Explorer Cruises Through Space Amid Pseudits From Free World; May Circle Earth for Ten Years

WASHINGTON, Feb. 1 (AP)—America's first Earth satellite radiated priceless data back to earth Saturday as it whirled through space in a long-lease orbit that may keep it aloft for 10 years. The solid success of the heavy moon was established within hours after the long tube-shaped instrument carrier was catapulted high into the skies over Cape Canaveral, Fla., Friday night and given a mighty shove around the world by an army jet-propelled rocket.

It is traveling generally west to east around the globe's girth, in contrast to the methuselah paths followed by the Russian Sputniks, but is not likely to be visible to the naked eye. Scientists in Washington reported to newsmen that radio transmissions from the "Explorer," as the defense department named the satellite, are being picked up by tracking stations and "everything is working very well."

The 308-pound satellite, lifted after a sister day, has encountered agonizing setbacks, is sending valuable automatic reports on temperature, cosmic rays, meteorites. This data is being shared with all nations under the international geophysical year program.

Conversations from President Eisenhower down poured in on the first station from the United States back in the vehicles with Russia in space. But there were warlike against complacency, too.

Dr. Werner von Braun, the German-born scientist who is leading the development of the Jupiter-C at the Army's Redstone Arsenal in Huntsville, Ala., said the Explorer is only "a rival in spirit to the first Russian satellite, launched last October, weighed 185 pounds and the second Sputnik, which was launched after three months, weighed 1,120 pounds.

Praise for the Army's accomplishment—President Eisenhower considered it "an American achievement"—came from both Democrats and Republican leaders in Congress.

U. S. Scientists See Soviets Still Ahead

WASHINGTON, Feb. 1 (AP)—While the United States pulled off the back Saturday for at last getting a satellite into orbit, a pioneer in the program had some disturbing advice about Russia's long leaps into space.

Dr. Werner von Braun, the German-born scientist who is leading the development of the Jupiter-C at the Army's Redstone Arsenal in Huntsville, Ala., said the Explorer is only "a rival in spirit to the first Russian satellite, launched last October, weighed 185 pounds and the second Sputnik, which was launched after three months, weighed 1,120 pounds.

50 Military Men Listed In Disaster

NORWALK, Calif., Feb. 1 (AP)—A four-engine military transport and a navy medium bomber carrying an estimated total of 60 persons smashed together at 2,500 feet altitude Saturday night and crashed into thickly-populated Los Angeles suburbs with a terrifying eruption of flame.

Reports from the fiery, smoky crash scenes a mile apart said there were four survivors.

The military air transport service said there were 36 passengers and five crew members aboard the transport. The pilot said it believed nine were aboard the bomber. One survivor of the navy plane had reached a hospital. The navy said it had an unconfirmed report of three survivors.

The transport crashed at the rear of the Norwalk sheriff's substation and blew up in a terrific explosion that shook the area and knocked out electric power. The navy plane plunged into an open area across the street from the station in the residential community of Los Angeles. A wing tank of the transport flew into a house, exploded and set it afire.

The transport, landing in the sheriff's station grounds, hit in the only clear area for blocks around. The crash scene is surrounded by commercial buildings and hundreds of homes in the center of Norwalk.

James Tucker of Norwalk said he saw three bodies inside the wreckage of the smaller plane. He said he talked to a navy airman who had been dazed out of the wreckage. He said this injured man told him the fighter plane carried seven persons.

The transport took off from nearby Long Beach municipal airport bound for Mojave air force base, N. J., the OAA traffic control tower said. It had been unreported for a short period before the crash.

Curb Ordered On Amateurs' Rocketeering

BOISE, Feb. 1 (AP)—Idaho, with an eye toward mounting rocket accidents, has stepped up its air space "restriction."

State Aeronautics Director Chief Merrill Priddy says the department will not allow unlicensed rocketeers to fly in the state.

It's the first statewide age restriction in the history of the country, Priddy believes. He said he acted under general authority granted by the state legislature to supervise activities in the "sovereign air space" over Idaho.

The action was taken after reports of rocket club members who have sprung up all over Idaho. Priddy says he is especially concerned about the "amateur" rocketeering. The procedure is as follows:

Any person interested in blasting off a missile must specify the dimensions, propellant, means of direction, and other pertinent information. The person proposed date for firing and name of the person or group seeking the permit.

Launchings may proceed only at areas approved by the department and after proper notice "has been given."

Three School Burglaries in Area Probed

Three Magie Valley schools were broken into Friday night or Saturday morning. In Hagaman the burglars were caught by a car and a bomb they set off themselves.

The Hagaman high school break-in was discovered at 8:15 a.m. Saturday by Henry Arterburn, janitor. He found the door to the superintendent's office was broken down. The door on the safe was knocked off and an attempt was made to open the door, a car gas bomb exploded.

The engine dealer for the Redmond school was broken into Saturday night. The burglar stole a car and a radio. The burglar was caught by a car and a bomb they set off themselves.

'Ike' Pictured Proud, Elated By Launching

AUGUSTA, Ga., Feb. 1 (AP)—President Eisenhower, elated and "quite proud," Saturday morning personally congratulated to all who helped launch the first United States satellite into orbit.

An army Jupiter-C rocket blasted the satellite into space Friday night, but old soldier Eisenhower reacted as if it were a "scientific achievement" rather than the feat of any new era of the armed services.

James Haggerty, White House press secretary, said the president's response to questions at a news conference Saturday. He spoke of the development at another point as a "successful experiment" by the United States.

Eisenhower's own reaction to the news: "That's wonderful." The president, still convalescing from the minor stroke he had last week, was up early despite resting very late. He had breakfast in his cottage on the White House grounds and then dispatched his message of congratulations.

Egypt, Syria Merge In 'Arab Union' Step

CAIRO, Egypt, Feb. 1 (AP)—Egypt and Syria merged Saturday in a step toward forming a "Arab Union" embracing the Middle East and North Africa. President Nasser of Egypt and President Shukri Kawatly of Syria signed the proclamation of union that invited every Arab state to join or to federate. The new state of 28 million persons, to be known as the "United Arab Republic," may be functioning by fall, with Cairo as the capital and Nasser the likely president. Many steps remain to be taken before union is a fact.

50 Sign up for Local Groups Of Discussion

Approximately 50 names were obtained in a week-long canvass conducted Saturday to sign up those interested in participating in a series of foreign policy discussions to be held in the Twin Falls area.

The discussions are being sponsored by the local sponsoring organization, the Twin Falls Foreign Policy Association. In addition to the program sponsored by the association, the program is also being directed by the William Egan Branch Office of the State Department.

