Blood Is Wonderful Medicine, But You Are Source, He Says

Editor, Times-News: You would be very unhappy if you were a shot of penicillin or vaccine for smallpox or even some glue for intravenous feeding and your doctor said, "I am sorry but the source of supply has refused to supply us any further shipments."

We take for granted that these wonderful medical aids will always be available and we live happily on this earth.

There is one supply of medical aid that cannot be supplied by the manufacturers of chemicals. This aid can be supplied only by you and we as we give of our life-giving blood. Our bodies with the help of God cannot duplicate this substance that only our bodies with the help of God can produce. Its many parts are vital to life and can save life when the patient is critical.

Our community has been notorious about its blood program. The only time we seem to be stirred to give blood is when we have someone dear to us dying. Do we need to kill someone on the highways or from dreaded blood disease just to secure our quotas? Surely Twin Falls communities are more concerned about keeping a good supply on hand for emergencies and other needs.

Recently a letter came to my study concerning the cost of this precious aid. The amount of money that is saved Twin Falls people each year in cost for blood alone would support the entire Red Cross budget finance goals each year. This is money that remains in the pockets of our citizens to be spent for clothing, food and other essentials. This is money that pays taxes and provides the high living standards of our community. In some areas, where the Red Cross does not have blood banks, people pay $30 to $50 a pint for this medical aid.

Let us all get behind the Red Cross program and give our community a good bank balance of blood. The next drawing will be held Monday, Jan. 26 at the Legion hall from 2 to 6 p.m. The quota is 150 pints. Let's be in line in '59.

Writer Urges Normal School Be Closed to Save Tax Money

Editor, Times-News: After pussyfooting around all year and saying that Idaho could hold the line on existing taxes, now that our governor has won his second term he has come out for the general tax increase which we all knew would be forthcoming.

While we all must agree that we will need more money, especially for education, I do not feel that taxpayers should have to continue to support "Smiley's folly"—that is, the Lewis and Clark Normal school in the northern part of the state.

You will recall that during the last session of the legislature there was considerable "horse trading" and Gov. Smylie reopened this school for the promise of a second-term law and, of course, his efforts were richly rewarded.

You must also recall that an inter-

New Jail OK'd For Rupert in Board Action

RUPERT, Jan. 17 — Mindoka county commissioners voted this week to take immediate action to raise funds for a new county jail building.

Non-Hawkes, chairman, reported that after touring the jail, members felt that crowded conditions, lack of facilities, and poor lighting, ventilation and plumbing were adequate reasons for new quarters.

The jail takes care of state prisoners and the majority of city prisoners in addition to those of the county.

In addition, Johnson said, there is a need for three separate wards. At present, the women's section also is used to hold juveniles, and when it is necessary to hold both at the same time, the juveniles must be shifted to the jail or placed in private homes since state statutes provide that juveniles may not be jailed with adults.

In other action, the county hospital board was expanded from seven to nine members with Elmer Helmer and William Kraft being chosen as new members, William Henschel was picked to replace George Zelmetz, who was released because of ill health.

The fair board for 1959 will include David I. Garner, W. E. Priest, Rodney A. Hansen, Dare Jensen, Rex Broadhead, Floyd Idle, Raymond Gentry, Ralph Jurgensmier and Burt Van Every.

A tentative budget for 1959 was approved and numerous appointments to county committees were made. According to Willard Hayward, clerk of the court, the total for this year is $120,454.50 while last year's was $121,055.75, showing a drop of $601.25. He also pointed out that the 1958 spending fell just below the 1958 budget.

Hawkes, who is serving the last two years of a four-year term, will serve with George Sullivan, reelected from the third district, and Burt Van Every, newly elected from the first district.

Van Every was appointed to serve ex-officio with the hospital board and to the county fair board. Sullivan again will serve on the indigent board, and Hawkes will be a member of the Magio Valley health board.

The commissioner's discussions with Harvey, Mrs. Knight and Dr. Clark were designed to "iron out problems with them" concerning the entry of the county into the district health unit.

Larsen said Harvey and Mrs. Knight met with the commissioners in the role of district employees explaining their positions. Final approval of the merger of the county with the district must be made by the commissioners and the district's directors, Larsen noted.

Larsen said he was scheduled to meet with the Magio Valley Memorial hospital board Monday afternoon.

Idaho Solons Get New Plan On Vote Laws

Idaho would use such a plan for about 10 years prior to 1910. A number of other plans are under consideration. They include runoff for offices in which no candidate received as much as 40 percent of the vote cast and a combination convention — election proposal which would eliminate candidates failing to receive 20 percent of the vote cast at a convention preceding the primary.

Virtually all proposals call for elimination of the perforated primary ballot which Idaho now uses.

Under most of the revision proposals would be a requirement that a voter ask for the party ballot of his choice.

Most proposals also call for a change in the date of the primary, moving it up from August to June.

Minico Board Seans School Building Job

RUPERT, Jan. 17—The Minidoka county school board met this week with discussion of the proposed school bond as the highlight of the meeting.

Supt. Camden Meyer presented a list of proposals and topics for discussion and the board announced that the work on the matter would continue at the next meeting.

Meyer explained that the board would attempt to draw up some plan of action so that a bond issue, which the board will appoint to consider a bond proposal, will have something to work on.

Plans presented at the meeting pointed out that the bond of $900,000 may be taken by the county for schools if needed and approved; that a number of sites are already over-loaded, and that little or no more federal allotments will be made, so that the money will have to be raised locally.

Cost per year per student for building in Idaho is about $1,000, Meyer said.

He presented a list of other improvements that may need attention in the near future. Among these was the rielighting of some buildings, a bus garage at Paul, fire escapes at Hartum, elementary and landscaping of playgrounds at the Washington school at Rupert.

The need for a hot lunch kitchen at Pioneer, a central storage plant for hot lunch materials and a metal working shop at the high school were discussed.

Discussions also were held on the possibility of one central or two junior high schools. This will be given more attention at a future meeting.

According to a report by Meyer plans for the additions to the schools at Asquith and Pershing, in the city, are presently in the Boise office, are approval by the department of health, education and welfare. They will then be sent to San Francisco to the housing and finance office.

The board hopes to be able to open bids in February. The board also voted to enforce its ruling on married students attending high school. Anyone who is now attending may finish the school year but in the future any who marry will be prohibited from continuing.

No plans were made as yet for replacing a member of the board who has moved away from the county. A letter of appreciation was sent to Delbert Hamblen, member from Paul, who has moved to Burley.

Snow Survey Leaders Make Test During School

Robert Diehl, left, designated snow surveyor for the Halley area, and Morlan Nelson, Boise, who heads the snow survey crew for the Columbia Basin snow surveys, make a snow test near Sun Valley during the four-day school held at Halley. Twenty-five soil conservation service and forest service officials from three states attended. (Staff photo-engraving)

Snow Survey School Held for Tri-State Officials at Galena

HAILEY, Jan. 17—Half Dollar, Dollar and Bald Mountain ski runs at Sun Valley and the Galena summit vicinity were the scene of the 1959 cooperative snow survey school for soil conservation and forest service employees this week.

Three Wyoming men, one from Montana and 21 from Idaho received instruction in the school. Instructors were Elmer Boyle, Ketchum forest ranger and Morlan Nelson, Boise, who heads the snow survey crew for Columbia basin snow surveys, as well as others from the Northwest.

The meetings opened in the Hotel Hiawatha lobby by R. N. Irving, Boise, Idaho state conservationist. Nelson began the orientation in the field training area that morning and snow survey equipment and snow survival gear was issued.

The operation of over-snow machines was demonstrated and three machines from Halley, Arco and Twin Falls were used in actual practice. Snow samples were taken and measured for water content.

