Swisher Says Larsen Seems Smylie's Pick

POCAATELLO, July 5 (AP)—One of two Republicans challenging incumbent J. Berkeley Larsen for the GOP nomination for Idaho gubernatorial governor says he believes Gov. Robert Smylie is backing Larsen.

Smylie, on a brief vacation in Stanley basin, was not available Saturday to comment on the statement by State Rep. Perry W. Barker, a Democrat.

Three Candidates—The three candidates for the GOP nomination are Larsen, Swisher, and Roger Hagadone of Boise.

Swisher said Friday he believes Smylie, who is unpopular for the Republican nomination for governor, "prefers the inviolable position of a governor."

He said nominating petitions for Larsen were "circulated by Smylie supporters who personally preferred a change in the 2nd spot."

"Does this make me sore?" he asked. "No more than it would if the governor made his preference public."

"I do make this first hurdle, but I think I will be because most Republicans don't want Smylie to have everything his way. It's just good for him as GOP of the state."

Background—Larsen as "a lieutenant governor who has all the could do to provide order and peace, and who has been content to stay completely in the background."

The governor, I now believe, "wants to keep it that way," he wrote in the weekly newspaper, Intelligence and America Enterprise, which he edits.

He has made no secret of his support for Smylie, Swisher said. Yet I have differed with him when I thought differing would do some good."

2 Men Facing Charge After Return Here

Two men returned late Thursday night from Arlington, Tex., by Sheriff James H. Benjamin appeared in Twin Falls justice court for arraignment Saturday morning on separate charges.

Joseph Q. Brown, Jr., 347 Fillmore street, charged with desertion and failure to support his wife requested a preliminary hearing when he appeared before Justice of the Peace J. G. Humphrey. Judge Humphrey set a hearing for 10 a.m. July 16—and further set bond at $750—cash—or $1,000 property bond. The complaint against Brown is signed by Mrs. Jo Ann Brown.

Donald D. Rasmussen, 18 Jerome, charged with larceny, was bound over to district court for further action after waiving preliminary hearing before Judge Humphrey. The judge set bond at $1,000.

Rasmussen is charged with issuing a check to Frontier Service station, Twin Falls, for $50, claimed to have been signed by Lewis Rellie. Two young sons, returned from Texas with the two men, are awaiting further action.

TIMES-NEWS PUBLIC FORUM—VOICE OF THE READER

Crash Victim's Mother Urges
Help for Plans to Save Lives

Editor, Times-News:
On Thursday, June 23, my son was killed in an auto accident at the intersection of 10th and Washington streets north, Twin Falls. Nothing I can do or say will bring back my son, but I want to tell everything I can, personally, to spare other mothers the grief and anguish I have experienced.

The accident occurred at a place where the stop sign was obscured by tree limbs and wires. My son was not a careless, reckless driver. If he could have seen the stop sign, he would have stopped. Now, since this tragic accident, the powers that be have gone out and removed this traffic hazard. Why did it take a fatal accident before this hazard was eliminated?

My son was not the first to die in an accident at that intersection. In the past, how many drivers have said to themselves, "I wonder what would happen if I went through the intersection?" But how many reported the danger? If their negligence in not reporting the dangerous condition was a crime, they should share part of the blame for my son's death.

Since this tragedy, I have helped eliminate a similar death trap near Gooding. There is a death trap on the five miles north and four miles east of Gooding. We approached it from a side road and because it was familiar with the area, I slowed down and looked for the stop sign.

Man Asks Difference in Cases
Involving Cars Out of Control

Editor, Times-News:
On June 20 an accident occurred near Harmon park involving a Gooding car and a pickup truck driven by a "Twin Falls" youth, who was accompanied by two other youths. The pickup ran into the rear of the "Twin Falls" car. A telephone call to Chief Howard Gillette to inquire why nothing was done about the accident was answered from him that since neither he, nor the investigating officer had been present, no accident happened, we did not know the circumstances. He further stated that unless the other party made a complaint, nothing could be done.

Now Idaho law states that you should have your car under control at all times. The fact that you run into the rear of another car is not by itself sufficient evidence that you did not have your car under control.

On March 26, 1938, an almost identical accident, involving a neighbor of mine, occurred in Twin Falls. Although neither Mr. Gillette, nor the investigating officer were present when the accident happened.

VFW's Auxiliary
Asks Observance
Of Veterans Day

Editor, Times-News:
On behalf of the Ladies Auxiliary to Veterans of Foreign Wars, post 2135, I would like to express our support to the views expressed by Mrs. Harold of the DAY as expressed in the Public Forum last Sunday.

Now is the time for all people who are interested in trying to get our merchants to observe Veterans day to express their views to the merchants. November 11 isn't too far off and a word to the managers of the establishments who make it a practice to have business as usual on this day will at least let these people know how you feel.

