Arthur B. Fleming before he was over the reins of ODM to Grant was attached to a letter of May 11, 1957, in which Seaton recommended against the writer.
Kaufauer said he had talked Fleming on the phone and that impression the memo took exceptions" to the writer, and suggested more consultations.
"Will you produce the memo," Kaufauer asked.
"No, I cannot produce it,"

Gray also disputed what he was the inference from Kiefer's remarks that Fleming opposed writeoff.

"That is not the case," he said.

Gray said no matter of security was involved and he was raising any such argument by withholding the memo. Rather, he said it pertained to discussions and consultations he had with Fleming about the Idaho Power case.

Gray said the memo was not part of the official record.

Nor, he said, did the man obtain any diagnosis of the condition, which was the subject of a letter to which it was attached.

Court Ruling Slows Efforts Against Reds

WASHINGTON, June 18 (AP)—The government's drive against communists and fellow travelers faltered today against more sweeping new restrictions laid down by the supreme court.

Alarm was expressed in some quarters of congress that the court had gone too far. Chairman James O. Eastland, D. Miss., of the senate internal security subcommittee accused the justice of "undermining our existing barriers against communist subversion."

The justice department and the FBI declined comment on the latest decision but were known to be deeply disturbed.

The new rulings on the communist question, coupled with earlier ones in the fields of anti-trust regulation and military law, showed the "liberal bloc" on the court to be clearly in command. In nearly all these decisions, the majority has consisted of Chief Justice Earl Warren, two long-time liberals on the court—Justices Hugo L. Black and William O. Douglas—and two comparatively new-appointees John M. Harlan and William J. Brennan, Jr.

Sharp setbacks

The court yesterday handed both the government and congress these sharp setbacks in their anti-subversive campaign.

—It struck five of 14 California communists convicted of conspiring to advocate violent overthrow of the government and ordered new trials for the other nine. In doing so, it held that the Smith act, which forbids the use of force to overthrow the government, does not prohibit teaching of forcible overthrow as an abstract principle, divorced from any effort to instigate action to that end.

—It dismissed the contempt of congress conviction of Illinois labor leader John W. Walters, who had been named as a person he had known to be in the communist movement. In doing so, it held that the Smith act does not authorize congressional committees to establish their rights in refusing to answer questions unless the committee establishes the pertinency of the questions.

—It set aside the ruling of a federal judge in New York that the loyalty question was not a federal question but a state question, and that it called procedural laws by their Secretary of State Dean Acheson in firing Sacco.

These decisions, plus an earlier one that prohibited the government to disseminate in criminal cases with certain material from otherwise secret files, have handed the government a series of setbacks.

—A retrial of the conviction of a trio found guilty of hiding a bail-jumping communist. The court dismissed the conviction on grounds of illegal search and seizure by government agents.

—Barring out past communist party membership as a test for admission to a state court-bar.

—Prohibiting the attorney general from ordering persons awaiting deportation to refrain from associating with communists.

Yesterday's decisions brought renewed attacks on the court from some congressmen. Eastland, joined in his statement by Sen. William E. Jenner, ranking Republican member of the internal security subcommittee, said:

"Unless the congress and the people call a halt to the boundless assumption of power which the supreme court has now undertaken, our liberties will be completely jeopardized in the years ahead."

Hungry Tiger Fries Billfold For Last Meal

WASHINGTON, June 18 (AP)—A policeman roars up to James D. Hase and demands to see his driver's license, he can look at him intently and say:

"The tiger? A tiger ate it."

The 22-year-old Washington resident wrote home appealing for a duplicate.

Hase wrote that he joined a small safari near Udorn in Thailand to hunt a tiger who had been dining of life on the local livestock.

"I am an amateur squirrel hunter back home," he said. "But I decided here was an opportunity to prove myself the great wild hunter."

The tiger roared. His yellow eyes gleamed in the jungle darkness. Hase aimed his rifle. He fired. The wounded beast fled. But Hase said he didn't give up.

They tracked the tiger to a cave. Then, figuring that the tiger was dead, Hase said a guide were lowered into the cave's mouth.

"They lit a torch—they crept forward. The tiger roared. They left quickly."

The ardent said there was an easier way. They lit a fire at the tiger's mouth and asphyxiated the tiger.