The eight-week program is part of a national program sponsored by the Foreign Policy Association. In addition to the program sponsored by the association, the program is also being directed by the William Egan Branch Office of the State Department.

Participants are encouraged to discuss the problems of the United States and discuss the problems with their neighbors and then come to a decision. Ballots are provided by the national organization upon which each participant can register his opinion. All ballots are to be mailed to the Washington office in Washington, D. C.

About 15 groups are now formed throughout Twin Falls county. Four of these are in Boise; were organized in December.

They said Saturday those who registered for the program during the week could decide whether to participate in the program.

Those who are going to take part in the program should come to my office and register. This applies to those who have already indicated they would participate and those from whom we have not yet heard.

Information packets and registration cards can be picked up at Turner's office or at the county clerk's office, the old hospital building, he said.

Underwriters Plan Canvass for Heart Fund

T. F. Businessmen To Be Asked For Heart Donations Tuesday

Twin Falls businessmen will be asked to donate to the national heart fund Tuesday morning during a canvass of the downtown area by members of the local Southern Idaho Life Underwriters unit.

Approximately 20 men will participate in the effort to boost the results of last year's canvass, says Grant Russel, Twin Falls, a member of the Idaho Heart Association's executive committee. "In 1957, the first year of our canvass, we collected about $1,350," Russel says.

Wendell Residents Report on Travels

The underwriters will gather for an early a.m. meeting at the Ferguson coffee shop before starting collection.

Last year many businessmen joined in the canvass with success, says Russel. "We welcome all who support their wish to give this year," he adds.

James Byrnes, directing the participation of the underwriters in the National Heart fund campaign, explained that February is National Heart Month. "All during this month the heart campaign will be on all over the country," he said.

Directing the downtown canvass is W. W. Fryer, president of the local group in Hartford Court.

Deaths Taken Savant

'Supervised Science' Okayed By Judge in Trio's Probation

JEROME, Feb. 1.—Probate Judge Byron Ward of Jerome is not one to discourage budding young scientists in this sparsely settled town.

Judge Ward Saturday told three young men that they could continue their studies in the sciences at the University of Idaho.

But, the judge stipulated, their experiments must be conducted under supervision of a qualified chemistry or science teacher. Furthermore, the juvenile court records of their probationary sentence for leaving home-made bombs that set off a theater in Shoshone Jan. 17.

The trio, along with their parents, appeared before Judge Ward Saturday morning. They had been accused of causing a minor blaze at the Shoshone theater when they tossed their gasoline and lighter fluid bombs, made of bottles, against the building's brick wall. Some of the blazing fluid seeped under a window sill and caused the blaze.

Judge Ward placed the trio under probation to their parents for an undetermined length of time.

Students at Valley High school, who told the court they had gone to Shoshone to watch a basketball game, "the evening the incident occurred."

Confusing Pair of Accidents Has Valley Officers Puzzled

SHOSHONE, Feb. 1.—Two Shoshone youths were injured in two separate accidents Friday evening, a double coincidence that even the investigating officers called to the scene made a detailed report of the one or only to learn that the other was the one to which they were summoned.

Involved are Roy Jones, 21, son of Mr. and Mrs. Cap Jones, and Kenneth Smith, 15, son of Eric Smith, residents of the north Shoshone area.

Smith remained over night at Gooding Memorial Hospital, Gooding, for treatment of his injuries after spending two and one-half hours pinned beneath a tractor in the Shoshone area east of Shoshone.

Jones is in good condition at St. Bonaventure's hospital, Jerome, and is being treated for head injuries.

Church Aide Not Running

WASHINGTON, Feb. 1 (Special)—It appears certain that John G. Davis, young Boise Democrat who was named as aide to Sen. Frank Church, D. Id., will not be a candidate for any office this year.

Gov. C. B. and a lawyer, who was named as anxious to tackle the former Idaho Democrat, said he has no plans to run for office.

"The same goes, he says, for persons that he'll seek the Democratic nomination for governor."

Reports that Davis had tried to get the house against the popular but unpopular Lewis Bradburn in "one year" up to run in 1958 against Rep. Gene Hyde, Boise Democrat, who with the state government in Boise had a lot of her "misadventure" work done in the payroll of Sen. Henry C. DeLoach, R. Id.

The present feeling around the state is that Davis and Bradburn are in the rather unenviable category.

WASHINGTON—Do you think that President Roosevelt will get rid of Sherman Antitrust laws? W. R. of Troy, N.Y., because of his vicious attack on the Democratic party was insisting that the problem of defense should be kept out of partisan politics?

Answer: I do not, although almost every Republican I know, on the other hand, is anxious to see the last of the so-called "Yankees in the White House. Adams' attacks against Roosevelt and Truman administrations has been condemned in almost every editorials I have seen, whether the newspapers were of a Democratic or Republican trend.

Calculated Strategy—The "Yankees" and Adams' were calculated strategy. The President is not qualified, temperamentally, for such a far-reaching role as he is playing in heretofore dramatics on the stump.

Everyday's "Natche" Man—It would be beneath the dignity of the President of the United States to engage in oratorical flights in a "Natche" man's attire. It is unfortunate, however, that this below-the-belt assignment should have been given to our President. Such an officer should be a man of a different mold, greater tolerance and human understanding than Adams displays.

INCIDENT OF "AL" SMITH DAYS—A dramatic incident involving Alfred E. Smith and Theodore Roosevelt in 1904, when they were opposing candidates for governor of New York. Illustrates vividly the difference between a politician and a publicist in that campaign, and was with him in a Buffalo hotel when the "dammy" board of aldermen, headed by Bernard Shinnick, "you've got to hit young Roosevelt harder. He's going great guns, and he's a hero of San Juan, not the son of J.R. Recall his role in the Teapot Dome scandal, and smear him with oil.

"You're wrong," said Al. "He is a younger and more successful man than I am. I will put myself in the position of a district attorney demanding the death penalty for a man who hasn't killed a man for him.

"I'll keep on discussing important state issues. Let Copeland handle the dirt."

The late Mayor J. J. Copeland was running for the U.S. senate on the ticket with Smith. And he carried out Al's orders to "dig out the dirt" as well as carried out Al's orders to "defeat by almost 100,000 votes in a year when Calvin Coolidge swept the state."

E. N. of Mt. Jewell, Pa. wants to settle a betting argument. A says that only Democratic senators have introduced measures to increase social security payments, while B says the "R" did so.

Answer: Measures for expanding social security have been sponsored by both parties. The "D" has introduced the most important legislation that the "old folks vote" is becoming larger every year.

NEEDED INVESTIGATIONS
A special house committee has been set up to look into the big federal regulatory agencies. More often than not, inquiries of this sort peter out with no conclusive or effective result. Let's hope this time it will be different.

