Library Has Many of Top Books Listed

The Twin Falls public library is displaying a number of books which appear on the list of outstanding books selected by the notable books council of the adult services division of the American Library Association.

Of the 47 titles listed, the library has on its shelves or on order more than two-thirds of the items listed.

Of the selections the committee notes that these books are worthy because of their intrinsic qualities such as literary excellence, factual correctness, sincerity and honest presentation, or skill—in presenting specialized knowledge for the reader, he notes.

DeVolder said the council is composed of distinguished librarians throughout the United States. They had the aid of participating librarians who sent suggestions at regular intervals throughout the year.

Several of the most important titles are "The Great Democracies" by Winston Churchill; "The World of Pablo Picasso" by David D. Duncan; "Naked to Stone" by Charles W. Ferguson; "Explosive Metropolis" by Fortune magazine; "The Affluent Society" by John K. Galbraith; "The March of Archaeology" by Kurt W. Marek; "People of the Peaks" by Gavin Maxwell; "The King Must Die" by Mary Renault; "The Mountain Road" by Thomas H. White and Mary Silvers.

The public is invited to take out the books on display and enjoy the many other books which in past years have received national recognition," DeVolder says. "The library has many excellent books collected over a period of years in a diversity of reading interests as broad as the subjects covered in the collection of 25,000 books, both juvenile and adult."

Critics Say U.S. Capital Lacks Culture; One Solon Disagrees

WASHINGTON, March 3 (AP)—Probably no other city takes such a kicking around as the nation's capital.

Its climate is denounced by almost everyone.

Sen. Wayne Morse, D., Oregon, points to alums, within six blocks of the magnificent capitol, which he says the world not permit its center to enter.

Its majestic circles have turned into frustrating traffic bottlenecks.

Mostly these criticisms are taken in stride, as either true or too true, for effective rebuttal.

But now it's different.

Patrick Hayes, a concert manager, wants the world to know that no matter what national magazine may say, this is not a cultural boob.

Hayes' "you've nurtured" stories about proposals to build a 25-million-dollar national cultural center in Washington. "The money would be raised by public subscription, and would provide a spot where the best in music, ballet and plays could be presented.

In speaking of the center, one magazine, The Reporter, said: "Lord knows that Washington has a thinner cultural life than many other American cities of comparable size. Its culture is practically invisible by the standards of European cities."

Another magazine, Time, was even more blunt. It called Washington "a cultural backwater."

Most of us local culture lovers managed to remain calm in the face of these attacks, but not Hayes.

"I challenge anyone," Hayes said, "to name one city of comparable size in the United States which in a reasonable period of time would give Washington a thinner cultural life."

Well, that's something new, an argument over whether my city has more culture than your city.

But it does bring up a couple of points:

First, that despite those steady "center from capital" talk, this city has a lot of interests besides politics.

And, second, that for some reason, Washington from the start has been a target for all sorts of jibes.

Even such a fair observer as Alexis de Tocqueville, looking over the place more than 100 years ago, was saying saturnally: "The Americans have traced out the circuit of an immense city on the site where they intend to make their capital."

"According to them, it will one day contain a million inhabitants. They have already rooted up trees for 10 miles around and they should interfere with the future citizens of this linguistic metropolis," he said.

"They have erected a magnificent palace for congress in the center of the city and have given it the pompous name of the capitol."

Gold was discovered in Montana in 1861.

TUCKER'S NATIONAL WHIRLIGIG

WASHINGTON—Almost every tally of 1958 presidential election results shows a sharp cleavage between the choices of the politicians and the voters. The voters, for instance, generally elected Gov. Nelson Rockefeller for President, and such "wags" as members of congress, and the active figures in the national, state and local organizations, all generally believe they can predict what the voters will do.

Independents, however, and Republicans who are known to have not bid them too lightly, definitely favor the multimillionaire at Albany over the man who had to work his way through college.

