WASHINGTON, Oct. 6 (UPI)—Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko arrived today for a brass tacks talk with President Kennedy on Berlin with a declaration that nuclear war "must be averted, must be prevented." He made the statements on his arrival by train from New York just before his scheduled White House meeting with the President. He has been bringing signals from Nikita S. ### Tour Set on Thursday by Water Users

PRONGER, Oct. 6—Carroll Wilcomb, general manager of the North Side Canal company, announces a stockholder's tour of the west end of the project will be held Thursday. All interested stockholders should meet at the main offices of the company at 8 a.m.

The tour will go to Milner dam to see the gunite repair work on the concrete section of the main canal below the headworks. Participants will stop at the control gates about four miles below Milner, where future major repair work on the spillway, radial gates, spillway and canal erosion will be reviewed.

Channel realignment, diking and rock work in the upper reaches of Wilson lake will be visited as well as Wilson lake dam and a large ponded area below Wilson lake.

The past season's limited supply of irrigation water and the realization of excessive losses in the canal system, especially during June, July and August, have been the incentive for considerable interest in the inspection trip, Wilcomb said.

Wilcomb cautioned those interested in making the tour to drive pickup trucks or high centered vehicles. Work shoes are also advised, Wilcomb said, as there will be some walking over rough areas.

Luncheon arrangements will be made at Hazelton and Eden. Since it will be necessary to know the approximate number making the tour because of the limited capacity of these restaurants, those desiring to take part are requested to notify the regional office at least three days in advance so that the restaurants can be prepared, Wilcomb said.

Crover Newman, high school teacher, is teaching the class.

Car dealers of Rupert are furnishing the dust control cases for the course and they are expected to arrive later this month.

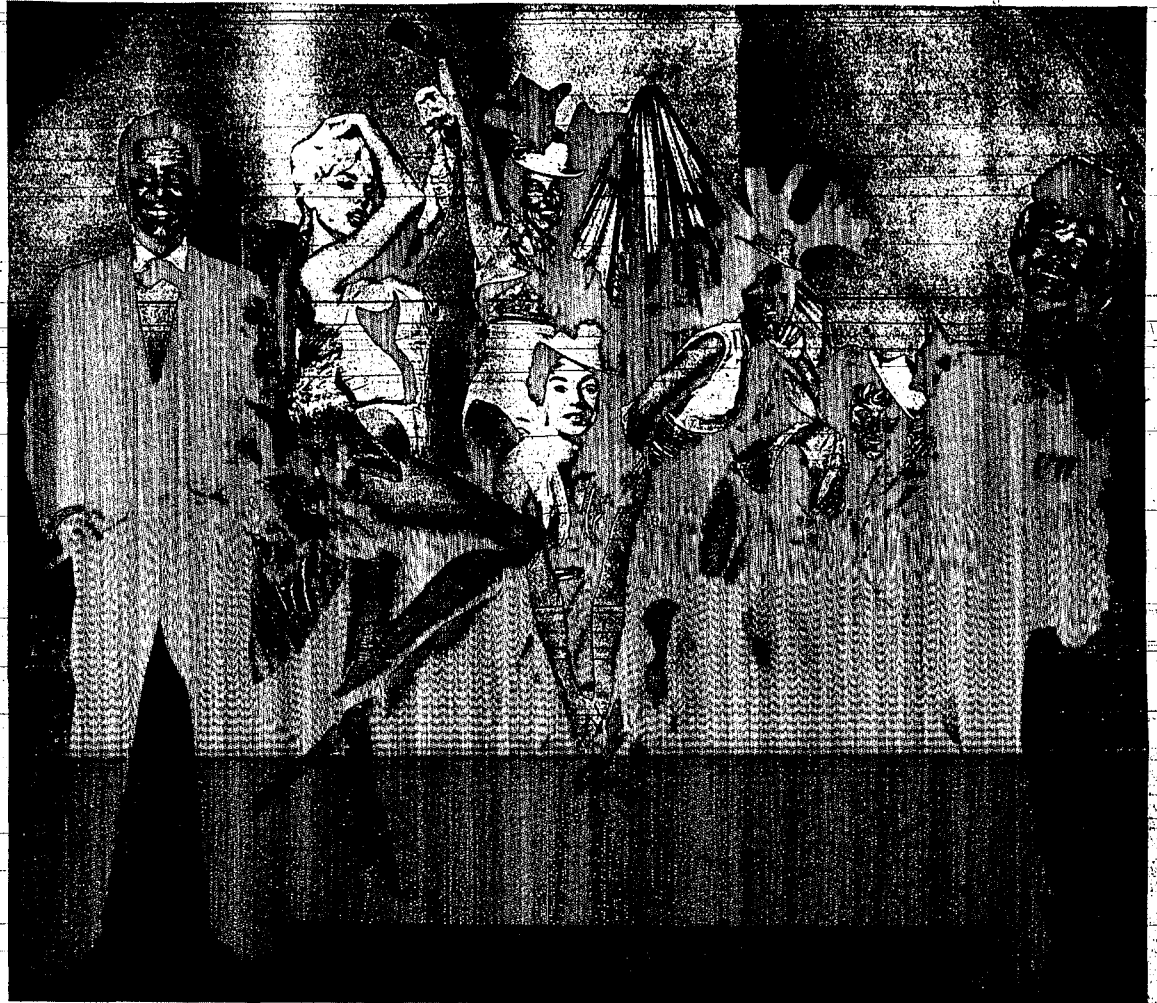

Lee Merrill, business manager for the school district, said that after classes resume, the course would probably be taught after school.

He said that under state law, the classes must be held separately from the regular school classes, and that no credit is given. The course is required for students under 18 to get a license.

Canadians Stop at Feedlot East of Hansen During Tour of Magic Valley

One of the stops made in Magic Valley for 116 Canadian farmer-feeders this week was the new feedlot east of Hansen, on U.S. highway 31, built for Armour and company. The Canadians, who came to Idaho to study methods they can use on farms in Alberta, looked over the track and poles, the railroad line, the dip in the center of each pen for drainage, and the cement feed banks and cement aprons on which the cattle will stand while feeding. The lot is built to hold about 2,500 head of cattle, with alley space wide enough for one truck to swing around another. Standing with his back to the camera, and next to the loudspeaker is Mark Moorhead, Miller, a director in the Idaho Cattle Feeders association. (Staff photo-entraping)

Canadian Grain Program Forces Many Farmers Into Cattle Feeding Business

According to many Canadian farmer-feeders on the recent tour of Magic Valley feedlot installations, the wheat program enforced by the Canadian government has forced many of them to go into the cattle-feeding business. None of the farmer-feeders interviewed, however, were opposed to their government's wheat program, and many thought it suited the cattle market. Instead, they seemed opposed to the situation that forced their government to regulate wheat purchases but thought there'd be worse off without a government program.

of grain they feed the calves until they reach the point where the calves are given free-choice grain. All the Canadians interviewed were firmly sold on giving their calves grain free choice from feeding wagons, always left in the yards. None of them complained of blood troubles any more than are heard of in this area. The animals are sold fat at about 1,000 pounds, most of them in June and July. The timing of the cattle sales are determined by farmers' workloads and cropping practices. Their winters are heavy, usually, with snow and cows are bred to drop calves in April or May. Many buy calves in years they have large amounts of surplus wheat and barley. The price, now, they say, is about 24 cents for a weaner calf. Fat cattle prices, said several ranchers, have been running about $1.50 to $1.90 per hundred. Their grading is called red label, green label and standard. As far as could be determined, red corresponds to our choice. Disease problems are red water, water belly, hoof rot and other similar to ours. ## Advice Is Given on Careful Handling in Potato Harvest