New electronic devices used in soil moisture measurements, which measure the actual amount of moisture in the soil, were used. Robert Diehl, acting work unit conservationist and engineer-technician, who is designated snow surveyor for this area, states that by this method the water saturation point of the soil may be determined, the amount of water in the snow measured and the forecast of run-off for the year computed.

Diehl said the sawtooth forest service has given the SCS the privilege of using the same wave-length in the over-snow machine, on which they operate forest service radios. Jack Bovin, forest service radio technician from Boise, instructed the men in transmitting and receiving messages on their walkie-talkie and snow-machine radios.

Several of the new snow surveyors spent the night in the open near the snow course at Horse creek near the foot of Galena summit, in 30 degree below zero weather. "It is necessary for a snow surveyor to know how to take care of himself in all kinds of weather conditions, as there is always the possibility of being caught out overnight while on a survey," Diehl explained.

Mark Kary, Halley forest service ranger, was among the local men who took the training. Forrest Clos-

Tenor Pleases With Concert Series Recital

PILER, Jan. 17—An enthusiastic audience applauded the third Magic Valley Community Concert association 1958-1959 program in the Piler high school auditorium Thursday evening.

The plaudits were for Jon Crain dramatic tenor associated with the Metropolitan Opera company, the New York City Opera company and the San Francisco Opera company.

Crain's performance demonstrated the difference between the light and high effect of a lyric tenor and the powerful and rich ones of a dramatic tenor.

He opened the program with selections from Mendelssohn, Schumann, Grieg and Strauss, offering Crain an opportunity to display a great deal of power and control. Contrasting with the opening numbers was "The Rose and the Nightingale," by Rimsky-Korsakoff, calling for more delicate handling.

Crain also sang two modern English opera selections by Sir William Walton and Carlisle Floyd.

Crain's final group of numbers drew the heaviest applause from the audience. The group included "On the Street Where You Live," from "My Fair Lady," "They Call the Wind Maria," from "Paint Your Wagon," and "Come to Me, Bend to Me" and "Bonnie Jean," from "Brigadoon."

Encore selections included "Love Went a Riding," by Frank Bridge, and "When I Have Sung My Song," by Charles.

Accompanying Crain on the piano was Allen Rogers. He played "Concert Etude in B-flat Minor," Liszt; a Spanish number by Albeniz, and "March" from Prokofiev's "The Love of Three Oranges."

Rodeo Cowboys Use Winter Months To Brush up on Arena Techniques

Jan. 17—Have you ever the wintertime when the rodeo Juker, Buhl, are average examples. business is at a standstill? They they practice a lot trying to keep in practice. And if George and Robert shape for the next rodeo season.

George Juker, who is the president of the Idaho Cowboys Association, and Robert spend an average of two hours a day practicing on Robert's ranch northwest of Buhl. Both men take their calf roping and steer bulldozing seriously and work in a big corral under conditions that simulate actual rodeo work.

They have 20 head of roping calves and 10 head of bulldozing steers.

Although both men are relative newcomers to the rodeo business, they have won their share of trophies. Robert has been entering rodeos seriously for the past three years, and George for two years. But already Robert has been in about 40 rodeos and George in 35 last year by the Idaho Cowboys association. George won by accumulating the most points of any association member in the bulldozing division and Robert won in the wild cow-milking division.

The Idaho Cowboys association has 190 members. George says about 70 per cent of the members come from Idaho, the remainder from neighboring states. The association provides various services for the members, the most important being an insurance policy that covers members hurt in rodeos.

Asked how most rodeo contestants keep in practice during the winter, George says about half of them work on stock ranches during the off-season and keep in shape by general ranch work and by practicing their particular specialty.

The remaining half is composed of contestants who are going to school in the winter or working in construction, sugar beet factories, brand inspection and other occupations.

George stresses there are fewer injuries in the arena now than a few years ago because contestants realize the value of practicing in the off-season and keeping in good physical condition.

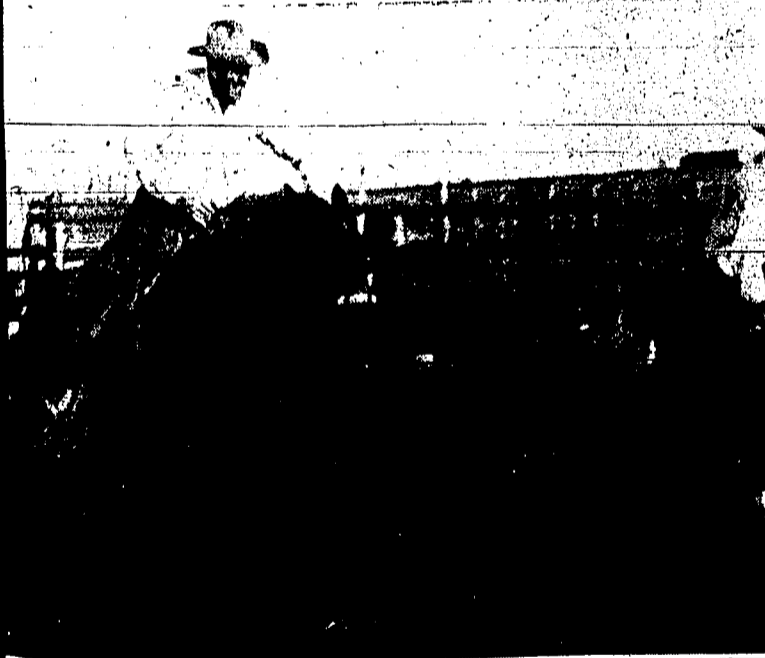

Both George and Robert play outlaw basketball in Twin Falls during the winter to stay in good physical condition.

The brothers agree a contestant's off-season job doesn't play an important role in his work in the rodeo arena. They explain that any contestant, if he takes himself seriously, will find some way to practice during the winter months. They must practice because the competition is getting stiffer.

George and Robert both note that roping times that would have been in the money five years ago simply wouldn't get a man anywhere today. George says a few years ago he won roping contests by roping and tying calves in 22 seconds, but the times must be much lower to win now. Robert's best calf roping time in competition is 10.4 seconds.

The rodeo game seems to appeal to all ages. Contestant's ages range from about 15 to 50. Robert notes that age doesn't necessarily slow a man down or knock him out of the money. He says some of the best ropers are older.

Coming right at you are Robert Juker, Buhl, chasing a darting calf as he practices his rodeo specialty of roping. A split second after photo was taken, Juker roped the calf, which promptly raced past the photographer on one side while the horse and rider passed on the other side. Times-News Sunday Editor Stan Eaton found himself in the middle of the act and was bumped along the ground for about 30 feet before everything was under control again. He was bruised and his dignity was fractured. (Staff photo-gram)

He Helped Build Milner Dam and Start Kimberly

George Peterson holds a picture of one of the first buildings constructed on the Kimberly townsite. Peterson was instrumental in constructing the Milner dam and was one of the four men who set up the original Kimberly townsite. Peterson was born in Massachusetts and came west as a young man. He worked as a marine diver during construction of Milner dam. (Staff photo-gram)

T.F. Resident Reminiscences on Work At Milner Dam, Starting Kimberly

One of the last living members of the construction crew that built Milner dam likes to reminisce about the early days when the dam was under construction and the various tracts were being opened in this area.

The man is George Peterson, Twin Falls, who worked on Milner dam and was one of the four founders of the Kimberly townsite.

Peterson, who was born in Massachusetts in 1877, says he came West because, "I didn't like it in the East." After working on railroads as a steamshovel operator in Oregon and fishing for salmon in the Columbia river, he had a chance to come to Idaho and operate heavy machinery in the northern section of the state.

During his first winter in the lumber camps of northern Idaho the temperature dipped to 54 degrees below zero many times and the next summer, in 1933, he had a chance to move to the southern part of the state and work on the new Milner dam project.

