Living Costs Rise in Midst Of Recession

By JAMES MARLOW
 WASHINGTON, May 24 (AP)—In the midst of a recession, living costs have risen to a new peak. They rose again last month in April. They are the highest since 1914, the government said today.

Living costs are being fought by the staff of Ewan Clague, the labor department's commissioner of labor statistics, who has teams of people checking prices around the country every month in 46 cities and towns.

In a recent statement he said that as many as 2,000 different products or services are bought by the average American family. From some 1,000 his field staff checks the prices of the 300 most important items.

Receipts Analyzed
 The findings are reported in a statement. Clague's staff here looks them down and analyzes them. The result is a composite of the consumer price index which is the record of living costs.

The 300 items or groups included are: 80 foods, apparel of all kinds, rent, home ownership costs, public transportation, automobiles and their operating costs, reading and recreation, personal care and so on.

The index can be divided into three major groups: 1. foods, 2. commodities and other goods, and 3. services of all kinds. What goes up and what happens to them can be taken care of at a time.

Bad Weather Blamed
 Foods—This group ranges from such vegetables to meats. There is a lot of fluctuation in prices in the food division for many reasons. One important one now is bad weather which hampered the growing of certain items, created shortages and put food up the price. Clague is explaining the continued price rise in fresh fruits and vegetables, such as the eating more of them and continue to buy even when the prices are high.

Services—These include items of personal care, like haircuts, permanent, street car fares, recreation items such as movies, doctor fees and hospital costs.

Clague pointed out the prices of these are "heavily influenced by supply and demand." For example: Street car fares can be changed only when approved by a public service commission.

"The price of a haircut or a visit to a doctor's office," Clague pointed, "is governed to some extent by custom. They change slowly but, when they rise, they usually stay there."

"For the past 20 years the prices of the services represented in the index have climbed slowly but steadily. They will continue to do so for some time to come."

Season's Influence
 Commodities other than foods—In this group are both soft and durable goods. The soft goods include such items as clothing, shoes, house furnishings, house wares, electrical goods, radios, and so on.

This group as a whole, according to Clague, ordinarily shows the influence of the spring and fall seasons in apparent prices. To put it another way:

Clothing prices go down in January and February, in the after-Christmas sales, and in July and August, when summer sales take place. They go up in March, when the spring lines are introduced, and up in September when fall clothing comes in.

The durable goods—such as automobiles, furniture, household appliances, TV and radio—show seasonal influences too.

Quota Is Set
 BOISE, May 24 (AP)—Idaho's share of the July draft call will be 43 announced Saturday. Idaho's June quota is 41 men.

Mal Gen. John W. Walsh, state director of selective service, said most of the men called from Idaho will be 25 or older.

MEETING SLATED

McLemore Gives Tip on How To Be Happy While on Diet

By HENRY McLEMORE
 Faced with the choice of losing weight or running the risk of being harpooned for a leached whale by some near-sighted reader of Hersey, you had a choice. A harpoon hurts, you, but so does a diet and a harpoon has the advantage of pointing—out-of-bone's misery in a harpoon, while a diet goes on for what seems forever.

I probably would have chosen the harpoon had such a thing been covered in my insurance, but it wasn't. So it was back to counting calories once more. This time I was determined to find the diet best suited to me, but which one was that? There must be upwards of 500 popular and accented diets going the rounds.

One can hardly pick up a magazine without seeing "before" and "after" pictures of a babe who dieted down to where she could stop buying her clothes from a Goodyear blimp surplus store.

I never considered using any of the diets that I had employed before. They were out on two counts, the first being that they were edemiger I had to cheat to keep alive. One man's diet can be another man's death—yours! Toward the end of the last diet I was on I had to eat my lettuce leaves under an oxygen tent, and have someone hold my head upright while I chewed my carrot allowance. That's dangerous.

Before I started this diet I collected the day-by-day instructions of 170 diets. I studied and re-studied them. Still I wasn't able to make a choice.

Then I had one of my rare bright thoughts. Why not take the best parts of dozens of diets and combine them—into one—that pleased me? That's what I did, and I have never been so happy on a diet before. A week has passed since I started on it, and I have yet to leave the table without a feeling of genuine satisfaction. In fact, on several occasions

I alone I couldn't manage everything on my plate.

In case you want to make up your own diet from a long list of diets, let me give you a few tips.

The most important one is this: note carefully that all diets recommend that a man eat three meals a day. Never lose sight of this in making up your own diet.

Then—and I can't stress this too strongly—throw out all the breakfasts and lunches given by all the diets. None of them is any good. There isn't enough to them to keep a growing man alive. This leaves only the dinners, and they are all right. Most of them are good, substantial meals.

So, armed with dinner menus only, start making up your three meals a day. Pick out a lot of breakfasts and lunches for dinner, you like and use them for dinner. Select some more choice ones and eat them for lunch. Use the remainder of the satisfactory ones for dinner.

You'll never go hungry, and you'll be on a diet menu.

Steak for breakfast. Yum-yum, steak, chicken or roast beef for lunch. Fish, and sometimes, and more steak for dinner. Yum-yum, more steak for dinner. Yum-yum, Also generous helpings of vegetables, and very often a dessert.

You'll never be tempted to cheat on this diet, and everyone knows how important this is!

One last tip: stay away from the scales. Just trust in the diet and keep trusting it even if you feel your clothes getting tighter. Don't cheat and weigh yourself after a week of steak and potatoes. That'll ruin everything!

head the group because of her 30-year citizenship record and her knowledge of working with groups gained by years of experience and a very thorough knowledge of the fact they would be the safety group.

