

Europe Jaunt Is Under Way For Brothers

JEROME, June 21 — Two Jerome brothers left Friday on the first leg of a European tour which was the result of an invitation from an exchange student at the University of Idaho.

They are Frank Daley and Tim Daley, son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Daley, who went by bus from Twin Falls to Montreal, Canada, where they will board the steamship Emerald of Britain, arriving in Liverpool, England, July 1.

The youths plan to tour six or seven countries in Europe in a French car which they will purchase on their father. After their European tour they will ship the car to New York and will return to England for their friend, Steve Roberts, of Manchester, England.

They also plan to tour Ireland by bicycle and will return to New York by air and then drive home in the new foreign car.

The Daley youths are the first persons making European travel arrangements through the new Magic Carpet Travel agency in Twin Falls.

Warning Given

BARNESLEY, England, June 21 (AP) — Labor Party leader Hugh Gaitskell today warned against sending American and British troops into Lebanon.

"We cannot have another Suez," he said in a speech prepared for a meeting of Yorkshire miners here in which he referred to the disastrous intervention of British and French troops in Egypt in 1956. "We want no rash or foolish adventures in a situation as explosive as today's. We must abide strictly by the charter of the United Nations."

Freed Priests Fail to Agree On Sentences

HONG KONG, June 21 (UPI)—Two American Roman Catholic priests, pale and tired from five years in Chinese Communist captivity, today voiced opposing views on the validity of the charges on which they were convicted.

The Rev. Joseph P. McCormick, of Ossining, N. Y., and the Rev. Cyril Wagner, of Pittsburgh, Pa., arrived in Hong Kong by British steamer from Shanghai this morning. They were released Sunday after serving out five year terms on charges of espionage.

Both appeared pale and tired. The Rev. Father Wagner wore a white shirt, slacks and a cap. The Rev. Father McCormick had on a black suit and dark pants.

Shortly after their arrival, the two priests held a brief news conference at Hong Kong's Catholic center.

When the Rev. Father Wagner, a Franciscan, told newsmen, "I do not deny the charges, the Rev. Father McCormick interrupted: "He's talking through his hat."

They were arrested by Red Chinese police on June 15, 1953. The Rev. Father Wagner was charged with "sabotaging China's financial resources"; the other with "collecting political economic information under cover of being a priest."

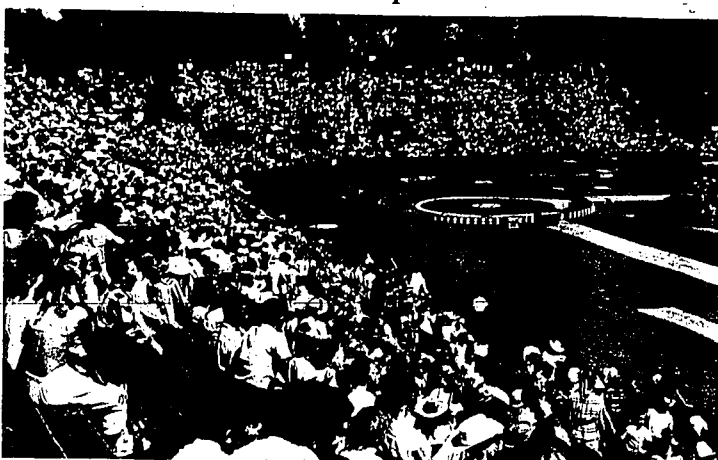

The Rev. Father McCormick, a member of the Maryknoll order, "absolutely" denied the charges. He said the Communist "propaganda" set the truth even if it served their purpose.

The Rev. Father Wagner, 33, has an asthmatic condition, said he spent about three years in his prison sentence in the hospital. He said "I feel much better now than I had expected."

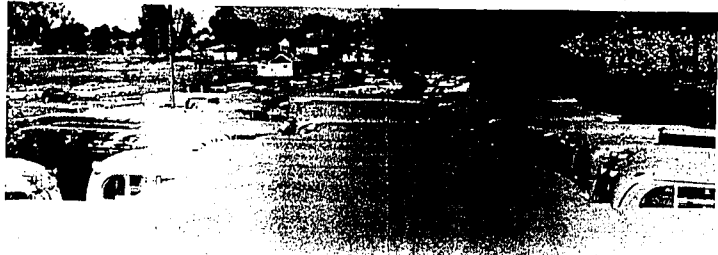

Asked about the Red charges that he dealt in the black market money exchange, the Rev. Father Wagner said, "There was no black market here—people were leaving the country and I accepted their money."

"I acknowledge the fact that it is in contravention of Chinese regulations," he said.

Crowds of Children Jam Ballpark for Shrine Circus

A jam-packed Jaycee ballpark greeted the opening performance in Twin Falls Friday afternoon of the Shrine circus. Friday's patrons included youngsters for the most part who sat in the sun, lolled, applauded and consumed a lot of popcorn, soft drinks and cotton candy. Hundreds more children jammed the park Saturday. (Staff photo-engraving)

The buses were packed tightly in a lot west of the park. An evening performance Saturday marked the final showing this year for the circus. Standing room only crowds were on hand for all performances. The Shrine club portion of proceeds from the show aids crippled children. (Staff photo-engraving)

Oil Industry In Utah Said Encouraging

SUN VALLEY, June 21 (U.S.)—The president of Standard Oil company of California said today the future of Utah's oil industry is encouraging, but he said it depends largely on the depletion allowance.

"With the stimulus of percentage depletion, we can be reasonably certain that the young oil industry in Utah will continue to thrive," said G. E. Petersen, a native of Logan, Utah.

Speaks to Bankers

"Without it, we can just as reasonably expect the pace of development to decline," Petersen told the Utah Bankers association convention.

The economics of the situation is simple, Oil exploration and development are costly gambling businesses. Percentage depletion is the carrot before the horse. Take away this carrot, or reduce its size, and the willingness to gamble for oil will be reduced commensurately.

"Our rate of discovery and production, obviously, will likewise decline."

Hails Progress

He hailed the progress of Utah's oil industry, but cautioned against over-optimism.

He said some 75 million dollars will be spent on oil and gas development this year. This will mean employment to some 2,500 persons now working in Utah's employment industry.

A former Utah scientist predicted the United States would send a man around the moon and back within five years. Dr. James Fletcher, former Brigham Young university student, told the bankers in the closing session that he feels this country will have a man orbiting in space and returning to Earth within the next two years.

President Installed

Russell B. Hanson of Logan was installed as president of the association in the closing session this afternoon. He is executive vice president of the First National bank in Logan.

K. J. Sullivan, executive vice president of the Continental Bank and Trust company of Salt Lake City was installed as vice president.

Dr. Fletcher, who is in charge of electronics at the Ramo-Wooldridge corporation in Los Angeles, said with the present development of rockets and missiles it is entirely possible to send a space vehicle to Mars.

Aids Development

He said the development of small hydrogen powered jet missiles development. He said the United States holds the lead in nuclear weapon development but lags in development in the ability to launch them.

"The rapid increase in the rocket engine business, especially the solid-fuel phase, will benefit Utah," Fletcher said. He said a hefty increase in the electronics business also would benefit Utah's budding electronics and missiles fuels industries.

Attendance for Shrine Circus Here Is Estimated at 20,000

Approximately 20,000 persons crowded into Jaycee park during the four performances of the Polack Brothers Shrine circus Friday and Saturday, reports Dale Eberlein, general chairman.

Good weather during both days and a newly organized show were contributing factors, Eberlein stated. Over four crowds attended every performance. Children from every part of Magic Valley had a chance to see the 20 feature acts.

A total of 52 buses from throughout the valley brought youngsters to the ball park Friday, and 57 fully packed vehicles returned again Saturday. The buses and tickets were paid for by local businessmen from each town and community.

Joseph O'Donnell, promotion manager for the circus, said he believed this year's attendance beat last year's. The stadium, which normally holds about 2,000, was packed at all times and extra bleachers were set up in the field. Even with this seating capacity, hundreds of children had to sit on the grassy field.

