Times-News Public Forum - Voice of the Reader

He Likes Editorial Treatment Of "Liberty," Urges Thinking

Editor, Times-News: I will read the Times-News to commend you on the wonderful way in which you handled "Liberty" in your editorial in last Friday's paper.

I can detect you have woven into your editorial thoughts that should be considered by us as well. Mr. Tucker, in his column in the same paper, considers some phase of this our government can serve us better than private enterprise. The content of these two articles appealed to me to thinking.

Greene, I believe, historians tell us, was an example of an almost true democracy. Rome was great in its day and presume we can appreciate something in that generation. Several recent writers are drawing our attention to the conditions which created the deterioration of these great countries. They contend, and rightly so, there exists a parallel to our own civilization at this moment.

When one considers carefully the conditions where we could have true liberty would be a spot where there was the only inhabitant. The only other member above the air we breathe, the ground we stand on, the food available, but more give us the obligation of our fellowmen.

To be free, we must be alone. We should not because of the ever present possibility of loving liberty, expect of others to give us the things we should do for ourselves.

Displeasure Is Noted Over Handling of 'Thietten Case'

Editor, Times-News: I have never taken part in partisan politics. However, I am interested in the actions of Mr. Larsen and Mr. Lancaster, our present commissioners, because I remember last fall in the campaign there was talk of one-man rule. Now it appears that the man they were talking about was an elected commissioner.

WOMAN Mr. Larsen and Mr. Lancaster explain why they told the deputy clerk to keep the resolution that they adopted secret? And furthermore, why is it necessary to have the Democratic chairman speak for them when talking about county business?

The weed problem has been with us a long time in our county, and much heady has been made in curing it. To remove an experienced force at this time, doesn't appear to me to be serving the best interests of our county.

Mr. Larsen and Mr. Lancaster, would you explain this without the help of some politician?

I was one of a group of farmers who met with the commissioners to discuss the weed problem, and to have. We should not expect someone else to build our house, our school house, to take care of us when we are in financial need, to keep us when we are past our productive years. Rather, we should be frugal to the extent we can take care of our own obligations. This is as important as to meet our obligations to our fellowmen who also can expect his liberty.

Each and everyone of us, today, must watch our own personal affairs. We must keep ourselves financially solvent, we must see that neither we nor any member of our family becomes dependent on someone else. We must live within our means. This places on us the responsibility of being as careful of government as the custodial expenditures and controls as though we paid or prorated them—ourselves.

The last paragraph in your editorial applies to us in our several generations old freedom as well as the new groups. It should be repeated again and again by every true American citizen.

"But there is no miracle upon Earth that can do away with the mental and moral disciplines, to think, to learn, to submit to mental and moral disciplines, to live ourselves fully, utilizing every-where, in the high privileges of living fully as free men."

Assessor of Ada County Praised Over Gas Stand

Editor, Times-News: I want to pay Roy B. Leonardson, Ada county assessor, on the back, I believe every person in the state of Idaho should do the same. For the courage and knowledge that he is bringing to light on the enormous price that the oil firms are getting out of the people by charging more for gas than it costs to bring the gas to the pump.

One of his articles or quoted that the oil company expenses he has come out for the gas industry to go under the supervision of the utility commission, and I receive with him 100 per cent.

People of the state should get behind the assessor and boost him in this fight, financially, morally, and any way that may be responsible. I believe that communism is a dangerous thing in this country, but "monopolism" can be just as dangerous.

W. N. HEAD (Bellevue)

Support of Chamber Urged in Tribute to Founding Fathers

Editor, Times-News: Anyone wishing to pay tribute to the founding fathers and those who assisted in framing our government, should swing in behind our local Chamber of Commerce which is sponsoring the Present resolution.

The resolution is the answer to the question so many are asking today: "What has become of all the money? Here in the resolution is the simplest explanation we have had."

Six out of five men at a public hearing table with a house man running the game, give each man 500 pennies and they will start playing a penny a card with the house man (dummy) taking a small percentage out of each pot.

If the players confine themselves to a penny a card the game will last for several hours, but when someone starts pumping the game up to a dollar a card and the dummy dragging the same percentage, the game will soon break up and the dummy will have most of the money.

Now turn to national gambling and we have Walter Reuther pumping up the game with high prices, dollar a card, and the dummy (federal income tax) taking for the house (government). A man who is earning $5 an hour gives the dummy $1 out of his hourly wage. In communities where the highest wages have been paid for the past several years, we find the least money in circulation per capita and the most unemployment. Look at New York, Massachusetts, Michigan, Washington, Oregon and California.

Turn to your figures on foreign aid, where the money has gone. Foreign aid has cost the American taxpayer more than all vanquished nations have paid for indemnity since history was written.

Years ago an old mining engineer discovered a fungus growing in Russia that would exterminate Christianity if allowed to spread. He also discovered that it had to have foreign aid to exist. When he was running the mining camp he saw that the fungus had to go into Russia and the fungus began to wither on the vine.

A bunch of many doctors convinced the stockholders that a promoting engineer could make the mine pay bigger dividends, so they let the old miner go and hired a promoting engineer who had a "good reason" for "bad" spirit and waste. When this promoter took charge he ordered the miners to start drifting foreign aid to Russia. That revived the fungus and it has been spreading ever since.

