NATIONAL WHIRLIGIG

You Could Be in the Red Sea

(James Free will answer readers' questions on national and international politics and personalities each Sunday in the "National Whirligig" column. Send questions to James Free, c/o Washington Times, 1100 Pennsylvania Ave., N.W., Washington, D.C.)

By JAMES AND ANN FREE
WASHINGTON, Jan. 27 (The Republicans say they intend to open 1962 notes A. B. of Kansas, Pa. He observes that most GOP members of congress are poor mung and are planning to fight the Kennedy bill for health care for the aged.

My mind was crowded with memories of the January meeting of the Republican national committee in Oklahoma City on the long plane ride back to Washington. From my seat next to me were three other men who were there throughout the session. I had read the practical instruction necessary to these men's presence. I read the news papers and the National Chairman Miller and my friend Wilson of the congressional campaign committee had said. And by my own part had indulged in the usual accepted partisan invective.

Political Potatoes

Whatever happens in the way of federal controls for potatoes will involve plenty of politics. Undoubtedly, other states that have been plugging away for controls as a means of stealing a good portion of Idaho's markets will use politics to help achieve their aim. But Idaho also is using its political pressure can be brought to bear.

Sen. Frank Church urged President Kennedy not to make potato acreage controls a part of the administration farm program. He got no commitment other than a suggestion for further consultations on the matter. Idahoans will have to wait for President's farm program message Tuesday to see what the administration thinks about potato acreage controls.

The glimmer of hope raised by Senator Church is his belief that Idaho's case against controls is strong. He intends to continue pressing his case as I can for Idaho's interests.

It goes without saying that Democrat Church has a far better chance of influencing Democrat Kennedy and Democrat Freeman than Republican Dworshak or Republican Smylie would have.

Senator Church sums up the Idaho case in his own words. "Idaho is going to be tough since nearly every other potato-growing state appears to favor a control program."

"Now does anyone actually believe the potato control decision will be free of politics?"

CUT RATE OPINIONS

Western Union has made it easier for any citizen who may be inclined to criticize or praise his representative in congress. The telegraph firm has initiated a service called "personal opinion message" which permits telegrams of no more than 16 words to be sent to Washington for a charge of 75 cents. It's a smart move.

The personal opinion message isn't limited to congressmen. The message can be directed to the President, vice president, senator or representative. And in the case of citizens who don't happen to know the names of their representatives or senators, Western Union will provide the name.

The individual citizen isn't the only consideration. Western Union points out that a flood of telegrams could give a good indication of public opinion on any particular subject.

Perhaps the new plan will help those people who have wanted to express their opinions but just never managed to get around to it. It might also be an effective answer to those members of congress who always claim to be bothered by too many letters from constituents.

OBSTRUCTIONISTS

As communists are interested primarily in obstructing anything that might contribute to world peace and harmony, if anyone ever doubted that goal of the Reds, the Russians themselves have moved again to clear away any doubt.

For three years, talks have been held at Geneva, Switzerland, between the communists and British-American delegates in an effort to bring about a threat to human life. And for three years the Reds have wrangled and blocked every attempt to find some common ground on which the problem could be approached.

At Geneva and also at United Nations headquarters, the Russians have suggested that they would be abandoned in favor of wider discussion on world disarmament. The Russian proposal has been turned down by the other participants. But, surprisingly the U. S. finally suggested an 18-nation disarmament conference to start at Geneva on March 15.

But did the Russians opt their own proposal? Don't be silly! They turned right around and accused western nations of trying to "deflect that (disarmament) conference from its basic task" by including the "so-called issue" as if that weren't enough, the Russian delegate told newsmen, "We insist on continuing our work at this conference on the basis of national control systems. We must not fail."

POT SHOTS

Dear Pot: I live near Harmon park and have several children so I watch with interest all the activity that goes on there this summer and winter.

I think it's about time someone spoke up and said, "Thank you" to Ernie Cramer and his wonderful works who have worked so hard.

Even in this awful cold they have continued to work. I know several moms who feel as I do, so say a very sincere "Thank you."

Grateful Mom (Twin Falls)

HITTENS FOR KIDS DEPT: Will give an 8-month-old, white, long-haired kitten to anyone who will give it a good home. No bad habits, problems and has had shots.

TAIN'T CRICKET! Dear Pot: Several weeks ago I was third in line at a bank window and after the first in line finished and left, two tellers and the teller ahead of me had quite an animated conversation about the check the teller had just cashed.