She explained that the local council will attempt to secure attention on the principal community safety needs and would endeavor to generate public opinion in support of action deemed necessary to reduce all kinds of accidents.

That safety organization is not in any need of funds and cannot be emphasized too strongly. As a matter of fact, a safety organization may bring attention to it or its public education function becomes a subsidiary for action on the part of the community.

Exhibits, posters, placards, radio and television programs will be made available to the community safety group.

Speaking Furniture

Advertisement for L'Herisson's furniture featuring a bed and a desk. Text: "You who live in a limited space and are looking forward to a more spacious home later on will find it desirable to do some logical, systematic planning now and select your furnishings in a long-range plan. Especially your large basic pieces. This doesn't mean that you need to sacrifice any of the attractiveness of your present abode. And it needn't seem crowded even though some of the pieces are large. All that is necessary, usually, is some good, sound space maneuvering. If you're having difficulty deciding on a furniture style, then simply designed, flexible pieces are your best bet. These will fit well into any type room, mix amicably with other styles. The four-poster double bed in the adjacent bedroom sketched above has been placed between a pair of twin dressers to save space. Later on, in a larger room, the dressers may be placed side by side and made to appear as one large piece of furniture. In this position, dressers serve as night tables, too. Lamps are proper hints for reading in bed. Note how the pattern in the dust-ruffle fabric matches that of the wall-paper. The apparent size of a room depends largely on the way the furnishings are arranged. If you would like some new, up-to-date ideas on space maneuvering, come in and have a copy chat with one of our experienced decorators. We are always most happy when we can be helpful." Hagerman Man Is Claimed by Death

HAGERMAN, May 24—Ross G. Finch, 61, died at 1 a.m. Saturday morning in a Twin Falls hospital after a heart attack. Mr. Finch was born in Ashley, Wyo., Aug. 24, 1892 and came to Hagerman in 1919 to work for the Idaho Power company being stationed at Upper Salmon power plant.

He first worked in Gady's garage and later bought the establishment where Motor Inn is now, where he built the first tourist cabins in Hagerman. For the past 20 years Mr. Finch has worked for Idaho Power company being stationed at Upper Salmon power plant.

He was a member of Hagerman lodge No. 71, A.F. and A.M. and of the Lea Orway club, American Legion. He is survived by his wife, Reola, whom he married Oct. 21, 1910.

Other survivors are a step-daughter, Sandra Wood, who attends University of Idaho, Moscow; one stepson, Bobbie A. Wood, Mountain Home; three step-grandchildren, two brothers, Bert Finch, Arden, Wyo., and Jean Finch, Medford, Ore.; and one sister, Mrs. Erma Gardner, Grand Junction, Colo.

Funeral services will be held at 2 p.m. Tuesday in the Hagerman LDS church with Bishop Paul H. Hagedorn officiating. Friends may call from 10:30 a.m. Monday until Tuesday noon at the Weaver mortuary in Wendell and at the church an hour before the funeral. Concluding rites will be in Hagerman cemetery.

Talent of Local Eighth, Ninth Grade Pupils Is Noted in Exhibit at School

A desk, a coffee table and a pastel drawing won first prizes for their creators in the top classes at the Twin Falls junior high school industrial and fine arts display in the school library Friday evening.

The display was divided into two classes, the higher projects of the eighth and ninth grade students were termed by the students' instructors "excellent pieces of art."

Winners of the top prizes were Roger Wilson, 14, son of Mr. and Mrs. Dale Wilson, route 2, Piler, an eighth grader who constructed the coffee table; Wesley Weaver, 14, son of Mrs. Margaret Weaver, 137 Locust street south, a ninth grader who made the desk; and Guy Ohlaur, 16, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joe Ohlaur, 1847 Elizabeth boulevard, a ninth grader who drew a pastel drawing of Yellow Belly stream at the Clark Miller ranch in Blaine.

Prizes awarded to the boys were wootton trophies made in the industrial arts class with silver plates on the trophies engraved with the winners' names. Miss Ohlaur received a prize of $1.25.

Maple lamps drew top prizes for students in class two competition in industrial arts. The lamps were made by eighth grader Max Smith, 14, son of Mr. and Mrs. L. E. Smith, 442 Buchanan street, and ninth grader Gerald Armstrong, 14, son of Mr. and Mrs. H. L. Armstrong, route 2, Twin Falls.

The two boys were awarded fishing knives for their work.

Carolyn Breckenridge, 18, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Breckenridge, route 2, Twin Falls, won second prize of $1 for her gouache painting of Snake river canyon in the fine arts competition. Miss Breckenridge is in the ninth grade.

Of the nearly 80 pieces of industrial arts exhibited in the display, half by eighth grade boys and half by ninth grade boys. For each grade, the projects were separated into two classes, the higher projects in class one and smaller projects such as lamps and bowls were in class two.

The fine arts projects, consisting of paintings and drawings, were rated as one group and projects were entered by eighth and ninth grade students, mostly girls.

Industrial arts instructor Virgil Cowles explains the students' work on the projects for only one semester. Eighth graders take mechanical drawing the first semester, then shop classes during the second semester.

Cowles teaches the eighth graders Kenneth Purpur, who teaches the ninth grade students in industrial arts, explaining the ninth graders take shop during the first semester and mechanical drawing in the second.

Projects in the display from mechanical drawing classes were not judged for the display and no prizes were awarded.

Second-place winners of class one were ninth grader Ronald Smith and Kerry Moran, who tied for the honor and eighth grader Dale Blackburn. Maxwell made a magazine rack and Moran made a chemistry table. Blackburn made a serving table.