If the public would make up its mind not to patronize these stores on our holidays it wouldn't take long till business as usual would cease. After all it is you who keeps these people in business.

None of us should forget that it is our veterans who have made it possible for us to have a country such as ours and certainly every year is little enough tribute to those who gave so much.

Man Registering
His Objection to Work Right Law

Editor, Times-News:
After four years in the armed services it is a great feeling to be back in my home state and reading my favorite newspaper, the Times-News.

As my first, "declaration of independence" I would like to express my strenuous opposition to any "right to work" law.

In every state in our nation there are two laws which are opposed by liberal and progressive thinkers and favored by reactionaries. One is the "right to work" law and the other is the "right to work" law which is nothing but a right to wreck labor-unions.

These laws are found primarily in agricultural states and it is true that Idaho is still an agricultural state. But in the near future Idaho may wish to become more industrialized and the large industries will not go into states where labor is not stabilized.

Wherever there is a right to work law there is labor unrest. Intelligent and informed labor is opposed to "right to work" laws because they are nothing but a device to reduce the standard of living and the mass purchasing power of the people.

But the 18 states that have "right to work" laws at present with neighboring states that have strong labor unions will prove this point.

Workers who have had personal experience enough to compare the "right to work" law with the strong labor unions know perfectly well that where there are no strong labor unions there are no strong labor unions.

Only strong labor unions can guarantee job security, vacations with pay, pensions and fringe benefits such as compulsory health and accident insurance.

There can be no strong labor unions where there is a right to work law because it forbids the closed-shop and effective use of the strike. If an employer can break a strike any time he wishes to do so by hiring "scab" or non-union labor, why should he bother with the union workers?

Workers are powerless and defenseless because the strike is the only way they can enforce their demands for better working conditions or wages.

High Taxes Are "Slow Poison"
For United States, Man Notes

Editor, Times-News:
Money is tight. Business needs money to finance buildings and equipment to provide more and better jobs.

Present high taxes are a slow poison. Like the unseen rot in the heart of a tree, it takes a long time for a tree—or a nation—to die. For this reason, people grow weary of essays on "America at the crossroads." On the surface, America still seems sound. But so did Great Britain only 40 short years ago when it was the No. 2 world power. So did France.

Gentlemen of the congress, if you look beneath the surface, you will see signs of internal rot in our own country. The cancer cells of excessive taxation are spreading.

Every tax, tells someone not to do something he would otherwise do, or do less of it. Every important business decision must consider the tax angle and either shift or reduce the tax burden, if possible.

These observations, I think, are worthy of your urgent reflection. Equally important is the control of the purse, which is slipping from your hands into the paws of a vast, invisible bureaucratic state.

Response to tax is the power to destroy. Excessive taxation is destroying income, property, and retarding growth. This promotes socialism.

Act now, gentlemen, before the rot spreads further!

Budge Says No Idaho Member
Of Congress Okayed Pay Hike

Editor Times-News:
Letters have been received recently commenting on two letters to the editor appearing in the Times-News. Walker of Gooding and the second "Mr. Grade Post." The first states that I, along with Mrs. Post, voted to raise the salaries of members of congress. The second is Mrs. Post's statement that she had not voted for the salary increase. Actually, no member of the Idaho delegation (Henry Dworshak, Herman Walker, Grace Post, Hamlin Budge) voted for the salary increase.

At the time the vote occurred in the house of representatives, I was in Idaho testifying at a hearing conducted by the corps of army engineers relative to storage on the Snake river and its tributaries. Senators Dworshak and Walker, and several members of the state legislature, were also in attendance.

My opposition to the salary increase was a matter of public record as shown by the attached news account in the Idaho Falls Times-News of the 32 which I have missed out of 1134 roll calls in the seven previous years of my service in the congress. The salary proposal passed the house of representatives by a vote of 283 yeas to 119 nays, but I most certainly did not vote for it.

I do not normally write letters to the editor; but in view of the fact that my economy record as tabulated by the Congressional Quarterly is the highest of any member of the congress of the United States, I feel justified in pointing out the inaccuracies carried in the previous letters to the editor. The score sheets of the Congressional Quarterly are attached as are the vote on the passage of the salary bill and the newspaper accounts clearly showing my opposition.

HAMLIN BUDGE
(Member of Congress)

Let's keep the record straight. In a press statement, our Governor Smylie stated that under Governor Gossett, the last Democratic governor, the last Democratic legislature appropriated only $250,000 for education while the last legislature gave the schools $2 million dollars for schools.

However, the over-all appropriations by the last legislature for all education institutions was $1,017,042 out of the general fund plus $1,212,000 for a grand total of $2,229,042. Divide that by 600,000 and see what that is per capita for every man, woman and child in Idaho.

