Nuclear Bomb Safeguards Are Fool Proof, McElroy Replies to Soviet Charges

WASHINGTON, April 19 (AP)—Secretary of Defense Neil McElroy said Saturday the system designed to prevent an unintended, unauthorized nuclear bomb strike against Russia is "fool proof." He and Gen. Nathan Twining, chairman of the joint chiefs of staff, were emphatic in telling newsmen that absolute safeguards exist against incidents such as a Soviet foreign minister Gromyko claims could set off atomic war. The two leaders struck back from a meeting of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization in Paris, left the plain impression they are no reason to change nuclear safeguards under which atomic air command (SAC) bombers are at constant readiness on the ground.

Wet Filing to Open Tuesday for Farms

RUPERT, April 19.—Sen. Henry Dworshak was advised Saturday that veterans can apply beginning at 2 p.m. Tuesday for 35 farming units to be homesteaded on the North Side pumping division of the Mininko project. The farm units range from 106 to 160 irrigable acres for a total of 4,763 acres in addition to the units which have been homesteaded in the past year. The land is located west and northwest of Rupert from 6 to 12 miles. The 90-day filing period, which opens Tuesday, will extend to July 21, Dworshak said. Exchange applicants until the act of Aug. 13, 1953, have a priority right of selection. Preference is given to veterans who have served at least 90 days since World War I and have honorably discharged. They also must have two years of farming experience or equivalent schooling and have $4,500 for development work. Further information may be obtained from the bureau of reclamation office in Rupert, according to Dworshak.

Unification Is Discussed for Engineer Unit

Problems involved in unifying engineering groups throughout the state were discussed Saturday afternoon by members of the Idaho Society of Professional Engineers, met in Twin Falls for their annual spring quarterly meeting. Harold L. Lacey, president of the society, said he has been invited to explain Saturday night that many civil, chemical, electrical, mechanical, mining and other engineers are being absorbed into specialized organizations but no national all-embracing group. Lacey pointed out that the work of the specialized engineering groups is being formed into national and state groups. The state society's board of directors met Friday night before the general business session of day morning and afternoon at city hall. Lacey said the group also discussed the fact that the Idaho society would be 50 years old in 1960. He said the board is considering steps for observing the anniversary at Friday's board meeting and by the business sessions Saturday and Sunday, Idaho Falls, state president. A banquet was held by the group Saturday evening at St. Edward's school. Lacey stated that he will have the banquet program. James Cunningham was master of ceremonies. Churchill Said to Be Having New Illness

LONDON, April 19 (AP)—Sources close to the family of Sir Winston Churchill said tonight the former prime minister is having new attacks of illness that alarmed his household. The 83-year-old wartime leader was reported to be better now although not entirely recovered. The informants would not disclose the nature of the latest illness or say why it had not been announced. Churchill recovered only last month from a serious attack of pneumonia and pleurisy. He was stricken while vacationing on the French Riviera. He returned to England April 3 and went immediately to Chartwell, his country estate in nearby Kent county. On April 6, his secretary reported that Churchill had returned to his White House later this month. Apparently some days later Churchill fell ill again and a personal physician, Lord Moran, was hurriedly summoned. Informants said few persons were told of Moran's visit although he remained in attendance several days. Lord Moran is a physician who has left Churchill Friday. Two male nurses were reported to be still in attendance. The former prime minister has been falling ill since 1951 and another in 1953. After his speech in London, he was hospitalized and without the power of speech for a time. Neither of his cerebral attacks was publicly announced although Churchill has since confirmed both illnesses.

Wild fluctuations in potato futures trading that has run the price of apud to up or down as much as $2.35 per hundredweight in a week's time is posing a threat to Idaho's potato industry. Robert L. Reichert, state agricultural commissioner, warned Saturday. In a lecture, Reichert said the apud industry is "having the same trouble, due to the trading of potatoes on the mercantile exchange, as we have had in the past with onions." Reichert pointed to a stable price for apud, charging the price on the mercantile exchange "has been run up as much as $2.35 a hundred in a week and dropped just as fast depending upon the month the potatoes are destined for delivery."

U.N. Readies Debate On H-Bomb Charges

UNITED NATIONS, N. Y., April 19 (AP)—U. N. security council delegates Saturday prepared for debate on the Soviet Union's charges—denied in Washington—that U. S. bombers were carrying hydrogen bombs Monday on the Soviet request that it study "urgent measures" to prevent flights of American jet bombers armed with nuclear weapons toward Soviet borders. U. N. observers predicted that the charges probably would end as have similar Communist charges in the past with overwhelming U. N. rejection. U. S. delegate Henry Cabot Lodge, council president this month, called the Soviet charges "a gross violation of international law." Soviet delegate Arkady A. Sobolev said a council session Saturday but that the Soviet government officials Monday showed they preferred Monday, thus postponing time to check with their government. Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko just made a charge at a Moscow news conference Friday. He said his government knew U. S. planes with nuclear bombs flew over polar regions toward the Soviet Union. Gromyko said nuclear war could result from the "smallest error of an American technician."

Texans Still Dig After Being Told Treasure Map Was Joke

DALLAS, Tex., April 19.—News that their "treasure map" was a prank produced 50 years ago by two boys who had been buried in the ground, did not stop Texans from digging the digger fever of the Gaylor family. The story of Euzenio Gaylor, 77, said they would continue searching away at the 26-foot shaft under their house as long as the driver of the truck, Miguel Rodriguez, tells them to dig. The Gaylor family said they didn't dig yesterday because rain water seeped into the hole faster than they could dig. Dallas lawyer John Plath Green, whose father George A. Green built the house in 1904, told reporters that he had been told by his grandfather that the excavation would find the treasure. When he moved away from the house, he was told to dig. "When we moved away from the house, he was told to dig. "When we moved away from the house, he was told to dig."