Hase said at about this time he noticed his wallet with his driver's license was missing.

But, he said, when they pulled the dead tiger from the cave and cut him open, there in the tiger's stomach was one chewed wallet.

And that's how it happened, officer, Hase.

THE GIRD CASE

In all the stir over the case of U.S. Army Specialist Third Class William Girard, some of the elements of the situation tend to be overlooked.

To begin with, this is not an isolated case involving a radical of the extreme left relations between Japan and the U.S. forces.

Under our security treaty with the Japanese, and the so-called status of forces article in our supplementary administrative agreement, Japan is given the prior right to try U.S. soldiers for injury done to Japanese nationals—except where the injury grows out of something done or not done "in the performance of official duty."

Thus in 1956 the Japanese tried 11 cases involving U.S. soldiers. Of these, only one was a conviction. Of these, only 15 went to jail. The others drew either fines or suspended sentences. And Japan last year waived jurisdiction in some 5,400 cases, roughly 98 per cent of all those submitted to Japanese law.

Since the administrative agreement took effect three and a half years ago, Japanese courts have one way or another dealt with some 16,000 American cases. It is clear that they tend to deal out fines and light sentences more often than anything else. Even cases of murder have been penalized by no more than 5 to 15 years imprisonment.

Obviously, there is no reason to fear harsh justice from the Japanese. On the contrary, there have been reports that a U.S. court-martial was preparing to deal much more severely with Girard than Japan likely will do.

Admittedly, there is a question about the matter whether Girard's alleged offense was an act done "in the performance of official duty." He is reported to have shot and killed a Japanese woman scavenging for shell casings on a beach.

His commanding general said he was performing his duty but Japan said he was not. The matter went through several levels, until at last the defense department gave the Japanese jurisdiction over the case.

Where the decision was influenced by mounting indignation in Japan over the case is not wholly clear. Even without it, it was evident that the question of jurisdiction was not automatic and required Washington's intervention.

If Girard's relatives and friends are battling on principle, arguing that the United States legally is entitled to jurisdiction of his case, that is one thing. If they are trying to get the best break they can before the courts, the record suggests they might do better to let the Japanese proceed.

THE GIRD CASE

For reasons known perhaps best to the psychologists, the airline has long been plagued with what they call the "no-show" problem.

The difficulty is created by people who buy tickets or make reservations for a flight and then fail to show up. Sometimes the airline can sell the unused space at the last minute, but many flights depart with the line deprived of a chance to get its maximum revenue.

Evidently many people reserve a lot of flights at different hours and sometimes on different carriers, determined to use the one reservation most suitable to their plans as the day develops.

Actually, this constitutes a kind of hoarding of space which is unfair both to the airlines and to other passengers who would like space but can't get it. Not everybody is willing to show up at an airport on the chance that he can get a seat left vacant by a "no-show."

The civil aeronautics board now allows airlines to cancel reservations when they are not picked up in a specified time before departure. But this does not curb the ticketed passenger who fails to appear. So they have increased forth (as of Sept. 15) authorizing the lines to penalize any passenger $3 for failing to use his ticket and not notifying the carrier.

If it doesn't work, maybe the fine should be steeper.

WELL DONE, MAYFLOWER

Probably no one will be so unkind as to accuse the Mayflower II of being a show because it accepted Coast Guard honor guard when it left Provincetown harbor on its historic journey from Plymouth, England, to Plymouth, Mass.

The little craft, a perfect replica of the original Mayflower which brought the Pilgrims to Plymouth Rock in 1620, had been bouncing on the deep Atlantic for 33 days.

Mayflower II substantially completed its ocean voyage against a backdrop of hazards, most of them minor but nonetheless annoying. Winds were often capricious and seas unusually choppy. But the crew under Capt. Alan Villers stuck at it and brought the tiny vessel to a landfall off the Massachusetts coast.

All Americans, remembering the place this ship holds in their heritage, welcome the Mayflower II with full praise for an enterprising job well done.