LEADERS REGARD NIXON AS LOGICAL CHOICE—The voluntary Rockefeller-for-President club, now springing up in widely scattered places, has generally been organized by leaders of the Citizens-for-Eisenhower group of 1952. It was the Citizens-for-Eisenhower group which elected Dwight D. Eisenhower president for the nomination, although the Ohioan was known as "Mister Republican" and the favorite of the voters.

However, the two principal figures in that movement have said that they regard Nixon as a "logical" choice. One is Walter J. Reuther, Detroit's Mayor, who succeeded President Eisenhower as commander of the American ones in Germany, and the other is William F. Buckley, Jr., conservative leader of the National Review.

GRIND PLEASERS LEAD—If recent political history furnishes any evidence for the prediction that the party which controls the White House will have such precedents as Woodrow Wilson and Franklin D. Roosevelt can follow, the party in power today has a heavy burden to bear. It has two vice-presidential candidates, Wendell Willkie and President Eisenhower in the Republican camp.

It is true the party had to be the master politician of this bid. But he proved to be the master politician who got through the election. It is true he was advised by veteran strategists—Smith, Hogue, Ritchie, Baker, John W. Davis, Raabok, the late Mayor Walker and Ramsey John Curry, New York.

ROCKEFELLER STICKING TO STATE JOB—Although Gov. Rockefeller insists that he intends to stay in New York, he has not been asked to resign himself from 1960 consideration, he has not "taken a Sherman," who said that he would not run, if Governor Rockefeller would not run, if Governor Rockefeller would not run, if Governor Rockefeller would not run.

His advisers were inclined at first to discourage the formation of Citizens-for-Rockefeller clubs. Now, they are changing their minds. It is clear that the party is leaving the gates ajar. He has, however, declined hundreds of invitations to speak throughout the country, except for the Albany assignment.

But this is smart politics. He recognized that the party's greatest asset is the record of the executive of the nation's greatest state, merit serious consideration. He may turn out to be too liberal for the party, but he is not a Republican. He is an American with an excellent record.

However, his replies to "We want Rockefeller for President" are not as glowing as the Albany speech of his political secretary writes.

The governor has said that he has no interest in any presidential nomination for 1960. He has every intention to try to carry out the program he has outlined for the next four years.

TEST OF POPULARITY POSSIBLE—Both Rockefeller and Kennedy could test this theory of the politicians versus the people by trying their hand at the state, rather than the federal level. The Smith and the Fair Deal.

But the test of popularly is "favorite sons" and is at the local level—bars such dangerous rivalry by the senator. And the governor, in his state of New York, has a reputation as the state's top priority when on the vice president of the United States.

WHY DEMOCRATS GO WEST FOR CONVENTION

The Democratic convention is expected to meet in the far west, one year before that was in 1952. They nominated James Cox at San Francisco. He was the Ohio editor, then against another Ohioan, Senator Charles McNamara, and Oregon Governor, Sen. Warren G. Harding. Or maybe the country was the real loser.

But the convention is expected that the party would go west in 1960. It is all possible. And now they are going west not only because of the frosting that Los Angeles put on the party in 1952, but because of the party's printed programs and available Hollywood entertainment. More important were some political policies.

The Democrats have been making tremendous political strides in the west, an area long Republican in control. The Democrats hope to keep the trend going. A national convention, with its drama and publicity, may help win influence and support.

Here are a few facts—1958 poll-election—that make the point:

Over seven states are now represented in the United States senate by 17 Democrats and five Republicans.

Over 20 delegations in the house of representatives, Democrats control six, Republicans two, and there are evenly divided.

There are Democrats and five Republican governors in the area. However, Democrats control both houses of the legislature in eight states; in Nevada, but not in Wyoming. Democrats control the senate and Democrats the assembly.

And the Democrats are looking ahead. The far west is the area of greatest growth in the country. Take California, which has a Democratic governor and legislature for the first time in years. In 1952 it had 11 electoral votes. In 1956 it had 27. After the 1960 census it will have 39. Thirty-nine electoral votes are represented in the congress. This pulls it only a few votes west of New York.

