Officers Work Feverishly To Locate Crashed Plane In Blue Ridge Mountains

CHARLOTTEVILLE, Va., Oct. 31 (AP)—Authorities worked feverishly tonight to locate an unidentified jet airplane missing since midnight, in a civil patrol area that a park ranger spotted.

Reports from the DC-3 were seen, they said earlier reports concerning possible survivors appeared to be unfounded.

Nevertheless, rescue squads and mountain teams from localities in the Buena Vista area stood by, ready to move if needed.

Authorities said they received a dozen calls from mountain rescue parties who said they heard a jet airplane crash at 5 p.m. yesterday night. The plane, with 27 persons aboard, was last located at 8:24 p.m. minutes before it was due to land at Charlottesville.

Part rangers reported hearing an explosion.

Well-informed sources said the crash center of the search, about 10 miles southwest of Charlottesville, was in a direct line from Washington to Charlottesville.

A reliable source said the plane could have missed the Charlottesville airport and then, over the mountains, tried to land into the mountain.

The mountain is taller than the Blue Ridge mountains.

Rescue parties had brought a search to the search in the Charlottesville area and in vehicles through the rolling country in the foothills of the Blue Ridge mountains.

Several sources reported reports of low-flying plane and explosions. Helicopters and planes, held on the ground most of the day, were in the air, and a search for the wreckage was being conducted.

All reported the same thing: No one of the plane had been sighted through mud and dripping undergrowth.

Proposal To Boost Speed Limit Noted

BOISE, Oct. 31 (AP)—A proposal to boost Idaho's highway speed limit to 60 miles per hour in some areas was disclosed today to the state highway board.

Martin Bennett, state highway engineer, told the board, the state highway department has a study program under way to determine whether any sections of Idaho's highways are in condition for the higher speed.

He said he will make recommendations later.

The board now fixes the highway speed limit at 60 miles per hour in the daytime and 55 miles per hour at other times designated by the board.

A number of states have 70-mile speed limits.

Administrative matters occupied the board during most of its day's session today.

The board will meet again today, Sunday on a five-day tour of highways in northern Idaho, then will return to Boise for a session next Friday.

Two delegations announced before the board that they will continue to lobby for a 70-mile speed limit.

The board recommended improvement of state route 68 in Idaho and Blaine counties.

Talks Recessed On Steel Strike, New Parley Set

PITTSBURGH, Pa., Oct. 31 (AP)—Steel negotiations recessed today after what United Steelworkers President David J. McDonald called another exercise of futility.

The 100-day nationwide steel strike, B. Conrad Cooper, said the union continues to press for an inflationary wage increase. He said the basic position of the steel companies "is not about to crumble."

Both sides are scheduled to resume negotiations Monday in Washington, where they have been negotiating since federal mediators' intervention.

Both Cooper and McDonald said they would meet for 90 minutes today.

Arguments will begin Tuesday in the U.S. supreme court on a union appeal to set aside a Taft-Hartley injunction that could end the dispute for at least 90 days.

McDonald said the industry is depending on the injunction to halt its strike rather than attempt to negotiate a permanent settlement.

The top level negotiators have been meeting on and off in Pittsburgh since the federal injunction issued the Taft-Hartley injunction Oct. 21. The industry and union negotiators have met several times since the injunction was issued.

The two parties have been deadlocked over such issues as 600,000 steelworkers' strike pay—125 cents a week—and the industry's offer to pay $1.1 million an hour when the strike started.

In addition to the strike, the industry has offered to pay $1.1 million an hour when the strike started.

SMOOTH-TOOTHED GIFT HORSE New Yorkers vote Nov. 3 on a proposition to allow the legislature to lease or otherwise turn over to the federal government the state's 530-acre system.

By passing the responsibility for this big ditch over to Washington, New York taxpayers would pay only about 160 million dollars of the improvements through their federal tax deduction.

The people of New York undoubtedly have some reason for feeling justified in passing the buck to Washington. After all, New Yorkers have no say in play-moos-in-the-TV-A campaign for federal aid in the state and subsidized power in the Great Northwest.

The gigantic federal tax bill reflects this willingness of local governments, with the exception of a few, to accept responsibility for some sort of credit card institution to which local bills may be sent.

And, as with credit cards, eventually the bills come home. We find by pooling all our bills and dividing up the amount as we have spent more than we could afford.

Federal grants to one section of the nation open the doors to grants for another. And so the bills get bigger and bigger.

ROBIN HOOD REVISITED Federal aid to states originally was a kind of Robin Hoodish notion to take from the rich states and give to the poor ones. Today, much of the federal aid is coming from the richest states—which complain that the poor states are getting most of the gravy.

Pennsylvania is rich, yet solemnly assures a special Senate committee on unemployment that it is unable to solve the problem of 1,050 unemployed coal miners in Fayette county. Almost in the same breath, it reports that through local efforts and a state industrial development authority, 20,000 jobs have been made through new industry in the last three years alone.

And that by spending little more than half a million dollars 750 new jobs have been provided in the state. The Pennsylvania testimonial is a good example of the business climate, characterized by high taxes, which have caused much new industry in the area to choose New York or Ohio, where business climate is better.

In contrast, Connecticut is surveying its industrial situation, and emphasizing what the state can do to maintain a present high level of employment. Excellent examples of improvement of air freight service, adjusting unemployment compensation rates to encourage more employment and other factors are receiving attention.

Being a state with a population which has increased the tax-load in Pennsylvania—but cut expenses in Connecticut.

Some of New York's congressional delegates lately have been assuring their constituents that New Yorkers pay more than their share, but get less than they pay. And that these congressmen are going to fight for a "fair share."

A federal aid finally is established on a basis of getting the ratio to which state has paid in taxes, the absurdity of which state aid may become apparent. If the public finally wakes up to the fact that "federal aid" is merely their own money after a long and winding trip to Washington, perhaps there won't be so much clamor for it. Why not just keep the money at home in the first place and avoid the "service charge"?

WHAT DID YOU SEE? In the court of law, the eyewitness is always a key figure. But psychologists long have cautioned against the unreliability of the eyewitness when the events in question are a blur.

Philadelphia provided a recent example. An elderly man was hit by a car. Four witnesses said they saw a woman get out of the car, walk back toward the victim, stand over him a moment, then turn away and drive off.

The program outlined above is in addition, of course, to the well-known plan to put six to eight research-communication satellites into the skies by 1966 or 1967.

The 1960-70 platform and space ships would be research craft. The Pentagon planners figure it will be another decade or almost 10 years before a series of Q-2 manned military space platforms will be operating in the skies.

The manueverable military space ships—when developed—will be designed to carry out reconnaissance, ships and enemy ballistic missiles. Some of these space ships will be built for spying on enemy territory.

The space platforms—more immediate—will be developed gradually from the Dynasor. This the hyperonics boost-grade space now being developed by the Air Force.

The space platforms would be used—eventually—as staging points for military trips to the moon and planets. Scientists say it is comparatively easy to boost a rocket into space from a platform in the sky—once you have the platform.

Famed Pilot Of 30's Dies At Age of 54

LONDON, Oct. 31 (AP)—James A. Molison, 54, famed aviator who made the first solo westward flight across the Atlantic, died Friday night in a nursing home near London, of pneumonia.

Molison had been married to the noted aviatrix Amy Johnson and together they made several epochal flights.

His first achieved fame in 1931 when he clipped two days off the record for the Australia-to-Britain flight.

He flew the route in eight days, 15 hours, 25 minutes.

Within the next few years he broke several more aviation records and flew a series of "firsts" flights.

Molison's marriage in 1932 to Amy Johnson ended in divorce six years later. She died in 1941. Molison married twice subsequently.

In August, 1932, Molison recovered the test of Charles Lindbergh by becoming the first flier to cross the Atlantic solo from east to west.

He flew from a field near Dublin, Ireland, to Penfield Ridge, New Brunswick, Canada.

On the westward flight the following year with Amy Johnson.

Development at Alturas Lake Gains Momentum

About 200 of 650 summer-home lots at Alturas lake have been sold, principally to people in other states. It was reported here Friday.

Principally, the 300 lots were sold to residents of Los Angeles, San Francisco, Sacramento, Reno, Las Vegas, Winnemucca and Salt Lake City.

City officials expect to start building 12 cabins in early spring. His development plans call for a cocktail lounge adjacent to the lodge and possibly a large motel.

He also expects to maintain a firm of pack horses for trips into the high lakes. He also anticipates breeding ponies for children.