In a press notice, Governor Smylie did not say that the Democratic received 45,000 salary and furnished his own home and the legislature received a salary of $5 per day and the governor's salary is $10,000 per year plus $20,000 to maintain a nice-looking home for a grand total of $40,000 for two years, four times more than Governor Gossett received.

Appropriations from general funds last session were $54,690,444 leaving only $1,837,573 for the care of public health, old age assistance, Black-foot and Oregon hospitals, penitentiaries, homes for mental patients at Nampa, tuberculosis hospital, old soldiers home, legislative expense and all other government, law enforcement and the many commissions and constitutional offices.

In a press notice, Governor Smylie brought out better candidates. What do you who read this think? Is it Idaho or the government, the law enforcement and the many commissions and constitutional offices.

Itinerary Chosen
For Area Tour Is Termed Cheating

Editor, Times-News:
On page 6 of this evening's (July 2) Times-News there appears an article, titled "Engineers to Check Types of Irrigation."

Notice the itinerary. The steering committee in this instance follows the line laid down several years ago when the Twin Falls projects are proposed. Not that we need the recognition as the best project exhibit, but Idahoans really wish to show the foreign boys the finest example of economical and successful development by means of irrigation, they are cheating not only the foreigners but our citizens as well when they fail to show the Twin Falls projects.

We note in the itinerary that only federally constructed projects are included. As you know, the Twin Falls irrigation system is the outstanding example of the success of private enterprise in the United States. I am sure that you believe in who should realize their own responsibility for their security and welfare.

Republicans in Washington are greatly disturbed by the recent Adams-Goldfine episode. There is a great interest being displayed in the forthcoming appearance of Mr. Goldfine before the house investigating committee. Regardless of what action is taken by the president in regard to Adams, there is doubtless will be great disillusionment throughout the country because of suspicion and lack of confidence in Americans in high political offices.

We are following a heavy legislative calendar and my greatest disappointment is the inability to get members of congress to realize that we cannot justify constantly expanding spending at a time when there is a legitimate need of tax reduction.

I hope that it is not too late to do something about this matter.

"Realistic Editorial" Brings
Praise by Senator Dworshak

Editor, Times-News:
I have read with considerable interest your editorial "Recession and Bureaucracy." Naturally I was pleased to have you refer to some of the comments I made recently in my Washington letter.

It is really truly that it is not popular to sound a note of warning or be pessimistic in forecasting political and economic trends. However, your editorial is extremely realistic and I appreciate the effort you are making to stimulate the thinking of people.

The American philosophy of private enterprise.

There is real danger that visiting engineers will receive a false impression of our loyalty to private enterprise, through this demonstration of social ownership of our irrigation projects.

I hope that it is not too late to do something about this matter.

who should realize their own responsibility for their security and welfare.

Republicans in Washington are greatly disturbed by the recent Adams-Goldfine episode. There is a great interest being displayed in the forthcoming appearance of Mr. Goldfine before the house investigating committee. Regardless of what action is taken by the president in regard to Adams, there is doubtless will be great disillusionment throughout the country because of suspicion and lack of confidence in Americans in high political offices.

We are following a heavy legislative calendar and my greatest disappointment

Gift Wrapping-Featured

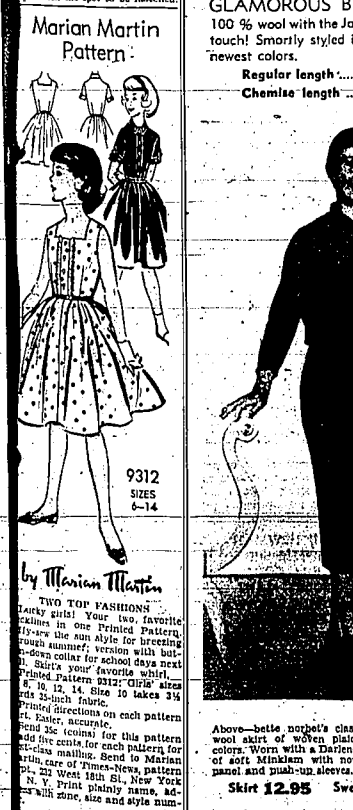

Mrs. Dale Scholtz, Kimberly, is displaying some of the more conventional types of gift wrapping. The uniquely wrapped gifts, expressing individuality, are the ones she prefers. (Staff photo-engraving)

Gift Wrapping Is Hobby Of Woman in Kimberly

Mrs. Dale Scholtz, Kimberly, emphasizes individuality and economy in her gift wrapping. She presents her gift-wrapping hobby as a unique and economical way to express individuality. She notes that plain tissue paper costs approximately one cent per sheet, while the fancier sheets of wrapping paper cost seven cents per sheet. She believes that with a little ingenuity gifts can be wrapped attractively at little expense.