And there's one other reason for the Democrats going to the West. Vice President Nixon comes from California. If he is elected, the Republican nomination—and whose chances are better—the Democrats will lose. And Nixon's political state away from him in the subsequent election will work to his disadvantage.

The Democratic convention in Los Angeles might help to accomplish this. Or at least the Democrats think it might.—Milwaukee Journal.

WASHINGTON

By PETER EDSON

WASHINGTON (UPI)—The new lower administration proposals to lower interest rates on rural electrification and housing loans were expected to hit some 13 million families with co-op members in a small way.

These measures will reduce government's cost of the co-op program by $4 million dollars here and there. But claims that they will yield hundreds of millions of dollars are exaggerated.

When REA and the co-op movement were getting their first big impetus, it was to help farmers get their special benefits and government money to help them get started.

So the government takes a loss on the money returned to REA coops. This explains the pressure to raise rates.

In addition to this, President Eisenhower has proposed to congress a 2.5 million dollar loan guarantee program.

REA loans for the fiscal year beginning next July are estimated at $1.5 billion.

Making Himself Miserable Is Art That Is Peculiar to Man

By HAL BOYCE

NEW YORK, March 3.—(UPI)—Curious comments of a "Parmentier" on his life are on hand that separates him from the other animals.

One argument is that higher industrial rates would raise co-op power rates. That plus having to contribute private capital to co-operate with and get control of co-ops.

Principal effect of the proposed price increase on the co-ops will be to raise the price of farm products and marketing services on which the co-ops receive a profit from co-ops taxable.

A 1934 department of agriculture survey indicated 105 million dollars of income received by 13 members.

FAR FROM PERFECT

Three recent near-collisions between commercial and military aircraft should give us cause for concern.

1. All pure jet flights at altitudes of 24,000 feet and over are under instrument flight plans, are under air traffic control guidance from the ground, and are monitored the way by radar.

2. On three great "skyways" coast to coast and 10 miles wide, all planes flying at altitudes from 15,000 to 22,000 feet are under "positive control." That means every aircraft in those zones flies an instrument plan, is directed from the ground, and is protected by a "cocoon" of air space.

3. Under a plan initiated last July by the airlines themselves, all commercial aircraft flying at altitudes 10,000 feet and over rely on instrument flight rules and place them under a "cocoon" of air space. It means them solid protection against each other, but not against business, private or military craft, which do not choose to follow the same rules.

4. At and near at least 40 busy U. S. military air bases, the heavy burden of military flying has been separated either geographically or procedurally (by allotting specific air channels) from commercial and other air traffic. More such plans are being worked up steadily.

In addition to all this, there is in service today substantially more radar, more traffic control equipment, more of other electronic devices and other personnel to operate these safeguards than existed in 1958.

What we need to know is whether there is any deliberate or accidental departure from flight plans; whether the military craft were or were not from "controlled" bases, whether or not they themselves had filed flight plans with the FAA.

What we need to know is whether there is any deliberate or accidental departure from flight plans; whether the military craft were or were not from "controlled" bases, whether or not they themselves had filed flight plans with the FAA.

INTRA-GOP ROW

The makings of a serious intra-party row are probably in the air following the appointment of Capitol Hill "modern Republicans" with the new senate-house leadership, and the administration's legislative and budgetary policies.

The Aiken-Cooper faction, for instance, favors a greater use of federal credit facilities than the 77 billion dollar budget permits. They advocate greater aid to home construction, education, hospitals, water power projects, highways, etc.

In these respects they do not differ too radically from many of the Rayburn-Johnson principles.

"Should" President Eisenhower veto many of these bills that unbalance the budget, they say, is the only question they consider themselves to be good party men, and would not want such a spectacular division to injure the GOP's future prospects.

