I WAS TIRED OF LIVING ON LOW PAY

So I started reading The Wall Street Journal

I work in a large city. Over a period of time I noticed that men who read The Wall Street Journal are better dressed, drive better cars, have better homes and eat in better restaurants.

"I'm tired of living on low pay!" I said to myself. "I'm going to see if The Wall Street Journal can help me."

Well, to make a long story short, I tried it and it DID. Since I started reading The Journal, my income has increased from $1,000 to $14,000 a year.

This story is typical. Because the reports in The Wall Street Journal come to you daily, you get quick warning of any new trend that may affect your income. You can take time to protect your interests or seize a profit. The Journal is a wonderful aid to anyone making $7,500 to $25,000 a year. It is valuable to owners of small business concerns. It can be of priceless benefit to young men.

Delivery Rate In Big Wood Canal Is Cut

SHOSHONE, May 20—Directors of the Big Wood Canal Company voted this week to cut the delivery rate from Magic reservoir from 25 to 20 per cent, but they decided to leave a half provision which amounts to 20 per cent of normal delivery.

Purpose of the glimpse is to stretch the water as far into July as possible. Because of the unusually dry, cold weather and wind blow into the reservoir has diminished instead of improved, as has happened in similar conditions in the past, directors note.

There were only 48,423 acre feet Wednesday compared to 159,300 acre feet a year ago. American drowned.

"WASHINGTON CALLING" BY MARQUIS CHILDS

up a position that appears to be directly related to the "Washington Calling" by Marquis Childs. Kennedy and the President are trying to achieve in their meeting in June has already been announced. Kennedy's speech in London is the opinion, after his eight-hour interview with Khrushchev, that the Soviet Union is not ready to enter into a new and fundamental communist document.

It is in an any encounter Khrushchev is bound to raise the question of the Berlin blockade. For Kennedy should presume to handle the Berlin blockade. Kennedy's own opinion is that the Berlin blockade should be considered within the communist bloc an internal European problem. TUCKER'S NATIONAL WHIRLIGIG

WASHINGTON—Why, inquires F. L. Bridgeport, Conn., "did the House Armed Services Committee add a provision to the bill to amend the President Kennedy's defense budget for additional $250 million?"

Answer: Despite optimistic statements from the White House that the Senate bill would not lag too far behind Russia in nuclear and missile capacity.

Code of Ethics

Long overdue is President Kennedy's plan for a rigid code of ethics for federal administration officials and staff laws against impropriety in federal posts for private gain. Drastic action was indicated years ago in the scandals involving home freezers and five percent, yet a decade has passed without further effective legislation.

The President's ethics plan has been in the making for some time. It is a code of ethics for federal administration officials and staff laws against impropriety in federal posts for private gain.

SET AN EXAMPLE

Organized labor, largely responsible for the nearly universal five-day week in the United States, is now demanding a four-day work week with no reduction in pay, naturally. Undoubtedly that four-day goal was strong in the mind of Walter F. Reuther, president of the United Auto Workers, when he announced hours in terms of high unemployment.

ONE FORCE, ONE UNIFORM

The single military force was one uniform and one chief of staff. Gen. George C. Kenney recommended during his recent Milwaukee visit. It is too much to expect a complete unification point out that a single joint service could have its training parts just as we now have.

Buhl Man Lauds Opposition To Federal Aid for Schools

Editor, Times-News:—I am glad to attend my sincere congratulations to the members of the school boards of Twin Falls and to the Idaho Teachers Association for their courage in opposing further federal aid for schools by federal bureaucracy.

While this action is necessary to those of us who are in favor of those laws in 1958, it is still a case of trying to cage the bear door after the bear has escaped.

Such was the power of the publicity put out by the various "educators' association," teachers unions, vote-conscious politicians, etc., that few had the courage to stand and be counted in opposition. Fewer still read the laws which were enacted by congress on Sept. 8, 1958. It is difficult for more than a handful read through to page 22 where all previous commitments are nullified by the clause. The commissioner of education may act under any existing law to enforce the contents of this act, but shall not be limited thereby.

