Open House Ceremonies Set At New T.F. Bank Location

The formal open house of the new First Security bank of Twin Falls will be held from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m., Saturday, according to Lane L. Wilcken, vice president. The new building represents a quarter of a million dollar investment. It is located on the west side of Main avenue between Second and Third streets south.

Government officials will be present at all corners and there will be a coin guessing contest with valuable prizes. There also will be a display of antique coin banks which were popular in America shortly after the Civil war. The Magic Valley Coin Club's collection of new and old coins, one of a kind in the West, will be available to the public is invited.

During construction, First Security has been operating at temporary quarters at 142 Second avenue south. Nielsen and Miller, Twin Falls contractors, are the builders, and Hume, Hume and Jost, Boise, are the architects.

"We are delighted to bring this modern bank building to the people of the Twin Falls area," Wilcken said.

"We have faith in the future of Magic Valley. This modern bank building will provide complete banking service not only for the present but for years to come in a spirit of friendly efficiency."

The building has a total of 5,000 square feet on the main floor level and the lower floor. There is a spacious customer parking lot and drive-in banking facilities. There are six teller stations in all.

The main entrance from the new building and for a distance of 12 feet on the east and west sides is enclosed with a decorative enamel steel panels above the canopy and over the windows. The window walls extending to the south from the street front, have decorative tile solar screens. The remainder of the east and west walls and the south wall have an exterior of Norman Stone face brick.

Beds of flowers and shrubs are featured in front of the street windows of the bank as well as along the sides. The building is air conditioned, with refrigeration units for summer cooling.

The entrance to the bank lobby is from the west side of the main avenue front of the building, and the night depository is to the west of the main entrance. The entrance vestibule and the lobby are floored with terrazzo. Vinyl tile covers the offices' space and teller areas. Teller stations are fronted with walnut, with marble ledges and black glass desk plates. Teller counters are of art metal aluminum and glass railings separate the safe deposit vault and offices' space from the main lobby.

Wilcken pointed out "No-lead lighting is achieved through recessed fluorescent fixtures and recessed fluorescent fixtures in the lobby and offices' areas are through fluorescent lighting in the bookkeeping room, which is on the lower floor.

Walls are in pastel color shades and further quiet is created in the lobby with mirrors. The coverings on the ceiling. Acoustical tiles also lower the ceiling in the bookkeeping and other lower floor rooms. The acoustical tile also extends six feet down the walls of the lower floor.

Featured on the lower floor are: luncheon and kitchenette, staff members, rest rooms, locker rooms, rooms for storing miscellaneous supplies and equipment and for the boiler and air conditioning installations.

There are about 1,200 swimming pools in Palm Springs, Calif.

Algeria Slates Elections for Local Council

ALGERIA, May 14 (AP)—Under the pro de Gaulle slogan, "Abstention favors the rebellion," the campaign for Algeria's May 29 national and local elections officially started today.

For the fourth time in less than two years, France will deny the Moslem electorate for independence to hold elections throughout Algeria.

During a three-day vote, the electorate will choose 452 officials who are to form general councils—advisory bodies—in each of Algeria's departments.

Some time after the cantonal elections, a special committee of Algeria's elected officials will meet in Paris to discuss the political and economic problems besetting the French-ruled North African territory.

The rebel government-in-exile in Tunis has already branded the elections as prearranged. It called on all Moslems in Algeria to abstain.

Case of Spy Shot Down Not All Disheartening for Hank

It's a look at the case of the shot down spy," by Marie Blaney Uncle Sam McGowan.

To this reviewer it is not a completely disheartening tale by any means.

For one thing it proves that the United States does have spies.

This is a most cheerful thought. We are always hearing about the British intelligence system.

McGowan espionage network has an agent behind every hydrange bush, and how smooth and efficient are the cloak and dagger men of a dozen other countries.

But we hardly hear anything about our own country's spy system. Lots of Americans were willing to think we didn't have any and depended entirely for information on what could be picked up at cocktail parties, on buses and in trains.

It's good to know that we have secret agents, even if they are ones that get caught, flying over 100 miles above the Earth. It shows we are trying anyway.

"The case of the shot down spy" in funny news in another way, too. It offers concrete proof that we aren't quite as trusting as the lumps that set up a barbershop for spies. Now we can all sleep better for knowing that Uncle Sam, despite all his handing out of money and smiling acceptance of promises,

William Smith, Bobbie McIntyre and Sandy McIntyre, all Twin Falls. The sign reads "Our streets torn up cause were expanding. Drive real careful and happy landing." Work will continue during the summer. (Staff photo-graphing)

Blood Helps Boy's Recovery

Steven Bryant, 10, son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Bryant, is back in circulation after being in Magic Valley Memorial hospital for 11 days and using six pints of blood. Steven recently fell about 300 feet into the Snake river canyon while playing with several of his friends and internal bleeding occurred. It is shown here preparing to play his favorite game—baseball. The Red Cross bloodmobile will be in Twin Falls Monday, May 23, and in Klamath Tuesday, May 24. (Staff photo—magazine)

Rites Held For Jerome Woman

Funeral services for Mrs. Francis Cecilia Olinde were held at the LDS first ward with the Bishop Lee S. Pratt officiating.

Bishop Pratt gave the family prayer at the Witter funeral home and read the obituary. Music was by Wills Dingsman and Doris Backlund, Henry Giles, Louis Cunningham, Frank Walker and Herbert Hanks. Thora Gough was accompanist. Neil Perkins gave the invocation and Heber Prescott gave the benediction. Ethel Peterson was organist and the grave was dedicated by Emma Charlton. Burial was in the Westwood cemetery. Mrs. Olinde was 62 years old.

Young Baseball Player Aided By Blood After Canyon Fall

An avid young Katoohle ballplayer presented more serious injuries to his mother, Mrs. Robert Bryant, after he again fractured his leg. Steve, 10, fell from the canyon to the Snake river canyon on May 11. He was hospitalized for about a month. However, Steve isn't one to waste time in the hospital when getting a leg with important matters like baseball practice. He came home from the hospital in 11 days and was back in school after an absence of only two and one-half weeks.

