NEW YORK, Sept. 26 (AP)—The loudest of television's angry young men, is angry no more.

Paul Revere is engaged in a running battle with a group of critics who are attacking him as an author who writes about the life of a young man who is a member of the "beatnik" generation.

"You can fool all of the people some of the time and some of the people all of the time," said Revere in a recent interview.

The general being drawn from this is that the American people are not so easily fooled as they are often given credit for being.

Actually, Revere, who probably has more "hits" than any other TV-writer, has been a success because he feeds his audience a steady diet of the "beatnik" philosophy. "My philosophy is I can't do anything about it," he said.

Serling makes his debut in the new "Out" 2-4 exercise program which is a weekly series of 30 minutes without losing his offbeat and sometimes off-putting adventures in the realm of the "beatnik" generation.

He has written 21 of the 26 stories which, with about 100 million viewers, has made him a star. "That makes me a star," he said cheerfully. "It will also give him four or four and a half million more viewers."

Now TV merely recycles him. He is highly important today. He is a household name. He is a $50,000 to $75,000 a year.

Serling won a $500 prize for a radio script while still a student at the University of Michigan. He then wrote 40 radio scripts and didn't get paid.

He got a $50 a week job with a Cincinnati radio station which was asked for a $10 rate and was turned down.

For two "beat" happy years he and his wife married in college and lived in a tiny apartment in New York City.

"I got into for my first half-hour radio show in 1947. My wife's half-hour show today is from 10 to 11 p.m. on WABC."

"I'm not in rebellion against anything. What can I rebel against? Life has been too good for me."

TUCKER'S NATIONAL WHIRLIGIG POT SHOTS

By TUCKER

Every Sunday Ray Tucker answers readers' questions of interest to the general public. Questions may be sent to him at 700 Hill Street, Twin Falls, Idaho.

WASHINGTON—Nikita Khrushchev's tour of the United States has been a magnificent triumph for Khrushchev and Russian communism.

The Russian dictator is known as a hero who has defied and lauded "American capitalists" from Pennsylvania avenue, Washington, to the White House.

Contrary to Washington's expectations when he was invited here, he is not a "beatnik" or a "beatnik" as the United States has before him arrived.

He was not impressed by the elevated status of our automobiles, the high-tower of our skyscrapers.

In his pragmatic way, he commented and we don't have much to show him.

"Yes, man, this is really a great country and we don't have much to show him."

As a matter of fact, we believe we have more to show him than he has to show us.

It is a shame that it is just pouring down!

WELL, YES, ACTUALLY!

Some of the Chamber of Commerce types are having a rather difficult time in trying to explain to the public the weather.

I heard one man in a store the other day explaining to a customer who apparently is a relative newcomer. His explanation went something like this:

"Yes, man, this is really a great country and we don't have much to show him."

As a matter of fact, we believe we have more to show him than he has to show us.

It is a shame that it is just pouring down!

WASHINGTON (AP)—Nikita Khrushchev's endless utterances about the ending of the American tour are revealing to Washington an amazing record of evasions, distortions and lies.

The facts in answer to direct questions. This record is a masterpiece of evasions, distortions and lies.

The facts are just the opposite. The facts are just the opposite. The facts are just the opposite.

At the New York Economic Club luncheon, he declared that the Soviet Union wanted no military bases in the United States.

A CHALLENGE TO FATHERS

Readers of the Times-News will find a timely article in today's Sunday feature section. It has to do with the juvenile delinquency problem which appears to be sweeping this country like wildfire.

While the nation's attention is now being centered on New York City, greatest cesspool of juvenile crime in the country, everyone who cares for his own children should be concerned. It is not confined to the metropolitan areas by any means. We see symptoms of this spreading malignancy cropping out far and wide—even in our own communities.

It is not that the American people have failed to recognize that more and more youngsters are falling prey to some rebellious influence. They are well aware and statistics prove the problem is getting out-of-control.

But they have failed miserably in assuming their share of responsibility for such ugly facts.

Some dismiss the problem—almost flippantly with such remarks as "Children are no different now from what they ever were." Others place the responsibility on the schools, churches and law enforcement.

But there are relatively few parents who admit they themselves are largely to blame.

With no thought of injecting religion into this discussion, other than to cite a good example, it is quite generally agreed that LDS church and members of that faith are doing exceptionally good work among their youngsters.

And it so happens that in Twin Falls doctrine is a local leader in that particular church, has volunteered to discuss the subject at some length in the feature section of today's Times-News.

It is not surprising that Dr. Vaughn Pond, a member of the Twin Falls stake high council, would place most of the responsibility for juvenile delinquency on the parents themselves. But it is enlightening how he analyzes the parental shortcomings which contribute to the problem.

"Mothers and fathers—fathers particularly—must face up to these shortcomings and provide proper guidance for their youngsters," he contends—"our society is to be blamed for this."

Home training, to Dr. Pond's way of thinking, is based on respect for authority, and family authority should be grounded in respect for the father. If fathers lose the respect that should be shown anyone else, the strength of the family unit for ages, our society is faced with serious trouble.