Victor Carchner, well-known southern California caterer, will run the lodge and have charge of all possible Republican presidential candidates.

Stam is the most popular. A Democrat can beat him, the senator said, but the campaign will be tough, one. Just being a Democrat is not enough.

A fallow, carpenter, Charles Janicke, has been employed to watch the area; Curtis said he will spread the winter at the lodge.

Two weeks ago, Sen. Frank Church visited the Alturas area during a tour of forest regions. He inspected the development, looked at plots and hunted with Curtis.

Curtis on the 650 summer home building sites are 50 by 110 feet each. He is selling the lots at an average price of $2,000 with terms.

The brochure on the development points out the many scenic attractions in southern Idaho.

Sen. Kennedy Invades Coast State to Speak

BAKERSFIELD, Calif., Oct. 31 (AP)—Presidential hopeful Ben John F. Kennedy, D. Mass., invaded southern California today, home of the Republican, he says.

The Democrats must beat in 1960, Vice President Richard M. Nixon. The senator is on a four-day stump tour of the state, criticizing the Eisenhower administration.

He is touring the strength of California's Democratic Gov. Edmund G. Brown, and saying he would enter the state's June Democratic primary in opposition to Brown's favorite son candidacy.

Of possible Republican presidential candidates, Kennedy said Nixon is the most popular. A Democrat can beat him, the senator said, but the campaign will be tough, one. Just being a Democrat is not enough.

LEWISTON PEOPLE VISITED RICHFIELD, Oct. 31—Recent Richfield visitors at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Glen Heidemuth, Lewiston, included Mr. and Mrs. Lewis Neabill, Mrs. E. L. Strelow, Mrs. Ralph Riley. They also visited Mr. and Mrs. P. W. Brown.

Sad Picture Painted for Life in Tibet

WASHINGTON, Oct. 31 (AP)—The Dalai Lama's brother has painted a tragic picture of Tibet. A people, who know little of international affairs, live in terror because a world power has seized their land for a military base, he said.

This picture came from Gyalo Chendun Chopel, as he talked to members of the National Press club. He is the older brother of the Dalai Lama, the godking of the Tibetans who fled to India after Communist China has taken over the internal affairs of his nation.

We feel the communists came in to conquer our country and build a military base. He answered. But, first, they had to overthrow the government and wipe out Tibetan religion and culture, he continued.

Would the base be used against India? Thundup did not answer directly. Instead, he said that when fled troops first marched into Tibet in 1951, a general told them they had two missions: to "liberate" Tibet and, then, to "liberate" India.

Plumber Gets Lines Mixed, Five Injured

CRESTVIEW, Pa., Oct. 31—A plumber's mistake in hooking up a butane gas line to a water line was blamed today for a series of explosions in which five persons were injured.

Mayor Henry Booth said the error was by John Stanford, the plumber, let gas into the city's water system. Blast in a restaurant building was turned on and flames reached pilot lights in heaters.

The explosions Friday night at a small Negro cafe and two homes injured five persons, three seriously enough to be hospitalized. Until the water lines were flushed out residents of Crestview were warned not to turn on their water taps. Firemen and water officials spent most of Friday night checking water lines in all homes in a six-block area.

Fire Chief Vernon Powell said the plumber had connected a gas line to a water line near the cafe and found the line had gas in it.

Butane is used for heating and cooking purposes.

Regulation in Cuba Likened To Censorship

HAVANA, Oct. 31—A sharp reduction in criticism of Prime Minister Fidel Castro's regime in the United States, which some are coupled by some local observers to publication of government regulations having the appearance of a gag law.

The regulations appeared in connection with recent approval for the resumption of military courts and hiring squads to combat counter-revolutionary activities.

The ban on publication or distribution of articles likely to provoke anti-government feelings is contained in the "Code of Social Discipline" published Oct. 25.

Previously published here, two sections of the code, which some criticized as a revolutionary regime's attempt to suppress dissenting voices, authorized strong censorship.

Others hold they are aimed at letters and other clandestine publications, not newspapers.

"Who would introduce, publish or propagate or try to have read in Cuba any dispatch, order, or decree which might try to impair the independence, sovereignty or provoke no observance of its laws will be imprisoned for six to 10 years," the code says.

"It follows that incitation to the execution of the preceding counter-revolutionary crimes will be punished with prison terms of 10 to 20 years."

Magic Valley Churches Set 3 Dedications

At 3 p.m. he will officiate at the dedication of the Jerome Methodist church where a dinner also will follow the ceremony.

He then will preach at the Wendell church and its anniversary.

Bishop Grant was elected bishop of the Methodist churches in Idaho, Oregon, Washington and Alaska. His home is in Portland.

Serving under him are fourteen district superintendents, who act as agents or representatives of the bishop, two of whom live in Idaho. They are the Rev. Stanley Andrews, Boise, who serves the West-Idaho district, and Dr. F. Malcolm Hammond, who serves the eastern district.

The eastern district includes all churches of Idaho, Oregon, Washington and Alaska. His home is in Portland.

Date Set For Opening Bids For Day Dam

FOOTLAND, Oct. 31—Bids will be opened Nov. 19 for construction of the $10 million day dam on the Columbia river, the Corps of Engineers said here today.

That will be the single biggest item in contracts totaling an estimated $27 million dollars that the Corps will award by June 30 for major civil projects in the Northwest and Alaska.

The John Day dam work will involve what the Corps called north shore construction.

Covered by the contract will be non-overflow and spillway dams, the north abutment, navigation lock, fish ladder and other work.

The Corps estimated that the work would cost between 50 and 60 million dollars.

Bids also will be opened Feb. 9 for construction of two railroad trestles and two road de-tourers at "John Day" dam. That work will cost an estimated $15 million dollars, the Corps said.

Also included in the work schedule is construction of railroads and bank protection at Ice Harbor dam on the lower Snake river. Bids will be opened June 19.

The Corps estimated the work will cost more than two million dollars.

In announcing the schedule of projects for which bids will be called and contracts awarded by June 30, the Corps said the $2 million dollar cost estimate included only major items.

A major project, the Corps said, is one costing more than $100,000.

Former Idaho State Senator Working to End Job in Iran

WASHINGTON, Oct. 31—Henry A. Brenn, a former Idaho state senator is trying to work himself out of his job as director of American aid to Iran.

"This shows it doesn't take a lot of money to give important aid," Brenn said, adding:

"We're over the hump and on the downhill grade with our aid."

Brenn, a graduate of the University of Idaho, was in private business at Moscow, and was a state senator from 1937 to 1940, when he resigned to enter the army.

He served on the staff of Gen. Douglas MacArthur, both as an officer and civilian in the Pacific, until joining the ICA program in the Philippines in 1953.

"Our goal is to reach the people, show them how and they'll do it," Brenn told a news conference.

Brenn said the show, which he described as a "capable and brilliant man," told him the people could best learn the democratic process through farmer cooperatives.

Today, Brenn said, there are 115 cooperative farmer organizations headed by local councils of farmers who supervise the borrowing of money for seed, land and tools and other programs.

"To illustrate the effect of sharing knowledge, Brenn told of a section of Iran where Kurdish farmers on the Iraq border had had a wheat crop for six years.

"He said American experts showed them a simple way to treat seed to prevent the ravages of disease."

Workers Warned Of Lack of Jobs

BOISE, Oct. 31—Idaho's top labor executive Friday warned out-of-state workers from misable leave construction at Mountain Home, after force base.

Darrell Dorman, state president of the AFL-CIO, said there are not likely to be jobs available for out-of-state building trades workers until spring.

"We now have about 650 craftsmen idle in southwestern Idaho," said Dorman.

"While winter coming on and with normal jobs closing down in this area anyway, workers coming from other areas are just going to add to the confusion," he said.

Water Group Chief Seeks New Projects

DENVER, Oct. 31—The new executive director of the National Reclamation association today called for some new starts on federal reclamation projects every year to take care of the nation's water needs.

Lassell E. Coles, Princeton, Ore., said in an interview:

"The development of reclamation projects is essential to our national economic growth and the population increase."

The Eisenhower administration has opposed new starts the last couple of years but Congress voted some nevertheless.

Coles was elected Friday to succeed Guy C. Jackson, Jr., Anaheim, Tex., who served from 1953 to the 23rd annual convention here.

More than 800 persons registered to attend the meetings of the 17-state organization.

Coles said he regards obtaining congressional enactment of legislation to protect western water rights as the No. 1 objective of the NRA, with the need for constantly expanding reclamation program just about of equal importance.

