Hailey Plans Fire Control School Soon

SHOSHONE, May 23—Approximately 250 employees are expected to attend the annual fire training school for personnel of the bureau of reclamation on Wednesday and Thursday in Hailey.

In addition to the fire control school, the area BLM office in Salt Lake City will be represented by Shirley M. Hays, acting range manager of the local district.

Purpose of the school is to acquaint the personnel with the latest methods of fire control organization and fire suppression methods that should be used in controlling forest and range fires.

Fire danger for this year does not appear to be as high as in the past two years. The extreme dryness and cold weather has not been conducive to a lush growth of grasses, shrubs and trees.

Officials here state they do not expect to minimize the care that will be exercised in fire prevention and adequate measures will be taken, they say, to prevent the loss of any fires within the area.

It is necessary that the public be alerted and cooperate with the fire control organization in holding fires to a minimum, they add. Only by care can the natural resources be preserved for future generations and keep Idaho green, officials explain.

Congressional Demos Head Toward Collision With Ike

WASHINGTON, May 23 (AP)—Congressional Democrats are heading toward a collision with presidential vetoes (that) and anti-up housing, airport and proposed area legislation for their work.

A small-house conference meeting next week, is likely to be a compromise housing bill on Thursday which would authorize a three-year, $1.5-billion dollar urban renewal or slum clearance program, 40 million dollars for college housing and 100 million for rental dwellings for elderly persons.

The expenditure price tag put on the house bill was $2,100,000,000. The senate bill passed earlier would cost a half billion more. Neither of these figures takes into account the FHA insurance authority, since it involves no direct treasury payment. FHA is self-supporting.

Both senate and house bills envision outlays so far in excess of Eisenhower's request that a veto seems inevitable.

There have been indications that speakers of the house, Sam Rayburn, D. Tex., and senate Democratic leader, Lyndon B. Johnson, Texas, would have preferred cutting back the amounts in the hope of avoiding a veto.

But other Democrats who want to challenge the President are pushing for passage of not only

Members Okayed At Granger Meet

Douglas Crane was requested and Mr. Sid Mrs. Carl Richman voted in as new members at the regular meeting of the Mountain Rock Grange Thursday night.

Captain W. W. Noble, assisted by Mrs. Noble, presented a memorial service to honor 10 deceased members. Lighted candles, flanked a white cross, covered with sprigs and 10 white carnations.

In other business, Virgil Williams reported he had prepared the building for spray painting and a date will be set in the near future. Members are urged to assist.

During the lecturer's program, Mrs. W. W. Zimmerman gave a reading, "My Grandmother" and Donald Somers showed a film, "Electricity in the Home."

During the social hour the annual picnic was observed with each family bringing a pie. Somers and his two daughters were guests.

These Democrats maintain that vetoes of such measures would lend weight to their contention that the administration is more interested in balancing the budget than in meeting what they regard as the needs of the country.

Bloodmobile Visit Is Noted At Area Meet

HANSEN, May 23—Hansen Grange members met Wednesday night and were reminded of the East End blood drawing to be held at the Kimberly grade school Wednesday from 10 a.m. until 4 p.m.

The agriculture committee reported on the bill before congress which would put the mixed grains under the same rules as wheat.

They also reported on the danger in insecticides, stating that care must be used at all times by keeping them in the original container—closed, and away from children. If the label should be lost, they should be buried because of their poisonous ingredients.

A discussion was held about the pea aphid which is attacking alfalfa fields. Insecticides strong enough to kill the aphid seems to make the hay unusable for animal use.

A contribution of $5 was made to the cancer fund. It was decided to retire eight $25 bonds on the building at the next meeting.

Two films by the Union Pacific were shown, one featuring the production and containing of beef and the other on sites and parts of the Northwest.

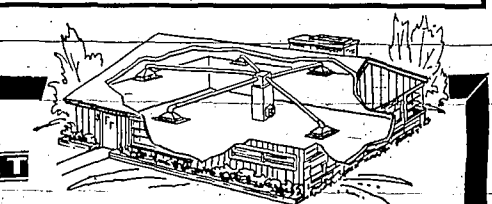

Mr. and Mrs. Peter Mulder were guests.

Russia Avers NATO Arms Peace Threat

MOSCOW, May 23 (U.P.)—The Soviet Union told the United States today that as a member of NATO countries with nuclear weapons and missiles "qualified extremely dangerous consequences for peace" and "constituted a threat to the security of the Soviet Union."

The peace agency said that a Soviet note especially aimed at the United States and West Germany and inspired hope the United States would remain from any action that might increase international tension.

Germany Given Note
The note to the United States was delivered to the U.S. Embassy in Moscow by Vasily Kuznetsov, Soviet deputy foreign minister. A similar note was handed to the West German ambassador, Hans Kroll.

It earlier had been reported that notes went to all ambassadors of North Atlantic Treaty organization countries in Moscow, but later advisers said notes were sent only to the United States and West Germany.

U. S. Note Answered
This said it was a reply to U. S. government note of May 8.

The Soviet government has stated that the measures carried out by the arming of some NATO countries and in particular the Federal Republic of Germany with nuclear weapons and missiles "constituted an extremely dangerous consequence for peace and were incompatible with the task of ensuring the confidence of the foreign nations and the summit conference," it said.

Virgin Birth Doubt Might Cause Battle

IDAHO POLIS, May 23 (AP)—A presidential elector may expose the virgin birth of the United States in the final season of the elector's presidential general assembly.

Leaders unsure. Convention leaders are hoping that no one will light the fuse when the report of the committee on theological questions is read.

It is expected to contain a recommendation that the assembly be dissolved by the same vote that elected the president.

Dr. Gill, an ordained Presbyterian minister and former college president, was managing editor of the Century, a denominational Protestant weekly magazine at the time he was chosen to lead the assembly. He has led the assembly since last summer of 1967.

Qualification Needed. Church rules require that its electors be members of the general assembly before they can "drop" electors.

For months before his election to the presidency, Dr. Gill wrote articles in the Christian Century magazine expressing doubts about the virgin birth.

Damages Sought In Counter Suit

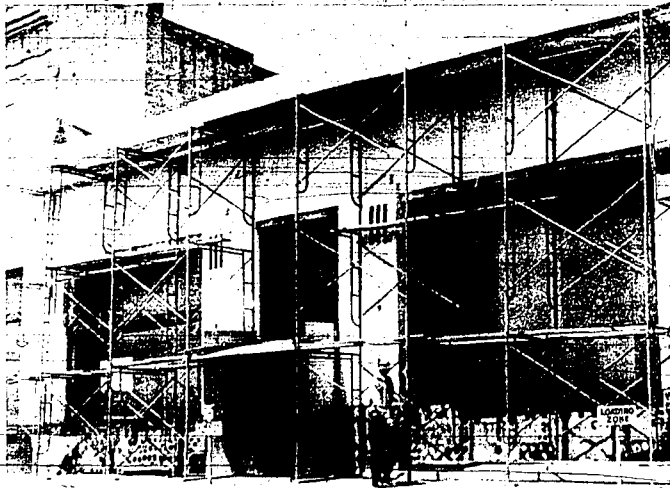

A counter-complaint in a suit for damages resulting from a two-car collision Nov. 16, 1936, was filed Friday in Twin Falls district court by William Smith against Jerry Horne.

