Chevy pickup pulls through "bottomless" pastures to keep stock fed!

At the Hall Bros. Dairy Farm, Montgomery, Ala., they say this 4-wheel drive Chevy will go anywhere to keep stock fed—even through hub-deep muck that makes it a fight all the way. And yet after a full year of it—no mechanical trouble of any kind!

That Chevy pickup may not win any beauty awards (it'll be cleaned up). But it's sure walking off with the top prize for dependability. And that's standard Chevrolet procedure. Put a Chevy truck to work and it keeps working until you say quit. Not before.

We aren't claiming that every Chevrolet truck is turning out to be a miracle-worker and averaging 100,000 miles before a valve job. (Even though some are going 150,000!) You're sure to find, however, that you can't buy more truck dependability at any price. And that's borne out by the fact that more truck owners put their faith, and their pay-load, in Chevrolets than in any other make. Take your load and schedule figures to your Chevrolet dealer. He'll specify the best way to handle both and save in the bargain.

No job's too tough for a Chevrolet truck!

Now's the time—see your local authorized Chevrolet dealer for a real truck buy!

Outlawing from Idaho of sorghum, a foreign and illicit greenhouse to determine if sorghum was a perennial.

None of the sorghum or Sudan grass plants showed any life by April and were considered winter-killed, but Johnson grass resumed vigorous growth after a week in the hot house. Its roots appearing healthy a foot below the ground surface.

Loverly told the advisory committee that agronomists concluded that sorghum almum does not give greater yields of silage than does adapted corn varieties. That it does not behave as a perennial in Idaho and hardly such even in New Mexico, that it does develop prairie acid, and that Johnson grass, which has taken over so many farms in the southern United States, would in all likelihood be introduced by the weed men if sorghum is permitted to be raised in Idaho.

The committee also went on record as placing quick grass on the list of primary noxious weeds for the country. Quick grass is considered a noxious weed by the Idaho Crop Improvement association, the seed certifying agency in Idaho, but the county has never been in record for concealing, said Loverly.

Another decision reached by the committee was that the state be charged the same rate as the county for spraying residential.

Loverly also reported the Union Pacific railroad will cooperate with the county in spraying banks and nearby tracks. The railroad will furnish a 1,000-gallon tank at loading points, a few men and will pay the county for the cost of the weed chemicals and labor. This means that the spray rig that will hang out from the side of the flat car.

Present at the meeting with the weeds were Harold Lancaster, advisory committee chairman and a member of the county board of commissioners: Harold Messner, Burleigh; Milton Ballinger, Kimberly; Floyd Minton, Twin Falls; Lester McGregor, Hollister, and Homer White and Charles Conrad, both Burley.

The next meeting of the advisory committee will be held June 10.

70 Top Amateurs Compete in Blue Lakes Meet

Jim Sinclair, Twin Falls, will defend his Blue Lakes County club invitational golf championship against more than 70 of the top amateurs in Southern Idaho and Northern Utah May 30 and 31, reports J. D. Claiborn, club president. The tournament, although called an invitational, has been an open event more or less for the past few years. It is a V. V. Dickinson 18-hole event forced a need for better control of the field. Therefore, all players except club members, will not be allowed to participate unless they have received invitations. Claiborn said the screening committee was still canvassing the records of local meets for the past year or two and additional invitations were expected to be mailed out. He added the club hopes to complete the field with a list of over 100 names by the end of the month.

This switch in rules for Sinclair's club was not new. It only heightened the spring fever prevalent in this area. Sinclair, a 33-year-old, is a past champion of the 3-year-old. The picture was confused last year when the tournament was held for the 18th hole and the focus a great deal. Sinclair's club has not before the camera after several days in the past. Sinclair, who is now a member of the club, will be in charge of the tournament. Sinclair, who is now a member of the club, will be in charge of the tournament. Various Lamb Pools Around Area Helping Small Flock Owners Compete for Selling

This is a board of directors meeting—lamb pool style. After members seated bids from the buyers, they confer on the merits of their decisions. The business of the lamb pool is entrusted to the board of directors of the association. They decide who to sell to and if they feel the bids aren't high enough they might ship the lambs elsewhere. (Staff photo-engraving)

RUPERT, May 9—One of the biggest booms to the small sheep raiser are the various lamb pools...

One of the oldest and most successful lamb and wool pools in this area is the Minidoka County Lamb and Wool Marketing Association...

Collects Small Bands According to W. G. Priest, county agent for Minidoka county, the basic purpose of the pool is to get small bands of sheep together in marketable lots.

The buyers and the trade are not interested in anything smaller than carload lots. Their marketing shipping expense on odd-sized lots of lambs is too great to allow them to give a marketable price, he explains.

Joe M. Avelar, Rupert, treasurer of the association and manager of the lamb pool, explains that the pool began in the early 1920's when farmers and small ranchers in the area weren't getting a good price for their small bands of lambs.