The entrance of political patronage into our school system has long been the bane of certain factions within our nation. Commissioners of education, appointed by the party in power, are something to be reckoned with.

The horse is out, but we may still have his tail caught in the door. The laws to participate in teachers' affairs, which would put any wage dispute in the hands of the national labor relations board and building construction aid are still pending, along with several other proposals.

I do not believe the solution of our school problems are in so-called federal aid, but rather in a complete reevaluation of our present tax structure. In the early days of our nation, 84 per cent of the wealth was represented in real property, mostly far lands. The taxes on this wealth were reserved to the various states. The federal government existed on a small share of the total tax load. Under the impetus of two wars we have become an industrial nation, with income tax, withholding tax, death taxes, etc. The federal government now collects over 70 per cent of the total.

The failure of any aid program is in the recent press dispatch which told of a business man who paid $2,000 income tax

American Writer Tells What He Saw in Castro's Prisons

(Editor's note: In the aftermath of the invasion of Cuba, there are reports of a "black list" of names of those who are thought to be in the "bad" side of the revolution. A writer who has been in the "bad" side of the revolution tells what he saw in Castro's prisons.

At about the same time in Havana, a man took his dog for a walk. At the neighborhood coffee shop he stopped to chat with the man who asked, "What do you think of Fidel?" This man said, "I think of Fidel as a CIA agent and took him away."

This was the beginning of what could be called one of the largest roundups of human beings in western hemisphere history. Their stories were among hundreds related to this reporter who shared 28 days of imprisonment in the "tor-over" for a week, were result in 10 known deaths, scores of injuries, two shootings and four miscarriages.

While one officer covered him with a gun, the other searched the youth's car. After a while the searcher emerged with two packs of American cigarettes which he returned to Havana—and prison.

At about the same time in Havana, a man took his dog for a walk. At the neighborhood coffee shop he stopped to chat with the man who asked, "What do you think of Fidel?" This man said, "I think of Fidel as a CIA agent and took him away."

This was the beginning of what could be called one of the largest roundups of human beings in western hemisphere history. Their stories were among hundreds related to this reporter who shared 28 days of imprisonment in the "tor-over" for a week, were result in 10 known deaths, scores of injuries, two shootings and four miscarriages.

Doctors were pulled away from operating rooms for incineration. A well-known Havana lawyer, wrapped with his flu in prison, died of pneumonia despite repeated protests to the prison commandant. The official death certificate handed to the family listed "heart attack" as the cause of death.

Havana, capital of the nation's chief cattle growing province, was finally released May 12 from enemy grip and 115,000 Cuban military forces. The deep, damp and bone-chilling weather built in 1910, were converted into the hottest prison in 1951. The jail was meant to hold 100. In the first week in May, the check-off listed 1,803 names. When I left, the population was down to 1,500.

As far as could be learned during my imprisonment, there were no acts of physical torture committed by guards. This seemed to be apparent in the minds of all prisoners, recalling the stories of what there was no need for it. The filth, the bad food, the crowding, the lack of sanitation facilities, and the ever-present danger that some inexperienced and nervous militiamen would take matters into their own hands were enough torture.

South Korea Rebel Rulers Gain Powers

SEOUL, Korea, May 20—South Korea's military rulers established themselves in a new government of tough young officers today and strengthened their constitutional position by pressing President Yun Bo-sun to return to office.

In a day of hectic activity, Lieut. Gen. Chang Do-young named himself premier and defense minister, picked a cabinet of military officers and convinced Yun to resign his resignation, submitted last night.

The 63-year-old president, a conservative who espoused "diplomatic" proof of Chang's coup, is the only major elected official remaining in office.

Tension continued high. Chang continued his crackdown by jailing eight members of the cabinet. Frontier John M. Chang's government and tried without success to force the resignation of himself, sixteen disident generals also were reported in custody, railing protests from U.S. Gen. Carter H. Magruder.

Competent sources disclosed that Magruder demanded Chang resignate the Korean generals fired after the coup or replace them with generals acceptable to Magruder. A commander of U.N. forces in Korea, Magruder technically is boss of South Korea's 600,000-man army.