Her first suggestions are when preparing to wrap a gift to assemble everything that is needed before starting, including cut strips of cellophane tape, and to have a table, also, whatever possible, to put the gift in a box. To measure the paper for wrapping, she suggests that the gift be placed flat on top and for correct length. For the width, she suggests that the gift be placed flat on the side and for correct width. The package is then neatly wrapped in the tissue paper, the cellophane tape is used to fasten the top, the sides, and the bottom piece up, without coming loose. The package is then placed in the box, the cellophane tape is used to fasten the top, the sides, and the bottom piece up, without coming loose. The package is then placed in the box, the cellophane tape is used to fasten the top, the sides, and the bottom piece up, without coming loose.

Just as effectively from the more economical papers. She said she finds the paper sheen ribbon less expensive to use than the crinkled types as it takes less and more can be done with it. In her demonstrations she features a new sort of wrapped package with variations of her own and original cards and verses to fit the occasion. These also are her favorites. For a child's gift she adds white construction paper doll cutouts and a box of crayons to the top; for a teen-ager, a large black construction paper "heart-cut" for a man, a white paper mustache, a red paper pipe and a red ribbon string tie, or a "shower" gift, a construction paper portrait doll.

For hard-to-wrap items such as a small frying pan, Mrs. Scholtz uses a little imagination and disguises it as a clown or a banjo with ribbon strings. A jar of jam or jelly may be disguised by rolling paper around a square of aluminum foil brought to top of jar and tied with a pretty bow. A long-handled utility brush with a flat paper sack tied over its end with a cravon neck and a wire scraper spread to a hat and topped with a bow makes a conversation piece.

As camouflage for a man's small gift such as a pair of socks or nail clippers she uses a cardboard paper wrapped in red construction paper with a white pipe cleaner for a fuse to resemble a firecracker and the same idea for a woman, with white tissue, wrapping and ribbon him to resemble a fancy candle. A clever wrapping for a man, too, is to use a toilet-tissue roll with a white ribbon bandana handkerchief which is no more expensive than a sheet of fancy wrapping paper.

Mrs. Scholtz collects odds and ends of anything she thinks she could use for wrappings and says that gift wrapping is fun, not only at Christmas but the year around and that some personal touch should be added in each package, by saving and continually adding to her wrapping necessities she finds she always has something on hand. Paper and ribbon can be reused, limited amounts of ribbon can be combined and even small bits can make tiny flowers for a cluster to top a package.

She does the conventional elaborate ribbon tie packages, too, with fancy bows of spirals, ribbons, roses, etc., she prefers the ones she designs. On the occasion, whether it is a newspaper wrapped one or a shower gift with glided clothes pins holding it together. Mrs. Scholtz says she doesn't like to become absorbed in one hobby though her real one is painting with pastels and oils. She collects driftwood and makes doll pictures with hair and clothes, and Early American cloth miniature still-lives and dried flowers for early American rural pictures. This year landscaping the yard of the home she and her husband are building is her hobby.

Her husband collects guns and makes stocks; daughter, Marilyn, collects dolls, and their son, Warren, 17, paints and sketches.

Attractions in Jerome Draw Crowd of 700

Jerome, July 5.—Fourth of July celebrations were attended by approximately 700 people in Jerome who gathered in the city park to observe the event.

Morning activities began with a parade under the direction of Bill Rebe. Leading the procession was the American Legion color guard and the junior high school and high school bands, followed by the Girl Scout troop, children and their parents, and a bicycle section. Jubilee Queen Lulu Undergraff, Lion Queen Cleoenda Lee, and Jay-C-Ze float with confetti for the small fry, beauty contest, ancient and modern, and the Jerome County Pageant.

The children's section of the parade was sponsored by the Lions club. Prizes were awarded in the bicycle section, to Roger Club, first; Steve Lawell, second; Betty Clubb, third; and Mark Cook, fourth; other winners were pet section, Thomas and Nell Shurtz, first; Lena Kay Nagle, second; Darrell Bladen, third; and Karen Bummy, fourth; costume section, Purple People Eaters, first; Curly Hays, first; Lilian, first; Robbin Spufford, second; The New Look, Sally Reubelman and Madeline Nial, third; and Jerome Pioneers, Mariyam Rydahl and sisters, fourth.

Gold cups were presented to the winners of the parade. The event is sponsored by local merchants. Ribbons and prize money were presented to the winners by the place winners, Debby Oiler and Bobby Nell, Mary Phillips and Jackie Nelson.

Activities in the park were centered around a stand-operated-by-the Lions club and the Kiwanis club's ball toss. Food stands were handled by the Jay-C-Ettes and the American Legion and children were able to ride on miniature planes, train and car rides.

The Jay-C-Ettes handled gunnysack dash and foot races for children in three different age divisions, awarding money for prizes. The group also sponsored a baseball game at the ball park with local participants. With the help of Jerry Bickel, recreational director and his assistants the Jay-C-Ettes held a swimming meet for boys and girls during the afternoon.