Individual farmers didn't have enough lambs to ship them to market or attract a group of buyers. "We had to take just what the buyers offered us for the small batches of lambs," he says.

Today the lamb pool has grown into an organization that attracts many buyers and ships lambs to such widely spaced destinations as New York and San Francisco.

On Thursday, members held their fourth lamb pool this year. So far they have sold nearly 3,000 lambs. There will be about four more pools this year.

About 140 Members Avelar, who has been a director in the pool for over 20 years, says there are about 140 members in the pool. Although membership is open to anyone, about 25 per cent of the members are from Minidoka county.

Members have anywhere from just a few head to about 200 head. Avelar and Albert Frederick, Rupert, president of the association, estimate that the average member has about 50 head.

By pooling the lambs from such small flocks they can create a good market herd and present a better picture to the buyer and (Continued on Page 17, Column 1)

They're Checking Fire Hydrants

Twin Falls firemen, Paul McCollum, left, and Earl Bryson, check one of the many hydrants in Twin Falls. The main object is to insure that all the hydrants are in good working order. The threads on the caps are checked to make sure they are well lubricated and not stripped. Firemen also flush out any foreign matter that may have collected in the hydrants. Such deposits can obstruct and block hose nozzles. (Staff photo-engraving)

Basic Principles of Irrigation Help Save Water in Dry Years

In dry years such as this year, basic principles of irrigation help save water in dry years...

This is an example of a field that was too long and, consequently, was over-irrigated. Too much water was introduced to the cornrows over-irrigated the soil at this end of the field. The water then eroded and carried away the soil at this end of the field. This is hard on crops and a waste of water. The water in the over-irrigated soil is lost to the farmer. (Soil conservation service photo—staff engraving)

Basic Rules Farmers keep a few basic rules concerning irrigation farming to help their daily chores...

Water is Lost Water is lost in long runs when the water must be turned on and off so long to reach the end of the cornrow that the time the end of the cornrow is over-irrigated.

Fire Hydrant Flushing Discolors Water Here

If your drinking water has been discolored the past week, it has been for a good cause. Firemen have been doing preventative maintenance work on approximately 300 Twin Falls fire hydrants...

Dream of Ample Food Is 'Nightmare' of Surpluses

BY PAT MURPHY (Times-News Washington Reporter) WASHINGTON, May 9 (Special) Throughout the year, one of man's fondest hopes has been that he can have an abundance of food and fiber. For example, bread has been described "the staff of life."

The greatest natural disaster that can strike an individual or a nation is famine. This always has been true and is still true today.

However, U.S. citizens now face a problem at the other end of the spectrum from poverty, namely, too much food and fiber. While the situation is not as dangerous for farmers and for the general economy of the country...

This tremendous supply of feed grains means that there's danger to the price structure of the relatively stable beef, pork and poultry industry. Prices of hogs and chickens already are under pressure with cattle sure to follow.

Who is to blame for the current crisis? Republicans and Democrats point to each other, shouting in unison: "They did it!"

The actual solution to modern technology. For example, wheat yield per acre last year was 27.2 bushels per acre, up from an average of only 17.7 bushels in the years 1947-50. Corn yield last year was 81.5 bushels per acre, compared to an average of 38.6 bushels in the 1947-50 period. Yields per acre of a dozen other crops in 1958 reached new highs.

The net result is U.S. production of crops 11 per cent larger than ever before in U.S. history, from the smallest acreage planted in the last 60 years.

Secretary of Agriculture Ezra Taft Benson has fought valiantly to whittle down crop surpluses. He's exported record supplies in the form of foreign aid. He's been given only partial authority by congress to wield the Wilson law favors, lower supports to discourage farmers from overplanting.

As an example, we're fast getting to the point where we have a two-year supply of wheat ahead, almost enough corn and cotton to last a year if no more is produced. (Continued on Page 17, Column 1)

With the United States no nearer solving the problem of crop surpluses which started away back in the days of World War I, storage of the government's mammoth board of surplus commodities has become a major problem.

These steel storage bins are owned by the government, which has many such installations scattered across the nation. (Department of agriculture photo—staff engraving)

FIRST STEP TO BEAUTY

One of the very first steps in creating a beautiful room is the "floor planning."

The floor, one of the largest areas in the room, should be planned to provide comfort as well as being the beauty center. It should also be given a treatment that makes it important in its own right, that relates its style, color and to the other furnishings and decorating elements of the room.

If the home is small, it can be made to appear immeasurably larger by using the same floor treatment in adjoining rooms. This not only relates the rooms one to the other, but also provides an excellent opportunity for color-unification—carrying one basic shade throughout the entire home.