According to the complaint, Smith was in the interest of Alton Hestrum, owner of a 1927 Oldsmobile when Mrs. Jerry Horne approached from Monroe street at a high and dangerous rate of speed. It is further claimed that Mrs. Horne failed to slow down although the road was snow-covered. The Horne car, a 1935 Oldsmobile, struck the right side of Smith's car, spinning it around, and causing damage of $412.

Attorney for Smith is Lawrence B. Quinn, Twin Falls. On March 16, 1936, Horne filed a complaint seeking $500.00 as damages to his car. In the original complaint, Smith was charged with negligence. H. N. Jewell, Twin Falls, is attorney for Horne.

She Has "Vigorous Distaste" For Views Given by Teacher

Editor, Times-News:
 I have a pleasant relationship with the faculty and administration of the Twin Falls public schools. I feel completely free to express my views on educational matters. I have written several articles for the Times-News on Sunday.

I should like to preface my remarks by stating that the various proposals concerning our present educational system, as expressed by Mrs. Wenberg, are contrary to those which I have submitted to the PTA in the past. I am sure that the PTA will give acceptance of the proposals of the school administrators and that their perception of the situation has been most gratifying.

My efforts viewed as an expression of our sincere desire to improve our educational system, in the opinion of the community, are being viewed as "vigorous distaste" for the teacher's role in the classroom, and reawakening the obligations to the teaching profession. I do not submit my views on the PTA as a review of the school board, but rather for the purpose of clarification.

To those who have questioned my efforts with accuracy, it should be stated that there has been no attempt made to suggest that I am a teacher. Conversely, it has been clarified that an educational climate might be improved by our teachers exercising their ability.

After extensive thought, I still find it impossible to conclude with concern for education does not demand an educator's training for the parent as a frequent adviser.

If there is a recognition of our mutual interests, there is no most assuredly a corresponding desire to find a remedy. How do we instill motivation toward improvement? To restore our shortcomings, we must have a concrete interest in such a vital educational factor as curriculum, which would appear to be on a hospital table in the direction of.

However humble the qualifications of those who contribute themselves with such formidable proposals, it is they who have displayed estimable value in advancing the business of hand with their own, however, impotent, rather than with the criticisms which stigmatize for lack of some compelling current.

She's Objecting To Boulder Use As Area Marker

Editor, Times-News:
 The timely article in the Times-News about white soap on cutting paper and trash around our campgrounds was very good. However, our picnic and campgrounds in southern Idaho are being cluttered with something very "un-Idaho" where you look.

A few small guide markers, or "boulders" in the backcountry area, would not destroy the natural beauty of our campgrounds. These boulders are also a hazard in parking a car or trailer and so close together it is almost impossible to keep from falling over them if you step out of your tent after dark.

A few "boulders" or even a beer can, will deteriorate in time and weather, but these boulders will still be there a hundred years from now.

Gooding Resident Says Many Follow Twin Falls Aid Stand

Editor, Times-News:
 Many individuals have been following with interest the informal opinion of proposed federal aid to Twin Falls schools.

It is of special interest to me because made by Mr. Benoit, that guidance program was over-extended.

Mr. Benoit's point is well-taken and should be considered carefully, as the schools do not follow the common human tendency of a good idea in its early stages.

However, thorough investigation is now being conducted by the Twin Falls aid stand. The aid stand is now being conducted by the aid stand of Gooding county, with Dr. James Oles, guidance director of the University of Idaho.

The subject for future papers mentioned but lightly, emphasizing being placed on testing, progress, teachers learning to recognize symptoms of emotional stress, and suggesting to teach-

Impact on fishing because of lack of water on the south side of the Snake river, says Z. O. (Stubby) Bailey, manager of the Twin Falls fish hatchery, isn't looking for a disaster.

The water level in Snake creek is dropping toward the end of the summer, and this means that fishing there will be less than normal, says Bailey.

The ground was very dry and absorbed much of the moisture that could have rained the run-off. The snow is all gone, and the ground is very dry.

On Rock creek, which was seen of department's first successful attempt to start a running stream of water in the reservoir is a little shorter this year.

The stream's fishing is provided entirely by planting and the lack of water may suspend the last planting in August. There is no set number of plantings for the stream, hatchery officials said.

"We may not make the last planting in August because of the lack of water," Bailey stated.

Other than that, the shortage is expected to have little effect on the overall plans of the department.

Since much of it depends on the weather the entire report should read—"probably."

Extension of Sugar Act Is Said 'Unwise'

WASHINGTON, May 23 (Special)—Sen. Wallace F. Bennett, R-Utah, who introduced a Senate bill this year to renew the U. S. sugar act, said this week that it would be unwise to renew the law until the uncertainties of the Cuban sugar situation were resolved.

Senator Bennett said, "Before the Cuban revolution it was assumed that the sugar act would be extended without any change in Cuba's quota. Representatives of the Cuban industry had not asked for any increase.

"Since the revolution the situation has been completely confused. Cuban Premier Fidel Castro made some early statements indicating he felt that Cuba was entitled to all the sugar it could export to the United States—even if it meant destruction for the domestic U. S. sugar industry.

"When he came to Washington I attended his off-the-record session with members of the senate to see what he would have to say about sugar. He completely avoided the subject.

"The uncertainty was increased by the announcement of his new hand policy, phase of which reduced company-owned sugar plantations to 1,000 acres each, apparently reserving the rest of the land for distribution to landless citizens in small plots.

"If one purpose of this is to encourage the planting of less consumer crops to replace sugar, Cuba will be unable to meet her present quota. This might lead to a reduction of the Cuban quota rather than an increase.

"Until this uncertainty is cleared up I believe it would be unwise to extend the sugar act. If we can get assurance that the changes in Cuban hand policy will not prevent Cuba from meeting its allotment, I believe the act can be safely extended, preserving the present quotas. The act doesn't expire until the end of 1960."

Long Pipe Replacing Hay Derrick in Sudden Death

Local aluminum pipes have just replaced the hay derrick as a major cause of sudden death for livestock on farms. But with the almost universal use of hay bales, derricks are seldom moved today. The danger is increased by the use of power lines. As a step toward eliminating such hazards, the company is placing signs on pump-switch boxes to remind farmers of the danger. The sign says, "Caution. Power lines may be overhead. Look up before standing pipe on end."

Harry Hamilton, manager of the Kimberly district, notes many accidents are caused when farmers are moving their hay derricks. He explains that the boom may swing and make contact with a line or the derrick may strike a ditch, jump and then make contact with a line. However, few derricks are moved anymore.

Hamilton stresses it is safer and just as easy to phone the Idaho Power company for aid in moving the derrick. Hamilton notes this service is free.

He says the power company would prefer to move a derrick that is being moved in the vicinity of power lines. It adds that under some circumstances it is possible for a derrick to "turn on" current while the derrick is being moved.

Hamilton notes it is the policy of the company to notify farmers who have placed derricks too close to power lines.

