Heavy Rain and Melting Snow Combine to Flood Areas of Magic Valley

Snow Combine to Flood Areas of Magic Valley

Heavy rains and melting snow combined to create flood conditions in several sections of Magic Valley Saturday. One family northwest of Gooding had to evacuate their home and loss of livestock is reported by District 10 workers. On the Minidoka northside project, highway crews were busy clearing debris from a bridge.

TORRENTS OF WATER flooded about 200 feet of the Meridian road, north of Rupert, and extensively damaged the road. Highway crews were busy Saturday afternoon trying to remove large chunks of ice that were blocking the shoulder of the road and blocking passage. (Staff engraving)

Harley Davidson, foreman of the Minidoka county highway district, reported many families isolated by the flood. He said that the roads were impassable because of mud and gapping holes. The state highway west from Minidoka to Electric Canyon was closed Saturday because drain pipes that go under the road were washed away, leaving large holes in the road.

The George Voeltzel family, five miles north and five miles east of Gooding, was aroused about 3 a.m. Saturday by flames striking a bridge over Thorne creek near their home.

Voeltzel observed the water rising rapidly and moved his wife and daughter, Vickie, to a neighbor's farm. Voeltzel said the water rose about two feet from the time they were awakened until they left. Her husband had to return and get the dog and the car.

In some places in their yard the water was about four feet deep, Mrs. Voeltzel said. A mile away, at the Jack Cooney place, water was up to the farmhouse door Saturday noon. Big chunks of ice and timbers from blasting being done by highway crews at the bridge near their home had floated into the Caswell farmyard, blocking their chicken coop door.

Melting Snow Causes Flood For Pocatello

By The Associated Press
Pocatello, Idaho, Feb. 10 (AP)—Heavy rain caused flooding in widely separated areas of southern Idaho Saturday and homes were evacuated in some areas.

At least three families were removed from their homes in lower valley sections of Pocatello, where the Boise-river continues to flow. The stream was measured Saturday at six feet, just four-tenths of a foot short of flood stage.

Temperatures throughout the area were expected to remain above or only slightly below freezing during the night and the snow melt was expected to continue at a steady pace.

Flood Water Forces Family to Evacuate

GOODING, Feb. 10 — Flood waters rising Friday night northeast of Gooding raised havoc with residents who live near Thorne creek. The George Voeltzel family had to wade in chest-deep water to safety after noise from the flood aroused the Voeltzels. "The sound of the ice hitting the bridge near our house woke us up about 3:30 a.m.," said Mrs. Voeltzel. Her family was forced to evacuate the farm home Saturday. The family sought refuge in a neighbor's home a short distance down the road. However, the situation seemed precarious, as water surrounded the Elton Klattler house where the Voeltzels were staying.

Snow reports were varied at Magic Valley ski areas Saturday. Snow depth was measured at Magic Mountain south of Hansen and 17 inches of snow was reported at Solider Mountain north of Fairfield.

Claude Jones, manager of the Magic Mountain ski area, said that the snow was good and the road was good. Skiers returning from Sun Valley Saturday evening reported about 12 inches of new snow fell there Friday night and Saturday and the skiing was good. The snow was wet and heavy but the skiers had no complaints.

The heaviest snowfall was at Solider Mountain ski area where about 17 inches of wet snow was reported. The snowing was fair and it was not skiing at 7 p.m. Saturday.

OREM, Utah, Feb. 10 (AP)—Mrs. Verna Bernice Hudson, 62, Orem, was found shot four times in a house here Saturday. She was reported in serious condition but expected to recover.

FLOOD WATERS surround the house on Lars F. Jensen's farm, one mile west and one-half mile north of Eden, Saturday afternoon about two and one-half feet of water surrounded the farmhouse for 100 feet. A drainage creek, which flows into Goose lake west of Eden, overflowed and forced Mr. and Mrs. Flora Larson, who are occupying the Jensen farm, to leave the house. The road which runs north and south, at left, is covered with about one and one-half feet of water. (Staff photo-engraving)

STRANDED ROADSIGN sticks out of flood caused by heavy rain and melting snow that closed this gravel road eight miles north of Rupert. This road, like many others in the area, was closed Saturday by Minidoka highway officials because high water made passage by automobiles impossible. (Staff engraving)

RAIN FLOODED feedlots at Robert Niven's farm two miles east of Twin Falls on highway 20, whose water was four feet deep in low areas of the cattle yards. Niven explained that water generally runs through a 21-inch pipe under the lots and through a trench under an adjacent county road to the west of the lots. However, the water running from higher farms to the east swelled Saturday morning, turning Niven's two feedlots into lakes. Water also backed up into an adjacent field and a roadway between the two feedlots. Cattle were forced to stand on higher bedding grounds or along the feeding ramps in the two lots. (Staff photo-engraving)

WATER HAS RECEDED at the George Voeltzel ranch and the house is surrounded by muddy ground. The Voeltzels were forced to flee in the early hours Saturday when flood water of Thorne creek reached the house. At one time water in the yard was about four feet deep in some places. However, the creek was flowing over bridges and into fields throughout most of the day. (Staff photo-engraving)

Wright Selected Chairman For T.F. Library Trustees

Dr. E. M. Wright, was elected chairman of the Twin Falls public library board of trustees Wednesday. Others elected were Mrs. Glenn Train, vice chairman; Mrs. U.N. Terry, treasurer; and Mrs. Frank Jackson, secretary. George Brown, next in-board number representing the city caucasion.

Arthur L. DeVolder, library director, asked the board for a study of the fines policy and service to out-of-town patrons. He noted that if postage costs increased, a proportionate increase will be necessary in fine rates to cover additional cost of mailing overdue notices. "The present three cents per day fine does not cover the cost of sending out the notices," he said.

DeVolder also proposed a careful study of out-of-town fees charged for library service. He pointed out that the current rate of $1 per year for students and $3.50 per year for family is out of proportion to costs of operation. He proposed a fee of $4 for the initial card per family. DeVolder contended that "this rate of $4 per month is extremely low considering the amount of service given."

DeVolder explained that a family checking out an average of four books per year for one year would be getting 200 books per year at an average cost of two and one-half cents per book. He added that the average cost for a single volume is $2.50. The board agreed to study the proposals.

Heavy Rains, Melting Snow Flood Valley

Water was going over state highways in several places and was receding by Saturday afternoon. Shoulders of roads in the flooding-Lincoln county area have been washed away by the flood waters. Big Wood river also is reported running full.

