, Boise, and Luther Jones, Twin Falls. SOCS, Bureau of Land Management, Lewis Clark, Oden, Edward Caster, Burley, and Robert Hanson, Boise, forest service, and Cassia County Agent Glenn Boddy.

Manly creek was surveyed after the Almo meeting on Monday but no suitable site for reservoirs was found. Watershed damage was noted.

Thursday, too, was spent surveying the Almo watershed and Thursday night the officials met at Almo. On Wednesday Grape creek was surveyed but no suitable sites for open reservoirs were located. On the Almo watershed a reservoir site was located on Leo Durfee's farm. Officials decided the vegetation could be improved so the soil would hold more moisture. Supplemental water rights were located in the city of Rocks.

On Wednesday evening a third survey was held at Elba with farmers from Elba and Elba in attendance and on Thursday a third survey was held at Albion. The cost of the survey was covered by the federal government.

But he undoubtedly remains a rising point for the masses of Arab nationalists—even here in Western-landed Lebanon.

Over King Saud of Arabia and Hussein of Jordan—who have grown to fear Nasser's pretensions to leadership of the Arab world and his playing of the Soviet game against the West—his doctrine of "positive neutrality," hostility to "foreign peace," and Arab unity against Israel in a joint community, who aimed last night in Amman, where Said is nearing the end of an official visit, they do so as yet, due to attack him directly.

Though Nasser's hold on the masses remains strong, his practice with other Arab governments is slipping.

One of his friends or nervous allies has slipped away or turned sharply against him. Now only Syria remains an important partner in this world middle ground where East and West vie for influence.

Newsmen Win In Brief Battle Over Freedom

JACKSON, Miss., June 14 (AP)—The Jackson Daily News won hands down in a brief freedom of the press clash with federal authorities yesterday over a confiscated photograph.

"It was an outrageous act, and frankly, I'm outraged," Editor Fred Sullivan said on learning a U. S. marshal had grabbed the camera and a picture which News photographer W. C. Shoemaker snapped in the federal building corridor yesterday.

U. S. Attorney Robert Haubert promptly returned the camera with film intact when News executives rushed to his office to protest. Haubert said that under federal law Shoemaker should have first gotten permission to take the picture, but he did not resist the News demands.

"The man who took the camera transgressed his authority and flagrantly violated the freedom of the press," Sullivan told Haubert. "Things have come to a head in a case in the country where a hell of a lot of people are in a public corridor and take a picture."

The episode was touched off when Shoemaker snapped a picture of Hudding Carter, Pulitzer-prize winning editor of the Greenville, Miss. Daily Democrat-Times, as Carter emerged from a grand jury hearing.

Carter's newspaper had been first to report claims of two Negroes that they were beaten in the hind country jail here and had testified before a grand jury investigation of the incident.

Although the restrictions against taking pictures in federal buildings is designed in part to protect the subjects, Carter joined the News in expressing a protest.

'Giant' Discovery Labeled Absurd

MANILA, June 14 (AP)—A Filipino anthropologist today labeled as "absurd" reports that skeletal remains of a 17½-foot tall giant have been discovered in Cagayan province.

"It's absurd," Dr. Innocencio B. Macabala of the Philippine Anthropological society told United Press. "I cannot swallow the story."

Macabala said he and other scientists here believe the bones found by a group of game hunters belonged to a dwarf species of elephant.

"That would amount to an important discovery at any time," Macabala said. "It would tend to prove the theory that the Philippines once were part of the Asian mainland."

United States Keeps Lead in Race for Shipping Supremacy

LONDON, June 14 (AP)—The United States led the world in total gross tonnage of shipping under its flag last year, Lloyd's register of shipping reported today.

In its annual report covering the year 1945, Lloyd's said the United States had 22.47 per cent of world flag distribution of shipping—excluding Great Lakes shipping—in that period.

Britain followed with 18.58 per cent, Norway with 7.64 per cent, Liberia 5.31, Italy 3.29, Japan 3.07, the Netherlands 3.01, France 3.75, Panama 3.73, and West Germany 2.65.

World gross shipping tonnage was listed as 105,200,351 gross tons. The U. S. led with 23,645,602 tons. Britain was second with 19,455,879 tons, and Norway third with 8,035,340 tons.

Russia was credited with 2.61 per cent for 1955, a steadily increasing figure compared with its 2.49 per cent in 1953, 2.83 per cent in 1954 and 1.81 per cent in 1955.

However, Japan led the world last year in ship launching and export shipping tonnage. Japan also ranked equally with West Germany and Sweden in offering minimum average ship construction times of nine months.

"In the years that have elapsed since the end of World War II," the report said, "the pattern of world shipbuilding has slowly changed. Japan and Germany have emerged as serious challengers to the supremacy of the United Kingdom, whose output has previously been surpassed only by the United States of America, and then only under wartime conditions."