There is still danger when a farmer is working with a hay derrick near a power line. There is always the danger of the derrick boom swinging and making contact with an overhead line. The derrick cable is usually connected to the derrick of a tractor, and thus the tractor operator is in contact with thousands of volts that could claim his life or injure him.

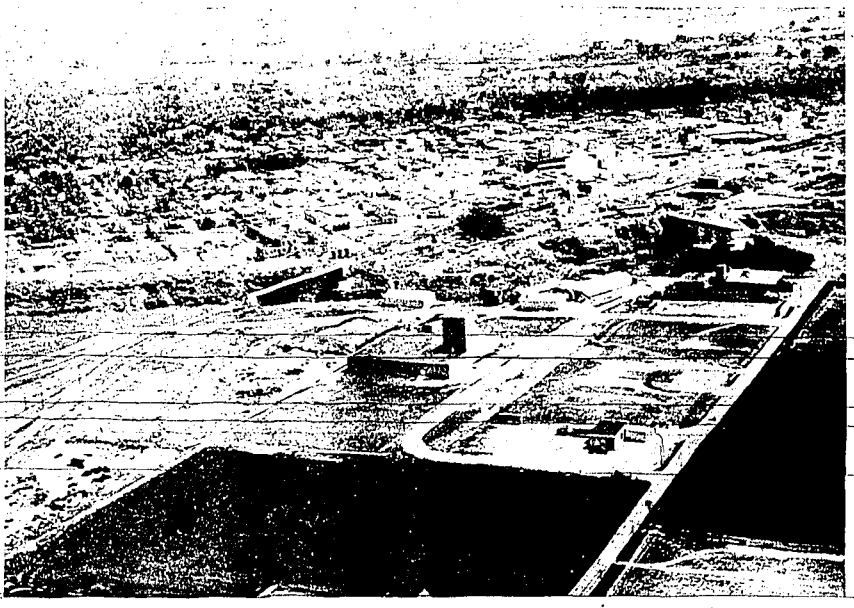

He estimates that in his district alone, he will ask about six farmers to move derricks during the course of a year.

Harry Hamilton, Idaho Power company manager for the Kimberly district, shows how easily long aluminum pipes used in irrigation can come in contact with overhead power lines. It is a practice of standing the long sections of pipe on their ends rather than on their sides or rabbits that may have been in them or dirt that may have gotten in the pipe. The company warns farmers to "look up" to make sure no power lines are overhead. (Staff photo-entourage)

Caution. Power lines may be overhead. Look up before standing pipe on end. That's the warning by Harry Hamilton, Kimberly Idaho Power manager, on signs being placed on switch boxes near power lines. The long aluminum pipes used in sprinkler irrigation have been moved around much anymore and the chief danger involving derricks now results where farmers have located derricks near power lines. (Staff photo-entourage)

All Lots Purchased on Chamber's Old Industrial Site

Only a few buildings dot the old industrial site southwest of Twin Falls, but soon the area will employ approximately 200 persons. Eight businesses have purchased the 22 acres of land which was bought by the Chamber of Commerce in 1944 with funds made available by donations. This aerial view of the site shows its location with respect to the city. At present the chamber's industrial development commission is seeking two similar sites, one for possible heavy industry, and another for light industry. No heavy industry is located on the old site because of the smoke and dust which would be a nuisance to the community. (Staff photo-entourage)

Chamber Industrial Site Completely Sold; Two New Tracts Being Sought for Future

The Twin Falls Chamber of Commerce industrial site is a sellout after 15 years of planning and prospect of additional light and heavy industry in the area have caused the Industrial Planning Commission to seek two new industrial sites.

Members of the commission now it would be necessary to find additional room for industry and plans have been in the preliminary stages for several months, but the need has become more urgent with sale of the last three plots in the old site.

Small Stream Reserved for Use of Small Fishermen

The golf course stream near Twin Falls is one of three juvenile fishing streams that will be jammed with county children 14 years of age and under when their fishing season opens June 4. Warning signs are posted on each of the three streams concerning the age limit for fishing and the limit of fish that can be caught in one day. The conservation department appeals to the sportsmanlike of adults to preserve the areas for children. Other county streams are at Buhl and Piler. (Staff photo-entourage)

Juvenile Streams Opening June 4 Along With Rest of State Fishing

Another fishing season for Mag Valley's children 14 years of age and under will begin when Twin Falls county's three juvenile fishing streams open June 4 along with the general season.

The three sites where Twin Falls youngsters can enjoy the thrills of trout fishing are in Twin Falls, Buhl and Piler. Each stream is within walking distance or a short bicycle ride of the town.

"But the best of all juvenile streams is Riley creek located on grounds of the Hagerman hatchery. This stream is not open for fishing until July 1, however, thousands of youngsters take thousands of fish out of the stream every year. Several times each summer, some youngsters will land a trout in the 10-pound class to show the adults how it's done.

For the opening weeks of the season the Twin Falls fish hatchery has stocked each of the streams with approximately 1,000 fish or 250 pounds of rainbow trout.

For youngsters in the Twin Falls area the stream, known as Blauherbaceous creek, runs through the municipal golf course and green pasture land of approximately three-fourths of a mile.

The Buhl stream is one mile west of the airport and the Piler location is on Cedar Draw, one mile north and three-fourths of a mile west of the town. Each of these streams runs for an estimated two miles.

Each stream has been open to children for several years with the purpose of providing fishing for youngsters who cannot visit the trout hatchery. (Staff photo-entourage)

Life in MAGIC VALLEY

Sixteen years ago a healthy, active 10-year-old girl rode her horse into the yard of her home and asked her waiting parents, "Would you please put my horse away?"

The girl was LaDonna Jean Ulrich, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Sam Ulrich now living at EDEEN, Idaho, employed by the EDEEN lumber company since the family moved to Magic Valley three years ago from Winslow, Neb.

They soon found out she had been sick and that her neighbors' children were stricken at the same time.

After treatment at an Omaha hospital, she was able to continue her education. She needed help to get around, since the doctor had noticed her right leg. With the help of her parents and an older sister Mrs. Robert Wesley, Boise, leg braces, she was able to carry on and accomplish much.

After graduating from high school in Nebraska, she attended a short course in business. During that time she worked at the same work at a drive-in theater as cashier, managing a restaurant and was a student for two years. She drove 10 miles to work a big part of the day.

She also found time to teach in the Baptist Sunday school for many years.

phew, Glenn Mills, LeGrand, Ia, who spends the winters here, that he has never seen the bones he found in this area last winter to his brother, Harold Mills, Champaign, Ill. biologist and ornithologist at the University of Iowa.

They were turned over to the university museum at Champaign, where the bones were identified. The museum reported the bones were not fossilized but probably were a few thousand years old.

Mills writes that the nearest comparable things in the museum are the bones were lower jaws of what is called the white-lithed prairie dog, which has been found in Utah and southeastern U. S. There have been no records of them anywhere in Idaho.

He points out that if these identifications are correct, the prairie dog was once more widespread than it is now.

Mills says instructors at the university museum were very interested in the other bones Mills found in the King Hill area and want more material. Mills hopes to bring more bones back with him when he returns to Idaho.