If the child doesn't learn this respect at home, it is only logical, as Dr. Pond sees it, that he will learn it elsewhere, including his teacher, a police officer or the law itself.

WELL, YES, ACTUALLY!

Some of the Chamber of Commerce types are having a rather difficult time in trying to explain to the public the weather.

I heard one man in a store the other day explaining to a customer who apparently is a relative newcomer. His explanation went something like this:

"Yes, man, this is really a great country and we don't have much to show him."

As a matter of fact, we believe we have more to show him than he has to show us.

It is a shame that it is just pouring down!

Church Says Demos Form Western Bloc

RAWLINS, Wyo., Sept. 26 (UPI)—Organization of a "western Democratic bloc" that "has fair to right influence," was claimed today by Sen. Frank Church, D-Idaho, in a address prepared for the state convention of Wyoming Democratic clubs of Wyoming.

Church said, "We have been able to establish a western conference in the senate that will further the interests of the area region more effectively than ever before."

He noted that 24 of the 48 western senators have Democratic affiliations and added, "So long as we keep the West solidly Democratic, we shall speak with one mighty voice in the legislative councils of the national government."

Church called the last session of congress "hard-working and productive." He said that a proposed budget of $140,000,000 less than the total amount recommended by President Eisenhower.

"I expect this session," Church said, "because I don't think you'll find it as unproductive as the last one. He said that during the last session of congress every time a bill was passed, something more money for a given program than the President asked, black and white propaganda, condemned the Democrats as 'treasonous spenders.' Every time less money was appropriated a sack leaked."

Khrushchev And Ike Pay Visit to Farm

GETTYSBURG, Pa., Sept. 26 (UPI)—Soviet Premier Nikita Khrushchev and President Eisenhower made a flying visit to the Gettysburg farm today in the midst of their momentous cold war talks.

The trip was made by helicopter from the Camp David retreat. Khrushchev and Ike landed about 25 miles from the Eisenhower farm on the edge of the Civil War battlefield.

It was an unscheduled event and was unannounced until the "big boys" were on their way to the Catoctin mountain site of their conference.

Herb Son Goes Along

Eisenhower and Khrushchev took off from Camp David at 4:20 p.m. (EST) and arrived at Gettysburg 20 minutes later. They were accompanied by Maj. John S. Eisenhower, the President's son and Capt. E. D. Aurnand, White House naval aide.

Khrushchev, who was wearing a blue suit, was accompanied by Oleg Troyanovsky, who was wearing a dark suit, and a young man in a white shirt and tie.

In addition to showing off the site of the President's battlefield headquarters to his four grandchildren, Mrs. E. A. Eisenhower, Mrs. Susan T. and Mrs. Mary E. Eisenhower.

Fair Talk at Farm

After greeting the grandchildren and the two sons of the President, Eisenhower and Khrushchev went inside the President's house and out on the beautiful porch overlooking the President's garden, his private putting green, and the beautiful view of the battlefield.

The two leaders sat in easy chairs on the porch and talked and talked for a while before going out to a pasture on the edge of the house to board the helicopter for take off at 5:56 p.m.

They landed at Camp David 15 minutes later.

Farm Gates Closed

Although the word of the unspecified visit was given in Gettysburg, all gates to the farm were suddenly closed to the public and tourists in an observation tower on the battlefield some distance from the Eisenhower farm.

The gates were closed and ordered by police to come down immediately.

The tower normally is closed to tourists when the President is at the farm.

Outside the fence surrounding the Eisenhower acreage, news photographers saw a black and white station wagon with the President and the premier and take them for a motor tour of the battlefield, including the section where the President breeds his thoroughbred Angus cattle.

Gangland Is Silent About Dead Pisano

NEW YORK, Sept. 26 (UPI)—Gangland was silent today about the murder slayings of big-time mobster "Little Augie" Fierro and the beautiful blonde of nightclub comedian Allan Drake.

Pisano and Mrs. Drake were shot in the head while riding in a Phantom Cadillac near La Guardia airport in Queens late last night.

The gunmen apparently were fired from the back seat of a question which escape without leaving any clues.

Detectives sought to question national and local underworld figures.

They need two handsets. One was the light-tipped tradition of the underworld. The other was that of the racketeer, a .38 Smith & Wesson.

Dr. Anthony Carano—was so varied, any number of rivals might have wanted him out of the way.

Pisano Was Strong

Pisano, 52, had been an underworld power for more than 30 years. He hobnobbed with racket figures such as Lucky Luciano and Frank Costello and once was a lieutenant to the notorious Al Capone.

Mrs. Drake, 32, the former Jeanne Hansen, was Miss Sara Jane's first wife.

Pisano and the blond were gunned down while he was driving, she at his side.

Schedule

WASHINGTON, Sept. 26 (UPI)—Here is Premier Nikita Khrushchev's schedule for tomorrow (all times eastern daylight):

7:30 a.m.—Camp David, Md., for Washington.