The color scheme in the modern room sketched has been keyed to the luxurious wall-to-wall carpet which is a frosted green. Sofa and walls are

Concrete-Lined Ditches Help Conserve Irrigation Water

On a dry year, such as this one, water loss is important. Wendell Styner, of the soil conservation service, estimates that some farmers lose 15 to 20 percent of their water before it even enters the fields. Water is lost in the main ditches through excessive seepage.

One of the best ways to combat such water loss is by lining the ditch with concrete. This ditch pictured above is an example of such a precaution. Styner points out that soil conservation service photo-staff engraving.

Basic Principles of Irrigation Help Farmers During Short Water Years

proper irrigation; too much will erode the soil and waste water.

Worth Extra Cost

Styner stresses the quantity and quality of the crops will be worth the extra cost and labor involved in first setting up water flow in the corrugate and then going back and adjusting them for proper flow after the water reaches the end of the field.

Styner's fourth point also deals with excess water loss. He estimates that some farmers are losing 10 to 15 per cent of their water before it even enters the fields. This water is lost in the main ditches through excessive seepage.

Can Be Eliminated

He suggests this loss can be eliminated by either relocating the main ditch, running the water through a concrete pipe, or by running it through a concrete ditch.

need it. This saves labor and water. He notes farmers sometimes go to extremes. Some irrigate too much, some too little.

Depends on Soil

Styner explains that the amount of water applied to the soil depends on the type of soil and the crop. But he says a good way to make a test is to take a sample of the soil from the root zone of the plant with a soil auger.

"If you can form a firm ball with the soil from the root zone, there is enough water. If it crumbles readily, there is not enough," Styner says.

Styner's seventh pointer on irrigation deals with salt ponds. It pays some farmers to build salt ponds. They can raise the water that runs off the fields and, eventually, they can haul the accumulated salt back to the fields.

Suit Best Part of Soil

"The salt is the best part of the soil," Styner declares, "because that is where most of the plant nutrients are."

"The advisability of such a point depends greatly on the type of soil of the land and the cost of the water. If there is excessive erosion of water is expensive for a farmer, such a point would be an advantage.

"It's usually not economical to reclaim water to irrigate just two or three acres, but if the farmer can reclaim water and irrigate 20 to 30 acres, it would be economical," Styner explains.

"It depends on the relative cost of the water. Some farmers can afford to spend more money on reclamation."

Styner's last point concerns the average irrigator. He points out that in areas where the amount of water available fluctuates considerably throughout the year it is sometimes advisable to cut the acreage under cultivation.

"The efficiency of the water falls off if it is not used in sufficient amounts. The farmer will get more net money by cutting the acreage down than if he was to spread the water too thin," Styner says.

"A farmer finds himself with too little water, he can benefit himself by cutting his irrigated acreage and taking better care of what he has under cultivation.

Another thing such a farmer can keep in mind is the type of crop he plants. Some require more water than others. For instance beans require one and one-half acre feet of water per acre per year compared to alfalfa which requires three acre feet of water per acre per year.

These are just a few points that the farmer interested in better irrigating methods, improved yields, and bigger net income from his crops can keep in mind as he goes about his farming activities throughout this season, Styner suggests.

Styner adds that any farmer within a soil conservation district may receive assistance from the soil conservation service on any irrigation problem. Interested farmers should contact their nearest soil conservation service work unit office.

VISIT IN PROVO

SPRINGDALE, May 9.—Mr. Frank Manning and son, Darwin Grant, have returned home from Provo where they visited relatives last week.

Seedlings to Be Planted in Area

HAYLEY, May 9.—Mark Kary, Hayley Sawtooth forest ranger, reports some 30,000 yellow pine seedlings are being planted in areas which have not reseeded themselves naturally in the Snake creek district on the south bank of the Boise river.

Mr. Mills, ranger for that district, is supervising the work being done by a crew of 15 men.

Kary also reports road areas have been worked in all parts of the Sawtooth forest where such conditions will permit. A timber-access road is being built at Hayley in the Malheur district and will be used this summer for timber sales.

Homing Pigeon Loses Bird Beam

Banded Pigeon Shows up on Ranch in Hansen Area, Decides Cage Is Dandy

HANSEN, May 9.—Mrs. Edward King, Hansen, is becoming attached to a banded pigeon that strayed to her ranch six miles south of Hansen on the Rock creek road.

The pigeon, dubbed "Doc" by the Kings, arrived at the ranch on Wednesday, April 29. He was tired and thin when he settled on a garage rafter. He spent the next two days just sitting there.

She first found out about the pigeon when two neighbor girls, Sarah and Susan Rosenbaum, daughters of Mr. and Mrs. Delms Rosenbaum, asked where she got the "pretty bird" in the garage.

Her Husband Knew

"That was the first thing I knew about the pigeon," she says. "My husband had seen him before but he hadn't told me because he was afraid to 'want to keep him'."