Steve recently visited the canyon again, but his father kept tight hold of his hand on the second trip. Mrs. Bryant said she was nearly "petrified" when she saw the place Steve fell, and added that it was a little short of a miracle that he was not injured fatally.

Steve's mother, Mrs. Robert Bryant, 48 Buchanan street, expected the boy to be hospitalized for about a month. Union Chief Won't Reply To Questions

WASHINGTON, May 14 (AP)—Maurice H. Hutcheson, president of the Carpenters union, refused to answer yesterday when a judge subpoenaed him to six months in jail and a $500 fine for refusing to answer the questions of the senate racketeering committee.

Hutcheson's 620,000-member union is one of the biggest in the AFL-CIO group.

Unlike Dave Beck, former head of the Teamsters union, AFL-CIO leaders have refused to testify in court out of the hierarchy. Hutcheson's sentence was suspended by U. S. District Judge James W. Morris pending an appeal.

Hutcheson's refusal to answer a racketeering committee subpoena brought him into contempt of court. He did not plot to bring suit to avoid answering without penalty. Hutcheson, 63, contending during his trial the questions do not concern personal matters and might help the prosecution of an Indiana case against him.

By Bob Tucker

We are often asked, "What causes a garment to change its size or shape?" In other words, what makes it shrink or stretch?

Many fabrics by virtue of their fiber content, weave and finishing-treatment given them, have a certain amount of potential shrinkage. Wool is particularly sensitive to high temperatures. The weave of a fabric is responsible for the greatest shrinkage factor. Most of us today are pre-alarmed. But even so, your cleaner must take great care to determine and maintain as far as possible a garment's original size and shape.

Ike Dropping Federal Aide From Agency

WASHINGTON, May 14 — President Eisenhower is dropping William R. Connole from the federal power commission, the commission said today, because Connole had become identified with one particular point of view.

The president's letter was to Sen. Thomas A. Dodd, D. Conn., who described Connole as the principal proponent of the commission on the commission.

At a recent news conference Eisenhower said only that "I think we can get a better man than Connole, whom he first appointed to the commission in 1952 and whose term expires on June 22."

In the letter that Dodd made public, the president said he believed members of federal regulatory agencies should "not become identified as representing any point of view narrower than the broad public interest."

He thus turned against Connole, the argument made by Dodd and others in favor of his resignation—that Connole had come to be regarded as the commission's chief PFC advocate.

Eisenhower added that "in no sense should my action be construed as a reflection on Mr. Connole, for in my opinion, he has served faithfully and diligently as a member of the commission."

Dodd said Eisenhower's letter had not altered his view that Connole's dismissal was a "completely unjustified breach of the public interest."

The president has nominated Thomas J. Donagan, a former FBI agent who now is a member of the administrative activities control board, to succeed Connole.

On May 2 he also nominated Paul A. Switzer, now a justice department lawyer, to succeed the late John E. Husey on the PFC.

The senate committee committee has scheduled a hearing on both the Donagan and Switzer nominations for next Wednesday.

Nixon Notes Possibility of Tax Reforms

HOT SPRINGS, Va., May 14 (AP)—Vice President Richard M. Nixon said Saturday that tax reform legislation— including some reduction of high bracket income tax rates— may be possible next year.

In carefully phrased replies to reporters' questions, the prospective GOP presidential nominee said he does not intend at any time in the election campaign to make a tax reduction.

Tax measures definitely should be debated in the political heat of an election year, Nixon said, and the whole question will depend on the international situation. But he acknowledged he had been doing some thinking in this area and went on:

"If we had met adequately our responsibilities for national security, we had a substantial budget surplus, a new congress should be able to consider, in a temperate and responsible way, a tax reform measure."

Lease Purchased

HAILLEY, May 14—Mr. and Mrs. LeRoy Davis have purchased the lease on Service corner, Crox and Main streets, and started operating the service station this week.

The station has been operated the past several years by Wilky Goddy. Davis, who has been a resident of Wood river most of his life, has changed the name of the service station to "LeRoy's Service corner."

He is acknowledged he had been doing some thinking in this area and went on:

"If we had met adequately our responsibilities for national security, we had a substantial budget surplus, a new congress should be able to consider, in a temperate and responsible way, a tax reform measure."

FROM ALL ANGLES

BY LARRY HOVEY

Every year at district and regional track and field meets the question is just how Idaho's state records stand. It is a question that has been asked many times before. It is a question that has been asked many times before. It is a question that has been asked many times before.

The "conservative" group maintains that the records should be allowed to stand as they are. The "liberal" group maintains that the records should be lowered to reflect the current conditions. The "moderate" group maintains that the records should be lowered to reflect the current conditions.

Therefore, to even things up, the records should be lowered. The records should be lowered to reflect the current conditions. The records should be lowered to reflect the current conditions.

Sachs Posts Fastest Time in Race Trials

INDIANAPOLIS, May 14 (AP)—Eddie Sachs, fastest talker in auto racing, announced he was going to drive the first official 1 1/2-mile-an-hour lap on the Indianapolis Motor Speedway today — and then die it. The Center Valley, Pa., tavern owner won the pole position for the 14th 500-mile race May 20, and an incidental $1,200, by breaking two records set only 60 minutes earlier by Jim Rathmann of Miami.

Sachs started his new Dean Special around the track for a 10-mile qualifying average of 146,207 miles an hour and a best lap of 172,321. Sixteen cars qualified altogether, at a record average of 144,833 for the first session, leaving 17 starting spots to be filled in additional trials Sunday and next week.

A crowd estimated upwards of 75,000 watched Jim Rathmann turn in the first record-breaking lap at 142,311, with a best lap of 149,615. His brother Gene, another racing veteran from Hazlet, Ill., set the old 10-mile mark of 147,215 two years ago.