He says the museum wants any type of bones, and would like to see a collection of the prairie dog. Mills spends his vacations here in the summertime with his family, and he has been successful in hunting species of rocks, drift wood, petrified wood and other relics.

AS YOUR MINISTER SEES IT

"The Sin of Boredom"

By W. A. McARTHUR
(Pastor, First Methodist Church)

Among the most cynical books of all literature most surely be the book of Ecclesiastes in the Bible. Here is the complaint of a man who has a found that life is vain and that at the end of the day, life has no meaning.

Who of us at one time or another has not experienced this mood of life? It seems to be a natural experience and yet it is a sin, because it is not the way life ought to be.

How strange indeed, it should be that so many people in our world, and especially in our country seem to be victims of this disease, boredom. More and more each generation has ever known, we are the recipients of more ways and means for entertainment, amusement, excitement. Think of the situation just 25 years ago. The theater and vaudeville were available, but radio was just coming into its own. Television was just in the imaginative stage, and the excitement of the motion picture was only in its infancy. The means of transportation to these opportunities of amusement seem antiquated indeed, against our age of speed and convenience.

And yet more people are crowding the minister's study, the psychiatrist's office, the physician's office because they are at their wit's end to know what to do with time on their hands, with the day-to-day routine of living. We are a society in large measure, bored to death.

You challenge that? Look at the number of organizations that continue to spring up. We have to be a nation, a people "on the go" as a recent news analyst characterized it. We have grown so used to noise and turmoil that silence frightens us. Even in the sanctuary of the Lord, we cannot be still while the preacher is being played, or make proper preparation for the sound of the voice of God should he speak to us in the hour of worship. We are so accustomed to being with other people that an evening alone seems unbearable.

The thing we have to face is that boredom is a spiritual disease. True, we have bodies and minds which respond to the physical stimuli of sight and sound, of action and communication. But we are souls! We are not, happily adapted to a sea of activity, drifting with the tide of current, and waiting for a ship to come along to take us to a port of destination.

We are created with the capacity to direct, to determine, to define.

We have to believe that we are important, and that what we believe, what we stand for, what we are willing to die for is important. When men lose their sense of being men of God, destined for of the immediate future," Howe said.

Although the commission is seeking large industry, members are pleased to see an influx of the smaller type.

"We would rather have a series of small industries that are more secure, than have one large industry which might exert too much economic influence on the community," notes a member of the Grange, Chamber secretary-manager. "Most of our small industry right now is concerned with agriculture."

Grange points out that the attitude of the community is important in any success the commission might have. He also stressed that some slight adjustments might result for citizens in order to have the economic balance that industry brings.

"The attitude of the man in the street must be healthy," Grange asserts. "And it may mean a little smoke or smell, but it takes that to get the money here."

Because of the long period of time between announcements of industry coming into the area, the commission has been under criticism at times.

"We've even been accused of chasing industry out of town," Howe said. "You always have the type of person who wants the land and doesn't want to put up with industry."

New Jobs Wanted

Grange says a constant flow of new job opportunities must open up in Twin Falls in order for the labor force to remain here.

He cited the illustration of a former several years ago who could make a living on 40 acres of land. Now he must have 120 or more and he has purchased the land from other farmers who will have to find work in the city.

"We must have new businesses and industry to maintain a level of economy for the people dropping off farms," he added. "They must be able to maintain a standard of living."

The task of winning and guiding representatives of industry is a necessary evil in rearing industry to the area, Barry said. For every one industry that works out and finally plans to settle in a particular area, the commission might be turned down by 10 or 15.

Junior High School Students Display Work Ranging From Bed to Paintings in Annual Exhibit

Virgil Cowles, eighth grade industrial arts instructor, tests the only bed on exhibit at the Junior High school Friday night. The child's bed was a project of Orr Brannen, a ninth grade student. The exhibit was one of more than 200 pieces of work on show for the public. Other large projects included a Roman table, cedar chests, chest of drawers and an assortment of large tables. (Staff photo-Engraving)

Two ninth grade art students put their own work on display in preparation for the art and woodwork exhibit Friday night. Henry Wendling, left, 754 Grant street, places his farm scene on exhibit, while Karen Kohrman, 428 Martin street, displays her still-life work. Both students are in the advanced art class of Mrs. Inezmarie Smith. In addition to the art on display, more than 70 pieces of ceramic work were shown from Mrs. Smith's eighth grade class. Woodwork, Drawing, Art, Handwork Of Students Displayed at T.F. School

Accomplishments in woodwork, mechanical drawing, art and handwork illustrating the skill which 13- and 15-year-old boys and girls can use their hands was on display in the Junior High school Friday night. The exhibit was the third annual presentation of Junior High school craftsmanship from classes in mechanical arts and design. More than 200 students had exhibited, and of the items being exemplified were hours of tedious work. Eighth and ninth grade students in industrial arts exhibited more than 200 pieces of work ranging from small candleholders to a canoe. Other exhibits were examples of work in art, ceramics and copper tooling by seventh, eighth and ninth graders. In the woodwork section of the exhibit, which was considerably larger than the art portion, trophies will be presented for outstanding work. First, second and third place trophies will be given to a large and small object class for both the eighth and ninth grade classes. Awards will be made at the awards assembly Wednesday.

The mountings and base for the trophies were made of red cedar. Some of the boys were faster at turning out the drawings than others, but on the whole the drawings were excellent all the time," Purpur asserts. In addition to blowing up the size of the object they also drew large objects on enamel scale. "Actually they are doing engineering drawings," declares Cowles. "If they were in a college engineering course they would have to do the same sort of thing."

Boise Man Is Speaker for Bliss Service

BLISS, May 23—Harold Swinney, of the Idaho Historical Society, gave the address and the commencement exercises held at the Bliss high school auditorium Wednesday evening. He was introduced by Aldrich Bawler. Diane Bray gave the salutatory address and Ellen Butler, the valedictorian.

Some of the larger projects included a child's bed, cedar chests, chest of drawers and the Roman table. Every style and shape of furniture appears at the show, including a potter's plant stand that started out as a salad bowl. Mechanical drawings show the patience with which the students are endowed. Both scale drawings and sheet metal drawings were exhibited.

Some of the boys were faster at turning out the drawings than others, but on the whole the drawings were excellent all the time," Purpur asserts. In addition to blowing up the size of the object they also drew large objects on enamel scale. "Actually they are doing engineering drawings," declares Cowles. "If they were in a college engineering course they would have to do the same sort of thing."

Most Rockchucks Don't Have It so Good

Rocky the Rockchuck, a 2-month-old pet of the C. H. Boss family, enjoys eating or drinking as much or more than humans, only he stands on his hind legs instead of sitting at a table. Here Rocky, 18, is given the animal a drink from a bottle. The bottle was used to feed the pet, when it was new in the household, now Rocky drinks from a saucer. (Staff photo-Engraving)

Rocky Is 2 Months Old, Lives Under House, Drinks Milk and He's Graying

He's about 3 months old, lives under the house, drinks milk from a baby bottle, yet his hair is gray. He's got sharp teeth and he eats "everything."