The question of the grant will be the civil aeronautics board, the securities and exchange commission, the federal power commission, the federal trade commission.

Some of these agencies are distinguished by the fact that they have a broad multiplicity of functions. They are, in effect, makers of rules and policies, and are also judges of those for whom the rules and policies are laid down.

True enough, they operate under specific statutes setting forth their purposes and the means for their attainment. It is essential to the federal courts for their decisions is possible. But within the bounds thus set, they move with tremendous discretionary freedom.

It is well that they be checked from time to time to see if they are performing their prescribed duties. For there are two dangers they can fall into: They can become the creatures of the industries they are supposed to regulate, or they can ride herd on them so roughly that they impair their chances of healthy operation and growth.

If this committee does its work well, we'll know where each of the six falls in the scale of performance.

An Idaho youth, Phillip Edwards of Dietrich, who has lately returned from a tour of duty in Burma as one of the first two United States aviators under the international air pact program, has been invited to appear at the program of the sixth annual institute on World Peace at Boise Saturday, is authority for the most interesting statement in his report on the "land of the golden pagoda."

The Burmese standard of living is extremely low as gauged by American standards, he says, but they are a happy people. Their needs are simple and they produce their own food. They are not troubled by worry over atom bombs, guided missiles, satellites, war, or keeping up with the Joneses. They don't buy new products on the installment plan, and they don't have income tax payments. However, through a certain amount of education, they learn and worry over these factors.

It is reprehensible, perhaps, but there may be a certain feeling in my that, excited by "the news" which he brought to people who are so much troubled by many things as are many Americans.

By Peter Edson

WASHINGTON (REAP)—Over three of Venezuela's dictator, General Marcos Perez Jimenez, is taken as the most encouraging view for Latin-American democracy.

What it shows is that even benevolent dictators who raise the standard of living for their people can't survive if they are not liberal and political freedom.

It is pointed out that in the last year the Jimenez formula to take 600 million dollars was backed up by U. S. social security sent primitive by comparison.

Venezuelan labor laws provided free medical care for all workers and their families. There was a 10 percent bonus for every month's dismissal pay for every discharged worker, with 30 days' pay for every month's dismissal pay.

Jimenez-Jimenez government did not inaugurate this system. It was instituted by the late General Betancourt government which was overthrown by P. J.'s seizure of power.

The significant point is that the dictatorship was free reformer, and Labor unions were permitted, but they were not the free trade unions known in the United States. All Venezuelan unions were organized in a federation known as the "Comité de Defensa de los Trabajadores" (Committee of Defense of the Workers).

The Venezuelan P. J. regime bore many similarities to Argentine dictatorship. Argentina is second at 4000 men per person's organization. But one didn't work any better than the other.

What got them both in the end was the curbing of civil liberties and the suppression of all political opposition.

It was the P. J. "policeman" of the system who is believed to have caused his downfall. With every citizen.

While Mr. and Mrs. Keating toured Singapore, Bangkok, Hong-Kong, Japan and the Hawaiian Islands they sent the four litters to the United States via plane. Each dog was provided with a passport. ### Sputnik-Age Shotgun Shell Is Called "Real Killer" for Waterfowl Hunting

By PAUL G. S. LLOYD Associated Press Writer

It was just bound to happen, six inches long. The upper shell got a lot of attention last month at a meeting of the Idaho fish and game commission.

First off, live ducks and geese were stalked out in the fields to lure their high flying brethren within shooting range. The federal "snipe, booby" was banned because of its use of live decoys.

Then, the hunter dumped waterfowl goodies in front of the blind to coax the birds in. Uncle acid "Alamo" and put the whammy on the practice. No hitting waterfowl.

Along came the radio and TV, Zany, electronic duck and goose callers, by record or tape. The calls were just too real. The take was terrific. Bam. The cancel stamp went down again. The federal said no more hi-fi for the high fliers.

This brings us up to the missile age. And, boys, they're out on the southern Idaho that's a real killer.

Geese feet up in the stubble at an eighth of a mile. The No. 4's are a missile-age shotgun shell.

It was used in a shotgun of standard gauge or drake but trawled to accept the six-inch missile. One particular model, showing some careful engineering, had three barrels slacked one to the other.

The shell, he said, has between 150 and 160 grains of powder, compared to about 50 grains in the most potent shell on the market today—the standard 10-gauge with a 3 1/2-inch shell.

And now the hardware the six-inch thrives at a goose: It sprays about 118 cherry-pine No. 4 buck shot each time it goes off.

Goose hunters generally stay with nothing larger than BB. The No. 4 buckshot comes tearing out of the muzzle at a speed about the same as a 22 caliber rifle—around 1,000 feet per second.

There's been a cannon of another design floating around southern Idaho stubblefields, the report goes. The competition to the six-inch shell is a 10-gauge shotgun rebored to handle four-inch shells. It's said to be just about as potent as the 12-gauge six inch.

The sportsman told the commission numbers there's a real danger with the oversized shotgun. He claimed the No. 4 buckshot can stretch out up to 800 yards and it doesn't fall to earth like rain—no air.

He said Oregon has already banned the use of No. 4 buckshot, finding it easier to put a halter on the shot size than on the length of the shell. The commission appeared likely to put the fits on the big shotgun size for Idaho hunters some next season.

One reporter figured it was a gag. The sportsman said it was no joke. Commissioners agreed.

First Steps Taken to Chart Suitable Forest Recreation Plan for 50 Years

lies up to public demand, but in planning a long-range program.

"Picks says the forest areas that will get the first attention under the new program are those most heavily used by the public.

"The work will be done on a system of priorities," he notes. "Probably the first areas that will get attention are Rock creek, Sawtooth valley, Howell canyon and the upper Wood river."

Picks says that eventually the entire forest will be covered.

"Our wilderness areas will be preserved," he adds. "Many people enjoy the forest in its natural state. But the forest service must provide facilities that do the most good for the greatest number of people. We know that the majority of people want established campgrounds."

Picks explains that there are other reasons for establishing permanent campgrounds. "It is safer so far as fire protection goes," he says. "Costly fires are sometimes started when people camp off the beaten track. Besides, it is more sanitary. We can provide clean, healthy water at established camps. We can furnish adequate toilet facilities. We can build roads and roads and provide parking areas."

According to Picks, most new campgrounds will be established at least 200 feet from a road with a "screen" of trees between the campgrounds and the road. "It is best to prevent dust and noise from trailing right in on a campground," he says. "Well wooded a screen of trees and brush."