Second-place winners of class two were Joe Kenney, a ninth grader who made a checkerboard, and Jay Denbury, an eighth grader, who made a lamp.

The projects were rated by John Reacher, industrial-arts instructor in Burley high school.

DAV Chapter Is Organized For Gooding

GOODING, May 24—A new chapter of Disabled American Veterans was formed here Thursday night at a meeting in Veterans Memorial hall.

Tom Henry, Gooding, department commander, presided over the meeting and introduced officers and visitors present.

Officers and visitors present included Mr. and Mrs. T. M. Knigh, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Morris, Mrs. W. C. Stone, Mr. and Mrs. Carl Butterfield, Clarence Hays and Mrs. and Mrs. Denny Julian, et al.

Refreshments were served by the strident chapter and a social hour followed.

Rupert Man Has Youth Work Job

RUPERT, May 24—C. L. Culbertson, Rupert, has been appointed youth rehabilitation field representative for 19 north Idaho counties, with headquarters at Lewiston.

The department is set up by the legislature in 1935 but no funds were available for field representatives until this year.

Culbertson will have the supervision of youngsters returned from military service and will work with county officials to establish local methods for delinquency control.

The youth rehabilitation department is set up under the mental health division of the state board of health.

Culbertson has worked for the past three years at Lewiston, as director of the juvenile department of Lemhi county. He graduated from the University of Idaho, and the University of Washington, and received his masters degree in social work from the University of Utah.

While serving in the army, Culbertson did work with the mental health clinic. He has also worked in Scouting.

Library District Eyed in Wendell

WENDELL, May 24—Dorcas D. Hart, state librarian, and Mrs. Albert T. Hart, extension librarian of the Idaho state library, are planning a workshop beginning at 2 p. m. tomorrow at the city high school.

The meeting will be held in the all-purpose room of the high school. Attending were members of the library board headed by Mrs. G. O. Hopper.

Discussion centered about creation of a library district and it was reported that new forms are being circulated, requiring 50 signatures, which will enable the county commissioners to call an election.

Mrs. Walter Handie, county library adviser, called the county-wide meeting for all persons interested in obtaining library service in rural areas.

Handie demonstrated cataloging of books to the group for the Wendell library. She pointed out that development of library service is receiving national study and many states have developed their resources in rural areas by stations, depot libraries, mail and bookmobile services.

Chamberlain Quits School To Head Barnstorming Tour Qualifying for Throughout South America U.S. Golf Open

NEW YORK, May 24 (AP)—Will Chamberlain, one of the most publicized basketball players of the generation, announced Friday he was quitting the University of Kansas to head a barnstorming tour of 20 countries.

Chamberlain said the "game I was forced to play at K. U. wasn't basketball. It was hurting my chances of ever developing into a successful professional player."

He said he was referring to the tactics used by Chamberlain's teammates. He said they put two, three and sometimes four men on him and sometimes held the ball for long periods. He said he had to neglect many phases of play which "a man should master if he is to be a star."

The seven-foot, All-American star from Philadelphia said he planned to organize the barnstorming tour of Negro players and one of white players for the tour.

He said the squads would be made up of "great good players" who would be able to play in college or who couldn't make the grade.

He said that because "I'm not a star" he would be playing forward to playing pro basketball in the National Basketball association as a member of the Philadelphia Warriors, who hold draft rights to his services.

At K. U., I WANTED to develop the all-around game I need to meet the challenge of the professional game to face when he moved up to the University of San Francisco to the basketball team.

Chamberlain said the barnstorming tour would give him a chance to make some money for his family and to travel to see his mother and three girls.

Chamberlain said he had received only board, room, tuition and laundry for laundry and incidentals.

MILWAUKEE, May 24 (AP)—The Milwaukee Braves are keeping their eyes on the National League pennant through September.

Al Owen Takes Pioneer League Batting Lead
SPOKANE—AL OWEN—Al Owen, slugging Cowboy third sacker, took over the Pioneer League batting leadership in the 40th game of the season.

Owen, who was batting .300 in his first 10 games, hit .317 in his 11th game, giving him a .317 batting average.

The slugging Cowboys continued to improve in team batting, moving into third place in the league behind Great Falls and Pocatello with a .273 team average.

Chamberlain said he had received only board, room, tuition and laundry for laundry and incidentals.

NEW YORK, May 24 (AP)—With a record entry of 2,150 players, golfers will be bucking 15-1 odds when they try to qualify for the 88th U.S. Open championship at Tulsa, Okla., June 12-15.

Monday at Honolulu and a week later at Los Angeles.

But Charles Arthur Herzberger, the Pioneer League's top pitcher, looks like the big man to change all that.

Herzberger appears to be the best chance to send his fellow pitcher to the majors.

Although the Magic Valley Cowboys graduated several players into eventual major league baseball, Herzberger is the only one who has not.

How to Ruin Children 'in 11 Easy Lessons' Told by Writer

Editor, Times-News:
 Rules for rearing juvenile delinquents are easy things served as juvenile offenders for 13 years and having to care for every school in the country, including all cities and towns as well. I speak with experience.

Rule 1—Begin with infancy to give the child everything he wants in that way he will grow up lying the other ways him a living.

Rule 2—When he learns to pick up "bad" or "dirty" words from his or her dirty container for words and associates, laugh at him. That will make him think he is "cute." Then he will use up other words and ideas that will know the top of your head.

Rule 3—Never give him any special attention when he is 21 and then let him die for himself.

Rule 4—Praise him in his presence to all the neighbors, absent of just how much smarter he is than the neighbor's children.