The convention again put the water rights legislation as its No. 1 goal by declaring for it in the first of 28 approved resolutions, Bakersfield, Calif., was voted the 1400-convention site.

Accidents Cause 2 Civil Actions

Two complaints were filed Friday in Twin Falls district court seeking damages resulting from automobile accidents.

Lyle G. Ebers seeks $287.92 in a suit filed against Charlene D. Wallace and Donald Wallace. Ebers claims the damages were caused when a car driven by Charlene D. Wallace negligently and unlawfully blocked the lane of traffic on U.S. 30 near Masie Valley Memorial hospital on Nov. 23, 1958, and caused a collision.

Ebers is represented by Murphy, Schwartz and Cunningham, Twin Falls law firm, and Charlene D. Wallace seeks $1,200 in a complaint against the Seven-Up Bottling company and Woodrow A. Turley. He claims the damages were caused when a bottling company truck driven by Turley struck the Schroeder vehicle from the rear. The Schroeder vehicle was driven by Laverne Strone and had stopped for an unloading school bus northwest of Pater. Schroeder is represented by W. J. Lenzly, Twin Falls attorney.

Book Week to Be Marked in T. F. Nov. 1-7

The 14th celebration of National Children's Book week will be observed by the children of the Twin Falls Public Library from Nov. 1 to 7, says Edith Dyer, children's librarian.

The slogan this year is "exploring in books." This year's poster by a nationally-known artist, Robert Rauschenberg, is in five colors and depicts his own daughter, a girl with curly hair, in a red dress, holding a book.

Gets Scholarship

CAROLYN CROFTS' father, Mr. and Mrs. George Crofts of the Emerson district—near Heyburn, has received a $1,000 scholarship from the National foundation for advanced work in physical therapy.

Heyburn Girl Is Award Recipient In Therapy Work

RUPERT, Oct. 31.—Carolyn Crofts, Heyburn, has been awarded a March of Dimes scholarship of $1,000 for advanced work in physical therapy.

Miss Crofts, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Crofts of the Emerson district, is a graduate of Heyburn high school and has attended the Tufts Junior College and Brigham Young university. She will take advanced work at the school of therapy, Children's hospital, Los Angeles.

Miss Crofts, Minidoka county chairman for the National foundation, said the one year scholarship was made on the recommendation of a national committee of physical therapy leaders. "One thing," she said, "though—she is due the laboratory and the wonderful work being done out of this office in the health battle, it is really men and women who do the actual work. A laboratory or a hospital is just a building until dedicated men and women bring it alive." It is through their help that the March-of-Dimes have helped train more than 8,000 disease fighters. Thousands are still needed," he said.

He Travels Faster, Messier Who Goes Alone, Hank Says

LONDON — He travels fastest when only late at night. Before she left for America Mary saw to it that every stitch of clothes I had with me was in perfect shape. Suits and slacks were cleaned and pressed. Shirts were ironed and packed neatly in clean drawers.

"There were no run-down hotels on my shoes, my socks were rolled and I have nine socks, all around as they should be, and I sent none to the laundry."

Her last words at the airport were not, "Goodbye, darling," but "I'll be back in a few days. I'll be back with your dirty clothes, and I'll be back with your dirty clothes."

Why is it that a wife can wash dirty-dry-again and a husband can't? Hank says the instructions were most complete, but no man in his right mind would put on, and appear in public, a dirty-dry suit that was washed by me.

Mary keeps the crumpled right where they were. I put them everywhere, including down the middle of the back in the middle of the collar, and on the sides of the trousers. I would look better in a crumpled suit.

It's too late now for a hotel maid to come to my rescue. She would have to see a heap of abundance from her job to do all my washing. Maybe I'd better go home. I think I will.

The highest temperature ever recorded at Coppermine, Canada, on the Arctic ocean was 87 degrees.

New Fireplace at City Park Is Inspected

One of five new fireplaces constructed through the cooperative efforts of the Twin Falls city parks and recreation department and the Twentieth Century club is inspected by Mrs. Wallace Bond, left, and Mrs. O. H. Weidlich, right, who was club president at the time the project was initiated. The club originally had intended to build one fireplace at Harry Barry park, which the women are examining. However, assistance of the Twin Falls city recreation department was offered by Superintendent Ernest Granger, making possible construction of "six for the price of one." (Staff-photos-Weidlich)

Fireplaces for City Parks Are Result of Club Project

Members of the Twin Falls Twentieth Century club are firmly convinced that cooperation is the key to economy.

The club voted to build a fireplace in one of the city parks, both for their "presidents project" under the regime of Mrs. O. H. Weidlich, and as an inducement to additional family recreation.

The city parks and recreation department agreed wholeheartedly to the plan, but wanted the fireplaces in each park. The $300 which the club had for the project could be stretched to complete more than one of the attractive family-size barbecue units, the parks officials believed.

Not one, but six fireplaces now have been completed, with employees of the parks department supplying the labor and the club supplying the funds.

There are three brick fireplaces located at Harry Barry park, Harrison park, and Drury park. Another of similar design is planned for Drury park.

Three cinder block units have been built at Shoshone fair park, with two more planned. The fireplaces are used on a first-come, first-served basis, and all users are asked to clean the grill, leaving it ready for the next family's use.

A third of the money for the fireplaces was donated by Mrs. Weidlich in a national contest of outstanding projects of individual clubs. A scrapbook which she compiled with the help of Mrs. John E. Hays and Mel Crawford, was awarded a $100 prize.

The fireplace at South park and Harrison park also have been prepared as part of the "fireplaces for families" project.

James Catterson, acting master, conducted the business session. It was reported that Mr. and Mrs. Elmer Jordan are delegates to the state Grange convention in Sandpoint.

Refreshments were served by Mr. and Mrs. Noah Oliver and Mr. and Mrs. H. L. Furr.

Mrs. Charles Peterson, secretary, presided at the Oct. 14 meeting.

"Great Steel Strike" Keeps Businessmen Edgy All Week

NEW YORK, Oct. 31—A danger of epic proportions and consequences kept the people of business and finance fretting on the edge of their seats this week.

The movie, "The Steel Strike," never had as many critics of opinion as the great steel strike.

Many facets of the economy turned, or failed to turn, on developments in efforts to settle the strike.

As they popped up, these questions kept the business world on edge.

Will renewed negotiations produce a visionary settlement?

Will the supreme court send the steelworkers back to the mills for 30 days?

The New York stock market displayed cautious optimism that things would come out all right.

Trading volume was 10,104,814 shares compared with 13,886,660 the previous week.

Stock prices were mixed, with the highest gain for 10 days in the week ended March 2.

Bond trading totaled $32,247,000 par value compared with $26,191,000 the previous week.

Steel companies, strikebound through all but two weeks of the third quarter, came out with earnings reports.

General Motors reported earnings for the third quarter of nearly $134,400,000 on sales of $2,345,000,000.

Corporate Christmas gift-giving appears headed for a comeback after 1928's recession lull.

Idaho Falls Shreds Bruin Line in Hammering Out 33-7 Conference Victory

Hardcharging Ken Fillmore and Mike Bell chewed through the Twin Falls Bruin line to set the pace for a 33-7 Southern Idaho conference victory here Friday night. Finding a weakness at the Bruin tackle position, the Tigers' series of fancy runners through the two spots repeated throughout the night, shaking loose 20 yards for long scoring runs. It marked the worst beating of the year for the Bruins, who saw eight men at least partially injured at game time and three more leave during the battle because of other hurts.

The Tigers had run up a 14-0 halftime lead, both coaches played out the string using substitute players from the first two quarters into the battle.

Twin Falls wasn't in the game after Idaho went to the field to gain possession of the ball. Before the half ended, the Tigers had two more touchdowns and marched for another. In all, the Bruins had six touchdowns and a field goal. The sophomore performed well under pressure led by Dave King and Dan Williams.

Twin Falls marched 60 yards midway through the first period with Bell and Fillmore accounting for the yardage. At the one-foot line, a tackle by Diller and a penalty for Idaho-Puller made the fourth-down and four to go situation. Terry Groth went over a quarterback. Then he escorted the first of three extra points to the night.

Immediately after the kickoff, Idaho fumbled and Idaho Falls recovered. Six plays later, Fillmore went into the end zone for a fourth-down and four to go situation. Terry Groth went over a quarterback. Then he escorted the first of three extra points to the night.

