WASHINGTON—How much longer, exploded S. T. Tulsa, Okla., "are we going to try to run and hide? We are going to try to run and hide until nobody wants, how long we can back up our promises—long enough to get to Asia, the Middle East, the Congo and South Korea."

Answer: That is the problem with which President Kennedy is faced. He will discuss with European statesmen on his present tour of Europe.

May 1958 without their cooperation, which they seem unwilling to give.

It seems like hopeless task. Save for NATO in Western Europe, and even that organization is none too strong, our alliances are none too powerful. We have NATO and OCEANIC, our allies in the Middle East.

Job for the Courts

This country's government is founded on the idea that representation in its legislative and national—well, bear some reasonable relation to the distribution of population.

Yet the record indicates that this fundamental has been honored too often in the past.

The nation's cities today have 70 per cent of the population, but average around 25 per cent of the representation in state legislatures. It is estimated city areas have had more representation in congress if they were properly represented according to size.

The principle of balanced representation is being tested again in 1961 as 26 of the 50 states redraw state legislative districts to meet changes dictated by the 1960 census. Forty-nine of the 50 are required by law to make similar reappointment of their state legislative representation.

Actually, seven states haven't made a single change since 1905, and others have failed to reappoint for periods of 30 and 40 years. Nearly half the states have missed at least one required redistricting.

The imbalance is of course an old story. Counties are distasteful to many state legislatures. In a surprising number of cases, the imbalance is in fact written into state constitutions. To wipe it out requires running the proposals past the very individuals who benefit most from existing arrangements.

If the legislatures themselves decline to correct the imbalance, what course is left to people seeking proper voice in lawmaking?

In a few states have taken the matter out of legislative hands and given it to special boards or officials, with the courts enforcing. Through use of the initiative and referendum, Washington, Oregon, Colorado and Arizona have forced certain redistricting by will of the people. But in 1948, California, given this chance, voted it down 2-1.

Until recently, the courts have generally stayed out of the state legislative court saw the issue as a legal jungle.

But some change of mood has occurred. The supreme court has now agreed to hear a case involving Tennessee, which hasn't redistricted since 1901. A minority of the court says the issue is a legal jungle.

The New Jersey high court handed Trenton lawmakers a deadline for reapportionment, saying the court would act if they don't. It will give two more years.

Most students of the problem see the courts as the best hope. They don't believe the record offers encouragement that over-represented areas will vote away long-held power.

PROBLEMS ON THE MOVE
Did you move last year? If you did, you're among the one in every five Americans who did. You're part of a whopping 38 million who pulled up stakes and changed their residence.

There's nothing unusual about the latest figures. This is how they've been running for some time. And this kind of moving, not travel, is what the social scientists have in mind when they say Americans are the most mobile people on earth.

In any given year, of course, most of the movers don't go too far. A good deal more than half just shift about within the same county. But of those who do stray beyond county limits, 49 per cent migrate to different states.

The political, economic and social consequences of all this motion are naturally substantial, as you might guess.

Business analysts are confused as they try to pin down the geographic or neighborhood "market" for particular products. City planners puzzle over empty schools as neighborhoods grow up and no new children move in.

Social scientists worry most that people on the move tend to be rootless. Coming in and out of neighborhoods and regions, they neither tend their laws nor bear community responsibilities as "some think they should."

TUCKER'S NATIONAL WHIRLIGIG

(By Stanley, Ray Tucker, author of "The American Revolution" and "The American Revolution")

WASHINGTON—"How much longer," exploded S. T. Tulsa, Okla., "are we going to try to run and hide? We are going to try to run and hide until nobody wants, how long we can back up our promises—long enough to get to Asia, the Middle East, the Congo and South Korea."

Answer: That is the problem with which President Kennedy is faced. He will discuss with European statesmen on his present tour of Europe.

May 1958 without their cooperation, which they seem unwilling to give.

It seems like hopeless task. Save for NATO in Western Europe, and even that organization is none too strong, our alliances are none too powerful. We have NATO and OCEANIC, our allies in the Middle East.

RELUCTANT ALLIES—France and Britain refused to back us when we suggested military intervention in Southeast Asia. As most of that area is under French control, as it will be, we will through slow but steady penetration. Paris and London thought that we were "riser happy," and they would not act.

The only nation of consequence in the Middle East is Turkey, and even that has already pulled out of this alliance, and shaky Iran may next. Observers in Washington and Pentagon experts counsel withdrawal from these seemingly indefensible and hopeless situations.

Observations of congress and Pentagon experts counsel withdrawal from these seemingly indefensible and hopeless situations. It is probable that they will prove to be as indigestible to Khrushchev and Mao Tse-tung as they have been to the United States and its allies.

RELIANCE ON BOHIMS—In short, they suggest that the United States and its allies should not rely on Bohims in their opinion, nuclear bases in the NATO countries of Greece, Turkey and in Japan, Okinawa and South Korea will prove to be a sufficient war deterrent to Khrushchev. He has shown his intention of the Middle East.

The first was in his furious Paris summit rejection of the 1958 incident, which he carried the violation to former President Eisenhower to visit Russia. The second was in his boorish, shoe-banging act of defiance in the case of the Bay of Pigs. Those are the only two occasions when Khrushchev "lost his temper" completely.

It is true that some of these "other" nations might succumb to communism with our withdrawal. But they do not seem to respond as we wish to our aid. It is probable that they will prove to be as indigestible to Khrushchev and Mao Tse-tung as they have been to the United States and its allies.