With the new membership of the senate it will require a 66-vote majority to override. But a Republican senate is voted for Cooper against Dirksen for senate minority leader. It only two joined with the 64 Democrats, it would be enough for reversal of the presidential decision.

WINTER WONDER-LAND

People seem unable to be natural about the weather.

If they're enduring the bitter winds and snows, they're grinding their teeth in envy of their more fortunate brethren or they're out on little rages that indicate disbelief if they could be nice anywhere when it's bad for them.

This kind of attitude even shows up between sections up north which have varying degrees of snow. Many on the west coast telephones to a place 500 miles of "What you haven't got snow? You must have. I read in the paper that your state... Say, what're you trying to do, tell me that place is some kind of summer resort?"

The expert tells us weather is usually a pretty local affair. But about the only time a man really wants to believe that is when he's leaving for Florida or California the next day.

Lost Alaskan Reef Located On Sea Floor

WASHINGTON, March 3 (UPI)—The coast and geologic survey reported today it has located the mystery of the "vanished" Alaskan reef.

Back in 1879, Don Ignacio Arceles, a Spanish explorer, recorded a dangerous rocky shoal more than 10 miles off the northern shores of the Gulf of Alaska which could be seen a mile away. He named it Bajo Pamplona.

The coast survey put the Pamplona reef on a map made in 1927. The survey ship hadn't seen the shoal but assumed that the Russian and Spanish charts were right about it.

Later on, however, the coast survey took soundings, found no reef and geotied it was a myth, and removed it from the map.

Submarine hydrographers recently the coast and geologic survey discovered a submarine ridge 15 miles long at depths of 600 to 800 feet and concluded it was the old Pamplona shoal or reef.

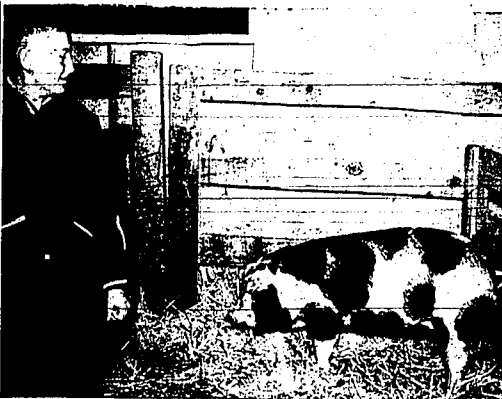

Apparently the old shoal was related to "mountain building" on the nearby coast. The mountains are the Chugach-St. Elias range.

Said the survey: "The Pamplona shoal disappeared—like a mountain base broke down—and sank 400 feet some time in the first half of the nineteenth century."

More More

SEATTLE, March 3 (UPI)—By actual count here yesterday, there were 366 taxpayers who want, or are willing, to pay more taxes.

They showed they were by signing a petition, asking them to "work for and back an increase in state taxes. It seemed necessary to the legislature to insure a full adult education program.

Spokesman for the taxpayers, revoluting against other taxpayers who want lower taxes is William C. Haggman. He heads a committee, aided by many Edison technical school students, who want to see legislation there'll be no curtailment of adult education.

Adams said 355 signatures had been obtained, and a batch of 274 had already been forwarded to Olympia.

Uncle Sam Has Had to Get Inflationary Type of Loan

WASHINGTON, March 3 (UPI)—The U. S. treasury is promoting inflation of the money supply just as surely as if it were printing paper greenbacks.

The treasury doesn't like this, of course, because it could lead to inflation of the whole economy. At the moment, however, it sees no clear way out.

Investor fears of raising interest rates and inflation have made it difficult—if not impossible—for Uncle Sam to borrow needed billions on a long-term basis, or even on an intermediate period like five years. As a result, he has had to concentrate on getting short-term loans which are much more inflationary.

Many of these loans, which come due in three months to three years, are raising coupons of greenbacks and they create a paradox. Uncle Sam has trouble getting long-inflationary long term loans, partly because of inflation fears, but also because of a short term basis and thus reinforces the very fears which are compounding his problem.