The informant said Magruder personally told Chang, who is the South Korea's army chief of staff, that the military units responsible for the coup were guilty of mutiny and should return to their positions.

The American general is reported to believe that although the withdrawal of 3,000 Korean marines, paratroopers and artillerymen to seize the capital Tuesday did not weaken defenses against communist North Korea, it did undercut the control and authority of the U.N. command.

The 38-year-old Korean general made no response to Magruder in public.

Cowboys Erase Eight-Run Pocatello Lead to Take Third Straight Win 10-9

POCATELLO, May 20 (P)—Magic Valley overcame Pocatello's eight-run lead, mainly by a seven-run sixth inning sparked by John Shockley's three-run double, and beat the Chieftain 10-9 Saturday in a Pioneer league baseball game played in the afternoon in an effort to get better attendance. Paid attendance was a disappointing 261. It was the third win in a row. Pocatello took the lead in the first inning on a solo homerun by Jim Coggins. The Chieftain got four more in the second as Al Hunter hit a home run with nobody on and Gus Enriquez smacked one over his two men aboard.

The lead was blown away in the third when Magic Valley's third baseman picked up a pair in the inning, then went 2-for-3 with three in the sixth on three walks, four singles and Shockley's double. Pocatello tied it up in the eighth when Enriquez singled, was sacrificed to second and brought home by Terry Hill.

Magic Valley won the game with a singleton in the ninth on a hit by Gary Hill. A slam hit error and a fly by Harry Fullerton. The following table shows the results of the game:

Romano Hits Indians Past Yankees 4-3

By the Associated Press
John Romano drove in the winning run with a double in the eighth inning to give Cleveland a 4-3 victory over the New York Yankees Saturday night at the Municipal Stadium.

Romano's double came off Steve Buehrer after five power had struck in the ninth on Tony Kubler's two-run triple and then Frank Funk got Hector Lopez to fly out to end the game.

The Indians, winning six of seven, moved into second place ahead of the Indians Yankees.

Jim Gentile socked his 12th homerun of the season, a blast that cleared the wire fence in deep right center field, to give Baltimore the victory, 6-5, over the Orioles.

Jackie Jensen's two-out, two-strike single to left in the 10th inning brought Boston a second straight victory over the Yankees.

Rookie Chuck Schilling moved the winning run to second when Aquilino fielded his bunt and threw wildly to second. Jensen drove home the winning run.

Camilo Pascual notched his second straight shutout victory as the Minnesota Twins stopped the Kansas City Athletics 2-0.

Harmon Killebrew's first inning homerun—his ninth of the year—helped Faisal all the cushion he needed before the 1926 final.

Davies went after the world mark after clearing 15 feet, 4 1/2 inches to crack the Big Eight standard held by J. D. Martin of Oklahoma. Martin cleared 14 feet 6 inches and failed at 15 feet 1/2 on Saturday's competition.

He didn't take to the track as readily as in the Kentucky derby, said the nation's leading rider, "it was not until we got out on the firm ground that he really took off. He was bothered by the deep track and the sand coming back in his face."

He talked to him on the backside, and I shipped him some at the half-mile pole to make him move. We were a little further back than we had planned," Sellers said.

He hit him a little more than normal but, like horses doesn't like too much at all.

Volunteers Put Finishing Touches to Shelter House

Two volunteer workers put the finishing touches on the floor of the new shelter house at Niagara springs. They are Elmer Young, left, Orchard Valley, and Mrs. Kistler, Gooding. The volunteer workers from the Magic Valley area recently have completed two new projects at the recreational area—a shelter house and a concrete slab for dancing or shuffleboard. The labor for the new shelter was donated by members of the Gooding Pomona Grange and its seven subordinate Granges. (Staff photo-graving.)