Lloyd's said the world total of launches in 1955 exceeded that for 1954.

For something else she had her shoes, something new, something borrowed, something blue, and something white. The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a light blue ballroom-length gown with a lace and tulle over tulle. A light blue lace cap held the finger ring of nylon tulle. The bodice was adorned by a lace jacket with a tiny collar and short sleeves. She carried red roses and a small bouquet of pink and white anemones.

At the reception in the parish hall the four-tiered cake was topped with wedding bells and pink roses. It centered the refreshment table with pink lilies in crystal candelabra and small bouquets of pink and white anemones on either side. The cake was served by Mrs. L. V. Groves, aunt of the bride. Coffee and punch were served by Mrs. H. H. Humphrey and Mrs. Lowell Dick, both aunts of the bride.

Gifts were arranged by Mrs. Boyd Spackman, Pocatello. Mrs. Dean Spackman, Sacramento, was in charge of the guest book.

For her traveling ensemble the bride wore a lime green dress of broadened tulle with a matching crystalline duster and white accent sashes.

The couple left for a two-week trip to Utah and California following the reception.

Out-of-town guests were Mr. and Mrs. Dean Spackman and family, Sacramento; Mrs. Ida Schubert and family, Boise; Mrs. Joseph Berntsen and family, Boise; Mrs. C. Fred Buhl, Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Peterson, Murtaugh; Mr. and Mrs. H. Peterson, Murtaugh; Mr. and Mrs. Boyd Spackman and family, Pocatello; and Miss Winchell, Meridian.

The bride was honored at a wonderful miscellaneous shower given by Janet Haslam with Mrs. Gene Schulte as co-hostess. The bride's parents entertained the wedding party at their home with a buffet supper following the rehearsal day night.

Care of Your Children

By ANGELO PATRI

They are children's tools, with which they build their road to knowledge about things and their meaning for the future. They are people, and what they hold of fun and service for them, their play is their work, and if it is properly managed, it becomes an open gateway to useful, something living. This makes every child, but no matter how small, a person.

A good toy suits the owner's stage of growth and power. A woolly toy is fine for a youngster, but it would be useless to one of four years of age. A toy that breaks at the first touch is a bad choice. It is a source of grief to a child and allows him to think breakage is normal.

The body was adorned by a lace jacket with a tiny collar and short sleeves. She carried red roses and a small bouquet of pink and white anemones.

Army Probes Complaint of Onetime GI's

WASHINGTON, June 14 (AP)—The army is investigating complaints that powerful flood lights mounted on tanks in World War II made some GI's sterile.

The former major, Marshall White, Chicago, demanded the investigation last night after a former army major who commanded a force of the specially-equipped tanks demanded it.

White said in Chicago he has reports that at least 19 out of 80 men who were subjected to the full glare of the lights designed to blind the enemy had suffered ill effects in some way since World War II.

He said members of his company who were serving in Germany reported that Joseph Vancetti, 41, Hammond, Conn., conceived in 1940 he was sterile. Another member of the company said his daughter had a club foot and his wife had one miscarriage, White added.

He said the wives of two others had given birth to children with cleft palates.

A 1945 report indicated the army had some question about the infrared energy produced by the lights. It said there were indications that further study of this aspect was needed.

Nature Correspondent Seems Like Ideal Task to McElmore

BY HENRY McELMORE
LONDON—I like the job I have and wouldn't swap it for any I know of, but if I had to make a change I think I'd try to get a position as nature correspondent for an English newspaper.

Most of the good-sized English papers have such a man. He isn't a full-time job, but a part-time job known as the nature correspondent. In some papers he signs his articles as Country Observer. One uses the heading Wood and Veil.

One only has to read these articles for a short time to know that the authors have one of the softest touches in the newspaper field. To start with, they write only about the birds, bushes, flowers, and creatures they can see from their front porch, or by taking short walks in their immediate neighborhood. They take no extended trips to see what nature is doing on the other side of the hill, or in the next county.

If a deer runs through their hedge, or a snail does a jig under their plum tree, they record it. But a leopard could kick a wetter around the corner and never have his feat reach the light of print. Whether this refusal to roam far afield is due to a clause in their contracts, or just plain laziness, I don't know. All I do know is that these nature editors undoubtedly have a lot of time for plain and fancy side-depends.

Another angle of the job that appeals to me is the right they have to the negative approach. If they don't see anything to write about, they go ahead and write about not seeing anything. Dull days afford just as good copy as the data when nature is cutting up.

Here is an example of what I mean: "Nothing was to be seen or heard today. Nature appeared to be on a bank holiday. Even the red-crested grebe, usually to be seen near sundown, daintily searching the spinnery for food, was absent. Even the leaves of the trees were asleep. Not a rustle."

This was followed by two or three hundred more words on what didn't happen. The author might warn her away.