IS KHRUSHCHEV FOOLING?—"What effect," asks Mrs. M.L., Troy, N.Y., "will Khrushchev's plan to step up the production of consumer goods have on our country?"

Answer: First we must look to see if the implementation of this plan is in our best interests. It is probable that they will prove to be as indigestible to Khrushchev and Mao Tse-tung as they have been to the United States and its allies.

FAMILIAR NAMES
"Mills," used so often to describe the rate of local property tax levies, is about as useless as any word that regularly appears in the public print.

Probably we're overlooking some intricacy of the word. It may have some special meaning that there would be any real difference between a 10 per cent tax (100 mills) on a $2,000 property and a 12 per cent tax (120 mills) on the same amount of dollars on the full market value of the same property. The property would then be taxed at 120 per cent of the full market value, 20 per cent, and the actual tax would be $200—no more or less than under the present confusing Mills.

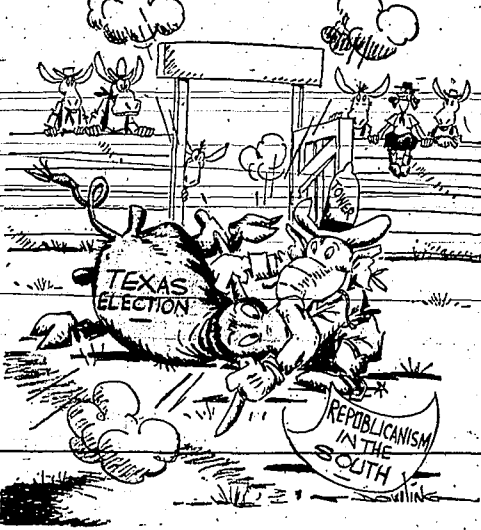

NOT ADMINISTRATION BILLS?
The Kennedy administration has backed quickly away from civil rights legislation. Pierre Salinger, presidential press secretary, says the six bills proposed are not administration bills at all. He adds that the bills belong to the sponsor, Senator Clark and the House, and that the President's role is to enforce to law.

One reason is that the six bills carry out specifically and in each instance Democratic campaign pledges for which Mr. Kennedy has been elected. Another reason is that Mr. Kennedy promised last fall, the early introduction of such bills. Finally, the bills are not administration bills at all.

What discouraged administration support, apparently, was the fact that the bills would do away with our domestic programs. Congressional Quarterly reported in April that the administration was "not prepared to support the bills."

A—No. Statistical evidence strongly suggests that the incidence of cancer of the lungs is much higher in chewers than in smokers. If you are a smoker, you are a cancer-producing cigarette. If you are a chewer, you are a cancer-producing chewing tobacco.

"WASHINGTON CALLING" BY MARQUIS CHILLS

PARIS—The three men with whom President Kennedy will talk in his first venture in Paris as a diplomat are all lowering their voices as they moved back and forth on the world stage.

While his current troubles and his inevitable end of the honey-moon period are still fresh, it is not likely that Kennedy's background and equipment are as good as they were for this role. The years he spent in England just before and after the war are not as important as his life in his father, Joseph P. Kennedy, then ambassador to London, put heavy responsibilities on his sons.

The President is at a disadvantage. As an actor he has the enthusiasm that greeted a new, fresh figure in the White House has reacted to the "cut of personality" and there was the naive, half-spoken hope that this was the beginning of a younger generation could quickly alter the world picture.

But for all the doubts about the President's own personal position as a public figure, the background of the young man who is to be the next President of the United States is a complex one.

One of the shrewd and trustworthy Americans on the mission in Europe today regards it as a wise observation about the administration. Too many of the men around the President are self-made men, and they are not in the midst of a political campaign.

These great international relations are the immense apparatus of a busy, busy world. The principle is a basic one: the man who is to be the next President of the United States must be able to handle the job.

Everybody was going to take a more active role in community affairs. If all these millions of individuals self-improvement programs launched last New Year's day and are still going on, what is the result to their objectives?

Why, right today we'd all be living in a perfect world, a world in which everybody would be happy and content. It is the same old pickle it always has been.

Everybody woke up with a determination to make himself better, and it everybody who had had to be the natural result.

Walters was going to take a more active role in community affairs. If all these millions of individuals self-improvement programs launched last New Year's day and are still going on, what is the result to their objectives?

Writer Ridicules U.S. Handling of Cuban Situation

Editor, Times-News: We encouraged our plutocrats to purchase the Cuban sugar plantations to keep the Cuban from communizing.

We purchased the plutocrats sugar at more than the market price to keep the Cuban from communizing. We penalized the Idaho sugar-beet grower, to keep the Cuban from communizing. So Cuban becomes the first of our friends to turn communist! Let us keep up the good work and beat the Russians out of a job!

Art Guild Members Prepare for Weekly Exhibit

Preparing for the art show to be held in Twin Falls city park from 11 a.m. to 7 p.m. each Sunday during June are, from left, Mrs. Pearl Bracken, secretary of the Art Guild of Magic Valley; Mrs. Larry Cooney and Mrs. Earl B. This is the second year the guild has exhibited paintings in the park. (Staff photos.)