Californian car builder A. J. Watson put three cars in the front row of the Memorial day race. He built Jim Rathmann's car, himself and the new 1966 Buick. Roger Ward of Indianapolis, 61½ years younger, had the third best speed of the day at 145,500. Sachs' car was built from Watson's plans.

There were no wrecks and only three minor spins. The Detroit Tigers banged out of a batting slump with five home runs that accounted for all of their hopes of winning the Kansas City Athletics.

Norm Cash, who took the first base job away from slumping Steve Biko, provided the winning margin with a booming home run in the bottom of the fourth. Cash came with two hits in the seventh inning against reliever Ken Blum. Blum fell on a suddenly inspired Boston team for a 5-4 ninth-inning victory which snapped a four-car slump.

Five-to-five singles for eight exciting innings, the four young hitters jumped on starter Bill Monaghan for four homers and pinch-hitter Al Pearson and Jackie Brandt, then poured it on against nine relievers.

Mack Valley college has been a member of ICAC for about 10 years. Ultimately, the league must lose Weber college, but because Weber is essentially competing in a four-year school.

The full conference meeting will be held at Salt Lake City Sept. 1.

Annie Hills Plans to Retire After 43 Years of Area School Teaching

Annie Hills, who has taught a student for enough years to note life teaching certificate. She later will retire at the end of this year. She came to Twin Falls in 1916 and taught at Starr's Ferry for three years and in Hansen for one year. She has taught school as a senior in high school. She taught at Starr's Ferry for three years and in Hansen for one year. She has taught school as a senior in high school. She taught at Starr's Ferry for three years and in Hansen for one year. She has taught school as a senior in high school.

Annie Hills, fifth grade teacher at Bickel school, retires this year after teaching 43 years in Idaho public schools. Since 1921 she has taught at Bickel school. She intends to remain in Twin Falls. (Blair photo-engraving)

Although she admits the fifth grade is the most difficult to teach, she says she has preferred that particular grade. "I like the grade, I like the subject matter in this grade. And the students are exciting to teach more for themselves. To me, it is a very interesting grade to teach."

Asked if she ever has much of a discipline problem in that grade she says, "The trick is to keep them busy, or they'll keep you busy. And she adds that keeping children busy at any age level is easy to keep energetic students in line."

Miss Hills notes children haven't changed too much in past years. "Children are children," she says. "Although there is a tendency all ways of life to be more lenient with children. In past days we were sometimes too strict with them, but there is a fault in going to either extreme."

There is a little difference, for children used to be more timid. A child now isn't afraid of anything. Now they get out so much and are so active. The home used to be the center of social life, but that has changed."

She points out that children now have a chance to do so many more things. And she notes many children aren't so different, but that children simply have more freedom.

Although she finds children are basically children—in any situation she does not think that modern elementary school child reflects the tensions of the age, but that they are more aware of national and international tensions than some people realize. This is made manifest in many ways, but the high number of broken families and resultant problems often affect the school children.

Miss Hills first decided to become a teacher when she was in elementary school herself and never considered another profession. Now that she will have more time she thinks she probably will visit some friends and relatives she hasn't seen in a long time and do a lot of work around her home for which she hasn't had time.

But after 43 years of teaching, it isn't easy to quit. She'll probably visit the school occasionally and, in a way, still hasn't retired. She will continue to teach a Sunday day school class at the First Presbyterian church, an activity that she has undertaken at one church or another, for almost as long as she has taught public school.

Meager Equipment Assembled for Wild Canyon Trip

Keith Turner, principal of the Lincoln school in Twin Falls, and his son, David, 11, display the meager equipment for an estimated 10-mile trip down the Jarbridge and Brunson rivers—from the Nevada border to Brunson. They will take no food and will live off the land. Turner says fish and wild plants will compose the major part of their diet. (Blair photo-engraving)

Local School Principal and Son To Live Off Land on River Trip

Keith Turner, principal at Lincoln school, and his son, David, 11, are planning possibly one of the most off-beat vacations of any father and son in this area.

Turner, who has always been interested in outdoor survival work, plans to take his son on a 10-mile trip down the Jarbridge and Brunson rivers, from near the Nevada border and Murphy's Hot Springs to the town of Brunson.

Turner has been interested in survival methods since he was a boy. He has taken many survival courses and has taught survival methods to soldiers when he was instructing at an army school during World War II.

Turner says he has developed a little confidence in himself, and while he is there will be taking pictures and taking a lot of pictures.

Green Thumb Not Necessary for Flowers, Plastic Workers Avow

With the modern age of plastic, it is hardly necessary to get a green thumb, believe a few Twin Falls women who are making their flowers out of plastic. You can hardly tell them from the real thing.

The local women who have worked extensively with the plastic flowers are Mrs. A. L. Davis and Mrs. Lynn Christensen. They have had this hobby for about six months.

For years persons have made flowers from paper and other synthetic but now the new method is to use the plastic in a mold and for three minutes at 300 degrees.

The petals or leaves are peeped out of the mold and allowed to set for a few minutes.

Then the hardest work begins. The petals and leaves must be wrapped, to the wire stems which are hardly distinguishable from natural flowers.

Assembly is haphazard. Both Mrs. Davis and Mrs. Christensen note that assembling the flowers is the hardest part of the construction, but they add that anyone who enjoys working with his hands can do the work and enjoy it. They compare it to knitting, and Mrs. Christensen adds that the assembly process is a handy thing to have around when you are cornered on the telephone by a long-winded friend. "It gives you something constructive to do," she says.

The materials are inexpensive. The molds, which can be used over and over again, are priced from about 40 cents to $1.50. And they say the flowers, such as tulip, cost about 27 cents in materials.

In the near few months Mrs. Davis has spoken before several groups and explained how to do this. (Continued on Page 2, Column 1)

Everything Needed by Family Is Stocked in Bishop's Storehouse

One of the more unusual features of the bishop's storehouse is that the church stocks practically everything a family needs in case of disaster—or such things as prolonged sickness in the family.