Experts Predict Navy Satellite to Orbit 200 Years

WASHINGTON, April 19.—The navy's Vanguard satellite will orbit the Earth for at least 200 years, Dr. John P. Hagen said today.

Hagen, director of the Vanguard satellite program, said long observation will be necessary to determine a more accurate prediction of the life of the small sphere sent aloft on March 17.

In a speech to American Society of Newspaper Editors, Hagen said the satellite is slowing down at an almost unmeasurable rate because of the dimensions of its orbit, 405 1/2 miles away at its nearest point to the Earth and 2463 miles out at its greatest distance.

Hagen said even at this distance from the Earth, there is a small amount of drag on satellites moving at a speed of 17,800 miles a second.

In time, this drag will cause the Vanguard to fall back toward Earth, Hagen said, "but we now know that Vanguard will be with us for at least 200 years."

Britain Denies Russia Aiding Summit Cause

ELLSBERRY, PORT, England, April 19.—Foreign Secretary Geoffrey Lloyd today accused the Russians of hampering preparatory work for a possible summit conference.

It made the charge in a speech at a Conservative party rally in his Cheshire district.

Lloyd criticized Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko for failing to sit down with the three Western ambassadors in Moscow to begin preparatory work on a summit meeting. Gromyko has seen three of the ambassadors separately but formal discussions have yet to begin.

Lloyd deplored the Soviet government's accusation that U. S. planes with nuclear weapons were flying over the Arctic in the direction of Russian territory.

Lloyd said the Soviet government chose the precise moment when the West hoped summit preparatory work would get started to deliver a violent attack on the United States.

Veterans Get Four Choices For Payments

A World War II veteran holding national service life insurance (NSLI) may choose any one of four different methods for the payment of his policy's benefits after death, reports the VA representative Arnold Helweg.

Helweg says the four options are: lump sum payment; equal monthly installments for three to 20 years; in multiples of one year; equal monthly installments for the life of the beneficiary, with 20 installments guaranteed, and equal monthly installments for the life of the beneficiary, with the total payments guaranteed to equal the face amount of the policy.

Helweg points out that if the insured chooses option No. 1, the beneficiary may elect any of the other options at the time of settlement.

However, Helweg says, options No. 3 and 4 are not available if certain types of beneficiaries, such as corporations or estates are named as policy holder.

Further information can be obtained from the local VA office.

WASHINGTON (NEA)—President Eisenhower's press conference statement that it's more normal to be abnormal for the cost of living to go up while business levels down...

low that farmers put their herds. This reduced supply. Prices started rising through the normal abatement of winter season.

So food prices have had little to do with general business level. On commodities other than food there are seasonal fluctuations just as on food.

Clothing and other soft goods prices usually rise in the fall and winter for Christmas trade. Prices on hard goods like automobiles also go up in the fall when new models are introduced.

This time, all these increases happened to coincide with the general business level dropping to 201 million. The United States has been through one major depression and the first recession in the last 30 years.

In the big drop of 1933, GNP, translated to 1927 prices level, dropped from 185 to 123 billion dollars.

In the same year, index of industrial production dropped from 58 in 1929 to 31 in 1933. The 1947-48 average taken as 100 for this index number.

In this depression, the cost of living index dropped from 73 in 1929 to 100 in 1933. This was considered normal economic behavior.

The country went into another, but smaller (fall-spun from 1937 to 1938) GNP dropped from 197 to 181 billion dollars. The production index dropped from 61 to 48.

Cost of living index dropped from 61 in 1937 to 60 in 1938. In 1939 and 1940, this was considered normal.

The world war 11 years of course, everything went up. In the immediate postwar slump, GNP dropped from 332 billion dollars in 1945 to 289 billion in 1947. Industrial production dropped from 107 in 1945 to 100 in 1947.

This reflected the water shortage. It was not just anything about insects to rabbits.

He can't be very selective in his diet for two main reasons. He is among the slower moving animals when it comes to getting into striking distance, and he has a large consumer demand for goods and services not available in war time.

In the smaller 1944-45 recession, GNP dropped from 325 to 285 billion dollars. Industrial production dropped from 104 to 97. Cost of living index dropped 102 to 100.

This was also the inflation caused by shortages and pent-up consumer demand for goods and services not available in war time. This was abnormal.

Is That So! Copperhead Has Heat Detecting Apparatus

One of my first encounters with a venous snake was in a quarry in Massachusetts. A copperhead glared at me, and then I saw a snake's head raised nearly part of its body looking at me.

Benson Wants To Run Dairy Help Program

WASHINGTON, April 19.—Secretary of Agriculture Benson is ready to surrender authority to run the government dairy industry aid program.

He has notified congress in his position in this respect in voicing objections to the program. Such a program would be run by an independent board of producers and processors appointed by the president from nominees proposed by milk producers.

Such a plan is being considered by the National Milk Producers Federation and the National Grange.

Would Set Up Board

The dairy board would set daily support prices, dispose of surpluses, collect assessments from dairymen to finance surplus purchase, stabilize, and impose production quotas.

In a report to the agriculture committee on the proposal, the agriculture department said the responsibility for surplus purchase and disposal should be continued under one unified agency.

The report said the proposal did not point the best way toward stability for milk prices.

The self-help principle in its broad sense is a desirable objective for all agriculture, the department said. "Researching this goal for a better adjustment between production and consumption, more efficient production methods, and greater freedom from government regulations and interference, and less dependence upon surplus purchase price supports and related programs."

The house committee is considering adding the dairy proposal to a general farm bill covering new or revised programs for cotton, rice, wheat, and as well as extension of present programs for wool and for disposal of farm surpluses.

"Above all else I want my living room to be in its own right. I don't want it to look like hundreds of other living rooms. I want it to have individuality. How do you go about expressing your own individuality in your home?' By following our good taste and preference in color, in style, and in furnishing that fill your needs, and by giving your imagination full rein to achieve the effect your taste dictates.