Rule 5—Avoid the use of the word "wrong." It may develop in the child a "guilt complex." This will prevent him to believe that he is picked up by an officer and is punished for stealing a car, breaking into a home, assaulting a girl, that he is being persecuted.

Rule 6—When he comes home and there is his hat, shoes, books and clothes anywhere he sees fit, let mother pick them up for him might be used from playing ball. No one in the house or outside the lawn. Do everything for him, so that he will be experienced in showing business to others.

Rule 7—Never buy him good books to develop his young mind in better habits, but let him read anything he wants. Have no concern whatever for what his mind is being soaked with. Provide him with his cup for his hip, but let his brain drink out of his dirty container for words and associates, laugh at him. That will make him think he is "cute." Then he will use up other words and ideas that will know the top of your head.

Rule 8—Have frequent quarrels and fumes in the presence of your children. In this way they will be prepared for broken homes of their own later on.

Rule 9—Give him all the spending money he wants; never let him earn his own. Satisfy every craving of the child for food, drinks, yes, everything that has to do with sex, hear, sight, taste or smell in order's gratification.

Rule 10—Take his part against all policemen, sheriffs or officers of the law, teachers, neighbors. They are all against your boy.

Rule 11—When your boy gets into real trouble, and stands in the presence of the judge, defend him to the end, but never could do anything with him.

Dworshak Agrees Budge Must Seek Relection to Job

Editor, Times-News:
 I read with considerable interest your editorial you wrote on the desirability of reelected Courtman Budge in contrast as a representative from the state.

I am in the unenviable agreement with your views and I assure you I am doing everything I can to encourage Congressman Budge to seek reelection. He has several important committee assignments and is doing exceptionally outstanding work for our state and the nation.

I have many friends with whom I have served in the house of representatives, and I am fully aware of the "professing" respect these congressmen have for Hiram Budge. This is the real test for any member of congress, and in this instance I do appreciate the dedicated service being rendered by our second district congressman.

Because Hiram and I are among the few Republicans from the Northwest states serving in congress, and also because we are both serving on the appropriations committee, we have frequently conferred in watching legislative developments. It would be a pleasure for me to see Congressman Budge should decide not to seek reelection.

Gooding Man Claims Federal Use of Alcoholic Drink Large

Editor, Times-News:
 Something for the League of Women Voters and Ministerial Association to look into an investigation.

The government of the United States has in its annual budget—amount of $600,000,000 for alcoholic beverages in official parties, conferences, luncheons and conferences. All liquor used is bought out of our taxes. High government officials attend most of the parties and drink more than their share, yet there has never been a voice of protest against these practices. The above was printed in "Western Voice" by Dr. Harry W. Spencer, Eugene, Ore.

The following was taken from the "Idaho Challenge," Boise, Idaho: "A secret kept for more than twelve months, the wine collars in the White House have been enlarged only 1/2 inch, for taking 2000 acre of the finest vintage wine, valued at $50,000. In January, 1951, some 20 dozen top wine officials of the United States sent President and Mrs. Eisenhower, gratis, many cases of the finest wines of the three states. The wine collars in California—Chief Justice Earl Warren's state, New York, Tom Dewey's state, and Ohio.

The wine industry set up proper specifications for the right kind of wine for the appropriations committee at proper temperature. Orders were given from the president's office for the White House carpenters to get busy. West coast vineyards also supplied the bottles opened by the appropriations committee. President Nixon, however, nothing was said about wine collars and deep freeze.

The year's top soil bank payment of $78,181,331 to the Garry farm, near Kams, for taking 2000 acre of wheat by Secretary of Agriculture Benson, which is figured in the increase of farm products. A list of 67 farmers who last year got more than $50,000 each—Of the famous on the list, 70 per cent were located in Arizona, California, and Texas.

Also nothing was said by Benson about the wool subsidy of $2,263,100 went for the sheep sheep producer while the farmer in Idaho only got $650,000. Benson was willing to continue the wool subsidy but would like to cut the dairyman and farmer's subsidy.

Institutions in Idaho to Grant Degrees To 1,357 Students at Graduation Rites

By The Associated Press
 Idaho's institutions of higher learning will grant degrees to 1,357 students at commencement programs beginning next week-end, with the 853 at University of Idaho topping the list.

Idaho State college will give degrees to 310, the College of Idaho 120 and Northwest Nazarene college 72.

Honorary degrees will be given to 14—six to the College of Idaho and four at University of Idaho. The College of Idaho at Caldwell will start the commencement activities with baccalaureate services on Friday evening and graduation exercises Saturday morning.

Baccalaureate at Northwest Nazarene college in Nampa will be held Sunday morning, June 1, and commencement will be held Monday evening, June 2.

The University of Idaho will wind things up a week later, with baccalaureate the morning of June 4 and commencement following in the afternoon.

University of Idaho will grant honorary degrees to men in the fields of business, medicine and water resources. Dr. H. J. Zornoff, Chicago, operator of a chain of restaurants that for many years has featured Idaho potatoes, will receive a doctor of law degree. The award was voted to him last year but he was unable to be present to receive it.