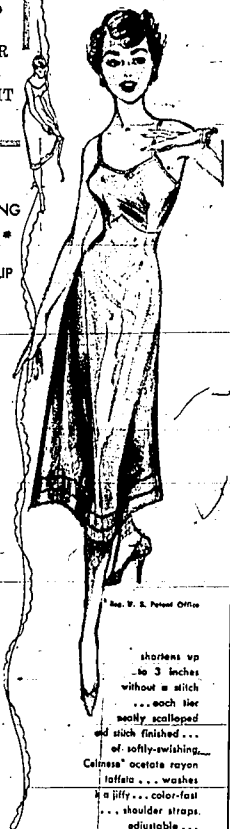

"This had been the first showing of the western unit of the Polack Brothers circus. In previous years the eastern unit has been showing at Twin Falls. During the past winter the circus dropped its eastern unit and formed the new amalgamated 1958 edition, combining the best acts of both units. The circus moves from here to Ogden, and then to Salt Lake City.

No accidents were reported at the ball park Friday, and 57 fully packed vehicles returned again Saturday. The buses and tickets were paid for by local businessmen from each town and community.

Man Changes Plea for Case

Melvin Wallace Cardwell, Twin Falls, charged with lead conduct with a child under the age of 16 years, Friday withdrew his plea of innocent in Twin Falls district court and pleaded guilty.

Judge Hugh A. Baker accepted the plea and will pronounce sentence at 1:30 p.m. Monday. Cardwell, arrested April 19 by city police, was arraigned on the charge April 21 in Twin Falls justice court.

He was ordered to stand trial in district court and held in the county jail in lieu of $5,000 bond. When he was arraigned in district court he was without funds and the court appointed Attorney Roy E. Smith, Twin Falls, to represent him. At that time he pleaded innocent.

Cardwell was then sent to state hospital south, Blackfoot, for examination and later returned to Twin Falls for trial.

Four Camping Sessions Being Planned for Valley's Girls

Four separate summer camp sessions will be held beginning July 6 at the Camp Fire Girls camp in the south hills area. Making plans for the sessions are, from left, Just Blakley, Twin Falls, counselor-in-charge; Marion Shroyer, camp director, and Ann O'Bryan, Burley, junior counselor. Regardless of whether they belong to a Camp Fire group or not, girls between the ages of 7 to 17 are eligible to make plans to attend one of the four sessions. (Staff photo engraving)

Boise Meet Divides Regional Blood Center in 5 Divisions

PIELER, June 21—A new code of procedure, dividing the 37 participating chapters of the Boise regional blood center into five divisions, was adopted at the annual regional meeting in Boise, according to Mrs. Elmer Parrott, Pielier, who represented the Twin Falls Red Cross chapter and district two.

Division two includes Twin Falls, Boise, Buhl, Gooding, Jerome and Lincoln chapters. Adoption of this procedure at the Boise meeting is the culmination of a year's planning, Mrs. Parrott said.

"Purpose is to coordinate the activities of the chapters with each other and with the regional center and to insure representation of individual chapters at the annual meetings."

Temporary officers of the division are E. J. Sluys, Jerome, chairman; Mrs. Parrott, Pielier, vice chairman; and Mrs. L. M. Jackson, Kimberly, secretary.

During a discussion of the financial aspects of the National Red Cross program, it was noted that because of financial reverses, national headquarters has cut its paid staff by 300 workers in the last year. It was pointed out there are at least 100 volunteer Red Cross workers to every paid worker.

It was stated that if the national Red Cross fails to get its money from each local chapter, all phases of the national program are endangered. This is particularly hard at the Twin Falls area, since the fund drives the last several years have not been successful, Mrs. Parrott said.

"Throughout the meeting discussion was held on ideas on how to inform the public on the need for and the uses of blood, Richard Muller, editor of the Caldwell Times, discussed different phases of publicity."

Other speakers were the Rev. O. Ganser, Nampa, donor recruitment in churches; Leonard Trego, Nampa, rural donor recruitment; and Charles Birnie, Boise, recruitment from business and industry.

Dr. E. P. Seaton, physician in charge of the Boise center, stated that during the summer months and holiday seasons, procurement efforts must be stepped up, as those are the times when more blood is needed and donors are more difficult to obtain.

He emphasized that whenever a blood quota is not met by one chapter, other chapters are assuming part of that chapter's responsibility as far as furnishing blood and the expense involved is concerned.

The Boise regional blood center is one of 24 such centers in the United States. The Red Cross blood program furnishes 40 per cent of the blood in this country. Dr. Seaton stated that tremendous advances in the knowledge and use of blood have occurred in the last 10 years.

Magic Valley Girls From 7 to 17 Are Signing up for Camp Fire Girl Camp

Magic Valley girls between the ages of 7 and 17 are being urged to consider attending one of four week-long Camp Fire Girls summer camp sessions starting July 6 at the organization's camp in the south hills. Camp Fire officials emphasize that a girl need not belong to a Blue Bird or Camp Fire group to be able to attend camp. "We encourage all girls to take part in our summer activities," one official said.

"Marion Shroyer, camp director, and youth counselors from throughout the Magic Valley area met Thursday at Camp Fire headquarters in the old hospital building here to map plans for the camp's four sessions."

Registration for the session beginning July 6 should be completed immediately, but girls can sign up for the other three sessions after July 1, officials note.

Girls can contact the local office or talk to Camp Fire representatives in the Idaho Department store in Twin Falls.

Officials point out that all precautions are taken to provide the girls with the healthiest facilities. The camp was started about five years ago.

Themes slated for use during the summer sessions are "Roman Holiday," "American the Beautiful," "TV-USA," and "Around the World in Seven Days."

Other camp officials are Nadine Koops, nurse; Phyllis Johnson, Hansen, kitchen; Hazel Johnson, cook; Mylene Pennock, Twin Falls, sports; Jean Chisholm, Burley, music; Kathryn Yakey, Anderson, Alaska, nature; Louise Vandenberg, Twin Falls, handicraft; Linda Lackey, Twin Falls, carpenter.

Junior counselors are Billie Hoffman and Sandra Hatfield, Twin Falls, and Ann O'Bryan, Burley. Counselor-aides are Janet Blakley and Sheila Reed, both Twin Falls.

40 Per Cent Will Go in Atom War

SA FRANCISCO, June 21 (AP)—Nuclear war wouldn't destroy the United States—just 40 per cent of it.

And the only way 60 per cent of the population could survive, a group of air force researchers forecast today, is for the United States not to lose that radioactive battle, but rather to "negotiate" it.

Should that stalemate be accomplished, said Herman Kahn, chairman of a 20-man research team at the Rand corporation of Santa Monica, the United States could reduce its survivors to very nearly their accustomed standard of living within 10 years.

Kahn addressed the closing session of a two-day symposium on modern warfare at the Haptiers Point naval radiological defense laboratory.

WENDLELL, June 21—Mrs. Arthur Byrd was hostess to members of the Wendell Health council Tuesday afternoon. Mrs. H. B. Loran, council president, presided for the business hour. Plans were made to meet July 15 with Mrs. Roy Minium. Late afternoon refreshments were served.

Tractor, Trailer Forced Off Road

RUPERT, June 21—A Pacific International Express tractor and trailer, loaded with 40,000 pounds of freight, rolled over into the borrow pit on highway 300, 23 miles east of Rupert at 8 a.m.

The driver reported an incoming truck which was over the white line, crossed him off the shoulder of the highway and he lost control. The driver of the car failed to stop.

A truck was sent from Pocatello this morning to pick up the freight. A heavy-duty wrecker arrived from Salt Lake City about 2 p.m. to remove the wreckage. Little damage was reported to the tractor but the trailer was demolished. State Patrol and Sheriff's Department investigated the accident.

Tradition

HOUSTON, Tex., June 21 (UPI)—The Avian Theater today canceled two matinee performances of Tennessee Williams' "Cat on the Hot Tin Roof" because the star, Diana Barrymore, came down with the measles.

But Miss Barrymore, in the usual tradition of her famous family, insisted on going through with tonight's play like she did last night even though she had a temperature of 101.5 degrees.

"Measles or not, darling, I'm going on," the daughter of famed John Barrymore told her doctor.

2 Americans Given Award Voters Offered Record Slate of Local Candidates for Post of District Judge

From Russia

MOSCOW, June 21 (UPI)—The Soviet union awarded the American Academy of Sciences and American Linus C. Pauling and Deiter W. Brink in a precedent action.

It also named Nuclear Physicist Bruno Pontecorvo who fled to Russia from the United States as a corresponding member of the academy which directs all scientific research in the Soviet Union. Pontecorvo now heads all Communist bloc nuclear research.

Pauling, an outspoken foe of nuclear bomb tests, and Brink were among some 30 scientists and scholars from the Communist and free world to be awarded membership in the academy. It was the first time that any non-Soviet citizen had been so honored.