"This was just a rabbit den then," Peterson says in referring to Magic Valley before the canals were built.

"All the supplies had to be hauled 35 miles to the dam site and it was so dry you couldn't raise an umbrella," he adds.

The work was difficult and Peterson had one of the hardest and most dangerous jobs on the construction crew. He was a marine diver. He had learned the diving trade before he left Boston and came West.

He was in charge of all the divers employed on the job for underwater work in constructing the dam.

He explains that diving was an extremely well-paid craft in those days. "I got $5 each time I put on my suit, and we suited up two times a day. We also got $5 a day regular pay," he recalls.

"That totaled $15 per day and that was really top wages in those days." He says this included expenses and divers were among the highest paid employees on the construction job.

But there was a reason for this. Diving is dangerous work and more than once Peterson had a close call. One time he was under water working on some water gates when his air hose became wedged between two rocks, pinching off his air supply.

He signaled for the men above to raise him, but it took two men, working furiously, to get him free from the pinched air hose.

"It took two good men to pull me out of that mess," Peterson says.

The dam was completed in April, 1905, and after working on the project for a few years Peterson decided to turn to farming.

During the San Francisco earthquake he was asked to go there and work as a diver. "They wanted me to come down there and work in the harbor area and see what was wrong, but I had promised my wife I would never dive again," he says.

He quickly adds that if he were in proper physical condition he would like to do it again. His work as a diver still has its effects for he often has muscle cramps as a result of the many hours he spent under water.

After he quit diving he began proving up on a 40-acre farm that became one-fourth of the Kimberly townsite. Peterson and three other men put in 40 acres each to form the original 160-acre Kimberly townsite. The other men were Fred Gooding, Frank Burenton and James McMillan.

He then farmed an 80-acre farm south of Kimberly. He says he left the construction business because he was attracted by the independent life offered by farming.

Speaking of the early days on the tract he says, "You can talk about it but you can't describe it to save your soul."

"Sometimes the dust was so thick that you couldn't see your team," he adds.

Peterson says the Twin Falls tract was widely known in those days even on the eastern seaboard. One time he returned home to visit, just as the tract was being opened. Even in Boston he ran in to advertisements lauding this area. One promoter tried to get him to travel about the Boston area and describe this country to interested persons.

Although some of the early days were rough, Peterson notes he would be perfectly pleased to live his life over again with no changes.

"Yes, sir, I'd do it all over again," he says.

"We've lived in the best time the world's ever seen. Because from now on your neighbors are going to be standing on your toes."

His Trained Dogs Merely Sensational

Rupert Man Takes Trained Dogs to Events at Denver

RUPERT, Jan. 17—The Beckers are gone again, not to the dogs, but with them. Mr. and Mrs. Millage Becker, Rupert, are in Denver showing their trained dogs, Tweed, Sam and Whiskers, for 16 performances during the National Western Stock show.

This is not a new thing for the Beckers. He has presented the acts at stock shows and rodeos from the Mexican border to Alaska. Last March 15 they opened the rodeo season with an appearance at the Imperial Fair and Rodeo just 15 miles north of the Mexican border and closed the season by flying to Alaska for an appearance at the Alaska State fair at Anchorage in September.

The dogs, primarily sheep dogs, center their act around the handling of sheep, but they also work other animals and even birds such as ducks and turkeys.

In the main act, Becker pulls a trailer containing three or four sheep into the arena. He then sets up a small panel pen and orders Whiskers into it where he stays until called. Then Sam, who has ridden in on a box mounted on

Expert at Idaho Industrial School Writes About Juvenile Delinquency

BY DAVID D. EICHORN, Clinic Director

Idaho Industrial Training School ST. ANTHONY, Jan. 17 (Special) The juvenile delinquent idea is new but there are legal, social and psychological viewpoints of delinquency. Law enforcement officers are concerned with juvenile crime rates and criminal methods. Sociologists are concerned with the delinquent's parental, family, school, sex and social adjustment. The psychological viewpoint considers juvenile delinquent behavior and interpersonal relations. Through this method, personality understanding and social problems causes are sought. As a result of these different viewpoints, a widely accepted definition of juvenile delinquency does not exist. However, these viewpoints contribute to understanding of the juvenile delinquent.

Institutional commitments include a broad group of other diseases. The juvenile delinquent may be feeble minded, criminal, or mentally ill. If these personality defects or warped attitudes are eliminated, the juvenile delinquent is a youngster possessing poor self control to inhibit behavior which violates social standards. This poor self control decreases the development of human relationships. Impulsiveness, self-centered attitudes, belligerence, and evasiveness are part of the juvenile delinquent's behavior. Juvenile delinquents have trouble absorbing their hate, and their main defense against anti-social behavior lies in being passive. Their outward behavior is submissive intermingled with aggression. This inability to stop, change, or re-direct antisocial behavior is because of improper family or social training. In daily situations, juvenile delinquents become irritated, argue, light or grips more readily than their age mates. They lack ability to control feelings in trying situations. Their temptation resistance is lowered. The presence of cigarettes, money, etc., left unattended is sufficient to produce stealing. Viewing unobtainable articles constitutes a heavy pull toward taking them. Juvenile delinquents enjoy using objects. As examples, a tree immediately suggests climbing, a fence, muddling and so on. This increased ability to use gadgets heightens our vocational shop's success. If uncontrolled, juvenile delinquents lack capacity to care for possessions. They lose or destroy articles more readily than others. It takes good control methods to guard possessions for future use. A number of them show no remorse, guilt or repentance over their past misdeeds. They have not learned respect for social standards or other's property. This fact indicates youngster development without proper raising practices. Juvenile delinquents have numerous learning difficulties. A basic ingredient of learning is to make use of past experiences. In these youngsters, experiences have been so painfully punished or ignored that no conclusions were drawn from them. Therefore, they did not learn as much from past experiences as others. They lack cultural or educational wealth. Education begins at home. It begins in infancy. The parents begin reading story-books, answering questions, or showing other interest in their children. Many juvenile delinquents have not had sufficient infancy or childhood attention. Therefore, they are below average in learning many of our cultural knowledge. Sorry, juvenile delinquents were below average before beginning

Life in MAGIC VALLEY

After 34 years, David G. Johnston, SHOSHONE, was reunited with his five brothers and sisters. At various times some members of the family got together but for some of them it had been 28 years since last seeing each other, and 34 years since all of them were together.

The reunion came at Phoenix, Ariz., just before Christmas. A sister of Johnston, Mrs. Ellen Thompson, Georgia, had an opportunity to go to Mesa, Ariz., with members of the LDS church who were going to do temple work there and she made arrangements to visit another sister, Mrs. Emily Manning, who lives at Phoenix.

Mrs. Manning, in the meantime, sent word to other members of the family and they surprised Mrs. Thompson by visiting her there also.

At first, the reunion seemed impossible to some of the family because of daily work and obligations. However with considerable effort, such as traveling 24 hours steady, the feat was accomplished.

For instance, Johnston left home at 6:20 p.m. on a Wednesday, arrived in Ogden at 11:30 p.m., left for Phoenix at 3:55 a.m., Thursday and arrived in Phoenix at 6 p.m. Thursday.

The trip home was equally rushed, nevertheless, Johnston made it home and reported to work at 8 a.m. Monday as usual.

The family had lived at Mesa many years ago and thus one day was spent in visiting relatives in the area and seeing old friends.

A picnic was held at South Mountain park and Johnston said his 11-year-old niece from Georgia had the time of her life. She had always dreamed of coming West and climbing a mountain.

The Johnston family had moved to Arizona in 1913 from New Mexico. Originally they had come from Vernal, Utah. David Johnston and his wife and children moved north of Shoshone in 1944 where they purchased a farm. He has since moved with his family into Shoshone where he does carpenter work.

