Huge Loads of Fish Transported by Idaho's New Equipment

Three and one-third more live hatchery fish can be hauled at one time with this new truck and trailer unit than with the old equipment it replaced.

The new fish-hauling equipment is the best in the world. Even the trailers are independent of the trucks and have built-in machinery, fuel and controls for refrigeration and oxygenation.

Increased Use of Wildlife Resources Spotlight Importance of Agency Task

By JIM HUMBIRD Idaho Fish and Game Department. Hunters and fishermen buy appropriate licenses and tags and are killed easily. Their number is legion.

Just as the number of Idaho fishermen and hunters is increasing so is there a growing number of campers, picnickers, boaters, bird watchers, organizations and individuals who find recreation in the hinterlands.

All this and good hunting and fishing, too, is enjoyed by residents and tourists alike without costing even one mill of the state taxpayers' dollars.

It is provided by the professional staff of the Idaho fish and game department and is financed in the main by people who buy hunting and fishing licenses and tags.

During the last fiscal year total revenues of the department were $2,380,995.41, of which 71.2 per cent was contributed by fishermen and hunters—45 per cent of whom were non-residents who came to take part in Idaho wildlife recreational activities.

Nor is that all. Sportsmen make a secondary contribution in the form of a federal excise tax on the manufacturer's level when they purchase firearms, ammunition and fishing tackle.

During 1958 Idaho became an active participant in the Columbia river fisheries development program and is now receiving its third source of revenue by appropriation from congress—a matter of 21.5 per cent of the more than two million dollar budget.

The 70-plus per cent portion of the budget contributed by sportsmen breaks down this way: Resident license and tag fee revenues—$900,834.21 last year, or 55 per cent; non-resident license and tag fees—$734,969.40, or 45 per cent of the total.

Federal monies are specifically earmarked as to how they can be spent and projects must meet federal standards before the fish and game department is eligible for reimbursement. Foremost among these requirements are state laws prohibiting the diversion of license receipts for any purpose other than operation of the program.

The big, self-sustaining budget last year was used by the department's five divisions as follows: Administration, $176,496; conservation enforcement, $567,980; game management, $484,790; fisheries, $916,833; information and education, $89,993.

Just recently the department purchased two 900-gallon fish distribution tanks and four fish transportation tanks. These are of aluminum construction and are insulated with two inches of spun glass.

Aeration of the water is accomplished by using bottled oxygen, dispensed through carbon stones. The transportation tanks are operated as truck-and-trailer units. Each truck tank has a capacity of 2,000 gallons of water and each trailer tank holds 3,000 gallons.

Each tank also is subdivided into compartments of approximately 700 gallons. These units greatly facilitate the transportation of fish from the expanded rearing facilities of Hagerman and other hatcheries to redistribution areas around the state.

One of the largest bodies of water ever chemically treated in the rough fish control program was eastern Idaho's Island Park reservoir and tributaries during October, where 47,000 pounds of rotenone and 1,430 gallons of Prolox Fish was used to destroy nearly 24 million chub, shiners, suckers, dace, sculpin and other undesirable fish.

Non-game species constituted 99.46 per cent of the kill. The reservoir will be restocked with several million rainbow trout fry and fingerling, while tributaries above and Snake river downstream are being stocked with rainbow trout fingerling and creek-size trout in preparation for the 1959 fishing season.

Under present law one-half of all fine money for game violations is remitted by the judges to the county treasurers, who apportion half to the school funds and the remainder to county general funds.

From last January through November, a total of $37,247.50 was collected by the judges, of which $18,623.50 remained in the counties.

Extensive aerial surveys of deer, elk and other animals were continued through 1958, mostly in areas which have been covered several consecutive years. Other 1958 progress highlights in game management programs are extensive but a few may be listed.

Upland game bird hunters had the best pheasant shooting experienced in the last seven years for which Knitting, Men?

LONDON, Jan. 3 (UPI) — A British psychologist has suggested that businessmen take up knitting on their way to work to reduce nervous tension.

"They are left with no resources but to smoke, study the racing news or do crosswords."

"The Russians haven't forgotten the golden days of lend-lease. Anastas I. Mikoyan will undoubtedly have them in mind when he talks about trade next week in Washington."

Trade is a favorite subject of Mikoyan and this is the field in which the Soviet deputy premier is an expert.

Mikoyan and the Soviet government believe the Soviet Union should be willing to consume any exports the United States is willing to finance.

U. S. Isn't Interested In recent years this idea has never caught on in Washington, but the Russians never get tired of suggesting such a program.

Premier Nikita Khrushchev told President Eisenhower last June that the Soviet Union would like to buy a billion dollars worth of goods and equipment in the United States if only the United States would provide the credits for Soviet-American trade to get started.

Idea May Be Talked The Soviet radio, in a broadcast commenting on the Mikoyan visit to the United States, says one of the things the deputy premier may take up is this Khrushchev proposal.

During World War II the United States shipped 11 billion dollars worth of lend-lease goods to Russia. The Russians never made any settlement on a small portion of this debt the United States wanted the Soviet Union to pay.

Disagreement Develops Both Mikoyan and Stalin took to this idea. They were so convinced that the United States would insist on giving them big credits that they rejected an initial credit offer during war-time of nearly half a billion dollars—over a disagreement of around 1/4 to one per cent on the rate of interest proposed, less than three per cent.

After the war Stalin hopefully suggested the United States give him an initial three-billion-dollar credit. The idea was not warmly received in Washington because by this time relations had begun to grow cool.

Probe Report Slanted, Aver Three Solons

WASHINGTON, Jan. 3 (AP)—Three Republican members of a house investigating committee charged today that its report was slanted to put Republicans in a bad light but skipped over information derogatory to Democrats.

The report was made by the house legislative oversight subcommittee. That body, while investigating activities of regulatory agencies probed, went deep into re-revisions based, went deep into re-revisions based on studies on conservation, history, biology, zoology, nature resources, wildlife management, forestry and related subjects.

Adams resigned after the committee heard testimony he had accepted gifts from Goldfine and had made inquiries of government agencies about matters in which Goldfine was interested.

Rep. Joseph P. O'Hara of Minnesota said that as written by the subcommittee staff the report was "slanted to convey the impression that all major wrongdoing was found in one political party since 1952."

Another Republican, Rep. John B. Bennett of Michigan, said that the report is silent as to William T. McCarthy, a federal district judge, a Democrat, and appointee of a previous administration and a long time personal friend and beneficiary of Goldfine's gratuities.

Space Rocket Draws Praise By President

WASHINGTON, Jan. 3 (AP)—President Eisenhower today congratulated Russian scientists and engineers on the successful launching of their space rocket.

Rep. John W. McCormack of Massachusetts, Democratic house leader, a short time later called for boldness and creativity in American space explorations and said "we must not have a Pearl Harbor in outer space."

Statement Dictated The Eisenhower statement, dictated to newsmen by Presidential Press Secretary James C. Hagerty, said:

"The successful launching is announced by the Soviets of a vehicle designed to pass near the moon represents a great stride forward in man's advance into the infinite reaches of outer space."

"To the scientists and engineers assigned to the undertaking a full measure of credit is due, and we congratulate them on this achievement."

Follows Announcement The White House statement came after the Soviet Union had announced its 1 1/2-ton cosmic rocket would jab into space past the moon and become the first artificial planet and satellite of the sun.

McCormack, chairman of the house space committee which Friday urged a speed-up in American moon shots, said in his statement, "It is time America awoke to its peril."

"There must be boldness and creativity in our efforts," McCormack said, "and an awareness of two fundamentals in the exploration of outer space:

"1. That it is essential to our national existence that the Soviet Union, whose beliefs are the antithesis of those of free men everywhere, not remain ahead of the United States in this important field, and (2) that this program costs a great deal of money."

All of Europe Watches Russ Space Rocket

LONDON, Jan. 3 (AP)—The Soviet Union's cosmic rocket spread mingled wonderment and misgiving across Europe today.

Radio stations broadcast progress reports as fast as they flowed from Moscow. Newspapers charted the space voyage in front-page displays.

As the rocket soared toward the moon, conviction grew that the Russians were unlikely to end up with a flop.

In communist countries, from East Germany to red China, commentators poured out praise for the Soviet Union.

Among Western European commentators, the realization grew that the space thrust could have far-reaching military implications.

Scientists in general warmly applauded the feat of Soviet technicians.

"This is confirmation of the ability of the Soviet Union to do this kind of thing in a very confident way," declared Dr. D. C. Martin, secretary of the British International Geophysical year committee.

Another top British scientist, Prof. H. S. W. Massey, said he expected the 1 1/2-ton rocket to reach a spot where it would revolve around the sun as the Russians predicted. He is chairman of Britain's IGY artificial satellite committee.

The world's largest radio telescope at Britain's Jodrell bank picked up signals from the Soviet moon rocket.

Prof. Alfred Lovell, director, said special equipment was fitted to the telescope at short notice for a serious attempt to track the rocket in the early hours of Sunday.

Lovell, who used the radio telescope to help track the American moonshots, had no advance warning of the Soviet launching.

Stream Private

WENDELL, Jan. 3—District Judge D. H. Sutherland has ruled that the Sand Springs creek is a private stream and not open to public fishing.

The decision is the result of a suit filed by heirs of the Berkowitz estate in the southwest part of Gooding county against Ross Leonard, Boise, director of the Idaho fish and game department, and Alonzo Brown, Wendell, conservation officer, to establish whether or not the creek should be open to public fishing.

No Leash Needed

OTTAWA, Jan. 3 (AP)—Garry Thomson has a little goat and it follows him wherever he goes. The boy's father bought the goat for slaughter, but Garry pleaded for the animal's life.

Police ruled the goat doesn't need a license to roam the city streets, since it follows its 13-year-old master without a leash.

HERDSMEN STOP ROAMING

TOKYO, Jan. 3 (AP)—Outer Mongolia's famed nomadic herdsmen are giving up their roaming ways under communism. Peiping radio says 58 per cent of them have joined co-operatives since 1955.

WASHINGTON—"The Russians," writes T. F. Tulsa, Okla., "have never spoken so bluntly of starting a war against the West and especially the United States as they have over the Berlin crisis. Are they faking and bluffing, or are they serious?"

Answer: Our diplomats and military observers here and abroad incline to the view that they are bluffing.

Although the Soviet may possess numerous war-making advantages over the combined forces and weapons of this country and its allies—planes, submarines, personnel and intercontinental missiles—our experts doubt that their physical, financial and agricultural structure is sufficiently sound to support a global war.