Picks also says individual parking spaces will be provided in the camping areas. "We'll have space for a car or a car and a trailer to park. Nearby will be the camping area for that space. The individual parking areas will be about 100 feet from each other to provide a certain degree of privacy."

"It will not be possible to pull a car onto the grass when the parking spaces are taken," Picks says. "We want to prevent overcrowding at these grounds."

"Our recreation dollars will go a long way if the public gives us their full cooperation," Picks says. "They will have to help us maintain our forest facilities."

"The public areas we work on," Picks explains, "then come first."

LOUISVILLE, Ky., Feb. 1 (AP)—Carl L. Whitman is looking for a thoughtful thief with a light touch.

"Whitman found the lights on his front porch Thursday night along with this penciled note:

"Dear friend:

"We are so indeed grateful of the fact that you were kind enough to let us borrow your tree lights this Christmas. Our tree sure sparkled. Sorry we are so late in returning your lights but just be thankful you got them back!"

"Signed Grateful."

Whitman welcomed return of the lights. But not this postscript: "P.S. See you again next year."

Colorful National Costume Displayed by Visitor

Hostess From Norway Tells Favorite Recipes

Mrs. Anne Rommetvedt, who came to Twin Falls from Norway, brought with her many favorite recipes for her husband who also was born in Norway but has lived here most of his life.

She has found little variation in foods, the variety and availability much the same, noting small differences in the manufacturing of some items, such as gelatin, the unflavored kind, which in this country is granulated and in Norway prepared in thin sheets resembling clear plastic about three by seven inches, and in the style of preparation. The system of weights and measures in measuring devices, too, she has had to transpose for her use.

Mrs. Rommetvedt came from Haugesund on the west coast of Norway on the North sea. West Norway is a land of high mountains, deep valleys and narrow fjords cutting far into the countryside, glaciers, swift rivers and waterfalls. It is a modern western democracy with a rich culture and a rapidly growing industry which will soon be as important to the country as agriculture. A land with a high standard of living, advanced social reforms and little in the way of class differences.

Fishing is one of the main industries of the country and in Haugesund alone there are 20 fish meal when the cabbage and lamb are through cooking. About a pint of boiling water is poured over it and brought to a boil and then allowed to simmer for about an hour and a half over low heat until tender.

It is stirred occasionally to keep it from sticking. More thickening may be added if desired. With this she serves potatoes and boiled cauliflower florets, more for garnish, and a fruit dessert. Coffee is served later.

A special desert is a Norwegian cake called Rusee Kenke. It takes four eggs, three cups flour, two cups sugar, one cup melted butter, one teaspoon carmelom, the grated peel of one orange, one-half cup almonds, ground, two teaspoons baking powder and one cup milk.

Thoroughly cream the eggs and sugar until fluffy, add the butter, then milk and orange peel and fold in the dry ingredients which have been sifted together and the almonds. This is baked in a greased loaf pan at 275 degrees for one hour.

A Norwegian variation of rice pudding is one-half pound of rice cooked over low heat for about one hour in two quarts of milk and one teaspoon salt, stirring frequently.

RELATIVELY SPEAKING

"Utility" is one of the key words in the home planner's vocabulary. Without utility a room can easily become a hodge podge. How is this accomplished? By accumulating things that first have a relationship to the room itself, and next a relationship with each other. This is not necessarily mean that every piece in the room must be the same style or period, but there should be a close relationship in the styles of the things.

Size and weight are important in modern living too. The furniture should be completely out of place with a small, delicate chair. Try to have individual pieces and groups proportional in scale with the group or pieces that offset them.

Every piece of furniture in the practical living room and in the dining room is related in style, weight and scale.

Care of Your Children

By ANGELO PATRI

It is not wise for growing men and women to be so fond of their children in their early teens. These children should not be handled, kissed, hugged, or caressed. They should be treated with affection at any age, but affection need not be demonstrative. The extent that the young people are smothered by it. Most of them dislike and resent this fondling and their feelings should be respected.

A grown person has no more right to be affectionate and possessive toward these children than they would have in respect to older people. Just because the young ones are healthy and strong and they are strong enough does not grant such privileges.

In the first place such demonstrative features are unhealthy not only for the adult making them but also for the child when they are imposed. During the teen age children are susceptible to reactions that are unhealthy to the young people and they should not be exposed to them. Sensible, understanding people should be firm in their own personalities but keep their hands off them.

Some elderly men, taking grandfatherly privileges, annoy the young girls of the family. The girls' parents should be firm and the practice stopped. The reasons are obvious.

Sometimes the girls are at fault. An over-demonstrative girl in her teens goes on the lap of her elderly uncle or grandfather. This cannot be permitted, both for the sake of the girl herself and for that of the elderly relative. The girl should have more personal reserve and the gentleman should not be subjected to such behavior. The fact that he may be enjoying it is not to be considered as justification for it.

One of the fundamental habits we try to instill in all children is respect for their bodies, pride in their health and strength and their preservation from indignities. Both girls and boys should be taught

Presbyterian Banker Says "Great Country" Offering Young Men Opportunities if They Work

Attend Meets

The Rev. Donald B. Blackston, pastor of the First Presbyterian church, left Saturday for Oakland, Calif., to attend a three-day ministerial training session.

The Twin Falls ministerial club will come into being at a meeting of the two major Presbyterian churches in Twin Falls Monday night.

The program to equip Presbyterians with information about their own church and the organization involved with the merger is a three-year effort, highlighted by the annual meeting.

The theme of training in 1935 is "The Order of the Church in the Future." In 1936 the theme will be "The Ministry of the Church."

The Twin Falls ministerial assembly to the California session by the national church organization in December the pastor of the Twin Falls ministerial assembly in Portland, Ore.

Sharing the supervision of the Oakland session with Dr. Blackston are Dr. Richard Jones, pastor of the University Presbyterian church, Missions, Mont., and Dr. Wm. T. Sloan, minister of the Presbyterian church, Los Angeles.

"This is a great country with great people who are sold and honest and it is a great place for a young man to get a start in life. It is a place where he can't make his money in any other way."

This money in any other way. This is the opinion of Guy H. Shearer, president of the Fidelity National Bank, who came to Idaho in 1911 and has been a prominent citizen of Twin Falls and Pfler since.

The Fidelity National Bank celebrated 50 years in business last week. Shearer marked the anniversary of the bank.

Shearer came to Magic Valley as a young lawyer looking for a good place to settle and pioneer a business. His father had been in Idaho for 100 years and he was the opportunity awaiting settlers and recommended Shearer come here.

"When I came to Idaho I went to Pfler and visited the bank. I looked around and saw little harmony among the bank stockholders, so I bought their stock and gained controlling interest in the bank," Shearer recalls.