2 Major Projects Are Completed at Niagara Springs Recreational Area

Within the past few weeks (Niagara Springs recreational area) for the use of dancers, skaters, major projects have been finished and a new one undertaken. A new shuffleboard and any other use which can make use of it, according to Emerson Pugsley, chairman of the Recreation association at the Ni-

Side Blister on Rucksack Demonstrated

Ralph Harris demonstrates one of the two side blisters on his rucksack. The large blisters tend to distribute the weight to the side, rather than to the back of the pack, as some rucksacks do. The pack frame is made of rawhide and ash. The design was copied from a type that was popular in the early days of Idaho. (Staff photo-graving.)

T.F. Hiker Designs Pack To Eliminate Irritations

Anyone who has spent some time in the back country, living out of a pack, knows that rucksacks and packboards are probably the most discussed (and cursed) articles in the hiker's gear. For every man who straps a trail there is a theory on how a pack should be made. Ralph Harris, a veteran camper and a man who has been active in the Boy Scout's Snake River council for many years, has designed a pack design for a packboard that should be of interest to those who are getting ready to embark on a summer of hiking and fishing in the mountains. A good deal of common sense and hiking experience went into the design. It is made of a light, water repellent tent cloth. He designed the pack and had it made by Thomas Top and Body Works for him. The pack is big enough so it will accommodate 80 to 90 pounds of gear, if the hiker wants to take that much, yet it is collapsible and folds up for storage.

German, president of the association.

The shelter house was the project of the Gooding Pomona Grange and its seven subordinate Granges. Gooding, Wendell, Bliss, Tuttle, Tragerman, West Point and Orchard Valley.

The labor for the new shelter house was donated by members of the different Granges. The former was the job was Joseph Stuckey, Wendell, Materials cost about $350. The Pomona Grange paid 80 per cent of the cost of the materials and the remaining cost was covered by the other Granges. (Continued on Page 21, Col. 1)

Expert Avers U.S. Parents Do 'Bad Job'

EDITOR'S NOTE:—The United States long has been noted for the value it places upon childhood. Its recognition that children have rights of their own, that they are not merely property, is one of the things that have made us a "half-lion" in the world.

By MARGARET MEAD

Mankind's prolonged childhood is its most valuable possession. Our parents train our children to learn far more than we have yet invented that is worth learning. We would like to use that gift to adulthood in half a dozen years.

There wouldn't be time enough to digest what there was to learn. The long period in which the infant is dependent upon the mother gives it time to learn the difference between what is right and what is wrong. Little children from deep emotional ties to their parents and so they are helped to learn to control their impulses, to become potentially responsible little creatures.

Comes Childhood
Then comes childhood, extending from somewhere between four and six to puberty, when children are free from most of the pressures that will make adolescence difficult. It is a period in which the child is free to experiment with his body and mind, to learn to control his emotions, to learn to explore the world around him. It is a time of discovery, a time of growth.

Then comes adolescence, when what was learned in early childhood and what was learned in late childhood and made newly introspective. It is a time of pressure, a time of stress, a time of growth.

It is a period when young people are free to grow, to get acquainted with their changing selves, and made newly introspective by this new realization of the self, to think out their future responsibilities to the world to be entered in, to plan their lives, to prepare for a career, in religious or social, scientific or artistic endeavor. It is a time of growth, a time of discovery, a time of growth.

In Springtime Some Fancies Turn to Vandalism, but It Doesn't Pay Here

Doctors Hold Consultation on Medical Case

Consultations on Cases Are Part Of Job at Hospital in Twin Falls

The purpose of medical consultation at Magic Valley Memorial hospital is to employ the various talents of the staff members for the benefit of the community. This was graphically illustrated when a month-old boy swallowed a safety pin. The family's pediatrician was called in, but within a few hours the talents of five doctors were called upon to put the little boy back in good health.

First the radiologist entered the scene and took X-ray pictures to determine the position of the safety pin. Then a pediatrician, a surgeon, a pediatric nurse and a pediatrician entered the scene. The boy was taken to the hospital and the safety pin was opened and turned upside down so it would surely hook the boy's esophagus. This meant the pin had to be extracted.

An endoscopist then was called. An endoscopist is a physician who has been trained to work with a special instrument that is used to look down a patient's esophagus. Next an anesthesiologist was called. An attempt was then made to push the pin into the boy's stomach. The pin slipped away and went to the stomach for the final time. The pin was removed without danger.