Rupert Fan Says Jerome Won Tourney Spot "Fair, Square"

Editor, Times-News: Congratulations to Jerome for winning a berth in the state tournament. They won it fair and square and certainly their coach and team should be commended for winning from Minico Friday night.

There is one thing I have noticed about Jerome teams. Their ideal game would be to get the ball on the topoff, make a basket, then stall the remainder of the game out. I wonder what would happen to basketball if every team played this way.

I can remember a few years back when Rupert had a coach who believed in this style of play. You could go to the gymnasium at any time of the game and get the best seat in the house. Then a fine gentleman and coach came to Rupert. Coach George Hays, who instituted the fast break style of play. After this type of play was introduced, you had to wait in line sometimes for two hours to get a seat.

Frank heaven all coaches do not believe in slow, deliberate and dull type of basketball. If everyone played this way, I am afraid no one would go to high school basketball and it would have to be discontinued.

I think the high school coaches should adopt the same rule the pros have adopted. The team must shoot within 25 seconds after getting the ball or lose it to the opposing team. This would be a great

Improvement to high school basketball

I do not want to sound like a poor sport. I just hate to see a ball game won by stalling out the clock. I think it ruins the game for most people.

JIM PRIESTEN (Rupert)

P. B. Jerome did a fine job of playing the deliberate type of ball. It was smart basketball, by their coach. They beat us and the game was possible. I don't mean this as sarcasm. They played a fine game.

Drunken Driving Counts Reviewed By Valley Writer

Editor, Times-News: I read in the Times-News that Donald Nelson of Stamps, was fined $100 and given a 15-day jail for the same offense. A Fairfield wheat farmer was fined $100 for drunken driving plus a 15-day jail sentence.

In Gooding county two men were arrested for being drunk on the public highway and involved in an accident in which an 8-year-old girl was killed. One man was on probation and the other man was given one year in jail.

And a man was arrested in Glenn Ferry by the state police and charged for drunken driving. He was fined $300 with $200 remitted and had his driver's license revoked for only 30 days. Yet our ally legislator voted for 15 months state policemen to arrest drunken drivers, and our courts charge the charge against drunken driving to a lesser crime.

Deadline for Dog License Is April 30

Twin Falls city residents were reminded Saturday by Mrs. Constance Leier, city clerk, that dog licenses expire April 30. All dogs kept in the city must be licensed and registered if the dog is five months old or over. License fee is $1 for male or spayed female animals, and $7 for unspayed female. It is necessary to provide a certificate of a veterinarian stating that a dog has been spayed, unless it has been previously licensed as such in the city. A tag or certificate from a veterinarian is also required to indicate the dog has been inoculated with anti-rabies vaccine.

The owners are required to provide a collar to which the license must be attached, and keep it on the dog at all times. If the tag is lost or destroyed, a duplicate will be issued upon presentation of the license fee for the current year, and the payment of 50 cents. The city ordinance requires that owners of any dog must have the animal vaccinated by the time it is five months old and every two years thereafter on the anniversary date of the first vaccination provided the vaccine used is of the chick-embryo type. Two-Day School Is Held Here On Tractor-Use, Maintenance

Do's and don'ts of tractor operation and maintenance plus a number of do-it-yourself projects made up a two-day school for 4-11 leaders and junior leaders in Twin Falls Friday and Saturday.

The clinic was conducted by Donald Youz, extension agricultural agent, Ray Sheffield, Salt Lake City, company sales manager, and Hugh McLean, Twin Falls, assistant sales manager, consumer branch. About 25 leaders and junior leaders of the area were present.

Formerly the schools have been held only once in the state, for all leaders who could attend. A new plan is being tried this year, with area schools in several parts of the state, McLean said. Since less travel time is involved, more leaders are turning out for the area schools.

"Safety in the use of tractors, fuel and lubricating oils are emphasized at the school. Instances of local tractor accidents were cited and dangerous but common practices in tractor operation pointed up.

CALIFORNIA PHILLIES BEAT VIRGINIA 71-70 FOR NCAA CROWN

New Champions Use Tap-in By Imhoff to Offset Late Splurge by Mountaineers

LOUISVILLE, Ky., March 21 (UPI)—A California team playing old-fashioned basketball with old-fashioned courage beat West Virginia's late rally on a tap-in shot by Darrall Imhoff to score a 71-70 victory for the NCAA basketball tournament championship. It was "defense that won for the Bears" but it was courage and poise that saved it when West Virginia, led by Al America Jr., came from six points behind in the final three minutes and nearly pulled it out.

West Virginia, trailing 62-61, began its late charge when West was fouled by Bob Dalton with 3:26 to go. West missed its first free throw but made his second. Dalton then sank a corner shot to make it 67-62.

Ronnie Retton, West Virginia's point-guard, came out and sank two free throws but Bill McClintock related with a rebound and the Bears still had a five-point lead 69-64 with five minutes to go. The police which carried the Bears into the final cracked a little tactical and Denny Fitzpatrick fouled Bucky Byard, who sank three free throws with a minute to go.