He had been credit director for the Chickering Bros. piano company in Chicago since he worked there from 1905 to 1908, so he knew considerable about handling money.

Shearer attended law school in Chicago, receiving his law degree in 1908. He passed the bar examination and was admitted to the bar in 1910 and practiced law for one and one-half years before coming to Idaho.

He was engaged in Chicago to a young lady he met at the Chickering piano company. She was playing one of the new grand pianos in the store when he first met her, he recalls.

After securing approval to buy back the Pfler bank, Shearer went back to Chicago in 1912 to marry the girl, Anita E. Bohlen, who has been with him in Idaho since. "I met her in the store when I was looking for a piano to buy into the bank at Pfler. I told her I would be making a tragic mistake to exercise the option."

Shearer married me and I did not know whether I wanted to go back to Idaho or not, but I did and I'm sure glad," he adds.

"Probably the experiences that stand out most vividly in Shearer's 27 years with the Fidelity National Bank is the time the bank was robbed in 1925."

"Four robbers came into the bank dressed like they worked on a freight train. Everyone in the bank thought they were cashing their pay checks until we suddenly discovered ourselves looking down the barrels of automatic pistols," he said.

The four robbers scooped up all the money in the tellers' windows and then locked all the bank employees and customers in the bank vault.

"It was a nerve-racking experience, about 15 of us locked in the vault like sardines. Not knowing whether we were going to be able to get out or not," Shearer recalls.

But because of a safety device the robbers were unable to lock the vault securely and the people escaped about 15 minutes after they were locked in the vault.

GUY H. SHEARER

"I had a white cause that didn't like to be ridden about as much as I don't like to ride it. Every time I put a saddle on it, the horse would swell up its stomach so I couldn't get the cinch around," he recalls.

"When I would start to get into the saddle the horse would let its wind out and the saddle would slip."

"One day I had ridden out to where some men were building a bridge. After talking and joking with the men, I started to get back on my horse. I had forgotten that the cinch might be loose after the ride and the horse would try to kick me. When I put my foot in the stirrup, the horse's mane as it started to run away with my foot caught in the stirrup. I finally let off and got quite a jolt."

"After that, I always used a cinch to get around the country," Shearer said.

Shearer was born and raised on a farm in Ford county, Illinois, near Oulton. He attended high school in Oulton and went to prep school at Grand Prairie Seminary, an affiliate of Northwestern university. He was graduated from Grand Prairie in May, 1904.

Greatly interested in football, Shearer went to Chicago university hoping to get on the football team there. "But I couldn't make the team and I didn't want to sit on the bench, so I didn't stay there very long," he adds.

While he was at Chicago university he worked a few days for the great football coach there, Amos Alonzo Keyes, taking dictation and writing letters. He then went to work for the Chicago, Rock Island and Pacific railroad, working in the maintenance section.

"They paid me $10 a week and I worked from 7 a.m. to 7 p.m., with half an hour off for lunch. I wasn't making enough money so I began to look elsewhere for a job," he recalls. "I found a new job that doubled my wages," he said. Shearer went to work for Lawrence Heyworth who was building the 12-story Heyworth building in Chicago.

"My job was renting space in the building. I had to rent the 14th floor to a Dr. Murphy, a famous physician. I called him 'Mr. Murphy' two or three times, trying to be exceptionally nice to him, but he didn't like it. He stopped me and said, 'Young man, call me doctor.'"

"Since then," Shearer said, "I have always called a professional man by his title."

At the same time Shearer was working for Heyworth, he was going to Chicago law school, attending classes in the afternoon and night. He got the job with Chickering Bros. piano company after he quit working for Heyworth, but was still going to law school.

"I made the trip from Chicago to Idaho on the train the only way to travel then, unless you walked," Shearer said. "It took me two and one-half days on the train from Chicago to Pocatello and then another day on the train from Pocatello to Bullh."

"I was a real tenderfoot when I got here," he recalls, "but I thought I would try to keep up with the men who had been here awhile, so I went on a 10-day trip by horseback to Jarbidge."

"The trip to Jarbidge about did me in," he said. "I haven't been much of an outdoorsman since, especially for short hunting and fishing trips."

Shearer lived in Pfler from 1911 to 1915 when the Pfler bank moved to the main office in Twin Falls and changed the name to the Fidelity National Bank of Twin Falls. The bank in Pfler remained as a branch bank.

While he lived in Pfler, Shearer served as mayor at one time, including the first sidewalk in the city. He also was instrumental in organizing the first rural high school and started action to begin the Twin Falls county union.

Shearer has served on state and national banking committees and has shown great interest in local community affairs.

During his early days in Idaho he helped many farmers financially, claiming their durst periods of economic crisis.

"When farmers used to have sales and move out of the country, they always wanted to be paid in cash, so I would hold the notes of farmers buying goods at sale and give them cash so they could pay cash," he recalls.

"I had great faith in my farmer friends here, so many times I borrowed money from my former employer, C. C. Chickering, and loaned it to the farmers," he said.

It was before Mr. Chickering died that I received a letter from him thank-me in," he said. "I haven't been much of an outdoorsman since, especially for short hunting and fishing trips."