Magic Valley Art Guild Will Hold Exhibit in T.F. Park

Members of the Art Guild of Magic Valley are conducting their second annual Art Meet in Twin Falls city park beginning at 11 a.m. Sunday. Some 100 paintings will be placed on exhibit in the park from 11 a.m. to 7 p.m. each Sunday during June. Guild members have been traveling all over the state and as far as Wells, Nev., for access to canvas, stated Mrs. A. Henkelman, guild president. The club, with its 53 members, is the largest and most active guild in the state, Mrs. Henkelman said. The idea for an Art Meet in Twin Falls was conceived by Lee Logan, a guild member, who attended a showing in Palm Springs, she noted. Last year's meet had a good attendance every Sunday, she reported. A favorite attraction there, which will be back again, is a display of hand-painted china done by Mrs. T. S. Nicholson, Mrs. Henkelman said. The paintings will be displayed on tripods and the artists will each display his own creations, she explained.

Memorial Is Dedicated by Wendell Rite

WENDELL, June 3—Emerson Pugmie, Hagerman, delivered the Memorial day address at the dedication of the memorial recently constructed at the cemetery under the direction of the Wendell cemetery board and the American Legion post No. 41. The program at the cemetery opened with a welcome by Commander Wes Tronson of the Legion post. Introduction was given by the post chaplain, Robert Burka, and the Wendell high school Trojan band played, directed by Frank Webster. Commander Tronson called attention to the fact that the new memorial was a project of the American Legion post and the Wendell cemetery board for the year 1960-61. The project was completed during the term of Commander George Brown, Mrs. E. J. Barton, president of the Wendell cemetery board, and Glen Jenkins, member of the board, assisted with the plans and the work was completed by volunteer labor. The annual Memorial day service began with the parade from the Legion hall. The color guard of the Legion post No. 41, headed the parade and Willard Wert, J. A. Smith, Alvin Strong and L. W. Parr served as color guard. They were followed by the Trojan band, members of the Legion, auxiliary, junior auxiliary and members of the Cub Scouts. Official Asks Expansion of Defense Plan

WASHINGTON, June 3 (AP)—The U. S. commissioner of education, urging renewal and expansion of the national defense education act, says it is "an investment in human beings."

"And it is an investment that has already paid rich dividends and which promises even greater returns in the immediate future," Commissioner Sterling M. McMurrin told a joint hearing by house education subcommittees.

The bill is the third major education program of the administration to be taken up. The other two, to provide aid for public schools and for higher education, are awaiting action by the full house.

The defense education program, enacted in 1955 as the answer to the challenge of Russia's Sputnik, provides "target loans" for college students and grants and loans for strengthening the teaching of science, mathematics and foreign languages in high schools and colleges.

The administration is seeking to make permanent several of the law's provisions, including the student loan and teaching fellowships programs. Other sections would be continued for three years.

Funds Voted for New Fiscal Year

WASHINGTON, June 3 (AP)—The house has voted $751,200,000 in new funds for the state and justice departments, the federal courts and the U.S. information agency. That was $42,041,152 below the amount requested by President Kennedy.

The money, for use during the fiscal year starting July 1, was contained in a bill sent to the senate by a 296-111 roll-call vote. The house accepted exactly the recommendations made last week by the house appropriations committee.

No effort was made to restore any of the $16,000,000 trimmed from funds requested by the U.S. information agency, the nation's foreign propaganda arm.

Miller May Be "Junk Pitcher," but National Loop Batters Can't Hit Him

ST. LOUIS, June 3 (AP)—The "garbage man" is at it again—making monkeys out of the National League's finest hitters.

Recently when Miller was on the mound Howard, a tremendous long-ball hitter, finally became so frustrated that he tried to punt.

Miller currently sports a 4-0 record and lost record. He is a dandy 2-42 earned-run average.

Great Falls Uses Unearned Runs to Top Cowboys 6-3

GREAT FALLS, June 3 (UP)—Magle Valley errors figured in four out of its four home games as the host-Electrics closed out their series with a 6-3 victory over the Cowboys. The victory gave the Electrics a two-to-one edge for the three-game series. Magle Valley returned to Twin Falls immediately following the game to open a four-game series with the Idaho Chiefs.

Billings and Russets Split Doubleheader

BILLINGS, Mont., June 3 (UP)—Billings came up with a five-run eighth inning tonight to advance the second-half of a day-night doubleheader with a 7-5 victory over the Russets. The Russets, who won the opener 11-10 in Idaho, played the home game at Billings. Lowell Turney's bases-loaded double cleared the decks for three of those runs, including the two that made the difference. Brian McCall singled in the winning run in the opener's 10th inning.

Finally, Dom Carrasquel doubled and scored on an error in the second for Great Falls. A walk and singles by Larry James and Jerry Curkendall drove in one Magle Valley run. In the fifth inning, a lead runner was forced in by the home team. The error was made by one runner and tonight's sometimes lanky defensive support cost the Cowboys one run.

New Pitcher Added to Roster as Cowboys Return for Home Stand

Desperately needed pitching help in the form of Bob Bubash will be available for manager Jack Phillips and his Magle Valley Cowboys when they host the Pocatello Chiefs in a four game stand beginning Sunday. Bubash, a righthander with four years' experience in professional baseball, checked into Twin Falls Friday evening after being assigned here from Des Moines of the class B Three I league. He pronounced himself ready to play and with the growing injury list, the Cowboys probably will take him up on that. Currently the club has three men on the disabled list.

Life in MAGIC VALLEY

Iris Colvin Thompson will get her BS degree in education at the University of Idaho June 11. 33 years after she graduated from high school at BLISS in 1928. Mrs. Thompson attended Moscow for two years after her high school graduation and quit to get married in 1932 to Roy Thompson.

