"WE MUST COMPETE OR DIE"
The relationship between labor and industry and their general effect on our national economy are becoming more and more a topic of conversation among the American people.

SUBJECT RUSSIA WOULD CRASH—Moreover, the present Russian economic position, as an inspection system agreed upon, Russia would crash. In the kind of localized war that we might have to fight with Russia, it is essential to our viewpoint. They would effect the commies' numerical superiority.

THE AVERAGE AMERICAN is well aware of the increased number of foreign cars being imported into this country. He sees more and more every day on our streets and highways throughout the nation.

THE QUESTION THAT NATURALLY comes to the mind of the average American is what part and in what proportions labor and industry are influencing the present recession.

ALTHOUGH THERE CAN BE NO GENERAL AGREEMENT nowadays on what anyone has to say, one way or another, we feel there is a lot of food for thought in what Roger M. Blough, chairman of the Federal Reserve Board, said at the Steel corporation, told the Cleveland Chamber of Commerce at its annual meeting recently.

One big dog singled out a pitcock, took him by the collar and knocked him down so many times that the cop himself got winded from picking him up.

Explorer III Expected to Fall in July

WASHINGTON, May 15—The Explorer III, America's third earth satellite, is going silent and may come to a fiery end about the middle of July.

Scientists tracking the army-built satellite reported Saturday that one of its two radios has stopped transmitting and the other has become erratic.

Announcing this, the U. S. national committee for the international geophysical year reported that the satellite will re-enter the earth's atmosphere and disintegrate around mid-July.

The committee said there is some evidence the partial loss of radio contact with Explorer III may be due to a collision with a meteoroid cloud that might have damaged the transmitter.

The satellite, an 80-inch long metal tube, was shot into space March 26 after the successful launching of the army's Explorer I and the navy's Vanguard. Explorer II failed to go into orbit. Both Explorer I and the Vanguard are expected to re-enter orbit for some time.

Russia, whose Sputnik I and II came down some time ago, launched its third satellite, a 1 1/2 ton vehicle, this week.

The committee said Explorer III high power transmitter, a 60-watt vacuum tube device which recorded information about cosmic rays, began sputtering May 8 and went off the air Wednesday night.

Native Opens New Stinker Station Here

A Pearless Paris Stinker station has been opened in Twin Falls on Kimberly road, bringing to mind the number of stinkers which were owned and operated by the former Twin Falls resident, Paris Lind, known as "Pearless Paris" and known as "Stinker" to the motorists on the highways and his advertising, acquired his nickname more than 15 years ago.

The gasoline dealer was born in Twin Falls and was graduated from Twin Falls high school in 1914. He was engaged in the service station business prior to World War II. However, a station reportedly owned by Lind in Twin Falls actually was one using his name and passed to another person, Lind said Friday.

He says he opened his first station in 1914 and soon acquired the nickname of "Pearless Paris the Stinker" as the result of his "stinker" advertising in which he signed a letter "the Stinker."

Since Lind he has opened service stations in Utah, Nevada and other sections of Idaho. A recent visit to the various states has attracted the attention of motorists from as far away as French Sahara, Africa, Lind says. He recently received a letter from a motorist in the African continent requesting Lind to sell him gasoline.

The gasoline he sells bears the trade name "Stinker Oil." The oil is refined and carries a well-known international oil refining company.

Lind plans to distribute "Stinker" soon this summer to motorists stopping at his service stations. It is packaged by a national oil service company and bears the stinker label.

From 1946 to 1948 Lind operated a crop duster company known as "Pearless Paris Pest Control" but abandoned the project after three years of operation.

'Jobless Rolls' Decline Third Week in Row

WASHINGTON, May 17.—The third straight week, the present has reported a decline in the number of workers drawing unemployment benefits.

This week there was an apparent increase in new layoffs among the eligible for jobless payments. In its weekly summary, the department reported Friday that the number of workers claiming unemployment compensation declined to 70,200 during the week ended May 10 to a total of 3,194,800.