Area Chamber Given Answer On Legislation

BURLEY. April 19.—The congressional action committee of the Chamber of Commerce received a letter Friday from Rep. Hamer. Judge in response to recommendations made last week to Congress on a tax cut.

The chamber recommended no tax cut at this time if it meant a deficit in the national budget.

"The outlook of your letters and Cooley have been received," Judge wrote. "I certainly will not comment you and the rest of your chamber group for initiating the study of matters pending before the congress."

"I am particularly pleased to have your recommendations on legislation and find myself wholeheartedly in agreement with the expressions contained in your two letters," Judge continued.

"With the effect which the federal government has today on each and every one of us, this is most tragic that more people do not engage in the efforts which you have undertaken," he concluded.

"The letter is only one of many received by the chamber in its efforts to be heard in congress. Many people have the idea that their letters are not read but, without exception, every recommendation and request that has been made of any statesman in Washington, by the local chamber, has been acknowledged, according to Truman Bradley, chairman of the congressional committee.

Portable Instrument Shelter Brings Inquires to Boulder

UNIVERSITY OF IDAHO. Moscow, April 19.—The oft-repeated adage of building a better mousetrap still works, according to a University of Idaho professor who has built a better portable instrument shelter to house scientific instruments in the field.

"The world may not be beating a path to the door of Kenneth E. Hungerford, associate professor of wildlife, but the postman has been delivering inquiries sent from other scientists throughout the world who are interested in adapting his shelter design to their studies.

Standard instrument shelters are heavy, bulky and not adapted for delivering inquiries sent from other scientists throughout the world who are interested in adapting his shelter design to their studies.

"We want to find out how much to measure effectively the various temperatures on a study slope, a number of recording instruments were erected at various elevations. This meant juggling heavy-louvered weather stations over rough terrain.

To overcome a top-of-war up the mountainside with the permanent type shelters, Hungerford designed his own, using light materials. Special aluminum screening covers the four sides of the structure. It allows an easy flow of air through the shelter but will keep out rain that may harm delicate recording instruments. The shelter may be knocked down for easy packing and assembled on the site with several screws.

B-47's at Mountain Home Ready to Fly at Any Time

A B-47 bomber of the ninth bombardment wing is shown in front of Mountain Home air force base's 27-foot high control tower. The B-47's are the main airplane used by the ninth bombardment wing of the strategic air command to perform their mission as a deterrent to war.

or, if that fails, to destroy the enemy's long range air force and their will to fight. The bombers carry nuclear weapons, some of which apparently are stored at the base although officers just don't talk about them. (Air force photo—staff engraving)

KC-97 air refueling tankers on the runway at Mountain Home air force base are shown with the refueling booms folded up to the tail when they rest during normal flight. The small airplanes on the end of the booms control the booms to make contact with the B-47's when refueling in flight. The tankers carry kerosene for the jet bombers so the spare wing tanks are used for gasoline for their own engines. On the ground, it takes about an hour and a half to fuel a B-47. (Air force photo—staff engraving)

A B-47 bomber fills its tanks from a KC-97 "flying filling station." The fuel is transmitted down the long boom from the KC-97 to the filling port in the nose of the B-47. A complete load of jet fuel can be transmitted from the tanker to the bomber in eight minutes. Refueling operations such as this are common over Magic Valley from planes stationed at Mountain Home air force base. The in-flight refueling permits the bombers to fly many thousands of miles further. (Air force photo—staff engraving)

B-47 Wing at Mountain Home Base Ready for Combat on Brief Notice

"We are ready to fight 24 hours a day, seven days a week," says Col. Elmer D. Preston, Jr., commander of Mountain Home air force base.

Explanation of Colonel Preston's words by Maj. Leo P. McDermott, base information services officer, indicates that upon notice of an attack on the United States by hostile forces, men and equipment—namely, atom bomb-carrying B-47 jet-propelled bombers stationed at Mountain Home—could be en route to the home bases of the hostile forces in only 15 minutes.

"And the men are ready at any time to make that move," Major McDermott adds.

The men are members of the strategic air command's ninth bombardment wing, composed of 45 B-47 bombers, 20 KC-97 four-engine, propeller-driven tanker refueling airplanes and approximately 2,000 men.

Their mission is two-fold, says Major McDermott. First, they are to act as a deterrent force by maintaining a combat-ready force poised to strike and second, if that fails, they are to destroy an enemy's long-range air force, his war-making potential and his will to fight.

The ninth bombardment wing is the only combat force stationed at Mountain Home on the entire base revolves around the wing's mission. The job is big because the pilots who fly the B-47's carry combat training to keep them proficient and the B-47's and other equipment must be kept in constant state of readiness.

So a force of 4,000 persons, consisting of civilian employees and military personnel, are employed at the base to perform the related jobs to keep the ninth bombardment wing capable of performing its mission.

Most of the men are part of the ninth wing, which, according to the wing commander, Col. Robert H. DeShazo, is a self-sustaining unit. The extra force of men is required as a "housekeeping" unit for the base. In all, there are mechanics, electricians, cooks, personnel men, intelligence men, supply men, transportation men, radio operators, communications experts, men who handle the training equipment besides the airplanes, and supervisors and commanders to control the entire operation.

Civilians work in the officers club and non-commissioned officers' club, base hotel, teach in the base grade school, repair some highly scientific equipment, build housing and air force buildings and various other duties.

"The expense of the entire operation is rather high," says Major McDermott. "We have a monthly payroll of one and a quarter million dollars, each B-47 costs three and one-half million dollars and each KC-97 costs nearly two million dollars. In all, it costs 536 million dollars just for the equipment. It outfit the ninth bombardment wing. Then each new pilot has had training valued at $60,000 and each mechanic's training costs $6,000," he adds.

One of the two most important crew want to go to a movie, they all jobs on the base is that of the men and must go or if two just want to sit who are charged with caring for and clean weapons. Although air force officials make little mention of the destructive weapons, newsmen who visited the base last Monday as part of an open house sponsored by the air force observer corps, could deduce from the barred wire fence and little else since one area is completely sealed off from the remainder of the base.