The pin slipped away and went to the stomach for the final time. The pin was removed without danger. The boy is now in good health and is being cared for in the hospital. The parents are very grateful for the care and attention given to their child.

WASHINGTON, May 20 — A large military establishment, he added: "Our arms must be subject to civilian control at all times." At the President's direction, Defense Secretary Robert S. McNamara moved quickly to put a lid on saber-rattling speech by ranking military officers. Two big questions are raised by the expressions of presidential concern over the role of the military establishment in the nation's economy and affairs.

Life in MAGIC VALLEY

How would you like to have a wild kitty for a pet? Surprisingly so, if you are a member of the Magic Valley Club. The club recently discovered a family of civet badgers, a species of mammal which is found in the Magic Valley. The badgers were discovered by a member of the club, who lives in the Magic Valley. The badgers were found in a hole in the ground, and the club members were very interested in them. The badgers are very interesting animals, and the club members are very interested in them. The badgers are very interesting animals, and the club members are very interested in them.

Some two weeks ago, Mrs. Johnson, who mends, paints and fixes ceramics in her basement, was working there when she saw a little creature run by. Her first thought was "It's a cat!" She called her husband who discovered it to be a civet badger. How he kept the potent perfume and why they are all able to remain in the house is a mystery. The cat put up a battle, maybe she was a lady, or maybe she just didn't want to go. For her good she had her own, as she had her head on before realizing she was so close and didn't look her.

They later discovered she had the kittens, when one of the members of the Magic Valley Club had to squeeze in under the house on his back to get to them. They were in all one woman's room found until later, and it died after it was found probably because of exposure and lack of nourishment. Mrs. Johnson is keeping them in a box and feeding them with a bottle. The little civet kittens seem to have adapted well. Like most litters of any kind, there is the aggressive and the more timid and smaller ones. However, Mrs. Johnson says they do not seem to be aggressive, but they are a bit difficult.

The babies are "bit young" to be domesticated, but she says they are

Famous Anthropologist Says Parents Are Robbing Youngsters of Childhood

...most children, come into the picture. — Mrs. Johnson says.

...to the small boys of 8-10-12 years there is one phase of recreation of special appeal. For generations, Shoshone children have been with their parents, made more thrilling by the vivid imagination of youth.

...evidence of the past, such as arrowheads, have been found to tend a note of curiosity to their later. Even without imagination, it would seem Indians had fought three years ago. The spot is only a mile from the city limits, called Three Peaks. The name comes from the three peaks of the mountain.

...Bend, sagebrush and lava mixed with rockcuckoo, an occasional porcupine, and a few deer. The boys give the boys a taste of being away from it all.

...at night the older boys find the mysteries of summer moonlight, the chirp of crickets and the buzz of cicadas add to the fascination of the place.

...Who but a boy knows what questions are asked and answered in the moon, yellow-green, hangs suspended in mid-air. Pink and red are the colors of the sunset. In the distance tower the rugged Sawtooths while stately trees stand guard along the edge of town.

...What was the person like who lived there? The growth back how long ago did he pass this way? Where did he come from and where was he bound? The adventure for a boy—only a mile from home.

Just in terms of the number of individuals whom they leave free to contribute, new inventions, stake out new paths—rather than merely to produce more children to live in a world which, because it has not advanced, has inevitably fallen far behind. We are sacrificing to our young and to our children.

BIRTH REPORTED: OAKLEY, May 20 — Mr. and Mrs. Fred Johnson reported a daughter was born to their son and daughter-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Johnson, May 14 at Orem, Utah.

