Will Federal Budget Deficit Benefit Economy? U.S. Asks

NEW YORK, June 16 (AP)—Another sharp slump by the stock market, further loss by President Kennedy for business expansion and the question of whether a federal budget deficit would benefit the economy, had the spotlight beam on the subject.

All were interwoven in the fabric of the nation's business picture.

President Kennedy said in an address at Yale University Sunday that the government would not print a "fable issue" to finance that "any and all additional business of the speculative stock market, temporary and boisterous plans, speculative in character are the result of lack of confidence in an administration."

The road to world peace has been pointed out by U. Thant, acting secretary-general of the United Nations, in an imaginative and humanitarian project for the U. N. Idaho Publishers Meet Kennedy, Get Frank Picture of World Affairs Today

WASHINGTON, June 16—President Kennedy's breakfast with Idaho publishers was a frank and open discussion of the state of the world today. The President was joined by a group of 10 Idaho publishers at a White House luncheon.

Indeed, the President was so frank in the informality of the small group that Pierre Salinger, his press secretary, afterward asked that all remarks regarding international affairs be off the record. Salinger expressed the opinion that this meeting was the best of the series of such meetings because of the small size of the group which permitted an easy give-and-take exchange with the publishers.

The President covered the globe in Friday's discussion, which varied from the price of Idaho potatoes, the depressed mining and lumber industries, and sugar acreage allotments to various trouble spots. It was the first time for each of us to dine at the White House but the easy cordiality and directness of the President kept everyone at ease.

My impression was that of a man relaxed but determined, aware of the vast and complicated problems that confront the head of state, here and elsewhere.

For nearly two hours, we talked in the private dining room, a privilege available because there were only a dozen at the table. Later, Dwight Johnson, of KHOI, Boise, who was

Guardmen to Take to Field For Training

GOWEN FIELD, June 16—Magic Valley's national guard troops will move to bivouac area Sunday evening to begin the second week of annual active duty training here.

For four days and nights the units, part of the 118th armored cavalry regiment, will train in the field, wearing military uniforms, undergoing night training, "fighting" guerrillas and living the life of a combat soldier.

Special new training this year for the regiment includes counterinsurgency and guerrilla training. Guard members dressed as guerrillas and with special instructions will harass troops in the field, giving them a taste of the unconventional type of warfare.

The new guerrilla training is receiving special emphasis during the bivouac period as prescribed by the U.S. continental army command. The guardmen have received some preliminary training along these lines.

Tactical situations will prevail in the field for the guardmen and will be closely observed by evaluators of the sixth U.S. Army. Close adherence to simulated combat regulations will be emphasized.

After the bivouac period the troops will convoy back to Gowen field where they will clean equipment and prepare to leave. Friday will be payday and the troops will leave Saturday morning for another 15-day active duty training period.

Nearly Entire Hansen Lodge Will Attend Denver Conclave

By DOROTHY STEELSMITH
HANSEN, June 16—Nearly a whole lodge going to a national convention? Sounds impossible, but that is what the Royal Neighbors camp at Hansen is planning to do.

To date, 28 of about 30 active members are making plans to attend the national convention June 25 through 29 in Denver.

So far as can be determined no other camp from Idaho has ever undertaken such a project. They never have done more than one or two delegates before and few have even done that. What makes it even more unusual, is that Hansen is a camp in a village of only 407 official census figures from the surrounding farm area.

"Operation Denver" was staged when the group learned the quadrennial national convention would be held in Denver, close enough that it didn't seem to be an impossible dream.

Although it has been known for four years, most of the fund-raising projects have been conducted during the past year and a half. "Operation Denver" began to take on reality with even non-members and the community as a whole becoming interested in the project.

Enough money has been raised through the united efforts of the individuals in the camp, and as the time came closer the enthusiasm became more and more apparent.

Members have had cooked food sales too numerous to mention, rummage sales, pancake suppers, served at a dog show and a farm sale and other things. One of the largest undertakings was Christmas and all-occasion greeting cards and novelty sales, carried out on the "party plan" idea.

When this resulted "almost" in a monopoly or "corner" on the card market in Hansen.

A bus has been chartered for the round trip, hotel bills will be paid and other banquet tickets or side trips which delegates may determine after they arrive.

The local lodge has been asked to give a special drill at the national convention and the group includes 16 drill team members, the drill captain and theme.

Plans of the drill centers around "Here We Have Idaho." They will carry a large masonic map of Idaho measuring approximately five feet high by three and one-half feet long.

It is painted white on both sides and all the Royal Neighbors camps in Idaho are designated on the map with purple triangles, pennants on both sides. "Here We Have Idaho" will be hung during a part of the drill in which the revolving map will be displayed.