According to E. L. Crowley, chairman of the bishop's council for the Twin Falls stake, the storehouse "contains practically everything a family might need for the welfare and health."

The warehouses were begun in 1938, when the church inaugurated the welfare program. Crowley explains that it is the philosophy of the church that every member should have his needs met, not only as long as the church can care for him.

The warehouse itself is a rather amazing storehouse, where such things as food, clothing, furniture, rugs, hospital beds and coal are all stored to be used as needed.

The Twin Falls stakehouse is located on Friday, from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m.

Goods are awarded to individuals and families in each ward at the request of the ward clerk. The family receives certain goods. This order is then supplied by the bishop of the ward.

Life in MAGIC VALLEY

After eight years as paper carriers for the Times-News, boys of the Tanaka family, ELCHIGSON, retired May 1. Three of the four Tanaka boys have served as carriers and it took the fourth one to assure those first few years while he was still at home. In fact, the entire Tanaka family has been so well acquainted with the paper that the oldest has become acquainted with many Shoshone residents and appreciate the many kindnesses shown them by those who live in the Magic Valley.

In 1914 William A. Elchigson, a first farmer who attempted to homestead the flats by bringing water from Elbert Creek for irrigation. Some of the deep ditches made for this purpose still remain, as a memorial to the first man to dream of irrigating the Magic Valley with green wheat and hay fields in the summer.

The Hoodopees began their effort to irrigate their two sections of the flats six years ago. Geologists pointed out best well sites and tested the soil. Well drilling started three years later with the first well being completed in 1955. Fire at the flats camp also helped the work considerably, and the workmen living quarters and much equipment in the pits of drawdowns, such as the water well was destroyed. It is expected to irrigate about 220 acres in the future.

The Hoodopees have been dry farming the land for several years and they are expected to irrigate by the end of the year. The other 200 acres of the flats are owned by relatives of the Hoodopees and are expected to be irrigated by water in the future. "Constant Courage"

Courage is not unawareness of danger nor yet indifference to danger. Rather it is that quality which enables one to do his duty in the presence of known and acknowledged dangers. It is the quality which enables one to do his duty in the presence of known and acknowledged dangers. It is the quality which enables one to do his duty in the presence of known and acknowledged dangers.

There are millions of martyrs whom God did not deliver from the hands of the state, or from the slow death of the dungeon. But these men were not forgotten when Jesus came to relieve our servants. It is the readiness to die for His name, and not the fact of death itself, that gives a place among the favored.

Some 60 Elementary Schools in Idaho Are Offering Foreign Language Study

BOISE, April 25 — Idaho's educators are assuming an international outlook and are expected to believe that understanding should be the first order of training in foreign languages. Then, they say, should come speaking, reading and writing.

More than 60 elementary and junior high schools in Idaho are offering foreign language studies courses this school year. The students' parents never get until they reach high school.

But instead of memorizing long lists of vocabulary words and wrestling with the problems of grammar, these youngsters are learning from the lesson of simple communication.

North Side Unit Meets at Hailey

HAILEY, May 14 — Members of the North Side Unit of the First Church of the Nazarenes met at the Hailey dining room.

Attending were President and Mrs. Robert W. Ewing, Jr., Mr. and Mrs. Marcus Kell, Jerome; Mr. and Mrs. M. W. Hilderson; Mr. and Mrs. Emmett Kelly, Mr. and Mrs. Harvey Tveason, Mr. and Mrs. Owen Bonham, James M. Kelly and Mrs. Lyons Gooding; Mr. and Mrs. Harrell Thorne; Mrs. John W. Davies and Mr. and Mrs. Jack P. Ensign. Hailey members have been invited to the Peace of A. Allison for failure to register annually. He was cited by State Patrolman Richard Burns.

Both are concerned about the quality of instruction the children receive. Teachers can obtain phonograph recordings and other teaching aids — for instance — but without a good foundation in the language themselves they run the risk of creating bad speech habits in the children.

A possible solution to the problem, Miss Scott says, might be the hiring of a native foreign language teacher-superior for a district.

The teacher — trained both in the teaching and speaking of foreign languages could supervise instruction from the grade through high school levels. He or she also could conduct in-service training for other teachers.

Most popular of the foreign languages being offered in Idaho elementary and junior high schools is Spanish. However, two schools in southeastern Idaho are offering German.

Ensign believes that, eventually, foreign languages will become part of the junior high school curriculum in Idaho. And he thinks it will be a good thing.

Sentencing Set Eyed by Judge

JEROME, May 14 — Sentencing will be pronounced by Probate Judge J. G. Gilkuth at 4 p.m. Monday on Mrs. Betty Geyer, who pleaded guilty Thursday of leaving a check with insufficient funds.

FILED MAY 14 — District W. Corvallis, filed with first 410 similar change in Gooding. The complaint was signed by Paul Pratt, owner of the Butcher Shop market, where Mrs. Geyer, mother of five children, wrote a check for $15.

Fire District Is Eyed by Grange

KING HILL, May 14 — A report on the rural fire district was given by Arthur O'reer at the Grange meeting here this week, reports Frank Jones, master.

Thomas Timbers was appointed to the fire committee headed by O'reer to serve in place of the late R. J. Barnes while he is attending a church meeting in the East.

Green said the committee had met with the King Hill Irrigation district and their directors favored a rural district. It was in conjunction with the O'reer party. The committee was instructed to continue the investigation.

Retirements were served by Westley Pink, Green, W. Ham Cain and Melvin Helwich.

Green Thumb Not Necessary, Believe Women Making Flowers From Plastic

the work. She will be happy to speak to any group and explain the process.

Make Good Presents
Mrs. Davis thinks it is a handy hobby, for the hobbyists always have presents for sick friends and relatives or for any other occasion. Presents can be made from the plastic flowers and come in handy 12" boxes for Memorial day.

The only limit to the kind of floral arrangements you can make is your own imagination, Mrs. Davis asserts.

Both women note that the hobby has been popular with older people, people who possibly have been avid gardeners in their younger years and who have reached the point where they can no longer tend a garden.