This total was 104,000 less than the figure for the corresponding week last year.

The department said 28 states reported declines—a largely unexplained upsurge in seasonal layoffs such as construction and agriculture work.

On the other hand, the department said initial claims for benefits, reflecting new job loss, rose by 8,400 during the week ended May 10 to a total of 62,100. The previous week initial claims declined by 18,800 and dropped to 1,170 during the corresponding week a year ago to a total of 22,000.

Half the states reported a decline in initial claims last week, but that offset, but there were 23 states in which there was an increase.

Care of Your Children

By ANGELO PATRI, M.D. Summer camps are the right answer for the president children whose parents are not taking them away from home for the vacation. Whenever it is possible to send this group to camp, it is well to do so. Children and parents alike are entitled to the benefits of a vacation. The parents need a rest from their charges and the children need to meet new conditions and face new experiences. This is particularly the need of the children who live in the city. They can go to the mountains, live as they can enjoy experience denied them in the city. At home they do not see the sky except in patches. In the hills they see the high blue sky and feel the vast expanse of blue above them. This vision of the sky stretches their imaginations and makes a world of beauty they have not known existed. When these children waken in the coolness of a summer morning and get a breath of pine-scented air they breathe it greedily. It has an exhilarating effect on them. They spring out of their bunks shouting to each other. They run to their suits and robes and dash down to the lake, racing their instructor for that morning dip. Then back to dress and to breakfast. It is a matter of wonder to see the children who have been in the mountains, how at home, it is a chore to get them to drink, to eat, to wash, to brush their teeth, to comb their hair, to get them to go to bed. Vandals End Spring Grid Drill With Game

MOSCOW, May 17 (AP)—The Blacks beat the Whites 13-7 Saturday in the final scrimmage of Idaho's spring football season. The workout drew a few good words from Coach J. Neil Skip Stanley, along with some darker statements. After the full-length scrimmage under game conditions, he said "We've had a lot of mistakes. There is a good reason for that, however," he said. "We haven't been putting much emphasis on offense during the spring workout."

He was pleased by the hard blocking he saw during the game. Much of the time, he hit with "reckless abandon," one of the coaches said. He offered his congratulations to the team.

After three weeks in the Pioneer league season, Magic Valley Cowboys manager Dick Wilson is sure of two things—the Cowboys will be in the thick of the pennant fight and the team's play-do-over-even-thing-fun-support at home than it is getting. Wilson, a 34-year-old veteran of professional baseball, says the team is a top team locally, especially with the season's play-do-over-even-thing-fun-support at home than it is getting better. "I thought we started out with a good team but it's getting better," the 20-year-old pitcher said. "We expect to finish near the top, one, two, three," he added. "It's hard to predict a championship because so many different factors, but we'll be up there."

Logs Reach Destination at Fairfield After 70-Mile Truck Ride

Big loads of logs similar to this are used daily by the Wendell Lumber and Mill company at Fairfield. The truck has approximately 1,000 board feet of logs aboard, being hauled to the sawmill in the spring because of bad roads. The trucks will haul lumber twice as many logs when the roads improve. The logs are hauled 70 miles, from a location north of Anderson ranch dam to Fairfield. The truck hauling job is contracted. (Staff photo- engraving)

Beware of Power Mower, Say Experts and Victims

It's mighty easy to cut fingers or toes along with the grass in these days of power lawnmowers, report mower specialists and those who have had the unhappy experience. It takes only a split-second of carelessness and there goes more than just a toenail, says Lincoln County Sheriff Thomas Conner, who speaks from experience. Conner told the end of his big toe to a rotary power mower two weeks ago. He was walking backwards, pulling the "underlying" instead of pushing it. When he backed into the front porch and stumbled he pulled the mower up on his foot. "A greater job of trimming toenails, toe, boot and sock, could not be accomplished anywhere," Conner says, "relax good naturally." W. A. Farris, foreman of the Twin Falls parks and recreation department's maintenance crew, who is responsible for the operation of the numerous and varied lawnmowers operated by the city committee. "Power lawnmowers are as dangerous as a loaded pistol if not handled properly."