8 a.m.—Lunch at Soviet Embassy here.

8:45 a.m.—Hotels news conference at National Press club.

9:30 a.m.—drives national news teleconference address from NBC studio.

10:30 a.m.—private dinner—10 p.m.—leaves for Washington from Andrews air force base.

"Sales Pitch" Is Told by Benson

COLOGNE, Germany, Sept. 26 (UPI)—Secretary of State Acheson's sales pitch for American farm products at the opening of the international General Provisions and Fine Foods exhibition in Cologne.

"We want to sell—really sell," said Benson. "And we especially like to sell for dollars as we are able to do here."

Germany is one of the largest cash buyers of U.S. products.

Delay Asked

POCAHONTS, Sept. 26 (UPI)—The Idaho Motel association has urged the state board of health to delay a proposed state motel act until the spring of 1954.

Lava Hot Springs until a thorough investigation can be completed.

The resolution was adopted last night at a convention of the group held at the Holiday Inn, introduced by President B. H. Brown.

It will "freeze" existing motels until the board of health has approved.

Launcher Set for Rocket Shootings

Looking over the assembled launcher from which four experimental rockets will be fired at the Twin Falls rifle range at 3 p.m. today are two of the "brains" behind the project—Bill Ellis, left, and John Laitmore, right. Ellis originated the idea, while Laitmore did the mechanical drawing and drafting required—John Backe, not pictured, did the majority of the cutting and welding work on the foot adjustable mechanism. (Staff photo-entraping)

T.F. Rocket Research Association to Hold First Launching Today at Range

Weather permitting, Sunday will see the first efforts at launching live rockets by members of the T.F. Rocket Research Association at the Twin Falls rifle range.

The mobile launching tower, constructed jointly by Bill Ellis, John Laitmore and John Sackett, has a cement block for the base. A cup shaped hole fitted with a bolt provides for tilting the tower to the desired angle for launching. A hole in the base plate's center provides an exit for exhaust gases. If a rocket should fail to launch, a blast deflector protects the launcher from heat of the fire.

The boys have made a firing control panel, which will permit firing electrically by remote control.

The 150-pound launcher breaks down into four parts, or the rods may all be removed, making it easily portable in an automobile. The rods are set up in a half hour's time. The piece of equipment is 13 feet high.

Outside rods are of aluminum tubing, with the finer one, which will take the guidance job, of four-inch diameter. Set on a pivot, the entire launcher can be tilted to the desired degree for firing.

Four-inch rockets will be launched, but the design will permit adjustment for three-inch rockets at a later time. The members feel this adjustable feature makes their equipment unique. The 20-inch rockets were manufactured by the association by Seth Christiansen, precision machinist.

The club hopes to experiment with larger rockets and various types of fuels. "The members spend a very small part of their time in actual experiments, with approximately nine-tenths of their time in the club spent on study."

From 40 to 50 non-hours of work went into construction of the launcher. Cost of equipment was handled through dues of members. Their telephones and tracking equipment is being furnished for the experiments by the army research unit, which also provides a meeting place and technical film for club meetings.

Unless there are heavy rains or moderately high winds the public will be able to view the rocket launchings at the rifle range seven miles south and one-mile west of Five Points road. Procedures for the launchings will begin about 3 p.m. club president Bill Ellis reports.

Athiest Khrushchev Refers to Christianity Often on His Trip

GETTYSBURG, Pa., Sept. 26 (UPI)—Soviet Premier Nikita Khrushchev, although making it known that he is an atheist, has invoked the name of God and referred to Christianity often during his American visit.

Here are some of the instances: "I am speaking in the name of my people and among my people we have very many Christians. Most of all we want you to have this and be a Christian."

Sept. 24, Puttburgh, N.C. Khrushchev said, "I am speaking in the name of my people and among my people we have very many Christians. Most of all we want you to have this and be a Christian."

Sept. 25, during talk with Sen. Laitmore, Khrushchev said, "I am speaking in the name of my people and among my people we have very many Christians. Most of all we want you to have this and be a Christian."

Sept. 26, during talk with Sen. Laitmore, Khrushchev said, "I am speaking in the name of my people and among my people we have very many Christians. Most of all we want you to have this and be a Christian."

Will Attend Meet

Officers of the Twin Falls county council of local demonstration clubs who plan to attend the state convention in Burley Monday and Tuesday, include Mrs. Robert Brown, Twin Falls; Mrs. Jeanne Hansen, Five Points; Mrs. Dian Davis, Twin Falls; and Mrs. Donald Boner, Kimberly.

Mrs. H. A. Childers and Mrs. Hector Loughmiller will arrange for the convention.

Even the "Christian" teaching of the members of individual home demonstrators if they understand that they have been misled, we must follow this Christian precept.

Salvagers Near Port With Ship

NEWPORT, Va., Sept. 26 (UPI)—The battered hull of a tanker which broke in two off the Maryland coast was towed past the Virginia capes into Hampton roads today on the last lap of a rag-to-riches sea salvage job.