The A. W. Tidick family, which lives approximately nine miles northwest of Shoshone, reported water from a creek flooded their potato cellar. The creek drains from the foothills in the Black Butte area. From about nine o'clock on Saturday morning, water was running in one door and out the other Saturday noon, Tidick reported.

At Cap Hawley lake, a natural drainage three miles north of Rupert, water had overflowed and was flooding farms belonging to William Schorzman, Carl Linsey, Henry Rickett and William Schorzman. A dam was expected to be under water by morning.

Schorzman said a river of water was flowing over a 20-foot rim that borders the lake and "treating" the water. The dam built at the base of the rim in a gully. The dam was built by the bureau of reclamation to combat flood possibilities but the water was just too much for the 4 1/2-foot high, 14-foot wide dam.

Schorzman, a longtime resident of the area, said, "I've never seen the water so bad, and a regular of water in the creek flowing over the rim by the lake."

A basement in the Vern Wood home northwest of Rupert had about six feet of water in it and neighbors were trying to pump the water out at 9 p.m. to save the furnace, home, refrigerator, bedroom set and canned fruits and vegetables.

The main road north of P. M. was reported closed at 9 p.m. because of about 150 feet of water and the road was being washed away. Road crews had been busy earlier trying to save the road but torrents of water undermined the road.

Carl Kemmer, who lives 10 miles northwest of Shoshone, had two cows in a basement area Saturday.

Considerable livestock damage was reported in the P. M. area. At the Howard Pittman farm, 35 pigs between 1 and 2 months old drowned Saturday night. The animals were housed in an empty potato cellar which had been used for storage.

H. B. Paulson, who lives about two miles west of Shoshone, had 600 2-week-old chicks in a basement area Saturday. The water flooded his place. After fighting the water most of the night, he had to evacuate the chicks and the stream diverted to the west side of the canal, sending it about a mile away.

In northwest Shoshone, Ernest Beal reported 7-week-old pigs were drowned.

The James Tews family at Detroit reported one wall of the basement and part of the basement of a house were in. They discovered water in the basement about 8 a.m. Their furnace was being taken away to dry Saturday afternoon.

Mr. Floyd Kilding reported water was up to the ceiling in the basement door Saturday morning. He had stayed up until 4 a.m. to pump out two inches of water in the basement, and thought the situation was under control.

About 8 a.m. Saturday her daughter told her the furnace was not working. She went down to the basement and was greeted with water which was beginning to seep through the cold floor in the house.

Wood damage in the District area resulted when a big pipe nearby became a water main. Shoshone residents who went to Detroit to assist reported it took them one and one-half hours to make the pipe leak completely in 10 minutes. Tractors and trucks were needed to travel muddy and water-covered roads.

Idaho Youth Ranch Plans Are Outlined

RUPERT, Feb. 10 — A talk on the aims and goals of the youth ranch in Idaho was given by the Rev. James R. Crowe highlighted the program of the Rupert Chamber of Commerce Thursday.

Lack of proper religious training in the home was listed as a number one cause for the delinquency by the Rev. Mr. Crowe. The need for a basic religious faith and respect for human beings was stressed by the speaker who said none of the boys he had on the ranch have received this type of training in their homes. He also reported that the use of intoxicating beverages in the home contributed more to delinquency than broken homes.

Various methods used in gaining an insight into individual problems were mentioned by the speaker one of which was the use of solitary confinement for those persons who proved uncooperative in the point of understanding themselves. The need for the individual to face up to his problems was not stressed by the speaker, he said, in outlining the proper treatment for the person.

Veteran Pension Ruled Tax Free

BOISE, Feb. 10 — Veterans receiving pension or compensation checks do not have to report them on their income tax returns, said Lorna E. Koppas, director of the Boise veterans administration center.

A VA check is not considered income. VA benefits are tax free. Benefits which do not need to be reported include pension, disability compensation and pension, education and training allowances, subsistence allowances for disabled veterans receiving vocational training, grants on homes for "whitewash" veterans, grants for motor vehicles for physically handicapped veterans and death benefits paid to survivors.

The only exception is interest earned by GI life insurance which is added to the deposit with the VA. Only the interest earned by the dividend, not the dividend, is taxable and must be reported, said Koppas.

FOUR LEVELS of the Distributive Education program meet at the Minidoka County high school this week to review the work done by the local DECA club. From left, Mary V. Marks, Washington, D.C., represents the federal department of education and welfare; Carolyn Rasmussen, president of the

National, State Leaders of DECA Clubs Visit Minico

RUPERT, Feb. 10 — All four levels in the distributive education program were represented Tuesday at the Minidoka County high school when a representative delegation from the state and the national departments of education visited the school to confer with Robert Larson, instructor for the course.

Mary V. Marks, Washington, D.C., representing the department of health, education and welfare in the retail field, during their two-day visit in Southern Idaho.

According to Miss Marks, the DECA program is set up on a state rather than a national level, and teaches current methods of marketing, merchandising and management in the retail field.

Assistance is given to the young people, she said, in exploring career possibilities in the merchandising field, with class room instruction and actual on-the-job training through co-operation of local merchants.

Many fields are covered, Miss Marks said, including the floral business, and fashion and design.

The program is set up in many areas, she reported, on the adult level for those who wish to improve their knowledge and positions in the field.

Distributing and marketing is becoming more complex, Miss Marks pointed out, and requires specialized training if one is to excel. The desire for more training is being evidenced among adult workers, she said, and significant progress on these matters is reported.

Data worked out from the various training levels is being processed and made available to the interested communities, giving assistance to other workers in similar fields, or to new business units looking a start.

The program is essentially a state and local affair, Miss Marks explained, with supervisory assistance from the national level. She said that she feels this program has made a very real contribution to the educational program of the nation.

The groups of students are organized in clubs called DECA clubs, wherever the program is being offered. Students who participate in the training program are made to feel more a part of the community, the national leader said, and are able to gain a better understanding of the national economic picture.

According to Brenna, there are just five high schools in the state which have the DECA program, besides Minico, Burley, Idaho Falls, Pocatello and Lewiston. Other schools have short interest, he said, and plans to include the program in the near future. One drawback to schools would like the program is the lack of qualified teachers, Brenna said.

Real success of such a program, Brenna said, depends on community interest and backing. Without the cooperation of local merchants who furnish the on-the-job training, the course would lose most of its effectiveness.