He's a rockchuck and his name is Rocky.

Attention From Family
Rocky Boss, 18, the son of Mr. and Mrs. C. H. Boss, 609 Fourth street, was Mrs. Boss's pet, but a 2-month-old baby never got any more attention from a whole family.

"He keeps to himself most of the time," Mrs. Boss says, "and the only trouble he's had with him is that he gets into my flowers and plants and really leaves them to shreds."

Rocky's home is under the house. He has all the room he needs shade and playground. The Bosses turned him loose in the yard shortly after they acquired the animal from the dog's teeth.

"We have to keep him outdoors most of the time because when we leave him in the house he crawls in bed with his head on my plants," Mrs. Boss reports.

Found in Bush
The family acquired the pet over a month ago while visiting Rocky's grandparents in Buhl. The family building contains a wild animal rockchuck near the grandparent's house, and from that time on he became a permanent member of the Boss family.

"We put him in a cage for the first few days," Rodney notes. "Then we let him run around the yard. We've never had any trouble with him running away, and I think he's afraid to leave now."

The Bosses haven't been able to determine the exact size of their pet, but Boss has estimated two months, as he now grows.

Less Than Half-Grown
"We saw another woman who had a full-grown rockchuck for a pet, and the nearest we can guess, Rocky is less than half-grown now," Mrs. Boss explains. At present the animal is about the size of a football, and some children have tried to use him for one.

"The kids don't know what to think of him," Rodney declares. "I think they believe he's a wild animal or something, because they try to chase him off or hurt him."

Rodney cited one example when a surprised friend saw Rocky for

Magic Valley Has Attractions Needed For Share in Tourist "Big Business"

By CHABLES L. DAUGHERTY
(Former Superintendent, Sawtooth National Forest)

The tourist business in Idaho is big business and growing rapidly. Estimates made by the Idaho department of commerce and development show a total expenditure by tourists in Idaho of $18,179,500 in one year.

Attractions Varied
In Magic Valley are found all the attractions which should enable this area to share generally in the tourist business. In some areas the tourist season is of rather short duration, but in other areas of winter season. Twin Falls and Magic Valley in general—has its share of outdoor attractions almost every month of the year.

As in all other business there is need to advertise so that tourists in general will know of the tremendous resources that are here for them to enjoy.

Businessmen in Twin Falls and other Magic Valley towns are currently interested in this tourist business for the coming summer season. Businessmen in general can well afford to not only be interested, but to do more than has been done to advertise the attractions of the area and then make sure they serve well the people who come here to enjoy them.

Friendliness Needed
When people do come here, just to pass through this part of Idaho or particularly to enjoy the scenery and take part in the many outdoor recreation opportunities, they have the right to expect that local people will provide a means by which they can choose and find those things which they enjoy most. When this is done in a friendly atmosphere the tourist will remember and perhaps come again.

In considering the tourist business it is necessary to find out what the tourist wants. The tourist wants to see the scenery and take part in the many outdoor recreation opportunities, they have the right to expect that local people will provide a means by which they can choose and find those things which they enjoy most. When this is done in a friendly atmosphere the tourist will remember and perhaps come again.

New Highway Building
Also a great east-west highway is now being built through this valley which probably will be just a few miles north of Twin Falls. It will be equally close to many other Magic Valley towns. This is all being done to take care of a great increase in traffic.

It would be folly to think many of these travelers will not be tourists and that they will not want to stop for a few days, especially if they know what there is here for them to enjoy.

During the past year there were over one-half million people who took some time to stop here and visit the nearby national forest areas for recreational purposes. There are several sound reasons to believe that this number will increase considerably in the next few years.

Also, it must be recognized that there are many other features in this valley which are highly scenic and especially attractive to tourists which are not on the national forests.

Valley Has Everything
What is there in, and nearby, Magic Valley which will hold the interest and admiration of tourists? It would be inadequate if not an understatement to say there is everything. Certainly they cannot all be mentioned in one article but it is interesting to point out some of them.

Snake river canyon, as viewed from the Perrine Memorial bridge, is itself an attraction which is looked upon by many a tourist as being strikingly beautiful. When one adds to this view those of Shoshone Falls, Twin Falls and Thousand Springs it all adds up to one of the most scenic attractions to be found in the West.

The Shoshone Ice Caves constitute one of those phenomenal features that amaze one as he stands from the hot desert floor into the coolness of an ice-lined chamber just beneath the lava surface of the broad desert. A visit to this place can be a friendly refreshing, and it will be long remembered by many a tourist.

Craters Unusual
To the east just a few miles on highway 21A is the Craters of the Moon national monument. The new headquarters improvements which were added recently make the highway makes one's visit much more enjoyable. Here one may view a few miles of the vast lava flow, stand on the edge of craters and become a part of a scene where one may not enjoy again in a lifetime.

It is especially thrilling to be there in late May and see the wild flowers growing in profusion in what seems like sterile soil and at times an unfriendly atmosphere for such fragile plants. Many a tourist would enjoy a trip to this area and back from Twin Falls even though it is not on his itinerary.

On the north the Big Wood river country with its fabulous history of old mining towns. Most every mountainous community now famous on a world-wide basis for its year-around recreational resorts.

Bald Mountain Thrilling
One of the most thrilling spots in this noted region is Bald mountain. Most every mountainous community has a Bald mountain. It is a beautiful fact any other mountain in this country has draped across its broad shoulders such facilities as are found here to add the recreational in his enjoyment of the area in both summer and winter.

What one can find there is unbelievable to any except those who have been there. It is rare thrill to ride the so-called "chairway to the stars" to the alvery lined crest of this mountain and view from there the recreational activities below and the magnificent scenery which surrounds it.

Scenic Salmon River
Just over Galens summit one enters the headwaters of the "River of No Return." Here, too, is the Sawtooth Wilderness area into which one can take horseback trips ranging from just a few hours to several weeks according to one's desire. Here one finds the kind of scenery made up of rugged mountain-peaks—clear—tumbling streams on their hurried way to the valley and placid lakes nestled in the quietness of mountain basins which defies description.

Here in this almost untouched and certainly unspoiled wilderness people find the utmost in relaxation and release from the trials of a busy life.

The question most often asked by those who have just finished a trip to this area is, "Why didn't I know about this place before?"

Here in Magic Valley can be found some of the best hunting and fishing to be had anywhere. The variety found in these sports is outstanding. Deer hunting is going on in the hills both to the north and south.

Bylaws Study Set for Farm Bureau Meet

SHOSHONE, May 23—A study of bylaws was made at a meeting of the District Farm Bureau at the home of Mrs. Davis, Dietrich.

Orville Thompson, executive director, explained the purpose of the study. It was pointed out that an exception clause cannot be put into the bylaws unless it is approved by the members.

Contract Neil Brennan to represent the district at the county level of the Farm Bureau was also discussed. Mrs. Davis and Monte Rathbun were asked to help with the arrangement for the evening.

All persons between the 17 and 30 are welcome to the county level of the Farm Bureau at the home of Mrs. Davis. Thompson held a report on the bill would seem to create other department duplicating payments already in charge of forests and parks. This would be considered a violation of state rights and every federal control, he pointed out.