Adored were eight "wary" and expert salvagers who defied the experts, floated the 400-foot stern and then inched down the Atlantic coast "toward a spot" here where she will be sold for an estimated two million dollars.

Shoshone Man Displays New Hobby

Elmer Terry, Shoshone, introduced his latest hobby, casework, at the Lincoln county fair. He credits his interest from remodeling the family home. Various kinds of cases he has made include long-play hi-fi record case, ladies jewel case, train case, and one to hold leather craft tools. He plans to make cases for guns, cameras and trays to exhibit arrowheads. A resident of Magic Valley since 1918, he farmed in Lincoln county until 1941 and is now rural mail carrier in Shoshone. Life in MAGIC VALLEY

At the Lincoln county fair this year, Elmer Terry, a SHOSHONE man, introduced his latest hobby, casework. The display attracted considerable attention. The procedure for making the cases is quite simple, Terry says, and proves to be an interesting hobby. Interest in this type of work, at least the part with wood, began when Terry remodeled the family home here. However, he gives his wife and family considerable credit for the home remodeling project, and states his interests haven't been confined to carpentering. He has studied electronics as a side issue.

First step in preparing the cases is to lay out material and determine the size of case to be made, decided by what one aims to use the case for.

AS YOUR MINISTER SEES IT

"Some Things Are Not Expensive"
By NORMAN E. STOCKWELL, Rector, Episcopal Church. We are in days of inflation and everything seems to cost so much more, and apparently getting less. The sign of the time for this age is the shrinking dollar. Because of this fact, I wasn't particularly surprised when in conversation with a group of people, one gentleman said: "The church is always asking for money. I am sick and tired of the repeated requests." At that moment, it might have seemed that I was on the spot. People in general rarely blink an eye at the amount they spend for their own pleasures (clothing, entertainment, cosmetics and buying him food and clothing and other needful accessories of life. Then there were the many meetings when he tossed fitfully in the grip of an alien fever. We even bought him a puppy for a faithful companion as he grew older. "Then when he started to school, he really began to cost us. The apoplexy of a growing boy—physical, social, financial and spiritual—are something to behold. He was never one who was extravagant. His mother and I had amply forgotten (where growth is concerned) how much it costs to maintain victories already won, and to pay for the growing edge of ever-widening horizons. "But again I say—no one dare slip to shoulder the privileges and responsibilities involved in that wonderful adventure of the maturing spirit. Thoughtful souls never find it hard to put first things first. "But then when he was in college—and the fruit of all our years of sacrifice seemed within reaching distance—we suffered a fatal football accident. He lingered for a few months. Occasionally he called. But we could see him slowly slipping away from us. Then one day he quietly died. "And he hasn't cost us a single cent since—not a single cent." The moral of this story is too obvious to labor. So let's put it into two sentences. A dead church is easy to pay for. A live one—the only kind worth its salt—is worth the finest we can give it.

Bellevue Rancher Explains Value Of Irrigated Pasture on His Ranch

—JANUARY, Sept. 26—WALTER STEWART, Bellevue rancher, has demonstrated that irrigated pasture is a profitable crop in the Big Wood River valley.

"My 20 acres of irrigated pasture netted me more profit than any other crop I grew this year," he says. In 1958 he realized a net profit of $6,057.74 or $302.84 an acre.

Stewart planted his pasture four years ago as a mixture of smooth bromegrass orchard grass, fescue and Ladino clover. Local soil conservation officials state this is a good mixture, but that only one or two crops in a mixture result in more uniform use of the pasture by livestock.

Stewart divides his 20 acres of pasture into two grazing units for as deep as when irrigating alfalfa for rotation purposes. Some ranchers divide their pasture into enough pastures to allow livestock a new pasture each day. This is called strip-pasturing. In any event, Stewart believes each pasture unit should get a two-week rest period before being grazed again. He also believes new seedlings should not be grazed until the second spring after planting.

Floyd Dorius of the SCS notes that where livestock are moved daily about 14 pastures are required. With this intensity of rotation an acre can support up to four cows or acres for the grazing season.

The average capacity of irrigated pasture is two to three cows or in to 15 sheep per acre.

Stewart fertilizes his pasture with nitrogen and phosphate in the spring and again in the late summer. Clipping weeds and avoiding grazing when the pasture is very wet are profitable, he says. He irrigates his pastures every 10 to 14 days, but he has not found it necessary to soak the land.

Peas Raised on Pumpland Loaded Into 10 Freight Cars for Trip to England

A large shipment of commercial peas, all raised on new pumpland near Paul and Rupert, was loaded in bulk this past week on 10 freight cars with an ultimate destination in England.

The consignor was W. J. Peters, Twin Falls, who built two large warehouses this summer on the flat desert country five miles east and one-half mile north of Paul. One warehouse, with a capacity for 10,000 bushels of grain, is leased to the Kerr Grain company. The other is for his own business, has a storage capacity of 153,000 sacks of peas, and is an air set off for milling peas.