2 New Major Projects Are Completed At Niagara Springs Recreational Area

(Continued from Page 21) shared, on a member percentage basis, by the different Granges, according to Omer Schmidt, Orchard Valley, Pomona master. Schmidt says the Pomona Grange has planned to construct the shelter since the first of the year. Construction started May 1 and for the next six days there was a work party of about six men at the recreational site working on the building. It was completed May 6. It is a 14- by 28-foot building, made of heavy plywood with a concrete floor. There is room for several large picnic tables under the roof, in case of inclement weather. The shelter house is located just south of the community fireplace, Schmidt points out that it is constructed in such a manner that it can be expanded easily. Another project has been started recently by the Idaho Power company. Earl Skidmore, Gooding-Wendell district manager, recently inspected the area to determine where the power line would be located. The company plans to donate several convenience outlets at several points in the area. These will be regular 110 volt outlets. This project has just been started and will probably be finished by the time the picnic season is in full swing.

Gooding Area School Board Wins Lawsuit

GOODING, May 20—An eight-year-old lawsuit against the Gooding school district No. 231 $2010 here Tuesday in a fourth district court case. The judgment is result of a lawsuit brought against the small R. Peck Construction company, Twin Falls, and General Insurance company of America, the construction firm's bonding company, by the Gooding school district.

The school district contended the construction company refused to enter into a contract on May 9, 1950, after making a low bid of $51,300.00 for construction of the new home economics and science building at Gooding high school. Peck would not accept the bid because he contended that a clerical error in the amount of $6,433 had been made when estimates were being prepared.

The jury also allowed the school district court costs including attorney fees. Members of the jury were Ray Peterson, May Turner, Harold McCord, Mrs. Emma Anderson, Mrs. Robert Burns, Mrs. Theima Conner, Ira Hall and Nelson Wainwright.

Ozell D. Hobbey, of the Bird and Hobbey law firm, represented the Gooding school district; and Charles C. Shaw of the James and Shaw law firm, Gooding, and Robert Murphy with Walker, attorneys for the construction company and General Insurance company of America.

The jury deliberated one hour and 15 minutes before arriving at a verdict.

Rucksack Offers Fast Access to Contents

Blair Harris demonstrates how the rucksack he designed completely unfolds, offering the hiker fast and complete access to the contents. He holds the bottom flap in his left hand. It stays in the top flap. One of the side flaps he holds in his right hand. When the four flaps are opened the pack is completely opened, except for the two bilayers on each side of the rucksack. (Staff photo-entraving)

Local Outdoorsman Designs Own Pack To Eliminate Some Hiking Irritations

(Continued from Page 21) adjustable so that it will snugly hold a much smaller load. It is constructed so it rides high on the back, important if much weight is carried. And one of the best features is that the bag can completely be laid open, giving the hiker ready access to the contents. This eliminates the fumbling most hikers experience, searching the depths of the pack for an item they need at the moment.

The pack is designed somewhat like a laundry mailing carton. There are four flaps that can be loosened to completely open the bag. There are two belts to secure the vertical flaps and three cross straps for the horizontal flaps. The pack is 2 1/2 inches high 7 inches wide and eight inches deep. The top flap measures 27 inches and the bottom flap, 12 inches. So a much larger load can be carried. The hiker wants to extend the flaps to their full length.

Harris also had two bilayers placed on the sides of the pack, so the weight can be distributed. The sides of the pack have a 1/4 inch heavy slipper and measures 20 inches long, six inches wide and two inches deep. The pack is attached to the packboard by slipping four metal grommets, along each side of the pack, over metal eye screws on the side of the packboard. A heavy cord then is strung through the eye screws, securing the pack to the packboard. By slipping the two cords out of each side, the pack rapidly can be removed from the packboard. Harris has used the pack for several years. And he says that after using it on many camping trips he has never felt it could be changed or improved.