BURLEY, Oct. 6 — Research in Idaho, says Virgil Cross, extension potato agent, Cassia and Blaine counties, shows that rough handling of spuds at harvest annually causes 20 to 50 per cent of the No. 1 to become No. 2. Some growers, he adds, suffer losses amounting to as much as 50 to 75 per cent of their crop due to mechanical damage. These losses are due to reduction in grade and by the increase in amount of shrinkage and water loss during storage. He suggests that the plier hopper should be padded with three eighth inch sponge rubber. This rubber padding should be directly beneath the iron after cleaning the surface thoroughly and using a good rubber cement. To pad the truck bed, he suggests that farmers put out a layer of straw from two to three inches deep and then to cover it with a canvas. On chains on diggers, bulkers, pliers, or combines, he suggests that all these should be checked for speed. Too fast movement is hard on the spuds. The digger chain speed should be less than 150 feet per minute. All other chain speeds should be less than 70 feet per minute. If the chain speed is faster than this, gear slits should be changed. To determine the chain speed, he suggests that a cloth be tied to the link of the chain and the machinery run at a normal operating speed. By counting the number of times the cloth marker passes a given spot in one minute, measuring the length of the digger chain in feet, and multiplying the length of the chain in feet by the number of times the marker passes the fixed point in one minute, the operating speed in feet per minute can be obtained. He also advises strongly against having drops of more than six inches.

Five Russians Tour Spud, Beet Areas In Valley, Discuss Farming in USSR

Russian visitors visited spud and beet areas in Idaho Valley this week. They said that in Russia sugar beet fields are planted with monogerm seed, and hand-hoeing is used to thin the stands is a method common because of mechanical thinning methods. They use a lot of mechanical-laborer-planting on spuds and sugar beet crops.

"They said, too, that in Russia farmers try to produce as much as they can from an acre of land, the same as American farmers, with as little labor as possible, also like Americans."

The Russians, four of them agricultural experts and one a foreman, already have toured midwestern farming areas.

From Idaho they went on to Oregon, then to Washington, D.C., then back to their homeland. They arrived in their respective States according to their schedules on Sept. 18 and are due to leave this country before mid-October.

Along the entire tour across the United States where they are visiting, only sugar beet and potato growing areas they were accompanied by Al Murphy, Twin Falls. Murphy is a member of the agricultural research service, and he works in the entomology division, Twin Falls. He was assigned the job to carry the five Russians by the foreign agricultural service, which is working in conjunction with the state extension and the cultural exchange program.

This program, worked out between the U.S. and other nations around the world, including Russia, stipulates there will be a man for man exchange on tours and visits. For five Russians here, there are five Americans touring Russia.

Murphy said this interview with the five Russians in Twin Falls was the first meeting these men have had with the press since their arriving in the United States.

He also said, as did the Russians through their translator, that they had been received by relatively where they had been in the United States, and often with humor.

On the Twin Falls-Burley area, they paid close attention to the machinery employed in harvesting spuds and sugar beets. In a classroom where Russian was being taught, toured for more than an hour a cattle feeding yard, and at least once, hamburgers and coke for a meal.

They also offered Russian cigarettes to whoever they talked, if that individual smoked, and the pack was enclosed in a wrapper which has a picture of the space dog that was shot into orbit by the Russians. Apparently, they are commercial promoters who capitalize on publicity there, too.

Their cigarette, however, has a habit of going out unless they are puffed on quite continuously. The men were business suits, all tall and slender. Some were married and had children, and none of them wanted to drink any kind of beverage, at least not during the interview, that evening.

No questions of a political nature were asked. Only questions pertaining to agriculture, spuds and sugar beet production in the United States, and the collective and state farms.

Although everything was funneled through the translator, the Russians answered quickly and freely. One of their delegation, Leonid Alekseyevich Korbut, a man with a high forehead, a thin nose and a receding hair line, was what Murphy called, "my prize pupil." Korbut seemed to understand phrases of English, particularly farm terms, and he often began his answer, in Russian, before the translator had finished the question.

Korbut, unlike the other three farm experts, was the agricultural equipment engineer. He is one of a committee of three at a research institute in Moscow who are responsible for the development of farm machinery on a wide reach of Russia. At this institute there also are experimental plots, he said.

Russia, which has 23 million acres planted to potatoes. These are white and red varieties, and are similar to white potatoes in Idaho. The Idaho russet differs from the other varieties, however.

Most of the spuds raised in Russia are grown in the central part, in a 300-mile radius, with Moscow as the center. Almost all Russian spuds are raised with top irrigation, and since spud raising areas in Russia are north of areas used to raise spuds in the United States, climatic conditions make it far more difficult for harvesting crops.

Each of the three state farms based on the locality, specialized in one produce more than others. Thus there are what may be called three different types of state farms, animal breeding farms and so on. Other commodities also are handled on each farm.

Cattle also are raised on each state farm, since these are necessary to run the farms and wastes. As for features, which they call either natural or artificial, the artificial pasture is planted with adapted varieties planted on it, such as bromine, orchard and the like, which also have been adapted to the area.

The price for the crops raised on the state farms is fixed by a contract before the planting season begins in the spring, or by members of the central delivery committee. The delivery committee orders, for instance, a million sacks of spuds for different areas in the country.

The delivery committee also is responsible for the delivery of crops from collective farms.

A collective farm, said the five Russians, is directed and operated by the farmer. The peasantry on the peasantry (they used this term) live on their own land.

None of this land can be sold at any time, however, since the property belongs to the state. But the peasantry do their own farming, form their own committees and elect their own leaders. The latter plan the work and manage the operation of these vast enterprises. The crops on the collective farms belong to the farmers and are sold by them to the delivery committee.

Prices are fixed, based on early season contracts, but on excess crops that are not under contract, can be sold on the open market.

Every family living on a collective farm has a cow or two. In addition, each individual can own one cow and a calf, sometimes two cows, up to three horses, and up to eight sheep, and several pigs.

If the number of calves owned exceeds the number of cows, the extra must be sold or slaughtered for beef. No one is allowed to sell or buy livestock on the open market.

The individual can raise a garden on his acre if he wishes, and will what he can from it, or he may lease it to others. If he wishes, this is left up to the peasant, according to the Russian plan, and some don't, they added, depending on whether the peasant thinks the garden worth the effort.

There are 42,000 collective farms in Russia, the average also being 7,500 acres. Peasants are free to leave the collective farm and go to the state farm or vice versa, the visitors said. Often this is done for economic reasons, principally by the wage earner who works on the state farm and wants to work on the collective farm.

Children of wage earners or peasants, they noted, must attend school for eight years, like everyone else.

In sugar beet production, the United States produces more than any other country in the world. They produce more than six million tons of refined white sugar per year, as against some 25 million tons produced in the U.S.

They plant 10 million acres of sugar beets each year, average yields on the experimental plots directed by Korbut were 17 tons, average yields in the U.S. are about 12 tons per acre, with a sugar content of approximately 10.5 per cent.

The Russians said they liked the possibilities of getting production from peeling seeds. They plant in 24-inch rows on dryland and in 24-inch rows under irrigation. Irrigation is carried out by means of a central Russian Canal.

They thin their beets mechanically and don't go in for spot-holed hands as all they do is the short-handled hoe.