Huge Idaho Industry Has 'Rare' Plant in This Area

Lumbering is one of Idaho's big industries, but in southern Idaho, and especially Magic Valley, the lumbering business is practically nil. In the Fairfield sawmill of the Wendell Lumber and Mill company an 800-board feet of lumber is enough to build five average bedroom houses. In the only one of its kind in Magic Valley, according to O. Maxey Bill Stewart and a Saw. The mill has been in operation since 1947, but it is not a big mill. The reason no one ever saw it is because of its location. Stewart explains, "But we are the source of logs here. It mill operates about eight months of the year, and the logs are one year round." The source of logs is the mountains in the bestwood forest north of Fairfield where a contractor has cut and hauls them to the mill. The location of the logging operation was made by the present owner, a logging in the general area of Rocky Bar north of Anderson ranch dam. Two trucks make the trip in five and one-half hours. The lumber mill is a complete mill, says Stewart. Rough logs are milled directly to the mill and then, smooth-placed lumber is shipped away. Most of the lumber, 75 per cent, is ponded in a pond which is shipped to East Coast for use for door casings, siding, doors or industrial boxes. The remaining 25 per cent of the lumber is Douglas fir which is shipped to Magic Valley and is used in the Salt Lake City to be used in building houses.

A man works at the head end of the pond, cutting the logs into 20-foot lengths and then floating them into a skidway which lifts the logs up to the sawing platform. On the sawing platform the logs are driven up parallel and the taken one at a time into the sawing carriage which holds the logs in place and slides them into the big six foot band saw. The hand saw is referred to by the mill, Herbert Burkhardt, whose job it is to keep the saw sharp, as a six-foot saw, but it is actually 35-feet long and is set with two-inch teeth, Burkhardt explains that the six-foot terminology applies to the size of the sprocket on which the saw rides. "We have to change the saw every two hours to sharpen it," Burkhardt says. "We could let it go for four hours without sharpening the teeth, but by the end of the four hours the saw would be so dull that the operation would be slowed down too much. We take a break every two hours anyhow and it takes only a few minutes to slip the big band saw off its sprockets and replace it with another one." Burkhardt sharpens the saw with a automatic sharpener which handles the complete 35 feet of saw in only 20 minutes. The saw blades last about 18 months, according to Burkhardt, and by the time they are worn out they are only nine inches dull by anything other than the regular wear. However, at one time the saw struck an old square nail imbedded deep in a log which dulled the teeth and another time four teeth were sheared from the saw blades by two spikes in a log. The mill maintains several saw bands to use as replacements while one is being sharpened or if one should be ruined while in operation. The operation of cutting the logs into lumber moves fast, says Stewart. A log 20 feet long and three feet in diameter can be sawed into boards one inch thick and eight inches wide in approximately five minutes. The mill can turn out boards 24 inches wide and 20 feet long. Four men are required to handle the operation. Two of the men, brothers Art and Joe Turner, work on the log carriage. Art works as a logger, and sets the logs at the proper distance from the saw. Joe works as a dozer. He handles the levers which lock the logs into place. The Turner brothers have one of the most "moving" jobs in the operation. The 20-foot logs, and 6-foot wide carriage they ride, on a swivel back and fourth through its 20 foot sweep past the saw blade in only seconds, Shaw explains. The carriage is powered in its sweeps by a steam piston. "It operates very smoothly, coming to what might be termed gentle slope at the end of the strokes, then rushes back in the opposite direction," Stewart says. The carriage stops only long enough for the mechanical equipment to either turn the log on the carriage to saw another side of it or to take on another log. The stops are practically momentary and the Turner brothers work at top speed to keep up with Sawyer Eldon Ford, who operates the carriage and handles the machinery which puts new logs on the carriage or turns the old logs that are being sawed. Because of the enormous size of the machinery and the big saw blade's high pitched whine as it slices off the boards, the Sawyer gives directions to the setter by hand signals. "It is all done with sign language," Shaw notes. "And the men have to be extremely capable to handle the job so as to be able to catch the proper signals, handle the machinery and still come out with the last board of a log at the right size and not waste any lumber." As the boards are sawed, they are dropped off the carriage into a platform of spinning rollers which "choke" the boards off to either be cut into smaller boards and have the rough edges trimmed or to a slush saw which cuts the unusable boards into slaw length wood. Jack Lee works on the tail end of the saw, taking the boards off the carriage and directing them down the rollers to either the edgerman or the slaw board saw. Lee works within four feet of the saw blade and because of the chips and splinters which are ejected by the saw, he wears a screen guard in front of his face. The splinter could easily put his eyes out if it weren't for the screen, Shaw explains. The good lumber which comes off the saw is sent to Melvin Day, the edgerman, who puts the lumber through a saw to cut off the rough edges and cut the wide boards into the proper width. The slaw boards move to the mill when the mill works at top speed and big logs are cut. Because the boards are wet, they (Continued on Page 11, Column 1).