But the plastic materials are limited to older persons, either Mrs. Christensen reports her son took some of the stem wire and fashioned an altogether too realistic spider.

Molds for the plastic material also can be purchased for various holiday ornaments, such as reindeer or Santa Claus.

Learn About Flowers
In addition to the joy of assembling a floral arrangement, the hobbyists also learn a lot about the anatomy of a flower. Both women started the hobby after the winter season was over and they didn't want their flowers to bloom again. They point out that in the past few months they have used seed and flower catalog illustrations in order to get realistic coloring to their flowers.

It has worked, for Mrs. Davis, an educator, attended church with an artificial orchid and one recognized it as the product of her hobby.

Mrs. Lyman Christensen pours liquid plastic into a mold for iris petals. She has already placed the darker shading of the petal in the mold and pre-heated it so it wouldn't mix with the lighter plastic and will apply it throughout the mold with a common paint brush. (Staff photo-ensaving)

Only Few Minutes Required for Baking

A few minutes after liquid plastic has been poured in the mold and been baked at 350 degrees, the petals are ready to be pulled out. Mrs. Christensen grasps the wire and pulls an iris petal free. It will set in a few minutes and then can be incorporated into an imitation flower. In the foreground are the leaf molds. (Staff photo-ensaving)

230 Apply in Pay for Wool

With the deadline now past to apply for payments in the national wool program, 230 Twin Falls county growers have applied, according to Carl Boyd, county agricultural commissioner, chairman, the "wheat" committee.

Applications received throughout the country will be used in computing the rate of payment. After which payments will be made to growers through wool offices. Payments are expected to be made some time after July 1.

Information on Twin Falls, Magic Valley and Idaho will be distributed to tourists at a Chamber of Commerce booth to be opened soon at the Fertile Memorial bridge, William Grange, 464, chamber secretary-manager, and Kim T. Casey display some of the Twin Falls folders offering information.

Casey, a retired Twin Falls resident, volunteered his services to help operate the booth. Grange urges other adults who would like to help to contact him at the Chamber of Commerce office. (Staff photo-ensaving) many of them noted they would be glad to stay over another day if there was just something to see. They were always glad to get an Idaho map, a city map and brochure on Magic Valley and Twin Falls and the points of interest in this area.

Extracting Dollars From Tourists Is Art, Particularly When They Like It

Extracting dollars from tourists in such a fashion that they like to spend it is an art. It is an art that is a gentle art and important to this area. So the Twin Falls Chamber of Commerce is getting ready for the tourist season and plans to make the tourists' stay at average farm prices of wool to 62 cents a pound, which is the announced incentive level. That percentage is applied to each grower's marketings to calculate his payments. On uniform lamb, payments made at a rate based on the wool rate. For 1959 the payment rate was 70.2 per cent for shorn wool and 81.2 per cent hundredweight on uniform hogs.

The purpose of the percentage method of payment, Boyd points out, is to encourage wool growers to do the best possible job of marketing their clip. Payments under the wool program are made as an incentive to growers to bring about an increase in national wool production.

pointing out the local points of interest they sometimes can be induced to stay overnight.

But the source of tourist information needn't center around the booth, Grange says every citizen can play his part. To illustrate how the residents of a city can raise job with tourist traffic and the resulting dollars that best up the community's economy Grange cites an example of how not to handle tourists that is cited in Pocatello a short time ago.

The Pocatello Chamber of Commerce sponsored an objective survey to determine why tourists didn't stay longer. The survey crew rode around town in a car with an out-of-state license tag. They asked the question, "What have you got to see around Pocatello?" A vast majority of the persons mentioned none of the local attractions, but simply directed them to the highway to Yellowstone park, thus diverting tourists and their business away from Pocatello.

Grange notes this condition sometimes exists in Twin Falls when people are apt to direct inquiring tourists to another area without noting such things as the Snake River gorge, Shoshone falls, Babcock Rock, the Snake River trout company or any of the other tourist attractions around here.

"Such a survey has not been made here," he says, "but if it were made I think we would be absolutely shocked. We would probably come up with the same answer that Pocatello found. Even those who know better would probably say, 'It's just a few miles to Sun Valley.'"

"When I talked with these tourists at the booth last summer they were glad to stay over another day if there was just something to see. They were always glad to get an Idaho map, a city map and brochure on Magic Valley and Twin Falls and the points of interest in this area."

Office to Move

RUPERT, May 14—The employment security agency office in Rupert will open Monday in new quarters in the Hitting building at 818 seventh street, Manager Dave Lewis reports.

Growth in the volume of business handled by the local office has necessitated the move to larger quarters, Lewis said, pointing out that the Rupert office has handled more non-agricultural placements than any other office in the state, he noted.

He said that of 254 persons taking jobs in the J. R. Simpson frozen food plant in Burburn, 113 were from Minidoka county with the remaining from Cassia, Blaine and Twin Falls counties, and of the 113, 83 were from Rupert. In addition to placement service, the local office assists employers in their problems of personnel management, and tests for prospective applicants are given in typing and shorthand by office staff.

Portable Feedmill Is Another Mechanization in Feeding

This portable feedmill is a new addition to Magic Valley's trend toward mechanized agriculture. Highly maneuverable on account of the hoist, shown clamped in transport position, the feed-grinder and mixer can suck grain 45 feet out of a grain bin to its mill and then blow it out under severe pounds pressure so that it flows into its mill into another bin or wagon. This portable mill is the first of its make in this area. (Staff photo-entouring)

Maneuverable New Feedmill on Wheels Going Into Use for Grinding on Farm

A highly-maneuverable feedmill opening, eliminating grinding on wheels, more properly called a Feedmill, has just been purchased by the Oldham Feed and Feed company, Twin Falls. This large, truck-mounted feed-grinding machine entered Twin Falls this week after being driven across country from Lancaster, Pa., by Mickey Quigley and Warren Bowen, company employes. It was purchased from the Duffin Manufacturing company.