"That night we took some grain to the bird and tried to get him to eat it, but the bird wanted no part of it. He just wanted away and sulked."

On Saturday, Mrs. King's nephew, Larry Lundy, son of Mr. and Mrs. Jack Lundy, marched to the garage, picked the pigeon from the house and put him in a cage.

Eals when Penned

Evidently that was just what was needed. He was ravenous. He ate all they put before him and drank a small can full of water.

"I don't think putting him in the cage was just what he wanted," Mrs. King says. "He seems a lot happier there."

According to Mrs. King, the bird was just a hunk of feathers and bones when he reached him from his fast on the garage rafter.

After they had fed him for several days they took him outside and threw him in the aid to get him to go home.

Returns to Garage

"But all he would do is fly to the bird and then come back and land in the garage," Mrs. King says.

So they took him back in the house and put him back in his cage.

house and put him back in his cage, an overzealous parakeet cage. He's happy there.

He's eating all the time and is getting fat.

In fact he doesn't like it anywhere but the cage. If she turns him loose in the house he quickly returns to the cage.

He likes the Kings and the Kings like him.

Fond of Birds

"I honestly have grown kind of fond of him," Mrs. King says. "I still want to find out who he belongs to if I can."

She has asked many residents in the surrounding communities but she has had no luck in finding anyone who makes purchase or carrier pigeons.

"Doc" has a metal band on his leg with the legend 2638 IP 58 Pa. He also had a rubber band on one leg with the number 600.

Wendell Styner, soil conservation service engineer, points to a field near Twin Falls that illustrates certain water-wasting irrigation practices. In an effort to show how to improve irrigation practices, Styner has formulated several points that area farmers can keep in mind as they go about their daily work. By heading them out to an example of excessively long runs. They are about one-fourth of a mile long. In order to reach the end of such a long run the farmer must introduce too much water in the corrugates. This contributes to erosion, especially at the lower end of the field. As the water rushes down the grade soil collects at this end of the field. This forces the water to rise out of the corrugates and break over into the next corrugate. Styner notes the net result is erosion and waste of water. (Staff photo-engraving)

MAGIC VALLEY PORTRAIT C.C. Baker, Burley Pioneer, Recalls Early Effort to Finish Canal System

BURLEY, May 9.—C. C. Baker is one of the few Burley residents who can remember when there were wooden sidewalks on Overland avenue and Main street. Active in helping obtain water for the south side Minidoka project, Baker has been in the agriculture business here for the past 30 years. He was first Rotary club president.

He recalls many changes here since he homesteaded land in the Peila district, now known as the Onda ranch, on May 22, 1906. Baker and his wife, whom he married Gretel Cole, in 1904, were here only 20 days when he was elected to the board of the Water Users association. He is now the only surviving member of the group.

The first meeting of the association was held in a tannery shack where the J. C. Penney company now stands. That time the project engineer, Mr. Camp, notified the board the government was ready to abandon the South Side Minidoka project because funds had been transferred to a Montana project.

Engineer Camp had been impressed with the hardiness and industry of the settlers and negotiators of the project, and frankly told them what had to be done to solve their plight, Baker recalls.

"This was to build 90 miles of canals including the first second and third lifts, within 90 days—a mile a day. The fourth lift was to be definitely abandoned due to limitation of time.

"If these canals were not built, the whole project was to be abandoned, work would cease, and settlers who had staked everything on the canals would be out of luck," Baker said.

"The government was providing money for this to the board of directors of the Water Users association decided to build by leasing scrip in the amount of $275,000. Camp told the board that the surveys were all made, that mining leases were still running to print scrip, and that the water right could be established.

"In face of these facts," Baker recalls, "the board was formed with myself as president, Kincaid, Trout and Baker as directors and Shanks as secretary-treasurer."

"We ordered the $275,000 worth of scrip, adjourned the meeting and the only thing we started work on the first, second and third lift canals," he declared.

"This was done by the aid of homes that were small but tough as were the homesteaders."

"The only drinking water available here at that time, other than that from Snake river, was from the town pump at the intersection of Main street and Overland avenue. Fortunately, it was a good well."

"I saw more congestion there than at any time since," Baker recalls. In those days, as trees of homesteaders working on the ditches came for water, they came with barrels and kegs, and waited their turn to get water necessary to keep the gangs of workmen going.

The scrip had no value other than what was established. "Frankly," Baker continued, "the scrip, were skeptical. If a man didn't want to work for $10 a day, it was an easy matter to get him $20—it was no good anyway. Our first push on the water brought out that fact."

Elshop Thomas Taylor, however, father of Dave and Wesley Taylor, now residents of Burley, had more faith than most people. He would give $20 worth of groceries for $100 worth scrip.

Taylor, however, didn't bother to keep his scrip in the safe; it took up too much room so he put it in tomato cans and kept it on the shelf with the groceries.