She retired from teaching, kept house, had two sons and helped her husband on their farm near Bliss until his death in 1940. Mrs. Thompson worked at the hot lunch room at Bliss school as cook for two years and then decided to go back into the teaching profession.

Her oldest son, Jerry, graduated from Bliss high school in 1946, and the fall of that year she started teaching in HAMMETT in the fourth and fifth grades. She has taught each year since, attending summer school at Moscow each summer, getting her college degree, and culminating the struggle.

Mrs. Thompson's home has been a haven for boys the age of her son Kenneth, who was graduated from OLEVENS SENIOR high school this spring. She also makes a home for Bonnie Thomas, whose mother is dead and made it possible for him to be graduated this spring.

While still at Bliss, she helped organize a youth square dance club, and has had youngsters around her home ever since.

Although organizers only a year ago, the FULLER Wrengetrics can already look back to many exciting events, including making plans for an even more eventful year ahead.

The club was organized in March 1960, when a group of women decided that if their husbands and boy friends could belong to riding clubs and posses, there was no reason why they couldn't have a riding club of their own with some mingling they invited interested girls and married women to the community to attend an organizational meeting.

The response was much greater than they had hoped. About 18 girls drilled at the TWIN FALLS country fair one evening. Mrs. Drill Master is Neal Allen, husband of the club's president. Drills are worked out by committees and much hard work and practice go into them before they are considered suitable for exhibition.

Age limit for the group was set at 14 years of age and on up and several of the girls in the club are not yet 15. Some of the members knew very little about riding at the beginning of the year, but by fall great progress had been made. The club practices had one of its aims is to make better riders of all its members. Each girl is encouraged to take care of her horse and equipment and not rely upon a husband or boy friend to do it for her.

New members are now required to pass certain qualifications and riding tests before they are accepted as members.

The group meets once a week at the fairgrounds where they practice until the business meeting follows after which the members take turns serving light refreshments to the members, their husbands and boy friends, usually on hand to serve as spectators.

A recent member of the club's members, was Piers' own during the fair, and several others took turns serving as club members.

Each girl has her own horse and favorites may be anything from American Saddle, quarter horse or a mixture of several which still makes a good horse.

The group is now making plans for a style show of western apparel to be held in the near future. They plan to have a horse show during the summer. A lot of enthusiasm and hard work go into everything they do.

Local Grange Has Services For Deceased

A memorial service honoring deceased members was held at the regular meeting of Mountain-Rock Grange Thursday night in the Grange hall.

Mrs. H. W. Riedeman, chaplain in charge of the program, and she read the name of each departed member a red rose was placed in a white bowl by Mrs. Robert Ravi. The bowl was on a white covered table centered with lighted candles and flanked by an arrangement of shades of purple.

As part of the ritual, Mrs. Charles O'Dell gave a reading, "The Sorrows Due," by Edgar A. Guest and Mrs. Esther Noble gave a talk on the significance of the red poppies which are sold by veterans of World wars I and II. Mrs. Riedeman gave a reading, "Thankfulness," and the Grange members sang Civil War hymns.

It was announced by the secretary that Pomona Grange will be held June 10 at Knoll Grange hall. Pomona Secretary Mrs. J. D. Durr reported plans are under way for a visit by Henschel Retson, national president July 8. The meeting place has been set tentatively for the Flax high school auditorium.

Navy Transmitter in Remote Maine Is Most Powerful Radio Station in World

CUTLER NAVAL RADIO STATION, Me., "the most powerful transmitter in the world," is a very low frequency and the other is a high frequency. The high frequency signals range far but they skip a lot of ground, too. The very low frequency signals don't skip, but they cover every inch of ground and even penetrate the ocean.

For here on a small peninsula in the state of Maine, the most powerful radio station in the world.

Cutler Naval Radio is one of five stations which pass orders from Navy headquarters to all its ships at sea. But Cutler is particularly important to the Polaris subs, the Navy's No. 1 weapon of retaliation if someone starts a missile war.

The station's powerful, very low frequency signals will penetrate the ocean depths to reach the subs in their element.

Cutler is about 25 air miles from the point where the Maine-Canada border comes down to the sea. The sets is remote.

"We've so damned isolated up here," says navy chief H. L. Swann, Pittsburgh, Pa., standing in the shadow of the world's largest radio transmitter, "that we don't even get good radio reception."

With a transmitter power output topping nine million watts, the VLF station is at least 40 times more powerful than the most powerful commercial station in the country.

Cutler draws its power from its huge transmitter, and its awesome personality from its antennae. The VLF site spreads out over 2,500 acres, the transmitter building in the center and 26 towers scattered around it.

There are two antennae. Each has 12 towers, arranged in the shape of a six-pointed star. Each carries 337 acres—center tower 960 feet high, an inner ring of six 575-foot towers, and an outer ring of six 800-foot towers. Strung among each set of towers is 21 miles of one-inch cable that is kept taut against the pull of gales and the weight of winter ice by nine 200-ton counterweights.

For purposes of comparison, the Eiffel tower in Paris is 984 feet high and the RCA building in New York 860 feet. The Pentagon building in Washington covers 34 acres. The high frequency site is modern.

fleet operations in the North Atlantic." Ships would suddenly find themselves out of touch.

Cutler radio was programmed before the Polaris missile program was thought of, says Zammit. "It just so happened then when the Polaris program was conceived, its requirements mesh right in with this program."

These requirements: A radio signal which could reach submarines remaining submerged for months at a time.