Rare Arrowpoints, Other Artifacts Goals of Those Who Dig in Old Indian Campsites

Rare Arrowpoints Reward Collectors

The results of arrowhead hunting is the display shown by Mr. Howard Munson. The Munsons have collected arrowheads for 18 years and have dozens of perfect points. Most of the arrowheads are made of obsidian, but many are made of agate or Jasper. Munson's goal in hunting arrowheads is to find a rare archeological specimen. (Staff photo-engraving)

Leslie L. Dean, Twin Falls, displays some of the prized arrowpoints he has collected over the years. The long point at the bottom of the display is a valuable Yuma culture point which he found at an old Yuma campsite in Twin Falls county. Dean and his father, Leslie V. Dean, have collected the arrowheads since 1931. (Staff photo-engraving)

The thrill of finding an archeological rarity is the main reason for hunting arrowpoints. . . Most of the arrowhead hunters do their prospecting in the canyons of the Snake river or along the smaller rivers and creeks that flow into the canyon. . . The Snake river canyon has been the wintering grounds for various Indian tribes over the centuries. . . Here's how Munson expresses his feeling for hunting arrowpoints: "It is similar to any other outdoor sport in that hunting arrowheads gives me a chance to get outdoors and get plenty of exercise. But most important I like the thrill and excitement of finding the rare arrowheads." . . . Munson has been collecting arrowheads and other Indian artifacts such as pottery, scrapers and mortars, for 10 years, usually during his hunting during the winter months. . . Dean, along with his father Leslie V. Dean, has nearly 5,000 artifacts which they believe to be the most extensive collection in the state. . . Munson notes that some arrowpoints may be found on the surface of the ground, but most of the artifacts are buried because over the years, detritus and sand have covered the old Indian campgrounds. . . At a site where obsidian chippings are prevalent and which could conceivably have been a good obsidian camp ground, artifact hunters who are meticulous about their work and who prefer to keep good records of where arrows are found, trench into the probable good arrowhead "digging." . . The primary goal of most arrowhead hunters are the perfect obsidian arrowheads which may date back to thousands of years. . . Discovery of Pabson or Yuma points is of great value to archeologists. . . Dean notes, however, one has found a Pabson point in this area, Dean believes, and himself — including himself — have found Yuma points.

City Recreation Program Includes Activity for All

"No one in Twin Falls should ever want for recreation," declares Ernest Craner, superintendent of the Twin Falls city parks and recreation department, "not only because of the extensive facilities we have, but also because of the natural resources in the area." . . . Included in the city recreation department are seven parks, so that everyone in the city lives within a half-mile radius of one of the parks, and a range of activities in the summer recreation program headed by Craner which is wide enough to suit every taste. . . The city-sponsored program's largest activity in terms of participation is the Knottshole baseball which is co-sponsored by the Times-News. Last year 63 boys teams were active, with approximately 700 boys participating and a total of 1,000 youths, including girls, in the entire baseball program. . . The summer recreation program will get under way June 10, and the parks and recreation department staff will soon swell from the eight regular employees through the winter to 50. . . One of the most popular types of recreation offered is swimming, and registration for swimming lessons is currently under way. Last year, 1,200 persons participated in the lessons. . . In fact, the swimming program has grown so large, that a full time supervisor, Mrs. Marie Abeggen, has been hired this year, in addition to pool managers at both Harmon and Harry Barry pool, as well as college students for instructors, and life guards. All are qualified life guards and certified water instructors, Craner noted. . . But baseball and swimming are only a fraction of the activities to be carried out four days each week at Harmon, Harry Barry, South, Drury, Bunnies and Harrison parks. (Continued on Page 19, Column 1)

Part of the collection of nearly 5,000 arrowheads of Leslie L. Dean and his father, Leslie V. Dean, Twin Falls, are these arrowpoints he has on display in glass covered frames. Dean is pointing to a long Yuma culture point he found in an old Yuma campsite in Twin Falls county. (Staff photo-engraving)

Screens Are Used to Find Artifacts

Two of an arrowhead hunter are displayed by Howard Munson. He uses the shovel to dig into the all Indian arrowheads, and places the dirt on the screen, either the two-man screen at the left or the one-man screen at right, which sifts the earth to reveal arrowheads. Munson made his screen. (Staff photo-enshring)

Collectors Say Thrill of Finding Rare Artifact Reason for Arrowpoint Hunt

Collectors say the thrill of finding rare artifacts is the reason for the arrowpoint hunt in the Snake river canyon. It is possible though that the points washed downstream from the upper Snake river to where they were found because Yuma points have been found in Wyoming.

The Polson points sought by arrowhead hunters have never been found in this area, Dean relates, but have been found in the Southwest, especially in New Mexico. Various archeologists place the date of the Polson Indians around 15,000 to 30,000 years ago. The dates are indefinite because of differences of archeological opinion.

Eventually, Dean believes, Yuma man and his predecessors, the Polson man, will be dated with more accuracy through the so-called carbon 14 test. This peaceful offshoot of the atomic bomb gauges the age of charcoal or other organic material through radiation. Thus charcoal from a long-dead Polson hunter's campfire in which he left a broken arrowhead could be dated.

Archaeologists believe Polson man came to America from his homeland in Europe and Asia by way of Alaska. He traveled from Alaska to southwestern United States by a route not yet determined, but presumed to have been east of the continental divide.

Polson points are finely constructed weapons. They differ from Yuma points in being shorter and somewhat broader. Their outstanding characteristic is the longitudinal "flute" running down one or both sides.

Making the characteristic flute seems to be a not and difficult art, since construction of the Polson point is a feat not duplicated by later American tribes.

Polson-like points have been found at Dean's Yuma site, but they lack the flute. He believes the two cultures overlapped, accounting for the Polson-like artifacts. Yuma-like points, too, have been found, indicating to Dean that Yuma culture also overlapped the later Indians.

Dean notes that many of the Yuma-like and Polson-like points he has found are of poor craftsmanship. The flaking is crude and not fine as is that of real Yuma points.

A normal expedition of arrowhead hunters includes taking shovels, screens, boxes and usually a lunch to the hunting site because some men stay out all day if possible, according to Munson.