St. John's Whips Bradey to Take NIT Hoop Crown

NEW YORK, March 21 (AP)—St. John's won an unprecedented third National Invitation basketball tournament today with a dramatic 76-71 uphill overtime victory over Bradley. The Redmen from New York put on the greatest second-half rally after falling behind by 12 points at the end of regulation time.

A crowd of 12,000 in the Madison Square Garden arena watched when St. John's, coached by Dr. Fred Schaefer, overcame a 12-point deficit in the overtime period. The game was tied 44-44 at the end of regulation time.

But in the final minutes of the overtime period, St. John's scored four points in the last 30 seconds to take the lead. The game was tied 44-44 at the end of regulation time.

Sawyer Says Phillies May Have Found Help

CLEARWATER, Fla., March 21 (AP)—Eddie Sawyer thinks his Philadelphia Phillies have helped themselves where they hurt most—second base and catching—in their efforts to escape from the National League cellar. "Our new catcher," said the scholarly sportswriter, "is a man who managed the Phillies to their last pennant in 1950."

Sports FROM ALL ANGLES

THE New York Yankees have re-established Idaho as a basketball hotbed with the appointment of Carl Ketter, Twin Falls, as a scout.

Ketter, a former professional pitcher and semi-pro player-manager, will scout in the Twin Falls area, especially in the southern areas this summer.

"This job will be strictly on a commission basis," Ketter said. "I will be paid the first two weeks of three seasons."

Ketter says he will be appointed by the club's president, Harry Anderson, in the next few days.

Ketter began his baseball career in the Midwest and was signed by the New York Yankees out of the San Joaquin league in Kansas, where he lost only three decisions in more than 100 games.

He played the first year for Newport, compiling a 21-8 record including two no-hitters. In the space of 10 days the following year, 1942, he was promoted to the Piedmont league and then joined the service and was discharged in 1946.

Instead of returning to pro ball, Ketter joined the local business community as sports director for the company. As a player-manager, he guided Coors' semi-pro team to the National semi-pro tournament in 1947 and 1949, getting fourth in 1947.

The company discontinued its sports program the following year and Ketter left the game. However, he has been coaching the Twin Falls city "Knights" league the past few years.

In addition to joining the scouting staff of the Yankees, Ketter is interested in the formation of a semi-pro league in Idaho. He recently received a letter from Raymond Dumont, president of the National Semi-Pro association offering him the co-misanship of Idaho.

"I would definitely be interested in becoming co-manager of this semi-pro league in this area and Idaho if it is possible for me to remain in Twin Falls, Ketter said.

"I should see no reason why Idaho shouldn't be able to send a good representative team to the tournament each year," he added.

The Kimberly Bulldogs are no longer in the regional double A tournament but coach John B. Kimbly's underclassmen turned in two good performances.

Pocatello Trounces Caldwell by 65-46 in Triple A Regional Finals

7-Point Margin Early in Final Quarter Pays Off; Beavers Cop Consolation

Jerome, March 21—The Grace Red Devils, champions of the fifth district, won tonight's opening section final and midweek knockout for the Southern Idaho class AA regional championship Saturday night. David May scored 10 points in the first quarter and a total of 24 during the wide-open game. May, Stan Hinzte with 17, and Dale McKinley with 13 accounted for all but five of Mackay's points.

Larry Uptegrove posted 10 points for Notus, while Bob Fivest counted 10.

Mackay entered the final quarter with a 47-23 lead. Though Mackay had no field goals in the last period, McKinley scored 13 of his 13 free throws as Notus began leading heavily.

McKinley, Uptegrove and Fivest all fouled out in the consolation melee.

Caldwell beat Richfield 47-47 in consolation honors.

Caldwell led by only one point at the quarter but boomed its margin to coach in comfortable. Carl Larson of Council and Larry Stubbs of Richfield shared scoring honors with 23 each.

Richfield had gained the consolation finals by knocking off its fourth district opponent, Murchough, 45-39.

The Red Devils jumped to an early lead but Richfield rallied from midway through the fourth quarter.

Fourth district champion Raft River was dropped out of contention by council 45-41. Again the fourth district team was on top until the last period but couldn't hold the margin.

Tigers Trade Francona for Larry Doby

LAKELAND, Fla., March 21 (AP)—The Detroit Tigers traded outfielder Tito Francona to the Cleveland Indians in a straight swap for veteran slugger Larry Doby tonight.

The trade obviously was a quick reply to a demand two days ago that the 35-year-old Francona that he be used as a regular or traded to another club.

He said "I'm a time I found out where I stand."

The deal brings more long lead power to the Detroit club, which is long on pitching but woefully inadequate in run production.

Doby, 24, played only about half the time last season with the Indians and saw considerable service at a pinch hitter. He hit 13 home runs, drove in 45 and batted .283.