The station, which cost more than 70 million dollars, became operational in early spring after extensive shakedown tests. Zammit has 85 men under his command.

The administration building houses a barracks, a recreation room, mess hall, barber shop, duty store, and canteen with a canteen nearby, married men who have brought their families to Maine live off the base.

Cutler navy radio has created some jobs and it has brought another benefit to its namesake, the tiny village of Cutler. Because of the navy's needs, the village postal telephone service 18 months ahead of schedule.

Everyone else in the neighborhood of the world's largest radio station has to turn a crank to the operator.

Current Problems of Africa Explored By Noted Historian, Arnold J. Toynbee

Uganda and Tanganyika. There are other countries—for instance, Northern Rhodesia, Nyasaland, Ruanda-Urundi, Kenya—in which the outlook is doubtful.

Among the countries that mentioned, two—Northern Rhodesia and the Kantanga province of the Northern Rhodesias—are of outstanding importance on account of their mineral wealth. This is because they are rich in copper, heavy industry, in contrast to most of the rest of Africa south of the Sahara, where agriculture seems likely to remain the staple and the main source of wealth.

West Africa stands out here as being also relatively fortunate economically. Though West Africa is an agricultural region, it produces cash crops for export which command a good price on the world market.

The West African climate that favors these valuable crops has also saved West Africa from being plundered on by European settlers. The climate in the European countries came to West Africa as a result of the industrial revolution, and they leave West Africa on retirement.

At the same time, the scale of the first South Africa and Southern Rhodesia. In the population of the African continent, there is a minority of European settlers; and in both these countries the European settlers have the government in their hands. South Africa is entirely independent, and Southern Rhodesia is virtually so. The dominant Dutch-speaking wing of the ruling European minority in both countries is determined to maintain its ascendancy, in defiance of the tide of democracy that is now rising so rapidly all round the globe.

The Africanists contend that the African continent is the African man is solely their own affair, and that the rest of the world has no right to interfere. This claim is especially intolerable when it has the support of the United Nations. The Africanist position is a racial tension in other countries which has been the cause of a mixed population on their nations.

The ex-Belgian Congo resembles West Africa in being the most part, a country in which Europeans cannot permanently make themselves at home. The Africanist position of the present deplorable situation in Belgium's intention is a short time ago, before

In other business, it was reported that John Sommers, son of Mr. and Mrs. Raymond O'Dell, Flax high school member, had been chosen as a delegate to the conservation camp in Alpine, Wyo.

Litterbugging, Vandalism Hinder Public Access Program

Fish and game department efforts to provide public access to good fishing and hunting waters are thwarted sometimes by flagrant acts of litterbugging and malicious vandalism. In cooperation with Owyhee county, for example, the department built two miles of road to the unhook bass fishing area in the Sand Dunes lake near Brattain. Ladders were installed—three different lines. These buildings not only have been overturned even though anchored in concrete, but the lumber has been burned as firewood. Shown above is Vernon Rich, federal aid coordinator, removing cans, broken glass and other debris, while sign vainly tries to give information to visitors. Other acts of vandalism have been noted elsewhere in the state. (Fish and game department photo—staff engraving)

Efforts to Provide Public Access to Fishing Areas Thwarted by Vandalism

By JIM HUMBERT
Idaho Fish and Game Department
Examples of gross litterbugging and even vicious vandalism against public and private property are piling up again this spring in many parts of Idaho, undermining much effort to promote better landholder-sportsman relations.

For example, a conservation officer of the fish and game department noted recently in a monthly report: "I have spent considerable time cultivating a couple of ranchers in a local area to let the public hunt and fish on their property. So what happens? Someone shoots and kills one of the rancher's sheepdogs while target practicing. Meanwhile two others broke into the second rancher's place and shot over 200 bullet holes in his home. I believe that the 22 caliber rifle is the biggest thing we have as far as farmer-sportsman relations go."

Everybody knows that gun vandalism is no isolated phenomenon. About a dozen years ago another Idaho man was killed by a bullet fired by boys hunting or target shooting in the area.

Several reports have been received lately indicating that the lives of farm residents are being endangered by bullets striking the ground a few yards from where people are working in fields. Such incidents doubtless are accidental in the sense that intent to shoot a farm worker is totally absent. Nevertheless they serve as rather pointed reminders that guns are far too lethal to be used indiscriminately—as indicated by the "dangerous within one mile" notice usually printed on a box of ordinary 22 shells.

Yet many examples of misuse of firearms are apparent everywhere. Highway signs are riddled by bullets and rural mailboxes frequently have bullet holes in them. According to the Times-News of Twin Falls, the highway sign vandalism is so common and costly that Nevada, for instance, took steps several years ago to reduce damage to signs. In isolated areas, such highway signs were equipped with a separate painted bulge with the slogan, "Save the Signs." Such gun vandalism is not new at a state where so many people own and use firearms. But there is no excuse for it. The vandalism is more frequent in sparsely populated areas where there seldom is a witness. In fact, it is enough to indicate that the people responsible for such damage are well aware of the wrong they are doing.

Psychologists say they can demonstrate that people who commit overt acts of vandalism and litterbugging also are apt to reject other social customs and appear deficient in ethical awareness. They can be detected through examinations. For one thing, they are prone to abstract thought.

To persons who long have wrestled with the difficulty of irresponsible conduct, this may seem academic, an interesting classroom demonstration at best. Even if such tests provided final answers to the question of what makes litterbugs and vandals, there still is the impractical question of what to do about it.