Officials Participate in Nevada Field Day

Standing in front of carefully-made individual cattle pens for experimental feeding trials are Clark Torcelli, left, superintendent of the Knoll creek substation for the University of Nevada, and Joseph Robertson, professor of agronomy and range management. Professor Robertson discussed nitrogen flow during drought at the field day held for ranchers. (Staff photo-entwain)

Nevada Agronomists Say Halogeton Is Believed Hurting Soil of Range Area

CONTACT, Nev., May 14—(Entwain)—In the fall range area, weeds that kill sheep and some cattle each year. It is now found to be harming range soils, according to experimental research data reported by University of Nevada agronomists during the Knoll creek field day held last week for southern Idaho and Nevada ranchers.

A good-sized crowd of ranchers heard discussions involving cattle feeding, grass, rangeland management, and agriculture economics.

Halogeton has a way's been known to thrive best on saline soils but new evidence offered by the research team showed halogeton also makes the ground salty and affects for generations beyond the chemical and physical structure of the soils in which it gains a root hold.

In about 100 years, said E. Eckert, Nevada agronomist, the much formed from halogeton will be about three inches thick. In this much top soil and potassium are present in large quantities.

Samples of soil were taken from three areas, whitetars, salt-tars and shade-tars. The heaviest salt-reserves milk—was discussed by Dr. Kenneth L. Kuttler. Dr. Kuttler said reasons were known for the disease but little of any nature cow, just fresh with calf, or a cow without calf. He advised that ranchers send young heifers instead of cows to avoid the disease that is still infectious in Nevada but is not in Idaho.

He recommended adding magnesium to some rations, though he stated this mineral wasn't a definite preventative. He said that more often than the cows coming down with tetanus have died in the winter months. To date, the only positive treatment about the disease is quick injection of calcium phosphate in the veins.

He said anthelmintics is present in northern Nevada in large numbers of cattle, 75 per cent of them, but is present in only four per cent in southern Nevada. The reason is different in insecticides, ticks, biting flies, and perhaps lice. In most cases, the insects are not suffering from the disease, and can be eliminated only as carriers.

Research is being done on young animals, said Dr. Kuttler, and in view of this knowledge a young bull placed on the range will be in good state of health in later months. It is not a disease because it is used for service.

Howard Weeth, physiologist, reported some experiments he made on young heifers fed different levels of salt in their drinking water. Some water on the desert are becoming saline, he said, and the experiments were made to determine the safe level for cattle. Where the salt was one per cent, the heifers drank much less as those heifers drinking salt-free water. At a level of 100 per cent, the heifers drank less than they did when they were drinking water with one per cent salt. At 20 per cent, the consumption went up to 52 pounds a day average with one per cent salt in the water, but declined to 46 pounds when the salt content was increased to two per cent. Without salt in the water, the consumption was about 92 pounds.

Increasing physiologically as the quantity of salt was increased were blood counts, red blood cells, specific gravity, and serum sodium and serum potassium. The reason was the lowering intake of drinking water as the heifers worked the heavily salted water sometimes for days. Then in desperation, Weeth said, the heifers would finally drink large quantities of the solutions that were killing them.

Weeth said public health authorities set the safe salt maximum in water at 500 per million. A one-per-cent solution contains 100 per million.

The symptoms of the animal suffering from too much salt in water are rough coat, dry skin and loss of appetite. Other signs of dehydration said Weeth, include sunken eyes, sunken nostrils, when cattle drink more, this indicates mild dehydration. He determined his studies that the safest level is 125 per cent salt in the water, with 15 per cent being toxic in winter months, when cattle drink more. This balance may be high, said Weeth. He added that sea water contains 35 per cent salt.

He said when cattle are fed salt meal, cotyledon meal with large amounts of salt to limit the free choice out on the range, he has seen some cattle get as numerous as three pounds of salt a day. Clean drinking water was available, however, and no ill effects were observed.

Performance testing of cattle and combinations of feed for the in-winter months also were discussed during the field day. In the performance testing area, and sex were important considerations. Older calves gain more on the range. In the feedlot and range, steers will gain more than heifers of the same age and size.

The speakers were introduced by Clark Torcelli, superintendent of the Knoll creek substation. Clark Torcelli is a brother of Paul (Jim) Torcelli, Twin Falls, University of Idaho range weed agronomist.

Moisture Checked in Alfalfa Growth

Alfalfa Fields Irrigated Last Fall Do Much Better This Spring South of T.F.

Alfalfa fields irrigated in the fall will do much better the next spring.

This conclusion, often debated by farmers, often accepted only as theory, can be seen on hay fields at the Salmon tract farm, owned by John Pastoor and Robert Leichter, both on the Salmon tract.

Performance testing of cattle and combinations of feed for the in-winter months also were discussed during the field day. In the performance testing area, and sex were important considerations. Older calves gain more on the range. In the feedlot and range, steers will gain more than heifers of the same age and size.

Grange's Fathers Present Program

RICHFIELD, May 14—Grange fathers presented the program and served the refreshments at the Grange fathers' meeting held Wednesday evening at the first meeting of the Grange. Alexander served as lecturer.

Some were sung by Louis Stank, Carl Chaffin, Bill Olson, Glen Berg, Glen Pierce, Edgar Stank, Bill Chaffin, Bill Olson, and members and a high school barbershop quartet, Tracy Hanson, Darrell Kelly, Alton Andrews and Orval Humphries. Joy Alexander gave a treat.

The next meeting was changed to Thursday, May 24, because of conflict with eighth grade graduation.

Pastoor had some extra water last October and he let it go down as cut-outs in his hay field. He had taken three cuttings off this hay field last season, and said he had no certainty that the water in the fall would make such a difference this spring. Whereas last year he had three cuttings, the fall-irrigated strip is still green. Leichter had made three cuttings last fall but this heeded for his stock pen of 5. Unlike Pastoor, he took only two cuttings of alfalfa from this field last season, which pointed to the fact that this field hadn't been irrigated, perhaps, from early July.