CROWS FOR FREE DEPT: I crow like a rooster and bark like a dog and like most women, I jabber a lot and don't make much sense, but if anyone would like to help me master the English language, they can phone 344-862 or pick me up five miles north and one and one-half miles west of Jerome.

IS ANYONE? Dear Pot: This winter-type weather changes thinking on lots of things, doesn't it?

OUR BULLETIN BOARD: I, Nut, Twin Falls—Leave us not by ourselves open to the criticism that could result in our obvious sources particularly where you are anonymous and everyone knows where Pot Shots hangs out. Thinka, nutway.

FAVORABLE LAST LINE: How ya standin' the health?

The thoughtful, intelligent men and women who express such profound disagreement with our actions have frequently been helpful to me. For on the avails of their opposition I have been compelled by their brilliant and logical criticism to examine my own concepts and under their pressure to accept their own acceptance and again proclaim my passionate support for the truth.

It seems to me the error of the welfare states might be emphasized in these terms. The impression is that the state often without concern, direction without personal involvement. And to my mind, more assistance and direction are not enough.

Not long ago, a representative of this group, a young Iranian studying in the United States, attempted to explain their views on the Iranian situation. Here are some of them:

The Iranian intellectuals opposing Iran's membership in OPEC, for example, are not anti-communists, because it makes Iran an instrument of U.S. policy. For them, the only alternative is their anti-U.S. pro-communist.

The Iranian government has ignored the Iranian situation. It has not met the Iranian demands for a free press, free elections, and a free economy.

Had the policies of Mosaddegh been carried out, genuine land reform would have been possible. The Iranian government is not on the verge of bankruptcy.

Whether accurate or not, is young man's views seem to represent an important segment of Iranian public opinion.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 27 (NEA)—The program was changed and the Senate will not vote on it.

"You've had your dessert," Namara is pretty popular around the Pentagon. But many people who like him regard him as a human calculating machine.

He says one of his friends: "If you go up and interview him, you'll get a good idea of what he's like. He's a number. He's this. He's that."

Denys H. H. Smith, Washington correspondent for the London Sunday Telegraph, led off his column with a story about men at the National Press club by recounting a "dream" he had.

"Then Chief Head-in-the-Clouds of the Navaho appears to take over from Ambassador Adlai Stevenson, shortly thereafter, Chief Head-in-the-Clouds is seen ascending the steps of the Supreme Court in Washington."

"Problems mount, but a way out suddenly develops when Grace Grace of Monaco shows up and asks UN membership for her country. She is accepted, since it is felt desirable to have at least one new nation around which can pay its security."

Pierre Bellingier, President Kennedy's press secretary, led a luncheon meeting of the Adlai Stevenson Club in Washington.

FINISHING TOUCHES are applied to snowman, patterned after Augustus Rodin's famed statue, "The Thinking Man." The snowman was erected Saturday morning by Joe Valasek, 12-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Ray J. Valasek, 238 Fifth avenue east. Young Valasek used a framework of narrow slats to support the snow. He said he copied the snowman "after the man on Doble Gillis." He started the snowman about 10 a.m. and it was completed about 11 a.m. However, Valasek's thinking man's head fell off shortly after the snow sculpture was finished. He made another head for the snowman, but by 2 p.m. the sun had started to melt the creation. (Staff photo-engraving)

Camp Fire Program Molds Creative Personalities

"I am becoming an individual in my own right. With the skills I shall learn and develop, I will be better service to myself, to my country and to my fellow man." The Blue Bird organization is for younger girls, 7 to 12 years of age. The group are essential for developing a spirit of cooperation and a sense of responsibility in the same age and to acquaint younger girls with the world around them.

One of the highlights in the life of a Magic Valley Camp Fire girl is a stay at Camp Tawakani. The camp is located 39 miles from Twin Falls in the South Hills. Here is democracy in action. Girls who live at the camp learn cooperation skills and a feeling of oneness with the group of girls and nature. Camp skills acquired include not only those generally accredited to camp life, but those of knowing their own and using their resources wisely.

A newer part of the Camp Fire is the formation of "Horizon clubs" for girls ninth grade through high school. Certain elements of Camp Fire groups are retained in the clubs for older girls, namely the use of symbolism and emphasis on personal development. Such subjects as education, dating, careers and college are thoroughly covered.

The "Horizon" club desire shows that the young woman of today is aware of herself and the world she wants to become a working part of the whole. "As horizons are ever changing and always different, I shall not stand still and look into the purple shadows. Instead, I shall seek the higher purpose and the greater meaning of the whole. I shall reach ever outward to the horizon that is always just beyond my grasp."