They thin their beets when two true leaves have formed on the plant, and when it stands a few inches high. They use harrows with top-shod steel teeth, each one of six inches wide and about five or six inches long. The base of the harrow is about two inches long. The steel teeth are made so they have no vibration, and are made for Magic Valley sugar beets.

These harrows are dragged and then again from the other side of the field. The teeth rip through the soil, and the harrows cover others with dirt. This is often sufficient to thin the crop. If a few patches in a field are found that aren't thinned, the way of thinning the harrows will be used by the workers.

Because of the mechanization, the Russians said only six men are used to raise 375 acres of sugar beets and 1,000 acres of wheat. They compute their efficiency differently than we do, but by the way of yield in the U.S. in terms of yield.

The Russians said it takes six minutes labor to produce 100 pounds of sugar, in terms of counting the crop.

They also use fertilizers and herbicides on the crops.

The harvesters are considerably bulkier than American-made harvesters and their machines are made to pull the entire row in the ground and the green tops, out of the ground and into the machine.

The tops are cut on the harvester and then conveyed back into a hopper-bin on wheels that is towed behind the combine. The beets come off the side of the machine in a way similar to American harvester.

As the bin is filled with wet tops, it is tripped like a dump tender on a grain combine and then carried by other workers as fast as possible and brought to a large silage stack.

"We do not find economical to plow under the green tops," said the translator for the others. They find it more economical to feed the tops to sugar beets are planted on a nine-year rotation. Other crops in the rotation are alfalfa, corn, small grain, lupine, and oats and grasses.

They noted that American farmers are more impressively organized, and also highly mechanized. They said also the U.S. areas they had visited had more favorable climatic conditions for the harvesting of all crops.

As to the exchange program, they said they had exchanged with people for observing other methods of farming were useful to both countries. They said they were learning from the U.S. that they had methods in operation that could be useful to American farmers.

They had received nothing but a good welcome everywhere, and they added, "We would like very much to live in peace with the American people."

Names of the other Russians on the tour were Ivan Perovich Gudachenko, Gennadiy Dmitriyevich Petrov, Ivan Mikhailovich Ruzin and Petr Vasilievich Savich.

Continuing again in the various areas they have visited also assisted Murphy as escort.

Along Fence And Canal

By SAM D. ROSEN

A new processing plant built by J. R. Simplot in the province of Manitoba, according to some recent Canadian visitors, is out of production this year.

The visitors said the Canadian government made good offerings in the form of a loan to help processing plant near Winnipeg. However, the drought came this year, and the spud crop was unseasonably late.

Buyers for 4-H livestock at the late week were extremely slow, and the processors they gave to project students in the entire Bellevue-Cannett-Hillary areas.

Mrs. Vance (Doty) Agee, Mrs. Cliff (Pink) DeVaney, and Mrs. Elmer (Lo) Nelson all held a pot-veg week. The Los Angeles visitor, upon being asked about beef cows, opened his eyes in surprise. He said the situation became hilarious at times, as it will about cattle.

Gus Ketter was master of ceremony at the cattle feeder banquet which hosted the Canadian visitors one night this week. He soon had everyone laughing in the aisle. He lined up about everyone, including Mrs. E. E. (Mrs. E. E. E.) Armours, Otto Florens, Bill Grant, an overweight Canadian (saying must be a strong case with you, sir), Frank Shields, several others, and a young boy, a photographer, Mark Pomroy, and a speaker to the 116 Canadians.

Bob W. Pollard, formerly Elmbery, is an electrical working on the sliding operations and the weather.

Marian Nelson, Boise, snow supervisor for the soil conservation service, brought a copy of his entire speech for the recreation association meeting. He ended his speech stating that before another five years have passed there is a strong possibility floods will pour from heavy snow pack on the mountains. He is not predicting this for the coming year, though.

Pleasant people to meet recently were Mrs. Harvey Hall, Mrs. Clarence Kistner and Mrs. Corneal Lehman.

Clarence (Dad) Elquist, Oakley cattle rancher who has a way of playing with words, said he once ran some sheep. He has since decided, he said, that in the sheep industry you are either poor all the time or a pauper.

Jay Brodie, Nevada rancher, who also is brand inspector for cattle coming into Idaho and who owns 9,000 head of cattle now in Idaho from Nevada through him. Most of these are Idaho state to begin with.

Russell Lyons and his son, Tom Lyons, both Buhl, showed a keen interest in grasses last week. He was especially interested in seeing how created, white-tail and Siberian wheatgrass did against each other in the same field.

Question of Quality on 1961-Crop Is Reported Keeping Spud Prices Poor

The spud situation, so far as price is reported, is bad for growers in Idaho.

Some dealers are literally out of the market. If the price they have been offering is an indication, and a few deals of $1 per 100 field row have been made.

So far the crop is erratic in quality. Hugo Dasgostio, one of the managers at the J. R. Simplot's Idaho, has shown the Canadian visitors how weak many spuds in cellars and processing bins that showed good quality, many of them buried.

Many spuds south of Burley were yielding high and showing good quality. Other spuds in the same area were bad. North of the river in the Jerome-Hazelton area, W. O. Fritsch, county agent, said the quality is excellent.

However, other dealers in the area have had spuds come to their sorting-cellar that they had to turn back to processors. Fields with as little as 15 per cent more of the 1960 crop than they did in 1959 and about 40 per cent more than was used from the 1960 crop. If this trend continues, processors will take more of this year's crop than last year's. The diversion program that Idaho adopted Sept. 27 also will put a lot of spuds in the hands of starch manufacturers and feed operators.

All these the diversion program, processing increases, poor yields in some areas—may change the picture for spud growers in months to come.

Hot Weather to Halt Some Sugar Beet Harvesting

Warm weather this past week has put a halt to some harvesting of sugar beets in the Twin Falls area of the Annapalamed Sugar Company.

The company stopped receiving sugar beets Thursday noon at Twin Falls, Hansen and Murghau. Receiving stations where the price are not so large, or about non-existent, will remain "open for business."

Stations still open are at the west end of the county, Plering, Cedar, Peavey and King at Gooding, and the quality is good.

Pling of all sugar beets and receiving at all stations will resume Monday or Tuesday, depending on the sliding operations and the weather.

second. I didn't see Chacon until it was too late. My job is to look both ways. I didn't, and it cost me.

Berra was just as straightforward as Howard in owning up to a three-base error he committed in Wally Pate's eighth-inning liner.

"I didn't lose it in the sun," said Yogi, promptly ducking his head as he yanked the ball, that's all. It hit the end of my glove and bounced through my legs.

Berra then surprised most of his listeners by pointing out that this was the first time during world series competition that he has ever played left field at Yankee stadium.

Young Israeli Violinist Will Present Concert at Ketchum

KETCHUM, Oct. 6—Zvi Zeitlin, brilliant young violinist, will be the soloist for the Wood River Community concert at the Sun Valley-Ketchum LDS chapel Wednesday evening.

In February, the Israeli violinist makes his debut with the New York Philharmonic where he performed the rarely heard and extremely difficult violin concerto by Stravinsky.

After the second half of his American tour, he will make his European debut with orchestral, recital and radio engagements in all the important concert centers of England and the continent.

ZVI ZEITLIN

Official community concert officials point out Zeitlin is now the "owner" of a new violin concerto, especially commissioned for him by the American-Israeli Cultural Foundation from the noted Israeli composer, Paul Ben-Haim.