City Employees Alert to Danger in Using Power Lawnmowers

MAGIC VALLEY PORTRAITS Inspection of T.F. in 1906 Started 'Cap' Kregel on His Career Here

Charles H. (Cap) Kregel, who manages Kregel's Hardware store and Kregel's Machine shop in Twin Falls, has been recognized as a business leader in the city for 51 years. Known as "Cap," because he was a captain in the army during World War I, Kregel first set foot in Twin Falls in 1906 on an inspection trip when he was working for a Belle construction company. The area looked promising, Kregel relates, so he encouraged his father to move to Twin Falls, which he did, establishing the present business April 7, 1907. The business began with three employees, Kregel, his father and another helper, and consisted of a blacksmith shop and small hardware store to earn a few dimes, such as picking fruit and hops and storing wood in woodsheds," he explains. Kregel and his parents moved to Columbia, B. C., north of Spokane, Wash., in 1899 and for two years he attended school in a one room log cabin. The teacher had four pupils in an advanced class besides the other classes from the first grade up. "The teacher did a grand job," says Kregel. In 1900, the Kregel family moved to Moscow, where Kregel finished high school and later attended the University of Idaho, majoring in engineering, with intention of being a mining engineer. But an argument with an instructor ended Kregel's plans for being a mining engineer, so he studied at Lewiston Normal school to be a teacher. His son gave that up and returned to the university to study civil engineering. "During vacations I worked as a carpenter on construction, and at one time worked in a mine at Mullalun. My parents moved west to Moscow, where I worked during vacations on various jobs. One of the jobs I had was getting water raised from the well and delivered to houses by the bars," he explains. And that's a dig, says Kregel, and vegetable store for five months. In 1906, Kregel went to Boise and worked on construction and engineering jobs. He worked on the diversion dam north of Boise and on a pump project near Marsden and on a construction job in Magic Valley. The surveyor was Tom Oakley and Dubois and worked on the Oliver pumping project southwest of Twin Falls. "It was during the time Kregel was working in Magic Valley that he met Melvin Day, the edgerman for the city and encouraged his father to begin business here. The two men worked together to begin the business. Kregel's father operated the blacksmith shop and Kregel operated the hardware store. "Actually the main business was in the blacksmith shop and I worked there most of the time, but I did the forge and couldn't be free to talk to customers, so I sold merchandise in the hardware shop to the customers when I, Kregel, related. "When I started the 'Cap' business in the fall of 1913, I worked over active management of the store and ran it until 1917 when (Continued on Page 11, Column 1).