In the past, the Soviet Union has recognized the outstanding work of foreign scientists through peace prizes and awards, however, usually took political factors into consideration.

The new "academicians" cut across political grounds. Observers believed the action was designed to cement non-political relations among the scientists of the free and Communist worlds.

Brink, 61, is president of the Rockefeller Institute for medical research and is now serving his third four-year term as president of the national academy of sciences. He is a champion of peaceful nuclear energy. In a campaign to stop American tests last April, naming the department of defense and the American atomic energy commission as the enemies.

This year, he joined more than 8,000 scientists around the world in an anti-bomb protest.

The panel truck was spun around on the pavement and the rear end struck a power pole, setting up a vibration which caused the street light over the center of the intersection to fall.

Neither driver was injured. Damage to the panel truck was estimated at $400 and to the Oldsmobile at $400. City police investigated.

National Delegate

By HAL BOYLE
NEW YORK, June 21 (AP)—Wives of civil servants who have been accused headed "Things to do" every now and then, when the politics of civil service become oppressive, man-kind ought to compose a demanding list of things we could all do without, a catalogue of expendables.

Here are a few personal nominations:

The Russian problem, the Algerian problem, the Middle East problem—and the foster age problem.

Pictures of John Foster Dulles looking like a cat-in-a-hat—especially such as this one: "Papa, why is mama lying there so white and still?"

ROBERT J. PARKINSON
son of Mr. and Mrs. John Parkinson, resident of 1100 E. 10th street, is one of two delegates from southern Idaho who will participate in Boy's National July 18 through 25 at Washington, D. C. He will leave July 15 with Jerry Feebe, Blackfoot, of the University of Maryland, College Park, Md., where the delegates will stay. Parkinson was also chairman of the Silver party and mayor of New York at the recent session of Boy's state at Boise Junior college. Parkinson, a junior at Jerome high school, is active in H.F. dramatics, Key club and the IFFA society. (Staff copywriting.)

Man Faces Local Count for Check

ALTON L. WEIGT, 467 Addison avenue, charged with issuing an insufficient check over $25, waived preliminary hearing Saturday in Twin Falls justice court and was ordered to stand trial in district court.

Weigt later posted $1,000 bond set by Judge of the Peace J. O. Pumphrey. City police filed a complaint against Weigt charging him with issuing a $100 check payable to the Twin Falls Bank and Trust company on March 15, 1958.

Church Picks Committee for Building Plan

WASHEEN, June 21—David Callen, chairman, and Mrs. Hugh Callen were elected to the building committee at a meeting of representatives of all church groups in the downtown area on Monday evening at the Masonic temple.

The committee will be responsible for the building of a new church building which has been generally approved by the group. The building is to be located on the corner of Washington and Main streets.

The overall cost of the project, estimated by Mrs. David Callen, is $100,000. There is $15,000 in the building fund at present, and it is expected the church members would bring another $10,000 in five years time. The $75,000 had been pledged in 1957.

General plans for the addition and remodeling and the estimated cost will be presented at the following meeting of the church. The meeting will be held at the church, Tuesday evening at 7:30 p. m.

Members of the committee are: David Callen, chairman; Hugh Callen, vice chairman; Mrs. David Callen, secretary; and Mrs. David Callen, treasurer.

U.S. Leader of Teens Against Polio to Be Here on Tuesday

Patty Hicks, 18, Minneapolis, Minn., national chairman of "Teens Against Polio" will be present at a dinner meeting of representatives from seven counties at 7 p. m. Tuesday at the American Legion hall.

Mrs. Hicks is a volunteer for the Twin Falls chapter of the National Foundation for Infantile Paralysis. She is devoting all her time to "talking up" the importance of taking shots for teen-agers, Mrs. Alworth stated. Statistics show that although teens are among the most susceptible age groups, they are lagging when it comes to getting polio protection.

On a national level, Miss Hicks has been active in the polio campaign for the past several months. She was leader of hundreds of thousands of teens across the country in January who collected funds, distributed bills, vacated information and visited polio patients in homes and hospitals.

Miss Hicks has been a volunteer for March of Dimes since a relative and a friend were stricken with polio. She was Minnesota state chairman of TAPs in 1957. She is a graduate of Hopkins high school in Minneapolis and plans to attend Northwestern university this fall.

She postponed her college entrance for a year to head up TAP work in Twin Falls. She has been on television in the Minneapolis area.

The seven counties to be represented at the Tuesday night meeting in Twin Falls are Cassia, Minidoka, Lincoln, Jerome, Gooding, Blaine and Twin Falls.

Woman Believes Retirement System for Washington Best

Times-News:—A teacher retirement from the state of Washington and I hope for it. It was a state system and not one which has been set up in city districts. Not one mill in it was ever collected by the state on real estate, including the property of an old age assistance recipient. It is a state system that is designed to maintain the idea of a teacher retirement fund. I should record my objection to the state mill to support the idea of a retirement system. This one mill will amount $200,000 per year to $1,200,000 for two years taxes. This is the law and there is no way to avoid it but to elect laws which will change the law to the benefit of the public, the way as they did for the state in the past legislature. That legislature had been asked to appropriate $1,655,471 for the support of a teacher retirement. This added to $1,200,000 gives $2,855,472 for two years support for so few persons. Washington has the university, the agriculture college and three normals and many large cities all with many teachers who retire. Idaho's need is so much less. Although the Idaho retirement plan is a state system that should be supported by the state alone, the 1957 legislature refused to appropriate anything for the law. It is all to public mill tax as it is used in the district form of retirement set up by the consent of the district voters, I believe. Also under the 1957 amended Idaho law, I believe social security was given a part of the state load. I am not familiar with this new law, but now am concerned with the election of lawmakers who will take the one mill levy off Idaho property.

Gracie Pfof Answers Letter Written by Gooding Resident

Times-News:—I have had called to my attention a letter written by Mrs. Paula Walen, Gooding, to the "Times-News" dated in your May 18 issue, relative to Cong. Hamer Budgeting on the small community. The letter carries the following statement: "Congressman Budgeting with Cong. Gracie Pfof voted to give their own families from $1,000 per year to $27,500. Sen. Harry Dworkin and Sen. Herman Fisher voted against it." In the interest of keeping the record straight, I should like to state that I voted against the measure to increase the salaries of congressmen and senators. I should like to mention that the salary increase for house members was to $2,500 and not $27,500 as the letter states. One of the reasons I could not support the increase was the fact that the small dairy farms as well as the pensioner, the small businessman and the laboring man had received income cuts either through reduced prices for their products or through the increased cost of living under this administration. I could not conscientiously vote to increase the salaries of congressmen and senators. I should appreciate it very much if you would carry this letter in the Times-News.

Idaho Medical School Okayed At Convention

BOISE, June 21 (AP)—A proposed school enabling medical students to take the first two years of their training in Idaho received formal endorsement today from the Idaho State Pharmaceutical association.

The drugs association recommended that the two-year medical school be established at Idaho State college in Pocatello. The state school of pharmacy already is located there.

Greater Opportunity
The school would meet the first two years of the normal four-year medical course. The purpose, said a spokesman, would be to provide greater opportunity for Idaho students to start medical training.

After taking their first two years of training in Idaho, students then could transfer to a medical school in another state in order to finish.

Less Crowded
Generally medical schools are less crowded at the advanced levels, and backers of the proposal have contended Idaho students have been at a disadvantage in not being able to gain admittance to crowded first-year classes in schools of other states.

The school also would encourage more Idahoans to return to practice medicine in their home state, spokesmen said.

Also adopted was a code of ethics for the Idaho State Pharmaceutical association. The code provides voluntary standards of practice which were accepted by members.

It will be enforced by a board of arbitration appointed by association officers. The code is intended to eliminate unethical practices such as misleading advertising and to restrict the practice of pharmacy to persons of high moral character, spokesmen said.

Law Officers Told Salaries Are Low

POCATELLO, June 21 (AP)—Officers attending the Idaho Law Enforcement academy here today said insufficient revenue sources is keeping cities from paying many of them as much as would be desirable.

Mayor R. E. Edlsten of Boise, president of the Idaho Municipal League, suggested that a sales tax is the way to pump more money into city government.

Edlsten predicted the 1959 legislature would pass a sales tax and called it "inevitable."