Experiment Uses Gamma Rays to Alter Bean Seed

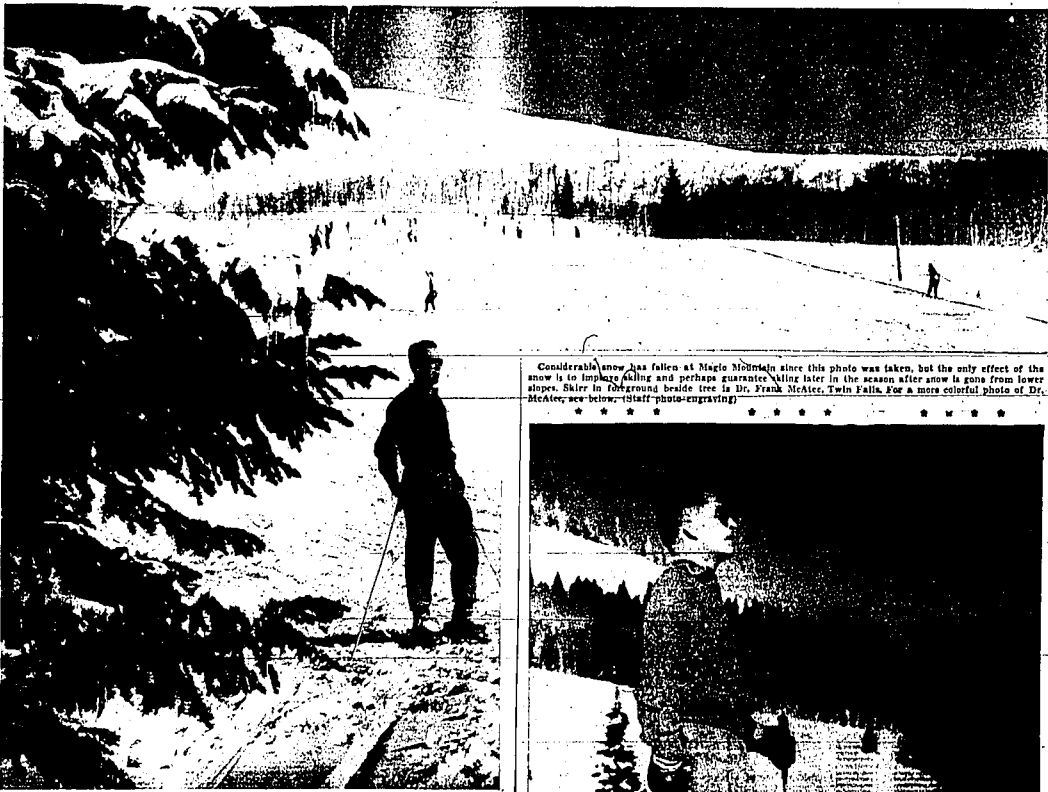

Through the use of gamma rays, according to Wilson, the gamma rays either rearrange or eliminate some of the genes in the chromosome of the bean seed. Genes determine the characteristics of the plants, and when certain genes are eliminated or rearranged, characteristics, such as the time of maturity, do not appear when the plants grow. The resulting characteristics of seed changed through gamma radiation are carried over to each generation and, do not revert to original parent form, Wilson said. The results of gamma radiation of bean seed cannot be predicted, Wilson explains, because there is no method of controlling the elimination of rearrangement of genes in the bean seed. It is simply left to chance. Wilson says scientists merely control the length of exposure to the rays. Most of the plants grown from seeds exposed to gamma rays are of little value in that they lack green coloring matter, are dwarfed, sterile, or have other deficiencies. Only one seed in one thousand exposed to gamma rays is usually of any value, the scientist says, but that one seed can pay big dividends in bean breeding. Seeds exposed to gamma rays are tested for germination in the greenhouse. Plants that germinate are grown to determine the extent of change, called mutation, then the desirable mutants are planted in field trials during the growing season at the University of Idaho experiment station at Kimberly, which is under the supervision of Marshall LeBaron. Through several generations of the mutant plants showing desirable characteristics, Wilson attempts through repeated selections to develop superior bean plants. Wilson takes dry bean samples that are to be irradiated to the Idaho Falls cannery kitchen and has them sealed in cans. He then takes the canned bean samples to Arcu where they are exposed to gamma rays. Gamma rays are measured in roentgen units. Wilson exposes the bean seeds in five different dosage levels from 3,000 to 30,000 roentgen units. Because of the different reactions of the seed to the gamma rays, Wilson is not able to say what amount of roentgen units will affect the bean seeds in any given manner, except that a dosage of more than 30,000 roentgen units stops germination. The work, Wilson is conducting, stimulates artificial nutrition. Nature's station near Arcu.

Gamma Rays Change Bean Plant

Ski Slope at Popular Recreation Area Is Located in Winter Wonderland

Use of Color Photograph More Than Just 'Routine'

Reproduction of a full color photograph in a newspaper requires plenty of advance planning and a good deal of extra work on the part of engraver and pressman, yet everyone connected with the newspaper derives much satisfaction from knowing that the very latest newspaper service is being offered readers. Color work in newspapers has been proclaimed the "hottest" development. It was only last Nov. 17 that the Times-News published the first full-color photograph ever appeared in a paper in Idaho. Last Tuesday, the second full-color photo appeared in the Times-News. This time the photo—of Guy H. Eberlein—was used in an advertisement. Those are the two photos that have been published. But as an indication of the "bugs" to be found in reproducing full-color photographs in newspapers, the Times-News tried—and failed—on two other full-color photos. As a matter of fact, the first attempt to reproduce a full-color photo in the Times-News ended up in its use of the picture as the usual black and white photo. Another attempt, this time with a Christmas picture, also failed. However, the editors of the Times-News believe high standards are essential for full-color photos and anything not really good is worse than nothing at all. Work on a color photo starts when the photo is taken. The Eberlein photo used for the color appearing today is not "just" another for action. So the photo is "posed" carefully with attention to having large areas of a solid color, such as red jacket or blue sky. From that point on, reproduction of a full color photo is largely a matter of precise work on the part of the engraver and pressman. To understand what is involved, it is necessary to know something of the process by which photos are reproduced in a newspaper. A picture taken at every photo, but it is taken through a screen. The screen determines whether a photo will look smooth or rather "grainy" when the final product appears in the paper. For example, the screen used for the photos on this page has 72 lines per inch running through it from two directions. This is a relatively "fine" screen for newspaper work. The Times-News screen is "coarser" at 55 lines. The lines in a 75-line screen intersect at .0025 inches in one square inch. Only those .0025 dots actually print ink on the surface of the paper. You can see the dots by using a magnifying glass. The negative with the screen in place is over a sheet of zinc metal on which a film of light-sensitive silver halide transfer the image on the negative to the preparation on the metal. Then through the use of acid the surface of the metal is etched away, leaving only the .0025 dots per square inch.

Almost $189,000 Monthly Payroll Is Reported for 477 Area U.S. Workers

At least 477 full-time federal employees in Magic Valley draw a steady monthly payroll of almost $189,000. Of that number, 452 employees work under the civil service act and will participate in the civil service commission's year-long observance of the 75th anniversary of the signing of the act which began during the week of Jan. 12 to 18. In the Tilt region of the commission, which encompasses Idaho, Washington, Oregon, Montana and Alaska, there were 107,029 employees as of June, 1937. There were 2,416, 243 U. S. civil service employees in the world in June, 1937. Twenty-six other employees are hired by federal agencies as full-time employees in Magic Valley. One hundred and seventy-seven workers are employed part-time, usually during the summer months, to bring the total wages to $255,000 per month. That total payroll qualifies the federal government as one of the largest employers in Magic Valley. Although the workers' jobs vary considerably and in most cases have no connection with one another. Federal employees work for agencies ranging from the forest service with 29 full-time workers and 75 part-time men in the department of agriculture which has at least eight separate small agencies employing full-time from one individual to 30 and several part-time employees. The largest federal agency employer in the valley is the bureau of reclamation in Rupert with 192 full-time workers, followed closely by the combined postoffices which employ 124 full-time men with 25 added during the Christmas season. More than half of the agencies do office work, although the majority of the total employees work outdoors. Several agencies not under civil service laws are included in the total number of federal employees, most of them army, navy or air force personnel stationed in Twin Falls for recruiting duties or reserve work. Select military personnel are stationed in Magic Valley. The civil service act was passed on Jan. 16, 1933, and was one of the major bills before congress that year. The act was designed to regulate and improve employees hired by the federal government and dispel the evils of the "spoils system." The civil service act provides that employees shall be hired on a merit basis and the ability to do the job. It also entitles employees to consideration for promotions and protection from dismissal on the same basis. The theme of the observance of the diamond jubilee is "Grow your government, through which federal agencies will attempt to acquire the American people with the part that civilian career employees play through their employment."