Game Birds Produce Large Numbers of Young

Wish and game department workers annually make brood counts of resident game populations in Idaho. These majestic game birds, like all other species, produce large numbers of young. If a clutch is destroyed before completion, the pair usually will renege and bring off a brood anyway. Waterfowl and upland game birds are far from helpless when hatched. They leave their nests immediately after drying. This tends to provide for continuing the species, although natural mortality is great among the young of all species of game birds and animals. (Fish and game department photo—staff engraving)

Bird, Animal Sounds at This Time Of Year Herald Balance of Nature

By JIM HUMBIRD
Idaho Fish and Game Department
Resounding bird calls this time of year are pleasing melodies to most people, crooning love calls to lonehearted females and lusty battle challenges to other males within carotid.
Likewise the powerful bugling of elk during the fall rutting season is a fearfully thrilling sound to bipeds. Those with the tenacity to imitate it are said by cartoonists at least, to risk fighting from the bulls or loving from the cows.
Thus the resounding notes, the roaring challenges and the overwhelming female scents are serious business. They advertise the phenomenon called the balance of nature, the insurance mechanism for continuing the species.
That nature is bountiful is illustrated in many ways. For example, a calculation of the progeny from a hypothetical pair of field mice and descendants that breed unchecked for two years has been made by the Pennsylvania fish and game department.
The astonishing result is enough to spread head to tail from New York to Los Angeles—and back. The surplus would stretch 20 lines around the earth and 100 round trips to the moon. The statistician from the City of Brotherly Love adds that enough mice still would remain to scare all the women in Philadelphia—and feed their cats and their offspring for one year.

So it goes with all life forms. Nature is careless of the individual. Jealous of the species. Without huge natural mortality—sudden death in countless forms to control their numbers—a pair of house flies and their offspring could produce enough individuals to cover the entire surface of the earth four feet deep in just one year.
In fact, death seems to be a constant companion if not a hand-maiden to the instinctive drive to breed. Otters jealous rivals fight to the finish, neither giving nor taking quarter.
Why this heavy emphasis on reproduction, this competitive obsession to breed, breed, breed; wander, thirst, starve, fight—but breed?
It is the need to continue the race. Said to be the strongest basic instinct, the will to survive in the broad scheme of things is built into the very fibers of the main force of all life, whether animal or plant. Reproduction is the means to that end.
In the case of the prolific mice (whose daughters in the first litter alone would have 17 children averaging five youngsters each, during the initial 12 months. Theoretically, this "line" of descendants adds up to 800 billion mice if none die within the two-year period.
Another example proves once again that it is true what they

RUPERT, May 20—Formation of a citizens planning committee was approved by the Rupert city council Tuesday night with Wendell Johnson, council member

Two council members, Johnson and George McDonald, have suggested the move in the interest of improving the city through suggestions and ideas from a group of interested citizens. McDonald suggested a fourteen-member committee with seven named from each of the two wards.
Mayor Glover Acock voiced his irritation with "people" who refer to Rupert as a "sleepy town," pointing out the number of improvements and indications of growth, including the new postoffice, the library, hospital, and the highway improvement going on, and gave special mention to the summer recreation program.

A request from G. P. Granville for the rezoning on Sixth street to allow bike riding—was accepted, and the council agreed to resurface streets in the Countryville.

Consultation Aided This Youngster

Troy, an 18-month-old patient at Magic Valley Memorial hospital, gets ready to take a bite out of a candy sucker offered by Marilyn Dean, hospital-registered nurse. The bite of sucker is a better bet than one of Troy's recent meals—an open safety pin. His case is a good example of how consultation among doctors can aid patients. Before Troy was on the road back to good health, five specialists had a role in his recovery. (Staff photo—engravings)

This committee meets monthly. It receives from the administrator all the records where there is recorded consultation and those records that indicate mandatory requirements haven't been met.
The committee reviews and samples records where consultation has been given for quality of medical care and for consultational consultations. It refers any medical records it finds inadequate to the chief of clinical department for review and disposition.
The committee also reports to the executive committee, in writing on the work of the committee, any recommendations and the percentage of consultations per month.
Each month the committee selects one or more charts of pathological interest and submits them to the pathologist, who selects a case for presentation at the monthly clinicalopathological conference.

What is a consultant? A consultant is a second physician called by the attending doctor to examine and discuss his patient. In the sense in which it is used, it does not imply severity.
For example, if the chief of a service calls on one of his junior men for advice, a man who may have been working in a special field, the younger man becomes the consultant and should write the consultation note. Any physician who sees a patient with a colleague as the consultant on this case, no matter what his standing on that staff may be.

