REAL HORSE RACE

the 1900 presidential campaign moves of full pace, one of its outstanding is the rising evidence that so many s are still undecided.

Many polisters and vote samplers find the doubtful bulking a good deal larger than in recent elections—sometimes as high as 20 per cent of the total. Only one opinion test-proceed the lighteness of some voters, it is pparent that in certain places there is a measure of disappointment with the choices valiable: Vice President Nixon and Sen.

John Kennedy.

Beyond this, it seems evident that millions of voters do not feet they know either caudicate well enough to make a selection. Careful, scholarly studies of past elections reveal that both in 1952 and 1956, particularly the latter, more people than usual made up their minds early. They believed they knew their mien.

that they knew their men.

This surely appears natural under the circumstances. By the same token, it would be constant to the electronic feel and or a greater share of the electronic feel as certain in an election like this one.

Nixon indeed had much needed attention over nearly eight years' time. But he was not a national war bero, and he has had to like in the shadow of one.

For his part, Kennedy in the past four years became amazingly well known, for a young senafor who never before had occupied center stage. Nevertheless, his view, attitudes and personality were still inreguly pace increased.

Now, he has the more difficult task of winning the trust of the millions of still-doubtful voters. No easy outcome for either man can be foreseen today.

HOW DID THIS HAPPEN?

A charitable view, presumably, would have it that the two U. St. defectors to the Soviet Union are either terribly misguided or not completely sound in health. It is plain from the evidence that they are not entitled to the charitable view.

Whatever their problems, they can hardly be organized to the charitable of the country, them out the country with the country that the country with the country that the country with the cou