—Needless to say, the canals were completed—and thus Prae-Thodore Roosevelt sent Secretary of the Interior Garfield to Burley to see if it was possible that the South Side Minidoka project was actually operating!

"As a matter of fact," Baker says, "we had the first, second and third lift canals full of water, and had had for several days. I will admit that there were places in the third lift that were not more than two feet deep and that the checks to hold the water were for feet of earth—but the morning that Garfield came every man who had an acre or two, or an 80, close to the ditch was out irrigating."

To accomplish this Baker had ridden all night before on horseback—and so had George Haywood and Kincaid—motivating the settlers. Haywood was supervisor and minister of work in those days working day and night for the success of the project and doing a good job, Baker said.

Secretary Garfield arrived at 8 a.m. and was taken over the project, especially by Engineer Camp, who pointed out the water in the canals and the homesteaders irrigating.

Garfield was surprised and impressed, according to Baker. "He didn't know where we got the water and he didn't inquire. As a matter of fact the south side gravity canal, smaller than the present one, was complete to the first lift and we had installed a gasoline engine and pump to lift water into

Rupert Notes Grassman of Year Project

RUPERT, May 9.—President plans for the 1936 Grassman of the Year contest were set at a meeting this week at the city hall.

Fifteen local committee members and other interested parties met with two state representatives, Hugh Hough, Idaho vice chairman, and Paul Nash, secretary of the state association.

According to Nash, 28 of Idaho's 44 counties held grassman contests last year, and state interest in the contest is increasing. He made this year to build interest in the southeastern area.

John Travino, local chairman, outlined problems with contest last year and announced that new homestead members were appointed to serve on the committee. They are Richard W. Sondford, Dale Stillaker and Ed Hinch.

Hough explained that for the first time, all contestants that will receive certificates of merit, will receive a special award of $25.00, with more than three entries in the local contest.

The Bakers have three sons: C. Gale Baker; H. C. Fritzy Baker; Davis, Collie, and E. Patrick Baker; Burley; and two daughters: Mrs. Dorothy Bell, American Falls; and Mrs. Josephine W. Burley, who has two sons and two daughters. Mrs. Baker celebrated her 75th birthday anniversary last month.

Youth Board at Shoshone Selected to Plan Policies for New Youth Center

SHOSHONE, May 9.—LeRoy Johnson has been elected president of the youth board which will set policies for operation of the Shoshone youth center.

The center proper, Tuesday and Saturday nights, hours on Tuesday will be from 8:30 to 11 p.m. while the center will be open from 1 p.m. to midnight on Saturdays.

Other officers include Laverna Bernard, second president; Richard Murns, vice president; Marilyn Johnson, secretary; and Sharon Blumner, treasurer.

Work toward opening a youth center has been going on for several months here by a group of young people, assisted by State Patrolman Willard Baker.

Mayor Myrtle C. Burdett ordered the use of one of her business houses for the center, given for a six-month period without rent.

Wood River Center Orange has offered to help secure a pool table for the center. Other than that the students have obtained all the money for operating the center by their own projects.

Practical equipment includes a bowling machine and a couple of other game machines. Emphasis is on dancing.

The high school agriculture class also made a game for the center. Dues are charged for membership with funds to be used for maintenance.

Directors Market Lambs and Wool for Some 140 Farmers; County Agent Operates Stockyards Scale

These directors of the Minidoka County Lamb and Wool Marketing association have a responsibility to about 140 members. They are ranchers and farmers who pool small flocks of lambs and the shearing from smaller flocks in order to achieve

W. G. Priest, Minidoka county agent, weighs sheep as they arrive at the lamb pool held Tuesday at Paul. There were 912 lambs sold, averaging 102 pounds. So far the association has sold more than 2,000 lambs in four pools this year. Priest acts as secretary for the association. Without the use of pools, the farmer who owns only a small flock of sheep has difficulty marketing his lambs because the large packing plants are not interested in purchasing small lots. The pool permits many small flock owners to offer consignments as attractive as large operators. (Staff photo-entouring)

Various Lamb Pools for Area Help Small Flock Owner Sell Animals

... a better price for the wool. A pool deal of preparation goes into preparing any lamb pool. Avelar and Frederick explain that before the lambs are brought to the pool for bids, the five directors travel about the area inspecting lambs members intend to sell in the pool.
"We do this three or four days before the pool," Avelar says. "We look at the fat lambs and mark them with a chalk mark and then the members deliver them to us at the appointed date."
This pre-pool inspection is done to insure that the lambs in the pool will be uniform in weight and maturity.

"You've got to have a uniform package to sell goods," Avelar says. They endeavor to pick lambs that weigh 90 pounds or more. Priest says this pool is one of the most successful in Idaho because of the uniformity of the lambs. He points out lack of uniformity is a fault with some lamb pools.
Kept to Minimum
"They haven't completely eliminated the difference, but they have kept it at a bare minimum," he says.
Priest adds, "Another thing that has contributed to the success of the pool is that we have always had directors that have worked loyally. The members have had faith in them and followed their advice."