Those carrying the map are Mrs. Lena Calico, Mrs. Minerva

Project Begins Near Magic Dam

HALLEY, June 16—Construction of homes on a 1,700-acre Magic reservoir is expected to be in full swing this week, reported Peter Pootles, sales manager of Magic Village.

The Magic Dam and 1,700 acres were purchased by William Johnston, Victorville, Calif., attorney. Mrs. Mary Johnston, realtor at Murphy's Hot Springs; James Patterson, Ketchum engineer and Peter Pootles.

One hundred sixty lots have been subdivided to date and it is planned to subdivide 8,000 more, Pootles said.

Rainbow lodge has been organized and operated the past several years by Mr. and Mrs. Otto Janousek. Several lots already have been purchased.

"Operation Denver" is the enthusiasm of the members which has been so great that the average attendance at regular meetings has been 100 members. Rambo notes. Members are anxious to learn what progress is being made.

The local camp was organized in December, 1959, and the charter was granted on January 19, 1960. There were only 18 or 20 charter members. Several of them are still active. Lodge members are Stella Hughes, first orator; Mrs. Elsie Henry, Mrs. Minnie Bedow, Mrs. Cloe Weech, drill captain and Mrs. Edna Baily and Mrs. Clara Kopp.

Ernie Watkins, now deceased, who was then district officer, was who then district officer at Twin Falls, organized the Hansen camp and is known affectionately as "mother of the Hansen lodge" membership has been secured as this is an insurance fraternity and many members who have moved from the community or can no longer attend meetings, keep up their membership. They are both co-ordinator and members and there are about 60 members including all of these.

The group has many other activities, also. They feature quarterly dinners honoring members whose birthday anniversaries occur during those quarters.

They have an annual Christmas party and distribute treats to shut-ins in the community. They have been conducting the annual career fund drive for years, with Mrs. Cloe Weech as the Hansen chairman. They also have a joint Woodman-Royal Neighbors luncheon at the Twin Falls county fair each year, and the funds raised from this go to building and other expenses.

The group leaves at 8 a.m. Sunday, June 24, and will go non-stop to Denver.

Plans are being made to "farm" the children to grandmothers and aunts by some, husbands are being coached how to eat out of the home freezer, as each "batch." Precious pets, dogs, cats, birds and even the chickens are to be fed by the neighbors and friends.

Some of the women have been serving every precious moment they can find time for themselves and some of the others, so they can all be stylishly gowned each day for the many activities. All details are being planned meticulously as members want a care-free week with no worries.

Chances Improving, He Says Of Publishers' Discovery

Times-News: A chance is improving. A number of publishers, Republicans and Democrats, finally observe a fact which Nikita Khrushchev discovered more than a year ago. The fact is in no more capacious hands than I thought. The fact is that the capability should be observed, though nervously, and it is easy to see that it does not antagonize the ease with which he can be harassed by the Eisenhower administration, generally, and to the great concern of the administration, specifically. Commerce Board Is Criticized For Stand on Telling Costs

Times-News: John H. then-chairman of the Commerce Board asked Jerome Ynes Kelly whether he wanted to publish (as they say have in years past) the figures on the cost of living, the cost of the dollar and the cost of the dollar and the cost of the dollar. He said that he did not wish to publish it. This is rather odd position in view of the fact that they have set up a commission to study the cost of living for next August, and that taxpayers are expected to pay another $40,000 to do so. They really expect to see them some more money on their refusal to give public accounting of what was done in the more than $700,000 that year? They stated that the figures are available for anyone who wants them. I questioned them on this, and stated my reason for questioning.

Liberal Label for Hansen Is Propaganda, Writer Avers

Times-News: In reading the Times-News for the primary election, I noted that several candidates for Congress from our district called themselves "liberals." One of these is Rep. Orval Hansen (also a candidate for congress) a "liberal" label. Mr. Hansen has the same. This is definitely a familiar with all candidates running for this office, and is in my opinion that Orval Hansen presents true positive conservatism, and has done a lot to promote conservatism in Idaho. For example that bears this out is the fact that Mr. Hansen was elected by his fellow Republican voters for the important position of lieutenant governor in the last session of the Idaho legislature. Orval Hansen has and many other conservative and active interest in Idaho affairs and politics. Recently I was extremely pleased to hear of the candidacy of Orval Hansen for U.S. representative from our district. I was acquainted with this exceptional young man while we were both at the University of Idaho while at the university. Orval not only led his entire class scholastically but, if scores must be kept, I am sure he led us all in service to the university community. His subsequent record in law school as an administrative assistant to the senior U.S. senator from Idaho, and as a member and leader of the Idaho legislature, indicate he has continued his industrious and winning ways. This is my idea of the type of man I want working for me. KENNETH R. BRIGGS, MD., 708 Lowell street Peabody, Mass.