Deer Herd to Capacity of Winter Range Urged in South Hills Area

Bitterbrush plants are a big factor in determining the number of deer that can be supported by deer range in the south hills. Tom Phillips measures current growth after a plant has been used earlier. Red-plastic-alike-in-crowns-mark-particular plants. Sample branches are marked with numbered ear tags. Recent widespread damage by mice may result in death of some bitterbrush plants, thus introducing another factor into the deer herd study. (Forest service photo—staff engraving)

BY CHARLES L. DAUGHERTY
 Former Supervisor, Southwest National Forest

It seems to me we should strive to maintain the south hills deer herd up to the full number which the winter range will support in a healthy condition.

To strive for less than this may deprive us of good hunting to which all are entitled. To try for more can lead to a deteriorating range with subsequent heavy winter losses of deer. With the complex problems involved at present, including heavy mouse damage to prime browse plants, I would not want to say what this number should be.

The game hunting in Idaho has expanded to the point where it must be considered as a highly important activity both from the standpoint of the business it creates and the outdoor recreation it provides. It is estimated by those in the best position to make such estimates that in 1940 man-days spent in such hunting in Idaho totaled 72,000 with the result that 2,300 deer and 1,000 elk were killed. In 1958 the estimates show 450,000 man days spent with 24,000 deer and 3,500 elk taken.

In many ways this is an increase of 532 per cent. This is a most impressive increase. Has much further can this fine sport, with its incidental business activity, be expanded? There is no simple answer to that question because, involving the state as a whole, it takes many complex problems each of which is not easy to solve.

Here in Magic Valley there is considerable interest in several elk and deer herds, each of which must be considered separately because each presents a different set of problems. To find the answers to these problems requires much on-farm study, by competent men—and much co-operative effort by the land managing agencies, the state game department and sportsmen.

A vast number of people, both men and women, who are for big game hunting sooner or later come to consider themselves as experts in the field of big game management. This writer is one of them. Even though all who are sportsmen and take part in the sport of big game hunting are not experts, it is the American right to have of oneself as such. Furthermore, all such folks hold fast to the privilege of saying what they think about the problems involved and their solutions.

One of the deer herds in Magic Valley which has the highest interest of the public in general is the Cassia deer herd, often referred to as the south hills herd. It is a most important one, not only to local people but to many from across the state and zone from other states.

In discussing this herd it seems well to review its history and the history of the range which must support it on a year-long basis. Also, it is interesting to take a look at what has been done in the overall management of the herd. This should include the numbers present in the early days, the trend in numbers since that time and the animals killed in different years and the numbers which can be maintained in a healthy condition on this range available to the herd.

In the 1880's it is reported that big game was plentiful in this area. White-tailed deer and antelope were found in the lowlands and along the streams while deer were found in the mountains, as they are now, but no doubt came into the lowlands for winter feed. A few bighorn sheep and a few elk were found here also.

About 10 years later the bighorn sheep, elk and most of the bear had disappeared. The mule deer were still here in large numbers and no doubt wintered in part on hands which are now in farms.

By 1897 big game was spoken of as being pretty well depleted. Since there is no record of big game census being taken since as is done now it is difficult to tell even approximately how many deer were here at that time but it does seem evident that there had been a considerable decrease in numbers.

In 1909 the area which now holds the Cassia deer herd was closed to hunting by the Idaho fish and game commissioner. This portion in Twin Falls county was opened (Continued on Page 19, Column 1)

Canyon Club Covers 86 Acres Along Snake River

Canyon Club Notes Much Progress Since Work Started Back in 1954

The Canyon club has come a long way since its rather humble beginning in 1954.

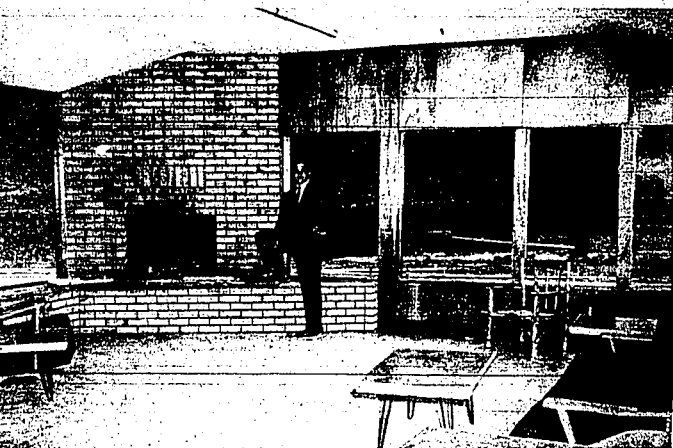

Since then members of the growing club have transformed 86 acres of rocky, rolling land between the north canyon rim and Snake river immediately above Shoshone falls into a bustling 55-member family club.

Until now the club has mainly appealed to those interested in fishing and water sports and those who simply want to have membership in a private club where they can have picnic or whatever strikes their fancy.