Directors are Avelar, Frederick, Steve Ueckel, Heyburn; Louis Lela, Paul; and Jim Carter, Rupert. Before checking the lambs that will be placed in the pool, directors also are responsible for checking the scaled bids offered by the buyers for the lambs.
Several Buyers
There are usually five or six buyers present at the pool. They come from Ogden, Twin Falls, Idaho Falls, and other towns. Most of them represent large packing companies.
If the bids aren't high enough, the board may decide to ship the lambs to a consignor in another city. Usually the lambs are sold on the spot.
In addition to selling their lambs in a pool in the spring, members also pool their wool in February at March and sell it in a large lot.

Machine Helps Plant 500 Trees Per Hour in Forest

A. F. Lundy, Kimberly, operates a Whitfield transplanter during project of planting some 12,000 Ponderosa pine seedlings near the old Shoshone basin ranger station in the south hills portion of the Sawtooth national forest. Machine is capable of planting up to 500 seedlings per hour. The young trees are 2 or 3 years old and stand only about four inches high. They are expected to be a source of lumber when mature many years from now. (Forest service photo—staff engraving)

13,500 Ponderosa Pine Seedlings Are Planted in Part of Area in South Hills

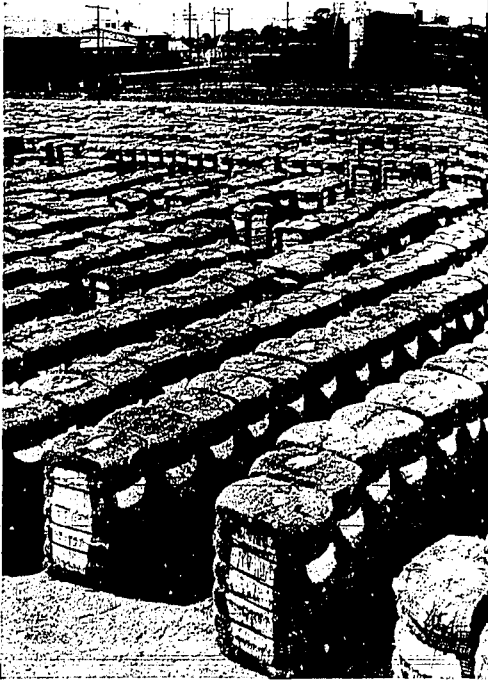

BY CHARLES L. DAUGHERTY
(Former Supervisor, Sawtooth National Forest)
During the past few weeks 13,500 Ponderosa pine seedlings have been planted in the so-called south hills section of the Sawtooth national forest. This represents a real effort to establish this valuable saw timber species in this area.

These 13,500 new trees were planted during April in a portion of the horse pasture at the old Shoshone ranger station about 30 miles south of Twin Falls. The work was done under the supervision of Edwin Fournier, forest ranger for the Twin Falls district. These young trees are 2 and 3 years old and were planted in the ground stand only about 4 inches high. They were selected from a forest service nursery at Hemi, Ore. and are of the best stock available. They have been packed and planted in way the right place, doing the planting at the right time, use of the proper stock and doing the work in the way which past experience has shown to be the best way. Full consideration of all these factors is essential to think this planter will be successful. This particular location was chosen because of the success of another such planting in this same locality in 1918. Even though this early plantation is considered only a partial success it is recognized that a great deal has been learned about all the operations of such an experiment since the time it was established. The trees in this plantation now have an average diameter of 1 1/2 inches and are about 40 feet high. The current growth is at the rate of six rings per inch

Part of Hoard of Cotton Uncle Sam Bought

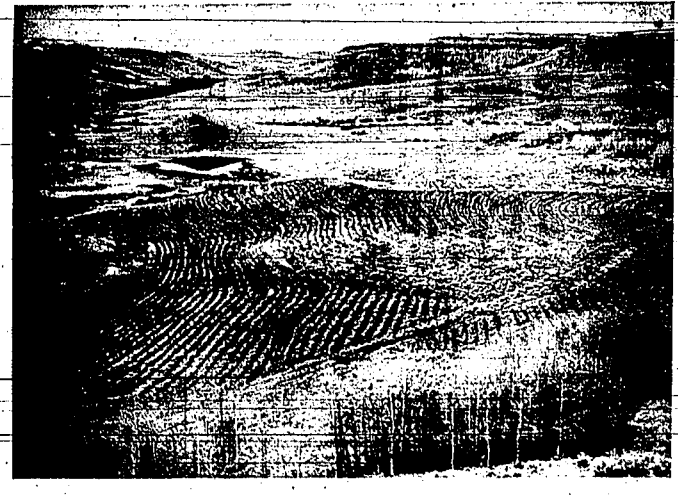

Many farmers no longer farm for the market, but farm for the department of agriculture, a point which results in huge stores of commodities around the nation. This is a surplus cotton "warehouse" at Calvert, Tex. in which is stored approximately 6,000 bales of cotton. (Department of agriculture photo—staff engraving)

Dreams of Plenty of Food Turn Into Nightmare of Surpluses for Nation

The U. S. "investments" in supporting these three crops will hit 12.5 billion dollars a year from now.