The hunters usually drive as far as possible towards the hunting ground then hike the remainder of the way, always keeping their eyes on the ground for a stray arrowhead.

When the hunters reach the digging site, they set up camp and perhaps dig all day for the precious artifacts.

Sometimes the hunters only find one arrowpoint in an all-day search. Sometimes they find as many as 10 and if they find any more than 10, the search is considered phenomenal.

"But I'm satisfied if I only find one arrowhead in a day's expedition," Munson confesses. He says, "I have a real good time hunting for points though."

Two That Didn't Get Away

Two from a record haul plenty big enough to make most anglers happy are these two Mackinac trout caught in Priest Lake recently by Les Kretzenky, left, and Arline Golden, both of Priest Lake, Kretzenky's fish weighed 25 pounds and Miss Golden's, 21. Some critics complain that the publication of photos like this spoil the fun of catching ordinary-sized fish for the rest of us. Others say it's the thing — not the fish. What do you think? (Fish and game department photo—staff service)

Do Pictures of Huge Fish Discourage Anglers in Sport? Writer Wondering

BY BETH RHODENBAUGH
(Fish and Game Department)

A picture of a huge fish recently published in an Idaho newspaper led to some rather interesting comment in the same paper a few days later.

Tonight in check, the comment continues that the picture would spoil everybody's fishing for the year. Who could hope to equal such a catch?

At the same time, there was a hint of self-doubt, echoing an opinion often expressed by professional and non-professional conservationists alike. They argue that "dead fish" pictures of this type tend to arouse acute attacks of angler's pique, for which the only cure is to go out and throw the water steadily and mightily until the victim either drops dead or beats the competition. Meanwhile, the suffering angler regards the fish he does catch with something less than enthusiasm.

There may be a grain of truth in the optimism that publicity given to unusual catches may make some anglers more conscientious with their fishing, encouraging the joyous notion that the aim of fishing is to catch either the biggest fish or the most fish or both. Over-stressing bag limits may do the same thing.

As a matter of fact, many people feel that "fishing deserts" and lavish stocking of special waters for juveniles teach the same misconception to youngsters. All of these, and others, "sometimes begin to combine into a general attitude that if you don't break some kind of record, fishing is lousy.

In regard to bag limits, especially many people feel that the law "lets" "it" say "they" want to go fishing, as if "limits" were a synonym for "enlightenment." Actually the bag limit regulation doesn't entitle anybody to anything, it merely poses a limit on a fisherman's must stop taking fish when and if he gets so many fish or so many pounds of fish, as the case may be. The limit is a maximum, intended to draw a line at the point where fish-biology begins, and not to provide a standard of proficiency.

For those who would like to see just what the Idaho fishing picture is, the statistics derived from the fishing harvest questionnaire replies, creel censuses and road checks provide some interesting details.

Each year about 220,000 people buy Idaho fishing licenses. They make something more than two million fishing trips a year. Each year for the past four years they have brought in more than nine million

Only a handful of little trout, but they are California Goldeneye caught in a high Sawtooth mountain lake far from the end of the pavement — any pavement. Joe Lewis, Boise, picked up these three shimmering beauties at Every Lake last summer. (Fish and game department photo—staff service) trout, about two million kokanee, about three million warm water fish, 20 to 40 thousand steelhead, about 25 thousand salmon, two to four thousand chinook and half a million whitefish.

The fisherman in Idaho is essentially a trout fisherman — nearly 90 per cent of the people reply to the fishing questionnaire say trout fishing was their favorite. The "average" resident fisherman makes 12 fishing trips a year — nine of them for trout. The "average" catch contains about five trout (probably of a rather modest size). However, it should be remembered that the average good fisherman will get more than five, and the average poor, inexperienced or disinterested fisherman will generally get fewer.

The average seasonal catch, according to these statistics, is 50 to 55 trout per fisherman. The chinook fisherman averages about two salmon a year, steelheaders usually a little less, and sturgeon fishermen a little better than steelheaders. Hidden within these orderly figures, of course, are many different kinds of fisherman. On the average non-residents, have a consistently low rate of fishing success, though their hunting score is pretty good.

Among the 220,000 people who have Idaho fishing licenses each year there also are many learners, many who seem unable to get the hang of fishing no matter how hard they try, and many who fish only to be "socialable" — to go along with others who urge the trip.

As a matter of fact, most of Idaho's license buyers seem to belong somewhere in one of these groups, for 80 per cent of the fishing harvest is taken by 20 per cent of the fishermen.

Nevertheless, many of the less "lucky" fishermen are perfectly happy with their fishing. Once the emphasis is taken off the quantity of fish and placed on the quality of the fishing, the picture brightens. Idaho is fortunate in having a number of exceptional fish species in sufficient numbers that any fairly good fisherman with a reasonable amount of free time can hope to bring in a giant without too much trouble.

That is, if he doesn't insist on breaking a record. With these species (kalmiopsis, mackinaw, sturgeon, chinook salmon, steelhead, and even rainbow and cutthroat trout in some waters) a fish can demand a lot of skill and bring a lot of satisfaction without coming near the record.

However, most of the happy fishermen in Idaho are those like Jack Watson who can fish occasionally along the bank of some pleasant stream, heart and mind happily in tune with sun and shade and crystal currents. Such a fisherman enjoys the fishing aspect of an ordinary, carefree trout upon his fly. He craves no record, and he is not interested in any one half of a smaller fish, but they are "speckled beauties" to him, and he goes home happy.

By contrast, there is the stormy weather to whom fishing is more a matter of pride than recreation. He isn't fishing for rest, or health, or fun, or skill. He is fishing for the dead fish picture, and the chances are pretty good that he won't even get that.