Kimberly Converts Passing, Two Beaver Fumbles Into 27-0 Win

AMERICAN FALLS, Oct. 31.—An alert Kimberly defense coupled with the passing combination of Dennis Medley to Gary Reagan gave the Bulldogs a 27-0 victory over American Falls Beavers Friday night. The Medley to Reagan combination, which provided a victory over Murtaugh last week, clicked twice against the Beavers and the fourth district crew then added two more touchdowns set up on beaver fumbles. The win was the fifth straight for coach Dutch Sherman's crew, whose only loss came at the hands of Valley.

After a scoreless first quarter, Medley hit Reagan with a short pass for 10 yards. Reagan threw a 20-yard pass to the end zone for a touchdown. Ken Morris opened the second half for Kimberly by booting a field goal into the gutter end zone for an automatic touchdown. After bringing the ball over the line, the American Falls fumbled on the first play and Kimberly recovered. Reagan then scored on a 40-yard pass to the end zone.

Two Major Improvements Noted in Irrigation System

KING HILL—Two major improvements were made in the King Hill Irrigation district this summer at a combined cost of $46,000. The first was construction of an open ditch, bypassing the old Deer gulch siphon had been in questionable condition for years and had caused much concern among landowners and directors. The Deer gulch siphon canal was constructed by the Karl Woodall Construction company, Boise, at a cost of $43,000. Supervised by James Spiffard, Boise engineer, and Ted Moore, manager of the irrigation district.

This improvement is one more step toward insuring a steady delivery of water to farms in the project. Moore notes: An estimated 200,000 to 220,000 cubic yards of earth were moved by Woodall's equipment in the construction of the fill and canal which is approximately three-fourths of a mile long.

Water Run in Canal
A small head of water was run through the new canal this fall, before the water was turned out, to soak up the ground and insure against settling. The inlet structure will be built by the irrigation district maintenance crews this fall so it will be ready for use next spring.

In the other improvement project, Moore points out the old Alkali flume west of King Hill had been in a hazardous condition for years with one end being rebuilt 12 years ago out of temporary materials, to finish out that season.

Constant Use
However, it has been in constant use each year since then. Several times in recent years there have been minor breaks at the flume but maintenance crews have always managed to repair them without too much delay in water delivery and without any serious crop damage.

But this summer the flume started settling again at one end and tipped so that it was leaking. To have repaired it would have necessitated tearing down and rebuilding nearly half of the structure which would probably have cost far in excess of the $2,000 that it cost to remake the flume across Alkali creek and the connection canals, Moore believes.

The King Hill Irrigation district delivers water to 9,000 acres of farms and to city lots in three communities in Blaine county—King Hill, Glenns Ferry and Hammett. The district has one of the best water rights in the state, Moore declares.

From Malad River water is obtained from the Malad river, southeast of Bliss. To date, there is no record of a shortage of water in the area because of lack of water in the Malad river which flows through the Idaho Power plant. But there have been occasions when there was a shortage.

Student Briefed on Finer Points of Racing With Go Karts

Bob Willis, Twin Falls, explains some of the points of "Go Karting" to his son, Wesley, 10, a fifth grade student at Mornington school. The little car is a Go Kart. For the past few years the sport of Go Kart racing has swept the country and interested individuals are now forming a club in Twin Falls. Men, women, and children can race the little cars. They are powered by 2½-horsepower motors. The owners are presently looking for an area in or near Twin Falls where they can set up a race track. The next meeting of the club will be held at 8 p.m. Tuesday at the Idaho Power company auditorium. (Staff photo-engraving)

Precautions Proposed to Curb Stealing of Bicycles

According to Police Chief Howard W. Gillette, parents and children can take certain precautions to curb one of the most prevalent crimes of adolescence—bicycle stealing.

He says bicycle theft is one of the most serious crime problems in the 6- to 13-year-old group. It is not that there is a great deal of stealing of this stolen bicycles are never recovered.

Gillette says about 48 of the 50 bicycles stolen during an average month in Twin Falls are soon returned to the owners.

But, the problem is that bicycle stealing develops techniques that children should lock the bicycles when they are not in use and they should park them in a regular parking space, not in some obscure place where the bicycle is easy to steal. And parents should take a greater interest in their children, Gillette says.

Treat it Right
Parents of children who own bicycles should see that their children treat the bicycle as it should be treated—a valuable and expensive possession. And parents of children who suddenly turn up with a bicycle and give vague reasons for their ownership should watch their children more closely, Gillette points out that careless parents who are indifferent in their children's activities compound the problem.

Ernest Marlow, juvenile officer, says there is another precaution that parents and children can take to discourage bicycle theft. They should have the bicycle registered as soon as it is purchased, but as the law stipulates, it costs a dollar to have a bicycle registered in an owner's name for life and he terms it cheap insurance.

The owner takes the bicycle to the Twin Falls police department where each removable part of the bicycle is stiched with the registration number. This helps the police department trace a stolen bicycle, whether it be whole or in parts.

Marlow says this system of registration was started several years ago in Twin Falls and has greatly cut down on bicycle thefts and increased the percentage of stolen bicycles returned to owners.

Occasionally individuals will disassemble bicycles into the various parts and then reassemble them again, mixing the parts, hoping to market the bicycle without suspicion. The police catch children doing this now and a while but it is comparatively rare that children organize so elaborately.

Gillette says the police department has several ways of disposing of unclaimed bicycles. The department holds a public auction and they are provided by law, to dispose of them.

Nearly children also receive bicycles occasionally. He adds that during the year the juvenile division of the police department sometimes finds a needy boy or girl who is genuinely in need of a bicycle for transportation.

Ernest Marlow, Twin Falls, police department juvenile officer, stands by a stack of bicycles that have been either stolen or had and turned in to the police department. Marlow holds a bike that is stiched to the seat of a bicycle and the most practical place for a bicycle. Police Chief Howard Gillette says that bicycle theft is the most prevalent crime in the 6- to 13-year-old group. (Staff photo-engraving)

High School Speech and Drama Expansion Slated

Expansion of speech and drama activities in Twin Falls high school will offer more to students interested in these activities.

Three three-act plays, two performances of one-act plays, and the establishment of a high school debate team will be the highlights of the 1959-60 school season. This will be the first time in six years that Twin Falls has had a debate team.

New Instructor
These activities are under the supervision of Richard B. Johnson, new speech and drama instructor and a 1959 graduate of Idaho State college.

Johnson has had considerable experience in school, community, and professional theater groups, both in the United States and Europe. He appeared in more than 20 productions during his four years of college. He has had leading roles in "Brigadoon," "Guys and Dolls," "Pillars of the Sky," "Bus Stop," "The Inspector Calls," and "The Duchess of Malphi."

"A Breckard Named Deane," "The Caine Mutiny Court Martial," "The Wonder Hat," and "Jeppha's Daughter" are just a few of the plays he has directed in the United States and Europe.

In Finland
He received his European theater experiences in Finland while he was there on an LDS mission. He spent one season with the San Diego National Shakespeare Festival company. He played two roles in "MacBeth"—Duncan and the first murderer. He portrayed Pompey in "Antony and Cleopatra."

He also was a member of Tetonal productions, a semi-professional theater touring company, with which he toured the western states for one year. He has been in summer stock.

Johnson points out there is a great deal of interest in drama in Twin Falls high school. He had 116 students try out for the nine roles in "The First Day This Fall," "The Late Christopher Bean," a comedy which will be presented at 8 p.m. Friday and Saturday at the high school auditorium.

Difficult Time
He eliminated all but 45 students whom he called back for additional tryouts, but he says he still had a difficult time selecting the cast.

Craze of Go Kart Growing

Just about the time it appears people have found all possible ways to "get a thrill," someone comes up with something that attracts thousands of fans. The latest in the current "Go Kart" craze that has spread across the country and has things in both the arts and in life and teaches them teamwork. He notes that drama is an undertaking that requires the essence of teamwork if it is to be successful. He says all the plays will be plays that have scored successes on Broadway for two reasons: He wants the students to work with plays of accepted quality and he wants to present plays that are worth seeing. Tickets will be sold

"Go Karts" are two-wheeled steel vehicles that will hold a man and a motor—that's all. They are highly maneuverable, fast, inexpensive and relatively safe compared to their bigger racing cars. They look like a motorized roller-skate.

Dates From 1958
The history of the little cars dates back to 1958, when Art Ingia, a well-known racing driver, built one just for fun. He used a two-cylinder, two-stroke, one-half horsepower engine on the light frame and powered the wheels with a bicycle chain. He expected it to rust about like the old-time toy cars powered with washing machine motors, it didn't. It turned out to be rust-free and fast and Ingia, a long-time track driver, discovered that the little car was safer and just as much fun as a racing car that cost thousands of dollars and was potentially dangerous.