He Wages One-Man War on Mosquitoes

John F. Ingalls, district sanitation, employs his weapons in the war against mosquitoes in a suspected area of Twin Falls. The dipper and "fog" are the only implements used by Ingalls for spreading DDT. He holds standing water for four or more days. Ingalls tosses a few DDT balls in the water to kill the larvae. On some occasions Ingalls has found as many as 700 larvae in one dipper of water. (All photos by Ingalls.)

One Man Fighting Against Mosquito To Eliminate Pests for Summer Fun

Water local summer fun is greatly an invasion of mosquitoes by depend largely on the extent of the district sanitation is one-man war against the pest. Ingalls has a long-handled dipper and a glass jar of DDT balls. For the past two months he has been conducting an insect program of mosquito control. For the past 10 years the sanitation department has waged a battle against the mosquito, but Ingalls has hopes of complete control this year.

While driving about town Ingalls will spot an "isolated pocket" where the insects can breed. This is where his weapons are used. First he draws a dipper of water from a ditch or stream. Then he tosses a few DDT balls into the water.

A grain substance entices the DDT to the water. After about five hours after the ball is in the water the grain dissolves and the DDT is spread throughout the water, killing the adult mosquito and its larvae.

Ingalls believes the best way to prevent another mass invasion of the pest is to get the wholehearted cooperation of Twin Falls citizens, and particularly the ones who have irrigation ditches on their property. To start a program of preventive maintenance.

But Ingalls' fight is not entirely a one-man effort as one instance where he came up this spring illustrates. In an area approximately an acre in diameter just off Blue Lakes boulevard north near the city limits, a program is under way involving the landowner, the canal company and Ingalls.

This area alone caused most of the grief for Twin Falls citizens last year, Ingalls remarks that if

MAGIC VALLEY PORTRAIT Interest Changes Every Three, Four Years, Norman Herrett Says of Self

"Every three or four years I think I change my interest in life. I have done or am doing."

Herrett, 33, and a resident of Twin Falls since 1952, considers his life just a series of hobbies because "I enjoy everything I have done or am doing."

He came to Twin Falls as a high school teacher in 1942, from Billings, Mont., where he had also taught. His reason for wanting to come to Twin Falls: "I tried for several years to get work in Twin Falls because it was a crop country and the weather is pleasant. I came from the cold country."

He received his bachelor of science degree after studying a myriad of subjects including industrial art, biology and art and continued his school work in graduate courses at the University of Montana and Idaho.

Ingalls reports the legislature in its last session passed a law that would give individuals a chance to cooperate for permanent control of the insects. The bill permits formation of a central area for abatement of mosquitoes and rodents.

"If the people want to get together and form an area they can have the financial support necessary," Ingalls points out. "The legislature has given permission to assess a levy within the district."

NORMAN HERRETT

business in Twin Falls during 1947. During the years he taught at Twin Falls high school he taught industrial arts, music, art and radio, all of which tied in with his interest in the subject.

Herrett married his wife, Lillian, in 1952 and they have one daughter, Marian.

His interest in jewelry started early in life although he never dabbled into the business on a full-time basis because it would never support his family.

"The business venture in Twin Falls was actually an experiment," Herrett said. "I had never heard of a successful jewelry business on the outskirts of town, but this venture has worked out wonderfully."

His enthusiasm for Twin Falls quickly rubbed off on his relatives and his wife's family. His brother, Steve J. Herrett, 1022 Second avenue west, and his family moved here from Panama. Another brother, Bill Herrett, Filtr, moved out from New York.

"Mrs. Herrett was successful in talking her brother into moving to the area; however he is leaving shortly for Alaska."

For the past three years Herrett has been working with astronomy and science, and his time and efforts have been realized in an observatory directly back of his business establishment.

For six months he devoted his full time to the project which has been completed in September, 1958. However, he denies that his interest is in astronomy or science by themselves.

"I'm not a star-gazer," he says. "My hope is that through my efforts, and the cooperation of individuals in town that some astronomy or student will be interested to follow up on science and make it seriously."

He is able to keep up with scientific activities by reading, but he does not consider himself an expert on the subject.

Many of his evenings are devoted completely to studying students or organizations through his observatory, and with the help of young persons who have taken up serious study of the subject, he hopes he has fulfilled a desire for learning in some of the 3,000 young persons.

"I can't contribute to science at my age, but if I can help these children understand just a little of the things that hold our universe together, I will consider myself satisfied," he declares.

"I want the teachers and school teachers to know that this observatory is their equipment and if they prefer them to use it, if it isn't used it is wasted, and if it is used it can't be worn out by being looked at."

"If I know it is difficult for teachers to find time to spend two or three nights a year to bring the students here, because I used to teach, too; but I want them to know that discipline is no problem here and if I could feel they could let the children come with-out the teachers, I'm sure we could assure their safety, and interest."

Observatory Work Herrett is continuing his work on the observatory, making improvements, trying new ideas and trying to interest other individuals in it. Since March, 1958, when he started constructing the observatory he has invested approximately $8,000 of his own money, plus all the donated items from local persons.

Although art has always been one of his interests, only recently he has become and became intensely interested in works by Edgar Lee. He takes particular pride in the original Gettysburg words he has in his store.

"The pleasure I get out of them is showing them off and discovering whether people like them as much as I do," he notes. "He was the first person to get a 3-D effect by working on velvet."

Herrett has worked with children through teaching and his professional life since quitting the profession. He has formed a definite opinion as to the qualifications of teachers.

Idaho Power Action in Deeding Island To State Is Good News for Sportsmen

By JIM THUMBARD

Idaho Power and Gas Development Idaho Power Company's recent action deeding Gold Island to the state and game department is good news for sportsmen.

This 322-acre delta in Snake river about a mile below its confluence with the Bolee river is a natural stopping-off place along the Pacific flyway providing migratory waterfowl such as geese and ducks with an abundance of areas for resting, feeding, nesting and just plain loafing.

Firm Bought Island

The company bought Gold Island from private owners and deeded it over for fish and game department administration in accordance with stipulations in federal contracts to compensate for losses to wildlife resources by the construction of dams in the mid-Snake region.

Another example of cooperation along this same line is the J. C. Strike wildlife management area near Brunau.

In building the C. J. Strike dam across Snake river several years ago, the company acquired some 150 acres of land above the high water line of the impoundment. Approximately 200 acres which are irrigable and suitable for agriculture. Moreover the reservoir through inter-agency agreement to develop ferry facilities from some point on the Idaho shore. It is about four and one-half miles upstream, or south of Nyasa, Ore. but all of the riparian is on the Gem state side of the midstream boundary.

Part Developed

In the case of Gold Island, some 125 acres have been developed for agriculture, including an irrigation system. Here under a share-cropping arrangement, the department make certain grain, legumes and grasses, with the state's share to be invested by waterfowl and upland game birds.

Prior to 1935, when Gold Island began to be farmed and pastured intensively, the little delta was famed as a Canada goose congregation and breeding site. It is expected that this activity can be restored for the best of both.