June Is Traditional Time For Brides, Special Cakes

By CROD OBREN
Times News Women's Editor
Of the hundreds of brides the baker makes, nothing separates the "men from the mice" as the laymen and delight of a wedding cake. The good decorator is like a good architect. He must know how to lay the cake out so the eye will sweep pleasantly from the bottom of the cake to the ornament on the top tier.

Whether you are a professional baker or a favorite aunt of the bride given the job of preparing the cake, you'll need lots of time, planning and patience to make the cake something the new-weds will remember.

June being the traditional time for weddings, is a busy time for Twin Falls bakers. We watched one, Emory L. Trotman, construct a three-tiered cake decorated in white and pink. (The old idea of decorating a wedding cake entirely in white is giving way to the use of pastels. Depending on the colors the bride or attendants are wearing, the alternate pastel colors can be worked into the cake design.)

The separate layers had just been removed from the oven and allowed to cool. For a three-tiered cake, six layers (two for each tier) are required. This particular cake, served at the reception for the wedding of Bonnie Franco, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Franco, Twin Falls, was made to serve about 200 persons.

About 30 pounds of cake batter and from 10 to 15 pounds of icing were used. The amateur can use any mix he wishes, but most bakers prefer a very light batter. Most of the actual decorating is done with a beveled spatula, but buttercream frosting is used just as well, Trotman said. Placing the bottom layer on parchment, Trotman began to frost the cake. Each tier is laid separately and placed upon the preceding tier. He noticed that he uses a moistened spatula to keep the icing workable.

After he had ordered a "cake with columns, please," and after the layers were laid, the baker placed the columns in the center of the bottom and second tiers.

The columns, which he learned are usually used only for the wedding and sent back to the bakery—made of miniature white swans, the traditional column adornment, are attached to the base of the round divider. The columns, necessarily Greek, are attached to the swans.

The columns, which are used for the wedding and sent back to the bakery—made of miniature white swans, the traditional column adornment, are attached to the base of the round divider. The columns, necessarily Greek, are attached to the swans.

One question frequently asked about wedding cakes is "How does one keep the heavy layers from sinking down into the one beneath?"

The answer is no doubt filled with physics formulas and natural laws of equilibrium, but I would guess that it's a matter of balance and perfect centering. The bottom layers are larger and there is more mass to support the other, lighter tiers.

The second layers are placed on a circular plastic base which fits into the columns and the bottom tier. A similar base also supports the top tier.

The baker may show his individual talent and originality during the actual decorating. The icing is perfect—consistency for shaping into the flowers.

Some bakers use a plastic cone for the icing, but I find that it's a lot easier to use a paper one; it can be thrown away afterwards," said Trotman.

The best paper to use is a vegetable parchment, although any type may be used. Waxed paper also is excellent for making an icing cone. A good-sized cone is about 9 inches wide and 17 inches long.

The cone may be formed by tracing an inner edge of the paper with the forefinger and thumb, rolling the paper over the right hand and making the point clear sharp. The tip of the cone is cut off about one-half to three-quarters of an inch from the end. The decorative tube (which comes in various shapes from stars to scalloped) is dropped into the cone.

The cone should be filled about three-quarters full of frosting; the top is folded or rolled over. Smaller cones may be made by cutting the oblong piece of paper in half and using the triangle that results.

For the cake Trotman used pastel pink roses and silver leaves with scalloped borders and shell designs.

A miniature bridal pair was used for the top ornament.

"I find that most bride's don't care about keeping the columns as keepsakes, but always want the ornament."

He suggested the entire cake so you could get an idea what it would look like at the wedding. The layers must be taken to the church in separate boxes and then reassembled. (I didn't ask if he had ever had any accidents with wedding cakes!)

While he was putting on the finishing touches, a woman in a favorite aunt? came to ask him about cutting the cake at the wedding.

"There are many ways to cut a bridal cake, but I have found through experience that cutting parallel slices works out best. You start at the back of the cake on the bottom tier by making a horizontal cut, then you cut a rectangular slice from that large slice. That way you can serve more people and keep the front of the cake looking nice longer."

"Experience" is right, Trotman, who was a baker in Boise before moving to Twin Falls, stated his career at the age of 16.

He mentioned that the cake should be made at least a day ahead of the wedding, and refrigerated to make it firm. Some wedding trays/cakes can be made about two weeks before the event. Do!ed icing recipe can be found in any good cookbook. Here is a decorating buttercream frosting that can be used for all kinds of cakes and pastries. Ingredients are vegetable shortening and confectioner's sugar, in a ratio of one to one and one-half, and evaporated milk or cream. Cream the mixture at high speed for five minutes.

For laster icing, use half butter and half shortening. To thin down the icing for inscriptions and borders, and a few drops of liquid. Store in an airtight container in the refrigerator and whip before using a second time. The frosting can be made from the center to the outside of the cake and then placed with the roses before handling.