The Camp Fire law influences every Camp Fire activity and purpose. "God, seek beauty, give service, pursue knowledge, be trustworthy, hold on to health, glorify work as a whole."

These are not only Camp Fire words; they form a law for all human behavior. The key word to the organization is POTENTIAL. The group's belief is that the future depends on how well the feelings for home and country, friendship and personal talents are instilled in the individual.

"Always in Camp Fire laws, programs, activities, there is that reference to the simple, healthy and strong ideals that often become confused in a 20th century world."

How like America's goals for the 60's, the "New Frontier," is the Horizon club desire. "The goal for individual development, spiritual and moral strength, which are incorporated in the Camp Fire Girl law are much like those of the country of which these girls are citizens."

Sports FROM ALL ANGLES

By LARRY HOVEY

The recurring battle between professional football and baseball as to which is the more popular sport only served to point out the need for baseball to break with its traditional image.

This is the first time in the history of the sport that a player has hit a home run in the first inning of a game. It was done by Willie Mays of the San Francisco Giants in the first inning of the game against the Philadelphia Phillies on September 11, 1954.

There are a number of reasons why this is a significant event. First, it is a record that has never been broken. Second, it is a record that was set by one of the greatest players in the history of the game. Third, it is a record that was set in the first inning of a game, which is a rare occurrence.

Baseball can't offer these things to the average fan. Frank Lane, in an Associated Press release Saturday, said that he had hit a home run in the first inning of a game.

There is one major difference between professional baseball and football. Baseball is a team sport, while football is an individual sport. This means that in baseball, the success of the team depends on the performance of each individual player. In football, the success of the team depends on the performance of the team as a whole.

Baseball caught on and prospered well through the 1920s and 1930s. It was the sport of Babe Ruth. It is well remembered that during that time, the sport was in its prime. The game was exciting and the players were great.

Baseball was on the decline in the 1940s and 1950s. The game was not as exciting as it once was. The players were not as good as they once were. The game was not as popular as it once was.

Baseball has been hit by a number of factors. One of the main factors is the rise of television. Television has made it possible for fans to watch the game from the comfort of their homes. This has led to a decline in attendance at games.

Another factor is the rise of other sports. Football and basketball have become more popular than baseball. This has led to a decline in the popularity of baseball.

New Zealander Breaks World Mile Record by Tenth of Second

WELLINGTON, New Zealand, Jan. 27 (AP)—Peter Snell, 22 smooth-riding New Zealander, cracked the world mile record by a tenth of a second tonight with a 3:54.4 clocking on a grass track. Herb Elliott, Australia's miracle miler, had set the previous record of 3:54.5 at Dublin, Aug. 6, 1958, on a cinder track termed exceptionally fast. Grass tracks are considered slower than a cinder surface. Snell, who won the 1960 Olympic 800-meter crown at Rome, came from the rear of the field that included two previous sub-four-minute milers and tipped off a 56.4-second final lap.

Weather Delays Bobbed-Tourney

CHARMSBORO—Parsentown, Germany, Jan. 27 (AP)—Races for the fourman world bobbed championship originally scheduled to start today, then postponed until Sunday, have been postponed again.

Organizers of the title races announced today that because of the weather the heats slated for Sunday were called off.

"We hope to race them either Monday or Tuesday," a spokesman said.

The first postponement was the result of a spring-like thaw in this German alpine resort.

A hard-frozen track is a must for holding races on the mile-long 10-bend course.

It was slightly colder and snowing heavily Saturday.

WEST JORDAN High, Jan. 27.—Gene Fullmer, the National Boxing association midweight champion, said today he will be too busy to defend his title before June.

Fullmer hopes to meet the winner to decide who is world champion.

Asked about demands of Dick Tiger for a match with Fullmer, the Idaho said: "Only since the other night has Tiger become a wanted item. People want to see him fight now that he has beaten Fernand. If he fights a little more he might be tied together before we do anything else."

"With taxes what they are, I see no reason to have any more 'big' exhibitions," Fullmer said.