Winners in the race events were: Jack race, David Packett and Bill Peters, first; Rex Meyers and Richard Cassatt, second; and Skip Hall and Larry Darling, third; shoe race, Jimmie Featherston, first; Allen Hoff, second; and David Reid, third; dash, 5 to 7 years old, Darrell Mealin, first; Darrell Wesley, second; and John Purdie, third; dash, 8 to 10 years old, Andy Loch, first; Pamela Lane, first; Linda Lamb, second; Sharon Simons, third; boys age 13 to 15, Ronney Woolley, first; Larry Lamb, second; Royce Darling, third; girls 13 to 15, Doris Turryville, first; Helen Turryville, second; Patsy Davis, third; wading race, Steve Lawell, first; Richard Moore, second; Danny Summers, third; divers off low board, Larry Darling, first; Royce Darling, second; Larry Lamb, third; distance race, Bob Harder, first; Ronnie Woolley, second; Royce Darling, third; distance race for girls, Doris Turryville, first; Helen Turryville, second; Patsy Davis, third; and Linda Lamb, fourth.

Climaxing the events for the evening was a giant fireworks display at the fairgrounds under the direction of Al Hall. A bowery sidewalk dance at the fairgrounds parking lot with the Midnight Ramblers orchestra playing western music under direction of the Moore lodge was followed by a midnight show at the Varsity theater. About 200 persons attended the dance.

SAN MIGUEL DE ALLENDE, Guanajuato, Mexico, July 5.—A Twin Falls, Ida., college art student is following a growing trend to "summer holidays." She is spending her vacation studying art in Mexico.

Yvonne Jacques, daughter of Mrs. Wilfred Jacques, 337 Sixth avenue north in Twin Falls, has just wound up her sophomore year at the University of Utah.

She arrived in this 400-year-old Mexican colonial town to pursue three months of study at Instituto Allende, probably Latin America's most noted fine arts and writing school, often described as the "Latin American Sorbonne."

In the fall Miss Jacques expects to return to the University of Utah to begin her junior year. At the Instituto Allende, meanwhile, she is studying landscape, design, painting, and may try some of the crafts classes—weaving, textiles, ceramics, silversmithing—before leaving.

Washed Streambed Traced to Depleted Range up Higher—

This bend of Little Smoky creek shows how heavy spring runoff and floods have filled in the river bed with dirt and stones carried away nearby levees, overgrazed slopes higher up in the mountains. As the stream-filled, the course of the creek shifted and now, visible at left, rear, is eating a way the lands and reducing the size of the meadow along the creek. (Staff photo-engraving)

John Breckenstein, Twin Falls sheepman, left; Craig Rupp, Fairfield district forester, center, and Tim Phillips, forest service range expert, examine records pertaining to Breckenstein's grazing allotment in the Fairfield district before starting the second day's horseback tour. Last two days of the three-day trip were by horseback. (Staff photo-engraving)

Twenty-seven elk gathered in this small area along Little Smoky this spring, eating the willows down to branches as large around man's finger. When snow melted from an adjacent hill, they tramped up onto the soft soil and started a landslide that eroded a portion of the area's grazing land. The picture was taken March 4, 1958. ## Fish Vanish From Little Smoky as Depleted Range Ruins Fine Stream

When a fisherman can't find fish in his favorite stream, it makes him downright irritable. Not only that, the chances are he'll start squawking and the sound he makes will be long and loud.

That's just what happened a few months ago in Cassia county, and it may be a long time before the echoes of the squawking die away.

It seems there used to be a mighty good trout stream in the mountains north of Fairfield—Little Smoky creek was the place. The creek was just about a fisherman's dream. It was filled with clear, cold, tumbling water, lined with deep holes and shady banks, and filled with plenty of hard-fighting trout of all sizes. That's the way it used to be. But all of a sudden, within the last four or five years, Little Smoky-creek began to lose its appeal—no fish.

This spring, after squawking about the situation for several years, sportmen of the area decided to see if they couldn't do something about it.

The Cassia County Rod and Gun club contacted Martin Luther, conservation officer for the Idaho fish and game department in that area, and asked him why the state didn't stock the creek with fish.

That's when a lot of eyes were opened, and not with "eyewash," just cold facts.

Luther related that the stream wasn't stocked because it had been ruined a few years ago by a flash flood. At least the flash flood had started it on the way to ruin. The fish habitat had been washed out, holes silted full and banks undermined and swept away.

How could such a thing happen? The sportmen demanded an answer.

Simple, explained Luther, the ranchland in the area had been so depleted that slopes could no longer hold the water from violent rainstorms and heavy snowmelt. When the rain water and melting snow cascaded down the nearly bare slopes, they brought the soil with them to fill the creeks in the bottoms.