B-47 bombers are on alert status with bombs in their doors open ready to be loaded with a bomb or bombs and fly away in an instant. The airplanes are parked on the parking area of the runways, the ground, gas tanks full and only pilots and bombs required before they can be flown away to perform their mission.

Air police guard the base. During the daytime they patrol their posts armed with a rifle or pistol, but at night, the guards are accompanied by German shepherds dogs trained to attack men.

Thirty of the entry dogs are used by the air police and have such senses they replace five men. The dogs are trained to obey only one. They guard highly strategic spots. A demonstration of the dogs by the air force showed them trained well enough so they will attack a person on command or work as pa-

The crew of a B-47 bomber at Mountain Home air force base stands with the equipment used while flying. The brief case at the foot of the man at right is full of manuals and flight check lists which he must use while flying the bomber and each pilot has a similar amount plus the books in the cardboard box in the foreground. trol dogs and find persons trying to sneak into an area or up to the guard.

The dogs are trained to march in formation with the alertmen. Some of the dogs masters have trained the dogs to do tricks, such as walk on their hind legs, bow to an audience, play dead or even ride on the master's back.

But they are all vicious dogs and will tear a man's arm off if given a chance, says Sgt. Eugene Baubitz, who is in charge of all the dogs.

The dogs are exercised daily by their masters, running an obstacle course of high fences, narrow walkways, tunnels and deep holes.

It takes both the men and the dogs in good shape," says Sgt. Baubitz.

He adds that the men assigned to the dogs become attached to the animals and often will resist to stray with the dog.

When pilots at Mountain Home are not on an alert status, they fly almost every other day, making trips to the Pacific ocean for runway practice, out over the desert for bomb run practice, to cities within the United States for navigation practice or just around the country for refueling practice.

But each flight is a major operation, according to the bomber pilots. For a seven-hour flight, it takes 15 hours of preparation and four hours of cleanup afterwards.

Because of the expense involved with each flight and the time, mock B-47 cockpits are used to simulate flying for training purposes, Colonel Hadley explains.

The training program includes a mock cockpit where a pilot can practice flying and operators of the simulator can cause certain malfunctions to occur such as an engine stopping or catching fire or even for the plane to crash. The pilots have to cope with each situation or emergency, and are graded on what they do, says Lt. Col. James H. Hadley, base training officer.

"The simulators are so real, that it gives the pilots valuable, yet inexpensive training. If a pilot had to get training to combat an engine fire from actual experience the expense would be prohibitive, Colonel Hadley adds.

Another trained simulated cockpit provides aircraft observers with radar navigation practice. The observers can see their course on radar and even have simulated targets of actual targets in Russia which the observers have to learn to recognize and guide the bombers to.

Still another simulator gives the observers practice in tracking targets with their 20 millimeter guns in which they can practice shooting the target.

The simulated cockpits and controls are so real that a bomber crew could practice in one of the cockpits

Small Scale Air Breakfast Draws 12 Planes to Murphy Hot Springs

A good excuse to fly and lots of fun are the main reasons a group of Twin Falls flying enthusiasts has been holding "air breakfasts" this year. Already the pilots and their families have taken two early morning flights, one to the new Thousand Springs airport and the other last Friday to Murphy's Hot Springs. They've planned another half dozen flights, according to Edward McCarty, Kimberly, who makes a point of being included in all of the flights.

McCarty explains that the participants are not members of any aviation club, but only enthusiastic fliers and their families who like to enjoy the early morning flights. He says it all began when several pilots were sitting around at the airport after a civil air meeting, discussing flying as a favorite topic of pilots.

Dr. Royal S. Cutler, Twin Falls, invited that a group get together for an air breakfast and everyone agreed and unanimously appointed McCarty as organizer. McCarty's flights are now scheduled successively for American Falls, Wendover, Pocatello, Logan, Stanley and Magic Valley. They are scheduled every Sunday, because Dr. Cutler says that these days off from his job, McCarty says.

The recent flight to Murphy's Hot Springs began between 7 a.m. and 8 a.m. for the pilots, depending upon what type of airplane they flew. The flight shortly after 7 a.m. and his little airplane would only about 90 to 100 miles per hour. Pilots like Dr. Cutler who flew first at speeds up to 150 miles per hour. A Cessna 172 or LeCair C. Summer hour. It's because of the different speeds of the airplanes that no one ever flies together on the air breakfast trips, McCarty says, but all try to arrange to get to the destination at all times.

With nothing in the background except more desert, it appears there should have been plenty of room to park 12 private planes (down last Sunday) in the small airport near Murphy's Hot Springs. But the 12 planes crowded the cleared parking area. A group of Twin Falls fliers started their own "air breakfast" just for each breakfast. The 12 planes flown to the Owyhee desert spot last Sunday carried 35 persons. On a previous Sunday, five planes were flown

Life in MAGIC VALLEY

A collection of more than 4,000 arrowheads, in addition to other rare Indian relics, has been gathered by Mr. and Mrs. James Blacksten, Kitaco, Idaho, over a period of 24 years. Their son, John Blacksten, has helped Blacksten be a small boy.

Blacksten believes he has the most unusual, complete and largest collection in southern Idaho and most of it has been found by the family.

In the assembly are large and small arrowheads, spearheads, sewing needles known as "bone awls," dills, a flute, carved from bone from an ancient wing which is three inches long, arrowhead chipper, pottery bowls, mortars and pestles.

The bone needles were used by the Indians to sew clothes from animal skins.

The collection has mostly been found along the Snake river between Bliss and Indian Cove and on the Brannan desert.

In addition they have many yuma arrowheads, war clubs, axes and a hand made link-hook log chain, which was found on the west near PILGRIM SPRINGS, south of PADADENE VALLEY, where an Indian massacre occurred 180 years ago.