The Magic Valley Newspaper Serving Nine Irrigated Counties TWIN FALLS, IDAHO, SUNDAY, JANUARY 28, 1962

TRAFFIC PATTERNS are duplicated on a flannel board by students in one of the driver training classes. The classes started Monday, at the beginning of second semester. The students are Marshall Balthron, son of the Rev. and Mrs. G. A. Balthron, and Eileen Featherheller, daughter of Mrs. Lucille Featherheller. Students are able to study traffic and how to deal with it by setting up mock situations on the flannel board. This is just one of the many ways the students can study driving in the classroom. But all teaching isn't limited to classrooms, for the students spend at least six hours actually driving each before they are eligible to be tested and pass the course. Students will practice driving in the high school parking lot. (Staff photo-engraving)

Driver Training Classes Begin; Students Learn Proper Methods

Last week, students in Twin Falls high school started the new driver training course, a carefully-planned course designed to make careful drivers out of the inexperienced. The classes started Monday and are being taught by two junior and senior high school instructors who attended a special course in teaching driver training.

Students are being chosen in that manner because of the "Y" school law change regarding drivers with restricted licenses. After July 1, no person under 18 years of age will be issued a restricted license unless he has successfully finished an approved driver training course.

Seeing-Eye Dog Sorely Missed By J. Hill During Its Illness

Two weeks ago Sadie, J. Hill's seeing-eye German shepherd dog, entered the hospital for an operation on a tumor. Any day she would miss a loved pet if it had to spend a week in the hospital but Hill's loss during that time was compensated for by referrals to Sadie as "a pair of eyes on the business end of a horse."

Sadie is a well-known dog to anyone who spends much time in the business district of downtown Twin Falls. Each day she helps Hill make his way along the streets and across the intersections as he goes about his daily errands. She has been doing this for the last 10 years.

COFFEE TIME for "Sadie," the seeing-eye dog owned by J. Hill, is somewhat different than the coffee break known to most workers. When coffee is announced in the office, Sadie gets a dog biscuit. The shepherd is now back at work, guiding Hill about the community, but a few days ago the dog was in the hospital recovering from an operation. Hill and his fellow office workers note they realize just how large a part Sadie played in their lives until she had an operation and was gone for several days. (Staff photo-engraving)

Western Music Fans Will Hear Jamboree at Filer Auditorium

Lovers of Western music and western bands will have the opportunity to watch the finest that Magic Valley has to offer when about 40 members of area bands gather for a western music jamboree on the stage of the YWCA-YMCA building fund.

The jamboree will be held at 7 p.m. Thursday at the Filer high school auditorium. Although this is the first such valley-wide jamboree of this size, it has a long history. The jamboree originally is an outgrowth of a small jamboree that started in the home of Gene Blosserinn four years ago.

Trujillo's Rule Is Over; Problems Still Remain

SAINT DOMINGO, Dominican Republic, Jan. 27 (AP)—A light blue Chevrolet sped westward from this capital, then called Ciudad Trujillo, carrying a man on a date with destiny. It was May 20, 1961.

It did not long after making the usual nightly call on the aging, ailing mother, Julia Molina Chevalier, who had not abided from close friends the sudden heart brought by gospel of her son.

Twin Falls Warm Well Water Serves Residents Many Ways

The well water Twin Falls residents started using in mid-November, which replaced the Twin Falls canal water, has proven a boon to residents in many ways.

It wasn't for the harsh winter that has set in and made itself known to everyone, the well water could cost some electrical power users money on their monthly bills.

WARM WELL WATER logs in the below-zero weather, as Paul Newton, city engineer, turns on a faucet on one of the city wells in South Park. The warm water played a vital role during the recent cold snap, when it kept the water mains from becoming too cold. The well water usually is about 57 degrees, but the canal water that Twin Falls formerly used occasionally dipped to a few degrees above freezing during frigid weather. (Staff photo-engraving)

Throughout the rest of the day she serves as his constant companion and protector. Sadie likes the status quo. Whenever Hill works his routine in the office, Sadie sits worked. He usually works at his desk, with his feet a few inches from that cold floor. But sometimes he moves to a back room of the office and operates the addressograph machine.

This is almost too much for Sadie. She likes her comfortable bed under his desk, but she can't stand to be away from him for extended periods.

When he operates the machine, Sadie sleeps for a short period and then walks to the back room and nudges his legs for attention. He pets her and then she returns to her bed. A few minutes later this is repeated, until he returns to his regular desk and she can relax.

"During her stay in the hospital, I certainly missed her pestering me for attention," he says. "Sadie is protective to the point that she even makes sure Hill gets to bed on time. He notes that if he and Mrs. Hill stay up past their normal bedtime, Sadie enters the room and nuzzles and peters them until they retire.

Looking back on her recent illness, Mrs. Hill does not know how they got along without her.

In the high school the classes begin at 3 p.m. and last for one hour. Classes in the junior high school begin at 4 p.m. The actual training behind the wheel will be done in the parking lot at the high school. Ragland notes that when the daylight hours become longer, the afternoon classes probably will last over an hour.