—Peas to England—

Stewart says the shipment of peas to England is probably the first bulk shipment of peas out of this valley. A survey of some warehouses in the Twin Falls area indicated the increasing importance of the crop.

Deadline Set For Requests On Soil Bank

Farmers interested in the conservation reserve of the soil bank for 1960 have until Sept. 30 to request a bank annual rate per acre, says Carl Boyd, chief of Twin Falls county agricultural agent.

"Time was extended from Sept. 10 to allow the department of agriculture to re-study of the method being used in establishing rental value of land offered for the program as well as the fact that new legislation is pending," Boyd said.

Boyd said that the department of agriculture is offering a rental rate to be based upon the average annual crop production from such acreage during the past five years.

Boyd said many problems have been encountered in applying this provision, particularly in areas where drought and other natural disasters have affected crop yields unusually during one or more of the past five years.

Farmers who have filed application already for bank rates need take no further action at this time, he said. Their application will be held and set-up upon after instructions are received. Application for bank rates need not be accepted until further notice.

Extra Acreages Of Sugar Beets Won't Be OK'd

The sugar division of the department of agriculture has advised the Idaho Beet Growers association that it has no intention of issuing any acreage to cover overplanting in 1959.

Ed Scott, Twin Falls, president of the association, says the possibility is remote, why his department, allowing any beet to be marketed out of allotment. Scott says acreage of sugar beets planted in excess of acreage allotment or beets planted without allotment.

Scott reports growing conditions in most beet areas have been excellent and the crop is now estimated in excess of 2,500,000 tons of sugar. The surplus is not being marketed in excess of 100,000 tons, he says. The surplus is not being marketed in excess of 100,000 tons, he says.

Harvest of 10,000 Acres Of Simplot Spuds Starts

—HEVON: Sept. 26—Harvesting of 10,000 acres of late potatoes in the Simplot contract area is well under way after a week of rain. The company does not expect a bad harvest.

General Manager Paul H. Hansen reported the yields to be down from last year. Many potatoes were hit by frost in July, August and early September.

Hansen said also that the potatoes were into storage Friday for the huge acreage of potatoes harvested by the first of November.

Voluntary Hunter Safety Training Used in Idaho

On firing line in the foreground for shooting practice as part of voluntary hunter safety training in public schools are K. O. Flock, retired forest supervisor, and Mrs. Alta Coffey, instructing Susanne Crowmell, state-wide hunter safety program are in effect in 26 states. About half are based upon a law making it mandatory to take firearms training before getting the first hunting license. The others are on a voluntary basis. Sportsmen and women who are willing to devote instruction time on the firing ranges—after having met rigid qualifications of National Rifle association—are key to Idaho's program. Key to Hunting Safety Program Is to Give Hunters Basic Desire to Be Safe

By E. KLEISS BROWN (Idaho Fish and Game Department)

Close supervision of hunters in the field is out of the question, the objective, then, in making hunting an absolutely safe sport is to instill in hunters a fundamental desire to be safe.

Wildlife administrators and the National Rifle association have been concerned with the safety of those involved in the sport of hunting for a long time, but until recently hunter develops a respect for firearms and assumes the responsibility for hunting safely, we will continue to have accidents.

Our job in gaining that objective is teaching respect for firearms through education from the moment people begin to think about going hunting, they should know exactly what firearms are, how they work, what they will do, and how to handle them safely.

That is the job, stated briefly. How do we do it?

There are statewide programs in effect in 26 states. About half are based upon a law making it mandatory to take firearms safety training before getting the first hunting license. The others are on the voluntary basis. In the state of Idaho, the National Rifle association and Idaho sponsor statewide voluntary programs. The other western states also conduct voluntary programs although they are not classified as statewide by the NRA.

In Idaho there were several local efforts in teaching hunter safety prior to the initiation of a statewide effort, such good work was being done, but a steady increase in hunting accidents led to the widespread feeling that a thorough, statewide program was needed. Idaho fish and game director, Howard Leonard, called together several sportsmen leaders to discuss the situation in January, 1928. This group agreed that the department should spearhead a statewide program.

The NRA was asked for help in getting the program started. Stan Mate, NRA training specialist, came from Washington and assisted in staging a series of clinics. The object of the clinics was not only to introduce the program statewide, but also to enlist and train hunter safety instructors.

Following the hunter safety clinics the NRA transferred to the state the job of selection and supervision of hunter safety instructors. Publicity regarding the program was initiated appealing for aid in the promotion of hunter safety training. Sportsmen's clubs were contacted and field men of the department started working for hunter safety instructors and a local program.

Many requests from all over the state for short "hunter safety clinics" were filled in the year following the initial kick-off of the program. By the end of the second year more than 600 instructors were qualified.

It became evident in the beginning that some device was needed with which to reach young people in large quantities. Local clubs soon found out that hard work, good publicity, and a job of advance work did not necessarily spell success. Prospective students were simply not turning out.