Heavy Equipment Used to Construct New Airstrip at Oakley

Construction equipment hummed all day Tuesday and until 2 p.m. Wednesday to build the Oakley airstrip. The equipment is shown spreading dirt on the north end of the strip which was taken from a hill in the middle of the strip. Approximately 60,000 yards of earth was moved to eliminate the hill. (Staff photo—overpage)

A pipeline was installed across the runway at the Oakley airport to accommodate a small canal about 1,800 yards from the south end of the airstrip. Mostly volunteer labor worked on the project which was completed in two days. The 254 feet of 36-inch pipeline was purchased by the state aeronautics department. (Staff photo—overpage)

Construction of Airstrip for Oakley Requires All-Out Community Efforts

Oakley, May 24—Earth was moved by more than 60,000 yards of dirt to build the new airstrip at Oakley, Idaho, Tuesday and Wednesday as the citizens of Oakley, assisted by men and machinery from surrounding communities, the bureau of land management, the forest service workers and a small group of volunteers, made an airport out of a rough hillside only four blocks from the village center.

The goal of the workers was to build the airstrip in only one day, but the job of moving estimated 60,000 yards of dirt to flatten a hill to the center of the strip was more than the planners envisioned. The crew put the final touches on the airstrip Wednesday afternoon and stood back to watch the first airplane land, that of Chet Nielson, Idaho's director of aeronautics.

Completion of the strip eliminated nearly 10 years of waiting and two years of planning, according to Chet Nielson, president of the Oakley Chamber of Commerce, who has been the backbone in planning and supervising the construction.

Nielson explains that the village has needed and wanted an airport for 10 years, but has never had sufficient funds for construction.

"I don't know how to land here," he explains, "but they landed on the hill outside of the village where they parked."

"If for no other reason, we wanted an airport to get the airplane out of the village area," Nielson explains.

An article in the Times-News last week telling of the intentions of the forest service and the bureau of land management to build a small airport at Oakley was the spark that prompted Oakley to build their present airstrip.

"We figured with the cooperation of the forest service, the BLM and the Oakley citizens, we could build a strip near the town which would be the purpose of all three groups," Nielson explains.

So the Oakley Chamber of Commerce contacted Chet Nielson, director of aeronautics, to see if he would contact the state and federal services.

Nielson's reply to the Oakley Chamber was that the cooperation of the forest service could be obtained. So, the aeronautics department would help financially, Nielson explains that the aeronautics department always selects the site of the new airports in the state and that the state and federal services would help in building the new airports.

The citizens of the village were the airport is located will proclaim a special day and enlist the aid of all its citizens.

The aeronautics department helps pay for fuel for machinery, food and water for some of the workers.

With the go-ahead from the aeronautics department, Nielson explained the Chamber of Commerce began making plans for the airport.

Archie Barker, Oakley, was appointed head of the airport committee and he made arrangements to secure equipment and volunteer labor for the construction.

"We didn't have much time to make the necessary arrangements," Barker says, "The strip had to be completed by Friday, May 23. So most of us worked almost constantly to get things arranged, practically ignoring our businesses."

The lots on which the airport has been built were owned by the village, a land company in Los Angeles, county commissioner, Cassia county and the bureau of land management. The Chamber of Commerce acquired easements to all of the lots for the city with a stipulation that if the airport is ever put out of commission, the land will be returned to the original owner.

A portion of the racetrack surrounding the rodeo grounds next to the airstrip was given to the village for the airport by the Oakley Vigilantes, a local riding club. The airport sits the east end of the racetrack.

Many of the men who provided machinery, and operators for the airport construction, volunteered their equipment without being asked. H. Severson, an Oakley contractor, was the first of the volunteers. He provided a bulldozer, two earthmovers and the operators.

Other contractors provided equal amounts of equipment and many farmers volunteered their farm machinery.

"The only thing lacking for the job was sufficient water trucks," Barker notes. "The whole operation was allowed somewhat because of the fact that trucks to spread water in front of the earthmovers when they dumped dirt in the low spots of the strip."

Altogether, machinery valued at $400,000 worked on the project, which included eight carry-all trucks, two water trucks, two earthmovers, three bulldozers, five motor graders, a loader, road pucker, a motor grader, two water trucks, two farm tractors and three dump trucks. It was estimated the cost of operating the equipment for the two days amounted to approximately $100.

Operators expenses were extra. The fuel for the machinery was mostly donated by local fuel companies. Barker says, "The fuel that wasn't donated was paid for by port will pay for itself in a few years.

Although the airport is considered complete now, work will still be done on the strip later this fall and next spring. After the heavy rains during the fall, the field must be leveled again because it will probably settle somewhat and the same will need to be done next spring.

By the fall of 1959, Nielson expects the field to be settled sufficiently so the village can plant grass on the strip to make a firm road.

"We can't plant grass now because the grass will make the strip too hard to level after it settles," Nielson says. The village will be responsible for leveling and maintaining the field.

A wind sock has been put up about the center point of the runway, provided by the aeronautics department, which shows pilots the direction the wind is blowing when the pilots prepare to land or take off.

Moulton expects Monday night, Tuesday and Wednesday night at Oakley helping the men build the airport, but left early Wednesday morning to attend a meeting in Boise.

The state aeronautics department's participation in the construction of the field is similar to that given other communities in the state such as Carey and Rexburg, where airports were constructed in one day.

Moulton described the airports as "grass roots airstrips," and explains that the state aeronautics department's participation in the construction of the field is similar to that given other communities in the state such as Carey and Rexburg, where airports were constructed in one day.