That is the point on which the trial will hinge. But the far bigger question involved is how this will affect the future status of American servicemen stationed abroad in peacetime to defend America and the free world.

just as well have looked into an empty barn and described what he didn't see. If you have ever been a columnist, you will appreciate what a blessing it would be to be able to get by with filling space with a description of some thing that didn't exist.

These English nature correspondents can get by with a lot of wondering about what has happened to this bird, this flower, this animal. With the deadline approaching, and nothing written, they needn't worry. All they have to do, judging by the title, is something like this:

"A year ago the fields were alive with the gay, saucy blooms of the phloxodendrum, that crimson spray of early summer. Today there are none. We wonder why. We wonder where they are plotting their secret tent this year. Don't they like us anymore? The fields aren't the same without them, and would that we knew how to bring them back."

"The nature correspondents don't have to do a daily stint, either. There's no counting on them for regular contributions. They seem to work only when the spirit moves them. They'll write three days in a row and then skip a week or more. That comes close to being the ideal set-up for a columnist."

I may have a shot at it while I'm over here. I already have my pen name—Bully Batschaburton. Or does Zerk Zimna have a better ring? Both good, though.

Carpenters' Pay Talks Scheduled

BOISE, June 14 (AP)—Representatives of the Associated General Contractors and the Rocky Mountain district Council of Carpenters will meet with a federal mediator here June 26 for further negotiations on a contract for southern Idaho carpenters.

John Muller, AGC secretary, said the last meeting of the contractors and carpenters was June 4 and no progress had been made in negotiations. The carpenters' union has demanded a wage of about 13 per hour compared with the present average wage of $12.50.

The federal mediation service was called into the negotiations after the employers and carpenters failed to reach agreement.

a row and then skip a week or more. That comes close to being the ideal set-up for a columnist.

Emotionally Clouded Girard Case Poses Complex Question

TOKYO, June 14 (AP)—The controversial case of American GI William Girard has become so clouded by emotion both in the United States and Japan that a simple recital of facts is in order.

The fundamental ones are these: 1. A Japanese woman, Mrs. Naka Sakaki, is dead. She was killed while gathering used American shell casings and other scrap metal on an American firing range north of Tokyo.

2. She was killed by an empty shell from a grenade launcher fired by 3/C Girard of Ottawa, Ill. 3. Girard would never have been in the firing range that Jan. 30 had not American troops been stationed in Japan at the invitation of the Japanese government under terms of a mutual defense treaty.

That last point is most important. It is a reflection of the peculiar problems that have arisen and will arise so long as the United States plays its dominant role in world affairs and stations its soldiers around the globe.

Obscured is the fact that there has never been any intent whatsoever to turn Girard free until a trial is held to determine whether his act was deliberate or accidental.

The question has been whether the Japanese courts or the U. S. military should try him. And that revolves around the technicality of whether or not he was on duty at the time and whether or not he was performing official acts.

American military authorities took the position that Girard was on duty. But they waited jurisdiction and agreed, after lengthy negotiations, to permit Japanese civil courts to try Girard.

It was at this point that American public attention was first focused on the case. The U. S. defense department then called for a complete report and told the army to hold on to Girard until a decision was made.

Opposition parties in Japan immediately jumped upon the affair as an excuse to attack the whole matter of American bases in Japan. They gained wide support as a result, for the title of statement made in the United States that Japanese courts were not fair or competent. It hurt national pride.

Almost ignored has been the special local circumstances at the firing range.

The area is posted, clearly marked in both English and Japanese. Nobody is supposed to enter. But the villagers began entering the range and collecting the scrap years ago when it was used by the Japanese army. The scavenging was highly competitive and the villagers edged closer and closer to danger points.

The Japanese guard winked at the regulations and let them in. When the Americans took over the range, they followed suit and let the villagers in the area past both American and Japanese guards.

They are still doing so right now despite the Girard case.

The Japanese contend Girard may have been on duty but he was not performing it. They claim he looted scrap metal toward Mrs. Sakaki and lured her closer before he fired. Girard denies it. He says he fired one empty cartridge from a grenade launcher in an effort to warn her away.

That is the point on which the trial will hinge. But the far bigger question involved is how this will affect the future status of American servicemen stationed abroad in peacetime to defend America and the free world.

Irrigation Fund Given Approval

POCAHONTE, June 14 (AP)—The house appropriations committee has recommended expenditure of $19,000 for three projects at the Michaela dam irrigation project near American Falls. Project Engineer Roy H. Walter said today.

He said the money, if approved by Congress, would pay for completion of the $279,250 pumping plant and discharge line and the $10,420 east canal which would run 11 miles.

Walter said bids would be opened June 25 for the third project, an open lateral construction project estimated to cost $500,000. The recommended appropriation also would finance installation of pumps, moiré and electrical control equipment.