This article is the first in a series of "portraits" of Magic Valley residents. Suggestions of subjects for "portraits" will be welcomed. business in a building 30 by 60 feet located at the site of the present hardware store, Kregel explains. "I took over active management of the store in the fall of 1912 after my father died," Kregel adds. Since then the hardware store has grown to be one of the biggest in the Intermountain West. Kregel's machine shop, separated from the hardware store physically in 1941 and made a separate business in 1952, has grown, too, and now manufactures machinery sold all over the United States. "We have 22 employees now, but had many at 65 during World War II when we made machinery for ships," he adds. Kregel was born in 1888 in Buena Vista, Ore. He is proud of his mother's parents who went to Oregon in 1837 from Iowa in a covered wagon over the Oregon trail, and proud of his parents who settled in Independence, Ore., where he went to elementary school. Life in MAGIC VALLEY

It was predicted several years ago, by a visitor to OAKLEY, concerning the desert land covered with sagebrush, between BUTLER and OAKLEY, that "the desert shall blossom as a rose." That prediction has been fulfilled.

If some of the oldtimers were to travel the old road between the two towns now they would never recognize it. Each farm has sprung up just since World War II and there is approximately two million dollars worth of farm produce realized from the land that once was sagebrush.

Many farmers from the west coast as well as land speculators from the east have invested in the future of the desert. Many wells have been drilled and there seems to be plenty of water for all.

The latest of these farms is the Casper estate, 1250 acres farm, located just south of the Wide Baker home and farm. The 300-acre farm was purchased from Baker this spring and early in April one Saturday, over 100 people from the valley turned out to plant 20 acres of trees and 130 acres of grain.

There were 84 tractors belonging to members of the church all working at once. The women of the Red Hat society were there with a hot lunch for the workers at noon.

On May 3, 118 men, women and children met at the farm to plant the 20 acres of trees and 130 acres of grain. They cut over 1200 sacks of seed and planted it all in one day. The stake MIA served lunch.

The next step, according to the estate president, W. B. Waldner, will be thinning the best. He says there is no shortage of help when a call is made. Everyone is anxious to see how well the farm can produce.

All the crop will be cared for and harvested by the members, without charge to the church, as customary for all such projects throughout the valley.

At one time the national defense officials studied the church welfare program and have incorporated many of its ideas into their program, especially in storing food and supplies necessary for a survival in case of an enemy attack.

It seems in case of Mr. and Mrs. Edmund Ulrich of Piler that the prediction has finally paid off. After waiting 47 years, the Ulrichs have finally had the plumbing and bathroom fixtures installed in their home. The children are now all grown and married. Mrs. Ulrich said they had a good crop of home this year and felt that they could finally finish the bathroom.

In addition to building her home, she also built a honey house, garage, barn and brooder house on their farm.

Mrs. Ulrich is still active and is helping her children with their farm work. She has 46 grandchildren and two great-grandchildren. Ulrich is still a beekeeper and presently is selling honey at their home.

Mr. and Mrs. John Gourley are marking his 50th year as a fruit rancher in Snake River canyon with an emorgorbed this Sunday to which 75 friends have been invited.

Assisting will be their son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. O. K. Kelly of PILER, and their four children, and their son and daughter-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. John T. Gourley of Danville, Calif., who are here for the occasion.

John T. Gourley is a CPA for the Idaho Oil company in Richmond and was graduated from Stanford university. On Sunday the Gourley family attended the First Presbyterian church in TWIN FALLS where Dr. John Gourley was the first minister, Nelson Davison Govey, a 30-month-old son of Mr. and Mrs. John T. Gourley, was baptized on this occasion. They have two other children.

John Gourley came to Twin Falls with his family, including his sister, Mrs. Annesa Shlan, in 1869 from Lancaster, O. From the first he was interested in farming and

...and Mrs. Ulrich moved to Idaho with their four children in 1810 from Elk Creek, Neb. Ulrich made his living by working as a beekeeper and farmer.