A scientific means of detecting litterbugging and vandalism is not enough. "We identify the more basic causes of anti-social conduct as to make a start—but only a small one—on the job of eliminating these causes.

If problems of vandalism and litterbugging are rooted in problems of personality, as the psychologists suggest, then those who seek solutions must address themselves to basic and rather widespread problems of human personality. This is a formidable task indeed—a more formidable one than some who merely coin slogans are ready to face.

One approach the department has used in recent years with some good results, some had, is the high-priority program for land acquisition around the state to provide public access to major fishing and hunting waters. Perpetual easements and, in some cases, outright land purchases have obtained public right of way across private lands. These are being developed with gravelled roads, cattle guards, fences or fences where trespassing is allowed, directional signs and the like.

It must be conceded, in all truth, that Director Ross Leonard's fond hope that such facilities not only would provide better hunting and fishing opportunities for more people—but also would ease public pressure on private property—was not always realized. New access sites sometimes merely provided additional places for the few individuals to "express their private property more directly." Several years ago, two miles of public access road were built by the department in cooperation with Owyhee county to the unique bass fishing waters of the Sand Dunes lakes near Brattain. Ladders were installed—three different lines. These buildings not only have been overturned even though anchored in concrete, but the lumber has been burned as firewood.

Philosophers, both ancient and modern, repeatedly have warned that a person or a society must love a prized heritage before its value is realized. Actually, conditions in Idaho are good in contrast to other states. Even so, the number of fishermen and hunters is increasing every year with an appropriate upswing in the amount of damage caused against private property.

Anyone who comes up with a good idea for deterring abuse of outdoor privileges will be doing good for his future fishing and hunting—and that of his children.

He figures this will give him access to completely new fishing grounds. He usually fishes in the Hagerman valley area. Federico is one of those fishermen who some persons find hard to understand. Not only is he willing to wade around in inaccessible areas in an inner tube, but he also is an avid winter fisherman. Two years ago he regularly fished in zero degree weather and one day he was fishing when it was eight degrees below zero.

Although his inner tube would hold him high in the water, he does say that he has no intentions of crossing any lakes in it.

Sunday, like hundreds of anglers in Idaho, Federico was waiting for dawn and the opening of the 1961 fishing season.

As of Monday American Falls reservoir contained 1,165,000 acre-feet. At a special meeting of directors for American Falls No. 2 and Big Wood boards, it was decided to cut the delivery to American Falls water users on the Miller canal to 80 per cent to make the short storage last as long as possible, possibly until the first part of September.

Sale of Fairfield Telephone Service Ends Chapter of Camas Area History

When the Baldwins purchased the exchange there was only one other phone on it. Now the exchange has 200 direct-dial, independent circuits to Halley. This is important as all long distance calls are routed through Halley. The local system was a one-wire grounded system until the REA came into the picture and the power made the phones so noisy that a two-wire system had to be installed. This conversion was in process when the Baldwins took possession.

Lloyd Hundy, early-day maintenance man for the old Camas County Mutual Telephone company, stands beside the old crank-type phones, some of which still are in use on Camas prairie. Two of the oldest are at the Harry Kunkle home and at his tenant house near Corral. They were purchased from the late Edward R. Bier, in the days of the barbed wire phone lines. (Staff photo-engraving)

Baldwin says that he had always encouraged children to learn to use the phones and has insisted that the children be taught that they could use them in case of emergency.

The Fairfield Telephone service has about 500 lines in the valley, and about half of the instruments are owned by subscribers. Neither the county nor the subscribers have had the finances to buy new phones and equipment so they have had to operate about 200 of the six-volt battery and crank generator type.

Some of the homes and business houses have never type phones. Many of the subscribers are widows or low-income brackets so that the Baldwins felt it best to keep the rates low for their sale by using old equipment.

About 200 of the phones have a crank to call central. The rest have been converted to a button-in-place of a crank. Two of the oldest type phones are in use at the Harry Kunkle home in the valley and one at his tenant house near Corral. The phones were bought from the late Edward R. Bier, father of Len and Ken Bier in the days of the barbed wire phone lines. There are several of a similar type still in use.

When the Baldwins took the exchange home there were 122 phones and 60 lines. They now have 255 phones on 97 lines with as many as 100 lines in use. The exchange is operated from 5 a.m. to 10 p.m. with a 25-cent charge for after hours calls except emergency calls. In cases of deaths, elections and such they operate without charge for a long overtime as necessary.

Philosophers, both ancient and modern, repeatedly have warned that a person or a society must love a prized heritage before its value is realized. Actually, conditions in Idaho are good in contrast to other states. Even so, the number of fishermen and hunters is increasing every year with an appropriate upswing in the amount of damage caused against private property.

Anyone who comes up with a good idea for deterring abuse of outdoor privileges will be doing good for his future fishing and hunting—and that of his children.

Local people who go out of town or even to a neighbor for the evening often call the exchange and tell them where they can be reached. Fairfield residents feel the exchange has done a wonderful job of public service.

The exchange has seldom been out of commission for long. Once it took five days to fix it later being struck by lightning. In 1951 and again in 1959 lines were snapped by heavy snow. Their poles were snapped between Fairfield and Soldier by the wet snow that year.

As a rule Baldwin does all the maintenance work himself. Many of the customers on party lines check their own lines and fix them, if possible, without calling for help. There is a general spirit of cooperation in the community and only twice in the 17 years have people refused to relinquish the line for a long distance call.