One of Idaho's money problems, he said, is that though it has an agricultural economy, 56 per cent of its people live in cities.

He said the officers should warn prospective policemen of what to expect in pay and other benefits.

River Recedes

RUSSELLVILLE, June 21 (UPI)—Floodwaters of the Wabash river began receding in the Russellville-Pocahontas, Ill., area today and pushed toward the Mt. Carmel region 28 miles downstream.

But there was no immediate danger at Mt. Carmel, although some low-lying areas on the outskirts of town were inundated. No families here were threatened by their homes, and no sandbagging was necessary yet at Mt. Carmel, where the Wabash was expected to crest tomorrow at 26 feet.

Mailbox

DENVER, June 21 (AP)—Things weren't the same for hours after an unidentified woman tried to mail a letter in the main lobby at Colorado general hospital.

Within minutes after she pulled the handle of a conspicuous box, an motorcycle policeman, two patrol cars and seven fire trucks showed up. All they found was the wide-eyed woman with the unmailed letter.

She said she tried to direct her to the mailbox. It's across the lobby from the fire alarm.

HOLLYWOOD, June 21 (UPI)—Pianist-Humorist Oscar Levant, whose barbed wit won him an enthusiastic audience, was suspended indefinitely today by KCOP television for "inexcusable conduct on the air by a star personality."

Camas County Farming Differs From Irrigated Tract

Thirty feet of double harrow dragged behind a track-type tractor in field of the farm machinery used on the dryland farms of the Camas prairie around Fairfield at the northern edge of Magic Valley, Harold Barron, son of Lloyd Barron, who farms southwest of Fairfield, is the tractor operator. Other farmers use bigger tractors and more harrows, sometimes extending the harrows to 33 feet. (Staff photo-engraving)

When It's Plowing Time on Camas Prairie, Work Done Around Clock

Plowing 55 acres of land in a 10-hour period is about an average for dryland farmers in Camas county, according to Lloyd Barron, a farmer who owns 11,000 acres of land.

But the farmers of Camas prairie don't plow just 10 hours a day. "We work around the clock during plowing time, using two or maybe three track-type tractors with from five to nine plows behind each tractor," Barron explains. They have to plow the land in a hurry when it's ready to be plowed because the land is either too wet or too dry most of the time.

Using two tractors, it is easy for a farmer to plow 150 acres of land in 24 hours, Barron says.

Barron's 110-acre ranch is located southwest of Fairfield. The farm has approximately 8,000 acres of cultivated land on which he raises wheat, oats, barley, hay and alfalfa. The remainder of the land is natural pasture on which his 900 head of beef cattle graze during summer.

Typical of the equipment used on the dryland farms are combines which cut 20-foot awaths, grain choppers which cover a 30-foot swath, harrows rigged together to cover a 25-foot swath and the farmers are now beginning to use modern machines 20-feet wide which cut the hay and windrow it all in one motion.

The plows used by the farmers to regular mold board plows which cut furrows 16 inches wide. "We try to plow on the average of 10 inches deep," Barron explains.

The average set of plows used is either four or five plows mounted on a single tractor. The plows are set 16 inches apart and the 16-inch sets are used behind the tractor.

The biggest plowing outfit on the prairie is owned by Carol W. Stewart, who pulls two-five-bottom plows behind a Caterpillar D-7 tractor. Little Camas prairie is termed the "Little Camas prairie" because of the amount of moisture in the heavy soil are the limiting factors in the variety of crops the farmers of the little Camas prairie can grow. All of the land on the prairie is about 5,000 feet, Barron explains. Thus the growing season is short, and the only water for the land is rain water or the moisture the earth retains from melting snow.

Small grains and hay are the only crops the farmers can grow successfully. The average yield from wheat is approximately 20 bushels to the acre and hay yields about two to two and one-half tons to the acre with only one cutting per year, Barron says.

The one crop of hay is harvested generally beginning about the last week in June, according to Barron, but this year the hay has matured earlier, probably because of late moisture, and Barron began harvesting his 1,100 acres of alfalfa and 200 acres of dryland hay last week.

Barron explains it will take his crew of 10 men about 18 to 24 days to harvest all of the hay, using two hay balers and five wagons taking the twin-tied bales directly from the balers to the many stacks he has located around his facilities.

"He expects a yield of three tons of hay per acre this year.

Partners of the prairie are plowing last year's crop land or are working their summer-fallow land. Barron notes that all of the cultivated land, except that planted to alfalfa is planned to a crop every other year. This land, termed summer fallow, is left idle and the farmers work it only to keep the weeds from growing, let it accumulate moisture, and let the land regain some of its minerals so it will not "wear out" from over-farming.

A common tool used by the Little Camas prairie farmers to work their summer-fallow land is a set of railroad iron with a set of harrows behind it.

The iron weighs 90 pounds to the foot, it acts as a combination leveling device, weed uprooter and plow. The iron sets are pulled behind a track type tractor.

Barron notes that when iron sets are used, without a harrow and spaced about eight feet apart, they serve to clear sagebrush from natural pasture land.

Barron explains he used two railroad iron to clear sagebrush from a portion of his natural pasture, land in the foothills at the south edge of his farm. The pastureland is now growing only lush grass, Barron says.

Because the farmers use the heavy track type tractors so much they found themselves faced with a problem of getting the heavy machinery across the paved highway which bisects the prairie.

The cleared tracks of the machines would sink into the pavement and eventually tear the road up, Barron says. But the highway district has solved the problem.

At every intersection where the farmers want to move their heavy tractors across the pavement, the highway district has placed 10 or 12 old car or truck tires, just thrown over a post. When the farmers desire to move their tractors across the highway, they spread the tires across the road and drive the tractors on the tires, thus saving the road.

"It's a good idea," Barron notes. "The farmers used to use heavy wooden planks, which were breaking and running into quite an expense. These old tires will last a long time."

The old tires will be even more valuable this fall when state highway 44 is restored from Fairfield to Gooding. Between Fairfield and the south edge of the prairie, crews are working on the highway now.

The harvest of grain will begin on the prairie during the first week in August and will last from 8 to 10 days in most areas, depending upon how much grain they have.

Barron has 350 acres of wheat and 200 acres of alfalfa. (Continued on Page 21, Column 1)

After 50 Years, Town of Malta to Incorporate for "New Beginning"

MALTA, June 21.—Submission of seven names of Malta residents Wednesday of the town of Malta, commissioners in Butley marked the initial step toward incorporation of the town of Malta, a proceeding which has taken almost 50 years to complete.

The last effort to incorporate the town was 15 years ago but it failed for one reason or another. This time the preliminary work has been completed and the names submitted.

Earl Udy, Shirley Binko, A. E. Nicholson, Robert Smith and John Lockler were picked Wednesday night by the Camas county commissioners to serve as commissioners for Malta. Seven names were submitted and five were drawn.

The new commission will meet at 9 a. m. Monday in Butley to be sworn in and elect a mayor. They will serve until the regular election slated for April 1, 1959. Adams, Nicholson, Butley, is attorney for the incorporating proceedings for the town of Malta.

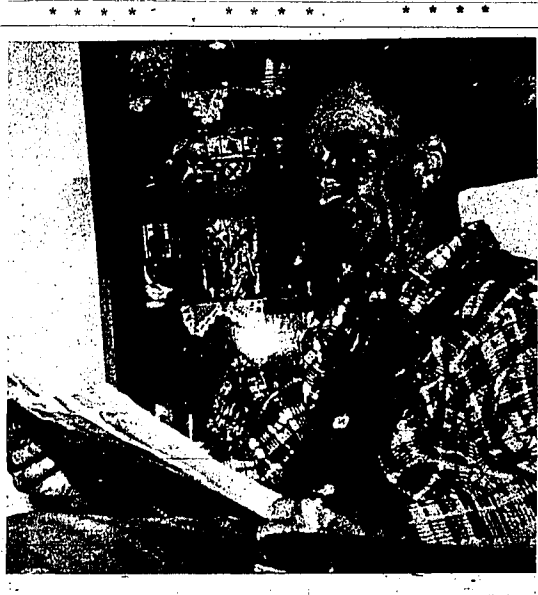

Members of the Lions club have been instrumental in laying groundwork for the project and a committee of four spearheaded efforts. They are A. E. Nicholson, Mayton Whitely, Ed Schneider and Richard Anderson.

Mr. and Mrs. J. Henry Thompson, who have lived in Malta for 25 years, feel that incorporation of the village would be good.