More Than Third of Elk Bagged Last Season Reported From Idaho County

By BETH RUEDENBAUGH
Idaho Fish and Game Department

More than a third of the elk taken in the state during last fall's hunting seasons were taken in Idaho county, according to a preliminary appraisal of more than 8,000 tag report cards returned by successful hunters.

Mr. Mohler, chief of game management, said these returns will be compiled with the questionnaire returns and tabulated for specific areas. With this type of information, the department can match supply and demand and give hunters better help in choosing the best spots.

But the average hunter prefers a hunt in the same area year after year, and it is sometimes rather difficult to convince him that he could do better a couple of ridges away. However, during the past few years the opening of new areas and extra encouragement of hunters to use them have resulted in a better distribution of the hunting lands in these localities. Southern Oregon county is an outstanding example for deer.

Manville it may be interesting to check the record on the 1957 elk, as arranged by counties. A respectable 34.6 per cent of the successful hunters reported they took their elk in Idaho county. Clearwater, with 34.3 per cent, was second with Shoshone county in third place with 31.2 per cent. Valley county was fourth with 25.3 per cent. Idaho county, of course, contains the Basin, Lochsa and Chamberlain Deer elk areas, plus a good many other sections of good elk country.

More detailed analysis will show what portion of the take came from each of these well-known sections.

Following Valley county come 13 others closely grouped with scores diminishing from 3.6 per cent to barely over one per cent. They are Camas, Boise, Lemhi, Latah, Elmore, Bonneville, Benewah, Fremont, Caribou, Custer, Adams, Blaine and Kootenai. Smaller numbers of elk were reported taken from 13 other counties. It should be remembered that the short seasons and one area where antlered elk only could be taken, affects the listings for the eastern Idaho counties. In that area, planned reduction of elk hunting is giving the herds an assist, while controlling some hunting.

Tabulated according to the time taken, the opening day kill is rather large in all areas, especially in the more accessible ones. Where access is more difficult, the kill is spread out over a longer period of time. For example, 58 per cent of the all-season harvest was taken on the first day in Caribou county where a three-day season and rather easy access both contributed to the initial effort. Owyhee county showed the highest first-day per-early in 1955. Largest percentage of elk taken last season were killed in Idaho county. (Fish and game department photo-staff engraving)

Ketchum C. of C. Board Has Meet

KETCHUM, Feb. 1—Officers of the Ketchum Chapter of Commerce met at the home of John Henry Foster, club president, Thursday evening and discussed projects they will sponsor the coming year.

Other members present were Howard Schwartz and John Babak, vice presidents; Dan Daniels, secretary; and Sam Williams, financial officer. Robert Glenn, executive board member.

The group favored the erection of banners across Ketchum's main street and the road to Sun Valley welcoming members of the various conventions held at the resort. They planned for banners to be placed on the race track up Warm Springs creek canyon.

It was voted by the group to let everyone "write his own ticket" as to the amount of dues he will pay. Cards will also be sent others interested, as associates members, to assist financially.

Agent Urging Planning for Seeding Farm

Planning seed requirements now and having the seed cleaned and ready for planting during days of labor shortages is desirable, according to C. W. Dazch, county agricultural agent.

Dazch says growers benefit from clean seed. They do themselves a good turn by having it tested and cleaned early, he says.

Clean seed means cleaner crops, says Robert Higgins, University of Idaho extension agronomist. Higgins reports that the agronomist advocates the use of Idaho certified seed or seed prepared and sold according to the state seed law. Dazch said he assures the grower of high quality, he adds.

Not all seed planted comes from commercial houses, the agronomist says. About 20 per cent is grown and used by the farmer and his neighbors.

Always clean and treat this seed before planting, he advises. Many common weeds produce hundreds of thousands of seeds in one plant. Most weed seeds can be removed by proper cleaning.

Idaho cleaning plants do an efficient job. The work takes time to avoid overloading at the busy season, Higgins advocates planning ahead.

Identifying Fungi Is Part of His Work

Wilson's work is only in its beginning stages and he says it will be several years before the results of this work are proved, or any new plants are released to farmers. But he says the program looks promising.

When does the modern-day woman find labor without the aid of an anesthetic? In the past, perhaps never before heard of in this part of the country, much less in Idaho. ### Use of Color Photo Is Not Just Routine only an small dab, say red, of the extra color is used because one whole four-color unit of color is required for the extra color. In printing the three colors needed for the full-color photo, the press capacity is reduced to 16 pages.

Even after the color engraving is placed on the three press plates, the work doesn't stop there. Final adjustments on the press take considerable time to get the engraving to print perfect. Standley says the press crew adjusts the continuous sheet of paper color through the press so that impressions from three engraving print exactly in the same place.
As an indication of what is involved, the continuous sheet of paper may travel as much as eight or 10 feet from the spot where the first engraving is printed to the spot where the second engraving prints exactly on top of the first and then there is another interval before the third engraving prints exactly on top of the first two.

In printing the color engravings, the yellow color, yellow, is printed first. Then the red ink comes on top of the yellow and finally, the engraving being printed in blue goes on top of the other two. Then with the color all printed on the paper, the paper goes through another plate which prints everything appearing in black.

Does Science Prove THE BIBLE WRONG?