The sportmen, by tradition a determined group, were not content to let the matter rest there. What they wanted to know, is being done about the situation?

They contacted the regional forest service headquarters in Boise. In short order they were invited to tour the area to see for themselves the condition of the range and to hear from forest service officers what is being done about it.

The tour, a three-day affair, was held last week-end from a base camp near the Big Smoky ranger station, north of Fairfield behind the Soldier mountains. Sportmen, sheepmen, cattlemen and newsmen were included in the invitation. U. S. forest service officials and officials of the state fish and game department were there to explain things. Twenty-two persons took part in the tour.

Members of the party learned that there's a long overdue revolution taking place in Idaho's grazing activities. If it succeeds, the state's far-flung ranchlands will remain a productive part of the state's economy and a recreational facility second to none, for innumerable generations to come.

If it doesn't, the wild mountain areas of which the Gem state is so proud may astonishingly soon become just desolate wilderness.

The depletion of the range lands is not a new problem. It has existed for many years. At first it was disregarded. It was inconceivable, to all but a few, that man's use ever could make a lasting mark on the massive wilderness of the area. Grazers used the range without stint, running as many animals over the range as they could afford to own. If a range area became "grazed out," that was all right—there was plenty of virgin territory right beside it. Sportmen, if they could be termed that at the time, had no worries over the depleted condition of isolated areas of the mountains. Hunting and fishing were more a matter of filling the larder than of sport, and there was plenty of game to go around. As for recreational use, there were not enough people in the area to make any impression on the vast mountain and forest areas. —that something had to be done to

Jagged stumps of willow brush show how elk stick in one small area during winter months, eating all available browse and forage until they are getting mostly wood instead of nourishment from their feeding. Because of such conditions, game experts fear that two-thirds of the Soldier mountain area's elk herd might perish of malnutrition during a severe winter. The picture was taken March 4, 1958, at Lightfoot Bar in the Fairfield district of Sawtooth national forest. (Forest service photo—staff engraving)

Tim Phillips, forest service range expert, facing camera, and Craig Rupp, Fairfield district forester, back to camera, conduct a range utilization transect on a creek meadow. A metal hoop is tossed onto the ground and each blade of grass or weed within the hoop is clipped, weighed and classified as to desirable, intermediate or undesirable forage. Ten hoop checks are made for each transect. The figures obtained are used in a mathematical formula to give the amount of various classes of forage per acre. (Staff photo-engraving)

The same area where 27 elk wintered, as shown in the picture taken March 4, is shown in this photo taken June 27, 1958. Artificial feeding has been tried with hay either trucked in or dropped from planes. The elk will eat the hay, but it has not demonstrated a satisfactory solution. Not only is it expensive, but the experts say the elk don't thrive on the hay like they do on good natural forage.

It's a problem that so far has the forest service and game department stumped; but they're still working on it.

A more understandable problem is with domestic stock. Cattlemen and

Custom Machine Shop Uses Special Machines to Build Potato Harvester Devised by Owner

Potato Harvester Idea Five Years Ago Is Developed Into Profitable Business

An idea five years ago for a potato harvester has developed into a profitable business for Robert Curt, owner of the Curt Manufacturing company in Twin Falls.

Curt devised the potato harvester the first year he opened his little custom machine shop at 1600 Floral avenue in Twin Falls. His machine makes directly on a two-pole farm tractor and picks potatoes from the ground, runs them in front of two or three persons who clean the dirt and vines from the spuds and then directly into a bulk potato truck. It is considered by many farmers and interested persons as one of the best machines available for harvesting potatoes.

Curt built the first machine himself as his own design in his shop and personally took it to potato fields in Magic Valley to prove its performance.

That was in 1931. In 1935 Curt and his employees built three machines for farmers. The next year added emphasis was placed on the harvester and the "small" factory turned out 23 harvesters. Last year Curt Manufacturing company made 55 mechanical harvesters and this year the firm expects to produce 100 with an expected gross sales of half a million dollars.

Potato harvesters are not Curt's only product, however. The firm builds machines primarily for the potato harvest though, such as a specially designed winnow attachment for a two-row digger, potato bulk beds for trucks, conveyors, and rollers.

Richard Wheeler, Curt's bookkeeper and secretary-treasurer of the company, incorporated last year, estimates Curt's machine shop, building and equipment on hand, 1934 were valued at only $5,000. As of April 30, 1935, the building, machinery and land were figured to be valued at approximately $15,000.

"There's a valid reason for the plant and equipment being worth so much," Wheeler explains. "We have every piece of equipment that goes into the potato harvester right here in the plant, with the exception of wheels and hubs, tires, bearings, castings and rubber rollers. However, he adds that the rollers on the machine are made by a plant in Nephi, Utah in molds made by the Curt Manufacturing company and the company has purchased a foundry to begin using soon to make them.