They report a real need for street improvement, lighting, police protection and a number of other things which can be accomplished through an organized community.

The Thompsons operated the telephone exchange in Malta for 30 years until the dial system was put in and Thompson has been postmaster for 25 years. In addition to this work, Thompson is bishop of the Malta LDS ward, serving a section of the valley 80 miles by 25 miles in area. There are 500 members in the ward.

Scott Gamble, who was born at Elba on Oct. 4, 1876, is looking forward to the incorporation of the town of Malta in the near future. Gamble's father brought the first herd of cattle from Arizona, Kansas, opening the Malta area for settlement. (Staff photo-engraving)

Idahome Was Once Center of Farming Area

Large dry farms on the Malta flats once produced such quantities of grain that the railroad was built into Malta for shipping. Idahomes, located near Malta, on U.S. highway 20 south, has disappeared entirely except for the grain elevators. (Staff photo-engraving)

Converted Torpedo Bomber Tested In New Role as Spray Plane Here

Tests at Joalin field have proved the effectiveness of newly designed spray apparatus built on surplus navy torpedo bombers owned by the Reeder Flying Service, says Charles Reeder, owner.

The big single-engine airplanes have been equipped with tanks holding 60 gallons of spray solution. They will be used by Reeder's crew to fight forest and range fires and to spray large areas of crop and rangeland for crop diseases or insects.

The tests were conducted at the airport utilizing a short portion of one runway which was lined with 80 pint steel paper containers in three rows. The TBM, loaded with water, flew low over the area dropping water in the vicinity of the cups, which were used to determine the saturation.

Only one airplane was used in the test, but another plane will be equipped and ready for use shortly, according to Reeder. Reeder's chief pilot who piloted the airplane in the test.

Reeder purchased the 1,850-horsepower, single engine airplane late in 1957 from a surplus dealer on the East coast. They were used in World War II by the navy as torpedo bombers flying from aircraft carriers.

Reeder owns four of the TBMs and is converting all of them to spray aircraft. His mechanics take out all of the surplus equipment on the airplane and install the spray tanks, bomb bays and spray nozzles along the wings.

The airplanes will be used throughout the Intermountain area for insect and crop disease work and Reeder expects they will be used throughout the area. (Continued on Page 21, Column 2)

Farmers spread the old tires across the road, then drive the tractor on the tires to avoid damaging the surface. Life in MAGIC VALLEY

Mr. and Mrs. Alvin J. Ritter, WENDELL, are scheduled to leave the United States on Aug. 16 from McKittrick air force base at Trenton, N. J., for England where Ritter, former superintendent of Wendell schools, has been selected for the position of assistant principal with the air force dependent school system.

The Ritters have been investigating the possibility of obtaining one of several positions available in a foreign country. Ritter points out that an advantage to American children on foreign bases is the special services which will be provided.

He said most of the U. S. bases in the United Kingdom maintain and operate their own elementary schools through the eighth grade and some include junior high school. A central high school is located in the London area at Bury park which lodges and boards students from outlying bases.

Mrs. Ritter is even more enthusiastic about the assignment than her husband and hopes their residence will be in the vicinity of London. School begins the day after Labor day and vacations will be similar to schools in the States, with a week at Easter, two weeks at Christmas and observance of all other American holidays.

Ritter had been with the Wendell school system from 1931 to the close of this year.

Mr. and Mrs. Edgar F. Vestal, who have just returned from six years with the international cooperative, administration in Thailand, have been recent guests in HAGERMAN of their son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Rollin Phillips.

Mr. and Mrs. Vestal, who were missionaries for the Presbyterian church in India for nine years and in Thailand for two, are now in Oregon and Washington and plan to return to Hagerman before leaving up their assignment with the American Women's club which sponsored a home for well children of leprous parents.

She said they kept two small girls, 4 and 6, in their home. They were placed in a mission school where the Vestals were transferred. She also worked with the crippled children's program where they cared for an army camp for a few days of recreation.

Vestal said Thailand is divided into four sections with different crops and problems in each. The north has the best climate and the summer home; rice is grown in the central division, which is the breadbasket. The northeast division is the poorer section where famines often tropical fruits and rubber are raised. He said the people are industrious, intelligent and independent. The southern part of Malaya education and the northern, Chinese. The Japanese controlled the country during World War II.

Mr. and Mrs. D. A. McCann, EDEN, have built a "winter flower garden" at the rear of their home on highway 25. The building housing the plants is an 8-by-16-foot frame structure covered with plastic and screens.

The first western man to head F. Woolworth and company, New York City, Robert Kirkwood, who was born in Provo, was hired and selected for advancement 35 years ago by James Norfleet, manager of the TWIN FALLS store.

Kirkwood began to work as a window trimmer in 19 for Norfleet, who was then manager of the Provo store. Norfleet received a telegram from his former employe on June 11 informing him of his appointment to succeed James T. Lettlich as president and chief executive officer of the famous Woolworth chain. Norfleet says even as a youngster, Kirkwood had enough personality and enthusiasm to supply 10 men.

Kirkwood was managing a store under the Denver office 13 months after he first went to work in Provo. In 1949 he took charge of the Boise district and became an executive vice-president in 1955. He is married to James Norfleet, manager of the former Virginia Bates, Caldwell, and the couple have two children.

The two men have kept in close touch with each other ever since Kirkwood started to work for the chain. Norfleet received a letter about three weeks ago mentioning that he might be considered to head the chain this fall. Kirkwood was a frequent visitor in Provo until the death of his mother two years ago.

The Woolworth chain has 2,100 stores in the United States and Canada and about 1,000 more in Germany and the British Isles. Over 85,000 persons are employed.

Norfleet opened his first Woolworth store in Monrovia, Calif., and has managed stores in Helena, Logan, Boulder, Colo., and Helena, Mont. before coming to Twin Falls.

AS YOUR MINISTER SEES IT

The home is receiving a great deal of emphasis today by leading magazines and newspaper editors. Family stories are making the headlines giving evidence that the home is very much in the air.

Yet sociologists are quite concerned. Some experts are even predicting that the family as we know it will vanish, and that's even now falling apart at the seams. They are pointing through neglect the very thing that communism would do through planned—the break-up of the family.

Mrs. Edgar Bates, dean of women at McClure's university, has this to say concerning the family: "Thoughtful people believe that mankind is in imminent and awful danger of annihilating the thousands of years of growing culture and of reverting to barbarism. It is equally accepted that a greater spiritual emphasis in our time will save society. The home can and should be this redemptive factor in our social life."

What then is the role that the home can play in improving the situation? Simply this: It can be the agent for re-establishing Christian principles which have been the foundation of our country.

Increasingly, church leaders are realizing that the success of any Christian teaching program depends upon family cooperation in learning and applying the principles of the Christian faith. This has led most church groups to place a good deal of emphasis on programs that are designed to enrich, inspire, and bringing spiritual guidance to family groups.

There are several areas which need a re-evaluation. In keeping with Christian principles—One of these is consideration of what the Christian attitude should be toward money. Wordsworth summed up the common conception very well when he said, "Laziness and greed, getting and spending, we lay waste our powers. Most people are so busy earning all they possibly can that they have no time for their families and the things of real value in life.

Christ taught, "A man's life consisteth not in the abundance of the things which he possesseth." While most people feel that if they can get a few more things they will be completely happy, they will sooner or later discover that true happiness does not depend on possessions. How fortunate is the person who can see the true value of things and realize that there are other values which make for true happiness.

Another fact of family life which most have in proper emphasis is that of church attendance. We are all thankful for the worship which is possible in places other than the church itself. The streams, the lakes, the woods and the mountains all remind us of God and are very valuable because of the God-consciousness that they engender. Nevertheless the family as unit must have a tie to the church itself to provide avenues of Christian service, a source of religious instruction and a place of wholesome Christian fellowship.

Still another area of family concern lies in its obligation to the community in which it lives. More than 500 years before Christ, Jeremiah wrote to the people of Judah who were exiled in Babylon, "Build houses and live in them. Seek the welfare of the city where I have sent you into exile, and pray to the Lord on its behalf, for in its welfare you will find your welfare." If this is true of people in exile, how much more it is in our communities. Every home has a responsibility to the community in which it lives to promote and practice Christian teachings.