For Secretary of the Treasury Robert B. Anderson, this is a bitter irony. Anderson is so vocal a foe of inflation that Sen. Paul Douglas, D., Ill., recently accused him of being obsessed on the subject. The treasury chief is acutely aware that he, through his department, is helping to increase the inflation potential he decries.

Anderson has made a point of acquainting a number of recent visitors with the relationship between bank loans and inflation.

The secretary begins by asking the visitor's opinion on "monetization of the debt." He has found that a surprising number of government and business lenders are puzzled by the term. In such cases, he launches into a simple explanation.

Assume the treasury borrows a million dollars from a Washington bank. What is involved?

The treasury gives the bank a piece of paper—a government security—which may Uncle Sam has borrowed a million dollars and "I'll repay in 30 many years at a fixed rate of interest. Because the worth of this piece of paper is valued for by Uncle Sam, it assumes real value and is listed among the bank's assets.

On the liability side of the bank's ledger is written an offsetting entry. The bank sets up a new deposit of one million dollars against which the government can write checks to pay its bills.

Anderson asks, where did the bank get this million dollars? Did it take cash out of someone else's account and give it to the treasury?

The answer is that it got the money from no one. It created one million dollars worth of credit on the strength of the treasury's IOU.

At this point the visitor is apt to comment, "That's just like printing greenbacks, and I'm against that."

Carrying the illustration further, as soon as the government writes checks against that deposit, money which didn't exist before goes into circulation.

This is inflation of the money supply.

This picture could change for the worse this year, however, if the treasury continues to do most of its borrowing on a short term basis. The "greenbacks" could get out of hand.

Free Flow of News Termed Way to Peace

COLUMBIA, Mo., March 2 (AP)—The free flow of news between nations marks the way to peace, that was the point speaker at the World Press Congress hammered home today. They said both censorship and propaganda have been used to block understanding between people and nations.

Disentia, editor of Marriv at Tel Aviv in Israel, put it like this: "It is a sure thing that the flow of news across war-torn borders in the Middle East would be good for the world."

Disentia said that the flow of propaganda-infected news is a decisive factor in the perpetuation of enmity and hatred.

Good News Urged

He said a better and healthier atmosphere would be created if well-backgrounded news enabled the people to understand each other more fully.

Free access to the news is the big problem, Disentia said. Sometimes hidden censorship and indirect pressures such as prohibitive cable tolls hamper the flow.

Caution Sounded

While calling for better communication of news between countries by press and radio, some of the speakers sounded a note of caution. Chahel el Dine el Hama, secretary, editor-in-chief of Al Oumhouria at Cairo in the United Arab Republic, told the delegates yesterday they should be careful in interpreting events in other nations.

He said the free world press has a significant responsibility to report developments without blowing sensational interest to color the news.

The press congress is being held in connection with the 50th anniversary of the University of Missouri school of Journalism, the first of its kind in the world.

Blowing Soil For Plains Is Not Forecast

WASHINGTON, March 3 (UPI)—Extensive soil blowing is not likely to occur in the Great Plains this season except in a few widely scattered areas, the agriculture department reported today.

The department said a total of 975,000 land acres were in condition to blow as of Feb. 11 in 1958. This total blow area was about 10 per cent smaller than on the same date a year ago.

It compared with a recent high of 2,114,000 blow area acres on Feb. 1, 1957.

In general, the soil moisture and cover conditions in the Great Plains continued favorable," the department said. No severely damaging windstorms occurred during January and none have occurred this season, the department added.

But, the department said 4,000 acres of crops have been destroyed as of Feb. 1, nearly half of which was reported in Wyoming. This compared with 83,000 acres a year ago.

*States with the largest estimated acres of land in condition to blow were three million acres for Texas, 1,500,000 acres for Montana, and 1,200,000 acres for Colorado.