The collection contains transparent obsidian chipper, hand made baskets and fish hooks. The largest arrowhead is 12 1/2 inches long and is really a spear head. The smallest is about five-eighths of an inch long.

A ceremonial thunder-bird, shaped like an eagle head and a talon as finished which was used by a tribe before the ice age is proudly displayed by Blacksten.

Three thousand of the finest arrowheads are framed. All have been carefully segregated in shapes and sizes by John.

One show piece is a drill with a buffalo head, another a red bone artifact which is brought from Ohio by Blacksten's father and a third came from Arizona and was given to the family by Jim Morrow, GLENNVILLE, FEELBY.

Robson Bonnicksen, Filer, is an enthusiastic admirer of the Blacksten collection.

The framed arrowheads are "bearers," white, pink, tan, brown, black, with many different markings. Among them are the so-called Bliss points, which were found near Bliss. Another interesting item is the consisting of Hudson Bay company beads which was the possession of the Indians and was probably received by trading.

According to Blacksten, many tribes of the Shutes and Barocks roamed this territory as their hunting grounds.

Mr. Nell Ortwein, Seattle, daughter of the Blackstens, formed a picture of a tepee, a tree, an Indian, a mountain and the sun out of arrowheads for one of the interesting pictures in the family living room.

AS YOUR MINISTER SEES IT

"The Generosity of God"

By W. ELTON GREEN, Pastor, First Church of the Nazarene

The Psalmist declared, "They shall be abundantly satisfied with the fatness of thy house; and thou shalt make them drink of the river of thy pleasures."

The words "abundant," "abundance" and "abundantly" occur many times in scripture, and for the most part reveal the generosity of God—sometimes in relation to His creation and frequently in connection with His attitude toward those who have been redeemed.

In creation we hear Him say: "Let the waters bring forth abundantly the moving creatures that hath life; and fowls that may fly above the earth in the open firmament of heaven."

God's grace is presented to us as overflowing. The life He gives is a well of water springing up and flowing out in rushing rivers. On Mount Sinai, Moses heard the voice from heaven proclaim: "The Lord, the Lord God, merciful and gracious, long-suffering, and abundant in goodness and truth."

The apostle Peter could write of Him, "Blessed be the God and Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, who hath directed us to the grace and first place in the local and second place in the district 'Voice of Democracy' speech contest. That year he attended the state YFPA convention in Pocatello, Idaho.

He started his high school career as president of the freshman class and during the year was in the state YFPA milk justice contests and attended the state convention in Moscow. As a sophomore he won first in the local and district YFPA speech contest and first place in the local and second place in the district "Voice of Democracy" speech contest. That year he attended the state YFPA convention in Pocatello, Idaho.

As a junior he took first in the district United Nations speech contest which was sponsored by the YFPA. He was awarded a trip to New York City to visit the U. N. While here he placed second in the national contest. He also won the YFPA state farmers degree and placed first in the local and second in the district "Voice of Democracy" speech contest. He also won the YFPA state farmers degree and placed first in the local and second in the district "Voice of Democracy" speech contest.

As a senior he took first in the local and second in the district constitution speech contest, an excellent record for the second time in the district speech festival and a superior in the state on original oratory.

He is president of the Theopians, treasurer of the YFPA and works on both the annual and the school paper. He also attended the state YFPA convention in Boise.

After Big Breakfast at Murphy's Hot Springs, Some Fliers Still Found Energy to Swim in Resort Pool approximately the same time.

Twelve airplanes flew in for last Sunday's breakfast. In record, according to McCarty, only five planes showed up when the pilots went to Thousand Springs and last year at smaller flights only four or five planes made the trip.

"It's like old home week when all the pilots meet at the designated spot," McCarty relates. "Often no one knows just who will show up, so all the pilots and their families make the rounds and greet each other."

The airport at Murphy's is operated by the county and is only a landing strip cleared of sagebrush, brush and weeds with a small fence. The 12 planes which landed there nearly filled the small parking strip and with all of the pilots and their families it "looked like LaGuardia field," McCarty explains.

The airport is nearly two miles from Murphy's resort, the road leading down a steep canyon grade. Murphy provided a truck to carry the pilots and their families to the resort and back to the airport.

The pilots and their families enjoyed the trip down the hill about as much as anything, commented McCarty, even though the descent proved somewhat uncomfortable.

Mr. and Mrs. Pat Murphy had a breakfast of scrambled eggs, fried potatoes, ham, bacon, hot biscuits and coffee waiting for the fliers when they arrived.

"We had it all arranged for them," says Murphy. "They made reservations and we knew approximately when they would get in. But before we could feed them everyone had to look the place over. They inspected by satellite general, inspected about 10th in the river, inspected all of the acreage and other Indian artifacts and pioneer equipment and some just flopped in the sunlight and relaxed.

"We were able to feed them all, but it took two shifts," Murphy smiled.

Murphy has been operating the resort located in a canyon on the bank of the Brunauer river since 1937 when he bought the location from Kitty Wilkinson who raised purebred horses on the spot. He built a dance hall and bar, his own house where the fliers were fed, a water turbine generator to supply electricity for the building, swimming pool fed by a warm spring and several cabins for tourists.

The warm springs in the feature of the place and even provides heat for Murphy's house, he says.

Murphy spends a lot of his time during the winter trapping wild animals and last winter in one month he says he trapped 25 bobcats and 10 mountain lions.

After breakfast some of the younger pilots swam in the pool, and most everyone else just sat around and watched.

By 11 a.m. when everyone had rested, they climbed aboard the truck for the return trip to their airplanes and without any fuss or bother at the airport, they bid each other farewell, climbed aboard their airplanes and flew in their own separate way, some pilots headed for a ride around the country, some planning to go straight home.

"We have a real good time on these trips," McCarty says. "Although they are not far away but a long time, everyone enjoys to enjoy it. It is spontaneous event because no one really knows what to expect."

Of the 12 planes that made the trip three were from the Twin Falls. Flying club, four were rented and five were privately owned.