In this connection, they have in mind such factors as industrial production, transportation facilities, output of food, and, finally, morale. As history demonstrates, the Russians have always fought best in a defensive rather than in an offensive struggle.

RUSSIA'S POSSIBLE WEAKNESSES—The series of rebellions behind the Iron Curtain—Poland, East Berlin in East Germany and Budapest in Hungary—disclose another possible vital weakness. There is no certainty that the satellite peoples would not rise up against their jailers, if an all-out war provided the opportunity.

Russia's military strength would be dissipated by such movements, even if they were only of the "resistance" kind that harassed Hitler so seriously. And, whereas the West gave no reinforcements to Iron Curtain rebels for obvious reasons—namely, the danger of precipitating a world-wide clash—we would drop arms, supplies and information in the event of a conflict.

Finally, both Khrushchev and Mao Tse-tung need years of peace in order to make even a start on their five- and seven-year modernization programs.

ALWAYS CHANCE OF ANOTHER SARAJEVO—There is, of course, always a chance of another Sarajevo when rival powers meet on the same ground that prevails in the two Germanies. And Foreign Minister Gromyko has frequently recalled how the 1914 assassination of the Austrian archduke in that tiny hamlet set off World War I.

That danger is increased because of the terrific speed of the newest planes which guard the various borders, and which may be equipped with nuclear bombs. Nevertheless, the experts continue to believe that the Berlin and other crises will wind up in talking rather than in shooting.

According to General Maxwell D. Taylor, there have been 17 "limited wars" since 1945, involving 600,000 soldiers and lasting for an average of two-and-a-half years each. Despite the tensions and bitterness which these engagements aroused, a major clash between the West and the East has been averted off for 13 years.

EARLY ESTIMATES RARELY RELIABLE—"Is there any real ground," asks Mrs. R. L. Berkeley Calif., "for believing that the cost of the government for the 1960 fiscal year will be only the President's estimated 77 billion dollars, and that the budget can be balanced?"

Answer: There is not. It should be remembered that figures of revenue receipts and expenditures have rarely tallied with early estimates. They are mere guesses. Ironically, they were never more erroneous than during the regime of the late Andrew Mellon, the Pittsburgh banker and financier. He handed out what are known as "political budgets."

It is almost axiomatic for an administration to figure low on outgo and high on income when the opposition party comes into power. When it becomes necessary, they can always be blamed as "spenders," as President Eisenhower predicted during the recent campaign. Finally, with rising prices in every field, how can the government be financed with 77 billion dollars in view of the following basic charges?

REALISTIC FIGURES—National defense and a nuclear armory, 42 billion dollars; interest on the public debt, seven billion dollars; farm support payments and storage costs, seven billion dollars; veterans, six billion dollars for a total of 62 billion dollars, leaving only 15 billion dollars for all the other costs of government's far-flung operations. These are realistic figures, not official, political predictions. (Released by McClure Newspaper Syndicate)

VIEWS OF OTHERS

WHEN BUREAUCRACY NODS

A federal government agency, in dividing a fund for road improvement that has collected from highway users all over the country, has allotted to Blaine and Camas counties something like $215,000 as federal aid for work on county roads.

It develops now that these counties can't use this allotment because they have nothing designated as county roads on which to spend it.

So there is brought to attention a situation that makes one wonder and, perhaps, to question the infallibility of government agencies, or, maybe, to build up a bit of sympathy for them on account of the difficulties they seem to encounter sometimes in getting rid of all the tax money they take in.

It's passing strange that government agents didn't know, before they made this allotment, that Blaine and Camas couldn't qualify as recipients of the hand-out.

There are other roads in Blaine and Camas, though, on which this money, and more, could be spent to advantage. There is, for instance, state highway project 88, west of Corral and Fairfield.

The county commissioners are not at all disposed to let this "government money" go by default. So they're suggesting that the state highway board lay claim to it and use it for improvement of state highways within their borders. And it is reported that the state board has indicated it likes the proposal and will likely give it favorable consideration when it meets again next week.

I. N. Sympathy, Twin Falls—After due consideration we're going to blow the whistle on this one for two reasons. In the first place, it would set a precedent for all pet owners to pay homage to their deceased pets in this corner. And in the second place, the poetry leaves something to be desired in the first place. Anyway, thanks.

FAMOUS LAST LINE

GENTLEMAN IN THE FOURTH ROW

There is no question about room for economy in the missile program. There are now five agencies in the army, navy, air force, ARPA—which is supposed to boss and coordinate the first three, but which has developed quite a technical staff of its own—and the new one, national aeronautics and space agency. Elimination of duplications could make substantial savings.

The year-end report of Gen. Orval Cook, president of Aircraft Industries association, says there are now 46 missile projects under way. Twenty are surface-to-surface, three surface-to-air, six air-to-air, six air-to-surface, two dual-capable. Twenty other test vehicles now being researched are not included in this count.

Some of the big missiles like Atlas and Titan, Jupiter and Thor, do practically the same thing. Each costs hundreds of millions of dollars. But to cancel out one of either pair would be a setback for its manufacturer.

The overall aviation industry picture isn't too bad. General Cook anticipates total sales around 10 billion dollars in 1959—seven billion going to the 12 major airplane manufacturers.

The backlog of orders is put at 13 billion dollars—but this is under five billion from Dec. 31, 1958.

What General Cook does not report but what is common knowledge in the industry is that five companies are experiencing difficulties from canceled contracts, higher costs and demands for more sophisticated technology.

Among the companies that have reported heavy layoffs, due to cutbacks are Bell, Fairchild, Grumman, Republic, Martin and Chance-Vought. Any new contracts in 1959 will affect others. Consequently, the companies are fighting each other's missiles, to stay in business themselves.

These are some of the facts about the missile program which wrong public relations emphasize conceals from American public opinion.

WASHINGTON

By PETER EDSON

WASHINGTON (NEA) — Nearly every time the master minds of government planning try to mold public opinion by publicity tricks they get into trouble. Most recent example of this was the publicity job done on the orbiting Atlas missile.

No one denies this was a successful and important launching. But in trying to build it up into the greatest thing since the original appearance of Bethlehem a lot of claims were made that simply weren't so.

First mistake may have been to fire this missile in complete secrecy without briefing reporters in advance on what was going on. They had no chance to check out this data in filing first reports after launching.

Later corrections never quite caught up with the false impression given the American people. This was that the U.S. is now way ahead of Russia on missile development, and there is nothing to worry about for the future.

The Russians weren't fooled by this for a minute. Neither were American scientists who know their way in space.

The idea of putting the case of the missile into orbit, along with its payload, was first suggested last June. Idea boys among the policy makers at high level grabbed it.

The air force was read out of the act except as operator—the department of defense handled publicity. It became an ARPA undertaking—advanced research projects agency.

As one scientist put it, this was something like the dinosaur—huge body, tiny brain. Its practical usefulness still has to be proved. President Eisenhower's message was reworked from the missile through so much state or other interference that any listeners who did catch it would have to have it translated.

One side effect of this publicity build-up was to give the impression that bigger budgets for missiles might not be necessary. This served to rationalize President Eisenhower's proposed 77-billion-dollar budget for next year—nicely reduced and neatly balanced.

There is no question about room for economy in the missile program. There are now five agencies in the army, navy, air force, ARPA—which is supposed to boss and coordinate the first three, but which has developed quite a technical staff of its own—and the new one, national aeronautics and space agency. # PUC Acts on Area Carrier Permit Cases

BOISE, Jan. 3 (UPI)—The Idaho public utilities commission, has authorized transfer of a carrier permit held by Myrl D. On June 20, 1944, he came to Sun Valley where he was employed as a gardener on the grounds crew. He retired May 28, 1958. He never married and there are no known survivors.

Funeral services will be held at 2 p.m. Monday at the Ketchum Community Presbyterian church with the Rev. Charles Shirr officiating. Casketing rites will be held in the Ketchum cemetery. Friends may call at McGoldrick funeral home.

Man Sentenced

Harry Ricketts was sentenced to 28 days in the county jail when he appeared in Twin Falls probate court Friday on a charge of issuing a check without sufficient funds in the bank.

Ricketts was arrested by city police Dec. 27 when he passed a $25 check on the Twin Falls Bank and Trust to Alexander's Clothing store.

IDAHO'S SHAMEFUL RECORD

The current session of the Idaho legislature should not lose sight of the state's traffic problem, even though revenue and taxation seem to be the items of chief concern.

With 270 killed on Idaho's highways in 1958, as compared with 205 the previous year, it should be apparent to everyone in this state that drastic action is needed to curb all this needless slaughter.

To emphasize the seriousness of this problem in Idaho, it's interesting to note by contrast that Utah wound up the year 1958 with only 187 traffic fatalities. Utah's traffic death toll during the previous seven years ranged from 203 to 248.

So, while 65 more people were killed in Idaho than during the previous year, Utah shows an appreciable reduction in the number of lives lost on its highways. That's an exceptionally good record for our neighboring state, considering that population, number of motor vehicles and miles traveled have increased tremendously.

In fact, the Salt Lake Tribune uses Idaho as a basis of comparison for editorial comment praising the state of Utah for its achievement.

"Comparison with past Utah tolls is one good indication of the excellence of that 1958 traffic safety record," said the Tribune. Another good evidence is comparison with the toll in the neighboring state of Idaho.

"Idaho has almost the same area as Utah and comparable highway mileage. But it has at least a hundred thousand less population and fewer miles of principal transcontinental highway. Yet Idaho last year had a staggering toll of 270."

"... We are inclined to give some of the credit to the stepped-up highway patrol activity, notably increased use of roving patrols and radar."

"Supp. Lyle Hyatt says he hopes to continue and expand this program in 1959, with three of these roving patrols in operation at all times."

"We hope this can be done. For we are convinced as ever that the best promoter of safety on the highway is adequate enforcement, properly supported by the courts."

"Utah proved in 1958 what could be done to save lives in motor accidents. May that record be a challenge to all of us—drivers, pedestrians, officials, courts, and most of all to enforcement agencies—in 1959."

As the readers of the Times-News are well aware, this newspaper has expressed the same opinions in this regard as those voiced by the Salt Lake Tribune.

Idaho never has taken a realistic attitude toward its traffic death toll which is nothing short of a disgrace. Instead of facing the issue squarely, our legislators quibble over its political aspects. Instead of providing determined leadership in an all-out campaign against death and destruction on our highways, the executive department of our state government sponsors traffic conferences and the like which result in little, if any, definite action.

Out-of our state law enforcement department come all kinds of "reasons" and "explanations" and tabulations to explain away the mounting death toll on our highways and to indicate that a real effort is being made to curb all this needless carnage.