Many students who take the training go right into a job when they leave high school, or make use of their training in helping put themselves through college.

According to Larson, more boys than girls are interested in the program. Classes average about 15, he said. Competition is offered in meets during the school year, he said, with the local class scheduled to attend a conference on leadership at Boise, March 30-31.

Teams will practice sales demonstrations—and layouts, public speaking, job interviews, displays of merchandise, window dressing, and other similar areas of the work.

The state winner will win a trip to Chicago to participate on the national level, Larson said. At the state conference two years ago, he said, the Minico club was the only one to win a prize.

Several former students are making use of their training in this area, and some are in the armed services where they find the training an advantage.

WANDALS DIVIDE 2 GAMES WITH OREGON

Warren Shatters Duck Score Mark In Guiding Win

EUGENE, Ore., Feb. 10 (UPI)—Forward Charlie Warren broke the Oregon basketball scoring record this night as the Ducks smashed Idaho 91-54. Warren ran his total to 1,198 points in less than three seasons. He broke the old school record of 1,186 set by Dick Wilkins in four years from 1945 through 1948. The Ducks were behind 10 but that was the only time in the game.

Warren was a trail in the scoring by center Wally Knecht with 10 points. Chuck White scored 18 for Idaho. Oregon made 32 of 65 field goal attempts for 49.2 average while Idaho connected on only 22 of 70 for 31.4. The Ducks had a 58-42 edge in rebounds as Warren grabbed 15 and Jerry Anderson picked off 10. Oregon now has won nine and lost 10 this season. Idaho has a 10-10 record.

Idaho conference meets the winner of the Cross State conference while the second place Cross State team meets the winner of the fifth district. The third place SIO team meets the sixth district champion.

As stated earlier, the flexibility of the plan is the major point. The "dream bowl" meetings could be made at the discretion of the state coaches association if it appeared the balance of power lay in other directions.

But there is method in the madness of the proposal. Generally, the SIO champion comes out of the Boise valley as it has four of the seven teams there when Pocatello gets its representative. Boise will be trying for two more, according to the latest figures. So the balance swings toward that area. As all the inland Empire is in the panhandle, the Boise schools would have the shortest trip to make for the mythical state title game.

The Snake River is a stilling point down traveling plus giving each team a bowl game most of the time, alternating the runner-up bowl and championship bowl.

The Cross State winner sits right in the middle and would have to go far and neither would the SIO runner-up. The fifth and sixth districts sit on top of each other.

The flexibility of the plan saves it when Pocatello or Idaho Falls wins the SIO. Neither of these teams nor the northern teams could very well handle the traveling involved in the three-day "Thanksgiving" week-end. Therefore, if the runner-up SIO team is in the Boise valley, that club makes the trip north.

In cases where the strongest two teams appear to be something like Burley and Burah, the same juggling can be made. It is simple and workable.

SURROUNDED by Idaho players made Jerry Anderson (50) grimace Friday night as Oregon won down to a 75-57 defeat in Eugene. Ore. Idaho players are, from left, Reg Carahan (55), Chuck Waite (33) and Ken Maren (43). (AP wirephoto)

McKinley Is Upset Winner Over Laver

NEW YORK, Feb. 10 (AP)—Chuck McKinley, St. Ann, Mo., upset Wimbledon champion Rod Laver of Australia with a crushing tennis display today, 6-0, 6-4, 6-4, and went into Sunday's final round of the national indoor championship against Whitney Reed, Alameda, Calif.

Reed, missing dinky lob with teasing drop volleys, turned back McKinley's young Davis cup ace, in the other semi-final, 7-6, 6-4, 6-4, 6-4.

It was the brightest day in years for American tennis, which has slumped to depressing depths in international competition.

Laver, recent winner of the Australian national crown and generally hailed as the world's premier amateur, was not at his best on the lightning-fast boards of the seventh regiment armory. But nothing could detract from the force and brilliance of McKinley's play.

The twin victory by the two Yankee ruses hopes that the United States might be ready to regain its lost stature in Davis cup and other tournament play.

McKinley, chunky junior from San Antonio's Trinity university, jarred Laver at the outset by sweeping through the first set without loss of a game. It took just 12 minutes.

Local Housewives Are Devoted To Shortwave Operation Hobby

Two local housewives are avid devotees of a hobby usually associated with men—shortwave radio operation. They are Mrs. Dick Showell and Mrs. Fred Wanman. Both take occasional time away from household chores to sit down at their shortwave receivers and talk with other operators as far away as Scotland or New Zealand—a welcome respite from their household duties.

But Mrs. Showell, a five-year devotee of the hobby, confesses that women-talk, whether it is in the living room or over short-wave, generally deals with the same subjects—children and their care and feeding, weather and receipts.

Although with two children Mrs. Showell says she doesn't use her shortwave equipment as much as she would like to, but she manages to spend several hours a month practicing the techniques of the hobby.

The way in which Mrs. Showell learned the techniques is unusual. Both she and her husband got their licenses in 1955. They were married in the spring and spent the summer seeing a fire lookout at the Lake Mountain lookout station in the Salmon national forest. During the summer they practiced their code and learned basic theory, which is necessary to get the novice license.

During the summer they used the forest service radio because the forest service telephone was not dependable. This gave them practice. At the end of the summer they were tested for their license by the forest service radio technician.

The following fall they returned to college at Boise and continued the hobby. After graduation Showell entered the army and was sent to Ft. Bliss, El Paso, Tex. Mrs. Showell continued the hobby and spent considerable time brooding on the "loaded clothesline" shortwave network, a regional network designed for the use of housewives during the late morning hours.

She got plenty of practice using their new equipment. And it was there she made the longest contact she has ever made. It was during a contest that the women were having with the men, trying to see who could make the most contacts in a given time and who could make the most distant contact.

Mrs. Showell and her partner headed the women's team win by contacting a ham operator in Scotland.

"That was certainly a thrill," she says, "and contacting persons from a great distance is always a thrill." She has also talked to other operators in New Zealand, Hawaii and the upper reaches of the Yukon.

She says enjoyment is that so many contacts an operator makes is with persons they have never talked with before, making each session "with the radio a little different."