TUCKER'S NATIONAL WHIRLIGIG

WASHINGTON—The wave of congressional indignation over the widespread and scandalous misbehavior of numerous union leaders in the past few years has been a long time coming. It has taken the Roosevelt- Truman era. Not the least of the reasons for the delay was the fact that the law which guaranteed a so-called "closed shop" during the Roosevelt administration was designed to give the workers' representatives a voice in the selection of union leaders. It was not until the late 1940s that the law was amended to require that the union leaders be elected by the workers themselves. The government required both sides to sit around a table for peaceful settlement of their disputes. And if they could not reach an agreement, the question was to be resolved through intervention of the national labor relations board.

ACT DID NOT STRIKE AT BASIC EVIL

The Taft-Hartley act, which has been continuously revised by the labor politician, was enacted only 10 years ago on an almost unbroken record of past bad behavior by union leaders. It was not until the late 1940s that the law was amended to require that the union leaders be elected by the workers themselves. The government required both sides to sit around a table for peaceful settlement of their disputes. And if they could not reach an agreement, the question was to be resolved through intervention of the national labor relations board.

UNION MEMBERS ONLY PUPPETS

The McClellan committee disclosures reveal that the millions of union members are only so many puppets manipulated by a few hundred men who have fought their way to the top. Ironically, many of these men are now being exposed as having been riding the " gravy train " engineered by new deal labor politicians.

Leaders of the union movement have been exposed as having been riding the " gravy train " engineered by new deal labor politicians. Leaders of the union movement have been exposed as having been riding the " gravy train " engineered by new deal labor politicians.

CONGRESS AFRAID OF SO-CALLED LABOR

For several years, Congress has been plagued with what they call the "no-show" problem. The difficulty is created by people who buy tickets or make reservations for a flight and then fail to show up. Sometimes the airline can sell the unused space at the last minute, but many flights depart with the line deprived of a chance to get its maximum revenue.

VIEW OF OTHERS

KEEP AN EYE ON THE COST

Senator Charles McNichols is sponsoring a bill to freeze federal income tax rates on personal and corporate, to government spending. When authorized expenditures are reduced, the rates would go down accordingly, or in the happy event of expenditures decreasing the rates would go down.

It is the Senate's intention to promote economy. Certainly congress would move slowly in approving new expenditures if it knew that the income tax rates would be raised to meet the higher rates.

But it would also be well, when new expenditures are authorized, to make sure that federal income tax rates are sufficient and that the budget will not be thrown out of balance.

However, the expenditure-tax rate proposal is only one part of Mr. McNichols' bill.

The bill is intended to make sure that when congressional committees consider a bill or treaty they have before them an authoritative estimate of the costs involved. This would be accomplished by having the bureau of the budget prepare the cost estimate along with its customary review of the pending legislation.

As the senator remarked, the first phase, the authorization, is the pleasant one. Here we are giving the people what they want. Here we are carrying out party platform pledges or our own campaign promises. Often such programs carry very low costs to start with, but these have a tendency to increase when they become firmly fixed in the pattern of federal services. If they serve all the people their costs will reflect our increase in population. If they serve our senior citizens, their costs will increase as the life-span increases. If they require the long-term investment of funds, their original estimates tend to expand in the presence of annual civilian wage increases and inflation. But we don't have to think of these things when we authorize them.

Neither, it is obvious, do the people who will benefit or who think they will benefit.

If congress is not cost conscious, then neither is the taxpayer. A 75 billion dollar budget may bring cries of extravagance, but the cost of the federal government is a huge burden made up of many items, all considered necessary by one group or another.

Mr. McNichols frankly says that he realizes his bill has little chance of consideration soon. But he hopes that it will stimulate interest in the problem and its solution, both in congress and in the country.

We join him in that hope. He has a unique idea which deserves widespread discussion. Only through debate and careful consideration can the merits or flaws of his proposal be disclosed. But the more that is known about the bill, the more the emphasis on Senator McNichols' objective of making the public cost-conscious becomes a wonderful device, but eventually, as he himself and nations must realize, the bills have to be paid.—Salt Lake Tribune.

SLUGGON GONE

The Maine legislature has acted to change that state's presidential election date from September to November, thus making Maine conform to the custom of other states. For many years Maine had the earliest date because, in the old days, the deep snow drifts in the upper right hand corner of the map were thought to prevent voters from getting in the polls in November. Now, though, they have snow and ice and automobiles and even airplanes. Also polling places are not so far apart as they used to be.