In the meantime thousands of individuals have discovered the same thing and "Go Kart" clubs have appeared all over the United States, notably in California.

Club Formed
In December, 1957, a "Go Kart" club of America was formed and specifications for the cars and safety rules were standardized. About 25 interested persons turned out for a pre-organizational meeting for a Twin Falls affiliate club on Tuesday, Oct. 29 at the Idaho Power auditorium.

Fun and Safe
According to Ray Bunn an interested "Go Kart"er about 11 persons in Twin Falls now own the little cars. Several now are either buying them or assembling them from kits. The club expects to have 12 or more members with it in the near future.

Like in MAGIC VALLEY

Michael Berensen, 14-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Bluff Berensen, killed his first deer the opening day of the Big Wood River hunt.

The animal is reported to be the largest taken for some time in this area. The antlers are exceptionally heavy and measure 33 inches from tip to tip. The deer weighed 200 pounds and was reported to be in the neighborhood of 300 pounds.

Berensen and two of his friends were scouting for elk on a ridge west of U.S. highway 93 and some four miles south of the town of the time. Berensen spotted the animal. "One shot brought him down," he said. "The other boys went down the steep hillside, after falling over a 20-foot cliff. The youth used a 20-caliber rifle.

The urgency of farmers in Magic Valley to harvest crops between rain storms has brought cooperation from entire families. A scene typical of cooperation is all at the Elmo M. Burgess farm south of Burley. All their crops are now harvested, but they wouldn't have been if it were not for the Burgess family. Mrs. Hinton took to sewing sacks in the harvest of the bean crop and Mrs. Burgess worked in another field with her husband, operated the tractor which pulled a second combine in the field and sewed sacks in that field and Hinton did the machine work in the field and she did the sewing.

"Weather hasn't interfered with the crop," Mrs. Burgess said. "The weather has been in by Oct. Actual work on the bean field took about 10 days. The yield of beans has been good, running between 25 and 27 bushels to the acre.

There were 150 acres of beans on the place. Working hours ran from about 6 a.m. to 6 p.m. daily. The crew took lunch to the field for a late afternoon session in order to get the beans into the work routine.

Mrs. Hinton said this is the first time she has sewed sacks, but she didn't mind the work at all.

Two of the three Hinton children, 2 and 3 months, have lived with their grandmother at VE-RORES during the busy harvest season.

of Bull, she moved here in June 1909. High parents, Mr. and Mrs. John Bull, from Mammoth Springs, Ariz.

John Bull was only 3 years old. Her father, a carpenter by trade, owned a home at 525 First Church of the Nazarene. Some time ago I read of train 037 which was announced to leave Milan, Italy, 7:40 p.m. for Bergamo, in northern Italy.

Twenty minutes later the train pulled into the station at Roggoreto, (I had made a mistake. He switched the train to go again to Bologna, instead of north to Bergamo. The train was driven back 20 miles to Milan, where it was properly switched. It reached Bergamo over an hour later.

Surely some of the passengers on the train noticed it was going in the wrong direction. But if they did they said nothing to the conductor about it, so every revolution of the wheels of that train led the blind herd from the city to which they desired to go.

Anyone can be sincerely mistaken at times—even leaders. It was some religious leaders that Christ said: "Let them alone; they are blind leaders of the blind. And who shall fall into the ditch." (Matthew 18:14.)

"The thought that it doesn't matter what a man believes so long as he is sincere is a serious mistake. It does matter—what man believes. There is—the difference between spiritual life and spiritual death. Jesus said: "It is on the Way, the Truth and the Life; no man cometh unto the Father, but by Me" (John 14:6.)

The Apostle Peter declared: "Neither is there salvation in any other; for there is no other name under heaven given among men, whereby we must be saved." (Acts 4:12.)

Some time ago I read of train 037 which was announced to leave Milan, Italy, 7:40 p.m. for Bergamo, in northern Italy.

Twenty minutes later the train pulled into the station at Roggoreto, (I had made a mistake. He switched the train to go again to Bologna, instead of north to Bergamo. The train was driven back 20 miles to Milan, where it was properly switched. It reached Bergamo over an hour later.

Surely some of the passengers on the train noticed it was going in the wrong direction. But if they did they said nothing to the conductor about it, so every revolution of the wheels of that train led the blind herd from the city to which they desired to go.

Anyone can be sincerely mistaken at times—even leaders. It was some religious leaders that Christ said: "Let them alone; they are blind leaders of the blind. And who shall fall into the ditch." (Matthew 18:14.)

"The thought that it doesn't matter what a man believes so long as he is sincere is a serious mistake. It does matter—what man believes. There is—the difference between spiritual life and spiritual death. Jesus said: "It is on the Way, the Truth and the Life; no man cometh unto the Father, but by Me" (John 14:6.)

File Is Closed on Hard-Luck Vanguard Program With Some Successes Recorded

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla., Oct. 31—The United States has officially closed the file on the hard-luck Vanguard program.

The much-maligned project ended on a note of success Sept. 17 when the last of the Vanguard rockets boosted a 100-pound satellite into orbit.

This was the third Vanguard satellite put up in eight tries, but this last sailing was the only one to get into the "rockets" into orbit.

The 5-space effort, launched by the Navy's space program, Vanguard, has left a heritage of scientific discovery that the world is proud to share.

Vanguard is expected to stay aloft for 100 days, during which time it will be transmitting valuable information.

Vanguard II provided data on the Earth's climate before the batteries died. It will be whirling about the Earth for a century or so.

Vanguard III, with an anticipated life of 100 days, is taking various readings and transmitting its main job is to locate the magnetic field of the Earth within the Earth's magnetic field. But Vanguard's real value lies in the wealth of technological experience gained in both successful and unsuccessful attempts.

The globe-minor network was developed under the leadership of the present U.S. satellite-tracking system.

Vanguard personnel gained experience which is now being put to use in other space projects.

Building of the Vanguard started in 1955 as a low-budget project. The program was extended to mid-1957 through 1958. The navy was given control of the program in the latter part of 1957, after it was taken over by NASA. The Martin Company, Baltimore, was prime contractor.

There was no pressure for hurry, because at that time the United States was not in a position of supremacy. The Soviet Union had launched a satellite by means of Sputnik 1 on Oct. 4, 1957.

Hundreds of Women Pour Into United States Yearly to Find New Adventure

NEW YORK, Oct. 31—Sixty cases in hand, hundreds of women are pouring into this country each year, ready to take up new, baby-boom and exciting adventures in a new land.

The immigrants, mostly single, come to meet an unmet need for domestic help from American households.

Employment agencies that can't find domestic talent in this country for the many jobs offered, so they have turned eyes toward women in the postwar period thousands of persons sought to come to the United States but lacked the sponsors.

Ms. Ahman has helped operate one of New York City's big domestic help agencies—Domestic Service, Inc.—for 15 years. She was the first to tap foreign markets and since 1950 her office has imported more than 9,000 workers.

She matches up harried homemakers, mothers and working wives with applicants whom they want jobs as cooks, nursesmaid, or general domestic help.

Success in the venture appears chiefly up to the employer.

"It's a trouble-free job," says Miss Ahman. "It will be because women feel a girl should be working in the open."

"They don't see it unfair to expect a little Irish girl in her 20s to assume the duties of a household, with many unfamiliar gadgets and methods that she would herself can't manage."

Sometimes uninhibited American children are shocked when they reared girls from abroad, who did them "impossibly" ill-mannered.

One mother's helper complained "I have to be polite to them. But they tell me, you don't count on them."

Miss Ahman agrees there may be abuses. In such cases she unsharke to the new laws for girls — but the experience leaves a bad taste all around.

The procedure brings together an American employer with a hopeful immigrant begin when she meets Ms. Maureen, 29, a 34-week Dublin waitress, reads an ad for domestic work in London and they have turned eyes toward Ms. Ahman's office.

Maureen's application, with photograph and carefully checked references, is sent to New York. She is contacted by an employer who has paid the agency fee—$25 per person for untrained help, $10 for trained help.

Mrs. M., looking for a domestic help to cope with her crowded house, three small children and a busy social life, finds Maureen's qualifications fit her need.

She writes personally to the girl, telling the site of her family, etc.

They Heal Quick Children Are Liable to Get Variety of Disease

By EDWIN F. JORDAN, M.D., Written for NEA Service

Today I shall try to answer a number of questions sent in by parents.