Included among the persons making the trip was Lloyd Dean, the "dean" of pilots in Twin Falls. He began flying almost 30 years ago in Twin Falls and has been the inspiration for most of the pilots who make the air breakfast trips.

The semi-regular air breakfasts are scheduled so they will not interfere with the breakfasts planned by the state aeronautical department.

Dr. Cutler explains. The state breakfasts are held on a bigger scale, he comments, but the recent trip to Murphy's involved more airplanes show up.

Hours of Practice Result in Snappy Girls' Drill Teams Here

Hours of practice before school starts in the morning resulted in this snappy drill team, and one composed of seniors, performed at home basketball games and other school events. Uniforms feature the school colors of blue and white. Names and year's teams have requirements for participation in the drill team is a satisfactory grade average. This drill team has been selected already. (Staff photo-ensaving)

Long Hours of Work Results in One of Best Girls Drill Teams at High School

Many long hours of work under the direction of Mrs. Leona Larsen have developed for Twin Falls high school what school officials believe to be the finest precision girls' drill team in the state.

Called the Bruettes, the two teams are made up of girls from the junior and senior classes. They perform precision drills and appeared at home basketball games and other festive events.

Mrs. Larsen, high school girls physical education teacher, directs the girls and helps them plan their routines, selects the girls for the team and generally supervises.

She is considered by school officials as one of the best physical education teachers available, and most of the credit for the girls' outstanding performance should be given to her, according to V. L. Lefebvre, principal of Twin Falls high school.

The teams were first organized last year and the girls worked under the direction of Mrs. Leona Fenwick, the wife of a junior high school teacher, but not employed by the school herself.

Mrs. Larsen began working with the girls last fall after school began. Prior to that she had been picked in the junior high school for 11 years.

Members of this year's senior team had already been picked by the time Mrs. Larsen began working with them. They were chosen in tryouts conducted last spring by Mrs. Fenwick. Mrs. Larsen conducted tryouts for the junior class team. Although 74 girls turned out, only 20 could be picked for the team.

The senior team has 25 members, three of them juniors.

As soon as the girls were chosen for the team last fall, they began working up routines and designing and making their uniforms. Mrs. Larsen says.

The routines are the different patterns of precise drill which the girls follow in their performances. The teams were divided into committees at the beginning of last year and each committee was charged with perfecting on paper a routine which the whole group later learned in practice.

The senior group has six routines and the juniors have three. All routines last from five to six minutes. Mrs. Larsen explains that it takes from three to five weeks for the

Mrs. Leona Larsen directs both the junior and senior girls' drill teams since last September. She has been working with the teams only since last September, but already the teams have been selected on education and health in the high school and directs the team in the mornings before school starts. (Staff photo-ensaving)

All of the uniforms were designed and made by the girls at no cost to the school, according to Lefebvre.

The girls practice their routines every morning before school from 7:45 to 8:45 a. m., Mrs. Larsen says. The practice at the beginning of the year consisted of teaching the girls the fundamentals of marching and the various basic steps and later they began working on the routines.

Mrs. Larsen gained background knowledge of dancing and marching at Nebraska State Teachers college at Kearney, Neb., and at the University of Wyoming.

She conducts five practice sessions a week, working with the senior group on Monday, Wednesday and Friday morning and with the junior group on Tuesday and Thursday mornings.

She also has to work with the girls during the performances to get them organized and in their places. During performances, the girls are guided by a leader from each group. The senior team is led by Sharon Zlatnik and Claudette Mendola is the leader of the junior team.

Whole signals are used by the leaders to guide the teams.

Only one routine was presented by each drill team at basketball games. Mrs. Larsen explains, because of the length of the routines. Besides the home basketball games, the girls also performed during tournaments at Buhl and Minidoka county high schools and once in a season game at Burley. They also performed at one home football game last fall.

They intend to be ready to perform at several home football games late fall and all of the basketball games.

At the end of the basketball season the senior team disbanded because the girls do not plan to give anymore performances. The junior team will work together again next year and Mrs. Larsen has just completed selection of a group of sophomores for next year's big six conference.

All the schools of the Junior Tri-Conference have similar girls' drill teams as do some of the smaller schools such as Burley and Minico. But Twin Falls school officials contend their own school team is the best in the state.

"The girls' drill team is very worthwhile because it renews the activity of the girls' athletic associations throughout the state," comments Lefebvre. "It was almost inactive before," he explains.

The girls' required to have satisfactory grades and not be absent from school an undue amount.

County Declared Free of Disease

HAILEY, April 19.—Blaine County has been declared a modified certified brucella-free area by the animal disease eradication division and agricultural research service of the U. S. department of agriculture.

County commissioners have received a certificate effective from Feb. 15, 1938, to Feb. 25, 1939.

Blaine County Agent James Eakin said that to obtain the certificate the disease must have been reduced to not more than one per cent in herd to exceed five per cent of the herds, as indicated by official testing and other approved procedures conducted under the state department program.

There are 258 herds in the county and a total of 11,226 cattle, excluding steers and steer calves, he said.

SHOOT HELD

Mechanics Keep Bombers Ready to Fly; Air Police and Dogs Protect Entire B-47 Base at Mountain Home

Repairing the intricate mechanisms of the jet motors of a B-47 bomber is Sgt. George Trucha of Mountain Home Air Force Base. The mechanics on the base perform the important job of keeping the bombers in flying condition. (Air Force photo—staff engraving)

Dogs are used at Mountain Home Air Force Base as guards. Called sentry dogs, they do the work of five guards and are used at night around the strategic spots on the base which would be most profitable for an enemy agent to sabotage. Trained to be "one-man dogs" they patrol their beats with their masters. They are shown running an obstacle course used to keep them in condition. (Staff photo—engraving) and be nearly as proficient as if they actually flew in a bomber.