It is quite important that the home be considered as a primary source for religious instruction. Paul the Apostle reminds Timothy of the Christian heritage that was his, "First in thy grandmother, Lois, and in thy mother Eunice." Most Christian educators say that parents are the first teachers of religion. Children don't learn of Christianity from a textbook; they learn by example. By their daily contacts with religious living in the home, our spiritual lives are enriched. They say in effect, "Teach me with thy heart and your hands; I can-

The Christian family is the one big answer to many of the ills of our society, and the more emphasis we place on reeducation to Christian principles, the better our communities will become. When we fail at this, all our spectacular successes in other lines crumble up like paper in our hands."

Big Machines of Camas Prairie Farming Work Most Land Possible in Shortest Time

Farmers on Camas prairie around Fairfield use multiple sets of plows pulled behind heavy track type tractors and work night and day during the plowing season. One farmer uses ten 16-inch plows pulled behind a Caterpillar D-7 tractor. Lloyd Barron inspects eight plows which he pulls with a Caterpillar D-6 tractor on an International TD-14. The farmers can plow as much as 100 acres in a 24-hour period using two sets of eight plows. (Staff photo-ensuring) 800 acres of oats and barley. He says his crew can harvest 100 acres of grain a day, using three combines. He has two combines which cut a 20-foot swath and one combine which cuts a 14-foot swath. The 20-foot combine is pulled by a track type tractor and the 14-foot combine is self propelled.

Practically all of the grains harvested on the prairie are shipped by railroad from Fairfield or the smaller railroad sidings of Blaine or Corral or the small town of Hill-Clay. Most of the grain goes to the Oregon grain market for processing. Farmers of Camas prairie raise hard wheat for bread.

Some of the grain is stored on the farms and used as feed for cattle. Barron stores 10,000 bushels of grain at his farm to be used for feed for the 200 feeder calves he keeps there annually.

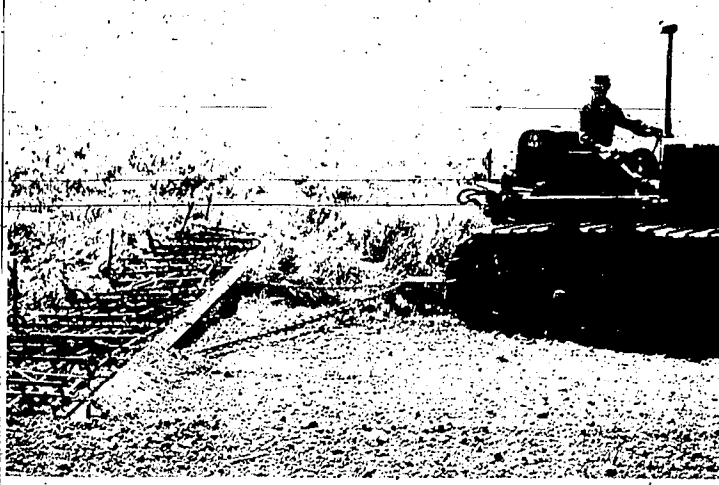

Despite the amount of snow which builds up on the prairie during the winter, Barron says he has little trouble feeding cows at his feed corral during the winter because the lower end of the corral borders Camas creek which is fed by natural hot springs.

"There are about a half dozen hot springs right inside my corral," Barron says. Because of the hot

A section of ordinary railroad rail makes up part of the machinery being pulled by a track-type tractor on a Camas prairie farm. The rail weighs 55 pounds per foot and serves as a trailer, weeder and plow when farmers work summer fallow land. Two railroad irons hitched eight feet apart, and without harrows, provides a good tool for clearing sagebrush land, according to Lloyd Barron, who owns an 11,000-acre ranch near Fairfield. Charles, Barron's son, is the tractor operator. (Staff photo-ensuring)

(Editor's note: The war in Algeria now is in its fourth year, and Algerians who have vowed to continue their fight for independence from France, de Gaulle or the late Gaullist. How can 100,000 ill-equipped irregulars hold their own against 500,000 five times their number, against the cream of the modern French army? Ernest Zang, an American freelance newsman, spent six months behind rebel lines to find out. He dispatches below.)

BEHIND THE REBEL LINES IN ALGERIA, June 21 (UPI)—In the bleak lunar landscape of the Atlas mountains, along the grimly guarded borders and on the fringes of the Sahara, the powerful French army is arrayed against shadows.

They are shadows which strike from mountain crags without warning and then melt away into the rocks and scrub, leaving only the howl of the yellow-colored village dogs to answer the French army bombardment.

For six months I roamed with the Algerian rebels.

With them, I fled from French planes spreading napalm in Moslem Algeria who land nothing but rifle and machine guns with which to hit back. I hid out with them in the hovels of friendly Arab villagers and huddled with them in rocky crevices at night, seeking warmth in the freezing winter.

It isn't only the 100,000 active fighting men arrayed against the whereabouts of a local rebel leader. He said the French officers placed a metal band at the base of his little finger and shot electric charges through it until the scorched flesh charred black. But the only answer the old man gave the French was: "There is only God and my country."

I lay concealed with rebel bands on the fringes of villages where strong French detachments strove in vain to wear information from Arab men and women who knew whereabout but would not tell.

The silent villagers were like the old, scrubby-bearded peasant I met in a rebel camp in the heart of the Atlas mountains.

In a piece of waterproof cloth he carried the shivered remains of a little finger that once was his own. He said he lost the finger when a French patrol descended on his village and demanded to know the at nightfall, stiff and sore we straggled over the plain to the nearest village, where the yellow dogs heralded our approach.

The rebels are not self-organized band.

The 100,000 men fighting in the hills are backed up by another 500,000 who do the paper work and organize supplies and arms.

In the big cities some 50,000 men and 10,000 women are active sympathizers working for the cause. Another 10,000 civilians have weapons of some kind hidden away for use one day.

Morale is high. I saw more volunteers for the fighting army than the organizers could cope with.

"I saw one man of 48 rejected because of his age, plead with the doctor who examined him."

"I am still good," the man said.

And despite all the French patrols of the frontiers with Morocco and Tunisia, more supplies and more men filter through to reinforce the rebel army.

Every day the rebels keep a psychological warfare organization to sap the strength of the formidable Foreign Legion which spreads the French campaign against the rebels in the outlying regions.

From all that we heard, I am sure that any Foreign Legionnaire who wants to desert can count on a safe conduct from the Rebels. A branch of the rebel organization sees the deserters across the frontier into Morocco and arranges their ship passage home.

Rebel records show that 3,000 Legionnaires have been killed and the path out of a well-lit-up war which was not to their taste.

From all that we heard during six gruelling months, it will take more than an army, however powerful and well-equipped to wipe out the Algerian rebels on a terrain that is all their own.

Every day the rebels keep a careful tally of their losses in skirmishes with the French.

In a peasant's hut in the northern Atlas mountains, I saw a rebel chief—Abdel Kader—compile a careful record of a French attack which "cleaned up" a nearby village.

The list included 67 Algerians killed, including 41 women and children, 33 men arrested and 114 houses and tents destroyed. It also listed 283 chickens killed or missing.

The lists were compiled so that the rebel organization could provide relief for the families which suffered, as themselves, the losses were reckoned of small account by the rebel leaders. The stakes were high enough to make them insignificant.

Wild Geese Captured During Molting And Flightless Period to Be Banded

Every year from the middle of May to the middle of June, wild geese are unable to fly because they molt their primary flight feathers.

Conservationists use the opportunity to band the birds for biological research.

The game men worked at Lake Walcott, northeast of Burgett, on the Minidoka national wildlife refuge, catching and banding wild geese under the supervision of Canadian game warden Jerome, Idaho fish and game department's fourth district game bird biologist.

Blake explains geese are banded primarily to their migration and nesting habits can be determined. The birds on Lake Walcott have been under study only since 1953 and results have not been tabulated.

To capture the birds, game men either drive them out on shore so they can be captured by nets or use power boats, sinking out geese and forcing them to keep their heads under water so much the geese tire and can be scooped up in a net.

"We prefer to drive the geese out on shore because it is easier to catch them, faster, and less expensive. But sometimes they just won't go to shore as we have to get them in the water," Blake says.

The geese refused to be driven ashore when nine game men in five boats found a flock of 38 geese at the east end of Lake Walcott. The men used their boats to form a ring and the geese between them and the shore and slowly the men tried to force the geese into the shore. However, they would only swim along the shoreline and not leave the water.

After almost an hour of trying to herd the geese onto the shore, the game men decided to catch them in the water and started breaking them out of the flock one at a time.