Access by Boat Alone

The only public access to Gold Island today is by private boats, but the department eventually plans to develop ferry facilities from some point on the Idaho shore. It is about four and one-half miles upstream, or south of Nyasa, Ore. but all of the riparian is on the Gem state side of the midstream boundary.

Agreement Followed

All of the land, the reservoir and other elements of value were turned over by the company through inter-agency agreement to the fish and game department to be administered as a wildlife management area.

Because of the broad expanse of open water afforded by the impoundment, and the adjacent accessible portions of the backwater Snake river behind the dam, this area is available for waterfowl. This zone of it is closed to hunting in season, and year-around fishing is available in a region totally surrounded by desert sand and scruboak.

For as long as 1933, during the interim, arable lands have been fenced, leveled and ditched for irrigation. Great grass, feed-producing trees and shrubs have been grown for the benefit of wildlife in the area. Through channeling, diking and pumping, additional water is available.

Once upon a time the concept of game refuges or "preserves" was to set aside a strip of "wild plot" from which animals, birds or fishes would appear—after protecting under complete protection and ideal habitat—and populate the surrounding countryside. In fact, as far as public access of use was concerned, the refuges were inviolate and definitely off limits.

But all that has changed. Now the objective is to provide public access, restore living quarters for wild life and develop sound biologic programs. Under such multiple-use programs, some parts of marshy wetlands and even certain lakes and potholes have been created.

Feeding, nesting and resting areas have been built to promote bobwhite, quail, and other birds. The Snake river area is a natural stopping-off place along the Pacific flyway providing migratory waterfowl such as geese and ducks with an abundance of areas for resting, feeding, nesting and just plain loafing.

A wildlife management area may also be developed for other recreational purposes until a nesting season has ended and the young can take care of themselves.

But it must be observed that all of the management area is not for the use of the young. It is for the life cycle of a mammal, a bird or fish species.

For example, eastern Idaho's Snake creek wildlife management area includes 4,012 acres of land purchased from private owners and together with 1,040 acres of federal land—all set aside to provide key winter range in Fremont county where former shorthorn cowboys once threatened to reduce the number and herd size of wild horses and herd size. It was believed also that unrestricted passage of elk from summer to winter range would reduce or eliminate damage to private land and crops.

Many Vail Hatchery

Hatchery, in addition to its basic function, has hunters, fishermen and hunters and herders, room, service clubs and whatnot, who also to observe the hatchery operation and see the rainbow trout swarming with trout.

And of major importance is the management area located at the former Parson's naval training station on Lake Pend. Oreille in northern Idaho. In addition to its wildlife restoration and management functions the area hosts tens of thousands of visitors every year with its parking, boating, picnicking and other facilities for vacationers.

Fish and game Director Ross Leonard says that, fundamentally, the department is not intent on land ownership except in instances where it contributes directly to the enhancement of fish and wildlife or provides public access to such resources. Some land acquisition provides security more than a trail or narrow road through private property so that the public can reach important fish and game resources and share in the harvest.

Whether big or freely strips to provide access, most of the department land is made up of rough, marginal lands with very few of them have patches which can be cultivated. Grain crops, fruit and other crops are planted and some program of development.

In public areas sufficient to provide for the department's basic purpose is to manage the land as a resource and to provide for the life cycle of a mammal, a bird or fish species.

It is for the life cycle of a mammal, a bird or fish species.

It is for the life cycle of a mammal, a bird or fish species.

It is for the life cycle of a mammal, a bird or fish species.

31 Stock Market 'Experts' Are Among T.F. Graduates, Thanks to Trust Fund

Twin Falls high school will graduate 31 stock market "experts" this spring, thanks to a $5,000 anonymous trust fund, the enthusiasm of an economist teacher and the guidance of local investment veterans.

The story of 31 students, 31 of whom were seniors; their teacher, Mrs. Clara Anderson, and their trials with the unpredictable stock market started early in the school term when $5,000 was placed in their laps by an unknown benefactor who wanted to see young students learn about investing in securities.

"Marked for investment"

The trust was labeled "Economic Education Trust," and with the Twin Falls Bank and Trust as trustee, the money was marked for the use of the economics class for investments.

By the terms of the trust agreement the purpose of the trust was threefold, first, for the education in economic theory with participation in the actual buying and selling of securities second, to provide a fund for scholarships for higher education, and third, to further the education of students enrolled in other high schools in Idaho and provide a fund for scholarships in such other schools.

Mrs. Anderson reported recently that both she and the students were appreciative of the aid of investing economy class money and so for the first few months ago alerted the students to an introduction of the stock market, its ups and downs, its whys and wherefores, and its reasons for being.

Bought Boeiling First

Shortly before the end of 1938 the students made their first ventures in the stock exchange. They purchased 10 shares of Boeiling aircraft stock Dec. 17, 1938, for $49.95. The trust agreement states that no more than $200 can be invested in one particular stock.

On the heels of the first investment they spent $112.50 for five shares of Broughs Business Machines on Jan. 22, 1939 for five shares of Zenith Lumber Co. Feb. 28, and $470.00 for 10 shares of Idaho Power and Light Co. March 16.

"Before these students are graduated we hope to buy stock in two more companies," Mrs. Anderson said, "and we announced this week. With the addition of two more stocks the total investment will approach $5,000."

Distended Paid

From a profit standpoint the students have received word that their investments have brought each and principal income of $24.40. Included in this are two quarterly dividend checks from Broughs and Idaho Power, $1.25 each. But money isn't everything.

"The students have gained valuable information during the course of study and their reports and analyses should be of great value to them in years to come," Mrs. Anderson said.

She said one of the reasons that adds variety to the stock market purchased was that the students learned that variety in any investment program is necessary to success.

In the trust agreement it is stated that any profit from the stock ventures goes for scholarships. Mrs. Anderson commented, "We've got a start on helping someone."

Boeing Drops

Although only minor fluctuations have taken place in most of the stocks purchased, the students have noted a large drop in Boeing stock, from approximately $50 a share when it was purchased, to about $40 a share at present.

"I guess—half the break—of playing with the stock market," one student said. Another said, "We still made a profit."

Mrs. Anderson admits it was difficult for the students to make up their minds about which stock to purchase.

"Each student had his pet and they spent quite a bit of time trying to convince the others that there was the stock to buy," Mrs. Anderson said. "Finally after the trust was narrowed to just a few choices, the students voted and selected the one they wanted to buy."

Trustees Have Veto Power

However, the decision of what stock to buy was not entirely that of the students. In accordance with the trust agreement, the trustees were informed of the stock the students wished to purchase and if it was not advised by the trustee, the students had to make another selection. The students were told immediately whether the stock should be purchased.

"The students did not rush heading into the stock market blindly," Mrs. Anderson said. "They spent much time on the subject. They read up on the stock market, and they've developed a complete time to the subject."

"The added time spent on stocks was worth it," she stated, "and I hope but feel that these students have learned more about our economic factors in a few months than most young persons learn in high school and college."

Mrs. Anderson admits she was caught unprepared for teaching such an involved subject. Fortunately she was able to call on local experts and stock market references to supply background and thinking material for students.