So there goes another old saying. "As Maine goes, so goes the nation." Maine won't go in until November, at the same time as the rest of the country. But it's a sign of a sluggon nation, except in years when the sluggon wins. Then Maine was a very accurate barometer of national feeling.—Bergen Register-Guard.

Benson Calls For Freedom For Planning

WASHINGTON, June 17.—Secretary of Agriculture Benson called yesterday for farm law again, saying it would give farmers greater freedom in making decisions on production and marketing.

Such changes, he said, would require greater government discretion in setting farm price support levels, particularly at lower levels than at present—and eventual elimination of production controls.

Farmers' Decision
Under such conditions, farmers themselves would decide what and how much they would produce on the basis of prices set in markets rather than by government regulations.

Addressing a meeting of the National Association of Television and Radio Farm Directors, Benson said that present agricultural programs that present agricultural programs that increase in price supports as surpluses decline—would create surplus and costly over-supply problems.

"There is a growing realization among farm leaders in and out of Congress," he said, "that we must move in the direction of greater decision-making on the part of farmers."

Writes to Eisenhower
Benson first made recommendations for these changes in farm legislation in a letter two months ago to Chairman Eisenhower. He is now writing to the same committee.

More than 100 farm directors from all parts of the country are registered for a three-day session of the association. They will call on President Eisenhower Thursday.

Cotton Problem
Benson said cotton already faces a new crisis problem under operation of the price support law. He said that several hundred acres of cotton would be supported at not less than 12¢ per pound of lint.

"Now because of a change in the cotton support situation, the formula in the law will require the department to raise the support level," he said.

And an increase, he said, will make it more difficult to sell cotton. Administrator Walter C. Benson of the department's commodity stabilization service, told the broadcast that unless Congress adopts Benson's recommendations permitting lower price supports, it will take many years to dispose of surpluses.

Mrs. Eisenhower Enters Hospital For Examination
WASHINGTON, June 17.—Mrs. Mamie Eisenhower entered Walter Reed hospital late yesterday for a "routine" physical check-up.

The White House called the visit "just routine" and said the First Lady is not ill.

Press Secretary James C. Hagerty told a news conference Mrs. Eisenhower expects to remain in the hospital for "several days."

She was last at Walter Reed late in February. At that time, Hagerty announced she would be there overnight, but she actually stayed on three or four days.

After the February checkup the White House announced the First Lady in good condition. Her physician, Maj. Gen. Howard M. Snyder, said at the time she would expect the longer stay than had been expected that Mrs. Eisenhower liked to take it easy and that he encouraged her to do so.

The First Lady is 60.

Supreme Court Fills Void in Legislation for Civil Rights

By JAMES MARLOW
WASHINGTON, June 18.—The Supreme Court has become for all practical purposes the American "backbone" in the field of civil rights and civil liberties.

It has been the voice of the law in the huge vacuum left by Congress which has passed practically no civil rights legislation in the 20th century.

The court may turn out to be president Eisenhower's most formidable opponent. He has appointed four of the nine members: Chief Justice Warren and Justices Harlan, Black and White.

He may have to name more before his term is up. If there are further deaths and retirements.

Under Warren's leadership the court has become far-reaching in its decisions on civil rights—most notably its ban on segregation in public schools—and on civil liberties.

It has been roughly criticized—particularly by southerners—not only on segregation but for its opinions on communism and fifth amendment cases. One thing is sure:

The court has made it tougher for the government to prosecute—or perhaps made it more cautious about bringing prosecutions—while giving defendants more constitutional protection than they've ever enjoyed.

There is no room here to go into all the decisions of the court in the past few years in the related fields of civil rights and civil liberties. Some of its rulings on communism have had a tremendous effect.

Monday the court threw out the convictions of 14 California Communists under the 1940 Smith act, freeing five and ordering new trials for the other nine. It was under this same act the 11 top Communists were convicted several years ago.

But this decision was based on technicalities and will not necessarily interfere with the government's ability to try other communists under other sections of the act.

A year ago the court knocked Eisenhower federal employee security program into the bleachers. Under Eisenhower's program any government worker could be fired as a security risk.

The court said Eisenhower was too far under existing law, that only people employed in sensitive jobs could be ousted as security risks. There are other laws under which people otherwise undesirable can be fired.

Earlier this year the court threw out the conviction of a man who bought narcotics from a government agent never further identified except as "John Doe." The court said: No more of that.