Add it all up, however, and it amounts to a lot of talk and not much in the way of concerted action.

Idaho should be ashamed of its 1958 traffic death toll, and its indifference to this ghastly record, all up and down the line.

CHRISTMAS VANDALISM

Now that all the happiness and headaches of the holidays are over for another year, there is one distasteful part of it all that's regrettable to say the least.

One would think that during the holidays, of all times, those inclined toward vandalism could resist their fiendish urge.

This type of hoodlumism sank to a ghoulish low when vandals with an utter disregard for the sacred atmosphere of the display destroyed several of the figurines in the nativity scene erected on the lawn of Magic Valley Memorial hospital.

This sort of thing is not entirely new in Twin Falls during the Christmas holidays. For several years, many householders participating in the Times-News Christmas lighting contest have complained that lights from their displays were being stolen or destroyed.

In previous years, Fillmore street was one of the most beautifully decorated thoroughfares in town during the holidays, which also made it most attractive to those who delight in vandalism.

Individual residents along that street complained that not only lights were stolen and destroyed by the dozens night after night, but that in some instances, carefully constructed displays were torn down.

This year a number of residents along Fillmore decided not to cope with all this vandalism, and the street no longer measured up to its distinction which previously drew sightseers by the thousands.

Next year, let's hope there will be some way to put an end to this thing that only serves to detract the spirit of Christmas.

In a brewery fire thousands of bottles of beer exploded. Remember when folks used to make their own?

U.S. Firm Will Be Competitor On Aluminum

NEW YORK, Jan. 3 (AP)—The American Aluminum Co., long famous for its role in copper, plans to expand its operations in the U. S. aluminum market.

The U. S. Aluminum Co., American Aluminum Co. subsidiary, American Aluminum Co. subsidiary, American Aluminum Co. subsidiary, have been merged into a single subsidiary, American Aluminum Co., giving Anaconda Aluminum assets of well over 140 million dollars.

Integrated Organization

Clyde E. Weed, chairman of the parent company, said Anaconda Aluminum will be an integrated organization handling the metal from the reduction of alumina to pig and ingot right through to fabrication of a variety of products.

Archie P. Cochran, Louisville, president and founder of Cochran-Foll company, was named president of Anaconda Aluminum. He succeeds Russell B. Caples, president since 1953, who retired.

Caples continues as a vice president of the parent company and director of the aluminum subsidiary.

Merged in 1950

Cochran-Foll company, acquired by Anaconda in April, 1958, was founded as a rolling operation and in 1950 was merged with Midland and paper products. Cochran-Foll subsidiary devoted to manufacturing rigid foil containers for the baking and frozen food industries, becomes a subsidiary of Anaconda Aluminum.

Executive offices of the aluminum operation will be in Louisville. The company has an aluminum reduction plant at Columbus Falls, Mont., which accounts for 60,000 tons of the U. S. total capacity of 2,075,760 tons. Much of this plant's production will be absorbed by the Anaconda organization, Weed said, but an ample supply will continue to be available to non-integrated customers.

Montana GOP And Demos to Hold Sessions

HELENA, Mont., Jan. 3 (AP)—Democratic and Republican legislators will gather in Helena tomorrow evening for secret meetings to organize the Montana legislature for another 60-day run.

Democrats hold a numerical edge in both houses, so competition for the main jobs narrows to some of their leaders.

2 Men Compete

Competition for the top post—the speakership of the house of representatives—has boiled down to John J. MacDonald, Jordan, and Fred E. Barrett, Chester.

The speaker of the 1957 session, Eugene H. Mahoney, Thompson Falls, is a freshman senator this session. MacDonald was the assistant speaker.

The loser in this contest likely will compete with James Wood, Jr., Loma, Charles Czerowski, Lewiston, and Dale L. McGarvey, Kalspell, for the position of house majority floor leader. Barrett held the job in the 1957 session.

Senate Post Sought

In the senate, David F. James, Joplin, Robert A. Durkee, Havre, and D. M. Manning, Hingham, are the major candidates for the position of president pro tem or majority floor leader.

James was majority leader in 1957. Lieut. Gov. Paul Cannon, Butte, is the senate president.

The Republicans also will meet Sunday night.

4 Seek Post

In the house those mentioned most frequently for the position of minority floor leader are Jerome Anderson and James R. Felt, both Billings. Sumner Geray, Virginia City, and Clyde L. Hawks, St. Xavier. This post was held last session by R. F. Juedenhof, Shelby, the state Republican chairman.

Ber Hibbs, Billings, has been mentioned most often as the senate minority leader. The former minority leader, Donovan Worden, Missoula, lost his reelection bid.

Wounded Man Is Said to Be 'Fair'

IDAHO FALLS, Jan. 3 (AP)—A man police said was accidentally wounded by a shotgun blast was in fair condition today in the LDS hospital here.

David Zorn, 24, Ririe, was found Friday afternoon in the Garvin J. Durrant home near Ririe where he sought aid following the accident. Zorn was the only one in the house.

Zorn, who had a .410 gauge wound in his chest, was discovered by delivery truck driver Bob Tobin, Idaho Falls, who stopped at the home to make a business call.

Tobin took Zorn to the hospital here.

Jefferson and Bonneville county sheriffs' officers said Zorn apparently was wounded when the shotgun discharged as he was setting it down in a field near the Garvin home.

Plane of CAP Crashes After Trip by Itself

COLUMBUS, O., Jan. 3 (AP)—A pilotless civil air patrol plane traveled for more than 100 air miles at 16,000 feet today before it crashed 300 yards from a farm house near Chillicothe, 40 miles south of here.

The plane, a single engine L16 Aerona, had gotten away from its pilot at the Rising Sun, Ind., airport.

Before it crashed, ending a state-wide alert of both civil and military air facilities, jets from the 168th fighter squadron of the Ohio air national guard got it in their sights.

Crashes at 2 p.m.

It had taken to the air at 11:40 a.m. It crashed shortly before 2 p.m.

The jets, two armed and two unarmed F84Fs, had planned to either flip-it-over-by-making-contact with its wings, or shoot it down. As it turned out, neither was necessary.

Swoosh of the jets as they made several approaches to the plane at the high altitude caused it to veer away each time. Then, just as the jets gave up the attempt to make physical contact, the L16's propeller feathered and the engine quit. With the jets trailing close behind, the plane dipped and began a long glide toward an isolated farmland area about seven miles north of Chillicothe.

Plane Breaks in 2 Parts

It finally crashed and came to rest near Ohio highway 150n between Chillicothe and Kingston in Ross county, about 300 yards from the only farm houses in the immediate area. It did not catch fire, but broke into two parts.

Robert Murray, 33, pilot of the plane belonging to the Rising Sun civil air patrol, said he was on the ground "cranking up" the plane and that apparently the throttle had been left on.

He said he had landed at the Rising Sun field a few minutes earlier, filled the tank with gasoline and was preparing to taxi the craft to a hangar when it took off on its own.

Private Schools May Receive Aid

LITTLE ROCK, Ark., Jan. 3 (AP)—Despite a U. S. supreme court ruling the state education department probably will allocate money to private schools set up to avoid integration.

Education Commissioner Arch Ford said yesterday he will allocate money to Raney high, operated by the Little Rock Private School corporation, and another private, segregated schools if they meet state standards.

He plans to do so in the face of a supreme court ruling Sept. 19 warning against what the court called "evasive schemes for segregation."

The warning was generally interpreted as being aimed at private schools.

Western Senators Will Meet Monday

WASHINGTON, Jan. 3 (AP)—A conference of Rocky Mountain Democratic senators will be held Monday to discuss legislation for the session beginning Wednesday.

A spokesman said the group will talk about the needs of the Rocky Mountain area generally and proposed legislation. The call for the meeting was issued by Senator James E. Murray, Montana, Carl Hayden, Arizona, and Joseph C. O'Mahoney, Wyoming.

Matters to be taken up include proposed power and reclamation laws in Idaho, Utah, Colorado, Arizona, Nevada, New Mexico, Wyoming and Montana; a proposal to investigate and survey Rocky Mountain area water resources; and help for the depressed metals mining industry and Indian welfare.

Labor Union Suit Denied by Judge

BOISE, Jan. 3 (AP)—A suit by a Horseshoe Bend labor union collapsed yesterday when a judge ruled that since its contract had expired there was no basis for action.

The suit was brought by Lumber and Sawmill Workers local 2643. It attempted to compel negotiation with Caldwell Lumber company over the 1958 firing of Aaron Deum.

The judge said that since the contract had gone out of effect last March, the union could not reopen the case since monetary damages were claimed.

Washington Pair Climbs Mt. Hood

MT. HOOD, Ore., Jan. 3 (AP)—Two Washington college students have claimed the first 1959 ascent of 11,250-foot Mt. Hood. It took them from New Year's eve until 5 p.m. Friday.

The two climbers are Ed Paget, Portland, a Whitman college student, and Larry Haggerness, Tacoma. They and Stan Kozlowski, Bremerton, and Al Van Buskirk, Tacoma, set up a bivouac tent at Illumination rock Wednesday. But they were driven off the mountain by storms.

On Friday the four left Timberline Lodge and Paget and Haggerness continued on to the summit while the others brought back the equipment.

Haggerness suffered a mild case of frostbite of the feet and Paget received face cuts when he tumbled ice from his beard.

Doctor Says Beck Has New Ailment

SEATTLE, Jan. 3 (AP)—Dave Beck's physician said today he did not see how the labor leader could be in court Monday for the resumption of his trial in income tax evasion.

The former international president of the Teamsters union is accused of evading $240,000 in income taxes. His trial in U.S. district court, Tacoma, Wash., was recessed Dec. 19 due to Beck's poor health and the approaching holidays.

Bothered at first by a severe cold, Beck now is troubled by a flare-up of an old kidney ailment, Dr. Alexander Grinstead said. The physician added he had taken some tests today and planned others for Monday.

Live Bacteria Being Found By Hospitals

NEW YORK, Jan. 3 (UPI)—A random testing of the water bottles at the bedside of hospital patients revealed that more than half were contaminated with staphylococci, a bacterial family with members capable of sickening and even killing human beings.

Cultures of some of these water bottle staphylococci were injected into the veins of 10 mice, and seven of the 10 were dead of acute staphylococcal infections within four days. You can see why the testing has caused a stir in hospital circles throughout the country.

24 Hospitals Involved

The stir is all the greater because the bottles were in 24 hospitals in Boston, a leading medical center with three top medical schools. Boston hospitals are under the constant scrutiny of the highly scientific faculty members. Hospital scientists reason that if it could happen in Boston, it could happen anywhere.