Some people are convinced that it does. They read in the Bible, for example, that the stars are fixed in the "roof" of the world like luminous ornaments, which is the way they appeared to the unscientific eyes of the authors of Genesis. Latest scientific knowledge proves that stars are incandescent bodies moving in space.
Although willing to acknowledge that God created the universe, these scientific-minded folks refuse to believe the Biblical account in which apparently it all took place in six days. Also, they contend that the scientific evidences of evolution appear to contradict the Bible in this instance.
As far as Catholics are concerned, there can be no real conflict between scientific truth and religious truth. From the time of Moses down to the present day, science has opened the doors to many of the earth's physical secrets—fascinating in our own time, the fantastic secret of atomic energy. There will undoubtedly occur, in the unending march of scientific and technological discoveries. But the fact remains that science has yet to produce any evidence that discredits the basic truths of Holy Scripture.
The Bible, not begin with a book of religion, but a scientific textbook. The Book of Genesis should be regarded, therefore, not as a scientific explanation of the heavens and the earth, but as an expression of certain divine truths. These include such matters as the creation of all things... the creation of man as the object of God's special providence... the unity of the human race... the loss of man's original state of blessedness through original sin... God's

Special Tools Used to Break Frozen Ground

Digging for a broken water pipe when the ground is frozen is almost like digging through solid concrete as evidenced by Glenn Brown, running the jackhammer, Gene Harr, kneeling, and Leroy Harr, using the shovel. Often dynamite is used by city water department men to break up hard ground, according to J. H. Latimore, Twin Falls city manager. (Staff photo-contrast)

Water Department Workers Use Tools Of Miners When Ground Frozen Deep

The tools of miners—dynamite and jackhammers—are used sometimes by Twin Falls city water department employees to dig in frozen ground.

When frost is three feet in the ground the men are plagued with broken water pipes.

The water department hasn't had to use the miners' tools much this winter though, says City Manager Joseph H. Latimore. "This hasn't been a bad winter so far. We have made preparations for frozen pipes, but have had little trouble," Latimore adds.

The city water department's preparations include mostly removing shallow water meters and replacing them with pipes, billing the customers a flat rate. Water meters close to the surface freeze first in cold weather, Latimore notes.

Records kept from year to year show which water meters freeze when the weather gets cold and those meters are removed by the water department, some 300 meters this winter.

The water department takes great care to try to stop meters of pipes from freezing. The biggest worry is main pipelines which are usually about 30 inches in diameter. The pipelines running from the filter station south of Twin Falls to the city is 30 inches in diameter.

If one of the big pipes breaks, Latimore notes, many thousands of gallons of water escape. Not only is a great waste of water, but the water causes considerable damage and the pipes are hard to replace.

A broken main last year cost the city almost two and one-half million gallons of water, according to Latimore. But the break was not caused by freezing.

In the winter of 1948-49, frost went at least four feet into the ground, threatening to freeze main pipes.

With the threat of pipes freezing, the city water department resorted to many electric welders as it could and hooked them onto the pipes, heating pipes to keep them from freezing.

But when heating the pipes, caution had to be taken not to overheat them and melt less than 100 feet, Latimore notes.

Almost 3,000 water meters freeze during the 1948-49 winter and water mains were freezing even though water was running through them.

Most of the water pipes which froze were on the west side of the city where pipes are not buried deep because of rocky ground.

Much of the city's nearly 70 miles of water pipe is laid under streets. If pipes break, the water department has to dig up the streets to fix the pipes. When a big 24-inch pipe breaks, maintenance men usually have to replace the section of pipe that is broken and dig up at least five lengths of the 15-foot pipe to make repairs.

Another threat to the city water system is the possibility of water freezing in the canal which feeds the city filter plant.

Although the water level is changed often so ice will not freeze solid across the canal, it sometimes does freeze solid in extremely cold weather. The filter plant usually stops seldom freezes, according to Latimore.

College Gets Requests for Science Class

UNIVERSITY OF IDAHO, Moscow, Feb. 1.—Although only 43 to 45 applications can be accepted more than 100 letters are being received daily at the University of Idaho from high school science and mathematics teachers who desire to attend the second consecutive National Science Foundation summer institute to be held June 18 to August 1.

Dr. William H. Cone, head of the physical science department and director of the institute, said that the letters are being received from teachers throughout the nation. The institute is designed for study in the fields of chemistry, physics, botany, zoology and mathematics.

"We have run out of applications for the time being," Dr. Cone added. "More application blanks should be received shortly from the national science foundation in Ill. Rockville."

Each applicant will be screened before invitations to attend the institute will be mailed. These will go out about six weeks after the application deadline of Feb. 15.

"The first institute was held on the campus of the University of Idaho and proved so successful that the National Science Foundation asked the university to hold another institute this year."

"The purpose of the institute," according to Dr. Cone, "is to provide a greater interest in science careers by improving teaching in these fields in high schools. It is the hope of the sponsors that this opportunity to take additional work in the subject matter fields and to discuss the problems of science teaching will help relieve the shortage of scientific teachers."

Idaho is among 104 educational institutions in the nation which have been selected to take part in the teacher training program. Approximately 5,000 high school and 250 college teachers will attend the institute.

Teachers selected will receive stipends up to $15 a week plus dependency and travel allowances.

Sun Valley Has More Than Usual Whirl As Lucy and Desi Film Show at Resort

HAILEY, Feb. 1.—Lucille Ball and Desi Arnes and their supporting cast for "I Love Lucy" TV shows have had Sun Valley in a whirl the past week.

The going is so hot that the troupe arrived approximately 10 more than anticipated — have been real to us "I Love Lucy" show. Little Desi and Lucy haven't been much interested in it all, however. They spend most of their days teasting or just playing in the snow.

Lucy was happy the first day or so, with the fire blazing in the fireplace in her room, just as she had wanted it, and everyone being so friendly. But then she missed her dog — a white Samson. That was remedied when Deel brought her up with him and now Lucy is perfectly happy.

Bill Frawley and Vivian Vance (Fred and Ethel Mertz) and glamorous Fernando Lanza are all here. Also one of Idaho's own coy antics, raised in the Palmspring valley and now residing at the zoo in Idaho Falls, has made herself quite at home in the Sun Valley tentacles. Then there is Polly, the eccentric bear from the polar region.

Monday the entire troupe was on location atop Baldy mountain and the bright sunshine made picture-taking tops. Tuesday and Wednesday the clouds hid down several inches of snow over the area, making it necessary for the cast to stay close by the lodge.

Also here to participate in the fun is Governor Robert E. Smylie, who stayed over after attending the Panjone Northwest Publishers' Association conference, as Chief Wile Buck, to greet his new friend and fellow Indian "Chief Laugh in Look Book" as Deel was dubbed when smoking the pipe of peace at the Pocatello railway station with Chief Laballe Pocatello of the Shoshone-Bannock tribe on his way to Sun Valley.

Mr. and Mrs. Gary Cooper and their teen-age daughter, Maria, and Norma Shearer also are here to watch the filming of the Deella production.

What do the natives think of Lucy? After the three-day-of-shooting on Baldy, one of the Sun Valley employes' wives asked her husband anxiously as soon as he reached home, "What's the like?"

"Well," was his reply, "while she was acting her part in the picture she reminded me a lot of someone here at home."