In 1832 they homesteaded their home and the present home was built. Their family was increased by Bulk Garden Seed at Globe's old-fashioned Seed Store—Ad.

BY DONALD R. BLACKSTONE
First Presbyterian Church Pastor

A few days ago I took the family to my good friend George's home. George is not his real name. George would be generally embraced if I told his real name. He is truly modest and humble and at the same time a skillful man. There are not many of his kind left in the world.

This crate is dragging its feet—very much as I suppose is the matter with it! This is a best pupil style but it is a language which I understand perfectly.

George lifted up the hood, had me trace the engine, idle it, then start it, then shut it off. "What's the matter with it?" I asked.

"Time for a tune-up," replied George.

"Why does a car have to have a tune-up?" I inquired.

"After awhile it just naturally gets dirty—and out of adjustment. It's the nature of the beast. The plugs get dirty and the fouls get the kind of spark you need for an efficient explosion. The carburetor gets all stiff and you lose the good flow or a good mixture. The points wear a little and the fouls later needs a tune-up."

George not only did a good job of tuning up my car, he also gave me a good idea which I would share with you.

From time to time every person just naturally needs a "tune-up."

After 50 Years of Tonsorial Activity, Pioneer Barber Avows He'll Stay Here

"I think I'll stay in Twin Falls," said Gerald T. Hunt, who celebrated his 50th birthday here last Thursday, as he prepared to close his barber shop in business here last Thursday. "I've grown used to the town."

Hunt operates his own barber shop at 125 Main avenue east in Twin Falls where he has cut hair since 1883. He first opened a shop in Twin Falls in 1883 at the present site of the U. C. Post office, offering haircuts for 25 cents, and shaves for 15 cents. He has since moved to the present site.

Hunt moved his shop to the east end in 1915 he moved his shop to the present site.

Other persons in Twin Falls has operated a Main avenue business for such a long time, he says.

Hunt came to Twin Falls from Port Collins, Colo., where he had worked as a barber for five years and where he married his wife. He was born in 1883 when he was 15 and moved to Twin Falls in 1905.

He has been the proprietor in all other shops he has operated in Twin Falls and has given an estimated 258,400 haircuts in the 50 years he has been in business, including the years at Port Collins. An estimated 100,000 barbers have worked for him over the years.

Of the men who had their hair cut by Hunt when he first came here, only Harry Eaton, president of the Twin Falls Bank and Trust company, is still living.

"Eaton was a teen-ager when I began cutting hair here," Hunt said. Eaton sent Hunt a bouquet of flowers to mark the 50th anniversary occasion.

"When I first began in the business in 1883, I worked more or less as an apprentice," Hunt stated. "There were no barber schools to attend in those days."

Tonsorial experts gave more advice than hair-cutting until manufacturers began making safety razors so men could shave at home. Hunt says he began his career as a "latherer," meaning he put lather on the men's faces for a barber. He worked up from a "latherer" to a "shaver" to a barber in a few months.

"Barbers used scissors to cut hair until 1910 when electric clippers became available," Hunt relates. "I began using them in 1910, and most of the barbers preferred to use the scissors."

The time necessary to give haircuts had not varied much since 1908, he says. It takes a few minutes to cut now to give a haircut, Hunt says. But the time he was married in 1909, people don't come into Hunt's shop until 1925.

Three Airplanes Are Used by Members of Twin Falls Fliers, Inc.

Membership of Flying Club Formed in 1941 Remains Constant at 25 Airmen

In 1941, 25 men gathered at the Twin Falls airport to discuss the idea of flying airplanes and decided, if they pooled their finances and bought an airplane they could take turns flying it and fly cheaper than they could individually rent an airplane.

So the 25 men formed the Twin Falls Fliers, Inc., and each paid $10 as a membership fee which was a down payment on an airplane.