Faced with this problem, department representatives contacted the state superintendent of public instruction and permission was received to approach the public schools. The results were gratifying. School administrators everywhere were glad to receive department instructors and their firearms safety training texts. Schedules were arranged, usually in the physical education periods, and the school program was off to a good start.

For the school program, the standard NRA hunter safety course was boiled down to three one-hour instruction and demonstration periods. The procedure adopted was to use the school lecture series to cover the basic instruction needed, and then to enlist the cooperation of local sportsmen in the testing and completion phase.

With the combination school and sportsman club program in operation, about 10,000 out of 40,000 sportsmen to ninth grade students are being reached each year. The biggest difficulty in getting the statistics through the completion phase of the course. Less than 20 per cent are being certified, but apparently the system is getting results since only three accidents attributed to junior hunters who had received training have been tabulated so far—a ratio of about 1 to 37 of hunters under age 20, involved in a hunting accident.

William Pyle, Former Gooding Solon, Says Fate Forced Him up Life's Climb

GOODING, Sept. 25.—Many a man probably feels he has started at the bottom of the ladder and worked his way to the top. William Pyle, Gooding pioneer and former state legislator, feels he has been forced by fate to start himself at the bottom of life.

Presently he is serving as president of the Grange Mutual Fire Insurance company and as secretary-manager of the Gooding Chamber of Commerce.

"I've didn't get him off to a very good start for both his parents and at an early age and he was 16 when he shifted from one job to another, beginning with a hitch in the British navy when he was 16."

WILLIAM PYLE

Served in Legislators

However, since coming to Gooding in 1909, Pyle has been active in poultry development and has served his community four terms as a representative in the state legislature as well as being active in an educational circle.

He was born at Bridport, England, about the time that Britain was celebrating the golden anniversary of Queen Victoria's reign. One of three sons of an army man who was killed in action on the floor was at the siege of Mafeking in South Africa.

"I took another step in his life when his mother died when he was only 5 years old. He was raised by an older sister until he left home at the age of 13 to make his own way in the world. He worked at various sundry jobs as he could find them until he reached the age of 16 when he joined the British navy and served two years.

Then he found work in the coal mines of South Wales until the fall of 1904 when he came to the United States which was then being advertised by the big steamship companies as the land of opportunity.

He never for more than two months in Boston he had an opportunity to take a job on a German ship chartered to bring bananas from Jamaica to United States ports. Pyle notes that only one other on the ship could speak English, except the officers.

This was a young fellow from Kansas who was working to make enough money to buy a ticket for transportation to his home to celebrate the Fourth of July. Pyle was invited by the young fellow to accompany him to his home and later found work on a farm owned by a German family where he got his first introduction to American farming.

There he learned to shuck corn, the first he had ever seen grown. The going price being paid to corn shuckers was three cents per bushel and Pyle says it remembers making $1.50 a day if the corn was good and the days long enough.

The Kansas summers were hot, some of the oldtimers claiming they could hear the corn grow at night, and Pyle had heard that the winters could be cold. So he says he shook off the dust of Kansas and found his way to the Pacific coast where he again realized an opportunity to follow the sea. He hired out as fireman and oiler in the engine department of both American and Canadian ships.

In 1909 he decided to try his hand at farming in Idaho where he filed on 60 acres of land in the Thorn creek area, northeast of Gooding, which was being offered under the Carey act. During 1910 and 1911 he cleared the land and farmed, using water for irrigation which had just been made available from Magic reservoir. While clearing the land he built a rock house.

He sold his land in 1912 and plunged into the potato business on rented land and went broke when the best price was 25 cents per bushel. He recalls that many of the growers found no market for their crop by hauling it to the dump, and that time he bought stock in a potato storage cellar in Gooding which later burned to the ground. Pyle was a pretty good performer in the potato raising business he found work on farms and operated a trucking business until the fall of 1915 when he enrolled for a business course at the Idaho Technical Institute which had just been changed from the Academy of Idaho and is now Idaho State college.

Late in 1919 he purchased 40 acres two and one-half miles northwest of Gooding. He and his wife, the former Ruby Brien of Gooding, whom he had married three years previously, established the Gooding-Hatchery and Poultry farm in 1920. They operated until 1926. At one time it was the largest hatchery in Idaho, he says.

In 1923, feeling the need for an egg and a better association with the poultry department of the University of Idaho, he was elected first president of the association and served in that capacity for several years.

While establishing his hatchery and hatchery operations in Gooding, he joined the Poultry Industry of the Rotary club and to serve seven years as trustee on the school board, from 1923 to 1930.

"After retiring from the hatchery business in 1926 he helped establish the Gooding Packing Kitchen in 1928 and served as director and president of the organization until last year."

In 1928 he was elected to the Idaho legislature from Gooding county and served four consecutive terms in the House of Representatives. He became a naturalized citizen in 1923 and was the first to receive his citizenship papers in the newly-formed Gooding county.

He also served in the executive department of the state government as chairman of a special legislative interim committee to study the financing of the public school minimum program and other phases of the public school system.