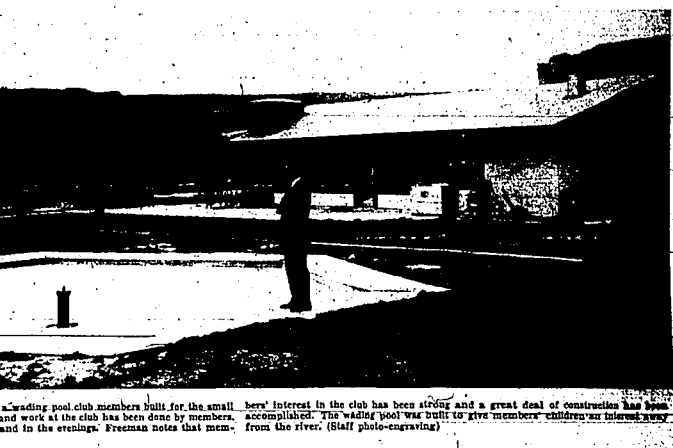

Now the club members are busy laying out a golf course. Soon they will begin seeding the greens. They are starting with a seven-hole course. Eventually they will enlarge it into a regular nine-hole course.

Karl Freeman, Twin Falls, one of the club's directors, sparked the idea for the club in 1953. By 1954 he had gathered a small group of local persons interested in forming a club that would offer facilities for water skiing, fishing, boating, swimming, picnic and golfing.

They were interested in creating a club that would offer something to everyone in the family since the beginning of the club

The fireplace also opens on the large patio south of the clubhouse. In a few weeks furniture will arrive for the clubhouse and it will be completely finished and ready for family parties. Remembered on Her 87th Birthday

Catholic Women Sponsor Old Folks Cake Project

One of the most cheerful clubs in Twin Falls is sponsored by the Catholic Women's League.

Since Oct. 1, the 160-member league, as part of its civic activity program, has been baking birthday cakes and taking them to patients at Horton's Nursing Home.

According to Mrs. Lonnie Rodgers, co-chairman of the project, the league members have baked and presented 37 cakes to date.

Each time a patient has a birthday, a league member bakes the cake and it is presented to the patient either by the person who baked it or by Mrs. Rodgers.

This is one of the League's 1659 projects. So far, it has been very popular with the patients and will probably be continued indefinitely, according to Mrs. Rodgers.

For many of the patients the birthday cake is the first time they have received birthday greetings in years. Many of them have no relatives or friends, outside of the other patients at the home.

"The patients are appreciative. One old fellow cried and held onto my hand and tried to thank me when I left," Mrs. Rodgers says. Later, one of the nurses told her that it was probably the first time he had been wished a happy birthday in 50 years.

Mrs. Rodgers has taken cakes to the home so often she has been nicknamed by one patient who calls her "Cakes."

Mrs. Rodgers notes that, even the aged and sick patients receive cakes and even if they can't speak they seem to know and appreciate the cake and the gesture.

Sometimes the patients take the cake to dinner with them and share it with other patients at the home.

"Happy Birthday." Other patients prefer to share it with just a few intimate friends.

Some of the patients are weight conscious and puzzle over how to deal with the high-calorie cake. But whatever the problems posed, all are thrilled with the cake and the resultant attention.

Mrs. Audrey Lilly, supervisor of nurses at the home, says, "I think this is a wonderful project. It's a little thing but it means so much."

She adds, "It makes the people on the outside realize they are here. It doesn't take much to make these people happy."

"Just knowing that people have remembered them" really helps. When one person gets a cake, it improves the spirit of the entire group.

During the past week the league delivered three cakes to patients, Belle Glingrich, 87, and Ellen Chucky Eden, 74, on Tuesday, and Robert Lamborn, 71, Wednesday.

"Tomorrow league members will deliver cakes to Mrs. Carrie Chancer and Edward Parr. Mrs. Chancer will be 65 and Parr will be 75."

The way the patients react to the cake varies. Some of them have to keep their birthday a secret, seemingly unaware that their age is on record in the office. Others have simply forgotten that it is their birthday. Sometimes they (Continued on Page 19, Column 4)

Life in MAGIC VALLEY

A project that started out with a father to provide wholesome activity for his own boys has tripped into a neighborhood community sports program. Robert Haddock, SHOBOHNE, finds himself assisted by a number of other Shobohone citizens now in the project.

Baseball has been in swing all winter, with fourth, fifth and sixth grade boys meeting at the high school gymnasium two nights a week—under arrangements and supervision of Haddock assisted by William Thompson and Richard Hanson. Seventh and eighth graders meet two other nights a week under direction of Tom Betts and Clyde Hildebrand.

Haddock said around 45 boys turned out for practice this winter. The men who coach of them don't pretend to be coaches, but they are able to keep the group together and have fun directing the boys. Baseball has been played two years. Practice begins in the fall and continues until the first of school in the fall.

Though the men intended to coach only boys 10 to 12 years of age, the boys turned out from 6 years and up and they were pleased to play.

Next baseball season, Haddock said, they hope to divide the group with 13 to 15-year-olds in one team and 16 to 17 in another. Eventually they hope to bring the boys ages 16 and 17 into the play.

Baseball seasons are held about six times a week in addition to games. Regular games are played with teams from other communities and the local boys also entered the state tournament. Tony Bellis, Ralph Villers and Clyde Rapp assisted Haddock with baseball coaching in the past.

For an unpaid recreation leader, Haddock states he has turned out to be about the "best paid" director in the area. The city provided equipment for the boys last summer and gave Haddock a gift as reward for the recreation work.