Today the club still has 25 members, but only three of them are charter members. The corporation assets have risen measurably. "The club now owns three airplanes, two Pipers and each member's stock is worth almost seven times as much as when the club was formed 12 years ago."

"It is a marvelous accomplishment," explains A. F. Oulund, secretary-treasurer of the flying club and one of the charter members. "When the corporation was formed, flying clubs were being organized throughout the country, but most of them lasted only for a few months or years. Our club had a few hard times during its infancy, but now we need no reason for the club to not last for another 12 years or even longer."

Oulund believes the club is one of the oldest in the United States. A flying club in Florida boasts a longer history than the Twin Falls Fliers, but the Florida club hasn't prospered its boat.

The three charter members of the club are Merritt Showell, Don Hutchings and Oulund.

A member of the Twin Falls Fliers for the past nine years and now considered by local fliers as the dean of aviators in Twin Falls, since he has been flying for 30 years, Dean says he has owned seven airplanes in his life, but finds membership in the Fliers club to be the most satisfactory and the most inexpensive method of flying.

"With the three airplanes there is no trouble in obtaining an airplane to fly, and the cost of flying the airplane is almost half of the rental fee which flying services have to charge," Dean says.

The three airplanes the club owns are a Piper Tri-Pacer with space for four passengers; a Piper Super Cruiser with space for three passengers and an Airwrecker with space for two passengers. The cost per hour to fly the airplanes for club members is $2.45 and $5, respectively.

Dean notes that the cost of flying the plane is only actual flying time and includes gas and oil. If the pilots make cross country flights to other towns, the club does not charge for the time the airplanes are sitting on the ground.

Maintenance of the airplanes is handled by a qualified aviation mechanic, Oulund explains. To cover the cost of maintenance, and for depreciation of the airplanes, each club member pays out of his pocket a monthly charge that does not apply to the cost of flying.

And since the club is formed as a non-profit organization, any extra money the club gets is used to buy new equipment.

Club membership is limited to 25 persons and persons seeking to become members must wait for a present member to sell his stock in the corporation, Oulund explains. New members have to be accepted by a vote of two-thirds of the active members.

Membership in the club has been below 25 at times during the winter when flying is not too popular, but all spaces in the club are usually occupied during the summer. The club has 25 members now.

Besides being a charter member of the club, Oulund has held the position of secretary-treasurer since 1942. As secretary-treasurer, he is responsible for saying who gets the airplanes and when, but he reports there is usually no cause for argument among members for the planes because it works on a first-come, first-served basis.

If someone wants to use an airplane he need only call Oulund and name the date and time. He reserves the airplane of his choice. However, if members want to use the planes for short rides around the area, they can go to the airport and use one at almost any time if the planes are not being used. A schedule of planned uses is kept at the airport by the Reeder Flying Service, Oulund explains.

Credit for getting the charter members together to organize the club in 1941 goes to John Garbett and Maynard Craig. Neither is a member of the club now, but they were organizers when the club began and helped draw up the by-laws and regulations and handled a lot of the incorporation.

The club was organized while the Twin Falls airport was at its old location one mile southeast of the present location.

The first airplane owned by the club was traded for another plane of similar design in 1942 and in 1943 and bought another airplane, this time an Airwrecker.

The hangar was constructed by members of the club working at grass during their spare time. Wives of members furnished food and drink for the men as the hangar was built, according to Oulund.

In 1948, the airport was moved to its present location and the Fliers moved their airplanes and hangar. Shortly afterwards the club bought out the old "B-F Flying Club" in Twin Falls which included a hangar and an airplane to give the Fliers three airplanes.

Since its inception, Twin Falls Fliers has had 12 airplanes. "We keep trading for better ones," Oulund explains.

Club members meet on the first Friday of every month to discuss maintenance of the airplanes, finances and do a lot of "hangar flying," according to Dean.