Since 1920 he has been chairman of the Gooding county committee for reorganization of school districts, working under the auspices of the State Board of Education. He has always been interested in education and was chairman of the education committee in the legislature. He is a member of the Idaho Citizens for Education, a statewide organization to improve education at all levels.

He also is a charter member of the Gooding Chamber of Commerce organized in 1920 and is director and president of the Grange Mutual Fire Insurance company which was organized in 1910 and has been in Gooding.

He has served on two occasions as a member of the Gooding county Red Cross and also as president of the Gooding County Tuberculosis association and is a member of the board of directors of the Idaho State Tuberculosis association.

Mr. and Mrs. Pyle have four daughters, Mrs. Roy Boyd, Mrs. Ruffel, Calif.; Mrs. Frank Weisman, Great Falls, Mont.; Mrs. Russell Leeper, Pocatello, and Mrs. May Pyle, Gooding.

Plans Ready for Proposed New Balcony Addition at Library

YOUR LIBRARY CROWD

Arthur DeVolder points to plans for the proposed balcony addition to the Twin Falls public library. The balcony, which will be a covered structure, will hold an additional 11,200 books. Estimated cost is $15,000. DeVolder has no money in his budget for such extensive expansion program since the library is a non-profit organization.

Plans for the balcony addition to the library are being prepared by the Twin Falls public library. The balcony, which will be a covered structure, will hold an additional 11,200 books. Estimated cost is $15,000. DeVolder has no money in his budget for such extensive expansion program since the library is a non-profit organization.

Memorial Fund Is Started to Finance Huge T. F. Library Expansion Program

Arthur DeVolder, Twin Falls library director, is planning the largest library expansion program since the library was built in 1939. He noted that in the past the library has tried to keep ahead of the growing city and library by expansion projects, but that the library has grown so rapidly and this type of expansion is no longer practical.

To get enough money for the projected expansion, DeVolder and the library board have started a memorial fund. The project hopes to receive $15,000, the total amount needed to carry out the expansion. The expansion will consist of the balcony over the non-fiction section of the library. It will be 41 feet long and 23 feet wide. The balcony will provide additional shelf space for 11,200 books.

DeVolder explains the library's need and budget don't allow for the major expansion projects, and the yearly care and repair of the library take all the additional money available.

Other programs to be presented by club members and interested individuals will be "History of Jazz Through the Ages," by Mrs. H. L. Traylor; "Musical Comedy," by Mrs. Lloyd Walker; "Children's Opera," by Mrs. David Mead; "Instrumentation," by Mrs. Edward Mewman; "American Music," by Miss Betty Harrison, Richard Smith, and Robert Wilson; "Bands," by Del Slaughter and Charles Ratcliffe; and "International Folk Music and Dancing," by Mrs. Otis Boone.

Delegates Chosen By Area Bureau JEROME, Sept. 25 — Delegates were chosen at the last meeting of the Jerome County Farm Bureau to go to the state convention in Pocatello.

DeVolder says, "The library should be the cultural center of the community and it should be the cornerstone of adult education and other related activities. Education is being stressed in the United States, particularly since Russia has made such scientific advances, but people forget that the library is an educational institution and acts as a supplement to the education received in the schools by people of all ages."

DeVolder explains the library's need and budget don't allow for the major expansion projects, and the yearly care and repair of the library take all the additional money available.

Former Elba Man Goes to Ethiopia as Point IV Adviser in Sheep and Cattle

Elba, Sept. 25 — Rex Otley, and family, who visited his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Lewis Otley, here after working five years in Iran, has accepted an assignment in Ethiopia.

Sheep Are Spotted Part of the work entailed the selection of sheep to be bred in Iran, most of which are spotted. Otley is preferred for the wool in Iran since "some progress" is being made in improvement of the sheep types, Otley said.

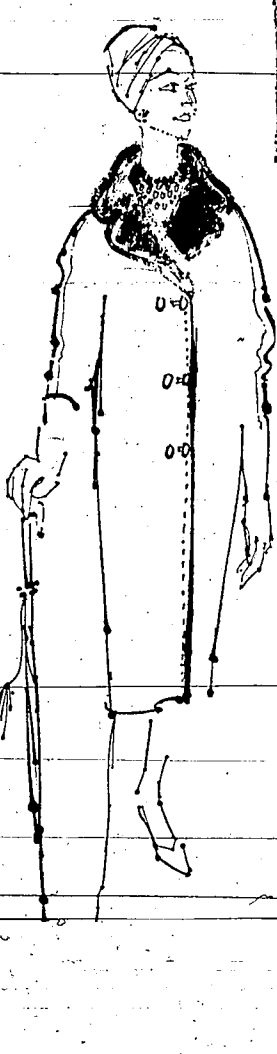

Program Slated Otley said there are two approximately 20,000 aridly-landed Brown Swiss cows in Iran, which produce three times as much milk as their mothers. A milk pasteurization program is slated to go into effect there, he added.