On Saturday, classes will last from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m., with time out for lunch.

"The instructors, if they hadn't had prior training in teaching the classes, took a one-week teacher's course in the subject of driver training at the Idaho State college for teachers in this area if there are enough teachers interested to warrant a course in the adult education center in Twin Falls. Fifteen students are needed.

All cars used in the program will be properly marked as driver training cars, according to Ragland.

He adds, "The state of Idaho will provide over $85 per student for all who complete the course. This allocation of money is expected to give the school sufficient money to pay the costs of the course."

He explains that the money for the course is gained from the increase in driver license fees.

Fear Is Shadow on Lives of Japanese Fishermen Hit by Bikini Blast Fallout

(Editor's note: When the Lucky Dragon put to sea almost eight months ago it was after lunch. It came back with a cargo of fish. It was the first time since the atomic bomb that this is what happened to the crew.)

By KENNETH ISHII
TOKYO, Jan. 27 (UPI)—Mitsuo Oishi lives in anonymity and fear.

The owner of a small laundry and dry cleaning business in Tokyo suburb, there is nothing about his appearance or manner that would lead one to think he is of medium height, he wears glasses and he is lean like most Japanese. Married three years and the father of an 11-month-old daughter, Oishi, 38, is strictly average—and likable. His neighbors think so too, they see him busily shuttling to and from his shop on pickups and delivering a huge basket of canvas baskets tied to the rear of his motorcycle.

But Oishi is obsessed with what to him is a horrible thought. Someday his neighbors may find out that he was a crew member of the ill-fated fishing boat Lucky Dragon that was showered with radioactive dust from the U. S. thermonuclear test at Bikini in 1954.

Oishi is terribly afraid that this happens he will be ostracized, looked upon as abnormal, a man to be pitied, the potential communicator of some horrible disease.

Oishi is not alone in this fear. Several of the Lucky Dragon's former crewmen have buried themselves in anonymity for the same reasons. Some changed their names because they were afraid their jobs would be found out who they were. Others accept their dubious claim to fame with resignation.

There were 23 men aboard the Lucky Dragon on that 1954 voyage southward from Yuliu, the boat's home port in central Japan, to the tuna grounds of the central Pacific—a voyage they say was fixed from the start.

A cable line broke as the 100-ton boat pulled away from her pier. The weather was unusually clear. Many of the boat's fishermen were covered and lost. Tuna was so scarce the captain decided to head farther south into the Marshall Islands. There on March 1, the serenity of the night was shattered by a 1988 suffering from a nervous blinding, orange-red flame on the horizon.

Oishi was in charge of muttering the tuna into cold storage below deck.

He recalls "Several hours later, while I was dozing on the deck, the Lucky Dragon—40 at the time was less than 100 miles from Bikini—was hit by a nuclear bomb exploded. We were puzzled at first, and then scared. The ashes covered our boat and our bodies. I guess I was lucky because my job was below-deck—which exposed me to less radiation. As the Lucky Dragon headed home, the crew members began suffering from a peculiar loss of appetite, a constant listlessness, some experienced a strange yellow discharge from their eyes. Others found their bodies burning like breaking out in sores. Hair began falling from their heads; large chunks.

The national uproar that followed their return, and the crisis in U. S. Japanese relations I see from the great beauty of the atom bombings of Hiroshima and Nagasaki.

The aftermath of the atom bombs had imprinted in Japanese minds—overwhelming, emotional fear of radiation sickness. Japanese, anxiously hovering over the Lucky Dragon's victims during their long convalescence, wondered what would happen to them.

Would they die of leukemia or some other disease they had heard could be induced by the "ashes of death"?

Would their offspring be abnormal like the deformed vegetables that had been found growing in soil subjected to heavy atomic radiation?

What girl would want to marry such a risk?

When a crewman, Aikichi Kobayama, died six months later, it was the clincher for many—withstanding some doubts as to whether radiation had been the immediate cause of his death. The remaining 22 crew members were discharged from the hospital after a year, and were given compensation by the United States. Japanese doctors pronounced them well but cautioned them against hard work. They were required to undergo medical checkups once a year.

Of the 22, one has not been heard of since he left home in 1954. Another is suffering from a nervous breakdown. Five have returned to fishing. The rest have turned to other jobs.

Of the Lucky Dragon's crew, it has married since the Bikini blast and have 11 children among them. Their doctors say they know of no abnormal births. Oishi, who was married in 1959, has a 11-month-old daughter, Yoshiko.