There are three brothers and three sisters in the group which met in Arizona and the six have a total of 40 children. David has the largest family with 12.

Other members of the family are Jesse R. Johnston, Kaysville, Utah; Mrs. Susie McCallister and Joseph W. Johnston, both Ogden; Mrs. Emily Manning, Phoenix; and Mrs. Ellen Thompson, Georgia.

When the doctor told Mrs. LeRoy McBride, DECLO, that she would have to give up her organ playing and other church activities she had performed in the LDS church, she found a new hobby.

Since 1940, Mrs. McBride has been doing genealogical work and has compiled the records of the George Benjamin Craner family and the Clark Darrington family.

In addition to working on her own pedigree, with the help of her husband, she has written the history of the View ward of the Cassia stake. She started copying the history of the Craner family organization in 1940 and in 1945 began her own "book of remembrance." When the Craner family unit was organized in October, 1948, her uncle, Herbert Craner, asked her to compile the family history. Much of the information had been gathered by Evelyn A. Session, Salt Lake City, a researcher for the Craner family.

Mrs. McBride's grandparents on the maternal side of the family were the Craners from England. They accepted gospel taught by the LDS missionaries and came to Utah, crossing the plains in 1854. Grandparents on the paternal side of the family, the Darringtons, also came from England in 1855. Mrs. McBride reports that all of the ordinance work for the ancestors now compiled has been completed. Last week she took her large volumes to the Genealogical society in Salt Lake City where they were micro-filmed and filed for future use.

Mrs. McBride was told that her collection of books was the largest record ever received by one individual at one time. She was given a copy of the microfilm material so that she can use it.

The stack of books include three on the Craner family, one on the Darrington family, two personal books, the View ward history and several loose leafs.

Mrs. McBride, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Clark Darrington, was born in Declo and was graduated from Declo high school and Albion State Normal. She taught school a number of years.

She has been active in the LDS church, serving as ward organist and stake organist for the Sunday school for a number of years as well as YLMAA counselor and teaching a Sunday school class.

Her husband served as ward clerk of the View ward for 19 years. They have six children and three grandchildren. They live in the View ward of the Cassia stake.

Other members of the family are Jesse R. Johnston, Kaysville, Utah; Mrs. Susie McCallister and Joseph W. Johnston, both Ogden; Mrs. Emily Manning, Phoenix; and Mrs. Ellen Thompson, Georgia.

Mrs. McBride's grandparents on the maternal side of the family were the Craners from England. They accepted gospel taught by the LDS missionaries and came to Utah, crossing the plains in 1854. Grandparents on the paternal side of the family, the Darringtons, also came from England in 1855. Mrs. McBride reports that all of the ordinance work for the ancestors now compiled has been completed. Last week she took her large volumes to the Genealogical society in Salt Lake City where they were micro-filmed and filed for future use.

Mrs. McBride was told that her collection of books was the largest record ever received by one individual at one time. She was given a copy of the microfilm material so that she can use it.

The stack of books include three on the Craner family, one on the Darrington family, two personal books, the View ward history and several loose leafs.

Mrs. McBride, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Clark Darrington, was born in Declo and was graduated from Declo high school and Albion State Normal. She taught school a number of years.

She has been active in the LDS church, serving as ward organist and stake organist for the Sunday school for a number of years as well as YLMAA counselor and teaching a Sunday school class.

Her husband served as ward clerk of the View ward for 19 years. They have six children and three grandchildren. They live in the View ward of the Cassia stake.

Other members of the family are Jesse R. Johnston, Kaysville, Utah; Mrs. Susie McCallister and Joseph W. Johnston, both Ogden; Mrs. Emily Manning, Phoenix; and Mrs. Ellen Thompson, Georgia.

When the doctor told Mrs. LeRoy McBride, DECLO, that she would have to give up her organ playing and other church activities she had performed in the LDS church, she found a new hobby.

Since 1940, Mrs. McBride has been doing genealogical work and has compiled the records of the George Benjamin Craner family and the Clark Darrington family.

In addition to working on her own pedigree, with the help of her husband, she has written the history of the View ward of the Cassia stake. She started copying the history of the Craner family organization in 1940 and in 1945 began her own "book of remembrance." When the Craner family unit was organized in October, 1948, her uncle, Herbert Craner, asked her to compile the family history. Much of the information had been gathered by Evelyn A. Session, Salt Lake City, a researcher for the Craner family.

Mrs. McBride's grandparents on the maternal side of the family were the Craners from England. They accepted gospel taught by the LDS missionaries and came to Utah, crossing the plains in 1854. Grandparents on the paternal side of the family, the Darringtons, also came from England in 1855. Mrs. McBride reports that all of the ordinance work for the ancestors now compiled has been completed. Last week she took her large volumes to the Genealogical society in Salt Lake City where they were micro-filmed and filed for future use.

AS YOUR MINISTER SEES IT

By DONALD B. BLACKSTONE, Pastor, First Presbyterian Church

You may never carry a gun into the forest, or a hammer into the hills, but you are still a hunter. We are all hunters. We do not always know exactly what it is we are hunting. Nor do we always find what we are after, nor always want what we find. But humans cannot help hunting. The inclination to hunt is instinctive in us.

For what is everyone hunting? We are all hunting attention. No one wants to be ignored. We are all hunting for acceptance. No one wants to feel that he is unimportant. Our basic needs for self respect and social approval send and keep us hunting.

But we have deeper needs. There is our deep need for appreciation.

Rev. Blackstone

the fear of failure, the fear of sickness and accident, the fear of life, the fear of death.

We do not hunt only for ourselves. We hunt for others about whom we care. We hunt for our families and employers. We hunt for the organizations and institutions to which we belong. We hunt for the benefit of the causes to which we have become devoted.

Above all else, we are all hunting for a sense of fulfillment. We want to feel that we are playing the role in life for which we have been fitted by talent and temperament, training and experience. In a profound sense, we would like to feel confident that we are playing the role in which our Creator has cast us.

So, everyone is hunting for God. He does not always think so. But still, it is only faithful fellowship with God which can dissolve our fears and satisfy our souls. The relationship which we seek with God is one of mutual understanding and assistance. We need to know that we can count on Him and to prove that He can count on us. To thus find God is life's deepest security. This is life's finest and most satisfying achievement. This is life's saving faith, its highest hope.

Of course, no one is always entirely successful or satisfied in his hunting. He may often have to settle for a rabbit instead of a deer or an elk. But still hunting is an instinctive interest and activity. No hunter always returns empty-handed. No successful hunting is forever the product of careful thought and study, persistence and patience, effort and imagination, faith and hope.

As we all stand on the frontier of a New Year, the highest hope which can express for everyone of you is "Good Hunting to You!"

SPEAKING OF Furniture

LIVE BETTER... AT HOME

The first and most significant thing to keep in mind when you start to plan the decorating and furnishing of your home is that it must serve basic human needs. To be completely satisfactory, a home must gratify its occupants' urge for beauty, thereby fulfilling a psychological need and it must provide physical comfort and accommodation for all the activities to be carried on within its walls; and perhaps most important of all, it must satisfy the simple, universal desire to live better. With careful planning all of these requirements can be met no matter what the age or style of the home may be.

The room sketched above is the living room in an up-dated, older type home. The old brick fireplace wall has been given a bold striking Modern feeling by off-centering a tongue-and-groove panel of natural wood on the upper portion. Other walls have been painted a muted grey-green, with wall-to-wall carpet several shades lighter than the walls.

Note how beautifully the informal simplicity of this Contemporary background combines with and complements the dignity and charm of the Traditional furnishings. It's a combination that creates an atmosphere of striking individuality and contributes to better living.