Proficiency of the bomber crew is so important in SAC, that the crew of the bombers work against standards. If any crew reaches a state of proficiency above all standards, then every man in the crew is given spot promotions, such as a captain being promoted to major. But if a crew loses its proficiency, then the promotions are taken away. The pay of the rank men also is included with the spot promotions.

Aside from strict military discipline and the airplanes on the flight line, Mountain Home base has facilities comparable to those of a modern city. Churches, schools, sports clubs and houses are provided for the men and their families.

Church services are provided for every denomination. Although the services usually are held in similar chapels, Major McDermott notes.

"To officers club and a non-organized officers club are provided when the men can eat, drink or relax. The clubs are well operated by the men as individuals, not as the force, the major emphasizes.

A new modern school for the first eight grades is provided on the base for children of servicemen. High school students attend classes in Mountain Home.

A base exchange is provided and stocks similar items as are found in drugstores, clothing stores, hardware stores and sporting goods stores.

A base commissary provides groceries for sale to air force families.

Single enlisted men live in barracks and are fed in two messhalls on the base. Lieut. Jerry Herrmann, assistant base information services officer, says the messes were awarded second place prizes by SAC headquarters for the quality of food, operation and appearance.

Single officers live in bachelor officers quarters and eat either in officers mess halls or at the officers club.

Family housing on the base is one of the main things lacking, according to Major McDermott, but he explains some new quarters are being constructed. He says there are about 500 family quarters on the base, but most of the families are forced to live off the base.

Most of the families live in Boise and drive the 80 miles each day back and forth to work. Although Mountain Home is the closest city, there are few houses available for service men.

Some men and their families live away from the base as Gooding, and some live in Glens Ferry and King Hill.

A new hospital is expected to be completed on the base in four months and recently an indoor swimming pool was opened. An indoor sports arena for basketball, volleyball and other indoor sports is provided plus outdoor sports areas such as a baseball diamond and football field.

Major McDermott says the greatest concern of the air force base is the lack of experienced men. He says many enlisted men who have been trained as mechanics are not recalled here, hence the air force is short of mechanics and technically trained men.

The major says the main complaint of the men is that their pay is too low on the base. He hopes that a pay raise will be passed soon by congress to pay men by the rank they do instead of by rank only.

The present strength and mission of Mountain Home Air Force Base is expected to remain unchanged, although the ninth bomb wing might be moved to another location, probably at an overseas base and another similar organization would move in.

The major explains that about once every year such organizations as the ninth bomb wing make up additional base information services units. It is only temporary, usually lasting about 90 days.

Mountain Home Air Force Base was completed on Aug. 7, 1943. It was used as a training base during World War II and at the conclusion of the war it was closed and placed on a standby basis.

It was reactivated in 1948 under the name of the Strategic Air Command and housed and trained a photographic group. Less

Veterans May Still Reinstated 'GI' Insurance

The right to reinstated lapsed GI insurance has not been altered by the survivor benefits act which ended the issuance of virtually all new GI insurance except for those disabled in service, according to Donald Cowley, manager of the Boise veterans administration center.

Information released by the local VA office Friday quotes Cowley as reporting reinstatement rights will apply to both term and permanent plans of GI insurance.

Cowley said lapsed term policies generally may be reinstated only during the term period with the payment of two monthly premiums plus meeting health requirements.

Lapsed permanent plan policies may be reinstated at any time with the payment of all back premiums with interest and by meeting health requirements.

Special reinstatement or renewal privileges apply to veterans whose national service life insurance (NSLI) five-year term policies lapsed on or after July 23, 1953, through failure to pay timely either, or both of the last two monthly premiums for the term period, Cowley explained.

These veterans, he said, may apply for reinstatement or renewal of their term policies any time within the succeeding five-year period, but must meet premium and health requirements.

Full information concerning reinstatement of GI insurance is available at any VA office, Cowley said.

McLemore Takes Ike's Advice But What to Buy Is Puzzling

BY HENRY McLEMORE

I got into the habit of answering the accident's call when I received my draft notice in World War II. Ever since then, when a President says "do this," or "do that," I automatically obey.

So, when Ike gave his little speech for the word cure for the recession — "buy, buy, buy" — I shook my head, I banked, I looked under the sofa cushions, I peeked in the pockets of all my old trousers and coats, and I rounded up every penny possible.

The I started out to buy — but not without some thought on the matter. I didn't want to buy the manufacturer who were doing all right.

That's why I didn't buy a safe. I was thinking of a safe, but just happened to read that Edna Moller, was president of Moler Safe company, said the sale of safes and bank vaults was up five per cent. I need a safe, too. It's just about the time of year when money is attacked by the war when money is attacked by the war of old clothes, especially tweed shirts, and I have some faded tweed shirts I would like to get rid of. I would have liked to put in a safe where she couldn't get at them when the fever strikes.

Too, a safe adds class to a home. A safe is much better than high-brow magazines scattered on the floor for impressing callers. It's even better than a chest, and that's having something when you walk into a home and are a big, solid, dependable safe sitting in a corner of a room, you are almost bound to feel that you are in a home of substance.

Not only do the people have something to put in the safe, but you feel that they are substantial folks by nature, and not the types who hide valuables on closet shelves, or under the floor, or in the hands of a valuable document in an emergency.

While safe, I looked about for manufacturers who would appreciate my business. I looked at a tractor when I learned that tractors were being sold at the moment, but we just don't have room for one, even the smallest size.

Oh, I suppose we could have found a place for it somewhere, but if we had we would have been criticized to show off, or something. Particularly if we had gotten the small, sporty model, which is obviously no good for long trips.

I finally settled for bird houses. I spent all my money for many more bird houses than I have any need for, but I was tipped off that this company which made them was in Boise and with its head office in the two-story job for months. So, bird houses it was.

What I like yard we have now looks like a feathered Levittown. There are sizes to fit every bird, and every bird's size. The tenents are mostly sparrows, but they look happy.

And with the birds happy, and my following his suggestion, I'm happy, too.