Sentenced cross-legged in a back room of his dry shop, Oishi looks hesitantly at his expectant wife. He had been reluctant to be interviewed at all.

The healthy Oishi admits that he feels well physically, except that he perhaps tires easily, the fear in his mind persists.

"How would you feel," he asked, "if you found that girls didn't want to marry you because of your father's job? Would you be different from others?"

He says he went through several unsuccessful "tests" that formal introduction of men and women through a go-between with matrimony the object was the final "trial" at which he met Nobuko.

"She is a very understanding girl," he says.

Pondering on the voyage of the Lucky Dragon, Oishi said: "The doctors say we can lead normal lives. But the doctors (at least in Japan) tell their patients very little. I want to feel 'normal.' So much want to be normal."

With radioactive fallout from recent Soviet tests again in the news, Oishi was doubly sensitive. He telephoned this writer shortly after the interview to make an admission.

After fumbling a while for words, he said: "There is something I didn't tell you. But I'm talking to you the way I did. I think you should know. Yoshiko is not our first child. Our first was born a year after we were married. It was born deformed and died."

Water in Idaho Will Be in Good Flow Thanks to Hills' Plentiful Snowpack

By JIM HUMPHREY
Idaho Fish and Game Department Water, the life blood of earth, undoubtedly will be in good supply across Idaho this year because of the heavy general snowpack to date. This should overcome conditions of poor circulation in certain sections of the state's anatomy, notably southern and eastern regions, where the drought has been acute the last few exceptional years. Some sections, in all truth, even received transients. But the entire cycle of water goes on without too much interruption.

And now the lowlands as well as the hills of Idaho—more are heavy with snow, guaranteeing the wonderful, natural phenomenon that provides all living things with one of the basic needs of life.

With the ending of several long years of drought in parts of Idaho comes the time for taking stock of present conditions. It is time to sum up a year's worth of achievements, to evaluate the present and to take a brief look into the future of water resource planning management.

One starting point is a current report by the congressional committee on national water resources. It was formed in 1959 and sets a course of action which must come if Idaho and the nation are to progress in water resource planning and management.

Studies by the committee and cooperating agencies show that if present trends continue, existing withdrawals of water in Idaho and throughout the country will double by 1980 and triple the output of the next century. They underscore the importance of maintaining water quality through pollution abatement. This increases the possibilities for water reuse and improves conditions for recreation and conservation of fish and wildlife resources.

The committee is mindful that each individual, local group or agency stands on inherent water rights and that each shall exercise constitutional responsibility in enforcing them. This right to use water or to administer that use is guarded jealously and cannot be denied. Several hills were introduced in the last session of congress assuring states' rights in this regard.

But the committee stresses that the right to use water never extends the right to waste it. Nor does the constitutional right to administer water use condone unwise administration of this right. The report declares that regardless of what congress does to improve planning of water use and development programs, the lawmakers cannot overlook the decisions and cooperation needed on the local level. And those at the grass roots should realize that they must regard water use planning and development on the basis of greatest benefit to mankind. When these two points are understood clearly, progress is inevitable.

Although several billions of dollars are being spent annually by federal and state agencies in water planning and management work, the bulk is for construction projects. Some are within river basins where a comprehensive plan is made. Others are for projects where there has been no comprehensive basin planning. Perhaps too few of the projects are labeled "multiple-purpose." But the list is beginning to grow because there is new recognition of needs.

Of a total of almost a billion dollars appropriated by the Army Engineers in fiscal year 1962, for example, less than two per cent went to planning studies of river basins. One special $375,000 item calls for a pollution or water quality study of the Arkansas and Red River basins.

The cooperation of all interested agencies concerned also is important in this comprehensive planning for water resource management. In reviewing federal construction agency budgets, this cooperation is apparent in the funds allocated for fish and wildlife, stream gauging, precipitation, pollution and other studies related to planning for federal projects for flood control, navigation or multiple-use purposes.

If the local groups and agencies only will recognize the problems confronting them in the wise planning and management of their water resources, it may well be necessary for a higher administrative power to support their authority in using their valuable natural resource that is so precious to this and future generations to come.

have been made in the use of the cost-benefit ratio of water quality control. Whether or not this movement into a new area of analyzing values at a federal water use project will continue and develop so that it includes a much larger area than water quality is open for speculation. Whether or not such a development would be of great public benefit might be questioned if it were to spread to industrial use of water. In the industrial use of water as well as the municipal, the moral obligations still go to downstream water users—not to cost-benefit ratios.