The trouble was that the house-keeping departments of the hospitals lacked sufficient respect for the amazing multiplying abilities of staphylococci in particular and microorganisms in general, the scientific investigators reported.

Cross-infections—that is, bacteria getting from one patient to others—are presently a major problem in hospitals. The investigators said the water bottle was a way bacteria could get around in a hospital and in view of their findings, it was an "unappreciated" way.

Bacteria Aren't Washed

In general, the hospitals were not washing the bottles often enough nor well enough. Bottles were not sterilized at all in many cases; their materials would have disintegrated in the heat required for proper sterilization.

Moreover, the investigators continued, it was clear that the bottles were not washed daily nor even emptied and re-filled daily because "the walls of some were slimy" and "gelatinous islands of algae and fungi floated in others."

The investigators also found fault with the way hospitals handled the cubed and shaved ice which went into the bottles to cool the water.

The investigation was done in July and August when patients require lead water.

The ice was exposed to air in hospital areas where it could get contaminated. It was handled by hands rather than tongs. Scoops and ice rakes were not sanitary.

Odd Tastes Found

Dr. Carl W. Walter, associate clinician, professor of surgery, Harvard Medical School, launched the investigation after patients told him that their bedside drinking water had odd tastes. He began looking into the bedside water bottles and found turbid, malodorous water in a majority of cases.

He enlisted Dr. A. Daniel Rubenstein, Massachusetts' department of public health and a professor at Harvard School of Public Health. The full-scale investigation followed. The results were reported to the New England Journal of Medicine.

A reception honoring the couple was held Tuesday evening at the local LDS third ward chapel.

Her shoulder-length veil of illusion net fell from a matching brocade bandeau. She carried a hand bouquet of pink Elfe roses and pink satin streamers around a bow of pink French illusion net.

She was attended by her sister, Mrs. L. H. Kirkman, Alhambra, Calif. Mrs. Kirkman was attired in a blue princess style gown and carried a bouquet of white feathered chrysanthemums with Elfe roses around a pink French illusion net bow.

The bridegroom's mother selected blue lace with a pink gardenia corsage with rhinestone accent.

An arch, banked with bouquets of large and pompon pink chrysanthemums formed the background for the receiving line. The arch was flanked with large bouquets of pink chrysanthemums and potted palms.

The nylon embroidered covered refreshment table was centered by the tiered wedding cake encircled with pink pompon chrysanthemums and aspidium fern. Flanking small bouquets of the same were in French pedestal ivory bowls. Quartz tables were decorated by Mrs. Jack Shriver.

Serving were Mrs. Ormus Bates, Mrs. A. D. Miller, Mrs. F. E. Stevens, Mrs. Ruth Hickman, Lolita Stevens, Mary Jane Miller, Shirley Jones, Kay Angerbauer, JoAnn Long, Geraldine Brown and Sharon Miller. Gifts were arranged by Mrs. J. H. Bingham and Mrs. John Merrill.

Care of Your Children

By ANGELO PATRI

Bobby was given a BB gun for his birthday and now he and his chum make a business of going hunting. They live in the suburbs so their range is limited to the drives, the lawns and the one small park that the town boasts. This does not hamper their style at all. They shoot at any bird, chipmunk, squirrel that shows itself regardless of where it may be. This has made the neighborhood angry.

When Bobby's father was interviewed by an irate neighbor who protested the child's habit of shooting at birds he said, "It is good practice for him. He needs to learn to shoot at a moving target. You can't tell these days when a squirrel is going to be nearby."

Bobby is not past 10-years old. He is not likely to need to shoot in self defense, or at a flying target, and his habit of shooting at helpless little creatures like birds is not likely to teach him the qualities of character many men admire. Soldiers do not shoot helpless creatures.

Twin Falls Woman Displays Part of Antique Jewelry Collection

Mrs. Orlo Williams, 1238 Sixth avenue east, is displaying a small part of her antique jewelry collection. The locket and collar chain being held by her are of silver and were given her by an English family. She also collects authentic Cloisonne vases and miniatures.

The miniatures in the foreground are ivory Chinese figurines called Netsukes. Each one represents an outstanding service to the community of a Chinese man and were worn around the neck or on the sash cord. (Staff photo-enzaving)

Watches Are Featured in Local Jewelry Collection

Several inches of solid gold chain found in an antique shop in Wyoming, a matching length found in Salt Lake City and a slide found in Iowa, completed the chain for an antique watch for Mrs. Orlo Williams.

This is an example of the memories Mrs. Williams says accompanied the acquisition of most every piece in her antique jewelry collection and makes it a fascinating hobby.

Mrs. Williams' collection features women's hunting case watches and chains and most are in excellent running condition. Though these are her favorites, she says it is becoming much harder to acquire complete ones.

The watches probably reached the peak of their popularity around 1900. Now in the age of tranquilizers, the works are being discarded and the cases used for pill boxes. The slides are being made into bracelets, for those who are fortunate enough to acquire them.

Mrs. Williams said she couldn't remember when she wasn't interested in old jewelry, particularly watches. She received her first watch and chain as a graduation gift from her family. In addition to the women's watches, her collection also includes several men's watches, two lapel watches and a ring watch.

The lapel watches, one a chateaufort type backed with green enamel, are so similar to ones seen now that it is difficult to realize they are old.

Interested in diffraction jewelry which is cut so the pattern contains special light. Another craft Mrs. Williams classes along with jewelry making is the Chinese vases. These she also collects with emphasis on Cloisonne.

The design in these is laid out with fine flat wire, usually gold, filled in with enamel and then fired. She also has a number of intricately carved cinnabar pieces and lacquer vases.

Ivory carved Chinese figurines among her collection include a Buddha in his temple, scholar, fisherman, merchant and others. The Buddha she found in a shop on the boardwalk at Atlantic City while serving one year as a judge for the Miss America contest.

Among her prize possessions are 15 Netsukes (pronounced Nitz-Kis). The last one she acquired 30 years ago and has been unable to find a similar since.

These are miniature hand carved Chinese figures, each with a different meaning. Each one represents an outstanding service to the community and was worn by Chinese men around the neck or on the sash cord. The more Netsukes a man could display, the more prestige he had in his community.

Mrs. Williams was employed by the department of agriculture in Washington, D. C., for six years and traveled extensively. During this time she became interested in anything miniature. She collected perfume bottles. Her favorite is a tiny one encased in silver filigree; a pistol an inch and a half long that has a capsule of shells and actually shoots; a razor complete with blades in a carved silver box three-fourths of an inch square.

Fond of all Far Eastern art, although she does prefer Chinese, she has several pieces of gold embroidered tapestry. She points out one way to tell Chinese from Japanese tapestry is by the design in the corners. Each corner of the Chinese art is different. It may look the same but will have some recognizable variation on close inspection.

Another piece of art work she cherishes is a "happiness bottle." When a Japanese boy is born, the father starts a bottle to contain his son's happiness which on his death is buried with him. They sometimes take a lifetime to make. The one Mrs. Williams has is of carved jade with semi-precious stones. These, too, are difficult to acquire as the practice of making them probably ceased long ago and the ones available have been robbed from graves originally.

Mrs. Williams likes to display her ivory Netsukes on a dark mahogany colored dolly which is at least 130 years old. This is a sturdy piece and is made of mahogany seeds with darker seeds forming the pattern into a seven-point star.

Her collection doesn't only consist of inanimate objects, she has a family of Toy Manchester terriers and four aquariums of various fishes which include one for a maternity ward and one for a nursery.

INDIANS OVERTAKE JEROME FOR 46-44 VICTORY IN OVERTIME

Wasco Drops in Clincher With 2 Seconds Left

BUHL, Jan. 3—Buhl's Indians came to life in the final period here Saturday night to make up a 10-point deficit and then went on in an overtime period to defeat the Jerome Tigers 46-44. It was a storybook, come-from-behind effort all the way for the Indians, who were behind 14-4 at the end of the first quarter, 19-13 at the half and 33-23 at the third period ended. Then they began to awaken and with fine floor play and interception of Jerome passes closed out the regulation time with a 42-42 tie.

Sharpshooting Oakley Quintet Tops Gooding

OAKLEY, Jan. 3—A sharpshooting Oakley quintet, shooting sparingly but making efforts count, trounced the Gooding Senators 48-38 here Saturday night.

Hitting on 37 per cent of their shots, Oakley cagers dumped in 17 field goals and added 14 free throws for the total.

Gooding got 18 field goals, but took quite a few more shots than the home team and wound up scoring 30 per cent. The Senators managed to come up with only two free throw points, however, and that was the difference.

MELBOURNE, Australia, Jan. 3 (AP)—Although some newspapers criticized the American use of Peruvian Alejandro Olmedo to recapture the Davis cup, there has not been a single beef from Australian tennis officials or fans.

Coach Blasts Referees After Bengal Defeat

DENVER, Jan. 3 (AP)—Dennis Boone pumped 31 to 31 points to lead Regis to a 71-56 basketball victory Saturday night over Idaho State, whose coach John Grayson blistered officials for what he called "one of the worst officiated games I've ever seen."

Coach Blasts Referees After Bengal Defeat

It was Idaho State's second loss in 11 games and Regis' seventh victory in eight starts.

During a rough and tumble second half referee Dick Gray blew two technical fouls against the Idaho State bench, the last one on Grayson. The other referee, Monk Saunders, ejected Idaho State center John Bethke from the game with 11:07 to play. Saunders accused Bethke of using abusive language to a referee.

Coach Blasts Referees After Bengal Defeat

The fouls were split evenly at 22 with Regis losing starters Terry Shelly with 5:30 left and Jim Butler with 2:35 left.

Regis never trailed and held 10-point leads almost the entire Idaho State rally with 24 points in the last 7 1/2 minutes to almost catch up.

Coach Blasts Referees After Bengal Defeat

Idaho State didn't lose a player via infractions until Homer Watkins was fouled out with nine seconds remaining.

Major College Stars Eke Out 14-12 Victory

TUCSON, Ariz., Jan. 3 (UPI)—The good 'right toe' of Missouri's Charley Rash, national collegiate point-kicking record holder, was the difference today as the Major College All-Stars fought off the Small College All-Americans, 14-12, in the second annual Optimist Bowl.

The underdog small college stars, composed almost entirely of Little and NAIA All-American choices, won the sentimental support of the 10,000 fans on the opening kickoff.

Ed Mendor of Arkansas Tech took the kickoff on his two-yard line, handed off to Bridgeport University's George Dixon on the 15 and the sprint specialist, Dixon shot down the fieldlines for a stunning touchdown.

But the major college stars burst through to block the first of two extra point efforts they were to knock down.