The court said if the government wants to prosecute a man, he has a right to know who the government informant was, and confront him.

Not Worth It

MIAMI, Fla., June 17.—(U. S. A.)—A would-be robber tried a bakery yesterday and showed a note at Mrs. Tilly Nader. It read: "Which is more important, your money or your life? I have a gun."

She told him the money belonged to her boss, and started lecturing him on crime. After trying in vain to get back to the subject of his call, the bandit became leery of poverty and fled.

Chinese Communists' Leader Formulates New "Soft" Line

TOKYO, June 18.—Chinese Communist Leader Mao Tse-tung, in a complete break with the long-entrenched line of Joseph Stalin, has called for a new soft line of "persuasion" to the communists to use democratic methods to win the Chinese people.

The new communist ideology, outlined by Mao in a secret speech Feb. 27, was broadcast today by Peking Radio. The 1500-word speech said the communists will use democratic methods to win the Chinese people and the masses and the communist dictatorship.

The speech admitted for the first time that the Hunanite uprising had created widespread unrest in the new reform wave launched by Mao.

His speech triggered a series of far-reaching reforms including, on Russia, the suppression of criticism in books and magazines, the lifting of the ban on certain plays, a purge of level 10 officials, approval of efforts of strikes, and admission of errors in Peking's five-year economic and construction plan.

In dealing with the Hunanite uprising he made an abrupt about-face. He said the Hunanite uprising was a "mistake" and that the Hunanite uprising was a "mistake" and that the Hunanite uprising was a "mistake."

Her son, William, 20, an Illinois Institute of Technology junior, said he fired at his mother when she went to a rear porch to close a window during an early morning thunderstorm. The Klorer home had been the target of several burglary attempts recently.

Care of Your Children

By ANGELO PATRI

John Henry, 13, slapped Tommy. Tommy howled to high heaven: "Mother-r-r-r, Johnny hit me!"

"Now what's all this about, Johnny, you ought to be ashamed to hit your little brother. What's the matter with you anyway?"

"Make him stop pestering me and won't have to slap him. I'm trying to do this thing on my plane. I have to take it to the teacher tomorrow morning, and just when I have it done he slaps me. He did it a couple of times. I told him if I did it again I'd whack him but he did it and he did it and he did it."

"You're the oldest. You're supposed to have patience with your little brother. You are forbidden to slap him. Take your belongings to your room. Maybe you will share better if you are alone for a while. A big boy like you should be a little fellow. There, there, Tommy. Come along and see what mother has for you. And remember, I'm big brother alone when he's asleep."

Brothers and sisters squabble and they are old enough to have learned the lesson that experience with older brothers. Turn the squabbling aside. But until then the younger ones who love meddling older brothers and sisters should be held responsible for their behavior and not allowed to go scot-free while the older ones are scolded.

The fact that one child is older than another does not deprive him of his rights and feelings. He should have the same consideration as the others, and not be made to bear the brunt of the interruptions the younger ones choose to inflict upon him.

Remember the older one is forced

New Beeline gasoline again proved its superior performance and dependability—this time at the second annual Great Salt Lake Road Races.

A Beeline-powered Hagermann Special set a new track record on the rugged course, skirting the 2.3 miles in one minute and 58 seconds! And two Porsches and a Ferrari set new class records in four of the seven races—dramatic evidence of Beeline's ability to meet the exacting performance tests so vital in racing competition.

Only the finest gasoline can meet the requirements of high-compression sports cars, and the gasoline used in all competing cars this year was the highest octane available—guaranteed quality Beeline gasoline.

Hi-octane Beeline fulfills the most demanding road tests of everyday driving, too. Whether on a rugged country road, a superb highway, or in busy downtown traffic, you get quick, quiet, positive power every moment.

Action-test Beeline in your car! It costs you less—and there are more than 130 Beeline stations in the Intermountain area waiting to serve you.

NATIONALLY KNOWN SPORTS CAR RACER ACCLAIMS BEELINE QUALITY!

SAM WEISS, Sacramento, California, winner of the longest race of the grueling 92 mile, 40-lapper—says, "In five years of racing competition, I found Beeline gasoline as fine a gasoline as I have used. My Porsche's engine didn't miss a beat!"