Businessmen assist

Businessmen and stock brokers in the area came to her aid with pamphlets, brochures, booklets and assorted literature that now numbers in the hundreds. This was supplemented by current readings in magazines, and the financial pages of newspapers.

Officers of the Twin Falls Bank and Trust company visited the class as well as speakers familiar with stocks, bonds and mutual funds. Mrs. Anderson subscribed to the Wall Street Journal as a guide for her and the students.

"They got so they followed religiously the pages of the Journal, and they've learned a great deal," she said.

Some of the well-known references used by Mrs. Anderson and the students as they felt their way along on the subject were Moody's, Fitch's and Poor's financial guides, and Changing Times by Kiplinger. She said these references formed the backbone of the course.

Something New

Mrs. Anderson admits the stock market was something new for her as well as the students. Part of the announcement of the gift she had taken a correspondence course from the National Chamber of Commerce on economics.

The course touches only lightly on the subject of stocks, but it gave me an economic background that was sure helpful when this gift came along," she said.

959 Prospects Looking Better Than Last Year for Graduates of Colleges

WASHINGTON, May 23—The job market for college graduates this year is looking better than last year. The shortage is particularly acute in the scientific fields and in the elementary grades.

Job prospects in the newspaper industry are bright. Many schools of journalism have reported a sharp decrease in the number of graduates over the past few years. In addition to newspaper reporting, there is an increasing number of jobs in such allied fields as advertising, public relations, radio and television.

Women would appear to have the best of it in this summer's job hunting. The department says there is a great demand for women graduates with stenographic skills and broad college backgrounds who can advance to administrative positions. There also are many jobs available in home economics and librarianship.

Prospects Good

Over-all, the prospects for this year's college graduates are good. But what about the 1,663,000 high school graduates who will enter the labor market this summer? That's a worrisome problem, getting worse every year.

As the below-college level, the greatest opportunities for employment today are for technicians. Men—and women, too—with skill and training in such fields as electronics, engineering and drafting are having no trouble getting good jobs.

Such jobs usually don't require college education, but they do require post-high school work in junior college, or technical or vocational schools.

Soil Scientist of the labor department suggests that high-school graduates who can't afford to don't want to continue their formal education might find the best training of all in the armed forces.

For travel-minded students, there are summer jobs in Europe. A nonprofit organization has been established to help American students work with European factories, farms or resorts.

Interested students and recent high school or college graduates can write to the American Student Information Service, 20 V. S. Highway 66A, Frankfort, Md., Germany. They must pay their own travel expenses, and their wages in Europe probably will cover only a part. But they will have a chance to learn about foreign countries, their peoples and languages.

Writer Wishes for Courage to Say Some Things He Thinks

By SAUL PATT

NEW YORK, May 23—Some day I'd like to have the courage to tell a plumber, or a painter or a carpenter, "If you're not here on an hour, I'll get someone else."

Under-tip a lousy waiter and tell him why.

Tell the boss, "If you'll see my days, how many have you got?"

Tell a cab driver, "When I want any of your philosophy, I'll ask for it."

Ask my wife, "What happens to our money?"

Walk up to the big loud mouth at the bar and belt him with a prior introduction.

Out-race a mile trooper, trying to give me a ticket, to the state house.

Ask Queen Elizabeth II, during an audience at Buckingham Palace, "What's a beautiful dame like you doing in a junk like that?"

Directly my force against my neighbor's predatory children.

Tell the old lady who always manages to stand next me when I get a seat on a crowded bus.

Madam, the doctors give me three minutes to stand next me when I get a seat on a crowded bus.

Stand on my head in a modern art gallery and shout, "It does not look better this way."

Ask the doctor, "The trunk, doctor, if you're paid for your college education and equipment 100 times over?"

Ask President Eisenhower, "Are you sure you counted all your strokes, including those two in the rear?"

Say to Tullulah Bankhead at a crowded airport, "Is her fondly and then back off, saying, "Sorry, I thought you were my mother-in-law."

Dark for Geologists

The darkest outlook seems to be for geologists. The petroleum industry is pulling down on its geological activities and isn't hiring as many as it used to.

Geology majors may have to get the job they want by getting into the petroleum industry in some capacity to qualify, particularly in recent years that shifting quantity to quality, particularly in the scientific field, geology is being more selective in hiring.

In every field, the department says, local conditions will be the determining factor.

It's hard to go far from home to get the job he wants.

The department says it believes the job will be available for all who don't want the exact job they want, at the salary they want in the city they want.

It is a field where the demand is expected to catch up with the supply in a few years.

The Education association recommends a shortage next fall of 100 teachers, about the same as last year. The shortage is particularly acute in the scientific fields and in the elementary grades.

Job prospects in the newspaper industry are bright. Many schools of journalism have reported a sharp decrease in the number of graduates over the past few years. In addition to newspaper reporting, there is an increasing number of jobs in such allied fields as advertising, public relations, radio and television.

Important Announcement SYRINGA LIFE INSURANCE COMPANY OFFERS FULL LINE OF LIFE POLICIES

Syringa Life Insurance Company now offers the Idaho public a full line of modern, progressive life policies.

What value is this announcement to you? Our answer... two questions:

First: Is your insurance, estate or savings program, outmoded, prehistoric, ineffective? Second: Does it include the many new benefits of modern underwriting?

Whatever your answer you owe it to your future and your family's future security to inquire about Syringa's full line of modern, progressive policies which include these new benefits, securities, and savings features.

Syringa, an old line legal reserve company, offers policies which incorporate these new insurance underwriting concepts, provide maximum insurance coverage and complete short or long term savings programs; a unique Charter policy for limited number of new policy holders; the modern, unusual values of a combination investment and income security retirement policy, 1,000 units of company's valuable Founder's policy are being reserved for company stock holders and their assigns.

SYRINGA DERIVES ITS GREAT STRENGTH from the fact that its roots are planted solidly in Idaho... its stock subscription wholly owned and controlled by farmers, clerks, business and professional men, government employees, officials... from people of all walks of life in every corner of our great state.

MAIN BASIS OF THIS STRENGTH... Syringa's assurance of growth and progress... stems from genuine, and overwhelming confidence which people of Idaho have displayed for our company. This confidence resulted in record stock subscription sale of $1 1/2-million.

THESE VERY SUBSTANTIAL ASSETS permit rapid and efficient expansion of company's sales organization... provide immediate and long term benefits, values, profits, dividends, for every Syringa stockholder and policy holder. It will, therefore, be in your financial interest to inquire about our Syringa's unique, new insurance programs... use Syringa's strength to protect you... and your family's security... insure with Syringa... inquire today about Syringa's unusual savings, investment, retirement programs.

BIRTH OF NEW COMPANY: Syringa Office Manager Ted McPhee (left) and Company President Fred M. Frazier (center) hold Syringa Life Insurance Company's Certificate of Authority as Ray Nielsen, Company 2nd Vice President looks on approvingly. Located presently at 1223 Filer Ave. E, Twin Falls, vigorous new company will move into nearby Syringa Life Insurance Building, now under construction, in about two or three months.