The 4,000-foot runway runs north and south to take advantage of the prevailing winds. A parking strip built at the north end of the runway is only two blocks from the center of town and is almost a block long.

The plans were constructed on the parking strip for three airplanes, but Nielson estimates almost 50 airplanes could be parked there.

Albert Anderson, a rancher near Oakley and the only person in the village who owns an airplane, will probably move his airplane from the Rupert airport to the new landing field which will be a hangar there, according to Nielson.

A major advantage of the airport for Oakley residents and neighboring farmers will be the money saved by farmers who hire spraying done by airplanes, according to Moulton.

Nielson adds that almost all of the farmers have some sort of spraying done on their farms by aircraft and even if it only saves them a few cents per acre, the air-ported and usually the village and improvements over the years.

Moulton cites as an example, the airport at Rexburg, which is improved so that several owners use the strip daily, and several of the residents of Rexburg have purchased planes.

Seven other villages are working now to obtain grass roots airstrips. They are Homedale, Wendell, Percé, Eastport, near Canadian border, Wadley, Yellow Pine and Lapwai.

One stipulation for the grass roots airstrips is to receive aid from the aeronautics department in that the strip must be within one-half mile of town. Moulton expects the airports at Wendell and Wadley to have trouble for that reason.

"The amount of money which the aeronautics department will put into village airports varies, but Moulton said the Oakley airport would not cost the department more than $2,000.

Members of the Oakley Chamber of Commerce airport committee besides Barker include Ray C. Drake and Donald J. Clark.

Firms which donated equipment to work on the strip include H. B. Severson, W. B. Whitley, Albert Anderson and Ross, Vern Hofbauer.

Water Storage Eyed by Reclamation Experts

Shown discussing possible upstream storage sites during the recent Idaho State Reclamation association convention are N. V. Sharp, Filer, left, who retires at the end of this year as national reclamation association Idaho director, and Fred M. Cooper, Grass, state association president. Cooper points to high altitude site in Clearwater county possibly suitable for upstream storage. (Staff photo-engraving)

Vital Interest in Water Problems Gains Area Resident Recognition Across U.S.

It has been my hobby to see that the Twin Falls Canal company was the most efficient manner possible," says N. V. Sharp, Filer, who has been prominent in reclamation work in Idaho for 25 years.

A farmer whose one consuming interest has been concern for water rights of Idaho residents, Sharp has gained national prominence through his service for the past 25 years as Idaho director of the National Reclamation association.

Another area of his work was serving as chairman of the Snake River Reservoir commission during the planning and building of Fallsdam dam which was completed last fall and now is filling up for the first time this spring.

Highway Accident Claims Fifth Life

EUREKA, Calif., May 24 (UP)—Two-year-old Sherill Larsen died Thursday of injuries received in a collision between an auto and a logging truck, the fifth fatal victim of the accident.

Following the death of her brother, Sharp bought out the heirs and the young couple farmed the "Weaver" place, near the mouth of Rock creek. Five children were born to them there, one of whom died in infancy.

In 1918 they moved to the farm he now owns, one mile east of Filer, across from the Asgrow Seed company. One of his sons, Edward Sharp now is serving as chairman of the official board of the Christian church in Twin Falls. He is a past president of Filer Kiwanis club and belonged to the State Chamber of Commerce for several years.

He is the recipient of a 25-year membership certificate from Filer Grange received in 1929, and one of the few holders of a life membership in the National Reclamation association. This was given him Nov. 13, 1923. His wife died in September, 1948, and Sharp married the former Mrs. C. E. Allen Dec. 2, 1951.

Sharp's interest in water rights has brought him into many groups involving long tedious hours of negotiation, where patience was a prime prerequisite.

He served as chairman of the Idaho commission to the Snake River compact commission, which involved four years of negotiation on water rights between the states of Idaho and Wyoming.

Most recent honor, which he had to turn down because of his health, was his appointment by Gov. Robert E. Smylie as official delegate from Idaho to the National Rivers and Harbors congress held early this month.

Sharp believes that Idaho has the best water laws in the country and says that water users of Snake river have from necessity learned to respect other people's rights.

Many times he has traveled on his "farm" all day, driven to Idaho Falls after 9 p.m. for a meeting the next day, and then returned home after an all-day session of negotiation.

However, even reclamation conventions have their moments. Sharp recalls with a chuckle one national convales in Phoenix.

To 1923 Sharp was appointed by the late Gov. C. Ben Ross among 11 of 10 Idahoans to meet in Salt Lake City with representatives of 11 other western states interested in reclamation.

At that time it looked as if the reclamation bureau of the department of interior would be dissolved because of lack of congressional funds and support, Sharp noted.

A picture of Sharp holding some of the spoils along with a local beauty queen is among his mementoes of his public life in reclamation interests.

Sharp was appointed by the late Gov. C. Ben Ross among 11 of 10 Idahoans to meet in Salt Lake City with representatives of 11 other western states interested in reclamation.

Noting that a hearing is slated on the controversy here today since June 2, Sharp says he believes that "Gracie Poot" is a hard one to down."

He served two terms on the state water conservation board under an appointment of Governor Ross and was reappointed by the late Gov. Bardella Clark.

In the spring of 1908, word of the development of the Twin Falls tract reached the Filer stable employee and several filled claims in September of that year.

Sharp's claim, which he "pored up" by building a shack and putting 10 percent of the water into the canal and irrigation, was three miles north and two miles west of Filer.

In 1907 he moved to the area permanently and the next spring filed out to Union Pacific railroad with a board for two years.