A new color scheme and an up-to-date furniture arrangement is often all that's needed to up-date a tired run-down room. If you would like some professional assistance with your color selection and room arrangements, come in and consult with one of our experienced decorators. Anytime.

We know you want the most for your money—the most utility, the most beauty, and the highest quality. Our aim is to give you these, always, with every purchase—large or small—that you make from us. Do make us your furniture headquarters, won't you?

Rupert Dogs Free Sheep, Work With Them and Put Them Back in Trailer

This sequence of pictures shows how the dogs trained by Millage Becker (Rupert) work with sheep at stock shows and rodeos. In this photo, dog is letting sheep out of trailer while another waits nearby to work with them.

With the sheep out of the trailer, dog works with them and maneuvers them according to whistled commands.

After proving his ability working with the sheep, the dog drives the sheep back into the trailer. Another of the trained dogs waits to close trailer gate behind sheep.

At the conclusion of the act, all three dogs pose at side of trailer to "take bow." One of dogs is almost indistinguishable beside wheel. (Staff photo-engravings)

Rupert Couple Showing Their Trained Dogs at National Western Stock Show

...the front of the trailer, is ordered to the rear where he lifts the latch and paws the sheep until he has room to jump down in with them. After he drives them out and turns them over to Tweed, he returns to his position on the box.

Tweed then moves the sheep to a designated position, usually a lined circle, and then, responding to whistle commands, moves them forward, to the right, left and finally back to the starting point.

When it is time to reload the sheep, Whiskers is called and jumps onto the back of one of them for a ride back toward the trailer. When they are near, he jumps down and runs ahead where he stands and holds the gate open while Tweed drives them into the trailer.

They step aside and Sam comes back into the act to close and latch the gate.

The three then pose, and Tweed takes a bow for them.

Tweed and Sam are black and white border collies, a breed which originated along the England-Scotland border (hence the name). This is one of the oldest breeds known, and is said to be the only breed to follow instructions so completely in the field. They will place any livestock in any designated position and hold them there until released by other commands.

Whiskers, a shaggy black dog, is a Hungarian Pull sheepdog. Becker says the breed is comparatively rare in this country and is just beginning to be introduced and to gain popularity during the past decade. They are intelligent and trained easily, he says.

The whistles used by Becker are interesting, having come from all over the world. He uses a shepherd's whistle from Scotland, a training whistle from England and some from Germany. He uses the high-frequency, silent type for some of his work.

A few years ago, Tweed appeared in a Walt Disney movie and the group will be seen in a movie being made by Seagull productions next spring. The movie will be made in the Arco area. Becker says he has been approached by Life magazine for an interview.

The script for the forthcoming movie calls for a dog to climb a ladder and enter a second story window. Since none of his dogs had ever been taught the feat, Becker decided to try. He chose Sam for the job and in a very short time, he was climbing like a veteran.

When asked how he ever got started with his dogs, Becker said that it just naturally grew out of his work with sheep. He has worked with sheep nearly all his life. At present, he raises registered Suffolk, having an average of 50 head on the farm east of Rupert in the Jackson district.

Mrs. Becker says she doesn't have very much to do with training the dogs, but enjoys accompanying her husband when he shows them. Ed-

Wendell Landmark to House New 58-Bed Nursing Home

Constructed in 1911 by the Northside Land and Water company, it has housed an inn, hospital and more recently, a rehabilitation center for alcoholics. The structure has been completely renovated and a fire protection-sprinkling system has been installed, reports Clyde Grice, business manager. Open house is scheduled next Sunday. (Staff engraving)

MAGIC VALLEY PORTRAIT Ex-Chairman of County's Commission Says Needed Improvements Will Come

Speaking of Twin Falls county and how it is constantly growing and improving, L. W. (Doc) Hawkins says, "This county is like a newly married couple—they buy their rug this year and then next year they add their living-room set. There is still room for improvement and where there is room for improvement this county will make it."

Hawkins expressed his faith in Twin Falls county after serving as a county commissioner since 1947. For the past eight years he served as chairman of the commission.

Hawkins, who has been farming west of Filer since 1920, originally planned to practice osteopathy. But he entered the army during World War I just after he had been graduated from a school of osteopathy in Des Moines, Ia. After spending his war years playing for an army band and working on the front-lines in France, he returned to civilian life and began farming.

"And I have never regretted it," he says. "It's the most wonderful and independent life a man can know."

Hawkins was born in Grenola, Kans., the son of a rural mail carrier. He attended public schools there, entered the osteopathic school in Des Moines and then entered the army.

While he was in the service his parents moved from Kansas and began farming-north of Filer.

It was while he was in the army and playing for a regimental band that he picked up his nickname, "Doc."

He was discharged a second class musician in 1919 and then traveled to his new home at Filer. He began farming with his father in 1920.

In December, 1920, he married Lora Musser, another former Kansan who had come to Filer with her parents in 1910. In 1924 they moved to their present farm northwest of Filer.

Hawkins is now semi-retired and says, "I can't carry that irrigation shovel like I used to."

He says the biggest job he and his co-workers had to face in the time he was in office was construction of Magic Valley Memorial hospital.

Hawkins was elected in the same election that the bonds were approved for construction of the hospital, so when he took office in early 1947 he inherited a real task.

"Materials were short and expenses were high, but we had a wonderful hospital board and we decided to go ahead and build," he recalls.

But the original bonds were insufficient to cover the cost of the hospital in an era of rising costs. Finally, after more bonds had been voted and a government grant received, the hospital was built at a cost of $1,800,000.

The construction was the biggest job facing the commission and the hospital board while he was in office, but he adds, "There was a serious need for the hospital and it is a genuine tribute to the hospital board that it was all done so effectively."

He says the bipartisan hospital board worked hard and efficiently to build the hospital.

Another project that concerned the commission during his service was development of the county weed department.

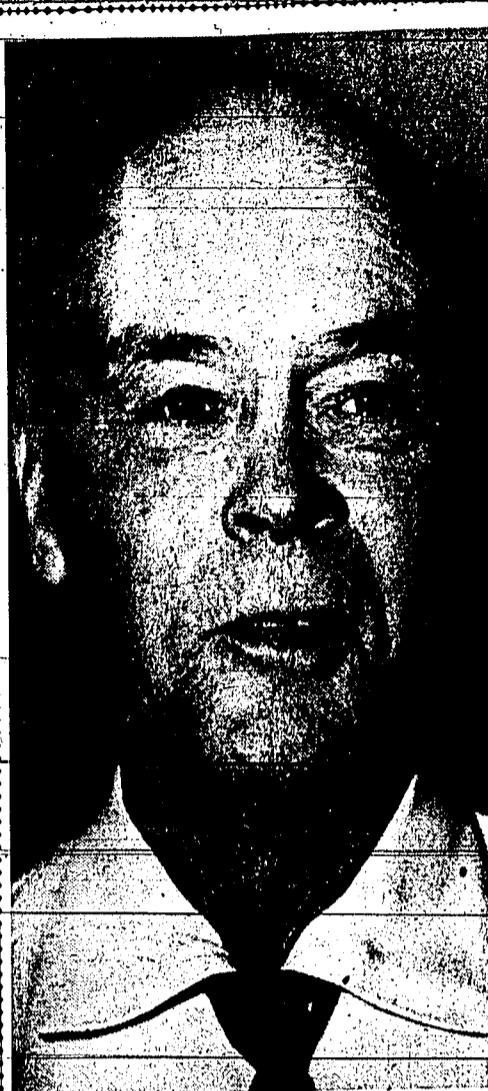

He notes that prior to the late 1940's little was done in the area of weed control by the county.

"Farmers were demanding a program to eradicate noxious weeds then," he says.

"The problem still isn't licked and it's still a problem. But the responsibility centers on the farmers themselves. They can get rid of the weeds by cooperating with the department."