Then the Shobohone Rotary club, hearing of his work, gave him a six-month invitation to Rotary luncheons and to top it all off, and as the best surprise of all, Haddock and his wife were presented a set of Motmac dinnerware with service for 12 as a Christmas gift.

Thirty-four boys and started the card, all among those who played ball.

Haddock is the father of four boys and three girls with two of his own participating in the sports program he directs.

He feels that it is pay enough in itself and then there is the "fringe benefit" so to speak, as one of his daughters attends almost every practice and promises to give the boys a run for the championship.

Jerusalem was the stronghold of the Jewish faith, the day of which, long ago, feastically rode into it. They Have Tantrums Toughest Queries About Children Note Behavior

By EDWIN P. JOHNSON (Written for NIDA Service)

The hardest questions I receive about children deal with behavior tantrums.

For example, one grandmother has recently asked what to do about a "tantrum" in a young child.

It is, of course, the rule for youngsters to want to have their own way. Indeed, this is not confined to children. However, the situation is somewhat extreme.

For the present, a combination of firmness, being sure that one is not denying the youngster something merely for the sake of denial and efforts made to distract his attention to something else are about all one can do.

Another grandmother is troubled about a "tantrum" in a young child that all the boy does is talk and

Winter Range in South Hills Holds Key to Deer Herd; Much Study Devoted to Needs of Deer, Domestic Stock

Another type of browse study is illustrated by this photo of the Rugburn "enclosure" in the south hills. A deer-light fence is located on the left and a cow-light fence is on the right. (Forest service photo—staff engraving)

This is a typical key area on the Cassia deer winter range. It is located near what is known as the lower Rock creek browse tract. Darker plants on side of hill are bitterbrush, one of the most important parts of the deer diet. The condition and availability of browse plants in winter range largely determine the size of the deer herd. (Forest service photo—staff engraving)

He Urges South Hills Deer Herd at Healthy Capacity of Winter Range

to hunting of deer, either sex, in 1929 and 1930. Other than this, the area was closed to hunting until 1935. During the two years of open season it is estimated by forest service and state game officials that from 1,900 to 1,700 deer were killed. It was then reported that the herd was practically extinct in Twin Falls county.

No real studies were made of the area until 1936 when CCC agents and other emergency employees were used to make a preliminary survey. The total number estimated in the herd at that time was 7,500 head.

In 1935 the state game department opened this area to hunting by issuing a certain number of permits for one deer each. This was 2,000 in 1935 and 1936 and 1937 the area was opened to hunting without the special permits. In 1938 the special permit system was put into effect again.

The first year of these hunts by special permit only 100 permits were issued. This number was increased to 6,500 in 1938. It was then reduced to 6,200 in 1939. After the open hunts in 1936 and 1937, the special permits again were issued with 2,000 being issued in 1938. The hunting area was then expanded to include Three Creek.

The number of deer killed during these special hunts ranges from 100 head in 1932 to a high of 4,863 in 1932. These numbers went down after that time and in the 1936 and 1937 open hunts there were 2,000 and 2,072 taken, respectively. In 1938 when 2,000 permits were issued the deer kill was 4,810.

It is considered that no reliable figures are available on the size of this herd before 1933. In that year counts were made which indicate a total population of 11,000 deer. This number varied slightly in 1934 when the counts indicated it had increased to 20,000 head. From that time there has been a decrease in the number to the point where it is now estimated to have 7,500 head.

Investigation at these total numbers it should be pointed out that actual winter counts are made on the Rock Creek which is thought to have about one-fourth of the total herd. These counts are made by forest service and state game department personnel.

This information presents a fairly clear and reasonably accurate picture of how big this herd of deer was when man first settled here. How big it has been since that time to its size at present. The census figures obtained since actual counts were started are thought to be pretty accurate. Before that time one can make only estimates on the basis of information available.

Most people will agree that a big game herd should be managed on the basis of the natural winter food supply available to it. If this is done the need for artificial feeding or heavy game losses will be avoided. With this in mind, it is well to take a close look at the winter range which must support this herd.

It is difficult to say with any degree of accuracy just how much winter range is available to a herd of 7,500 head. For the Cassia deer herd a rough estimate is that an area of 450,000 acres is available. This includes land in both Idaho and Nevada. Some of this total area is used heavily by deer in migrating from summer to winter range. Some of it does not support an abundance of those plants which are attractive and available to deer.

The result is that deer concentrate on an area of about 125,000 acres. Even this area is not uniform in the amount of forage produced, nor does it all have the same amount of plants which deer need and require. Snow and weather conditions also play a part in determining how long deer will remain on any given portion of it.

Deer desire and require browse as a winter feed. They will feed on several different browse species if available to them. The one species which is found on this winter range and which makes up a large part of the food supply is commonly known as bitterbrush (Comptonia vestita).

Its presence on the area is so widespread and it has grown in such amounts as to make of an essential source of food for this deer herd. Thus it needs to be recognized that this plan must be kept growing in such amounts and in such a healthy condition that it can maintain itself and reproduce new plants to take the place of the old ones which die. Some recent studies have been made by forest officers of this plant in particular, along with other browse plants eaten by deer. In order to make sure that accurate information is obtained on the amount of deer feeding on these plants as against other livestock the areas are visited and the plants inspected in the fall before the deer enter the area and again in the spring immediately after they leave it.