The annual cost of storing this huge glut now is running in the neighborhood of 400 million dollars and rising. Storage facilities for wheat and corn are blossoming all through grain areas. Thus, wheat and material is diverted to an "unconcerned avenue" in truth, through the fallow for four months and rising. Storage facilities for wheat and corn are blossoming all through grain areas. The public has been scandalized by the ease of payments to farmers under the support program. For example, the government had to pay Westlake Farms, Inc., Stratton, Calif., a total of $64,400 for its cotton crop in 1952.

Contour trenching of Ponderosa pine plantation is expected to give seedlings a better chance for survival. Trees planted in this area are only about four inches high. This is the old fenced horse pasture near the abandoned Shoshone ranger station. Planting methods have been improved considerably since another plantation of Ponderosa pine was started in this same general area back in 1918. These trees are now about 40 feet high with an average diameter of 1 1/2 inches. (Forest service photo—staff engraving)

Test Proceeds Seedlings

In sowing and sowing the trees as they are being reared for the planting machine, a test is used. This provides shade and eliminates wind. In this process all trees having roots skinned in excess of 10 per cent of the main tap root are discarded. Trees which have been crushed also are discarded.

Another factor in favor of the success of this plantation is that commandia blight rust which commonly attacks Ponderosa pine in south Idaho has never attacked the older plantation in this locality. Because of this it is hoped it will not attack these new trees.

Area Lutheran Grade School Children Burn up Energy at Track, Field Meet

About 250 students from Lutheran schools in this area met Monday to burn up an abundance of energy at a track and field day at the Clover Lutheran school.

Each year at this time the Lutheran schools hold a field day for students from grades four through eight either at one of the schools to spend the day competing in various track and field events.

The students were from the Clover Lutheran school, Memorial Lutheran school, Twin Falls, and St. John's Lutheran school, Buhl. According to Dennis Lindeman, seventh grade teacher at Memorial Lutheran school, the field day was begun in 1953 to create a closer relationship among the students of the Lutheran schools in the area.

The field day also increases the children's interest in the school's athletic program.

"Each year the students engage in a half hour period of physical education. This program is not simply free play or playground activities, but is a planned athletic program. In the fall the practice took football and have school teams. During the winter they specialize in basketball, and in the spring track plays a leading role in the physical education program."

Get Out of School

Headlines getting out of school for one day of the students look forward to the field day for other reasons. Lindeman notes it gives the students a chance to develop a good-humored sense of school spirit, participate in the events, and socialize with students from the other Lutheran schools.

Lindeman explains that the purpose of the athletic programs is to develop all the children's athletic skills, encourage team play, and heighten their sportsmanship and Christian conduct.

RICHFIELD, May 9—Mr. and Mrs. Thelma Ollie left Thursday to spend two weeks at Spokane, with their son, A. L. Ollie, and family.

Shots Protect You Tetanus Easy to Prevent But It Still Takes Lives

By EDWIN P. JOHNSON, M.D.
Written for N.A.A. Service

Many readers may not realize that although the terrible disease known as lockjaw or tetanus is preventable it is still responsible for about 250 deaths a year in the United States alone.

In a recent release from the DeWitt County Medical Association in the Florida county which contains Miami it was revealed that in that county alone there is about one case of tetanus a month. About half of all victims die of the disease.

Not Good News

For something which can be prevented as well as cured, this is a good record. Furthermore, this is particularly disturbing in view of the symptoms which it produces.

The germ which causes lockjaw is present almost everywhere on the soil and on objects which come in contact with the earth. For this reason children who go barefoot and other persons in certain occupations are much more likely to acquire the disease than others.

Farmers and others who are much around animals are among those who are particularly liable to tetanus. Soldiers and sailors in combat, of course, are also heavily exposed to infection.

The germs are carried into the tissues by the penetration of a nail, a splinter, a rusty nail, a deep in the tissues, the germ grows and produces a toxin, a poison, which is carried by the bloodstream through the body.

After the nerves become affected the toxin cannot be so successfully combated as at the beginning when the toxin is in the bloodstream.

Keen Long Time

An antitoxin to combat tetanus has been known for quite a long time. This has undoubtedly been responsible for saving many lives and is quite effective if given soon enough after a tetanus-producing injury.

But how a better method of life saving is available.