Everytime a goose would get loose from the flock at least three boats would go after the loose goose, the men in the boats shouting and waving their nets, trying to keep the goose under water till it would tire. Then the men would swoop in with their big nets and hoist the bird out of the water.

It is a wild scene when the men start after a loose goose and a casual observer would think the men were showing off or testing the endurance and pickup power of the boats.

The geese are forced underwater by sheer fright and a determination to keep clear of the boatmen by using the water straight toward them. Yet the geese are never harmed in the process of capture. Their strength is sapped by the time they are caught.

When the men put the big haulers in their boats the geese are so tired they can only stretch out in the boat to catch their breath.

But Blake explains the geese soon recover their strength and show that they are capable. For that reason the birds are kept in sacks until they have been banded and taken to another location a few hundred yards away to be released.

The boats working on the lake were four small outboards with 10-horsepower motors and a 16-foot cruiser with a 50-horsepower motor. The small boats were used in the close, although the big boat was capable of keeping the geese underwater. The big boat, however, was used to help the Minidoka wildlife refuge manager, was able to catch a goose with his hands.

Nears simply reached over the side and grabbed the goose's leg as it tried to make a feeble dive when the boat swept past.

Nears' boat was used primarily as a collection point for the geese captured by men in the smaller boats. Everytime the men working in a small boat would get two or three geese, they would take them to the large boat and give them to Nears.

Nears put an aluminum band on a leg in each neck goose, determining its sex and age, and put it back into a sack. When Nears had six or eight geese banded, he would take them to a location about 500 yards from where the birds were caught and release them.

When the birds were released, they either dove and swam as fast as possible away from the boat, or they would try to escape on top of the water, either swimming with their heads flat on the water to be inconspicuous or as a result of running on top of the water with their big wings stretched out to add momentum and stability.

The bands put on the geese's legs are half an inch wide and are made of tin loosely around the leg. Printed on the bands are numbers designating who banded the geese and the words, "Write or notify the federal wildlife service, Washington, D. C."

Nears explains that the light aluminum bands do not hinder, or harm the geese.

If geese can be driven on shore and captured, the procedure is to get the geese in a bunch and then using boats, the men drive the geese onto land and a clear shoreline, Blake says.

"It isn't always possible to get the geese onto a clear shoreline, but the geese beat if we do," Blake explains.

As soon as the geese start going ashore the men beach their boats and start shooting the geese as fast as possible.

Adult geese are usually captured with the net nets, but smaller immatures geese can be nabbed by hand because they don't put up such a fight.

Adult geese are dangerous. Blake explains. They use their wings and beak for protection and a person who has been battered by the wings of a goose shows considerable respect for their power.

Some geese can get away from the men when the flock is driven ashore for capture, but most often the process is more sure than catching the birds in water, Blake explains.

"When a bunch of 40 or 50 birds is driven ashore, it is hard for the 10 or 12 men to capture all of them. However, game men usually take a black Labrador retriever along. The dog is helpful finding hidden geese. Last year the dog found several geese we probably never would have gotten," Blake says.

Birds being faster, cheaper and easier to catch the birds on land it is also easier on the geese and more geese are captured that way, Blake explains.

Of 41 geese spotted, the men caught 40. About half of the geese were immature birds which would not be able to fly for another 45 days. The adult birds will be able to fly in a week or 10 days.

The 41 geese include the 38 in one flock and three other adult geese captured in the middle of the lake earlier in the day. The three adult geese were captured in the water.

"Allowing only one goose to escape was a new record," Blake says. "Normally the geese are nervous and flighty and when we try to break one or two out for capture, one or more will scatter away unharmed."

Geese are banded in the same manner elsewhere in Idaho by men from the Idaho fish and game department and the federal wildlife service. Mostly the banding operations are conducted on the Blackfoot reservoir and on Island Park reservoir.

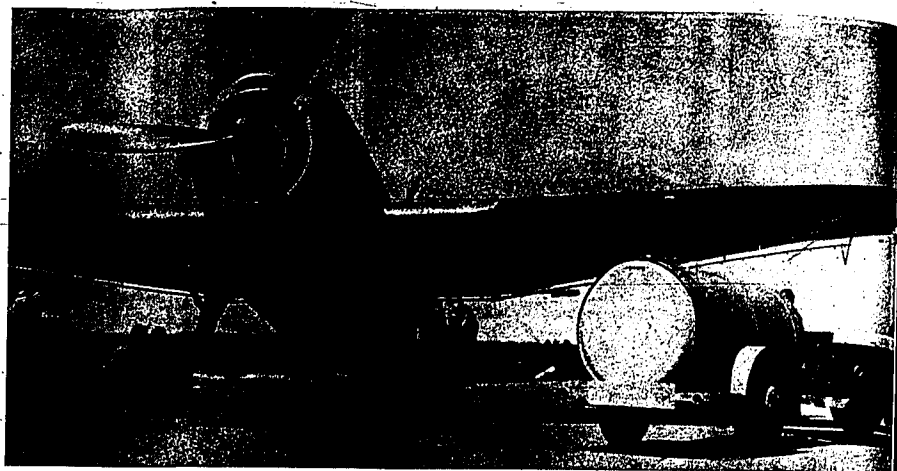

Downriver geese are banded on a portion of Snake river near Weiser.

On Lake Walcott, there are only an estimated 150 to 200 geese and Blake considers the job well done if the men band half of them.

Participating in the banding operations on Lake Walcott besides Blake and Nears were Charles Haynes, Nampa, third district game bird biologist, and Hugh Harper, Boise, biologist in charge of habitat improvement.

Also assisting were Joel Reynolds, conservation officer from Burgett; Dale Horn, conservation officer from Albion; Russell Hart, conservation officer from Oakley; Bill Holsted, federal game warden from Pocatello, and Vern Ross, Nears' assistant at the Minidoka game refuge.

Converted Navy Plane Loaded for Test of Spraying Equipment

While being loaded with water for the tests conducted last week, Reeder flying service's converted TBM was inspected by forest service and bureau of land management officials who witnessed the tests. The airplane has tanks capable of holding 500 gallons of water. When the plane carries the borate and water solution used to smother forest fires it will only carry about 500 gallons. The tanks are installed in the bomb bays of the old war plane. (Staff photo-enlarging) throughout southern Idaho to combat forest and range fires for the forest service and the bureau of land management.

For fighting fires the airplanes are equipped with quick release dump valves on both of the 40-gallon tanks they carry. The pilots of the planes can dump the entire load in seconds, according to Broadhead.

A solution of three and one-half pounds of crushed borate to one gallon of water will be carried in the tanks when fighting forest fires. Because of the extra weight of the borate, the aircraft will carry only about 500 gallons of the solution even though the tanks hold 800 gallons.

Broadhead notes that the aircraft's spray tanks were designed to meet the hope-for requirements of the California forest service which has experimented with air-craft for fighting fires. The most valuable feature is that the solution is maintained in two tanks in the aircraft, and each one has a quick release dump valve, allowing the tanks to be dumped at the same time or in succession, depending upon the situation desired.

The airplanes can spread the borate solution over a path 50 feet wide and half a mile long which is sufficient to stop range fires.