The unique mark of recognition was given to an artist of rare ability and exceptional attainments whose life has been as colorful as his violin playing. Zeitlin left Russia with his family at the age of 2 and received his early training in Israel. During the war he was with the British Royal Air Force. After the war he returned to the U. S. where he had studied before the war, and continued his work on a scholarship at the Juillard school of music.

In 1954 Zeitlin returned to Israel and was given a hero's welcome after his appearance with the Israel Philharmonic and in recitals throughout the country.

He has done much to further the cause of Israel music by giving premiere performances of the outstanding works of his country's leading composers. In recognition of this service, the violinist was presented the American-Israeli Society music award last October.

After his concert Wednesday evening, Wood River Community Concert patrons will have an opportunity to meet Zeitlin at an informal gathering to be held in the balcony dining room of the Christiania restaurant.

Rights Law Not Valid, Two Say

BOZEMAN, Oct. 6 (AP)—Two attorneys argued yesterday that Idaho's new civil rights law is invalid, unconstitutional and in direct conflict with other laws.

The attorneys represented Mrs. Erma Salt, an Alameda tavern owner charged with violating the civil rights law by refusing service to a Negro July 22.

Justices of the Peace F. Don Battiste took the matter under advisement and gave attorneys for both sides 10 days to file briefs.

On the Cover

The looks of determination on the faces of our cover subjects this week emphasize the earnestness with which the girls in this year's practice and play football.

Fred Snow, 12, son of Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Snow and Glenn Donson, 12, son of Mr. and Mrs. Jack Donson, are wrapped up in the game as they practice for an upcoming football encounter for the Lion club team in flag football.

Rarin' to Go

Tanned and trim, Dinah Shore, starts her 1961-62 season Friday night on the NBC network. Her 1960-61 season's shows weren't up to par, but hopes they'll be better this season. (Staff engraving)

Dinah Shore Is Ready for Initial Show

BURBANK, Calif., Oct. 6—Tennis-tanned and trim, with a long vacation behind her, Dinah Shore is ready to start the tough season with her first show Friday night.

"It looks like a good year," she said, dropping into the plush leather couch in her office in NBC's Burbank administration building.

"I wasn't too happy with last season's shows. They got better toward the end, but the early ones weren't too good. Something was missing and I think we found it this year."

"This year, we're back in stride. Everyone on the staff is a boss. Everyone has ideas, everyone criticizes. We all respect each other and we're all working toward the same goal."

"Sometimes you have to stop being a corporation and remember you're a performer," she says, aware that live shows mean a tremendous loss of revenue to her in the form of residuals for repeat telecasts.

"I cut down from last year's 26 shows to only seven new ones this year. Three others will be repeats."

Wells Fargo Plans Girls, Girls, Girls

HOLLYWOOD, Oct. 6 (AP)—There'll be girls, girls, girls on TV's "Wells Fargo" show this season, it was announced today.

Robertson's show down fight against the theory that cowboys prefer horses.

"We didn't agree on too many things," said Robertson, "but I think, 'and I could let him go but he couldn't let me go.' It's abnormal for any man that's supposed to be a man to go weak after week with no feminine companionship—the pioneer west included."

"I've done it for five years and it's unreal—it's unbelievable."

Robertson, 35, is independent and straight-talking. Once, after costarring with Clint Lockebrida in a movie, he said he didn't think she was beautiful.

"The way you produce and writers paint even barnmaids in westerns," he said, "why, they're all virtual and jolly-white. Lot of hokey."

"The West was opened up largely because women had to do it and came along on the trip. Those women had to have something really compelling to do this—what they did. We plan to show it on our show."

With the Oklahoma City-born actor more directly at the helm, the NBC series has several other market changes.

It is lengthened from a half hour to an hour—and unlike other performers who refuse to have costars, he wants them.

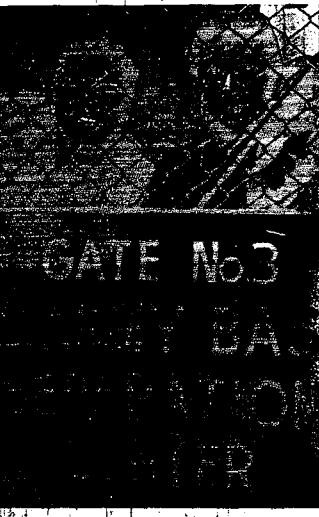

"If people like chicken," he said, "the best way to make 'em quit liking it is to show more chicken at 'em every time they open their mouths. Every time they tune in 'Wells Fargo' they only my face. Now we have others. And in color, too."

And he's been viewed from all sides in night clubs and on television.

But Berman insists he isn't any more prismatic than anyone else.

"I'm a man. I'm married, careerwise, I'm a performer. I'm a man. I'm married, careerwise, I'm a performer. I'm a man. I'm married, careerwise, I'm a performer."

They're Civilians Again

Dwayne Hickman, left, who stars as Dobie, and Bob Denver, who portrays his boss, pal, Maynard Krebs, are civilians again as the "Dobie Gillis" comedy series starts its third season on the CBS Television Network Tuesday. (Staff engraving)

Berman Has His Many Sides

HOLLYWOOD, Oct. 6 (AP)—Comedian Shelley Berman is a man of many sides.

After displaying "The New Sides of Shelley Berman" on a cross-country summer theater tour, he now is appearing here in the musical, "Guys and Dolls."

"Where I might claim any uniqueness is in being classified as a specialist in my work. If this is true, then I want it to be recognized, because this is where the satisfaction comes—in doing something that belongs only to me."

Macdonnell is a blue-eyed, gray-haired, gray-mustachioed rump and television veteran who could easily pass as a matinee idol himself.

"After all, Marshall Dillon, Chester, Kitty and Doc are exactly strangers," Macdonnell observes.

He went on to explain some of the things that viewers could expect on the new hour-long "Gunsmoke," starring Jim Aronson as Marshall Dillon, Dennis Weaver as Chester, Amanda Blake as Kitty and Milburn Stone as Doc.

"The one-hour form will allow greater plot and character development, but will not result in unnecessary plot complications," Macdonnell said.

"Many times in the 30-minute show, we necessarily had to speed up development to get the story told within the allotted time. With another 30 minutes, character relationships will be developed more."

Macdonnell was quick to add that the writers were not taking 30-minute scripts and padding them to fill up an additional 30 minutes.

Familiarity With Types of Fasteners Can Make Home Workers' Job Easier

One of the most annoying jobs of the home handyman is that of fastening objects to masonry or plaster.

Very often a person who is used to working with wood or metal do-it-yourself activity will come a cropper when he has to make an attachment to a concrete or plaster wall.

Sometimes, the difficulty is caused by lack of familiarity with the many types of fasteners on the market rather than by lack of skill. There are literally dozens of types of fasteners available but most of them fit into one of the categories we will discuss here.

For concrete, an excellent fastener is a masonry anchor. Similar in appearance, these are hollow receptacles which are inserted into holes in concrete. The holes are drilled into the concrete, either with a power drill with a carbide tipped bit or with a star drill.

When a screw or special bolt is inserted into the shield or anchor, the receptacle expands, firmly gripping itself inside the concrete. In making the hole in the concrete, it is important that it be slightly smaller—one sixteenth of an inch—than the shield or anchor. If you have done the job right, the shield or anchor will fit very snugly.