The first comes from a mother of a 1-year-old boy who has Scheuermann's disease, which is a condition involving inflammation of several vertebrae of the spinal column.

The symptoms generally begin between the ages of 7 and 10 and are likely to include fatigue with some pain in the back and lower extremities. The cause is not clearly understood, it can generally be identified by an X-ray film.

The treatment depends on the severity of the symptoms and in some cases it may be necessary to wear a brace or corset.

Fortunately, the disease has an active course lasting only two or three years, so the present treatment is to try to prevent deformity of the spine.

"Is ratness in a baby a sign of health?" is better for a baby to be "overweight" or "underweight" asks another.

This question can be answered quite definitely. Fatness in a baby (as in later life) is not a sign of health. If it occurs, the diet should be changed so that the baby will resume normal weight for his age. Underweight is probably equally undesirable.

Mrs. M. says her 11-year-old boy constantly picks his nose and even does so when speaking to strangers. This is certainly an unpleasant habit, and "nose picking" is probably due to the habit of picking his nose on purpose and therefore it must be a subconscious habit. Probably he has become aware of the habit when he does this, but he will be unable to stop. He might pick his nose with his fingers or gloves or may in this way become conscious of what he does it and thus break the habit.

The mother of three boys writes that the youngest, who is 15, has been complaining of sore and swelling breasts, but that neither of the other boys have had this difficulty.

The condition is almost certainly connected with the boy's age—puberty—although the exact cause is not known. It is probably related to some kind of excessive hormone production. This may persist for a long time, but eventually nothing needs to be done for it, as it disappears in a relatively short time.

Finally—a question on trichotomias. This is a peculiar and rare condition in which the hair falls out from the stomach. It usually results from pulling the hair from the head and swallowing it. Apparently the largest ever reported weighed six and a half pounds immediately on removal. The treatment is surgical and almost invariably successful.

Native Grasses Without Sagebrush

An example of what native grasses can do when sagebrush is sprayed with 2,4-D is shown here by Merlin R. Stock, district ranger of the Cassia division, Sawtooth national forest. The grassland is in the allotted area belonging to George Fuller, rancher south of Murghuig, in the grazing district known as the Dry Creek-Cottonwood area. (Staff photo-engraving)

Forest Crews Are Demonstrating How To Take Advantage of Natural Mishap

How to turn a forest mishap into an advantage is being demonstrated by men of the Sawtooth National Forest.

Last July, a bolt of lightning touched a grove of quaking aspen in the Dry Creek area about nine miles south of Arden, and set ablaze a canyon and some high ground. Some 1,300 acres of brush-grassland burned that had been grazed by cattle and deer. When the fire was finally brought under control by the forest service, men on loan from the bureau of land management three days later, the brush and grass were burned clean, the soil was bare and ash-black and there was no more feed for livestock.

Area Recreated

Now, forest service employees are tending about 100 acres of the Dry Creek area, the rest being too steep for a tractor. Using specially constructed drills that can seed over rocky soils, crested and Siberian wheatgrasses are being drilled about one-half inch deep in the soil to provide later feed for cattle. In cooperation with the Idaho fish and game department, two holes in the drills are blocked off from the grass seeds to drop seeds of bitterbrush from the hoppers for deer.

The area had been a good one for deer to browse since bitterbrush is a favorite feed for the wild game as well as for cattle and sheep.

Cattle Kept Out

Merlin R. Stock, ranger for the district, said cattle will be kept out of that receded area for three years to let the grass, both native and adapted varieties, get a good start.

Ranger Stock said three grazing sites are planned for Fuller after the new seedlings are well established. Two may be grazed together with one light one year, and then shifted the next year. Each area will be resting very so often while the grasses reestablish themselves.

"More and more of the permittees are beginning to agree that there is an advantage to deferred grazing," said Stock, "especially when they see the grass in Fuller's area."

Six Other Permits

The grazing area for the Dry Creek-Cottonwood district allows six other permittees to run another 715 head of cattle, beside those areas set off for sheep. The area falls abruptly at the rim of Cottonwood canyon to the east, and Fuller's peak to the south. In the sagebrush areas that weren't sprayed and fenced off against cattle, native grasses were thin, small and sparse. The cattle didn't even go in for feed.

Another Problem

Under some of the groves of trees, there was hardly any grass showing through dead leaves.

"That's another problem that comes when the only easy feed for the cattle is in the bottom lands and where there is no brush. They'll overgraze the area, weaken the plants, cause pedestals around the roots, and then soon there isn't enough feed for the cattle, and the ground cover that is necessary for a watershed is destroyed," Stock pointed out. The necessity for ground cover in the watershed is another reason for reseeding the burned area, Stock added.

Heavy Discs Used on Range Drill

These heavy discs are the kind used by the national forest service for reseeding grazing land. In this area, south of Arden, a fire burned the ground clean last July. The rocky soil is being drilled with what are called heavy discs that won't slip or break as they roll over the rock. For transport, the discs are lifted high and held up by chains. Fall Is Best Time of Year for Taking Samples of Soil for Technical Testing

Fall is the best time of the year for taking soil samples for testing and determining the level of plant nutrients needed the next spring for individual crops, advised Warren Daigh, Twin Falls county extension agent.

"Every field on the farm is an individual one, with its own individual problems, history, slope and soil structure," said Daigh, "and although reports of the soil tests are not the final words about what to do to increase yields, the tests can serve as sound guides for future farming practices."

With more than ten million dollars spent on fertilizers by Idaho farmers in 1958, and probably more in 1959, it is advised that modern cropping practices require an abundance of plant nutrients in the soil.

The best time to build up the mineral content of the soil, said Daigh, is when the field is in a legume or a legume-grass mixture. For this reason, he advises that soil samples of a hay field be tested before it is taken out for a row crop.

Farmers know that phosphate helps alfalfa yields while building the soil. But not all farmers are aware that when the alfalfa is cut or mowed, about two to three percent of the phosphorus in the soil may become available for the growing crop of wheat or mixed grain. About two to three percent of the phosphorus in the soil is available to cultivated crops like potatoes and sugar beets, and the soil samples which are brought to the county agent's office are tested for phosphorus, nitrogen, potassium, calcium and organic matter. The pH, or the alkal level, also are tested. For special problems, which have needed special farm treatment but are not yielding as they should, samples are sent through the county extension office to the University of Idaho laboratory for further analysis pertaining to soil problems such as boron, zinc, copper, manganese, and iron. Special recommendations are made for improvement.

Interpretations of the tests are based on certain known standards. Thus, if there is less than 30 pounds of available phosphate per acre, the phosphate may be a limiting factor in plant growth. For small grains, the limiting factor may be only 20 pounds per acre, and for potatoes or alfalfa the limiting factor may be 40 pounds.

If sodium or magnesium carbonates are high in the soil, drainage probably is necessary. If the sodium is high, the county agent may recommend gypsum and heavy manure applications.

The desirable organic matter level is between 1.5 and 2 percent in southern Idaho soils, with different requirements for different crops. The crop history will help formulate advice about the straw that is turned under, or the green manure, or what fertilizer should be applied for the next crop.

Thus straw needs additional nitrogen to break it down for the next year's crop, while green manure may provide some of the organic matter needed to break it down.

The soil samples are best taken with a shovel, said Daigh, and placed in the large envelopes provided by his office. Before the samples are taken, the soil should be removed without removing any soil. Then a V-shaped hole is cut about 6 or 7 inches deep, with thin slices from the sides placed in a pail. About a sample should be taken from one field, at the top, middle, and bottom to get a good representation.

After the samples are mixed and air dried if they were wet, the envelopes are filled with the soil. On the envelope are blank spaces for furnishing the testing office with the necessary history of the field. This history covers previous cropping practices as well as drainage, seedbed problems, and soil peculiarities.

Early Dying of Potato Vines Linked To Roots of Weeds Found in Fields

Another reason for stalling weeds on row crops is offered by the University of Idaho extension researchers in a circular summarizing 17 years of study, from 1942 to 1958, about early dying in Idaho potato fields.

The extension service has found that the early dying of potato vines is associated with the roots of weeds in the experimental area, or verticillium blight, is associated with the roots of weeds in the experimental area, or verticillium blight, is associated with the roots of weeds in the experimental area.

In an isolation study, the commercial potato growers, farmers from Driggs, McCall, Grace, Ashton, Mackay and Clark Fork areas had respectively 0.6, 0.6, 0.6, 0.4 and 2.1 per cent infected tubers.