Invention of Burley Youth Speeds Potato-Planting Operation

Designed to unload bulk seed potatoes direct from a bulk potato truck into a potato planter in the field, this machine designed and built by Lynn Harshbarger, Burley, cuts handling of seed potatoes from seven times to one handling and speeds up loading the planter. It will load a planter in 40 seconds for 1,700-foot rows. (Charles Clark photo-staff engraving)

Burley Youth Builds New Machine to Unload Bulk Cut Potato Seed on Farm

BURLEY, June 16—Not content with mechanizing on his father's farm near Burley, Lynn Harshbarger, under the supervision of Burley high school vocational agriculture instructor, Charles Clark, has constructed a machine designed as an unloader for bulk cut potato seed. Harshbarger says it cuts handling of seed potatoes down from seven times to one handling. Clark explains that the machine consists of a conveyor belt on which the seed potatoes are carried from a bulk potato truck to the planter. Harshbarger says the machine has proved it can unload seed from a bulk potato bed into a planter and load the planter for 1,700-foot rows in 40 seconds. "Last year, seed potatoes were handled seven times on our farm," Harshbarger notes. "With this machine in operation, we have cut this figure down to one handling. The rest of the labor is done by electricity." Clark notes that this is the first potato seed direct from the

MAGIC VALLEY PORTRAIT Peters Has Become Almost Synonymous With T.F. Canal Firm in Last 35 Years

Alfred (Al) Peters and the Twin Falls Canal company are almost synonymous in many people's minds for Peters has been with the company since 1923. In the best American tradition, he began at the bottom, rising to the post of general manager which he has held the past 11 years. In the fall of 1923 he started moving ditch for the canal company as his first job. "Throughout the years he progressed from truck driving, mechanical work, to yard supervisor, heavy equipment operator, mechanical superintendent and a drainage superintendent before becoming general manager in 1941. The company over which he presides and knows so thoroughly from experience is a larger enterprise than many "city folks" realize. The company owns a fleet of 40 trucks, including a few cars, dragline compressors, well drills, tractors and even a few teams of horses. The horses can get down in some of the smaller ditches better than tractors, the manager pointed out. Peters estimates that the canal company has approximately 100 miles of main canal and approximately 1,000 miles of laterals and canals. He has been more than a half million miles in his work. A big problem for canal companies is the danger of children drowning. Already there have been 17 such deaths throughout the state this year, Peters noted, and the majority of those occurred in irrigation ditches. "What parents don't seem to realize," Peters said, "is that the little ditches are actually more dangerous for little children than the big canals where everyone's careful." Probably the biggest headache for Peters and his associates is the fear of a "buck in the dike." The break occurring in 1952 was the worst in the half century of operation of the canal company. "Anticipation of such trouble necessitates the company having enough equipment available on a moment's notice to start repairs so that crops will not suffer. The break six years ago was repaired within a few days but the mud crop was not ruined, Peters notes with pride. Because of the vital necessity for the regular flow of water through the system, some member of the canal company is available by phone at all times. Peters explained the office staff takes turns staying home week-ends and holidays so that if trouble develops, crews can be dispatched immediately. Peters envisions the company as a trust, with the responsibility of distribution of water for its 3,600 stockholders. He believes that the Twin Falls Canal company is the largest privately owned irrigation company in the world. Many of the large irrigation systems operating from the big dams throughout the northwest are buyers, but all are government operated. One hundred persons are employed by the company during the summer season, with about 60 on the payroll during the winter when equipment is repaired, to insure a dependable flow of water to the 207,700 acres whose production depends on irrigation. The canal company system includes most of the acreage in Twin Falls county. The Salmon River Canal company irrigates the Salmon tract in the southwestern part of the county. The canal company manager was born in Waupun, Wis., and came to Idaho March 10, 1912, with his parents. They settled at Amsterdam where his father ran the elevator and lumber mill. Peters recalls that Hollister was a large enough town at that time so that a circus would show there. He used to haul water to the elephants to get tickets for the circus. He went to school at Amsterdam and attended high schools at Kimberly and Waupun, getting his diploma through a correspondence course. Peters also took mechanical engineering courses at Kansas City and later studied heavy equipment engineering in Milwaukee. In addition to managing the canal company, Peters is active in all branches of the Masonic order. Last year he served as vice chairman of the Shrine circus. He is a member of Masonic lodge No. 45, AF and AM, chapter No. 16, Council No. 7, Twin Falls Commandery, the local Shrine club, and El Korah temple, Boise. Peters is also a member of the Twin Falls Christian church. "The Peters live on a farm on Addison avenue east and he spends part of his spare time overseeing his farming operations. His hobby is woodworking and the best water rights obtainable from the Snake River. While some people may think that after the harvest, water must be kept in the canals all winter for the use of farmers for their stock, Peters says that is not the way it is handled here. "When winterers are cold enough to freeze the canal soil, they have to break it up with dynamite. "It is no small matter to keep water flowing through the canals during winter when it gets down to 10 and 20 below." The manager stated, adding he believes winterers used to be colder years ago. "During the second year with the company, he was with a crew that wintered at Castleford during the frost which was an inch thick in the tent, Peters recalls, and one morning when they broke camp it was 24 degrees below zero. When they got to within four miles of South Park, crew members had to walk the rest of the way home as the roads were blocked. "Some of Peters' recollections of his long years with the company involve tragedies. Once when they were digging a deep drainage ditch north of Buhl a good friend died there are comparatively few accidents in recent years. Another contrast from his early days to present operations is the radio equipment. When a break in the canal occurred five years ago during the laying of the pipeline, Peters credits radio equipment with saving the canal. "Breaks in the canal are like fires in that the earlier help arrives the better the chance of saving it," Peters notes. Mr. and Mrs. Peters have one daughter, Mrs. Gayle Fink, and three grandchildren, who live in Burley.

Decrees Dissolve Two Local Firms

Decrees dissolving the Southern Idaho Stockyards, Inc. and Twin Falls Livestock Commission company were issued Friday in Twin Falls district court by Judge Hugh A. Baker. The decrees were sought by incorporators of the two companies after Cecil Beim sold his interests to Richard B. Hill. Directors of the two companies who voted to dissolve them were Brian, Ray McKinzie, Jr., Dorothy Brim and Irene McKnight. They were appointed by the court as trustees with full power to conclude affairs and take necessary legal steps to execute transfers of property.

Road Leads Through Rough Lava-Covered Area to Wide Expanse of Range Where Cattle Graze, Rounded up in Spring

There are only two entrances into the Laidlaw park grazing area and both are narrow and hazardous as recommended for Sunday driving. The narrow crossing at the north end of the pasture is shown here. The roads are built on top of the lava beds. (Staff photo-entourage)

A strange mixture of past and present transportation is evident at the corrals at Laidlaw's lake in the Laidlaw park grazing area. Laidlaw park, located adjacent to the Craters of the Moon national monument, provides fine early-spring grazing, but as soon as the area starts to dry up, cattle must be rounded up and moved. In summer, the area is used as an air force bombing range. The roundup this year was held early because of dryness. (Staff photo-entourage)

Laidlaw Park Association Cattle Moved As Dry Season Begins on Desert Ranges

CAREY, June 21—The Huff lake grazing grounds, which include corrals and the leading chute in the southwest of Carey, of the Laidlaw Park Cattleman's association, was the scene last week of a roundup of cattle in the pasture in Laidlaw Park. Approximately 1,850 head of cattle belonging to the 25 members of the association were collected and rounded. All the Huff Creek cattle owners trucked their stock to either the Butworth forest service grazing permit area or to private pastures. On April 7, cattle from the Buriel and Rupert areas entered the park through the south end, about 25 miles from the Minidoka crossing. These cattle bear the brands of Schodde, Loveland, Woodbury and May.

Local Disorders May Speed Loss of Hair

Local disorders may speed the loss of hair. Dandruff or seborrhea among these influences. Therefore, if any such condition is present, treatment of the local condition and massage of the scalp aimed at stimulating the circulation may delay (though not stop) the gradual loss of hair.

Wins Scholarship

SHOSHONE, June 21—A $100 FPA scholarship has been won by Leonard Dilworth, son of Mr. and Mrs. Harold J. Dilworth, north of Shoshone.

Dave Baird hands a drink of water to Lorin Simpson while U. Millford Sparks looks on during the re-ride for the spring roundup of the Laidlaw Park Cattleman's association. The picture was taken near Twin lakes, which are dried up, in the main park. About 25 cattlemen from Mario Valley use the pasture under a Taylor grazing act permit. (Staff photo-entourage)

Try Dome Doilies Bald Physician Knows of No Way to Cure Baldness

By EDWIN F. JORDAN, M. D. (Written for NEA Services) If there of any good way to prevent baldness I should try it myself. Nevertheless, I receive many inquiries on this subject and it is with a little discussion. Mrs. D. writes that she has recently had a baby and finds that she has lost her hair. She asks whether this is a vitamin deficiency or something natural after childbirth. This type of falling hair is not unusual. I do not know that any one understands exactly why it occurs occasionally following childbirth or a serious illness, but does happen. As a general rule, however, the hair grows back completely. I can remember a girl in high school who developed typhoid fever, lost just about all her hair, and then grew back a beautiful crop of auburn hair.

KEEP YOUR HOME YOUNG IN SPIRIT

A home is not something that you plan, decorate, and furnish and expect that it will do for a lifetime. Your life and the life of the people who live in it is never static. Your life (spiritual, intellectual, and physical) should be a growth of your experiences in life, your widening interests—and those of your family—should all be reflected in your home. Then, and only then, will it remain constantly young and fresh in spirit.