"Possibly the program isn't quite like some would like to see, but it is a credit to Harry Gault, who framed the department in 1947," he adds.

Hawkins explains that the department ment's major work is an advisory capacity sending men out to work with individual farmers, showing them how to cope with various weeds and how to use new products.

He says the department's education program has been successful. The department takes laboratory theory and puts it into field practice.

"If the people would look at some of the other counties they could see what we've done—ever look in paid off here," he says.

He adds that county commissioners from all over Idaho and neighboring states have come to Twin Falls county to study the weed department and how it operates.

The development of the Twin Falls county fair is another project that Hawkins says the commissioners and the fair board should be proud of.

He explains the fair really began to grow after World War II, but particularly credits the untiring work of members of the fair board.

The fair, which Hawkins says is a real opportunity for the youth of the county, is a credit to the county agent, Warren Daigh, and Donald Youitz, his assistant; Florence Schultz, and Tom Parks, superintendent of the fair.

Speaking of his years of commission work, he says, "It put me in a position to meet a host of people that I otherwise wouldn't have met. And battling these problems over the past 12 years has especially endeared their friendship to me."

Frank Krueger's Final Rites Held

Funeral services for Frank Krueger were held Saturday at the Twin Falls mortuary chapel with the Rev. Donald L. Hoffman officiating.

Soloist was Mrs. U. N. Terry and Mrs. Stanley Phillips was organist.

Paul Bandy, Boyd Brown, Lloyd Klinton, Terry Sullivan, Carl Leonard and Tom Olmstead served as pallbearers.

Honorary-pallbearers were Larry Sullivan, Edgar Olmstead, George Fuller, Joe Gish, R. E. Webster, Harry Ryan, Gilbert Merrill and E. G. Brackell.

Concluding rites were conducted at the Twin Falls cemetery.

ASSIGNED TO HONOLULU

BUHL, Jan. 17 — Pfc. John Alexander, 424 Eighth avenue north, has been assigned as a medical specialist at the Tripler army hospital, Honolulu. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Eugene R. Alexander, 1837 Field. His wife, Faye, lives in Buhl.

Griddle cakes are usually ready to be turned when bubbles appear on their surface and the edges look slightly drier than the center.

Lincoln Area Aides Outline Fund Budget

SHOSHONE, Jan. 17 — The 1959 budget bids from county officers were considered and a tentative budget outlined at the January meeting of the Lincoln county board of commissioners, Donald Riley, chairman, reports.

Riley, from the Richfield district, succeeds Oscar Kerner, north Shoshone, to the post. The county budget will be adopted at the February meeting. It may be decreased next month but no increases can be made.

The 1959 July list also was drawn by commissioners and the county was designated as a noxious weed eradication area. Francis Bergin was named a justice of the peace for precinct No. 1 where there was a vacancy.

Deputies who took oaths were Mrs. Helen C. Dickinson, for auditor's office; Mrs. S. M. Hall, for assessor's office; Mrs. Vera Reed, for treasurer's office; Charles J. Feugh, for sheriff's office. Other office help includes Mrs. Robert Sloan for prosecuting attorney; Mrs. Harrell Thorne for probate judge; Mrs. Raymond Bernard, for county agent; J. Howard Manning is county extension agent; Mrs. Dorothy Alexander, county public health nurse; Wayne Hickman, county weed supervisor, and janitors are Frank Bayliss and L. E. McDearmon.

Mrs. Pauline Degler, registered nurse, Gooding, is administrator of Magic Valley Manor, Wendell. She stands beside one of the 58 beds available in the new institution. Open house will be held from 2 to 8 p.m. next Sunday, Jan. 25. (Staff engraving)

Magic Valley Manor, Wendell Nursing Home, Slates Open House Next Sunday

WENDELL, Jan. 17—The Magic Valley Manor, owned by a corporation of Wendell businessmen, will formally open for the care of geriatric and convalescent patients at Wendell on Monday, Jan. 26.

Open house is scheduled for 2 p.m. to 8 p.m. Sunday, Jan. 25. Guided tours will be conducted throughout the afternoon and evening to acquaint visitors with the general operation and facilities offered by the new nursing home. Refreshments will be served. The public is invited.

The new guest home most recently housed "Shadels of Idaho." The building has been completely renovated and redecorated by the new owners.

The three-story building and grounds occupy a half block site on North Idaho street, within two blocks of the main business district in Wendell.

A sprinkling system has been installed as a fire control system. It is approved by the state survey and rating board and by the insurance underwriters.

The Manor will be staffed by registered and licensed practical nurses and will have full medical coverage. Clyde Grice, formerly Seattle, has been retained by the corporation to serve as business manager.

Mrs. Pauline Degler, registered nurse, Gooding, will be administrator of the nursing home. Other members of the staff include Mrs. Mary Alice Gifford, licensed practical nurse, Jerome, and Mrs. Velma Torrey, licensed practical nurse, Gooding.

There will be 58 beds in wards, semi-private and private accommodations. Supplies and equipment for the new home are arriving daily and the reconstruction work nearing completion.

Complete renovation of the building follows the recommendations of the state board of health and the state hospital facilities committee. Additional work not specified by the boards, has been completed to make the nursing home one of the finest in the state, owners say.

Sun porches on two sides of the building, adequate elevator service as well as built-in stairways, add to the attractiveness, efficiency, comfort and safety of the home, Grice pointed out.

Magic Valley Manor was incorporated in October, 1958. The corporation listed as officers Dr. M. E. Scheel, J. Forrest Weaver, Elmer Miller and Stan Ramsey, all Wendell.

The building housing the Manor was constructed in 1911 by the North Side Land and Water company, costing in excess of $57,000. Following construction, it was used for several years as a residence for Wendell families.

In the early 1920's the building and grounds were purchased by the city of Wendell from the investment company. The city resold the property to Ephraim Williams, Soda Springs, for use as the Wendell inn.

Williams operated the inn for only a short time, and on moving from Wendell, the property reverted to the administrator, Carl Valentine, a Pocatello banker.

On May 23, 1923, Valentine sold the Wendell inn to the Sisters of St. Benedict for a home for the aged. The new institution was to be named St. Valentine's home.

In the first few weeks of their operation in Wendell, the sisters received so many requests for a medical and surgical hospital that a hospital unit was added to the original construction. St. Valentine's hospital was dedicated Aug. 19, 1923, and continued in operation until March, 1932, when the Sisters of St. Benedict moved to Jerome.

The building remained idle until Feb. 4, 1954, when it was purchased by Dr. Paul O'Hallaren, Seattle, to be used as an evaluation and rehabilitation center for alcoholics.

Shadels of Idaho operated the rehabilitation center until the recent sale of the hospital to the Wendell corporation.

Explain Finances

BUHL, Jan. 17—Fred Braliford and Eugene Thomas, school board members, and Alva Borders, superintendent, explained the budget and school finances at a meeting of the Lucerne PTA this week.

A question period followed their talks. Mrs. Arnold Svancara was program chairman and Mrs. H. R. Taylor, vice president, conducted the meeting. Refreshments were served by Mrs. Svancara and Mrs. Leonard Vitek. The next meeting is set for Feb. 11.

Simple Tax Form Extension Slated

WASHINGTON, Jan. 17 — Taxpayers may be allowed next year to use the simple punch card form, 1040A, on incomes up to $15,000, Internal Revenue Commissioner Dana Latham said today.

This year the short form is permitted on incomes up to $10,000 on wages, dividends, and interest. It previously was limited to those with taxable incomes below $5,000.

The revenue service is investigating the possibility of raising the ceiling to $15,000 a year hence, Latham said, as part of a service-wide quest for measures to take as much of the pain out of taxpaying as possible.