The company makes chains, frames, machines all the castings, cast sprockets, pulleys and parts of all the machines. The plant is housed in three buildings, a main plant where all of the parts are made and welded, a chain shop where the conveyor chains are made and a paint shop.

A total of 25 men work for the company on a day shift and the firm expects to hire another crew for a night shift soon.

"We've got plenty of work to do," Wheeler says. "We have to manufacture 55 harvesters between June 18 and Aug. 1. Besides that our production schedule calls for completing 75 winnow attachments and 40 bulk beds this year."

The plant makes the machines in groups. Workers will make the 55 harvesters in one group and prior to that made 20 harvesters in one group. As soon as machinists and welders finish their portion of work on the harvesters and while the machines are being painted and assembled, men work on the bulk beds and winnow attachments.

Curt stepped into his own business after working as superintendent of a local machine shop. He has been in machine building business since he quit high school in Indianapolis, Ind., and began working for General Motors.

He's never been educated as a mechanical engineer, but Wheeler terms Curt a "mechanical genius" and says there isn't a machine in the shop Curt can't operate.

Curt came to Twin Falls in 1948. All of the designs for the machinery the company makes are Curt's own invention with the exception of a few principles interested farmers or machinists have given him.

On most of the equipment the company manufactures, the company holds patents, such as on the two-row winnow attachment and the double wear chain Curt manufactures. The potato harvester is not patented as Curt's design, but some of the principles of the harvester are in the process of being patented, Wheeler explains.

All of the conveyor chains used in the machinery the company manufactures are made on machines designed and built by Curt.

Curt's potato harvester is designed to operate in the field following the two-row winnow potato digger. The harvester does not have a blade to dig into the ground, but works on the principle of the conveyor chain digging into the ground and to get underneath the potatoes.

The potatoes are carried by conveyor chain to a rubber roller table where the vines and clods are removed by persons riding on the back of the harvester. The rubber roller table is a design of the University of Idaho agriculture department, and the University has given Curt the right to use the table on the harvester.

The rubber roller table is an important feature in the harvester in that it performs much of the work of smashing clods and removing dirt from the potatoes, Wheeler notes.

The potatoes are conveyed from the roller table directly into bulk trucks.

The machinery of the harvester is powered by the power take-off and hydraulic pumps on the tractor. The power take-off powers all of the chain drives and the hydraulic apparatus is to lower and raise the conveyor which takes the potatoes to the rubber roller table and the conveyor which carries the potatoes into the trucks.

All of the equipment manufactured by the Curt company is distributed by the company's own wholesale firm, called the O and M wholesale company with headquarters from Iowa, throughout Magic Valley. The outfit handles sales of the company's machinery throughout the West.

Fifteen retail dealers in the West distribute the machinery.

Curt's manufactured harvesters, truck beds, conveyors and rollers are being used in several western states and this year the firm is shipping machines to Washington, Oregon, California, Utah and Canada, and plans call for sending machines to Colorado, Nebraska, North Dakota and Minnesota.

Curt manufacturing has not sold any machines in Maine, but Wheeler notes that the company's sales force is making contacts there this year.

Petition Asks For City Pool In Shoshone

SHOSHONE, July 5.—A petition is being circulated to gain support for a municipal swimming pool for Shoshone. It was reported to members of the Rotary club at their Wednesday noon meeting by Joe Pagnan, representing the city planning commission.

The petition urges individuals and organizations to contribute to a swimming pool fund, to be in charge of the city mayor and clerk, with eventual construction under direction of the city council.

However, the petition states that proceeds from a circus here July 12 will go to the fund. There will be both an afternoon and evening performance of the circus.

City Council President, Rupert Manning, told Rotarians that the city has about $3,000 in a recreation fund and that some money might be loaned out of the capital outlay fund for the project.

It will cost between $15,000 and $17,000 to start, construction contractors have estimated, with equipment to be added later. Total construction would run around $40,000.

Omer Shook, new Rotary president, will be in charge of the next meeting. E. J. Shaw is retiring president.

Superintendent Ragland Says Parents Passed Along Big Faith in Education

Heard by parents who had great faith in education and made personal sacrifices to help him in his high school and early years in college. Ernest H. Ragland, superintendent of schools for class A school district No. 411, has continued this faith to work his way up the ladder to his present position.

He has a degree in education, a doctor of education from Columbia university, Bagland began his teaching in the year of 17 at a rural school in Clay county, Mo. Since that time he has spent 22 years in some part of education work.

When he was in high school, Bagland took a teacher training course. Coupled with his other class work, this was the only training he had before taking on the duties of a classroom teacher.

"At that time requirements weren't as high," says the superintendent. "You could teach right out of high school."

Prospective teachers visited other schools in operation, and Bagland remembers his teacher as giving him the best education she knew how to give. He would make good instructors.