She points out that men and women go about their hobby in a different manner. "The men talk about equipment, wattage

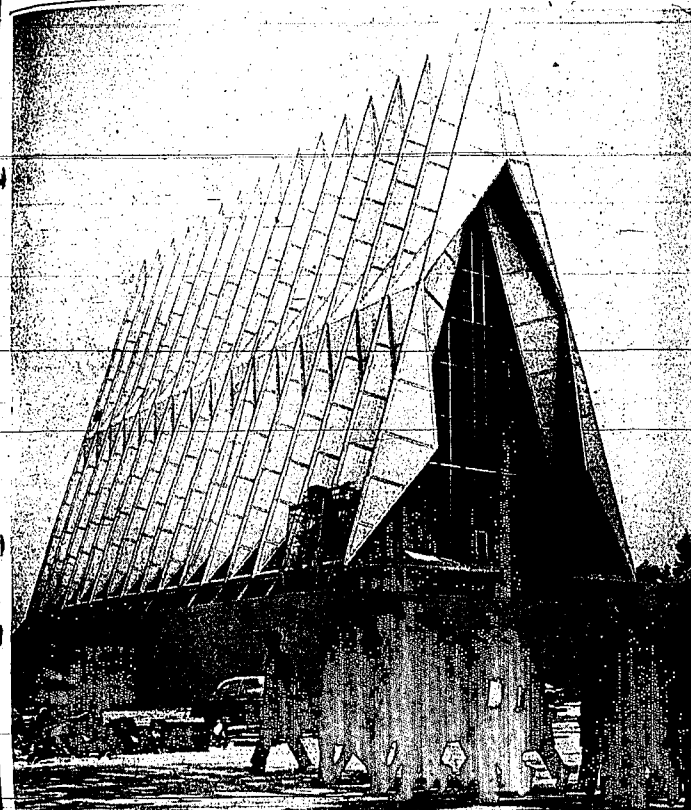

A MAN'S HOBBY? These housewives say shortwave work is just as much fun for women as it is for men. Two of the women in this area who are active in shortwave radio operation are Mrs. Dick Showell, seated, and Mrs. Fred Wanman. and antennas. But the women talk about the things that they normally discuss.

Locally, she has taken an interest in amateur shortwave activities. She was the operator in charge of the base station last spring when the amateurs assisted in the location of a family that was "lost" south of Twin Falls. It was Mrs. Showell who relayed the information to the Twin Falls county sheriff's office that the family had been found.

She finally got a receiver, but for about two years she used it just for listening. Then she became interested in learning more (Continued on Page 2)

INSPIRED ACADEMY CHAPEL looms in the background as a group of Magic Valley educators walks across the Air Force Academy grounds. The chapel spire alone is about 15 stories high. The ultra-modern structure, with three floor levels, is in the final stages of construction. Officials hope it will be completed in time for early-summer weddings. It is the tallest structure at the academy. Last week the educators, mostly superintendents from Magic Valley schools, spent from Sunday night to Tuesday morning inspecting and touring facilities at the academy. (Staff photo-encouraging)

Area Educators Are Impressed By New U.S. Air Force Academy

"Anyone who has ever been skeptical about the education offered at a military academy should visit this place." So commented one Magic Valley educator after finishing a tour of the new United States Air Force Academy, eight miles north of Colorado Springs, Colo.

Last week 17 educators from Magic Valley were guests of the academy. They are men who play an important role in their schools—superintendents, principals and guidance counselors. They were flown to the academy from in field in an air force transport airplane on Sunday, spent Monday touring the academy facilities and returned to Twin Falls Tuesday.

Plans for the tour started last fall, when Capt. L. James Koutnik, academy liaison officer, first made tour arrangements. The educators were accompanied on the trip by Koutnik and Maj. William (Bill) Claborn, Kimberly, who also serves as a liaison officer.

The flight was made in a Mountain Home air force base transport airplane. Fittingly, one of the members of the crew was Capt. Thomas Bowen, navigator, Doan, O.G., a member of the academy in 1959. Lieutenant Bowen was able to visit the academy for the first time since it has been completed.

The group was greeted at Peterson Field, Colorado Springs, by Capt. Robert W. Koernig, special assistant to the superintendent. The genial, articulate Koernig served as the tour host for the next two days. A bus took the educators to the academy, located at the base of the Rampart range, north of Colorado Springs.

One of the first things the educators noted about the academy was the size of the site. It consists of 17,000 acres of former ranchland. About 10,000 acres are useful for construction. Most of the construction is confined to mesas that extend eastward from the mountains. Family housing for officers and airmen is in the valley between the mesas.

The site provides plenty of room for protection against encroachment. Informal field cadet maneuvers and a proposed airfield. On the way to the Visiting Officer quarters, where the men were billeted, they were driven past the spectacular 40,000-seat football stadium, currently under construction.

The stadium was financed by donations. For some recreational and cultural facilities aren't provided for by appropriated funds. The stadium was finished in time for the fall football season. Established by congressional legislation in 1954, the academy opened temporary quarters at an air force base, Denver, until it was moved to the new quarters in 1957.

After the group checked in at the visiting officers' quarters, they ate dinner at the near-by academy officers' club and had the remainder of the evening free.

The next morning they were up at 6:30 a.m. ate breakfast at the club, and departed at 9 a.m. for a tour of the contemporary buildings made of steel, aluminum, glass, granite and white marble.

The ultra-modern architectural design of the buildings has led the cadets sometimes to refer to the academy as "Alcoa City," a term used both with affection and derision. But the functional, clean lines of the buildings compensate for a lack of warmth, and certainly reflect the academy's aim to provide a modern education for men who must cope (Continued on Page 2)

EAGLE STATUE constantly reminds the air force cadet that "man's flight through life is sustained by the power of his knowledge." The statue is in front of Mitchell hall, the cadet dining hall, which has a dining area measuring 1.3 acres. More than 3,000 cadets are fed at each meal. The academy's air gardens with reflecting pools and tree-lined walks are in the background. (Staff photo-encouraging)

Magic Mountain Ski Patrol Is Constant Aid to Valley Skiers

An injured skier receives first aid treatment from members of the Magic Mountain ski patrol. The patrol members either will make the skier fill in his "sit-mark," the hole made in the snow when he fell, or offer first aid and get him down the mountain on a toboggan if he is injured.