Other states and total land acres in condition to blow; Kansas, 748,000; New Mexico 114,000; Oklahoma, 408,000; Nebraska, 343,000; North Dakota, 610,000; South Dakota, 344,000; and Wyoming, 400,000.

Death Due to Radiation Is Result

WASHINGTON, March 3 (UPI)—The atomic energy commission said today that the recent radiation death of a technician at the Los Alamos (N.M.) laboratory resulted from an accident "directly attributable" to the victim's own errors.

The technician, 38-year-old Cecil W. Kelley, died Jan. 1, just 48 hours after receiving a radiation dose of 1,000 rads when his plutonium in solution suddenly became reactive.

An investigation team found that "the accident was directly attributable to errors on the part of the deceased operator during a series of transfers of plutonium and organic solutions between containers in a chemical plutonium recovery process."

The team added, however, that the accident "might have been prevented" if the safety system at Los Alamos had "required closer supervision to insure that normal procedures were followed."

The AEC said Los Alamos is taking steps to keep similar accidents from happening in the future.

Plutonium in solution in a 25-gallon tank "went critical"—that is, started to fission—when Kelley added a stirring motor. Two other operators who went to help were not seriously irradiated because the reaction automatically ended itself.

Kelley was the third similar death in the U.S. atomic project since its beginning.

Pole Campers Popular; One Nears Record

NEW YORK, March 3 (UPI)—One of the world's longest pole camps is enjoying a mild resurgence.

The pole camps, which were widespread in the 1920s, are having a moment of revival in the mountains of Idaho.

In Indianapolis, for instance, a pole camp has been organized into its seventh month, headed toward a new record. She has pole camped 71 feet above ground in Indiana, since last Aug. 15. She aims to stay up there until the end of the year, coming down at 9 a.m. March 14—by derrick, same way she got up.

She's Mauri Rose Kirtor, 17. If she can sit it out that long, it will give her 210 pole days and make her the new champ. The present record, set last May at 193 days, was by a woman in Washington, Wash., is 202 days. Miss Kirby is scheduled to equal that next Friday.

She sees no reason why she can't stick it out—having come this far, through recurring colds such as a 75-mile-an-hour windstorm that set her polepost shakily oscillating in dreadful arcs.

She also has survived an abscessed molar that "just about killed her" for three days and, incidentally, pulled the offending tooth. He was delivered to the patient's side by five department aerial ladder.

Room Is Small!

The glider's "hot" room to work in. Her pole-house floor is only one yard square, and besides the table, she has a radio, a television set, radio, telephone, electric heater and various knick-knacks. Miss Kirby carries a small, portable woman's flapjacket record book.

She says she has been up there for seven months of pregnancy there.

The national records for flapjacket sitting are based on climbing of stiffs as recorded in newspapers. There doesn't seem to be any clear-cut flapjacket sitting records, but the national records for flapjacket sitting are based on climbing of stiffs as recorded in newspapers.

New Equipment Explained to Guild

Operation of a $700 cardiac defibrillator and pacemaker, purchased by the Magic Valley Memorial Hospital, is explained by Dr. Lyle E. Wendlerich, hospital cardiologist, to Mrs. Claude Dettweiler, chairman of the hospital's surgical research committee. Heart fibrillation, erratic spasms-like movements of the heart, stopping the flow of blood to the body, results in death unless the heart can be made to pump regularly again.

New Device Is Purchased by Hospital Guild and Unveiled at Unit's Meeting

A $700 cardiac defibrillator and pacemaker was unveiled Monday morning for members of the Magic Valley Memorial Hospital Guild.

The machine was purchased by the guild with funds raised through the organization's annual fall benefit ball.

Explaining the machine's operation was Dr. Charles Collins, hospital cardiologist, considering the application of the defibrillator, which is used to stop the flow of blood to the body, results in death unless the heart can be made to pump regularly again.

The defibrillator is used to send a strong electric current through the heart, stopping all heart movement. Once heart movement has ceased, drugs or massage can be used to stimulate the heart into regular beating.