It is common for a physician informally to aid a colleague. But in all instances where the second physician makes a careful study of the patient's problem, the consultation is noted on the record. But there is the requirement game animals eat them as soon as they break through the ground. Lack of deep snow the last three years or so has alleviated the problem somewhat around the state, allowing deer and elk to forage over larger areas at higher elevations than usual. But it also has led to increased numbers.

In other words, the natural balance or equilibrium—reproduction versus mortality—of nature has been destroyed by man. Permanent range damage often results.
These are the facts behind present Idaho hunting laws and wildlife management practices. These laws to create a balance between wildlife production and mortality in keeping with available range forces.

She has been one of the most active workers in the local and state organization. One of the youngest presidents ever elected to the organization, Mrs. Craig notes that the Jay-C-Ette organization has done so much to help her that she intends to do her bit to help others. She considers leadership training the most important program. Lookout Platform at Shoshone Falls Painted by Vandals

Ernest Craner, superintendent of parks and recreation, right, points out some of the painting done by vandals at the Shoshone falls lookout platform to Herb Derrick, city manager. The paint was in every conceivable color. The vandals who did the damage were caught within a few hours and repainted the area. (Staff photo- engraving)

In Spring Some Fancies Turn Toward Vandalism, but It Doesn't Pay Here

(Continued from Page 21) caused, it can take many hours of work and result in much embarrassment for the youngsters. About 60 per cent of the youngsters pay for the damage caused. Marlow says the youngsters often have a reasonable attitude when they are caught. In most instances they are interested in what we have to say and admit that now they have been caught they will have to mature and act in a more mature manner. They are genuinely sorry they did it. In some cases where there is evidence that the family background and environment is undermining the character of the youngster, further court action can develop. Recently, the vandals have been loose with their spray paint cans, causing damage at Shoshone falls park. City parks receive the brunt of the vandalism this time of year. Advertisers of the pressurized spray can has made paint detecting a relatively easy "thing" to do. The appearance proves. Bins, tables and rock walls fall easy prey to the painter. A group of boys recently "decorated" the signs and look-out at Shoshone falls. Within a few hours the boys were caught and they spent nearly a day repainting the damaged area. Tables and lawns also are frequently damaged. Tables are sometimes broken and used as fire wood.

and the vandals often drive on the grass. This is especially harmful if the ground is wet. Craner says, "This is bad because it means that we have to use money to rebuild the defaced areas, rather than use that same money for expanded services. It's hard to measure in dollars and cents just what this costs us, but it is in the hundreds, probably between $200 and $300. "The damage caused by these individuals has been cut to a minimum in the last five years, because they are beginning to realize that it is their parents who pay for the damage in the long run." He says in the last few years the parks and recreation department worked closely with the police and the school systems throughout the area. Craner adds that they have always been cooperative and this cooperation has paid off with a reduction in vandalism. He says spring is the worst time of year but also notes that when he attends regional recreational meetings and discovers the problems of other communities, he is glad he lives in Twin Falls. "We actually have a low percentage of this, I think it is due to the home life of the average youngster, the churches, the schools and I think our recreational program has something to do with it."

When the damage is discovered in a park it is immediately reported to the police because it is a misdemeanor. When the culprits are found they usually correct the damage at their own expense. Craner says they eventually find out who causes the damage and the vandals are punished. He points out that the police usually have a pretty accurate idea of who does the vandalism.

Wendell Pupils Report Outings

WENDELL, May 20 — More than 700 school students picnicked Friday for the final day of the 1960-61 school year. Grade school students and their teachers held their picnic on the school grounds. The junior high school and teachers went to Thousand Springs. The high school students and instructors spent the day at Starbuck's neighborhood. Thursday all school students cooperated with the Chamber of Commerce cleanup campaign now in progress and cleaned up six blocks. Grade school students worked one and one-half hours under the supervision of their teachers on three blocks of grade school lawn and playground. It was judged that all grades did for prize awards and drinks were treated for their picnic.

The Continental Congress adopted the article of confederation while meeting in the courthouse in York, Pa., between September, 1777, and June, 1778.