The county and city firemen is connected to the phone office and they ring it in case of fire. It is also blown at noon and in cases of civil defense practice.

In cases of power failure Baldwin keeps a candle on top of the switchboard for light. There is a hand crank to generate enough power to make calls. The Millers operated the exchange with just the use of the hand crank.

The present switchboard is known as a magneto type. The new owners are expected to install a common battery system of 40 volts. Besides the owners and their families the people who have worked at the board at various times include Mrs. Amy Howland, Mrs. Glenn Chandler, Yvonne, Lorraine Turner, Glenda Ballard, Joseph Lamson, Mrs. Norma Lee Vaughn, Glenda, Mrs. Mary Grimm Thompson, Mrs. Keran Lawson

White, Mrs. Doris Westcott Waterbury, Mrs. Anita Stevens Lee, Joan Eckridge, Cheryl Jones, Barbara Sutton, Eunice Steles, Mrs. Ruth Sanford Harrison and Peggy Harrison.

Mrs. Emma Phillips Howard has been the daytime operator for the past 10 years and recently resigned to take a position in the REA.

The switchboard has been a general information bureau for the people of the community who call for the times of programs, where someone is supposed to be, who is supposed to do something, details of an emergency, and they have even been asked how to remove certain stains from a rug.

A "line call" is sent-out in case of anything of general interest, such as schools closed by storm, funerals, special programs or food sales.

The Mountain States company has been cooperative and has helped the local exchange in many ways beyond the call of duty, Baldwin notes.

Chemical fertilizers neither kill earthworms nor bother soil bacteria, an English experiment reveals.

Elks Rehabilitation Center at Boise Was Constructed in 1957

This is the Idaho Elks rehabilitation center in Boise. It is the second building the Elks have maintained and was constructed in 1957. The first rehabilitation center was started in 1948. The new building is a 34-bed hospital and also cares for an average of 200 occupants a month. The center has an array of special equipment and there is a full-time staff of 33 persons to maintain the center. The center is supported by a portion of the dues paid by each Idaho Elk. This is the first Idaho Elks rehabilitation center started in 1948. A few years later the building was enlarged and this new center was built in 1957. The new center is one of the most modern rehabilitation centers in the intermountain area, and it provides services for persons with all sorts of disabilities, regardless of the person's financial position. (Staff photo- engraving)

Modern Boise Rehabilitation Center Supported by Elks Lodge Members

Since 1946 the Idaho members of the Elks lodge have supported one of the most modern rehabilitation centers in the intermountain area. The rehabilitation center is located in Boise and provides specialized treatment to individuals throughout the area.

Dorner Berach, secretary of Twin Falls Lodge No. 1185, visited the center and noted "it was privileged to visit the center again, and again I thanked God for my health."

"The patients I saw there were human beings, just as I, but they have a determination that is lacking in most of us. They are going to get well."

"If you don't believe it, just ask them. They know that before long they will be back in their own right of life."

Berach explains that the center was started in 1946 in a former Boise mansion. The center grew that building and in 1957 the present building was built and dedicated.

It is a 34-bed hospital, but also cares for an average of 200 occupants a month. The center has a good supply of specialized equipment and there is a full-time staff of 33 persons who administer to patients and operate the various specialized therapy units.

The center is supported by funds provided from the dues of the Idaho members of the lodge. Two dollars from each member's dues are turned over to the center. The center also is supported by various grants. The payroll alone is $17,000 a month.

Commenting on the center, Berach says, "The Elks of Idaho are a very fortunate group of men. They are responsible for, and the direct owners of, the center. Men of all walks of life have contributed countless hours and thousands of dollars to erect this hospital."

The servants at the hospital are a devoted group of individuals. I call them servants, because only people in love with life and willing to sacrifice their life are employed there. True, they are working for a salary. It is only fair and just, because they must have money to live on, just as you and I. But many of their patients are both young and old.

"Some are victims of wrecks, some have muscular disturbances, others cannot talk, and still others

gressed to complicated sentences. There is much memorization work. There are 63 braille characters, and there are a multitude of combinations of these symbols. The symbols are made by arranging six dots in different order. The dots are arranged in two vertical rows, three dots per row. By extending certain dots and arranging the remaining dots in different order, a multitude of shapes are possible. The dots are pressed in the shape of the symbols with a stylus from the reverse side of the paper. The blind person can then feel the shape of the symbols with his fingertips.

Mrs. Hovey says she can't read braille like a sighted person, but she laughs and adds that she can sight read it, only she has to read it from the reverse side of the page.

"Mrs. Hovey is just one of many persons involved in this volunteer work for the Sunday school students in 291 certified braille instructors and 291 students. Mrs. Hovey notes that another Twin Falls volunteer currently is involved in this work. She is Mrs. Anna Arnelin, who is taking lessons in braille transcription.

Mrs. Hovey says that almost 15,000 pages of braille were transcribed by the volunteers in 1960. These pages include books, books and Sunday school lessons.

She is doing all her transcription work for the Sunday school students in the intermediate grades. Each lesson is different, so each month she has a new assignment to meet each month. She must get her transcriptions in on the 15th day to the Sunday school. There they are bound and mailed to the blind children who have requested them.

"Mrs. Hovey points out that speed in transcription isn't what counts, but that accuracy is most important. If there are more than three mistakes a page, the entire page has to be done again. The marks are erased by smoothing out the braille marks, but the blind reader can still feel them and too many mistakes and erasures are confusing.