By measuring the amount of current growth taken each year and determining what effect such use has on the plant, it is possible to say that a plant will remain healthy and vigorous if no more than a certain amount is taken. If the plant is once damaged by too heavy use then, at least for some time, it is necessary to utilize less of the current growth each year in order to restore the plant to a healthy condition.

These studies showed that in 1938 the browse plants taken by deer had been overused to the extent that any further utilization in excess of 20 per cent of the current growth would be too much to provide for recovery of the plant. They further showed that of the total plants inspected in different areas there were no seedlings, 75 per cent were young plants, 15 per cent were mature plants and 22 per cent were dead or decaying.

From this it is readily seen that unless this condition is improved there will come a time when no bitterbrush is present. Some young plants must be established to take the place of those that die. One per cent of the total is far from being enough.

This condition alone represents a serious situation with respect to the future welfare of this deer herd. However there is something else happening which could be even more serious so far as the bitterbrush stands are concerned.

In 1938 there occurred a startling increase in the meadow mouse (Microtus Mentus) population on many forest lands but especially on the northern portion of that area which supports the Cassia deer herd. Heavy damage is resulting to bitterbrush. This mouse feeds on the bark of the plant. It works around the root crown to the east side of the plant. It completely girdles it, then feeds on the bark of the twigs in the upper part of the plant, girdling them also.

A recent survey of the damage showed that 75 per cent of the damaged plants had been completely girdled at the foot crown. How serious this damage will be cannot be determined. No one knows what caused this great increase in the mouse population and no one can say how long they will remain in such numbers.

This writer went out to some of this winter deer range a few days ago to see for himself just how serious this mouse damage seems to be. Plants were examined on one one-half mile. Most of the bitterbrush examined had been damaged both at the root crown and in the tops.

Just how much of these browse plants, which makes up so much of the winter feed for deer, will be killed, one cannot say at this time. It is not known, of course, how much more this mouse will work on the plants which already have been attacked nor how many new ones they'll attack in the future.

One thing does seem fairly certain. This mouse damage almost certainly will cause the land managing agencies and the state game department to take a very close look at this deer herd. They could well be in doubt as to what number of deer can be supported on this range in the next several years. However, in doing so, it is well to consider ourselves as experts we can analyze these many factors and each come up with an answer we find. To allow our own personal desires or any sentiment to enter into it can lead to wrong answers and to possible serious trouble.

Last Time They Met, One Left for World War I Navy Duty

Two brothers and a sister meet at the Twin Falls bus station after a 40-year separation for a reunion last week at the home of Sherman Knausa, Jerome. This is the first time they have been together since they sent Sherman Knausa off to the navy during World War I. A third brother, Lester Knausa, was absent at the time this picture was taken. Three Brothers, Sister Meet Again For First Time Since '19 Gathering

JEROME, March 21—After 40 years of separation three brothers and a sister, two of them Magic Valley residents, met during the past week for a reunion in Jerome. They are Mrs. Cecil Anderson, Dayton, Wash.; Milo Knausa, Peace River, Alberta, Canada, and Sherman Knausa and Lester Knausa, both Jerome. They met at the Sherman Knausa home. The last time they met was in 1919 in Spokane when Sherman Knausa was getting ready to join the army. Immediately after that Milo Knausa left the United States and moved to Peace River, Alberta, eventually becoming a Canadian citizen. Lester Knausa and Sherman Knausa have farmed near Jerome for many years. Their father, James Knausa, died in Twin Falls at the age of 88 in 1945. There was one other sister, Mrs. Fred Louie, who died in Colorado during the 1920s. Asked why he left the United States and became a Canadian citizen, Milo Knausa said that he wanted to move to a country that had a frontier. "The country is big and free up there and you never see a strange man," he says. "He adds that another reason he left the United States was to avoid unionism. After World War I the unionism—Knausa-for-the-best two weeks. The reunion of the brothers and sister is dimmed only by the sickness of their eldest brother, Lester Knausa. But they are still looking forward to catching up on conversation they have missed during the last 40 years.

Fragile-Appearing Man of 83 Recalls Remarkable Career as Confidence Man

CHICAGO, March 21 (AP)—Seated in his favorite chair among old-fashioned shagwigs, Joseph "Well" Well, fragile-looking but still elegant at 83, is speaking affectionately of his remarkable career as a confidence man.

Well and the Yellow Kid are the same person, or close to it. Well is a name person, who stole gaudy citizens blind for half a century in a career as remarkable as any in the annals of U.S. crime.

Fifteen years imprisonment once did him, but he was paroled in company with alter ego Yellow Kid. The divorce seems to have been occasioned by necessity rather than moral regeneration.

"The most devastating catastrophe that can befall a man," says Well glumly, "is to outlive his talent." Well's talent, with such verve and ingenuity, that one of his numerous victims once declared it was worth the $25,000 he had lost just to see the Yellow Kid operate.