Penn State's Steve Garbari recovered a fumble punt on the small college 15-yard line early in the second quarter and Wisconsin's Syd Williams plunged over from the two-yard line moments later.

Although Rash's kick gave the big schools a 7-6 lead, Rutgers' Billy Austin fumbled on his nine-yard line just before the half and little college All-American Bob Webb of St. Ambrose and Jerry Richardson of Wofford college for an eight-yard rally.

Despite the tight score, the school stars ran up a big statistical edge on the running of Austin, Oregon State's Nub Beamer, a passer of Washington State's James and Oklahoma's Bob Harlan, and the line play of Harlan and Oklahoma's Bob Harlan. Sparking the small schools were NAIA All-American quarterbacks Billingsley of Northeastern Oklahoma, Charlie Davis of McMurry college and Mendor.

Christmas Tree Fire Founder Asks Credit Where Credit Due

Editor, Times-News: Just a line about the Junior Chamber of Commerce annual Christmas tree fire and winner again the next year and carry on. That same year, without saying a word, the Jaycees picked it up and had a notice that they were holding their annual Christmas tree bonfire and winner roast. If I had known they wanted it, I would have gladly turned it over to them.

One of my customers, Mrs. Lavern Strong, saw the notice in the paper and complained to the Times-News and had a correction put in the paper.

I don't want to be a wet blanket to the fire but the event is not being put on as it was intended. The paper mentioned that the man who started it subsequently left town. Twin Falls is as nice a city as you can find. The principles of its citizens and the city itself reflect upon the city. I hope it's above this sort of thing.

I don't like being reminded of this same thing each year. The facts can be proven. I hope Willard Moore will have some idea of what I had in mind and something to shoot for. Let's make it something people from out of town will come to see. Even the farmers came to see my fire.

Air Force Attains Record Mark for Recruits in Area

Editor, Times-News: The United States Air Force recruiting services has enjoyed another highly successful year in the Utah-Southern Idaho area. Our staff has procured 132 per cent of its assigned quota for the first 11 months of 1958. In addition to surpassing our quota, we also have been able to concentrate on the quality of our air force enlistees. For example, we have led the nation in the procurement of aviation cadets, probably the most demanding program quality-wise.

We in the recruiting service realize that it would have been impossible to attain this year's accomplishments without the interest and active support of local civic leaders, dignitaries and advertising concerns. We are grateful that you have supported us through the use of public service space in the Twin Falls Times-News. I hope that, as you inventory your progress and accomplishments of the last year, you will consider the efforts you have made in behalf of the air force.

On behalf of the air force recruiting staff, may I express our appreciation for your contribution to the air force, to the defense department and to our beloved nation.

Voters Are Taken To Task for Their Lack of Attention

Editor, Times-News: Referring to the recent election, Pegler says the people are tired of the republic and the constitution. Not so, the people of the U.S. are not socialist. They do not want a dictator. But too many of them have neglected the duty of citizenship.

Our forefathers sought to establish a government "of the people, by the people and for the people." Today we have a government by the politicians for the many selfish groups. Too many trying to profit by special legislation or direct subsidy. The politicians are trying to forbid each other buying votes with the taxpayers' money. If there were no votes for sale, they would be out of luck.

If this people would inform themselves and press for national well-being and the preservation of our free competitive economic system instead of trying to live off the government, balancing the budget would be a simple matter.

Hansen High School Students Use Donated Instruments in Experiments Conducted in Radiation Biology

These are some of the Hansen high school students who are conducting experiments in radiation biology. Placed on the floor in front of them are some of the instruments given the high school by the civil aeronautics authority and the atomic energy commission. From left, are Bill Hofffield, son of Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Hofffield, Mike Baily, son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Baily; Gene Gray, son of Mr. and Mrs. Champ Gray; Jack Long, son of Mr. and Mrs. James Long; Steven Ball, son of Mr. and Mrs. Virgil Ball; Sandra Dopson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Roy Dopson, and Janet Wellhousen, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. M. F. Wellhousen. (Staff photo-engraving)

Two Hansen high school students work on an experiment in radiation biology. They are attempting to determine how much iodine 131 has been absorbed by the various organs of a laboratory rat. During this phase of the experiment they will carefully weigh each organ of the rat. From left, are Sandra Dopson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Roy Dopson, Instructor C. R. Humphries, and Janet Wellhousen, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. M. F. Wellhousen. (Staff photo-engraving)

Hagerman Artist Brought Back 77 Paintings From His European Tour

HAGERMAN, Jan. 3—Archie Teater, Magic Valley artist and foremost painter interpreter of western Americana, particularly the Tetons, realized a life-long dream last year when he and his wife spent six months painting in Europe. They returned with a sports car, 77 paintings and a love of Europe. Teater and his wife spent from January to June touring and painting in Germany, Italy, Sicily, Switzerland, France, Belgium and Holland. The Teaters live a few miles north of Hagerman on a cliff overlooking Snake river and Hagerman valley, which has served as subject matter for many of Teater's paintings. Their house, designed by Frank Lloyd Wright, is in the final stages of completion. The house overlooks a stretch of Snake river that Teater used to pan for gold when he was a boy. Speaking of his early life, Teater says, "We were sort of a gypsy family. Wherever we could make a dime, we worked." He explained his father was a blacksmith who worked throughout Idaho, Oregon and Wyoming. At one time his father ran a blacksmith shop in Wendell, land Art Museum school in the 1920's. While he was in New York he supported himself by working as a messenger for a Wall street broker. He started selling in the 1920's. "In 1928 I started painting seriously in the Tetons." He adds, "I had great faith in the Teton country for the American artist." Teater believed the rugged beauty of the terrain and the hardy life led by the inhabitants would make excellent painting subjects. He pointed out that the Sawtooth mountains in Idaho have the same potential for the artist. But after devoting so much of his life to capturing the beauty of the West, Teater struck out for Europe, the artist's mecca, to apply his talents to old world scenes. The Teaters flew first to Paris. After a brief orientation period, they went to Hamburg, Germany, and purchased a Karman-Ghia automobile and then started to wend their way south through the Bavarian Alps. They passed through Munich, then Teater began painting on the northern slopes of the Alps at the small mountain town of Garmisch-Partenkirchen. The weather was cold and they decided to travel southward to avoid the sharp winter weather in

Hansen Students Conduct Experiments in Radiation

HANSEN, Jan. 3—With high school students sometimes accused of an apathetic attitude toward school work, Hansen high school science classes not only have an active interest during school hours, but also spend additional hours in the classroom. Since C. R. Humphries, science teacher, returned from a National Science Foundation institute in radiation biology at Brigham Young University, radiation biology has grasped Hansen students' imaginations. Last summer Humphries attended the six-week institute after he and 19 other science teachers throughout the nation were chosen from 800 applicants. The institute was sponsored by the atomic energy commission, Brigham Young University and the National Science Foundation. Humphries says, "I think the purpose of the program was to make the general public aware of the problems of atomic energy and make them aware of the issues involved in the atomic age." Humphries has brought the information he learned back from the institute and incorporated it in his science classes. The subject of radiation biology has been popular with the students who are spending a great deal of their hours outside of class to conduct experiments. Humphries says, "The purpose of the experiments is not to make atomic scientists of the students, although I wish it would—but it is a means of discharging the scientific principles of finding answers to questions by experimentation." He points out radiation biology can introduce atomic theory in normal class experiments. "If students want to find out something, I let them find out by experimentation." The current interest in science has stirred the imagination of the students and many questions are posed by them that can be answered by experiments in class with radioactive isotopes. Commenting on the risk involved in working with radioactive materials, Humphries says, "There is a risk involved, but most people wear radium dial watches, which is potentially more of a hazard than those involved in working with radioactive isotopes." The experiments are made possible because the atomic energy commission gave each science teacher attending the institute a summary of an instructor's radiation kit. Humphries was given two kits, valued at $900, that include various radioactive testing equipment. He also received 12 Geiger counters from the civil defense administration. What are the kinds of experiments conducted by the students? Humphries says one experiment was conducted by a student to detect how phosphorus was absorbed by a growing plant. In the experiment, phosphorus-32—a laboratory substitute for the phosphorus found in the soil—was fed to a growing plant. This is done to determine the uptake rate of the plant, or how rapidly the plant absorbs the phosphorus. Then a "radiograph" is made of the plant. Humphries explains that phosphorus will expose a sheet of X-ray film and when a leaf is placed on a sheet of film the areas containing the most phosphorus will expose that section of the film. Humphries says the experiment illustrated that a leaf in a stage of rapid growth contains the most phosphorus. In another experiment a girl injected iodine 131 in the abdominal cavity of a rat. The iodine is produced in the laboratory to simulate iodine found in nature. Later the rat was dissected and each organ was analyzed to determine what particular organ had absorbed the most radioactive iodine. Humphries explains the object of the experiment was to determine if iodine is absorbed by the thyroid gland. He pointed out that iodine is essential to the normal functioning of the thyroid gland, a gland that controls the system's hormonal activities in humans. The absence of iodine is the primary cause of goiter. Using a Geiger-Muller counter to measure radioactivity, it was discovered that the rat's thyroid gland was the only organ that contained the radioactive iodine, illustrating the thyroid gland's use of iodine. Another project is determining unknown isotopes. A student is given an unidentified isotope and through a process of measuring radioactivity, it is identified. The student measures the amount of radiation with a Geiger-Muller counter daily, except week-ends, for about one month. The daily counts are carefully recorded and then the half-life of the isotope can be determined, which will identify the particular isotope. Humphries explains that element has a characteristic half-life that will identify it. The half-life of a particular isotope is the time it takes for half of the isotope to decay. Archie Teater sits in the library of his new home in Hagerman Valley. Teater and his wife spent the forepart of 1958 touring and painting in Western Europe. They traveled through seven countries and Teater completed 77 paintings. It was the first trip to Europe for Teater who is widely known for his paintings of the Tetons. (Staff photo-engraving)

After Venice, which Teater says is "one of the greatest places in the world for artists," came Florence. In Florence, an incongruous thing happened. American art students, who had journeyed halfway around the world to study art, flocked to watch Teater, the Rocky Mountain painter, paint on the streets of Florence. He painted there for one day and from dawn to dusk the patient Teater questioned and answered student's questions about art and explained his technique. Rome was next and he painted several canvases there, one of which is now on exhibition in New York. The Teaters spent several days in the vicinity of Naples, living in an old palace built by a Spanish prince. Impressed with the stability of the

Life in MAGIC VALLEY

Mrs. George Pace, Miss Oregon of 1954, watched her memories of that chapter of her life go "up in smoke" Christmas night.