Since the club officers, the policies of the club are governed by a board of directors, Harold Fillmore, Richard Walle, Merritt Showell and Lionel Howard.

Twin Falls Youth; Flier Since 12, Solos at 16

Charles Richard Reeder, 16, made his first solo flight in an airplane the day he celebrated his 16th birthday anniversary April 8. He has been flying since he was 12 years old, but had to be 16 before he could solo. His father is Charles Reeder, who operates a flying service at the Twin Falls municipal airport, so flying is "old stuff" for the youth. (Staff photo—enlarging)

After Four Years of Flying Lessons, Local Pilot Gets License—At Age 16

Four years of flying lessons reached a climax last month for a Twin Falls pilot. He soloed, the first solo flight in a small plane. Most pilots accomplish the same feat in only a few days if they are persistent, but in the case of Charles Richard "Dick" Reeder, 16, son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Reeder, who operates the Reeder flying service at Twin Falls, the long wait was necessary because the law doesn't allow youngsters to fly airplanes alone until they are 16. Dick was 16 on April 8, the day he soloed.

Actually, he had only about eight hours of dual instruction when he soloed, his father explains. Young Reeder took his first flying lesson when he was 12 years old and continued, intermittently over the four-year period, but only when his father had time from normal business to give the lessons.

"He could have soloed when he had four hours of dual instruction,"

Reeder notes, "But since he had to be 16 before he could legally fly alone, Dick stacked up the eight hours. He has been flying as a passenger with his father since he was 10 months old. When he was old enough to read, Dick began reading maps to follow the flight the family took, pointing out cities and towns as they passed underneath."

And when Dick was old enough to see over the cowling of the plane, his father let him "take the stick" occasionally during flight.

"Dick practically grew up in an airplane," Reeder explains. "He knows more about airplanes than I do. We lived at the old Twin Falls airport from the time Dick was 6 months old until he was 6. From Dick's association with the plane and the pilot, he learned to recognize all the make of airplanes, but he couldn't recognize any make of car."

Dick has made trips in airplanes with his father all over the Northwest and to Kansas City, Mo. He has flown so much he knows little about a private license which entitles them to take passengers along in the airplanes until they are 17. They have to be 18 before they can receive a commercial license which will entitle them to work for pay, either carrying charter passengers or work as duster pilots.

Zsa Zsa Contends She Could Have Made Everyone Ignore Madame de Pompadour

BY JAMES BACON
 HOLLYWOOD, May 17 (AP)—"I was born in the wrong century," Zsa Zsa Gabor once said me. "I would have made a bum out of Madame de Pompadour."

That remark became timely last week when the blond Hungarian actress landed the lead in the new movie, "Madame de Pompadour."

When Zsa Zsa G. was reported to have given up her life to the French king, Louis XV, she was widely reported to have given her life to the French king, Louis XV.

Her husband, the actor George Sanders, who she still dates frequently, is living on the slopes of a volcano.

"Very pleasant between eruptions," he added.

Zsa Zsa confined herself to international society until Sanders once insulted her into becoming an actress.

She was invited to appear on a local television panel show which gave advice to the toasters. Sanders barred her from appearing, saying she was "too damn dumb to appear on TV," Zsa Zsa retorts.

This so infuriated Zsa Zsa that she went on the show. Her beauty, however, and respect and libbing made her an instant hit.

One woman viewer once asked her advice on what to do with an erring husband who traveled too much. Zsa Zsa, on the six, answered: "Shout him in the leg, dollie."

Coincidence or not, Los Angeles police blotter within two days reported a case of a phalangerine husband shot in the leg by his wife.

Mrs. Helen Pauline Weaver received a divorce from William David Weaver on cruel and inhuman treatment. She was granted custody of their one minor child and he was ordered to pay $50 monthly child support and $10 monthly alimony. A previous property settlement was approved. They were married June 9, 1954, at Boise. She was represented by Lloyd L. Webb of the Hayborn and Hayborn law firm.