The watered strip is also high green. The center of the field is black from heat early last week. The fact that under the center part of the field irrigated he may force it either into bloom, or at least late second growth.

Both men are convinced that in addition to the immediate result of their first cutting yields, the crop of alfalfa doesn't build up the soil. In the case of alfalfa, alfalfa stops growth in the spring, they find it hard to believe that beneficial soil microbe activity also doesn't fall.

They also know that soil nutrients, minerals, whether from commercial fertilizer or from the natural state in the soil can't be absorbed into the root systems of the plants without adequate moisture.

The Salmon tract didn't turn water into their canal until last Monday.

By that time the alfalfa was dry despite rains of the week previous. Both men are convinced that a supplemental irrigation in the fall, if it were possible, would permit them to hold off irrigating their hay until May and still get a decent first cutting of hay. A low yield of first-cutting of hay, always the lowest of yields of all three cuttings elsewhere in the valley, means a low total yield of hay for the entire season.

They also are convinced that if a fall supplemental irrigation isn't possible, then using Salamon tract water, water turned into the canal by April 15 would be money in the way of hay in the farmer's pocket.

In areas where water is more plentiful, increase in yield from a fall irrigation, after the third crop, is a matter for conjecture. It would have to be higher, though. It might even mean more benefit to the soil from the alfalfa crop than has previously been expected.

Heavy Supply Continues As Main Outlook Factor

WASHINGTON, May 14—(Entwain)—The agriculture department notes the main factor in the agricultural outlook continues to be the heavy supply situation.

Other factors in the price outlook for farmers for the remainder of the year are (1) a strengthening in domestic demand; (2) a high export; and (3) prospects for increased hog and egg production in the first half of 1960.

There are handsome surpluses of some crops, such as wheat and field grains, but there also are prospects of significant reductions in later this year in marketing of hogs and eggs. These reductions in marketing which would mean a reduction in supply—should aid farm prices, according to commodities writing in the department's publication, "The Demand and Price Situation."

Domestically, there is a strong growing demand for food and other farm products reflecting an increasing population and a rising economy. The department said that exports of farm products in the second half of the year are likely to be well maintained. The whole, although cotton exports in the marketing year August, 1960, July, 1961, may receive from the unusually high rate of the current marketing year. The department

Tranquilized Roman Orgy Held Here by Latin Students to Mark End of School

When in Twin Falls some persons do as the Romans did. Any day on Saturday, May 14, students from the Twin Falls high school Latin classes gathered for a tranquilized Roman orgy to celebrate the end of the school year. The students dressed as the Romans did, ate as they did, and within limits acted as they did. This was done at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph H. Lalimiere, who serves as chaplain with the students' teacher, Bernice Babcock. According to Bill Ellis, Jr., co-chairman of the party, "We thought the party would add interest to the class and give us an extra credit, and something to wind up the year's activity." Miss Babcock says the high school Roman banquets were held occasionally until about 10 years ago. Ellis hopes the party will start the tradition again so it will become a yearly event. Everything about the banquet was Romanized as much as possible. The students ate outdoors in the backyard of the Lalimiere residence. The backyard Nardoscape was decorated to resemble a Roman setting, complete with Roman columns of cardboard and painted to resemble stone. Lighting was by torch light, with a runner entering the grounds at dusk to light the torches. A special table was fashioned in a U-shape around a large tree, decorated with flowers and candles. Every effort was made to serve a truly Roman meal. Speaking of the menu, Miss Babcock says, "It was olive au gratin," which translates from "from the grapes." In the vernacular this can be expressed "from soup to nuts." And that is about what was served. The meal started with a deviled egg course, as the Romans did, and ended with fried chicken, was the main course, fried chicken, was the main course with the Romans, and the chicken was fried in olive oil. No butter was used in preparing the meal. The vegetables were fresh, no canned vegetables allowed. Apparent and string beans were served, together with olives, celery and lettuce. Only vegetables common in the days of the Roman empire were served. The bread was Roman and small round loaves, like today's loaf, but like a piece of pie. Fresh fruit was served as a dessert. The food was prepared by members of the students. Stiffening themselves full of 20th century Roman food, were 25 maisters and 13 slaves. The masters were the students of the second year class, the slaves were the students of the first year class who were in a different scholasticity. They sat on the inside of the table and served their masters who sat...

MAGIC VALLEY PORTRAIT Teacher Has Unusual Assignment Here-With Cerebral Palsy School Students

For the last six years Mrs. Charles Rattelle has been charged with some of the most unusual teaching assignments in the area as director of the cerebral palsy school. As a result of her work, she has received two national awards and recently was considered for the Woman of the Year award in Twin Falls. In April 1958, she was awarded the Eva National Foundation scholarship for cerebral palsy, an award for excellence in her field of teaching. One year later she received the Idaho PTA scholarship award for special education. She used both money awards to further her education at San Francisco State college in the peculiar problems of special education. For the last six years she has attended school there.

"This class work was especially beneficial," she says, "because I have had a chance to work as a practice teacher in the college demonstration center. My experience was valuable and I have been able to apply much of my teaching and to put them to my teaching methods here." Prior to teaching in the cerebral palsy school, she taught in the field of special education at the Magic Valley State Memorial hospital. There she taught regular public school classes to the children who were recuperating. Most of her teaching career has been spent in some kind of special education school. She received her degree in education from the University of Idaho and taught in various schools, but she likes teaching in public schools. "I think it's more fascinating, interesting and the challenge is always great."

You can see her progress with these students and it gives you a great deal of satisfaction because you are able to accomplish so much against such great odds. "No two cases are exactly alike and you have to adjust and work out to get around the physical handicaps of each child. She notes that many of the children at the school are average or above average in intellect and the big hurdle is their physical defects. The average enrollment is about 25 students who come from as far away as Wendell. If they come from another school district their district pays Twin Falls for 413 a student for the student's education. The students range in age from 6 years to 21. Mrs. Rattelle notes that "more people than we can get our attention should consider special education. She lists patience and good cheer as prime prerequisites for the job. She and the other teachers try to accomplish the same things with students as in a regular public school. Because of their physical defects, many of the students can not write, but she points out that they can do other things, like writers and study history, arithmetic, spelling and learn to read. "Most of these students can learn if they are just given the opportunity," she declares.