The Paces live with their three little daughters east of BURLEY. On their property is a little building in which they store some of their excess belongings. Mrs. Pace had stored the white luggage, one of her gowns, one of which she had used for her wedding gown. It was made of French imported lace. Also stored there was one which she had had made of white nylon ruffles and silver brocade, and two other gowns. All were being saved because of their sentimental value.

Joanne Wilson, 16, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ray Wilson, UNITY, was a Christmas dinner guest at the Pace home and had expressed a desire to look through the scrapbook of the former Miss Oregon.

Pace obligingly went to the little building to get the book for her. Because there was no electricity in the building, he struck a match to find the book.

Everyone was interested in looking through it and reminiscing when they heard the crackling of burning wood. They discovered the building had burned down.

Mrs. Pace said as she started thinking of all the precious things she had in the building, she was "sick" about the five-piece set of luggage but had forgotten baby clothes stored in her closet.

They figure the material loss at about $500 but the former Miss Oregon says, "Nothing can ever repay the loss of sentimental value." Pace also lost some dinner clothes including his white dinner jacket.

The family is grateful to the rural fire department who arrived in time to douse the fire before it destroyed their home and other buildings.

Two people attending midnight mass at St. Jerome's Catholic church were celebrating a very special occasion. Mr. and Mrs. D. A. L'Herrison, JEROME, were honoring their golden wedding anniversary. The altar was decorated with red carnations and leaves of gold, a gift of the three L'Herrison children, Mr. and Mrs. C. A. V. Herrison, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Titus and Mr. and Mrs. Walls McGill, in honor of their parents.

Fifty years ago, Adeline LePage, Hot Springs, S.D., had travelled to Denver to marry L'Herrison in the cathedral there just before midnight mass. L'Herrison had just returned from Jerome, where he had established his business, L'Herrison-Furniture, and rented a home for his bride.

After a short honeymoon the couple settled in Jerome. Since then, L'Herrison has helped establish several businesses, besides his furniture store. He has always been interested in and owned farmland in Jerome county.

Christmas eve, the L'Herrison children and grandchildren entertained the L'Herrisons at dinner. Special guests were Mr. and Mrs. Harry Giesler, parents of Mrs. C. A. L'Herrison and Mrs. R. E. Titus, mother of Mrs. Frank Titus.

Richfield Relates Journeys, Guests

RICHFIELD, Jan. 3—Gary Haurich left New Year's day to rejoin his ship, the U.S.S. Hector, at San Diego.

Mr. and Mrs. Paul Stubbs, Pocatello, have brought their three children here to spend two weeks with their grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Lester Stubbs, while Mrs. Paul Stubbs is in Hawaii. A dancing teacher in Pocatello, Mrs. Stubbs won the trip from a school of dancing.

Gaydenna Brown, Clarkston, Wash., left Friday for Emmett after a four-day visit with relatives here. Her brother and sister-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Charles A. Brown, entertained at dinner New Year's day in her honor.

Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Peterson have returned from Eagle where they were New Year's day guests of his brother-in-law and sister, Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Skinner.

Official Is Named For School Office

BURLEY, Jan. 3—Raymond Bohart, Pocatello, has assumed his new duties as business manager in the office of the Cassia county superintendent of schools central office. Bohart succeeds Matt Warr who has resigned to accept a job as traffic manager for Idaho-Potato Processors, Inc.

A graduate of Nampa high school and Idaho State college, Bohart was previously employed in the Caribou national forest office in Pocatello. His wife is formerly of Twin Falls.

Lorraine Dewey, a graduate of Brigham Young university, has been named to succeed Mrs. Parley Clark, who has resigned as home economics instructor at the Oakley high school because of a serious illness.

Moore also reports that during the holidays the Miller school building furnace room has been insulated.

Hearing Is Called On Prater Estate

A hearing will be held in Twin Falls probate court at 10 a.m. Jan. 28 on a petition for letters of administration in the estate of E. F. Prater.

The petition was filed by Prater's widow, who was named executrix of the estate in a will dated June 18, 1954. Prater died Dec. 24.

Heirs are Mrs. Prater, Thelma June Foulk, daughter, Twin Falls, and Edwin Prater Foulk, 19, grandson, Twin Falls.

The estate, consisting of real and personal property, is valued in excess of $10,000.

AS YOUR MINISTER SEES IT

"Journey of New Year"

By D. E. ACKER
(Pastor, First Southern Baptist Church)

I beseech you therefore brethren by the mercies of God, that ye present your bodies a living sacrifice, holy, acceptable unto God. Which is your reasonable service. Romans 12-1.

The New Year before us will be largely what, by God's grace, we make it. The slightest influence for shaping it aught is the unreserved surrender of life to Christ.

This is our glorious opportunity: Our solemn obligation, confronting us at the opening of the New Year.

So as we think of the New Year let us think of it as a journey, a journey of which we can have no knowledge in advance. We cannot know what any day will hold for us; the road will be one that we know nothing about; we have not passed this way heretofore. We know nothing of what our duties will be what burdens will be laid upon us, what we shall have to endure. We cannot see one step before us.

So as we quietly and thoughtfully enter the New Year, there comes to us an age-old question: how can we know the way? But with the question there comes the reassuring answer, Jesus is saying to us, I am the Way.

All we have to do therefore is stay with Christ. He has made a way for us. He knows all about it and I am confident that if we will only look we shall be able to see His footprints all along the road.

Every mile of the journey He has chosen and I am confident that the way He has chosen for you and me is the way that is best for us whether it be the way that we would choose for ourselves or not.

Now as we think for just a moment on the way we have come the road we have travelled in the year that we have left behind, it is not true that the only real trouble that we had was at the time we left Christ behind?

When we decided that we would choose our own course, or perhaps we thought we would just drift along with the crowd, it was easier, let us say, no effort to just go with the current.

Is it not true also that many of the things that cause us to murmur and complain have proved to be blessings in disguise? As we look at them from this vantage point we can readily see that although they may have seemed unfair and unjust at the time they were chastisement from the hand of Him who said, As many as I love I rebuke and chasten.

So with hearts filled with gratitude to Him who has kept us as we journeyed across the Old Year, let us one and all present our bodies unto Him a living sacrifice and in anticipation of joyous prosperous journey through the New Year, let us say:

Lead on O King Eternal, we follow without fears.

For gladness breaks like morning When 'ere Thy face appears. Thy cross is lifted o'er us, We journey in its light, The crown awaits the conquest, Lead on, O God of might.

REV. ACKER

Two Women Here Granted Divorces

Two divorces were granted Friday in Twin Falls district court by Judge Hugh A. Baker.

Mrs. Peggy N. Anthony was granted a divorce from Noah Jessie Anthony on grounds of extreme cruelty. Their two children were awarded her and he was ordered to pay $50 monthly support for each child and $50 permanent alimony. She was represented by May and May, Twin Falls law firm.

The body was sent to New Jersey for concluding rites.

Paul Visits

PAUL, Jan. 3—Mr. and Mrs. George Stromire have moved into their new home built in the Martin Brown addition on the east side of Paul.

Mr. and Mrs. Ronald Schaeffer, Soda Springs, visited his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Schaeffer, during the holidays.

86th Congress New Members Go on Payroll

WASHINGTON, Jan. 3—Although the first session of the 86th congress will not get under way until Wednesday, the terms of all the new members and of the newly elected senators start as of noon today.

Members go on the payroll automatically at that time although they will not be sworn in and able to vote until after ceremonies at the opening session on Wednesday.

The constitution fixes noon of Jan. 3 for the start of the terms of newly-elected members of congress. It also sets this as the time for starting the new session, but permits congress to provide otherwise.

The outgoing 85th congress passed a law last year postponing the opening of the new congress until Jan. 7, primarily because of Jan. 3 falling on a Saturday.

Judgment Issued

Kim Lee was given judgment against Shig Ogasawara and Tomoma S. Ogasawara for $1,330 Friday in Twin Falls district court.

Lee had sought $930 for back wages, plus $400 penalty. He was also awarded $150 attorney fees and $18.30 costs.

He was represented by James M. Cunningham, Twin Falls attorney.

Big Cougar Bagged in South Hills

Merle Cherry, left, Hansen, and Robert Smith, Twin Falls, bagged the big 180-pound cougar in the south hills after a six-hour chase through rough terrain following the tracks of the lion and their four hounds. ## Six-Hour Chase Yields Big Cougar for Two Hunters, Dogs South of Kimberly

After a grueling six-hour chase two hunters bagged one of the biggest mountain lions to come out of the south hills in some time. Last week-end the hunters, Merle Cherry, Kimberly, and Bob Smith, Twin Falls, packed out the 180-pound cougar from where they killed it in the hills south of Kimberly. They got the lion on Friday, but he was too big to carry out of the rough terrain. On Saturday they packed him out on a horse.

Mountain Lion; in Prime Condition, Has Big Fangs

Robert Smith displays fangs of a big mountain lion he and Merle Cherry, left, bagged on Dec. 29 in the back country of the south hills. The big cougar was in prime condition, but both men said he was too fat back to be a stock killer and had been living rather well on game herds in Pough terrain. The men have also bagged nine bobcats this winter. (Staff photo-encouraging) over the ridge and then back down a canyon again all day long," Smith says. But he added the cougar stayed in the same general area throughout the chase. Asked how far they estimated the hounds ran the cat, Smith says he believes a man on foot can average about three miles per hour in that terrain. The men followed the hounds' tracks throughout the chase because much of the time they were out of sight and hearing, so the men and hounds chased the cat approximately 18 miles before he finally tumbled at 2 p.m. "So far as we know the cat tumbled just that once," at 2 p.m., Cherry says. They shot him with a 22 caliber pistol and when they got him on the ground they realized he was too big to carry out of the country. They left him there overnight and returned the next day with a horse. It still took four hours to get him back to the road and Smith's truck. Both men agree snow conditions were perfect for hunting. There was enough snow to offer visible tracks so the hunters could follow the pack, but not so much that it hindered them. Smith says, "It wasn't easy, but as cougar hunting goes it was easy hunting because there wasn't too much snow." Confirmed lion hunters, both men agree that the big lion was about the best Christmas present they could imagine. "Cherry says they have been hunting together for several years and have gotten seven lions, including this one, but this is the biggest. They mostly hunt bobcats. They have gotten nine bobcats this winter. Both men have a high regard for the lion as a trophy animal. Cherry points out lions do a good service by keeping deer herds scattered in the winter. When a herd is depleted, according to Cherry, when a lion is in an area the deer don't congregates in one spot. Smith wishes the bounty would be taken off mountain lions. He believes the lion "too" noble an animal to encourage its hunting by placing a bounty on it. Idaho pays a $25 bounty for lions bagged in the five northern counties. The lion was in its prime of life, according to the two men. Cherry said the big cat was living well, and they believe he was living on wild game alone. "He was not down low enough to be a stock killer," Cherry says. The men hunt with a four-dog pack. Each man has two dogs. Smith says the dogs—two older, experienced dogs and two young dogs—worked well the day of the hunt. They stayed together and didn't lose the trail a single time the entire day.