Suddenly he loses control, and in a fraction of a second he is a mixture of skis, poles, arms, legs all scattered with mottled outlines. The skier could be anyone, expert or novice, and could be merely annoyed, or seriously injured. But whatever the case, his predicament is the concern of the Magic Mountain ski patrol, one of the busiest volunteer organizations in the area, the ski patrol. Each patrol member must have both standard and advance American Red Cross first aid training, plus on-the-hill training that qualifies him to handle and transport injured skiers off the steep mountain slopes.

The patrol members' first aid cards must be kept current by taking annual refresher courses, just before skiing season begins. In the late fall the patrol has practice sessions, with a review of first aid, with special emphasis placed on splinting.

Patrol members take turns on duty. Two members are assigned official duty when the tow are operating. They patrol the big glens in all Pikes mountain (Continued on Page 2)

ADMIRING A BIG SHEEP TROPHY taken in 1955 by Leo Hooper, Stanley, are fish and game department biologist Wesley M. Shaw, Boise, left, and Floyd Silva, Shoshone. The number of specimens straddled into remote areas in search of palatable meat and handsome trophies is growing. This helps game man-

Trophy Big Game Hunters Contribute To Fish, Game Management in Idaho

BY JIM HUSBARD
Idaho Fish & Game Department Game county's "Mountain Home News" congratulates this writer for a recent feature article including non-resident hunters and fishermen, then biases apartment of whatever origin for stripping the bighead from bulls and hinds—having hundreds of pounds of meat to rot in the field.
"This is a sore spot which will take more than a good article to cure," the paper avers in its unusual "News Sports Mirror" column. "The subject deals with trophy hunters—regardless of whether they are natives of Idaho or the Congo."
The paper lists lesser objections such as a Disney-type film of "mountain goats" or "beats" is of much more value, in our opinion, than a dusty, mangy trophy hanging in the den of a cooperator. A national magazine a few months back featured pictures of a bloodstained polar bear plus a beautiful (from a technical standpoint) color shot of frigid waters stained with crimson. It left something to be desired in the way of satisfaction.
It is true that good trophies are too often allowed to become dusty and shabby—but never "mangy" unless the word is used very loosely and in a colloquial sense. The parasite mites causing mange in animals, and sometimes man, never inhabit dead hoek. Similarly, a trophy may look "lousy" without being infested. As with other ornaments in the home, they need care. Also considerable damage may result if cleaning is attempted without some knowledge and discrimination.
Indians of yore often killed without spilling blood by driving animals over cliffs, and modern biologists use hypodermic quills to immobilize the larger species such as moose, elk and bear. The hope is to make a mere pin prick. Of course, an overdose of the tranquilizing drugs means sudden death without staining the countryside with crimson.
Without profuse external bleedagement where one of the problems is getting adequate harvest of older animals. The idea that trophy hunters bring out the heads and leave the meat to rot is baseless, Idaho fish and game officials declare. Trophies hunters usually are very far minded. (Fish and game photo—staff engraving) by the sportsman who gets to the right place at the right time. This separates the men from the boys, the novice or casual hunter from the professional.

There's no denying that trophy hunters, whether natives of Idaho or the Congo, not only are highly skilled in their avocation but also better outfitted. They are fine marksmen, horsemen, woodsmen and are thoroughly schooled in the habits of the big game animals they pursue.
So complete is their love and respect for their wily quarry that "this animal shall not die in vain." It's axiomatic that skilled hunters parcel out steaks, roasts and chops to friends and relations until scarcely a morsel remains for the homefolks—so anxious are they that everyone knows the excellent eating qualities of wild game. And hundreds of dollars are spent getting the trophy in tip top shape for display and preservation.
Thus the attractions of striking trophies and palatable meat provide strong incentives for hunting. A growing number of men and women are giving the sport the same compelling interest, time and money demanded by other recreational activities such as bridge, golf, bowling, tennis, boating and the like.
Trophy hunters are superb sharpshooters, using equipment built for the job of reaching out and making long, clean kills. The rare cripple is trailed indefinitely, if necessary, and bagged for meat and trophy. Almost never is an animal killed exactly where one of the problems is getting adequate harvest of older animals. The idea that trophy hunters bring out the heads and leave the meat to rot is baseless, Idaho fish and game officials declare. Trophies hunters usually are very far minded. (Fish and game photo—staff engraving)

Boys Attend City Confab. At Shoshone

SHOSHONE, Feb. 10 — Mayor Myrtle C. Burdett explained work of the city council to a group of Cub Scouts who attended the city council meeting Tuesday. The boys were accompanied by the Rev. John P. Turk, Cubmaster.

Members decided to provide a means of thawing pipes for private property owners in cases of emergencies.
If water pipes freeze on private property and a private concern cannot be obtained to do the work, the city crew will be available at a minimum fee of $2.50 to be listed in judgment of the city overseer, Bert Terry.

The action came as result of many pipes freezing within the city during the recent cold spell. Chief of Police Bill Anderson reported he issued 15 traffic citations during January.
A building permit was issued to the B and B Construction company for construction of a chert, blue and brick building to house the AEC offices. Cost of the building is estimated at $15,000.

4 Area Youths Join Air Force

Four Magic Valley youths have joined the air force at the Twin Falls recruiting station. They are Gary L. Luech, Hansen; Darrel Edward Young, Filer; Stephen E. Glauner, Hagerman; and Franklin G. Hill, Hill, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. Hill, of Twin Falls, enlisted for two years through the college graduate, officer training program recently started by the air force.

Luech, Glauner and Young are undergoing eight weeks of basic training at Lackland air force base, Tex., and Hill will undergo three months of basic training, after which he will be commissioned a second lieutenant.

pressly to get the antlers or horns, Idaho fish and game conservation officers say they hardly ever find carcasses stripped of their trophies and rotting in the field. They cite examples of avid sportsmen spending several days "boning" meat from skeletons and back-packing it country-right along with the horns or antlers.
Proud persons find the remains of many more game animals that have been wounded and lost by the average hunter than they do headless carcasses. Here is an area where gun clubs can reduce a significant game loss by sending rangers and adequate instruction for hunters who are not proficient with guns. Many of the clubs already have firing ranges and "lighting-in" days every fall just ahead of hunting season. This could become a subsidiary program.

Finally, trophy hunters help sound game management practices by harvesting mature animals in remote areas, for example, rams with horns curling the legal three-quarters or better. They are doing much with their sportsmanship and beautiful trophies to publicize the paramount need of public responsibility for good conservation programs.