A tribute that Well appreciates "You might say I was like Robin Hood in that I took from the rich and gave to the poor." In the thought that I never took a penny from a man who didn't ask to be taken.

"Each victim thought he was getting something for nothing. But what he got was nothing for something."

In this, Well sees a great moral.

College Benefit to Humans in Doubt, But College Salmon Have Great Edge

SEATTLE, March 21 (AP)—While it is not clear that most humans benefit by a college education, it is known as a definite fact that most salmon do.

A salmon who is a college man is a non-college salmon. He is a smart, headstrong, matured, and experienced fish who finds his way home more often and has a better chance of marrying and having children.

Despite their sophistication, the divorce rate among college-bred salmon is no higher than among non-college salmon.

Here at the University of Washington, the University of Washington type salmon. They are released from the university ponds as babies. They travel way out to sea, as far as central Alaska, turn around, and after a long, long, 4,000-mile roundtrip, after as long as four years, they return home through a one-foot opening.

Not all return. In fact, most don't. But the point is that 30 times as many college-bred salmon return home to spawn as do non-college salmon.

This is an important fact to state like Washington, where fishing ranks as the third most important industry.

A salmon, as every schoolboy in this part of the country knows, lay his darlings, after a long sea voyage to return to his precise birthplace. Nobody knows why but he does.

The University of Washington has set up a artificial spawning ground where the salmon lay their eggs. This spawning area is closer to the ocean. Thus, the salmon face fewer obstacles on his return.

It still does a lot of traveling. Many have gone out 200 miles, you can tell a University of Washington salmon anywhere by his clipped fin. Return from the Pacific, he swims through Puget Sound, through the government locks of a canal through Lake Union, where he finally turns left to the university.

Here he jumps up a fish ladder

Stock Market

Backed Away From Record

NEW YORK, March 21 (AP)—The stock market this week backed away from historic highs on the heels of a record week. The key industries were down enough on average to show a modest decline in the week's work. Rails and utilities were of slight gain. In view of the spurge to successive new peaks for the week, the market's decline this week was very much unexpected. The first month-to-month rise which occurred was a year ago line had its occasional "retreat periods."

Blue Chips Lose
 Though short-term interest ground in serious sectors of the list to put the average down but secondary high interest among secondary stocks was at least partly offset to some degree.

Volume of 21,617,740 shares continued to let the market advance. For the third straight week turnover has been the greatest since the first of 1958. On March 21, 24,022,700 shares changed hands.

The Associated Press average of 30 stocks fell $17.0 to $233.60.

Market Has Shaken Out

The market suffered its worst fluctuation in more than a month on Monday when it fell below 200 for the first time since the previous week's advance. A vigorous recovery Tuesday did not prevent a further decline on Wednesday. On the succeeding three days the average hit ground almost 100 points below the previous week's advance. The U. S. government bond market appeared rather well the impact of the treasury's new financing plans for four billion dollars of new securities were markedly lower.

Trading for the week amounted to 25,625,740 shares, a decline of 100,000 from the previous week but sharply above the 24,000,000 average for the corresponding week a year ago.

Baseball Paying Not Playing Needs Change, Hank Thinks

By HENRY McLEMORE

Baseball needs a change in its paying, not its playing. Too many players are overpaid, too many underpaid. Take Mickey Mantle and Rocky what's-his-name of Cleveland. Last year Mickey drew around $70,000 for his labors in the Yankee outfield, and Rocky about a fifth of that.

Yet when the season was over, if you believe figures, there was a 10 cent's worth of difference in their playing. In statistics Rocky was breathing squarely down Mickey's back, and few would be surprised to see him equal, or even outdo, the Mick this year.

This sort of thing is always happening in baseball, and while no one begrudges Mantle the dollars he squeaks from the Yankees, one cannot help but feel a bit sorry for the Rockys of the game.

One way to correct this fault, which has existed even before the days when the one and only Walter Johnson was paid the pitiful sum of $2,500 for striking out everybody in sight, would be to pay the players at the end of the year.

During the playing season every player, from utility infielder to the No. 1 starting pitcher, would be paid the same amount each month. It would be a good living wage, but that's all.

Then, when the last game had been played, and all the records compiled, the players would march into the general manager's office, their individual records in hand, and start talking salary.

The players would have their worth down in black and white—hits, runs, stolen bases and errors, too.

Such a scheme would benefit both players and owners. It would eat the owners money when a rookie came up with a big year, as they often do, but they'd save a lot when the big stars had an off year, which they often do.

The chief drawback to my plan is that no one, not even Casey Stengel, knows for sure what a base hit, a stolen base, or a strike-out, is worth in dollars and cents. And the values would be difficult to work out. A stolen base by a player when his team is 16 runs behind is worth little or nothing, but it's a different matter if the base stolen is home, and it wins the ball game 3 to 2.

The same is true of a hit. Baseball has always had players who could knock the cover off the ball when there were no runners on base, but who couldn't hit an elephant. And there are players who seem to be able to hit only when the hit is important.

But today, with electronics running wild, surely someone could come up with a machine capable of evaluating not only a player's worth in terms of hits and runs, but also in team spirit and customer appeal.

The plan is worth thinking about, anyway.

Or is it?