In the realm of federal loan and grant acts, it is noteworthy that the small reclamation project act, the reclamation distribution act, and the watershed improvement and flood prevention act programs are progressing, but slowly. These are good examples of federal loan and grant programs which leave planning and decision making on the local level.

Is it a matter of federal restriction which is responsible for the slow progress of these programs? If so, those restrictions should be reviewed and eased.

The added recognition which lately has been given to certain beneficial water use during the planning stage of water use projects has been heartening. Reclamation, fish and wildlife, and pollution abatement benefits continually are receiving more and more attention as the importance of these factors to state and national welfare are demonstrated. Each new law enacted by congress and dealing with the

YOUNG SCIENTISTS take a close look at the water grass that grows in the aquarium in Washington elementary school. They are Debra Heller, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Donald Heller, and James Flynn, Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. James Flynn, both students in Mrs. Trina Lawrence's third grade class. The aquarium has been a source of curiosity to the students since it was given to the school by Mrs. James Sinclair. (Staff photo—enlarging)

Tropical Fish at Washington School Are Pets of Students in All Grades

They have more masters than the tropical fish in the aquarium in the hallway at Washington elementary school, for they are the pets of the entire student body.

When they first made their appearance three months ago, they were quite an attraction for the students, but now they are accepted members of the school and simply go about their business of being fish in a bowl.

The fish and aquarium were given to the school by Mrs. James Sinclair, whose son, Walker, is a student there. Mrs. Sinclair notes she has two other aquariums at home and last fall she decided she was "overstocked" in aquariums and fish. So she offered it to the school. It contained guppies, zebra fish, red swordtail, platy and a collection of snails.

The aquarium is located in the main hallway in the center of the building. Every student in the building will pass by the aquarium at least once a day, and many more uncounted tropical fish don't exist. They go about their business in the water tank and among the ceramic figurines, ignoring the curious onlookers outside the glass.

So now the students are learning that life in a fish bowl is more than it appears. Not content with simply looking at life through the glass of the aquarium, they are now taking the water grass out and making a close inspection through the magnifying power of the school's science microscopes.

MAGIC VALLEY PORTRAIT

One of Gooding's Most Enthusiastic Boosters Is James Muffley, Realtor

GOODING, Jan. 27—One of Gooding's most enthusiastic boosters is James Muffley, a local realtor. He is active in Chamber of Commerce work and for the past four years has served as president of the Industrial Development corporation—a group of local businessmen interested in promoting the growth of Gooding.

Muffley says, "I like Gooding very much—we owe our community all we have." He has been active in the North Side board of realtors and was recently elected president of the group.

Muffley is a native of Idaho, born at Fairfield and was raised on a ranch there. As Fairfield high school was not an accredited school at the time his oldest brother entered high school, the family lived in Boise during the school term and Muffley was educated in Boise. He attended two years of high school there but was able to finish the last two years of high school in Fairfield.

He studied business for three years at the former Gooding college, leaving school in 1933. Since he played basketball and football while in school, Muffley takes an active interest in sports and is an ardent supporter of the high school ball teams. In the summer months he enjoys going to the mountains for camping and fishing.

A man of many careers, Muffley started out working for the department of agriculture and worked in many fields for the department for eight years; taking time out to serve in the navy during World War II. He served in the navy from 1943 to 1945 on the tanker USS Chitachaska.

He continued his work with the department of agriculture after the war for two more years.

In 1942 he moved his family five different times to five different towns. And so in 1947 he moved to Payette where he ran a small dairy supply store. It was in Payette that he started teaching on the farm training to veterans.

He conducted classes in the evening on everything from bookkeeping to how to plant a sprig. He qualified for this with his background of being raised on a ranch and with his work with the department of agriculture.

In 1948 Muffley decided to put into practice his agricultural knowledge and came back to Gooding and farmed on his own. He also continued to teach veteran on-the-job training, conducting classes in Wendell. After five years of farming he quit to become manager of the Gooding branch of Southern Idaho Production Credit association.

He states he enjoyed this work very much but after five years the opportunity to strike out again on his own came in the form of a partnership-in-the-real estate business with his father-in-law, Julius Schmitt. They formed the Schmitt and Muffley firm.

Muffley says he enjoys this business and receives great satisfaction from seeing people settled in a new home. He believes Gooding is the finest community in the country, and is worthy of everyone's support.