Tubers from the commercial areas of production, Aberdeen and Reardan, had 0.6 and 0.6 per cent infection.

In view of these studies the university service recommends strongly that seed spuds should be bought only from the seed-growing areas to keep out the early dying infection.

Temperatures during the summer also were found to be a factor in the severity of the disease. If the temperature during the summer was early part of the summer season there will be an early appearance of early dying if the temperature is low, the appearance will be later.

Organic matter and commercial fertilizers will hold down the disease, besides increasing the quality of the spud, adds the summary. High nitrogen applications, green manure as well as barnyard manure applied about 30 tons to the acre will reduce the severity of the disease.

Conversely, high phosphorus applications will hold down the severity of the verticillium fungi. And so will an early first irrigation. However, the extension service adds that it is better to irrigate spuds early to improve the quality than to delay early drying. They also state that high nitrogen applications even though it delays early dying also should be avoided because of a poorer net on the tubers.

There are soil fungi on the roots of weeds that cause early dying and increase yields in spud fields, adds the report, but they are considered too expensive for commercial application.

The final recommendations in the report were that only certified

Valley Farmers Rushing To Complete Fall Work

Now that beans are in and other crops are being harvested, farmers are trying to get some fall work done before the ground freezes.

As usual, the wind blows cold whenever farmers get out in the fields to plant or to harvest. It also is cold whenever the last half of the clover seed crop is being headed.

Out in the country, the manure spreaders are going into fields, while tractor operations on manure and feeding are collecting manure in feed yards. Clutches and brakes get a hard workout during this period.

Farmers are perhaps the coldest people in the valley during this part of the year and next spring, when they get cold again. Unless

Man Hours Continue to Drop for U.S. Farmers

WASHINGTON, Oct. 31 (UP)—Agriculture used fewer man hours of work last year than in 1958, said a report on changes in farm production and efficiency.

The report said that during 1958, each farm worked in the U.S. produced, on the average, enough food, fiber and tobacco to supply himself and about 20 other persons. This was almost 6 times the number of persons supplied by each farm before in 1928. The department said about half of this increase came in the last 15 years.

Sees Gain

WASHINGTON, Oct. 31 (UP)—An agriculture department economist predicts income of the average commercial farmer will more than double by 1975.

However, Dr. Kenneth Borchman said the number of such farms probably will decrease by one-third in that time.

There are now 3,100,000 commercial farms with an average income of $7,000 a year, he said. There are expected to be about two million commercial farms with average incomes of $17,000 a year.

Borchman made the prediction in a speech before the department's new rural development committee. The group plans to meet monthly.

Boost Considered In Cheese Imports

WASHINGTON, Oct. 31 (UP)—President Eisenhower is considering a move to authorize an increase in cheese imports. The President has ordered the tariff commission to study the cheese situation, to determine if additional imports, mostly from Holland and Italy, can be permitted without interfering with the American price support program.

There are 21,600 miles of gas pipelines in Texas.

MAGIC VALLEY PORTRAIT Practical Joker Went to Michigan to Find 'Ghost Town' Kelker Had Missed

A few days ago an unknown person sent O. A. Gus Kelker a color transparency of a ghost town scene in upper Michigan. "There is a shack on the right side of the picture with a sign in the foreground. The sign in large letters says 'Gus Kelker has not been here.'"

"If the sign is correct, that is probably the only area of that type Kelker and his family have not visited, camera and notebook in hand, during the last season. Dixon line in the past few years."

Exaggeration

This is obvious exaggeration, but Kelker and his family have visited practically every mining town west of the Snake in southern Idaho, gathering information from old-time residents and recording the same in a series of films for posterity. He has taken thousands of pictures of these areas and has given slide lectures to many groups throughout Magic Valley.

He estimates he has spoken to about 12,000 persons during the past three years. Most of the groups are small, averaging about 75 persons, and include every type of organization and fraternal organization.

O. A. GUS KELKER

History of Hobby

"History is our hobby," Kelker says. He is a volunteer field representative for the Idaho Historical society and a member of the Twin Falls County Historical society.

In addition to volunteer duties for the historical society, Kelker has been active in many other work since he has been a resident of Twin Falls. He has been an active member of the Chamber of Commerce, serving as an officer in several organizations. He has been active in Twin Falls and has been active in journalism and photography.

Kelker was born in Oakland, Calif., and moved to Pocatello when he was a child. His father was an official with the Union Pacific Railroad company. He attended public school in Pocatello. During his high school years, he worked on the high school paper and was a member of the Journalism club. He then attended the University of Idaho, where he was a member of the Journalism club and the Chamber of Commerce, serving as an officer in several organizations. He has been active in Twin Falls and has been active in journalism and photography.

blocks away when John Dillinger was shot down on the street — and he had almost decided to return west, when he took the job with the Tribune.

"Work in Chicago at that time was interesting, but what made me leave Chicago and come back west was the lack of personal company in the big town. There nobody trusts anybody, and I was a small town boy who did not like it too big for me."

Left Chicago

"By the time I went to work for the Tribune, I had decided to leave Chicago. He worked for the Tribune for two days and then returned to Pocatello."

"Knowing nearly everyone in town is half of living," Kelker says. "This big city hermit life is so good."

He took a job with the Pocatello Tribune as a general assignment reporter. Kelker notes that when he was in high school in addition to his interest in journalism, he also had aspirations to become a pilot.

He started flying lessons when he was a junior in high school and made his solo flight in January, 1929. "Since that time I have held a valid government pilot's license from what was then a solo license. Presently I have a commercial pilot's license with an instructor's rating."

Editor in Plains

Kelker first soloed in a plane that became obsolete many years ago, a Curtiss Pusher. The engine was cracked the pilot in the back of the head. "You never had to worry about walking away from a wreck that says 'hermit life is so good.'"

Kelker has logged about 2,500 hours of flying time out stopped for an instructor. In 1924 he volunteered and cracked the pilot in the back of the head. "You never had to worry about walking away from a wreck that says 'hermit life is so good.'"

This is just for shows in the Twin Falls vicinity. It takes much longer for shows in other towns in Magic Valley."

Other Activities

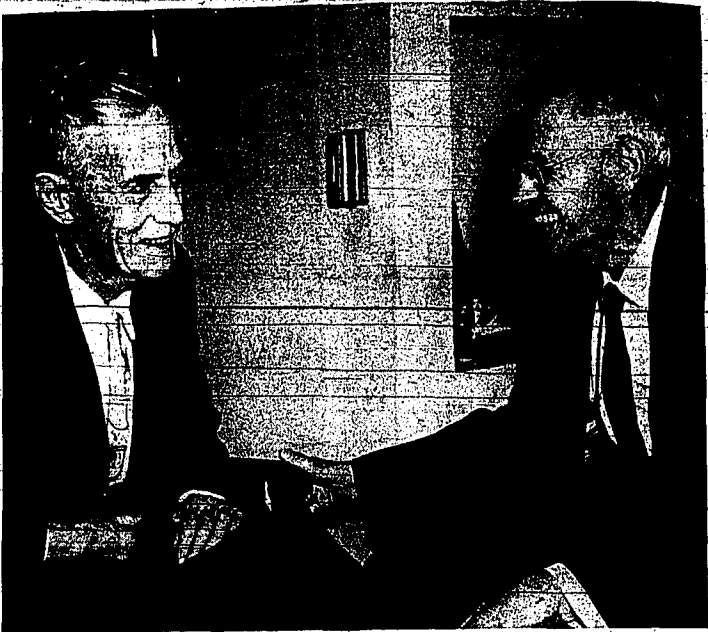

"But the thing we like about it," Kelker says, "is that you meet so many persons who are genuinely interested in the subject matter and you would be surprised at the different types of people who are interested in this material."

"Kelker is a member of many organizations. He is a member of the Kiwanis club and the Twin Falls Chamber of Commerce. He was a director in the chamber for two years and a Kiwanis director for six years. He has served one year each as program director, vice president and president of the Kiwanis club because he believed it was the best service he could give to the community. He joined the Kiwanis club because he believes every business and profession should be a member of the chamber."

Loma Jimena

He belongs to two organizations because he doesn't want to "spread himself too thinly," Kelker says. "I just want to be a member of the chamber."