LINCOLNIANA IS INSPECTED by Naomi Dopsen, Twin Falls. The material was left to her by her mother, the late Mrs. Charles Dopsen. Lincoln's Birthday Anniversary Has Special Meaning to Twin Falls Woman Tomorrow is the anniversary of Abraham Lincoln's birthday. This means many things to many people, but for Naomi Dopsen, Twin Falls, it probably means a little more.

Miss Dopsen is the owner of several pieces of clothing and momentos that have a direct relation to Lincoln and his family.
The articles were left to Miss Dopsen by her mother, the late Mrs. Charles Dopsen, who died three years ago.
Miss Dopsen's great-great-aunt worked as a domestic in the home of Abraham Lincoln when he lived in Springfield, Ill. She was an immigrant girl, who was born in 1832 in Norway.
When a young girl she went to work for the family and did general housework. During the time she worked for the family she experienced both the wrath and the kindness of Mrs. Lincoln, who was known for her temper.

One time, according to Miss Dopsen, her great-great-aunt was in the kitchen eating a cookie. For some reason this infuriated Mrs. Lincoln, who happened to walk into the room. Mrs. Lincoln flew into a rage and bit her servant's neck.
She immediately was sorry for losing her temper and seven years later she was able to atone for her wrath. She helped make the wedding dress for Miss Dopsen's great-great-aunt and gave her many things for her trousseau.

Magic Mountain Volunteer Patrol Is Constant Aid to Valley Skiers

(Continued From Page 19) and the main runs on Magic Mountain. Members assist in making the runs safe by flagging obstacles, filling in the "skidmarks" thoughtless skiers have left, and taking care of the few skiers who are injured during the season. They also may aid a novice skier, who is having trouble with the tow or lift. And at the end of the day it is the patrolmen who "sweep" the hill, to make sure all skiers have made the last run without mishap. In the event of an injury, the man on duty is given the skidmark to get aid to the skier rapidly. The toboggans are equipped with spinnets, first aid kits, blankets and a waterproof canvas cover, enough equipment to make an injured person comfortable in the most adverse weather. Radio Work Is Hobby of Housewives

(Continued From Page 19) about the subject, so she joined the Magic Valley Radio amateurs, a local club of short wave hams. After taking the 14-week course the club offers to its members, she got her novice license, which enables her to send code on short wave frequencies. Mrs. Wannan now can send code at a practical rate of speed so she can enjoy communicating with other hams throughout the West. She is practicing for the conditional license, which she must take in June. In addition to being interested in the communication aspects of shortwave radio operation, she also is interested in the technical side. Shortly after she joined the club she purchased a transmitter kit and spent the rest of the winter assembling it. She says she did the work "the time between her household chores." But she has kept the shortwave equipment in a place where it is handy—right in her kitchen, where she can use it when she has some spare time.

MAGIC VALLEY PORTRAIT Bert Havens Encourages Area Youths To Benefit From Physical Exercise

HAZELTON, Feb. 10 — Bert Havens is a 37-year-old man who regularly practices ice skating on the frozen surface of Wilson lake, north of Hazelton. Havens is devoted to ice skating and the philosophy of keeping in good physical condition. Each winter he spends all his spare hours teaching youngsters the art of ice skating—something he has studied since he was a 4-year-old farm boy in Kansas. He has lived on the farm he homesteaded on the south shore of Wilson Lake since 1922. He notes that the lake and the ice skating facilities it offers have held his interest since then. During the winter he practices skating practically every day, and during the summer months, he makes regular trips to Sun Valley to practice and stay in good condition.

BERT HAVENS

Through the years, Havens who refers to himself as "just an old farmer," has had the opportunity at Sun Valley to teach the finer points of figure skating to such personalities as Gary Cooper, Clark Gable and the Shah of Iran. But he admits he is always glad to be "just an old farmer," and has had the opportunity at Sun Valley to teach the finer points of figure skating to such personalities as Gary Cooper, Clark Gable and the Shah of Iran. Four Fined BURLY, Feb. 10 — Four motorists were fined by Justice of the Peace Alfred Crane this week for violations of the motor act. Merrin E. Kenner, 28, Burley, was fined $10 for an overwidth load of hay and Lloyd Haunstrup, 25, Hazelton, $5 for riding bicycles. Here the young people walk about four miles a week and refuse to ride bicycles. But, Havens admits this probably is just a sign of the times. He says most persons have the same attitude towards exercise, little realizing how they will pay for it with ill health in later life. "I suppose if it had been here later, I would have the same attitude," he says, "but I'm an advocate of clean, healthy, clean-minded. It's hard to forget at my age."

MURTAUGH, Feb. 10 — Art Carrier and Bob Breeding were appointed to represent Murtaugh Grange on a citizens' committee which is being formed to make a survey of all aspects of the proposed reorganization of the Kimberly, Hansen and Murtaugh school districts. Representative organizations will be asked to serve on the committee.

Breeding made an agricultural report pertaining to potato marketing and Henry Petersen made a report on the wilderness bill at a Grange meeting this week. Mrs. Art Carrier, secretary, opened the program with a review of Lincoln's life. Mrs. Hansen read an article on Lincoln's associations. Three violinists and three pianists and the men serenaded the women by playing "Let Me Call You Sweetheart."

Partners for refreshments were found by matching volunteers. Mr. and Mrs. William McCoy and Mr. and Mrs. George Hoada were hosts. A silver offering was taken to be given to the Keith family who lost their furniture and clothing in a home fire last week.

Way to Preserve Outdoor Recreation Facilities for U.S. Is Vital Problem

EDITOR'S NOTE—As chairman of the Outdoor Recreation Resources Review Commission, which was set up by President Kennedy and is headed by Robert M. La Follette, Jr., the following article is a special contribution to the Times-News. It is the first of a series of articles which will be published in this column.

By LAURANCE ROCKEFELLER
Written for The Associated Press

During the work of the Outdoor Recreation Resources Review Commission, the only objection by American OAs to a question often put to them in World War II has come to mind.

"What are you fighting for?" the reviewer was asked.

The answer, most often, blined on the preservation of the kind of life they had left behind.

Bracketed by that answer is the total of the good life in this country. While sometimes difficult to see, the total includes experiences rooted in freedom and the democratic process.

While our natural heritage is still wonderfully rich in spirit, will and outlook will be natural setting for the American scene.

as those which once taken from the ground are gone forever. In the case of past experience and knowledge, it would appear for instance from the amount of current pollution of air and water that not all the hard things have been taken to heart.