As master of the rural school, Bagland taught about 30 students. His teaching duties for grades one to eight, he built the first, kept the school and even banked the fire at night.

"I was head of the school, custodian, playground supervisor and business manager all wrapped up in one," says the superintendent.

He declares he never was sorry for this experience, and that he has learned about all kinds of people, information that helps him in his work now.

But Bagland had dreams of the future. He always wanted to come west. So in 1909 he left his rural school and came to Twin Falls county.

He says, "I had a genuine desire to come west. It was more difficult to get a school in Idaho in those times, but Deep Creek, accepted."

At four miles south of Butte, the Deep Creek school was similar to the rural school in Missouri. Bagland became principal and taught the sixth, seventh and eighth grades. Under him were three other teachers.

In 1910, he moved to the Marion school north of Piler. There he taught four teachers while being principal and instructing the seventh and eighth grades. He held this position for nine years, during which he received a bachelor's degree at Southwest Missouri State college, Springfield.

Still hoping for a position with greater responsibility, Bagland was appointed elementary principal at Pomeroy, where he had the teachers and the administration of two buildings.

Beginning in September, 1923, Bagland served as a navy pharmacist in the South Pacific theater. He was attached to a mine sweeper in the North China sea.

He returned to Idaho in December, 1925, and received almost immediate appointment as the superintendent of schools at Murtaugh.

For two and one-half years, he administered there, says the superintendent. "But I decided to get specialized training in public school administration."

So in 1928 Bagland went to Columbia Teachers college in New York. Just a year later, he was granted a master of arts degree, and by 1930 he had completed his work for the doctorate.

Ragland recalls his first contract for teaching his master's degree and while working in the field on the doctor's degree, it was at Beecher, Ill., where he was superintendent of schools.

Located 40 miles south of Chicago, Beecher was named for Henry Ward Beecher, Ragland explains. He says there were many opportunities around the big city suburbs, but he still wanted to live in the West.

At the Midwest school, Bagland helped get a bond passed for a new high school.

ERNEST H. RAGLAND

Still working on the doctorate, in the summer of 1931 Bagland accepted life superintendent position that he now holds. Since he came here, the school district had had three principals. The teaching staff has increased from 140 to 200; enrollment has grown from 4,000 to 5,200 in the same period.

Explaining the growth, Ragland says, "I don't believe people are conscious of the increase in numbers. It hasn't been an unusual growth, but something to be proud of."

In 1932, construction of the new high school was begun. Though he was here when the bond election was held, Bagland has seen the actual work on one of the finest high schools in Idaho.

"The superintendent," notes the "proper understanding of education is here in Twin Falls, and it should be felt in other parts of Idaho." He says that the influence of the people of Twin Falls should be extended over more of the state. He feels there should be "more concern for legislation."

Ragland says the teacher shortage is a "real problem" but the teacher-to-student ratio has been much improved over the last 10 years. Specifically in Twin Falls, he speaks of "good teachers" and "tangible improvement." Ten years ago there were 35 students for every teacher; today there is 20 per faculty member.

Ragland explains that the change in ratio is "up the best interests of the boys and girls." He says educators realize years ago there are individual differences among students, but with 35 to 40 in a class it is hard to practice these known facts.

Part of Bagland's philosophy of administration calls for the use of school buildings all year. He says the facilities should be used "whenever they can be." However, operation of the administration's facilities is only a portion of what the superintendent believes is necessary.

Operating a large school district is "improving," explains Bagland. "The way of the improver may often be difficult. Modern school administrators must work as harmoniously as possible with the community."

He asserts that the Parent-Teacher association stands today as the "most helpful organization" for the improvement and advancement of education. He calls the Twin Falls organ "unique" and one of the best in the country.

It was through the efforts of the administration and the PTA that Twin Falls schools have what the state board of education labels a "pilot school" for guidance-counseling.

For the coming year, the state board has granted Twin Falls schools special financial aid to do further work on the guidance-counseling program.

One of the accomplishments that Bagland mentions includes two new grade schools. He says they were completed in "record time." It took just seven months from the beginning of construction until students were using the classrooms. Opened in 1935, they are overcrowded already.

Ragland claims "education is more critically needed today than ever. Opportunity for untrained laborers gets more difficult every year. Young people must become proficient in skilled types of work. To neglect becoming skilled in some particular line is to take a great chance with the future. There are all kinds of opportunities for workmen who are skilled and competent."

He says his greatest satisfaction comes from following the achievements of young people who pass through schools. He takes "keen interest and great pride" in their accomplishments.

Ragland has little time to enjoy hobbies or other diversions. His summers are practically as busy as the winters with annual reports, auditing school accounts, employment of personnel and procurement of supplies and new equipment. When time permits, Ragland enjoys fishing and hunting.