The school has changed since she started. The staff has added a physical therapy department and much equipment donated by a multitude of clubs, organizations and private individuals throughout the area. Presently the school is limited in the amount of room in the building. She says if they had more room they could expand the physical therapy program and add more facilities for occupational and speech therapy. "We would probably try to get a speech therapist and occupational therapist for part time instruction if we had more room," she says. For instance, right now we would like to have a stationary bicycle for physical therapy, but we just don't have the space. She explains there are no funds in the school district for such things and all the equipment has been donated. Even the physical therapy program is paid by the school's own small PTA. Mrs. Rattelle believes there is a need in the area for a special education building or wing on a regular building for both the orthopedic and mentally handicapped children. In such a building they could utilize the same equipment and staff. At present, she notes the great need is not physical equipment but rather money donations to us.

The backyard Nardoscape was decorated to resemble a Roman setting, complete with Roman columns of cardboard and painted to resemble stone. Lighting was by torch light, with a runner entering the grounds at dusk to light the torches. A special table was fashioned in a U-shape around a large tree, decorated with flowers and candles. Every effort was made to serve a truly Roman meal. Speaking of the menu, Miss Babcock says, "It was olive au gratin," which translates from "from the grapes." In the vernacular this can be expressed "from soup to nuts." And that is about what was served. The meal started with a deviled egg course, as the Romans did, and ended with fried chicken, was the main course, fried chicken, was the main course with the Romans, and the chicken was fried in olive oil. No butter was used in preparing the meal. The vegetables were fresh, no canned vegetables allowed. Apparent and string beans were served, together with olives, celery and lettuce. Only vegetables common in the days of the Roman empire were served. The bread was Roman and small round loaves, like today's loaf, but like a piece of pie. Fresh fruit was served as a desert. The food was prepared by members of the students. Stiffening themselves full of 20th century Roman food, were 25 maisters and 13 slaves. The masters were the students of the second year class, the slaves were the students of the first year class who were in a different scholasticity. Largemouth Bass Usually Not Harvested

In the spring this young couple's fancy turns to largemouth bass. They are Ed Torre and Val Pierce, Caldwell. Their men-fishes were caught at Lake Lowell, south of Nampa, in southwestern Idaho. Although considered an excellent game fish, bass are not harvested sufficiently in many waters. Not as widely distributed throughout the state as the largemouth bass, the smallmouth bass also provide much sport because they are splendid fighters. Generally they are found in riffles in fast water in the kind from which an angler retrieves his fly in fishing for trout. Largemouth prefer quiet water. to the snake. Mr. Hildebrand's original bass were brought in by express from Missouri in 1887. The importation was made for fish averaging six inches in length. Later the river was stocked with fish from the Snake River.

Lampman follows the "game" of his book to describe the "game" of black bass to California during the late 19th century. There are several different species of the species from the Boise river drainage. He says, for example, that largemouth bass were introduced into Oregon almost 20 years before the first report, so rapidly did they spread throughout the state.

According to Lampman, the annual spring rise of the Columbia, dependable as its season, had stocked all the lowland waters on both shores of the river. At that time there was much planting of bass in Idaho, Washington and Oregon from the stocks which were by now so readily available. These plantings were by private enthusiasts as well as state commissions.

Today many Idaho waters are well-stocked with black bass, particularly largemouth, and a partial list around the state from north to south follows: Snake river, at least 11 lakes, Sheperd, Camplin, Fernan, Hayden, Hauser, Chalkley, Knap, Bonney, Lowell, Grand Dunes and Carey.

While recent Idaho waters are by no means as well stocked in western length and girth, they have made many anglers happy last year. For example, the largest largemouth caught in Idaho in Idaho weighed nine pounds, 10 ounces. It was caught by G. Simpson in Fayetteville in 1929. The largest smallmouth was taken earlier this month in Snake river before the month of the Grand National by Ernie Hildebrand. Lewis and Clark river and the best of the 41-pound caught last year by American, near the mouth of the Clearwater.

For the record, the largest of these species caught in Idaho were where largemouth—22 pounds, four ounces, Montgomery lake, in 1928; and 14 pounds, one ounce, in the Snake river, 1929. The largest smallmouth was taken in Idaho by the late G. Simpson in 1929. The largest largemouth was taken in Idaho by the late G. Simpson in 1929.

Two Kinds of Black Bass in Idaho Are Noted as Fishing Season Opener Nears

Idaho Fish and Game Department will close next week's season, but will remain open until June 4, the opening of the 1930 general fishing season, and these do not seem so interchangeable to anglers who know about the two kinds of black bass, how they rush from the sedges, leaping to shake a lure.

OWN SHARES IN IDAHO'S RICH PERLITE DEPOSITS AND MANUFACTURING PLANT

What is Perlite?

Perlite is a siliceous volcanic rock, mined in western United States. When crushed and quickly heated to above 1800° F., it expands to form lightweight, non-combustible, glass-like particles of cellular structure. This material, white or light gray in color, is about 1/10th the weight of sand or gravel.

Perlite aggregate consists of expanded Perlite sized for use in lightweight fire retardant plaster or concrete in place of sand and gravel. For easy handling and accurate on-the-job mixing, it is usually marketed in multi-wall paper bags of 3 or 4-cu. ft. capacity ready for use with cement or gypsum.

The many tiny glass-sealed cells in each particle of expanded Perlite make it highly insulating as well as comparatively non-absorptive. Thus Perlite mixes with about 30% less water than comparable lightweight aggregates.

Oneida Perlite Corporation is offering 64,000 shares of its capital stock to bona fide residents of Idaho only. Price $5.00 per share.