Proper care of the outdoor heritage is inseparable from the central concern of the recommissioned and citizen members of the commission: to make available to the American people that quantity and quality of land and water they want and need for recreation which includes an array of activities vital to their way of life.

Taken together these recommendations are big in scope and urgent in their call on public and private effort. They could be achieved and hope to keep up with the transformation in prospect for this country over the next generation.

What is involved, basically, is the proposition that every citizen is entitled to a share of the good things of this life, and among them are the enjoyment of the nation's heritage of landscape, lakes and coasts. Equally important—perhaps even more so—is a conviction that the character of the American people, their spirit, will and outlook will be shaped to a large degree by the nature of the physical surroundings.

It is clearly predictable that these surroundings are going to be subject to greater pressures in the future than in the past.

Barring catastrophe, the basic natural scene of the United States faster in our lifetime than ever before will continue their civilization puts special strains on momentum at least to the year 2000.

It is noteworthy that more than half of the American people, almost every year, travel to celebrate the arrival of the next winter. Between now and then, the population will increase considerably and they portion living in metropolitan areas also will rise.

People will have more of just about everything that an abundant economy can produce—including more leisure time, money, and more cars. Combined with the larger population, these factors will generate a demand for outdoor recreation greater than the population growth alone would indicate.

In view of these prospects, open space reasonably accessible to where most people live are now a necessity, not merely a luxury. If the quality of life and man's balance with nature are to be preserved in this country, a direct relationship exists between many kinds of outdoor recreation and physical fitness.

The fact that only two of every seven American youths measure up to the current standards of the U.S. Army amounts to a national shame and scandal. The subject has lately started drawing the public attention it merits.

With further reduction of the average work week virtually certain in the coming decades, this nation will have the opportunity to realize more fully the great dream of mankind that the individual shall have a rich and rewarding life. This could be an important degree from constructive use of the growing amount of leisure time. Boys and girls could become acquainted with the outdoors, not only on the way to school or home, but only in the youngsters in the largest cities been denied this enriching experience, but those of the new suburbs also have been shut out of nature close to home, except for what they find in the backyard.

To look across open land, hear a songbird, smell the moss in the woods on the walk to school are behavior to an understanding of the natural forces of the landscape. And man must understand he is one species among many who depend upon each other and upon the natural environment which sustains them all.

It takes a department store of outdoor recreation area to satisfy the one-day, week-end, and vacation requirements of our people. The matching of the supply of areas with the large, varied demand is an enormous and complicated undertaking. The major problem is to preserve open space reasonably accessible to urban populations, for their enjoyment and benefit.

MAGIO VALLEY CADET, Thomas F. Mahan, Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas F. Mahan, Jerome, talks with two of his former teachers, who visited the academy last week. Talking with teachers, who visited the academy last week. Talking with teachers, who visited the academy last week. Talking with teachers, who visited the academy last week.

LUNCHEON DISCUSSION concerning everything from the academy program at the academy to international problems drew the attention of four of the Magio Valley educators and their staff, Capt. Robert Koornik, special assistant to the superintendent of the academy. The luncheon was held Monday at the academy officer's club, during the day-long tour of the academy.

Mission of New Air Force Academy Explained to Area Educator Group

with the problems of the future. The aims of the academy were outlined to the educators by Col. Virgil J. O'Connor, registrar and director of admissions.

Colonel O'Connor was one of several academy officers who spoke to the men Monday morning. He outlined the objectives of the academy, which are, basically, to provide instruction, experience and motivation to the cadets so they will graduate with the knowledge and leadership ability to perform as career officers in the air force. He urged the educators to pass on what they learned at the academy to the students in their schools who would qualify for the academy.

He explained how the cadets are selected and tested, and also explained the curriculum of the school.

The cadets who complete the academy's four-year course of study are graduated with bachelors of science degrees and commission as second lieutenants in the regular air force.

The rigorous course of study totals 189 semester hours and is designed to provide a foundation for further development in any of the numerous career fields open to air force officers. It is similar to an engineering nor a liberal arts program, but contains elements of both.

The required academic program totals 160 1/2 semester hours and is balanced with basic and applied sciences, and, as actualization programs, established at the academy in 1957.

Under the enrichment program, cadets with exceptional ability or previous college training, may broaden their knowledge of a subject area by taking courses previously taken in college. These courses are available at an actual rate on some students taking two years of mathematics in one semester, or completing over 100 hours of credit in one semester hour.

This gives them freedom to take multiple courses offered in the enrichment program.

It was stressed that the air force believes knowledge of the sciences must be complemented by a broad understanding of man's political, social and spiritual heritage and aspirations.

At the end of the briefing officers said, "We don't expect our graduates to be experts in everything, but we do expect to give them the kind of education so they will know how to cope with any problem and how to find the kind of help they will need to solve their problems."

Under the enrichment program, cadets are given the opportunity to earn a major in their bachelor of science degree on four subject areas: basic sciences, with options in mathematics, physics, and chemistry; engineering/science, with options in aeronautical engineering and electrical engineering; public affairs, a major offered primarily under the division of social sciences; and a general culture, a major offered primarily under the division of humanities.

The caliber of cadets at the academy is well pointed out by the fact that 63 per cent of them are enrolled in the enrichment program.

If the educators went away with one basic impression of the academy, it was that the academy is well pointed out by the fact that 63 per cent of them are enrolled in the enrichment program.

Another impressive fact concerning the academy is the quality of the staff—composed entirely of air force personnel. The staff compares most favorably with colleges across the nation, for 80 per cent of the members have master degrees and 20 per cent have doctor degrees, compared to a national average of 73 per cent and 22 per cent, respectively.

This quality is reflected in the number of Rhodes scholars selected from academy graduates. Colonel O'Connor notes that next fall 10 per cent of the Rhodes scholars who will go to England will be recent academy graduates.

Another fact of the academy is the amount of attention to individual attention. This individual attention is complemented with an imaginative and master course program headed by Mrs. Bernard Smith. It is his job to find out what the problems of the cadets are and help them solve them—and the problems are many when young men are taken from their homes and placed in a rigorous military environment.

Motivation to attend and be graduated from the academy is sometimes dampened after a year or two of discipline and difficult work.

Intercollegiate, during the four years at the academy. Even the most finicky cadet could find a sport to his liking. Some of the sports and the facilities for them are football, soccer, field hockey, cross-country running, basketball, boxing, wrestling, judo, handball, squash, water polo, swimming, gymnastics, skiing, fencing, rifle, pistol, track, lacrosse, rugby, baseball, tennis and golf.