There is plastic anchor which operates on the same principle as the metal anchor, but which usually is intended for use in installations. Masonry nails also can be used. These are hammered into the concrete and sometimes require plenty of sheer power. The nails are inclined to bend under the hammering unless they first are inserted into the object being fastened, such

Now Is Time To Check up For Roofing

An inspection of the roof is a must before the beginning of the winter season. Many of the water seepage may cause damage.

Flaws and cracks in the roof are among the principal causes of permanent injury to the roof structure. Fraying and peeling of the roof surface to the sun will often cause a roof to become dry and porous, and moisture penetration changes are a factor in the curling of roof shingles.

Some of the danger signs to look for are these:

Actress Says Early Rising Key for Pep

HOLLYWOOD, Oct. 6 (AP)—Rapidly hurried, hectic and harassed, Dr. Rosalind Wiseman has the solution.

It's astonishingly simple: Get up a half-hour early in the morning.

"This year she is hurrying through three divorce and difficult film roles in the role of One's "Five Finger Exercise" and "Cryer." She plays a Jewish mother, a five-letter female and a voracious stage mother, respectively, and she'll have to dance and belt songs as the latter.

She still manages to maintain civil work, a writing career and a career as a mother to her husband Freddie Brison and their son Lance, 18.

"I normally would," she explains, "be up by 5:30, but I have a different that makes. The morning is a peaceful time, and you have a chance to think over the whole day. You can have a relaxing and sizable breakfast, which is very important for getting you through the day."

Mower Must Be "Winterized", too

There are a great many things that you can do to prevent your power mower for winter storage, but only a few that you must do. A clogged fuel line and stale gas are the two enemies of your mower if it is not properly stored over the winter. So everything you do should be aimed at combating these dangers.

Drain Gas First
Clean out the gas completely drained from tank, carburetor and fuel lines. If left in, much of it will evaporate, leaving behind a gummy substance that will make starting the engine difficult at best.

If the tank is almost empty you can run the mower dry. Just start it and let it run until it stops by itself.

Some tanks can be disconnected and drained. There also is a hole at the base of the carburetor for the purpose of draining it. Check the owner's manual for proper procedure.

Preventing rust is simply a matter of cleaning and oiling. Clean away all grass clippings. Check for rust, especially on the shaft on reel type mowers. Clippings can pile up on the underside of a rotary mower.

Sharpening Necessary
A thickening of grass, dirt and clippings will build up on the blades. Edges often pick up an accumulation of hardened dirt. Wash with an jet-washer or wipe all metal parts. Grease should be applied to the cutting edge of the blades.

Lubricating the inside of the engine is accomplished by removing the spark plug and pouring a teaspoon of clean oil into the opening. Turn the engine over several times (do this by hand) to distribute the oil. Wipe off the oil with a rag. Then replace the spark plug.

Wrap the mower base and engine in heavy paper, cardboard or an old blanket. Do not have the wheels in direct contact with the ground. A couple of layers of paper should be placed under the wheels.

In the spring you can place the mower on a lawn. Clean the blades by removing the plug, sharpening the carburetor by pulling out the spark cord.

These are the things you must do. In addition you may want to do a few things to make the wintering process easier. Do the things now and you'll have a better spring.

There are a few things that must be done if you expect your power mower to last and get your money worth. Be sure these things are done before your mower is stored for the winter.

It is not necessary for proper cold weather storage. Preparations for proper storage do not take long and can extend the life of your mower many seasons. If a lawn mower deteriorates, it does so in the winter when it is not in use, more easily than in the summer.

When it is being used several times a week.

For Buying Sweater Use These Hints
URBANA, Ill., Oct. 6 (AP) — Check for these points in a good sweater, advises Rosemary Bowman, University of Illinois home economist:
Is the sweater full fashioned? In trade jargon, this term means knit to order. Full fashioned sweaters generally fit better and keep their shape longer than sweaters cut and sewn from knit fabric. Check the armholes for full fashioned marks, which result from changing the stitches from needle to needle. Don't confuse them with mock fashion marks, which are stamped on cheap sweaters.
Is the knit firm and close? This indicates better quality than a loose, lumpy knit.
Is the ribbing firm, yet elastic? Generally, stitches in the ribbing should be tighter than stitches in the body of the sweater. Neck ribbing which has been knitted onto the sweater is more desirable than ribbing which has been sewn on.
Are the seams straight, flat and smooth? Look for sweaters with modern seams on both sides only one underarm seam are apt to sag. Check out seams too, particularly if you ever have the cuffs. Be sure there is no bulky, lumpy seam.

Forecasts Made About Children
NEW YORK, Oct. 6 (AP) — Children will be favored to rely more on each other than on adults for working out many of their problems, The Hugh Downs Morgan reports.
The director of the Institute for Child Study, University of Maryland, also told the New York state council for children that even now children learn more from each other than grownups ever can hope to teach them.

GAINE IN POPULARITY
"Rock" wood, which has shown tremendous gains in popularity in recent years, is now being used in a variety of ways. It is used to make away but is now being used for interior paneling because of its "warm" look.

Knowledge Is Useful When Setting Table

CHICAGO, Oct. 6 (AP) — To set a beautiful table takes a knowledge of what goes with what in china, silver, glass and linen.

Here are some of the basics: For a safe and sure combination, use all plain elements — silver, china and glass. This doesn't rule out using antique silver or glassware with modern china or vice versa, the experts advise, so long as all patterns are comparatively plain, deriving their beauty from line and form. To relieve the austerity of a plain table, use a bright colored tablecloth or china.

Include one plain element in an elaborate setting. For example, try plain silver with elaborately patterned floral or pictorially plain, deriving their beauty from line and form. To relieve the austerity of a plain table, use a bright colored tablecloth or china.

Repeat pattern, but not too often. Too much of the same thing.

Stick Around If You Enjoy Plastic Chair

NEW YORK, Oct. 6 (AP) — Getting to like plastic chairs that look tubular, tortured or like discarded mannequins.

Then stick around. The next decade or two are for you.

John Van Koert, one of the country's eminent designers, predicts new shapes, forms and functions in furniture in the next 10 to 15 years, dictated by kinds of material available.

Fine woods are disappearing, he points out, and in a few years furniture will be made of plastic or metal, with wood used only for decorative purposes.

The whole domestic architecture will be different, says Van Koert. "Rooms will not be bedrooms, dining rooms and so forth, as we know them. People will live all over a house, which will be subdivided according to needs. There will be no dead areas. Everything will be more convertible."

Kay Starr Is Resting Easy In Las Vegas

LAS VEGAS, Oct. 6 (AP) — Kay Starr rests easily today atop her own intense little world of song. The scramble upward was far from simple.

"I worked hard all my life," said the husky-voiced brunette. "Now I enjoy the nice things." The constant hard-core girl from Dougherty, Okla., used to go cat-fishing with her cousins.

Since then she's owned a 72-foot schooner. She lives in a lovely home in a fashionable West Los Angeles hill community. The bar is stocked with Scotch at $8 a bottle.

"Two new Lincolns—one tan, the other black — sit in the drive. She made one previous movie, "Because You're Young" in which she played a character with the same affable nature she displays naturally on his show.

But in "The Young Doctors" he is called on to portray a personality his fans have never seen before. In the drama, his wife gives birth to a baby whose life is threatened by a rare disease.

"I work night clubs three times a year," she said, "once at Lake Tahoe, twice at the Sahara hotel in Las Vegas."

"If I can keep my records going and do three top television shows a year, I don't really need any more."