Far and away the best way to combat tetanus is to produce an active immunity, or resistance, to the poisonous toxin in advance of the infection. This is done by giving two or three injections of a tetanus toxoid.

Toxoid is the toxin which has been specially treated so that it causes the human body to produce its own anti-toxin. Most physicians now give this routinely to small children.

Results Miraculous

World war II was the first large-scale conflict in which it was possible to produce this type of resistance to lockjaw by giving all military personnel the injections of toxoid. The results were little short of miraculous. For the first time in military history tetanus became a matter of little medical concern.

There are good reasons why civilians should also receive the benefits of tetanus toxoid. All these who are likely to be called Funeral arrangements were under the direction of the third ward Relief society assisted by the granddaughters.

Final rites were held at the Rupert cemetery with Roy Moncur dedicating the grave.

Wistful Charm of 'Hitchhiking Hattie' Gives Her No. 1 Rating Among Ghosts

COOPERSTOWN, N. Y., May 9.—Although she probably isn't a girl they'd take home to meet mother, at least not straight from the cemetery, Hattie has a kind of wistful charm that kindles a fierce protectiveness in men.

Maybe that's why they brake their cars when the headlights catch her slender form in the rainy darkness, and offer her a ride.

Most Popular Ghost

Maybe that's why she is the most popular ghost in this country over the last 70 years.

There's no doubt about her perennial popularity. In his files of a thousand case histories of American ghosts, both imported and homegrown, Dr. Louis C. Jones has countless versions of the escapades of Hitchhiking Hattie, as he affectionately calls the perambulating phantom.

A former college professor of English, he has been director of the New York State Historical association here for a dozen years. Where history is concerned, he is scrupulously scientific.

Publishes Book

His book on phantoms, just published by Hill and Wang, is "Things That Go Bump in the Night."

He has spent years collecting the variations of Hattie's story. She is usually young, often pretty and most of the time dressed in a white evening dress.

The motorist first sees her standing by the roadside, near a cemetery. Because an appalling young girl has no business being alone in an eerie spot like that, especially on a rainy night, he stops and picks her up.

She asks him to take her to a certain address, usually her home. When they arrive, she disappears inside. Sometimes she tells him she'll come right back. Sometimes she takes with her the sweater he had put about her in the car.

After a time, the young fellow goes up and knocks on the door. A woman answers, and in reply to his query, says no girls live there.

But when he catches sight of her picture on the piano, or describes the pretty pickup or her coiffing, the answer is always: "That's my daughter who has been dead a long time."

Finds Sweater on Tombstone

Once in a while the baffled young man returns to the cemetery and finds his sweater draped over the tombstone bearing the girl's name, not Hattie, of course.

"The fascinating thing," says Dr. Jones, "is that these stories are always told in a manner which implies that this is a true experience. The name of the city, the exact spot where the girl is picked up, the name of the street where she wanted to go, the name of the cemetery, the identification of the man as a friend of someone known to the narrator.

"I've spent a great deal of time trying to track down someone it really happened to. And a few times I thought for a while I really done it. But it would always turn out to be the cousin of someone known very, very well by the person telling me the story."

Hitchhiking Hattie has been the most widely told ghost story for the last 70 years, says Dr. Jones. He first ran into it 40 years ago when his father came home for the family with the story a book salesman had told him that morning. It had all the classic details—and the strange experience had happened to a friend of his brother.

Never Has Seen Ghost

Dr. Jones says he has never seen a ghost himself. He did see his father a couple of months after his death in 1911, sitting on a crate cutting peony tools for his beloved garden. But Dr. Jones prefers to think it was a psychological experience.

He doesn't believe in ghosts, but he doesn't disbelieve either.

Burley Club Will Offer Books at Children's Clinic

BURLEY, May 9.—The Jay-C-ettes voted at a dinner meeting at Wilson's cafe Wednesday evening to donate books and coloring books to the annual crippled children's clinic held in Burley, so the children would have something to do while waiting for medical attention.

Mrs. Carl Bluff was a guest at the meeting. The table was decorated with a miniature May pole.

During the business meeting Mrs. Arvel Rudolph reported on the state conference of the Jay-C-ettes and Jay-C-ettes held at Lewiston last month. Mrs. Glenn Brown reported on the social side of the conference, and Mrs. Lloyd Thornien reported on installation of officers held last month.

The new president, Mrs. Jim Skiles, appointed committee chairmen for the coming year. The group voted to have a white elephant auction at its June 3 meeting.

DEBT PAY SOUGHT IN 2 CIVIL SUITS

Two civil suits were filed Friday in probate court for the recovery of money owned on promissory notes.

William R. Sherwood, Mountain Home, filed a complaint against Ed Hale for recovery of $75 unpaid on a promissory note as of December, 1928. Attorney for Sherwood is William J. Langley, Twin Falls.