Brothers Separated 46 Years Laugh Over Memories

Two brothers, early-day residents of this area, laugh about experiences as they reminisce after being separated for 46 years. Ralph Cammack, left, Twin Falls, has lived in Magic Valley most of his life. Horace Cammack lived here for a few years before and after the tract opened, but then moved to Milwaukee, Wis. This is the first time they have had a reunion. (Blair photo-gramming)

Early-Day Residents Have Reunion in Twin Falls for First Time Since 1913

Two brothers, both early-day residents of Magic Valley, had a reunion in Twin Falls for the first time in 46 years. They are Ralph Cammack, 74, Twin Falls, and Horace Cammack, 74, Milwaukee, Wis.

Both came to this area in 1900 with other members of their family and another brother, the late Fred Cammack, who died in May.

Drew Land

All drew land on the north side when the tract was first opened. Horace Cammack operated the Cammack Clothing store in Bull from 1900 to 1913. Ralph Cammack farmed for awhile and then eventually joined the postal service and carried mail on route two, Twin Falls, from 1921 to 1951. During those years he drove hundreds of thousands of miles and met many persons.

Horace Cammack is astounded at the change in this country since he left in 1913. This is the first time he has seen Magic Valley in the East. "It is a wonderful, wonderful country," he says. "Everywhere I go I see changes, changes. Sometimes I kick myself for not staying!"

He explains he left this country to attend the Milwaukee School of Engineering. Since he was graduated he has worked in Milwaukee. But they are having some difficulty. It seems Mrs. Ralph Cammack can't bear to leave Idaho — even for a short visit.

He never returned because of family and business commitments in the East. He adds that if he and his wife didn't have relatives and a home there, they would be tempted to move here.

Busy Visiting

Since they have been here, they have been busy visiting old friends and re-acquainting themselves with the country. Horace Cammack says: "Where you once saw only a house or two, you now see wonderful 'little towns.'"

In the past 46 years the brothers have corresponded, but they say that when they met at the train station they weren't sure whether they recognized each other or not. But Horace Cammack laughs and says, "I believe Ralph recognized me. There wasn't anybody else on the train as prominently."

How about the Air you breathe?

Like it or not, you inhale about a teaspoon of dirt a day. Not too long ago there was nothing we could do about it, but today we have the effective new electronic air cleaners. While ordinary furnace filters are about 7% efficient in the removal of dust, dirt, pollen and other impurities from the air, the electronic air cleaner is about 90% efficient. Keeps the house fresh and cleaner, helps prevent the spread of colds, removal smoke and odors.

Electronic air cleaners are sold by most air conditioning and furnace dealers. See your dealer now and see the big difference in your home!

Good Manners Termed Essential-Outdoors, too

Good manners are as essential outdoors as in the drawing room, adding much to hunting pleasure. Trouble in the rules, for example, occurs when enterprising hunters, such as those, build duck blinds on premises of public land, then find them occupied by others.

Rules of Good Sportsmanship Help to Solve Problem of Good Hunting Spots

BY JIM HUMPHREY

The Fish and Game Department has the best way to overcome the problem of finding a good place to hunt is to practice all the simple, although highly important, rules of good sportsmanship, causing the problems to become almost self-solving when the word gets around that "here's the right sort of guy."

Most of them welcome congenial shooting partners who speak the same language. Nevertheless, they are reluctant to chance getting stuck for a day with a fellow sportsman who ignores the niceties of etiquette or violates the unwritten laws of good sportsmanship. They make that mistake with the same "individual" only too often.

A newcomer to the sport or even to be fortunate enough to be invited to go hunting with an experienced hunter who knows where and how to take game should take the time to ask him, assured in his toes at all times, assured in his every action is being obopening day of the season and the intruders won't budge. The compelling factor is that both parties have about the same legal right to hunt. (Fish and game department photo—staff engraving)

It is an act of unmitigated discourtesy to shoot across a bird's path unless his gun is empty—then explain why. Finally, never claim a bird when there is the least doubt as to who downed it. To be branded a "claimer" is not an honorable distinction, even though a companion or host already may have proved that he is one.

Praise the good work of the host's dog and ignore the rest. Never try to control his actions, but let him try to retrieve. Never look for a bird unless it is clear the dog cannot or will not find it.

And never hunt in the favorite spot or duck blind of a friend without his permission—which, of course, goes for private property as well, whether owned by an acquaintance or stranger.

Naturally it is even more important to contact the farmer before building a duck blind on private property. Never drive anywhere without the owner's okay except through plainly marked public access ways.

Common courtesy also requires that a duck blind be built no closer than 1,000 feet away from another shooter's spot—and all hands will be happier if it is erected even further down the line. Any hunter known to take room to turn and swing a flight of ducks when calling them into the decoys. In any case, the season is at hand when the overhead whistling of wings and the answering chuckle of a mallard hen causes hearts to beat faster. And here in Idaho many of the country's remaining free access hunting waters are found.

Most of today's disagreements are twice-told tales, at least. In early fall before the season opens, one or more enterprising hunters have the foresight to build a duck blind on a promising "public" land. When the great day rolls around, other scattershotgunners reach the place ahead of the builders and take over. The complicating factor here is that both parties have about the same legal right to hunt.

If not moral—rights, whereas those constructed on private property presumably have the owner's permission.

Many duck blinds along the Payette, Boise and Snake rivers, for example, are on public land with access provided in some cases by the fish and game department to a free access provided in some cases by the fish and game de-

Craze of "Go-Kart" Opens To This Area

"A" class will be traced here. These cars have 120-cubic, 2½-horsepower motors, with 3.8 cubic inch displacement. Mason says four-cycle cars will race on the track only by invitation. "We want to make this a sport for the entire family," Mason says.

The little cars will fit in the trunk of a car. Their wheelbase cars' exceed 50 inches and their width can't exceed 32 inches. They weigh about 80 pounds and cost from $125.00 to about $200. The cheaper cars come in kit form.

Although the cars don't boast an impressive size, they run like a good deal of mass-produced cars. Recently one company tested one of the little cars in the Mojave desert. For 101 hours and 7 minutes the little car splattered over a road course—until it had driven 6,000 miles—twenty-eight drivers participated in the grueling run.

According to the people interested in them, they aren't toys, but are just as much fun.

Some areas go all out for the little cars. A "Go Kart" club in St. Louis recently spent $25,000 on an elaborate racing course. But a lot of outlay isn't necessary. Any parking lot, unused airport runway, or even a cowman's back grounds can serve the purpose.

Inclement weather doesn't stop them. According to Mason, local drivers are looking forward to driving the cars on ice this winter. He says the front wheels can be replaced with runners and metal perforated bands placed on the tires when the weather turns.

Stage Crew Dips Into Paint Task

Two members of the stage crew of "The Late Christopher Bean" dip into the work at hand. They are getting ready to paint the flats for the stage scenery and discovered that fingers, messy as the method is, are the best tools for mixing water paint. They are Velma Whitaker, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Donald Whitaker, and John Taylor, son of Mr. and Mrs. Louis Taylor. (Staff photo—enraving)

In addition, Johnson hopes to present two programs of three one-act plays during the year, one each semester. He adds that the enthusiasm for the drama ac-

New Canal Replaces Old Flume and Siphon Near King Hill

This new canal at Alkali creek is one of two major improvements completed by the King Hill Irrigation district, this past summer. The project included 1,200 feet of open ditch, and fill bypassing the old Alkali flume 15 miles west of King Hill. Estimated cost of the project was $2,000, according to Ted Moore, manager of the Irrigation district. Construction of both projects was done by the Karl Woodall construction company. Equipment works on construction of an open ditch bypassing the old Deer creek siphon 12 miles southeast of King Hill. The project and another ditch bypassing the old Alkali flume west of town, were completed by the King Hill Irrigation district last summer at a combined cost of $48,000. The Deer creek siphon has been in questionable condition for years and caused concern among landowners and directors of the district, according to Ted Moore, manager. (Staff engraving)

Two Major Improvements Finished in King Hill Irrigation District's System

(Continued from Page 18) age because of faulty flumes and canals, the manager noted. He feels the King Hill project has some of the best farm land in Idaho with a good climate for farming. The area has an exceptionally early spring and late fall which gives a longer growing season than most areas, the manager points out. The district is ideal for hay, grain, beans and row crops of all kinds and is noted for its water-irrigation, Moore says. Shipping facilities also are adequate with the railroad and highway running through the project.

Moore explained that when the King Hill Irrigation district began 25 years ago, no one believed it would last long. Now the district has no bonds, indebtedness and operates on a cash basis. Plans are being formulated for more improvements in the future and Moore feels the district will soon be "topping the list of irrigation districts in Idaho."