The pacemaker also can be used to stimulate the heart into regular beating.

Dr. Collins and Dr. Lyle E. Wendlerich, another hospital cardiologist, considering the application of the defibrillator, which is used to stop the flow of blood to the body, results in death unless the heart can be made to pump regularly again.

Testimony Meet Held at Wendell

Farm Plan Is At Standstill In Congress

WASHINGTON, March 3 (UPI)—Congress is moving into its third week with no progress made on farm program legislation.

This situation reflects a sharp division of opinion as to what should be done to improve the agricultural situation. No one group appears to have enough strength to force through measures.

Time is limited insofar as wheat is concerned. This crop, with its mounting surplus, is considered to be the No. 1 farm problem child.

Present law requires the agricultural department to announce terms of the 1960 wheat program by May 1. The present program encompasses planting allotments, marketing quotas and price supports between 75 and 90 per cent of parity.

Quotas must be approved by two-thirds of the growers voting in a referendum, which probably will be held in June.

Support for the 1959 crop, which for the 1959 crop, undoubtedly will be set—probably there is a change in the law—the total minimum of 75 per cent of parity.

Many prefer quotas.

Many farm-state congressmen appear to like the idea of shifting to a two-way payment type of farm program. They would do away with present price support and instead purchase. They would supplement growth returns from crops with federal payments.

But the Eisenhower administration opposes such a plan. It wants to lower price support loans and gradually eliminate controls.

Mothers' Meets

Sleep Is Never So Precious As When It Won't Come!

by Martha Morgan

Mothers' Meets

I could not get to sleep last night and as I lay there I recalled something Mary's boy said to me once by night out from sleep. He was sitting in bed and he said "I wish I could sleep like you do." I said "You can't sleep like I do because you're not a mother." He said "I wish I could sleep like you do." I said "You can't sleep like I do because you're not a mother." He said "I wish I could sleep like you do." I said "You can't sleep like I do because you're not a mother."

Last night I was sure he was right. But coming from a boy who has yet to spend a sleepless night and from annoying their rather thoughtful. The trouble is that too often it takes nights of sleep before we really appreciate sleep.

Last Christmas we received a holiday wish and read the words "May you have work for your days and sleep for your nights." What a full wish that really is!

Ordinarily the best sleeping pill for me is to flip on the bed lamp and read the paper. I feel well last night and I couldn't risk making him. So I lull myself to sleep by planning that I'd save Mary and Bill and the four children Saturday for our family night. I decided they'd be going off to sleep on Hamburgers-on-a-Stick.

First thing this morning I hunted up the recipe. And sure enough, it's a Morning Milk recipe. I don't even remember how moist and juicy the hamburger balls remained and how fervid and flavorful they were with a bit of crumbling. That's what Morning Milk does for hamburgers or meat loaf.

If I read the recipe over the former Robert Mitchell, I'd be perfect for our family supper together.

HAMBURGER-ON-A-STICK

1/2 cup (small can) undiluted MORNING MILK
1 egg
1 1/2 pounds ground beef
1/2 cup cracker crumbs
1/2 teaspoon salt
1/2 teaspoon pepper
2 tablepoons grated onion
1 cup chopped green pepper
24 tomato slices or 24 pineapple slices
12 slice onion slices

Blend all ingredients except tomato slices and onion together until well-mixed and smooth. Mix 24 small balls from meat mixture. Put tomato slice (or pineapple chunk), hamburger roll, the former Robert Mitchell, tomato slice (or pineapple) on each 12 stick. Bake 5 minutes at 350 degrees. Make 6 servings.

Later in life Napoleon said sleep had become a luxury—he wouldn't exchange for all the treasure in the world.

Please bear with us just a few more days. In the meantime, however, our store will be open for business as usual. We're all cluttered up and things are generally in a "mess", but new merchandise has been arriving constantly and we've no place to put it! You'll make substantial savings on brand new furniture if you buy right now!