'Salt Mine Power Plant', New Harbor Are Peaceful Nuclear Blast Projects

ton equals one million tons of TNT. Dingo, in large quantities, cost $450,000.

Atomic sludge developer, 10 megatons, each $1,000,000.

These materials are as much as military bombs of corresponding size and their isotopes are used in the atomic energy field.

The AEC refers to them as black boxes and they are not to be opened. This is the only classified aspect of the Project Plowshare.

With so much to go on, the AEC and the University of California's Lawrence Radiation Laboratory called the experts together in mid-May. The experts put their findings and proposals before several hundred representatives of business and industry.

Most of the project proposals came from experimenters at the university's radiation laboratories at Livermore and Berkeley and Los Alamos scientific laboratory.

They included representatives of the Rand Corp., which operates at Livermore and Albuquerque, as well as a sprinkling of scientists from government agencies and industrial firms.

At the present state of readiness, actual starting of projects will be slow because of their great dimensions, the need for determining their long-range effects, and the status of international negotiations to curb or abandon nuclear testing.

Probably the first big experiment to be carried out will be Project Goshute, in which a lithium deuteride device is to be exploded in an underground salt bed near Carlsbad, N. M.

Originally the target date was this fall, but the AEC called for a delay to permit time to determine what would happen to nearby towns and a gas deposit.

The salt bed was chosen for several reasons. It was drilled down to it with ease from the surface. Salt won't waste much of the blast's heat through chemical changes. It is good material for containing heat and absorbing the shock.

C. E. Wiley of the Livermore laboratory tells how samples of bit, wood, rubber, cloth, plastics, paraffin and various metals might be deposited in individual holes in the salt bed at varying distances from blast center, which at the start will produce enormous pressure and a temperature of several million degrees.

The materials would show whether varying degrees of heat and pressure can produce new and interesting substances out of ordinary elements.

H. O. Cornell and A. D. Ostler, Jr. of the Humble Oil and Refining Company worked out formulas indicating the larger devices—one to 10 megatons—explode in a form that would supply blast enough to produce electric power at prices competitive with conventional steam-electric systems.

One of the most important and by far the most elusive products of a nuclear blast is neutrons. These are particles with extraordinary power to rip apart atoms.

Can't Be Trapped

In an instant after the blast a great surge of neutrons develops. They can't be trapped for later use. They go through everything. Scientists have hit upon the idea of planting in the path of these neutron surges materials containing atoms they want rebuilt.

This looks like a job—cost way of producing plutonium, the reactor-made synthetic fuel for fission reactors and explosive devices out of nonfissionable uranium 238.

That is what the AEC-researchers at the Hanford, Wash., works do slowly.

Or the surge might be used to produce isotopes, the reactor-made products of ordinary chemical elements now coming into wide use.

First of the big landscaping jobs is likely to be the Alaskan harbor excavation, less than 200 miles from Soviet Siberia.

This is called Project Charlot. The preliminary work already is under way. It involves complex operations, development of a tragger-pulling slide in 1961.

No harbor is really needed there now. The AEC concedes this, but adds that it could become a ship-

Artifacts Displayed After Summer of Excavation

Carol Murphy and her mother, Mrs. Albert M. Murphy, look over some of the artifacts she brought back to Twin Falls after a summer working with a crew of experienced anthropologists in Illinois. They were excavating an Indian village approximately 1,000 years old, the first such site ever studied. It is expected to reveal information about the Indians during a transitional period, when they were changing from hunters and gatherers to agriculturalists. (Staff photo-regraving)

T. F. Girl's Summer Work May Help Expand Anthropological Knowledge

A Twin Falls girl spent the summer at a new Indian village excavation site in Illinois doing work that might add much knowledge to anthropological science of a period approximately 1,000 years old.

Carol Murphy, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Albert M. Murphy and a student in anthropology at Northwestern University, spent most of June, July and August working in Illinois—Mount-Slate—Memorial, about 50 miles northwest of Springfield.

Each day one of the students was in charge of the diggings for that day. In the evening they worked on the artifacts, cleaning them and gluing broken parts together.

They even had seminars in the evening. Often professors from Midwestern colleges and museums visited and contributed to the seminars.

Miss Murphy intends to major in cultural anthropology and then work on graduate degrees in anthropology. Eventually she hopes to work for a museum.

There has been a good deal of both professional and amateur interest in the site. Miss Murphy notes crew members spent a good deal of time this summer conducting four tours around the area.

There were 11 members on the crew and before the summer was over they had removed a good deal of earth, even if the major tool they used was a grapefruit knife.

ment and joy of discovery when you are working. You never know what you will find," she says.

Information Gleaned

Although information gleaned from the summer's work has not been compiled and evaluated yet.

Miss Murphy explains that it could contribute a valuable knowledge about the North American Indians.

She says information from the site could be important because it was occupied in a time that has had little study.

Nothing will be published on the site until after digging is completed next summer.

Miss Murphy explains that the Indians were a group that had