MAGIC VALLEY PORTRAIT

T. C. Bacon Didn't "Learn to Play" so Community, State Gained His Services

"I haven't learned to play like I wish I had." Those words were spoken by T. C. Bacon when he recently discussed how he spent his time now that he is semi-retired. But Bacon's loss in play-time has been the gain of Twin Falls and Idaho as a result of his energetic services to community and state. For many years, Bacon, a sheep rancher and businessman, has taken a great interest in the course of the state's development. Bacon says, "I'm interested in the state. The state has been good to me and I want to do what I can for it." As chairman of the Twin Falls hospital board, he was instrumental in building the new Magic Valley Memorial hospital and has been active in state and national stockmen's associations for many years. Bacon's father came to Idaho from Delaware in 1875. In a short time he had a large sheep operation under way in Owyhee county. Born in Boise, Bacon spent most of his youth there and attended Boise schools. He then went to Baker university, Baldwin, Kan., and was graduated in 1908. He met the future Mrs. Bacon at Baker and they were married in 1909. When he returned to Idaho from college he went into the sheep business with his father. He grazed his sheep on Trail creek, above Sun Valley, and wintered the flock lower in Magic Valley. Bacon and his wife moved to Twin Falls in 1910 to be closer to his grazing areas. "Life was pretty primitive here then, compared to now," he recalls. Bacon says the town had board sidewalks then and when it rained the streets turned to mud that would mire a horse-drawn cart. Bacon was running about 6,000 ewes at that time. By 1917 Bacon had one of the largest sheep operations in the state, running about 25,000 sheep. He is running only about 9,000 sheep now. He explains the land area has diminished and the labor supply has dwindled, forcing large operators to cut their flock size. Speaking of the early days, he says, "There was lots of country then, and plenty of labor." Bacon points out that stockmen in Idaho are largely dependent on government land for grazing and that cuts in allotments have forced stockmen to cut their herds. Another problem is getting young men interested in working with sheep. According to Bacon, many young men reject the outdoor life of sheep herding in favor of higher paying city jobs. Although sheep ranching has always been his primary interest, he started farming in 1912 to supplement the sheep operation. "We raise practically all our own hay," he says, about 3,500 tons per year. Bacon stresses the importance of livestock to a farming community. He explains that a large farming area, such as Magic Valley, needs a large livestock population to consume the grain and hay raised on farms. "We used to buy lots of hay in this area, in addition to what we raised, but we don't have enough livestock now," he says, pointing out how farming is used economically to the government's grazing rights policy. Related to his interest in ranching and farming is his work as president of the Idaho Livestock Production Credit association, a non-profit credit association that furnishes loans to the larger livestock operators in the state. Bacon was active in organizing the association 25 years ago. The association will celebrate its 25th anniversary on Jan. 14 at a lunchcon at the T-Club. "Our business is to furnish operating loans for the larger sheep and cattle operations," he says. The association has furnished loans of a quarter of a million dollars to single individuals. He explains they were individuals running a large feeder or range operation. Bacon believes the association has done much to further the livestock industry in Idaho. "It's the most practical method of agricultural financing in this country." Another Bacon interest is the Reliance Credit corporation, a locally owned automobile financing and loan company. Bacon was president of the hospital board when the Magic Valley Memorial hospital was built. Bacon and a few Twin Falls county citizens were instrumental in getting a law passed by the state legislature that enabled county commissioners to appoint a non-partisan hospital board to run a hospital. Previously, the hospital had been run by the county commissioners with the aid of an adviser. Many people, according to Bacon, felt the hospital administration should be in the hands of a non-partisan county-wide board. This was discussed with county commissioners. They agreed, and Bacon and the other citizens drafted a law for such a board and took it to Boise. The group, including both Democrats and Republicans, took the bill to a special legislature and it was passed in two days. Bacon smiles, "I think it was some sort of a record." The bill was non-controversial and simply offered counties that desired it a method to operate a hospital with a non-partisan board. The bill didn't stipulate that the counties had to operate their respective hospitals in that manner. The new law provided the board would be chosen by county commissioners. "It has worked out real well," Bacon says. "It made it much easier to get a bond issue for the new hospital." The law was passed a few years before the hospital was built. When the time came to build the structure, prices were rising steadily and estimated construction costs were about one-half million over the available money. Some persons thought the county should wait until prices came down. But Bacon and others, correctly guessing prices wouldn't drop, stressed the county's need for a new hospital. Eventually a federal grant was received and additional tax money acquired and the hospital was built. "We had quite a struggle getting the hospital built," he says, "those things don't come easily." "But we were in a position where we had to have it," he adds. Bacon was president of the Idaho Wool Growers several times in the 1920's and 1930's. He has also been vice president of the National Wool Growers. Although he considers himself in semi-retirement, he still takes an active interest in his livestock and business affairs. Most of his livestock and farming interests are now operated by his sons, Clyde R. Bacon and J. Robert Bacon, both Jerome. Asked what he believes the future holds for Idaho, Bacon says he does not think Idaho will industrialize like some of the other states, because of its agricultural economy. "Outside of processing agricultural products I don't think there will be much industrialization in Idaho." "But it's hard to predict the future. I started out with a bunch of mules. Now one man with a tractor can do the work of three or four men. They talk of going to the moon; I'm not going, but I suppose someone will."

1959 Look Rough? Henry Has Suggestions for Cheering up

By HENRY McLEMORE

If the year 1959 looks as if it is going to be a long, hard pull for you, with 365 days stretching endlessly ahead, you might do what the Chinese are said to do to cheer themselves at such a time.

The Chinese (or could it be the Visigoths) sit down and make a list of those persons who, to them, anyway, face a more doleful prospect in the year that lies ahead.

I have used this method on occasion and have always found it to be very beneficial. Just in case some of you are too glum at the moment to make your own list, please allow me to make a few suggestions.

1. A cooking or food editor. The year 1958 didn't produce a new vegetable, a new spice, or a new kind of meat, yet the cooking editor must present her readers with at least one new recipe every day.
2. That's enough to make a kitchen expert pull his or her hair out, and go jump into a pressure cooker and slam the lid.
3. Brussels sprouts, for example, have been cooked in every way imaginable, even to the addition of chili sauce to the water. Still, new recipes must go on; so it's up to the poor editor to concoct them, even if she has to suggest buttermilk in sweet potatoes, black pepper in vanilla ice cream and hamburger cheese in fudge.
4. The cymbalist in a symphony orchestra. He faces hours and hours of standing on his feet or sitting in an uncomfortable, straight-backed chair, for no more than a few seconds of glory. A few whacks at his cymbal, and the rest of the time is does not begin at home, is nicely illustrated by the massive building binges now going on around the capitol.

A conservative guess by the capitol architect sees the current construction spurge costing the American taxpayer an impressive 141 million dollars. Other sources expect the building tab to top 200 million dollars.

The conservative figure includes everything from a 64 million dollar office building to a couple of out-houses put up for the hordes of workmen now busily banging away around the capitol.

Here's the story:

The senators were feeling a bit cramped so they decided to build themselves a second office building. Construction costs have run about 22.1 million dollars. Land and furnishings another 25.5 million dollars. They expect to move in this month.

Leading from the capitol to the new senate office building in the background is the start of a luxurious subway for use of senators. Cost of the subway will be 1.3 million dollars. (Staff engraving)

Everyone knows it's better to ride than walk so they also dug themselves a 1.3 million dollar subway. It runs from the new office building to the capitol and will have a couple of cars which cost only $383,000.

There already was one subway running from the old office building to the capitol—but it had some steam pipes that could be dangerous if the capitol were ever bombed. The senators moved the pipes—another $80,000.

Over on the other side of the hill, the representatives decided they, too, were a bit short on office space. Their solution: Build another office building. Building costs for this monster are now estimated at 64 million dollars.

This figure does not include land and furnishings but the building, when completed sometime in 1962, will sit on a part of a three-block parcel which cost 8 million dollars. The capitol itself has apparently begun to feel a bit small to the lawmakers and so they decided to extend the east front. Total cost, including some repair work on the dome, is expected to run about 17 million dollars.

The shell or outside of the capitol extension is scheduled to be ready for the 1961 presidential inauguration.

Exactly what to do with the square footage gained, however, hasn't been decided yet. Said one employe in the capitol architect's office, "they're not quite sure what to do with the extra space."

The representatives wanted a new cafeteria. This has been placed in the center of one of the new existing house office buildings. It is expected to be open in January and cost a measly $850,000.

Parking has been tough around the hill so the representatives decided to build themselves a three story underground parking lot in the center of the other house office building. This is also expected to be completed in January. Cost: 1.2 million dollars.

The area around the capitol should be spacious so the senators picked up a couple of blocks around their new senate office building.