"Ideal" Tag for Marriages of Movie Stars Often Result of Early Talking

HOLLYWOOD, Oct. 6 (AP)—The divorce action of Robert Clooney against Jose Ferrer leads one to believe there is no such thing as an accident marriage, especially in Hollywood. In movietown a marriage is ideal if it lasts six weeks.

Such "ideal" marital combinations as Robert Wagner-Natalie Wood and Rhonda Fleming-Lang Jeffries also came apart at the seams in recent weeks.

The trouble with movie stars is they feel compelled to shoot off their big mouths about how wonderful marriage is the day after the honeymoon week (later they tell anyone who will listen what a great little woman, or what a terrific husband they have found).

Two weeks later, when they've settled down in their cozy little mansions with crochets growing at the side of their swimming pool, they make the ultimate pronouncement.

"This is the ideal marriage," they announce in unison.

"We will both continue our careers, but still devote most of our time to one another. Yes, we plan to have children, too." The actor, however, returns one day to 25 years, the announcement comes that this particular heavenly marriage is on the rocks like a dry martini—which, incidentally, speeds along many an idea wedlock to the lull-smith.

Frequently one or both parties, through gritted teeth, tell the world that their divorce will be a friendly, almost gladsoot occasion. Why Not? After all, "We are civilized people."

This news generally is accompanied by a quote which goes, "We are still on good terms. He (or she) is a wonderful person whom I respect a great deal. But our careers came between us, keeping us apart."

In most cases the "apartness" is very real. Usually the wife was working in Hollywood while the hubby was off to darkest Africa. Any marriage counselor will tell you this arrangement works a hardship on the happiest of married folk.

The rest of the world war, and does laugh at the insane divorce rate among celluloid kings and

"West Side Story" Cost Money, but Rates Raves

HOLLYWOOD, Oct. 6 (AP)—For the superlatively-minded, "West Side Story" is the most expensive musical film ever made. It's also one of the best.

How can the brothers Mirisch spend six million dollars on a musical? Especially one with a single expensive star — Natalie Wood at $250,000?

Take a high-priced stage property. Add a year's preparation with top talent — $250,000 on screen tests alone. Rehearse for three months. Shoot for half a year. Do it in color, stereo sound, and 70 millimeter film. The bill mounts.

Profit or no, the film version was worth the chance. There has never been greater dancing on the screen. Number after number stirred Hollywood pretenses to applause.

The theme seems forbidding for a musical. It is the story of a power clash between a native New York City gang and another of Puerto Rican newcomers. Two lovers, one from each side, are caught in the middle.

"West Side Story" is really a dance opera. The powerful dances of Jerome Robbins and the highly charged music of Leonard Bernstein are perfect for the milling and rumbling of the New York gangs.

But the device has its drawbacks, especially in dramatic moments. When the brother and sweetheart, or the leading actresses is killed, the girls break into a duet. Credibility is strained.

Otherwise you're with the warring Jets and Sharks all the way, fascinated with their animal energy and appalled by their violence. Robert Wise, as producer and co-director, has done a fine job of holding the story together.

"West Side Story" is a star-making film. Natalie Wood, disappearing as Mariette Morris, comes through as a top dramatic actress. Richard Beymer is her ill-starred lover in an engaging and effective; he'll be around for a long time.

Russ Tamblyn is tough and gymnastic, and Rita Moreno does her best work to date. George Chakiris, leader of the Puerto Rican gang, is a real find. He's got star quality.

The film has one jarring note. The law is represented by a gorilla-like cop and a detective who is brutal and biased. This adds nothing to the plot and only underlines the gangs' belief the law is worthy of contempt.

Television Notebook

NEW YORK, Oct. 6 (AP)—Comedian Groucho Marx will play his first serious dramatic role in a "General Electric Theater" show to be filmed for presentation on the CBS program early next year. In "The Holdout," Groucho will portray an attorney whose 17-year-old daughter insists on marrying her college sweetheart. The father thinks the whole idea impractical and tries to make the youngsters wait.

The animation for NBC's new "bullwinkle" cartoon show Sunday nights is all done in Mexico City, where Jay Ward and Bill Scott, who head the producing firm, settled a couple of years back to turn out other animated programs. Reasons for the move from Hollywood (that was largely economic, for it was cheaper to do such work there. "Now," explained Scott, "even if we wanted to move our growing organization back to Hollywood, it wouldn't be advisable. Because of the increase in animated shows on TV in the last two years, there just aren't enough animators in Hollywood to go around most of the time. Our Mexican animators are exclusive to us."

CBS, which started the season with a most modest program of "specials" and didn't seem to be much interested in that field, has suddenly added a sign of four. They will be irregularly scheduled one-hour dramatizations of famous literary works adapted under the title, "Golden Showcase." The first will be based on Oscar Wilde's "The Picture of Dorian Gray," and it will be on the air at 8:30 p.m. Dec. 6. Top-drawer production and actor, of course.

Shaggy Dog Now Biggest Canine Star

A little Skye terrier by the name of Tam O'Shanter is this year's "Cinderella" of dogdom. He's a little ball of fur about the size of a lady's muff. Like the rest of his breed and all of his firsi cousins, he has mischievous eyes whenever you can see them through his waterfall of hair — an inquisitive nose and a tail that's perpetually dancing.

As an Englishman, he looks like a Yorkshire terrier. To an Australian, he could be anything but a Sydney Silky. But a Scotland man knows him for what he really is — a descendant of the smaller canines from the Isle of Skye.

Such is the star of Walt Disney's Technicolor production, "Greyfriars Bobby." Less than a year ago he was a stray roaming the streets of Oban in the

Maureen O'Hara Disgusted, Resigned to Daughter's Job

HOLLYWOOD, Oct. 6 (AP) — Maureen O'Hara and Danny Thomas recently in the corridors of St. John's hospital.

"Why did we let them do it?" wailed Danny. The reason for his lament: Both his daughter, Maureen, and Maureen's daughter, Brownwyn, are making their debuts in show business.

Reported Maureen: "Danny got so worked up about it that the rains had to come out and shoo him."

She herself is disappointed but resigned to Brownwyn's decision. "Ah, me!" Maureen sighed. "Where have I failed?"

"Knowing the heartbreaks, the pitfalls, the dangers of the acting life, a mother naturally wants to shield her daughter from them."

Maureen seems able to handle them. At 17 she is a strong-minded, determined, burn-haired version of her tilian-tressed mother. She knows what she wants.

"To be an actress," she declared at her Bel-Air home. "Not for the glamor of it; that never appealed to me. I want to do things that require some depth and understanding, not just anything. I won't play in acting unless I can do that."

She is starting modestly. Her first professional role is as a sorority girl in a "Bachelor Party" sequence over ABC next week.

"I would have had the bigger role in the story except for one thing," Brownwyn said. "I can't really complain about the reason. The producer said I couldn't play a witch."

Adventure Show Starting Friday

HOLLYWOOD, Oct. 6 — "Straightaway," a new, half-hour action-adventure series depicting the fortunes of two young ex-marines who are partners in an automobile customizing shop, premieres with "The Leather Dollar," Friday.

Co-starring are Brian Kelly as Scott Ross and John Ashley as Clipper Hamilton, who own the Straightaway, their garage in suburban Los Angeles, where their paths cross those of interesting, auto-minded people.

"Straightaway" dramatizes the exploits of the people that Scott and Clipper meet while pursuing their automotive trade.