Snake River Yields Lots of Fish During Winter

Alonso Brown, conservation officer stationed at Wendell, points to Snake river in vicinity of Thousand Springs, one of the "favorite" areas for area fishermen in wintertime. Heavy stocking of trout during winter months, along with the fact trash fish aren't quite so active in the colder water, provide good fishing along Snake river, which is open all year. (Staff photo-engraving)

Fishing "Pressure" More Than Doubles On Snake River During Winter Months

During winter months fishing on Snake river increases more than 100 per cent, according to Alonso Brown, conservation officer.

Snake river is one of the few streams open for fishing during the winter months. The weather is better, giving the angler a better chance to catch trout. But, according to Brown, that isn't the primary reason as some people believe.

Brown points out that although fish aren't a nuisance during the winter months, the real reason for the better fishing is because of heavy stocking during these months.

Fish are planted during the winter and early fall to provide fishing when fishermen can't go to the hills and to the other streams and lakes," he says.

He notes last year the federal hatchery planted 70,000 legal size fish in Snake river between Shoshone falls and the Bliss bridge. According to Brown, these are the fish eventually caught during winter and spring fishing and are the cause for the good winter fishing.

Brown says surveys have shown 88 per cent of the fish caught in that area of the river are hatchery fish, illustrating dependency upon hatchery fish.

He explains that hatchery fish can be identified by the stubby dorsal fin, worn off during crowded conditions in the hatchery.

Snake river remains open in the winter because the large size of the river gives sufficient protection to any trout that might spawn in the waters in the spring. Most of the rainbows go to smaller streams to spawn in the spring. Those streams are closed during that time to protect spawning fish that are caught too readily.

Brown says the rainbow trout is a spring spawner in its natural state, but through the years hatcheries have developed a rainbow trout that will spawn in the fall.

This enables hatcheries to spawn fish in the fall and then release them as legal size fish in the spring 15 months later. He says the fish often weigh three-fourths of a pound at that age.

Brown notes that eastern brook trout and dolly varden trout are natural fall spawners, but rainbow trout now spawn at any time of the year because of mixing natural and hatchery fish.

Brown says in the area he covers on Snake river—the part that serves

Property Tax Report Noted From Lincoln

SHOSHONE, Jan. 17—Real property taxes collected for the period ending Dec. 31, 1958, by County Treasurer Myron D. Johnson amount to $261,082.92, compared to $202,303.64 collected for the corresponding period for 1957.

On the land roll, taxes for collections as charged amounted to $146,163.14. Final payment collections in the land roll were $10,097.02 while first installment collections amounted to $40,535.37 and second installment to be collected amounts to $52,949.02. That makes $12,581.73 delinquent.

On the town roll, debts were $331,672.09 on taxes for collections as charged. Final payment credits show $32,245.52 while first installment collections were $148,205.01 and second installment to be collected are $140,707.30 and first installment delinquent are $1,514.26.

Total to be collected in land and town rolls amounts to $477,835.23. Penalty on the land roll amounts to $251.66 and on the town roll $30.35.

Johnson said the first installment delinquent as of Dec. 31, 1957, was $16,483.37 while on that same date in 1958, the amount was only $14,095.09, making $2,388.38 more delinquent in 1957 than 1958.

have their best luck where the murky water of the river merges with the clear water from springs.

Although the many fishermen on Snake river during the winter months take their share of rainbow trout, Brown believes most fishermen are overlooking a fine game fish in their scramble to catch trout.

Brown refers to whitefish, sometimes known as mountain herring. Whitefish, identified by its silvery color and the gristle-like fin behind the dorsal fin, is present in great abundance, Brown says.

"It's a good, edible fish, as good or better than the trout," he says. "We know there are plenty of them. In fact I've been with commercial fishermen, taking trash fish out of the Thousand Springs area, that have had to suspend operations because they were taking too many whitefish."

They average about 12 inches in length, he says, and seldom get larger than a pound and one-half. There is no weight or length limit, the only limit is that no more than 25 can be taken per day.

He says whitefish are not top feeders like trout, but rather feed on the bottom and can readily be taken by any natural bait, such as hellgramites or maggots.

"They seldom take artificial lures or salmon eggs or worms," he adds. "But they are a sporting fish. They have a small delicate mouth and must be caught with a small hook." Brown believes they are a real test of the angler's skill.

Some fishermen believe they are not good fighters, but the talent needed to catch and land them and their excellent taste should counter-balance that aspect, Brown says.

men who consistently place in the rodeos. By consistently placing they emerge as money winners at the end of the year.

In the early days of the rodeo, according to George, southern cowboys usually had the edge on northern cowboys because of the better climate and longer, milder months. But he adds that cowboys from the Northwest are beginning to make a

Expert at Idaho's Industrial School Gives Notes on Juvenile Delinquency

Numerous over-indulged or "spoiled" children are found among juvenile delinquents. Upon institutional commitment, this youngster is homesick, dependent, impulsive and self centered. The parents readily become over-protective and treat this adolescent as a child. In the majority of these homes, youngsters did not need to submit to orderly rules during their early development. They were over-protected and spared the necessity of submitting to rules, that is the first rule of the community, their home. As the youngster entered school, misbehavior spread from the lax family to the school. The parents were made aware of the school trouble. As a result, many parents became restrictive in attempts to incorporate social rules or regulations too late. They attempted to achieve by force what could have been achieved without any difficulty at all during the earlier years.

When they enforce some of the previous indulgences or pamperings, the spoiled child may rebel. As a result, a dislike of social rules or enough parental protest develops to predispose him to future delinquency.

In the early years, parents may stop a youngster's mild quarrelling, fighting, or mischievousness so that passive, submissive behavior is increased. During adolescence, assertive, independent masculine attitudes are emphasized, and this may over-increase aggressive impulses to counteract the previous sense of passivity or submissiveness. In this case, a protest against passive, submissive, feminine attitude occurs.

The rejected youngster is found among institutional juvenile delinquents. This individual is homesick primarily for the freedom it provides. This youngster's needs for tenderness were denied at an early period. In these homes, we see a complete lack of love, care, or support during the early developmental years. If a child is denied the tenderness he needs, then he will develop hatred toward the parents.

At times all parents over-indulge or reject their children, but it is not the infrequent spoiling or rejection which predisposes the youngsters to juvenile delinquency. It is continued spoiling or rejecting experiences which predisposes him to it.

Therefore, a youngster raised among criminal parents has a greater probability of becoming a juvenile delinquent than a youngster raised in a normal home that suddenly becomes poor may begin to steal toys, money or other luxuries to which he was formerly accustomed.

A few children suffer from sugar deficiency. If parents do not understand this, they may refuse the child sweets. If, in this case, the child may steal money or candy.

In poverty, there frequently occurs a loss in the family's social status. When a family becomes poor, it does not care to engage anymore in the competitive struggle of keeping up with the Joneses. They have given up the struggle. As a result, they give up many other things, too.

The family possession pride (home, car, etc.) begins to diminish. Laxity in childhood training generally accompanies this financial downfall.

In some instances, juvenile delinquency is the result of belonging and learning a certain behavior pattern of a social group. The pattern may be looked upon as a hero and behavior copied after him. This generally results in group or gang delinquency.

Many times, pressures for success from the parents, family, school, or social group operate to force an inadequate youngster toward delinquent behavior. This is done to overcome his own feelings of inadequacy and prove that he is equal to others.

Truancy is one of the first symptoms of delinquency. Any investigation into truancy deserves an examination of the school situation, the principal, teacher, and the other children. Principals and teachers are subject to error. Certainly principals and teachers may dislike a youngster because of his personality, race, color, age, sex, or for some other reason. In constant classroom contact, the teacher will ultimately express his dislike toward the youngster and make the youngster's life miserable.