She says the students who use the lessons aren't learning braille, but are children who have read braille for some time.

Because the children are at an age when they are learning about many things, it is quite important that the braille transcriptions be perfectly accurate.

Although the work is exacting and tedious, Mrs. Hovey says it is so different from her work that she finds it relaxing. She either does the transcribing at night, or in the morning before she leaves for school. The only thing that is work about it is the monthly deadline, she notes.

Australians Still Are Loyal to Crown, But Yearn to Be More Like Americans

SYDNEY, Australia, June 3 (AP)—Twist a television knob in Australia and chances are you'll be rocked back on your chair by the "re-arranging" of the "Crown." O'Connor's rifle—no—lulled to sleep by Singer Perry Combs.

Up on the wireless or radio—and the gamut runs from "Mack the Knife" to "Spanish Harlem" from Doris Day to Bobby Darin and Elvis Presley.

"We're still fiercely loyal to the crown," said one Australian, "but culturally, industrially, socially and almost every other way we lean more toward America than we do to Britain."

One of the striking features of this rapidly expanding continent at the bottom of the world—as it flexes new industrial muscles and undergoes radical facial changes—is that it has cultivated a definite "youth accent."

It surrounds you in the theaters and night clubs, where imported U.S. talent has a near-monopoly. In the shopping, publishing and service of the new hotels and in the corner snack shop where it is possible to pick up a coke and a hot dog for two-bob (24 cents).

"The young ladies who frounce into the cocktail lounges at 8 p.m. after a day at the office, for the standard Australian break-look as if they had just stepped out of one of America's fashion magazines.

"Some of the old 'blue law' still remains, in Melbourne, for instance, with closing time at 9 p.m. From this has come the catch of the day—'9 o'clock-willie.' In order to meet the deadline, Australians line up at the beach and bet glasses of the Tommy, Agnibodie brew until the curtains on themselves fall.

Sydney, the country's largest city with a population of more than two million, has a law which requires the closing of all public drinking places between 6:50 and 7:30 p.m. The idea is to make daddy go home to mamma. As he has come back—and bring the madam with him.

Australia is a young country, while men first settled there in 1788—political prisoners and convicts from Britain's overcrowded jails and immigrants who left their mother country out of pity.

This may account in part for an undercurrent of resentment among some Australians for the United States and the kindness of spirit they have for Americans, whom they consider of the same racial mold.

Machine and Woman's Pleasant Voice Give Time of Day and Telephone Commercial

Meet Mrs. Berrian Moore, Jr., Atlanta, Ga. She is the woman you hear when you dial Redwood 3-9150 for the time of day service. She is a native southerner, a graduate of Vassar and mother of three children. She has been making the recordings for more than 10 years. The machine that provides the time-of-day service receives hundreds of calls a day. (Staff photo-entouring)

These men are pointing to the machine parts that tell callers the time of day and also give the Mountain States Telephone and Telegraph company's commercial. This machine is the "woman" that gives the time of day when Redwood 3-9150 is called. At left is Dan Worsenoff, central office repairman, who points to the pickup head that gives the commercial when it drops on the revolving drum. W. W. Clark, right, district manager, points to the pickup head that broadcasts the time. (Staff photo-entouring)

Intricate Mechanism Gives Telephone Users Accurate Time of Day Reading

Most persons on the Redwood and Gardfield telephone exchanges know that if they dial Redwood 3-9150 a woman with a pleasant voice answers and provides the time of day, followed by a short commercial pointing out various features of the Mountain States Telephone and Telegraph company. Contrary to what some persons may think, the company doesn't keep a woman chained to a clock just for the benefit of local clock watchers. The "woman" is a small revolving cylinder that keeps on the move day and night and provides local citizens with the correct time. More than one million persons in the United States hear the recorded voice each day. The voice is that of Mrs. Berrian Moore, Jr., of Atlanta, Ga. She is a native southerner, a graduate of Vassar, mother of three children, and she has been making the recordings for more than 10 years. She works for the Audichron company, Atlanta, Ga., the company that developed the machine, and leases it to telephone exchanges. According to the company more than four million persons call the machines each day requesting the time of day. Operation of the machine was explained by W. W. Clark, district manager, and Dan Worsenoff, central office repairman. The machine was installed in 1938 when the company switched from operator to dial system. In the past, whenever a subscriber wanted to know the time, he lifted the receiver and asked the operator. The operator informed them of the time by reading it from an electric clock. Now the time is told by a voice from a recording that is accurate to within one minute. The time has to be given in minutes, rather than seconds because it is recorded.

TAXPAYERS PROMISE TO PAY TO
Government-in-the-Electric-Business
$10,000,000,000

Would you sign this $10,000,000,000 I.O.U. for unnecessary taxes?

Of course you wouldn't take on such a staggering debt yourself. But you and other taxpayers may have to share this whopping burden in new taxes!

What would it be for? To put the federal government farther into the electric light and power business. And it will be a reality if the promoters of such federal "public power" get their way. Already, such spending for this purpose has cost taxpayers about $5,500,000,000 (That's five and a half billion dollars.)

Is $10,000,000,000 more tax spending really necessary? Not at all. Independent electric companies like yours are able and ready to fill America's growing needs for low-price electricity. And they don't depend on your taxes to do the job.

Unnecessary tax spending for federal "public power" goes on mainly because so few people know they are paying the bill. But it can be stopped as soon as enough people do know. Will you help spread the word?