Only new bit of capitol construction that hasn't been drained out of the taxpayer's pocket is the tall, serene Taft Memorial bell tower. A

Dressmaking, Cooking Courses to Be Offered in Adult Education Classes at High School

Mrs. W. H. Anderson, left, and Mrs. A. W. Morgan, Twin Falls high school economics teachers, discuss plans for two adult education courses in dressmaking to be offered in the near future. The first course, "Advanced Dress Construction," will begin Monday, and will consist of 12 lessons. "Basic Dress Construction," will begin March 12 and also will consist of 12 lessons. (Staff photo-engraving)

Three Adult Home Economics Courses Will Be Offered at Local High School

Three adult education courses in home economics will be offered at Twin Falls high school during the first semester, according to Mrs. A. W. Morgan, home economics teacher. The courses are sponsored by the board for vocational education and the economics office with the cooperation of the local school board. Courses will be offered in "Methods of Meat Cookery," "Basic Dress Construction," and "Advanced Dress Construction." The courses carry no high school credit, Mrs. Morgan says there is a nominal enrollment fee to cover material expenses. Enrollment fees range from 10 cents to $2.50, depending on supplies used in the specific course. Classes are open to the public and anyone can enroll simply by calling Mrs. Morgan at the high school prior to the first class period. The first course, "Advanced Dress Construction," will consist of 12 lessons from 4 to 8 p.m. on Mondays and Thursdays, from Jan. 5 through Feb. 12. The class will be held in the clothing room, C-10, at the high school. The course will include instruction to familiarize students with new fabrics, such as dacron, orlon blends, crease repellent materials and other synthetic fabrics and new finishes. "There will be instruction in how to select patterns in keeping with the fabrics and how to handle the fabrics," Mrs. Morgan says. She adds that the course will include sewing techniques for lace, Jersey, napped and plaid fabrics, and construction details on the use of interfacings, linings and backings. "We also are going to give some special details on dress making, such as methods to construct buttonholes and dress pockets," she says. Mrs. Morgan says the project for that class will be a party or evening dress. Instructors of the class will be Mrs. Morgan and Mrs. W. H. Anderson, both home economics instructors at the high school. The next class will be "Methods of Meat Cookery." It will consist of seven lessons from 7:30 to 9:30 p.m. on Mondays and Thursdays from Feb. 16 through March 9. Mrs. Morgan says content of the course will include the "preparation and serving of meat, its nutritive value, and its place in meal planning." There will be instruction in the selection and storage of meats, preparing game meats and wild fowl, use of variety meats, use of ground meats, and the preparation of quick meals and casserole dishes. Mrs. Morgan is in the process of compiling a book on wild game cookery and would appreciate favorite recipes from residents. During the first class period, questionnaires will be given to the students to determine what particular subjects they want stressed. This is done to assure that the class will get the kind of instruction it desires. This course will be taught by Mrs. Morgan and Mrs. Eugene Walker, a graduate home economist from the University of Idaho. The last course, "Basic Dress Construction," will consist of 12 lessons from 4 to 6 p.m. on Mondays and Thursdays from March 12 through April 23. The course will be taught by Mrs. Morgan and Mrs. Anderson. If the class turns out to be extremely large, it may be divided into two sections. The project for this class will be a basic cotton dress. The latest construction techniques will be taught. A class in pattern alteration will be offered in the future when the demand is sufficient. According to Mrs. Morgan, if the response to the meat cookery course is strong they probably will offer more courses in the future. She notes that persons interested in certain types of cooking courses should contact her at the high school and advise her of their wants. A course in choosing home furnishings probably will be offered when the demand is great enough.

Mrs. Eugene Walker, left, and Mrs. A. W. Morgan, instructors in the series of adult education home economics courses to be offered soon at Twin Falls high school, demonstrate cooking facilities available in the high school's food laboratory. There are seven complete kitchen units. Mrs. Morgan, a home economics teacher in the school and Mrs. Walker, a graduate home economist, will teach the course, "Methods of Meat Cookery." The course will begin Feb. 16 and will consist of seven lessons held on Mondays and Thursdays. (Staff photo-engraving)

Student Uses Geiger-Muller Counter in Isotope Experiment

Jack Long, student at Hansen high school, works with a Geiger-Muller counter while he completes a project to identify unknown isotopes. As a part of the experiment he must identify the amount of radiation given off by the isotope. The Geiger-Muller counter is part of $900 worth of equipment given C. R. Humphries, Hansen high school science instructor, by the atomic energy commission. (Staff photo-engraving)

Radiation Biology Chases Apathy Out Of Hansen High School Science Class

Inspired experiment. Humphries says several students are now injecting radioactive isotopes in flies and then feeding the flies to Venus flytraps, a carnivorous fly-eating plant.
The object is to determine how radioactive food affects the plant. The experiment has not been finished.
In another experiment, several gold fish were placed in a solution of phosphorus 32 for five days. The fish were then killed and dissected to determine what organs had absorbed the most radioactivity.
The experiment isn't finished, but the class expects to find that the bones have absorbed much of the radioactivity.
Humphries explains that the flesh will be boiled off the bones in a solution of sodium hydroxide and the skeleton placed on a sheet of film. If isotopes are present in the bones the film will bear the image of the fish skeleton.
Students are not required to do this in the course of the normal school work. "This kind of experimentation is done after normal class hours," Humphries says.
He notes that about 10 to 15 students of 85 have become interested. This is the first year for such experimentation in Hansen schools and Humphries attributes much of the interest to the full cooperation of the superintendent, B. Hopwood.
Humphries hopes the experiments will stimulate enough interest in science that some of the students will eventually receive college science scholarships.

Canada Seeks to Solve Future Of Town Stricken by Disaster

SPRINGHILL, N. S., Jan. 3 (AP)—The fate of this town of tragedy is in the balance.
The Canadian and Nova Scotia governments are trying to find an answer. Springhill's 7,000 residents are impatient to learn what's to become of them.

Cars Collide

JEROME, Jan. 3—Two cars collided on icy streets in Jerome Friday, Policeman Lloyd Small, who investigated, said Ronny A. Stuhlborg, 16, was stopped for traffic when the 1958 Chevrolet he was driving was struck by a 1956 Dodge operated by Terry D. Mullinex, 15.
Both youths are from Jerome. Mullinex told the policeman he couldn't stop because of the ice. Damage to the Dodge was estimated at $30 and to the Chevrolet, $40.

INTERPLAY OF TEXTURES

No two people are exactly alike in temperament, in tastes, in color response. But if there is one thing that almost everyone agrees on, it is a desire for a quiet, serene bedroom.
As the prime function of the bedroom is rest, tranquil, unobtrusive colors are indicated. Most folks are in accord with this; but the question that inevitably arises is: How can monotony be avoided and a striking effect of restrained elegance be achieved, and still maintain a calm, soothing effect?
It isn't nearly as difficult as it first appears. The first thing to decide is whether a warm or a cool color scheme suits your temperament best. Once you've decided on the color, choose a serene, receding shade of that color and then use it lavishly, depending on an interplay of textures for interest and variety.
A striking example of texture

Pleurisy, Not Rare, Is Accompanied by Pain

Pleurisy probably should not be denied to bring relief after two or three treatments.
There is also a chronic dry pleurisy and chronic pleurisy with accumulation of fluid. Either of these may start gradually or can follow an acute attack.
The chronic or dry pleurisy is extremely annoying. It may drag on for weeks or months and be accompanied by considerable pain. It lasts too long there may be some permanent thickening of the lining membrane of the lung and even the lung itself may be damaged.
It should be mentioned also that typical pleuritic pain is often present in association with disease of the lungs. For example, it is quite common, particularly during the early phase, of typical lobar pneumonia.

College to Reopen

New classes will be started in both day and evening sessions. They include clerk-typist training, consisting of filing, office machine operation, dictaphone training and elementary bookkeeping. New courses also will be offered shorthand, accounting and business English.

The woman will be returned to the Boise prison where she escaped a week ago.
The officers arrived in Twin Falls Friday but delayed their return to Boise until weather conditions improved.
Miss Pugmire was apprehended New Year's eve at Kimberly by Chief of Police Paul Conder. Two companions of the woman are still at large. The three scaled a 16-foot wall surrounding the prison's women's quarters last Sunday night.

Check Passer's Dream Doesn't Slice Sentence

BOISE, Jan. 3 (AP)—Edward Bonici asked Federal Judge Fred Taylor to reduce the prison time Bonici must serve for passing a worthless check and impersonating a department of commerce official.

Bonici got a year on the first charge and two years on the second. Writing the judge, he said he dreamed in prison only the night before that Judge Taylor made the sentences run concurrently, or a total of two years.

"I will never forget you if you make my dream come true," Bonici wrote.

Unmoved, Taylor Friday ordered the sentences to be served consecutively, or a total of three years.

Hagerman Artist Brought 77 Paintings, Love for Europe Back From Dream Trip

old-building, they told of how the palace had been bombed five times in World War II, but walls 10 feet thick were only pockmarked.

When they left Naples they drove down the Italian peninsula to the toe of the "boot" and ferried their car across the Strait of Messina to Sicily.

Then they drove to the coastal town of Taormina.

While the Tenters were there Mt. Etna was erupting, and he painted several canvases of the volcano. They liked Sicily and spent 10 days there.

"One thing that impressed us," Teater says, "is the battle the people wage with the mountain sides. Where the people live is astonishing. They try to farm on the mountainsides and raise a few goats and grapes, but they are happy in spite of their poverty."

After the few days in Sicily they returned to Italy and drove up the coast, returning north, hoping the weather would be better.

The French Riviera was next. There they stopped for two weeks between Monaco and Nice. Teater painted in that vicinity and then the urge to paint the Matterhorn became strong. "One of the reasons I had devoted so much of my life to painting the Tetons, I have always wanted to paint the Matterhorn."

In spite of weather conditions, they struck out for the French Alps. They crossed them in a blizzard, not realizing until later the danger they had faced. At one point their car slid off the road, but they were helped by nearby townfolk.

According to the Tenters, Europeans everywhere were friendly to the artist.

In Italy a Dutch count and countess spent an entire day helping them plot their travels through Italy so they would see the more beautiful areas. Everyone had an appreciation of art and the artist. This made their entire European jaunt easier and more rewarding.

They lingered shortly in Geneva and then decided to drive towards the Matterhorn despite warnings that the weather would be foul. At Visp, Switzerland, they boarded a train and rode to Zermatt, a small village at the base of the Matterhorn.

Before they arrived the weather had been cloudy. On the day they arrived it cleared.

"That was really a terrific break," Teater says. "On the day we arrived the sky just opened up like the heavens were all ours." During the week they spent in Zermatt he painted about six canvases of the Matterhorn.

They left Switzerland then and traveled to Baden-Baden and Stuttgart, Germany, to purchase art supplies. Teater spent one day painting in the rain in Heidelberg and then they drove to Paris.

"Teater, re-entire like many people to Paris, says, "Paris, to me, is the greatest city on the face of the earth, simply because the French people are artists. The arts are their lives."

He spent 40 days painting scenes in Paris and completed about 20 canvases. He painted many street scenes in Montmartre, along the Seine, and near Notre Dame.

Leaving Paris, the Tenters drove to Brussels and the World's Fair. Unimpressed with the American exhibit, Mrs. Teater says "Some of it looked like Macy's basement after says the Dutch still wear their traditional costumes in a few of the more remote fishing villages.

When they left Holland they drove to Chabourge, France, and returned to the U. S. on the Queen Elizabeth. Do they plan to return to Europe soon?

"There's nothing I would rather do," Teater says, "but it's hard to know if we will be able to do it again."

"A trip like that is expensive," he added.

Teater painted 17 canvases in Europe. He said he in Paris, but was too busy painting to try to market any more while he was there.

The Tenters are planning a showing of his European paintings, but the plans are just beginning and Teater stressed that it can sometimes be months or even years before a big showing in a large city can be planned and executed.

Since their return from Europe Teater has had many requests to