Many of the area educators noted they would like to have the equipment. From just one of the rooms in the gymnasium in their own school.

After touring the gymnasium they visited the library, which contained everything from rare book collections, containing the history of military power, to music listening rooms.

A typical classroom was visited, where the educators visited the many questions posed by the cadets.

Then the tour moved to Arnold Hall, the academy's social center, where the educators visited the Idaho cadets, Earle Schafer, superintendent of class A school district No. 261, Jerome, visited with the only Magio Valley cadet, Thomas Mahan, Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Mahan, Jerome.

The educators viewed the visitors' center and returned to the officers club for a social hour of drinks.

Tuesday morning they were up at 6:30 a.m., ate breakfast, were taken by bus to the airfield at Peterson field, and arrived back in Twin Falls Tuesday afternoon.

Educators on the trip were Rex Engelking, superintendent of class A school district No. 412, Blaine; Ray O. Jefferson, principal of the Ketchum elementary school; Alfred M. Derr, superintendent of class B school district No. 316, Hildreth; Nell A. Tiamas, superintendent of class-B school district No. 314, Dietrich; Orville Pedersen, superintendent of class B school district No. 234, Dilla; John Severson, superintendent of class B school district No. 312, Shoshone; Wayne Fagg, superintendent of class A school district No. 222, Wendell; Harry D. Peterson, superintendent of class B school district No. 121, Fairfield; Dee Keller, superintendent of class B school district No. 231, Gooding; Richard Baumgardner, dean of class A school district No. 411, Twin Falls; Boyd Lewis, director of guidance center, and Twin Falls; Roy Behler, superintendent of class A school district No. 261, Jerome; Para Moore, superintendent of class A school district No. 151, Burley; Omond Meyer, superintendent of class A school district No. 821 (Minilo), Rupert; Paul Taylor, guidance counselor, Hae Rupert; Deane Johnson, superintendent of class A school district No. 102, Olena; Perry and Kay Hill, guidance directors, class A school district No. 262, Eden.

THERE GOES TOM WITH A BOX OF VALENTINES. CANDY-GLOSS IS FOR CANDY!

WHAT? HE KNOWS I HAVE NO MONEY TO BUY HER ANY AND HE'S TRYING TO BEAT MY TIME!

I'M GOING TO GIVE HIM A PUNCH IN THE SHOULDER AND EVERYBODY ELSE THAT TRIES TO GIVE HER VALENTINES!

OH, NO YOU'RE NOT BUSTER!

ALL GIVE YOU MONEY TO BUY HER CANDY IF YOU'LL ACT LIKE A GENTLEMAN. IF YOU SHOW HER YOU'RE NOT A GENTLEMAN, SHE'LL HAPPY-SHE'S SO POPULAR, SHE'LL THINK MORE OF YOU!

AND...

HERE'S A VALENTINE FOR THE PRETTIEST GIRL IN TOWN!

WHY, THANK YOU DAVEY! DON'T GO TO ANY OTHER GIRL IN TOWN!

LATER...

DID YOU TAKE MY ADVICE AND ACT LIKE A GENTLEMAN, DAVEY?

YEAH, AND I PROVED I WAS GLAD SHE HAD SO MANY FRIENDS!

HELPED HER EAT ALL THE CANDY THEY BROUGHT!

LOOK AT THAT MESS! WHY CAN'T YOU BE NEAT LIKE ED ZING?

WAL, IF YOU'D SEE HOW HE ACTS AT THE OFFICE...

MORACE MOVES! IF YOU CAN'T SAY SOMETHING NICE ABOUT SOMEONE, DON'T SAY ANYTHING! THE WAY YOU...

TUT, TUT... IF YOU CAN'T SAY ANYTHING NICE ABOUT ME, DON'T SAY ANYTHING!

LATER...

HEY MORACE, WHAT'S WITH BARE? SHE HADN'T SPOKEN FOR HOURS!

NO—SHE HADN'T!

I NEVER REALIZED BEFORE I HAD SO MANY THINGS OF ANYTHING NICE TO SAY ABOUT ME!

OUT

FOR HEAVEN'S SAKE, YOU WERE OUT PRETTY LATE LAST NIGHT AS BEING AS YOU COULD USE A LITTLE MORE SLEEP!

WHAT ABOUT BREAKFAST?

THE REST OF US WILL TAKE CARE OF THAT—BACK YOU GO!

I'LL ADMIT I'M PRETTY TIRED BUT I'LL GET UP LONG ENOUGH TO GET BREAKFAST AND THEN COME BACK AND SLEEP FOR A WHILE!

NO ARGUMENT, PLEASE—LIL, WILLIS AND I GET THE MEAL READY! THEN WE'LL CALL YOU!

YOUR MOTHER'S GETTING A LITTLE MORE REST—YOU KEEP BREAKFAST AND I'LL SET THE TABLE!

I CAN'T FIND YOUR WAFFLE RECIPES, MOTHER! JUST HOW MUCH FLOUR AND MILK DO YOU USE?—AND HOW MANY EGGS?

I DON'T WANT ANY COFFEE—HOW ABOUT LIL?

SURE I DO—AND MOTHER AND DAD ARE SURE TO!

HOW MANY SPOONS OF COFFEE, MOM? I DON'T WANT TO PUT IT IN THE POT!

HOW WILL PROBABLY WANT AN EGG OR TWO?

HEY MOTHER, HOW MANY EGGS DO YOU WANT AND HOW DO YOU WANT THEM—BOILED, SCRAMBLED, OR POACHED?

OKAY, MOTHER—YOU CALL ME DOWN NOW!

HOWS THAT FOR A SURPRISE BREAKFAST?

NOW WASN'T THAT A GOOD STORY? I THOUGHT YOU'D ENJOY IT!

HO! HO! THAT'S A GOOD ONE!

HERE'S ANOTHER JOKE I HEARD SOME PLACE...

...EVEN WHEN MOTHER IS TELLING THEM!!

BLACKIE BEARS' DAD IS A DIPLOMAT.

HO! HO! HO! THAT'S RICH! MOTHER, YOU'RE A GOOD STORY TELLER!

DAD! WHEN IT COMES TO HAVING A SENSE OF HUMOR YOU'RE THE GREATEST!!