In "No Exit," newspaper columnist Pat Garrison falls in love with Mona Penion, daughter of wealthy politician Mark Penion. Garrison finds himself in danger when an effort to ruin her association with gangster Hank Harrison in an effort to ruin her father's chances for election as governor.

Selecting Carpet Is Rugged Task

If the purchase of carpeting looms as the Mt. Everest of your home furnishings this fall, get ready for a tough struggle. When word leaks out you've scraped together the down payment for a new carpet, the telephone shrills a stream of calls from carpet salesmen seeking appointments.

Friends drop in, hinting at your incompetence to handle anything as major as buying a carpet without the detailed guidance and decorating skill and textile chemistry know-how.

Major factors influencing carpet choice, according to Miss Anne Mason, decorating consultant for a major carpet company, are budgets, personal color preferences, and housework considerations.

Miss Mason says that today's homemaker has almost too many choices confronting her in fiber and texture, all of which have their own advantages. Some are more durable, some more soil-resistant, some more easily cleaned, some more suitable in certain rooms.

With the almost endless variety of styles and fibers, decide how you want the carpet to perform before you buy and explain the requirements to a reliable carpet dealer. For instance, many make the mistake of selecting a plush carpet for a family room where heavy traffic can be expected. Such a carpet is more suitable for rooms with light traffic; a bedroom, for example. Be specific about carpet needs, Anne Mason tells you.

Color Is Important
Color is another factor. Bright, cheerful colors, introduced the last couple of years, including the lavenders, bright blues, and emerald greens—have been well received. For a room you notice that we are taking great interest in the new, patterned carpets being made this year.

Patterned carpet will be more effective in a medium or large room with plain walls. Other fabrics in the room do not have to be solid colors.

In the best traditional decorating, a number of patterns were used together. Scale is the key. If the pattern is large, fabric motifs should be much smaller. In a formal room, a traditional stripe of two colors in even width, or a self-toned damask will blend well with the patterned carpet.

Patterned carpets blend well with traditional furniture. They combine with other fabric patterns. This Virginia floral carpet could pair with stripes, small-scale floral print or self-toned damask in draperies, silk covers or upholstery.

On My Own Time

By BOB HARTLEY

In addition to the excellent musical entertainment in Sun Valley's Duetman room, Republicans at their recent meeting were treated to a change of pace by two guests. Richard Nixon presided over a "closed meeting" of "The Midwest Writers" after mentioning that someone would "speak" time. Then Gov. Robert E. Smylie took over and sang through his rendition of "Mack the Knife." Those attending agreed it was "refreshing," but they feared someone would yell "One more time!"

It goes into its second year and there has been for the Homecoming Show a great deal of activity. The group will feature folk music, guitar and artwork from the Homecoming artists. So-called "The Finn Gander" afternoon and first over to the National Show.

Bob Hartley's broken-down mind will make it's TV series debut Wednesday on NBC-TV in the first of weekly monologues, music or comedy bits by the popular comedian. He's throwing himself into the "series" of TV, something other comedians were doing. He's been backed away from. The chief risk, it is thought, is two-hour, but it hasn't hurt Red Skelton and Bob Hope and it doesn't seem to bother Hartley. If his show is as good as his reputation, he'll be a big winner.

Cotton Corduroy Pops up Everywhere For Both Casual and Dress Functions

Increased leisure time and disposable income during the past decade have gradually erased the dividing line between sportswear and dresswear in men's clothing.

This fact has brought cotton corduroy into the limelight both for casual and dress occasions. This fall you'll find it popping up everywhere. Outercoats are lined with it. Jackets and jackets check sport coats and jackets are made of it. There are country coats, suburban coats, car coats, sport shirts and dot-broasted blazers, all in corduroy.

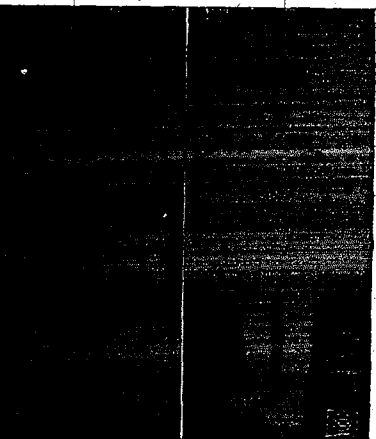

There's a whole gamut of colors—honey, loden, gold, beige, brown, red, blue, charcoal, black, dark green and antique. If it isn't too too conservative, and hasn't yet developed too many bulges, he might even want to try the new "tiger" shade.

Although solids will be predominant, there will also be prints, plaids and plaids for the more adventurous male. The conservative or common country is one larger to the fact that it wears well and is perfectly suited to the British look so favored this fall.

The dressier attire will be in the narrow waist, while the sportier, outdoor garments, will lean more toward wide waist.

As home the cotton corduroy is the narrow waist, cotton corduroy suit in the increasingly popular two-button style. And when worn in with a contrasting, six-button vest, it's a gem of sartorial splendor.

Cardigan Sweater Isn't New, It's 100 Years Old

BY WALTER LOGAN
NEW YORK, Oct. 6 (AP)—The seventh Earl of Cardigan, a wild and unpopular military figure who held 17 courts martial and made more than 700 arrests within two years after the famous "Charge of the Light Brigade" in Britain's 15th Hussars, was a man of fashion.

He won a certain amount of fame in the Crimea war back in 1851 when the light brigade charged into the mouth of the Russ in canyon and he was the first to reach the Russian lines. Some of that fame has rubbed off in an unusual way and today, when one thinks of a Cardigan, one thinks of a sweater.

Due to the terrible winter of 1854 and the siege of Sevastopol, Lord Cardigan kept himself warm by wearing a wool sweater that buttoned up the front. It got to be called a cardigan.

The Baron Field Marshal Raglan, commander of British troops in the Crimea war and Cardigan's boss, also contributed to the sweater and other clothing ideas. He had lost an arm at Waterloo and his familiar silhouette with tucked in sleeve gave rise to the term raglan for a sleeve constructed without shoulder seams.

Sweaters have come a long way since then. 100,000,000 of them were manufactured last year alone. Some of them were knitted in the United States and the rest were various forms of silvers ranging from the thin rolling sweater to see a knuckle through to heavy knit wool.

The Earl of Cardigan's cardigan was a mousety old thing which kept out the wintry blasts from the steppes but wasn't much for looks. Since then there has been a color explosion and the sweater has become the one article of men's clothing where anything goes.

A single wool sweater "marbles" four or five colors together in unheeded combinations and they sell like hotcakes. Bulky wool knits have bright colored stripes that can be seen a mile away. Brilliant orange is a new idea, and can be seen even farther.

And now there are even men's side buttoned sweaters patterned after fencing costumes. There also is a sleek, shooting sweater with suede triangles for the gun resting department.

News About Stamps

History and art are the hand-maidens of postage stamps. This is most evident with the recent issue of three new stamps from the Republic of China.

The stamps are the latest in the series showing Chinese art treasures. There were three previous stamp releases (the first on Aug. 4, 1960) totaling 12 stamps. Thus there are now 16 in the set and all are available at your local stamp dealer. The latest three illustrate a porcelain washer,

Jade tankard and jade chimera. A timely note is that the art treasures seen on these stamps are now on exhibition at the Metropolitan Museum of Art in New York City and will remain on exhibit there until Nov. 1. Rarely shown outside China, these precious objects were once housed in the Peiping palace and are now preserved in the underground vaults on Peking. The collection dates back to the Manchu dynasty and spans some over the 1961 book. It contains more than 10,000 entries, 170 illustrations and of prime interest to collectors—5,500 price changes showing an upward market trend. Included are all U. S. commemoratives, regular issues, duck stamps, postal savings, revenue, a revised section on postal cards, postal stationery, Confederate stamps, U. S. possessions, administrative areas plus all the stamps of the United Nations.