If you should happen to want to join in the buying spree, I know of several companies that would welcome the business. They would and pitcher trade is off in Boise, and so are the manufacturers of burnt leather soups, but they look happy.

State Plants "Bumper Crop" for Area Anglers to Reap

The tank for transporting state fish and game commission trout for planting in streams and creeks in Twin Falls county, the eastern part of Payette and the western part of Cassia counties is checked by E. O. Bailey, superintendent state fish hatchery, Twin Falls. Trout from six to 12 inches as well as fingerlings are being planted. Each year the state fish and game commission stocks all fishing streams in the area including Snake river. More than 20,000 pounds of trout have been planted since February. In excess of 100,000 fish, from one to 12 inches will be dumped in the streams before opening day June 4. (Staff photo- engraving)

Fish, Game Personnel Stocking Trout In Rivers, Waterways Through Area

Annual planting of trout in all creeks and streams in Twin Falls county as well as parts of two adjoining counties is under way under the supervision of the state fish and game commission.

E. O. Bailey, superintendent of the state fish hatchery in Twin Falls, dumped a tank truck load of two- and three-inch fingerlings into Roseworth reservoir Thursday. The city trout are expected to attain a length of six to eight inches by fall.

The fingerlings are hatched and raised in large tanks at the hatchery located in Rock creek canyon. Bailey says about 700,000 trout from one to 12 inches will have been planted in the various streams and reservoirs by June 4.

Creeks and seepage streams in the eastern part of Owyhee county and the western part of Cassia county are receiving the trout.

A total of 100,000 fingerlings will be dumped into Roseworth reservoir, a popular fishing spot for the past two seasons by opening day of fishing season, Thursday, Bailey said. Three tank truck loads had been dumped in the reservoir.

Members of the state game and fish commission began planting operations late in the morning. Several tank loads of 6- to 12-inch rainbow trout were dumped into Snake river between Millers dam and the Murrpugh bridge.

Bailey says the rainbows were planted in Snake river early because at the time the river was in good condition for planting. Fish dumped into the Snake river at that time averaged three to a pound.

Trout also will be planted in the East fork of the Snake river, Big Flat creek, House creek, Salmon Falls reservoir, Big creek, Shoshone creek, Rock creek, Crane creek, Trapper creek and all tributaries.

Approximately 20,000 pounds of rainbow trout have been planted this year. Using a specially constructed distributing tank for transporting the trout from the hatchery to the streams, Bailey and other members of the commission carefully weigh each fish as the trout are loaded. By this process they are able to obtain an accurate count on fish planted.

Hearing ponds at the hatchery are full of trout varying from fingerling to trout 10 inches or over.

The distributing tank has two large openings on top through which the fish are dumped after being scooped from the rearing ponds and weighed. The truck is driven to the bank of the stream or reservoir. A large six-inch metal pipe attached to an opening at the rear of the tank, is then opened and the fish pour through the pipe into the stream.

Few fish are injured or killed in the operation.

Bailey says a great number of fish have been planted in Rock creek this

E. O. Bailey, superintendent, state fish hatchery, Twin Falls dumps a net full of fingerling trout from rearing tanks inside the state fish and game commission hatchery in Rock creek canyon prior to loading them in a tank truck for delivery to Roseworth reservoir. Approximately 100,000 of the two- and three-inch fish will be dumped into the reservoir. Bailey says by fall the fish will probably be six to eight inches in length. The annual fish planting program by the state fish and game commission is now in full swing. (Staff photo- engraving) year. He explains that a poisoning program on Rock creek was carried out last year to rid the stream of trash fish and the commission is trying to build the creek up to meet this year's fishing pressure.

Bailey has been superintendent of the Twin Falls hatchery since 1917. He began working for the fish and game commission 30 years ago at the Lapwai game farm, later of said.

Reseeding of Land Eyed in Insect Battles

WASHINGTON, April 18—Secretary of the Interior Fred A. Steiwer has been asked by the agriculture department to determine the feasibility of a long-range reseeding program as a permanent remedy for the best beefing problem in Idaho. Sen. Henry Dworshak said today.

Dworshak said Erwin Peterson, assistant secretary, has outlined the work done to date on controlling the hopper through sprays and reseeding, and pointed out some of the questions the department has on a full-scale program. Peterson said the success of a range reseeding program would depend on sufficient rainfall, soil conditions and control of grazing so that range grasses could thrive and crowd out host plants such as mustard and Russian thistle.

The senator proposed work on a long-range program at an appropriations committee hearing, and Peterson's request to Steiwer is the first step toward an interdepartmental approach to the problem. "Between the local growers, who have planted a vigorous program of spot control, the department of agriculture and the cooperation of congress, we may be able to solve this problem within the next decade," Dworshak declared.

If You Live That Long Old Age Doesn't Have to Be "Tragic Experience"

By EDWIN P. JORDAN, M.D.
(Written for NEA Service)

Every one of us who lives long enough will face old age. It is not always the happiest time of life, but neither does it need to be a sad or tragic experience.

Older people are often freed from some of the problems which trouble them when they were younger. When one adjusts to inevitable changes and if one has the understanding and sympathy of the younger members of the family and friends, life can become contented and comfortable.

Ageing of the body and mind does not occur suddenly, nor does it progress at the same rate of speed for everyone. Some who are in their 80's and 90's are as physically fit and remain mentally keen.

Others, however, who may be 20 years younger can show signs of physical frailty and slowing down of the mental processes.

One of the complaints of many older people is a poor memory. Often an elderly person will remember things which happened 20 or even 50 years earlier but will get mixed up on recent events.

This is often shown by repeating the same story over and over again. It can be annoying to the listener but should be taken cheerfully because it is not intentional.

Only when loss of memory becomes extremely severe and is associated with other changes in mental functioning, is it proper to speak of true senility. Even in this condition, however, the memory for events which happened years before may remain good, while that for events which occurred recently is confused.