Another reason for a youngster becoming truant is that he may be an outcast by his age mates because of his personality, race, color, appearance, religion or social status.

Truancy causes may not be in the school, but in the home. Favoritism of other children or a new child may cause resentment so that he misses school.

Stealing begins in the home. It can represent need for love, guidance, or support. In this case, the stolen object may be a symbol of parental love.

During the adolescent period, sexual problems are rarely serious, sexual activities may be a method of solving conflicts and promoting feelings of security. If a youngster is not receiving needed affection, sexual acts may occur to satisfy these needs.

The juvenile delinquent must learn to incorporate acceptable behavior, thoughts and feelings. To achieve this, an adult must become his ideal; that is, someone to pattern himself to.

The juvenile delinquent requires understanding and acceptance. They are sensitive about whether people like them.

At first, juvenile delinquents will test the limits of your self control to make you angry. If they succeed in provoking this emotion, it places you among other adults who were the object of their attacks. They will test your attention and friendliness to the limit, but finally a bond of attachment will develop.

A juvenile delinquent's provocation must be avoided because we are trying to teach them self control. In these instances, our own self control becomes necessary. A helpful attitude and a little humor decrease provocation through tension release.

The treatment process is primarily concerned with teaching youngsters to satisfy their needs in socially approved ways.

The treatment is done through interpersonal relations in the cottage, academic, recreational or work detail. If it is in these places the delinquent finds his adult ideal. When he finds this accepting, understanding adult figure, the treatment begins.

The juvenile delinquent's home life has been stressed repeatedly in articles. Since parents are responsible for their children, the home plays an important part in the development of juvenile delinquency. In our society, the home has begun to lose its unity. Home is becoming a hotel for many families. Parents are prone to allow others to raise their children. They are prone to blame the school, social groups, and community for their youngster's problems.

If these parents would begin to re-establish the family, juvenile delinquency would decrease. During the depression, the delinquency rate decreased. One factor was that the family had to stay home and do things together. They had to raise their children. The family must be maintained. Family picnics, movies and outdoor activities should be started.

Many of our boys and girls have not had the experience of being raised in a close family group. They

Manufacturers Catering to Projects of Home Builders

A good example of a do-it-yourself project is the boat being built by Robert Winchell. Winchell has assembled the boat from a prepared boat kit. The 14-foot boat is made of wood and fiber glass. Such projects save workers considerable money if they are willing to put in the labor. Winchell paid about $350 for the kit, fiber glass and paint. A comparable boat, ready-made, would be about $600. (Staff photo-enzaving)

New Auxiliary To Boy Scouts To Be Formed

Plans for creating a non-uniformed group known as the Women's Reserve of the Boy Scouts of America were announced Saturday by Dr. Joseph Marshall, president of the Snake River council.

Dr. Marshall said the new organization will provide a means to register women workers other than those now serving as den mothers in the Cub Scout program. There are now 262 women serving as den mothers in the Snake River council. The women's reserve will be open to women over 21 years of age. These women may serve as faculty members of Cub Scout training courses, assisting in organizing and training in connection with Cub Scout packs and assisting in finance and public relations campaigns. They will serve as members of mothers clubs, parents clubs, and auxiliaries of Scout units. They may serve as merit badge counselors when men cannot be found. They may include women employees of the nation's 532 local councils of the Boy Scouts of America.

Registered members of the women's reserve will receive "Scouting" magazine as well as an opportunity to keep informed on youth and what is being done for them through the Scouting program.

Trend for Individual to Do Own Work Around House Affects T. F. Businesses

The "do-it-yourself" fad of the last few years has certainly had its effect on some Twin Falls businesses.

One lumber yard manager estimates business has increased 50 per cent in the past five years because of the public's interest in doing and building themselves.

According to most store managers the do-it-yourself interest has been stimulated by manufacturers of various items that are regularly consumed, by persons working around the home—items such as paint, tile, wall boarding, cement, insulation, fencing and the basic tools needed to work with the construction materials.

Manufacturers, realizing the value of the do-it-yourself trade, have taken that into consideration when they design a new product. Before they market it they make sure that it is easy to use and will, consequently, be accepted by homeowners who are primarily persons unskilled in the more elaborate construction techniques.

Nearly all of the companies make an appeal to the individual's pocketbook. They stress how much cheaper it is to do your own construction and redecoration and also point out how easy it is.

The appeal to the pocketbook is wise, for one merchant estimated the majority of the do-it-yourself work is done by individuals and families that either couldn't afford the work done by a contractor or simply wouldn't have it done by anyone else and are doing the work as a hobby.

Manufacturers are devising methods of working with materials that require less work and fewer tools than were needed a few years ago.

One merchant said persons who do most of the work are individuals buying a new home or expanding the living space in their present home. Many times they have the basic structural work done by a contractor and then finish the work themselves.

By doing it this way the people can buy a home and slowly, as they can afford it, make the desired refinements without interrupting the normal routine of the home.

For example, one merchant said a housewife, using new quick-drying paints, can bundle the children off to school and paint a room in a morning and have it ready to live in by that evening.

With the older, slower-drying paints, that would have been impossible.

Most merchants agree the invention of the latex, rubber based paints gave a big push to individual work. Paints are the biggest do-it-yourself item in most of the stores. And according to all the merchants, women are the biggest buyers and users of paint. One man said he felt they generally do a better job, too.

He says they are more particular and generally do a neater job.

He explains the women generally follow directions better than men. They read the labels and take the information as gospel, whereas the men sometimes forge ahead, basing their actions on past experience with paint, or whatever material they are working with.

Sometimes this works, but it usually pays to follow the directions.

One man said present paint is easier to use, but he felt the do-it-yourself interest has stemmed partly from the human instinct to appreciate your own work. "It may not be better," he said, "but most people like their own work."

Most businessmen agreed shorter working hours have contributed to the do-it-yourself fad, giving more persons added time for such projects.

The sale of tools has paralleled the increased sales of material, although many of the do-it-yourself items stress the material doesn't require elaborate tools.

A hardware dealer said the do-it-yourself interest has boosted its tool sales by about 25 per cent in the past five years.

According to most merchants, the beginner starts out with economically-priced tools, but many of them return in the future as their confidence grows and invest in more expensive tools, such as elaborate power tools.

But economy is not the basic interest, according to one merchant. He feels only about half of the persons are doing it to save money. The remainder are doing it for a hobby.

Impressive savings can be made by doing your own work. Fencing is a big do-it-yourself interest now, and one man said a person installing an average redwood fence on an average size home lot can save more than $200 by doing the construction.

About the same amount of money can be saved by doing your own work when decorating a basement recreation room, depending, of course, on the size of the room and the materials.

Laying floor and wall tile is another popular pastime. "The average guy can do a ceramic tile job that he wouldn't think of attempting 10 years ago," one man notes.

He explains new adhesives used with plastic tiles require much less talent to apply and serve to encourage the novice tile setter.

But the do-it-yourself fans don't stop with common painting and lumber nailing. Some of them tackle electrical wiring, plumbing and cabinet making.

A hardware dealer notes that a person acquainted with electrical wiring can save considerable money by installing his own washing and drying machines. He says the individual can install a machine for about $15, but it would cost about $30 to have it done by an electrician.

And the do-it-yourself fans even make their own storm windows. One aluminum company manufactures storm window kits that offer the ambitious craftsman an opportunity of saving 60 per cent on storm window expense.

Even lawn-sprinkling systems are now installed by the amateur, thanks to a company that perfected plastic pipes that can be buried like metal pipe and simply glued at the joints, rather than threaded.

And in the Midwest, the do-it-yourself craze is rushing ahead pell-mell, according to one merchant. He says several families have banded together in some of the larger cities. They secure financial backing, and then build, all by themselves, entire housing subdivisions.