Packing Classes in Order for Mobile Public

If the figures about the mobility of the American family are accurate, moving and unpacking household goods might be an annual event for those in fancy cooking and how to make slip covers.

According to various sources, one family in five moves every year. This year, ours was one of those families.

Care Save Time

Unless you are one of the fortunates whose move will be assisted by professional packing services, even a sketched knowledge of correct packing procedure can save time, money and breakage.

Some of the advice from a major long-distance household moving firm could include the springs and fall packing of clothing and seasonal items.

Their first point, for example, is to be sure your cartons and containers are sturdy enough to take the van trip, the handling and loading, unloading and unloading.

Sturdy cartons may be obtained from the movers.

Be sure to check bottoms to see that flaps are taped and glued, stapled or strongly taped. Loose, torn or thin flaps may give way when you load the box.

Pack Compactly

Pack cartons as compactly as possible. Press newspaper or other suitable material gently but firmly around each article. Tape corners or the securely with strong cord.

Whether for a move or for seasonal storage, place the heaviest articles in the bottom of cartons, lightest on top. Pairs or sets of articles, parts of the same article and articles which are used together should be packed in the same container.

However, articles which could damage others, even when well cushioned, shouldn't be packed in the same container. For example, don't squeeze porcelain and toaster in with the heavy skillets.

If at all possible, group articles from the same room in the same container, advise the profes-

Moving? There are right—and wrong—ways to pack. At left, wrong way to pack pictures in between layers of sheets and towels. Right way: Wrap and pack on edge so frames help protect pictures. At right, correct way to pack kitchenware: Homeowner places heavy skillet wrapped in newspaper on bottom of carton; lighter utensils, wrapped individually, go on top of it.

His Tie Can Be Clue for Your Future

Girls, ever wish that you could read tell a book by the cover as fast as men are concerned?

Wouldn't it be interesting if you could get real insight into the character of every man you met, whether he be boyfriend, father-in-law, show salesman, neighbor? As for male acquaintances, such as an insight on the first date would squelch a lot of letters to the Loveline column.

All of this may not be wishful thinking according to the Men's Tie foundation which, in honor of National Tie Week, has issued several guide rules to help discerning females judge the man in their lives by their taste in neckwear.

First of all, the foundation suggests that you pay particular attention to the type of knot the man ties. A long, large, slovenly knot probably denotes a shifty, untrustworthy gent.

Wooden Fallout Shelters Are Okayed for Use by Populace

The new Government-inspired interest in fallout shelters has produced millions of words and hundreds of working drawings of many different types and shapes of these protective retreats.

Materials used in fallout shelter construction include steel, reinforced concrete and concrete block and brick, among others. Wood has been pretty well ignored because of concern over its resistance to moisture and insects when used underground. There also have been reservations about its value in resistance to fallout.

Now, however, the office of civil and defense mobilization has approved a new series of wooden fallout shelters, produced after almost two years of engineering research by the Douglas Fir Plywood Association, an industry organization.

There are three models to be built underground, above ground and in existing basements. All three exceed the requirements for protection against fallout. They meet the office's home resistance to moisture and insects, the particular being listed in the "basement" resistance category.

All three models are made of standard sizes of exterior-type plywood, which is waterproof, and ordinary lumber available at any lumber yard. However, materials used for the underground shelter must be pressure treated against decay.

This model is completely assembled above ground and then lowered into an excavation. Earth is then backfilled around the block and brick, among others loaded on top. The shelter has been tested to prove that it will resist a 10-foot head of water and the blast of a 20-megaton nuclear bomb; it also will afford protection against the heaviest fallout.

Each of the wooden shelters is large enough to accommodate six people for the two weeks recommended by OCPM. Plans include directions for installing venting equipment that can be operated by electricity or by hand.

It is felt that the models for above ground and in existing basements can be constructed by the average home handyman, with the underground model requiring a higher degree of skill.

Measuring Is First Step Before Buying Furniture

When you take the measure of your home, do it with a carpenter's rule and a reliable steel tape. Guessing how long on kitchen curtain length, the depth of lamp shades, or the height of a break-front bookcase, or the length of a sofa, is a familiar source of disappointment when the guess proves wrong.

You know how you stumble upon an unadvertised sale in a store and take a chance on it rather than miss the bargain?

On a big-ticket item, like a chest of upholstered furniture, it is simple folly to buy unless you know the dimensions of the space (particularly wall space) it will occupy.

If you really want to be well-organized for autumn shopping, you'll keep a record of key measurements in your purse, along with steel tapes to check on size.

If you're hunting for a sofa, measure the overall length, not just the length between the insides of the arms.

When you browse for bookcases, break fronts or similar tall boys, take into account your ceiling height. The high-rising pediment tops of some traditionally-styled pieces (new or antique) make them a tight squeeze in a low-ceilinged room.

Unhappily, the experts aren't reckoning with the changing nature of household miscellany and the disorderly way some of you cram things into any free space.

But you can come closer to

FOOD FACTS

From Leo Soran

Do you remember the nursery rhyme about "Four and Twenty blackbirds baked in a pie?"

You may have thought of a common committed poetic license with this one, but the story has good historical background. It happened at one of the royal parties in England where the birds were imprisoned in a huge pie. When the pie was opened, the birds began to fly up and out of their prison only to be caught in the air by the king's falcons. Dinner guests of that day felt this was the all-time high in entertainment and cheered the king for his thoughtfulness.

Here's How

Everyone talks about the closet shortage. Few go anything about it.

But if your problem is the lack of closets, don't just sit and grumble, MacGee.

Build them yourself.

Or have them built.

Or buy them ready-made.

Many modern houses are little more advanced than America's first houses—a roof over some rooms. Builders include a few extra closets in higher-priced homes, on the theory that only people who can afford to buy expensive homes use many closets.

So you're faced with doing it yourself.

Lop off part of a room if need be and install a ready-made closet for ever-increasing paraphernalia. You'll be so happy with the results that you won't miss the space forfeited.

If your family is sports minded, so are more families are these days, equip your home to accommodate your equipment. No more running to the garage for water skis, skis, snowboard and equipment for outdoor sports.

Collect the tennis rackets, skis, golf clubs, fishing rods, reels,

Working hobbies—such as typing and sewing—if stored in the living room, should have their equipment stored in that room. A closet possibility for typewriter and sewing machine is to build a wooden chest out from one wall, perhaps under a window, covering the lid with cushioning. You can vary this, of course, substituting drawers for top-opening chest. Both make a nice window seat.

Couples who are Saturday night bridge or poker players need a store card tables. Look around for something nearby to slip them under or behind. One suggestion—open a trap door under the shallow end of your stairway. They'll slide in there, and you possibly may find room to store a set of folding chairs as well.

Dog Might Eat, But He's Cheap

NEW YORK, Oct. 6 (AP)—The family canine might eat you out of house and home but he's worth the expense. He's a cheap form of psychotherapy.

Dr. Boris Levinson of Yeshiva University's Psychological center reports that the House pet—particularly the dog—is more important to man psychologically than in any other way.

He says the dog helps humans to fill needs for loyalty, trust, respect, obedience, and submission.