Muffley feels that every man owes something to the community. He chooses to make his living and raise his family in—if not an active service and civic worker—at least an enthusiastic booster. He feels no town can Standard and Poor's comprehensive analysis of 480 stocks showed a loss of 0.82% on the week, finishing at 68.13. This indicated an approximate decline of around $400,000,000.

It was followed by General Motors up 1% on record fourth quarter earnings and a 3% rise in the high-flying Aeronautics Corp. Brought consolidated earnings up 21%.

PIONEER RESIDENT of the Twin Falls area, W. W. Pariah, right, reaches out for a card during a game of canasta. Looking on is Miss Naomi Charters, his nurse. Pariah is playing with his son, Wayne Pariah. W. W. Pariah recently underwent an eye operation after being nearly blind for two years. ### Elderly Twin Falls Pioneer Resident Has Begun New Life After Operation

"Thanks to medical science and an indomitable spirit, an elderly Twin Falls man recently started life anew. He is W. W. Pariah, pioneer resident of this area.

Pariah lost a leg in an automobile accident in 1954. After that he began losing his eyesight. Pariah always had been an active man. He is 85 years old, but he didn't let the handicap of losing his sight, in addition to being crippled.

Until he began to lose his eyesight he handled all his own business, which consisted of taking care of real estate. He paid all his own bills and did all his book work.

This time last year he was nearly blind and was very dependent. But the spunky Pariah underwent an eye operation last spring. His eyesight has been improving since then, and now he boasts 29/20 vision in his right eye.

"I'm a new man," he says. And in the past few weeks he has proved it. He has resumed doing his own business correspondence and book work.

He has continued to write his four daughters and has, once again, taken up his favorite games—pinochle and canasta. And, according to his son, Wayne Pariah, he is just as sharp at the games as he was before he suffered his eyesight.

"In fact," Wayne Pariah says, "he's too good!" Pariah watches the higher ball games and other athletic events on television. And he reads, too. A former school teacher, Pariah always has been an avid reader. He has finished a novel since he has recovered and regularly reads the Times-News.

"I like to keep up with events," he says.

Pariah has been a leading pioneer resident of this area since the tract was opened.

He first arrived in Twin Falls on Christmas day, 1903. He cleared land and was active in farming for many years in the Twin Falls and Kimberly areas.

Pariah served two terms on the Twin Falls county commission, three terms on the Twin Falls school board and he was a member of the Maroa school board for many years.

Rupert Plans Dairy School At Mid-Week

RUPERT, Jan. 27—Dr. R. K. Johnson, of the University of Idaho, will be one of the featured speakers at a dairy short course to be held at the Rupert Grange hall Wednesday, according to LaMont Smith, county agent.

Smith said that Dr. Johnson would discuss causes and prevention of breeding failures, beginning at 10 a.m. Friday.

The school will begin at 9:45 a.m. with introduction and arrangements with discussion on the proper use and maintenance of milking equipment. This session will be given by George Cleveland, extension dairyman from the University of Idaho.

At 11 a.m., Dr. R. H. Ross, head of the dairy science department of the university, will lead a discussion of the economics of heavy grain vs. ruffage feed.

"At 1 p.m., the research program of the dairy science department will be outlined by Dr. Ross; at 2:30 p.m., Dr. Johnson will lead a discussion on breeding and at 2:30 p.m. Cleveland will discuss the importance of keeping breeding records.

The last period will be on calf raising and management, led by David Tucker, dairy scientist from Caldwell. A question period will conclude the meeting.

Women of the Grange will serve lunch at noon, Smith reported.

Western Music Jamboree Will Raise Money for YWCA-YMCA Building

entertainers will be members of organized bands. The remainder will be musicians who aren't affiliated with any particular group.

Bosserman notes that the idea of seeing the various bands perform appealed to the members of the bands because many of them have never had the opportunity to see other bands, since they usually work on the same nights.

During the jamboree he says each band will have time for three to four pieces. They will draw numbers to see who performs first. George Johnson, Twin Falls, will serve as master of ceremonies and will introduce each band. Each band will provide its own master of ceremonies during its performance.

Bosserman estimates each band will perform for about 30 minutes.

"What they play is up to them," he says, "but most of the music will be standard country and western music, with a few religious pieces."

Some of the bands that will perform are the Rhythmaires, Mountain Home, Ed Harness, Jim Vaughn, Riley Hill, Elmer Painter and Luciane Urin. Honorary palbearers included Arthur Lewis and Arthur Hobbes.

Concluding rites were held at Mountain Home cemetery with Rev. Hillary Nuxoll, Mountain Home, officiating.