TOO THIRTY TO CUT, this wedding cake is a symbol of the festive atmosphere of June, the month for wedding bells and bridal showers. This cake, displayed during the Magic Valley Home show, was decorated in coral-colored icing by Emory Trotman, a Twin Falls baker. Romantic traditional decorations of bluebirds and roses accent the shell and scalloped borders. A colored spotlight on the cake strikingly lit the miniature bride's dress. This four-tiered beauty is a true test of the baker's art. (Times-News photo)

Cape Shapes Are Disarming At Fashion Show

NEW YORK, June 16 (AP)—The hottest woman-cannibal into style as Pauline Triviere presented the feminine figure, not only as a completely disarming creature, but one completely disarmed.

Although the lovely model demonstrating Miss Triviere's winter collection at her press preview here were not Venus, many were without arms for defense.

Their upper limbs were bound by capes rounded at the shoulders, clinging tenuously at the sides, and flaring out slightly at the hemline. Hands did manage to grasp their ways occasionally through slashes high on the cape fronts.

But there were also capes as voluminous as a man's and just as full of tricks. Some were in big checks, colorful plaids and Mrs. bold tweeds for blustery daytime use.

But others in velvet lined with more velvet sprinkled with rhinestones, or made from broadfall for vivid blue wool or rustling taffetas were meant for night's brightest lights.

Under those bulky capes and alany capes too, Miss Triviere's models wore spare, sleeveless and bellows dresses shaped like pop bones. Bustlines were high, waistlines were defined but not fitted, hips curved and slim skirts flared into what is called the trumpet shape.

Safety-Warning Given at Burley

BURLEY, June 16—"Motorcycles and scooters are not toys, but deadly machines when not handled correctly," says Police Chief George Warrell.

He asked operators to drive as if their lives depend upon it. There has already been one serious accident this summer involving a motorcycle, "but there could be worse ones if some care is not taken," he added.

The chief suggested motorcyclist and scooter operators form a club to promote safety.

He said the police department intends to crack down on all

HIGH OVER HIS HEAD goes weight lifted by Tim Lavens while coach Paul Ostyn wonders if two ninth graders will ever get as big as the senior, John Wilson and Tom White probably are working the same thing. An all-around athlete, Lavens was raising and lowering a total of 187 pounds when the picture was taken. That weight is considerably more than the poundage carried by either of the other two youths. The course is expected to take some nine weeks. (Times-News photo)

Muscles Grow and Grow While 83 Students Sweat Out New Program

(Additional Photos Page 26) Eighty-three students, ranging from one seventh grader to several who were graduated from the local high school and are heading to college next fall, are enrolled in a physical fitness program under the direction of Paul Ostyn, school athletic director.

The 83 participants are divided into two groups. Upperclassesmen are in session from 8:30 to 10 a.m. and underclassmen from 10:30 to 12:30 p.m. Only those students completing the entire course will be given school credit. It is pointed out, although, of course, no credit will be earned by those who have been graduated and are heading to college.

Coch Ostyn, in explaining the program, points out each class session is divided into four parts. For the first 25 minutes the boys engage in regular calisthenics followed by about a 15 minute agility drill which features sudden stops during running and also running sideways and backwards.

The balance of the one and one-half hour stint is spent with selected isometric system exercises, which pit the strength of the student against objects which cannot be moved, and in work with the weights. The course will run nine weeks.

The course has attracted a cross section of the male student body, ranging from boys who tip the scales at little more than 80 or 90 pounds, right on up to the "muscle men" weighing more than 225 pounds.

"Improvement in every boy was noted not long after the course got under way," Ostyn said. "No matter how well developed a youth's body is there is always room for improvement and especially muscles seldom used in everyday exercises."

One of the students showing progress is Dick Harmer, who lost his left arm at the shoulder in an accident when he was 3 years old. Now 18 years old and just graduated as salutatorian, he enrolled in the course before entering college.

His reaction to much hard exercise is somewhat typical at the start of any similar program.

"The first day I thought I would die," young Harmer said. "When the second day was over I was afraid that I wouldn't. Now, however, the exercises are coming a lot easier."

Graduation Puts Boy Near Military Decision

Graduation puts a teen-aged boy on the brink of a new world and thrusts upon him one of the major decisions of his life.

For some this decision is made easier than for others. Many look forward to continuing their education at the college of their choice in the fall. These are among the lucky ones. For the boys who do not have the means to take advantage of these privileges, the way and the decision become harder.

But more and more these boys are facing their future realistically. Many of them enlist in a branch of the service, taking advantage of the numerous courses offered in skilled fields and at the same time fulfill their military obligation.

To the majority of these men, service is not a necessary thing that has to be done before starting life. Instead, they view it as a vehicle to an educational end.

"I won't try to deny that the draft gets the boys thinking about the service. But over the years I have come to the conclusion—now more than ever before—that the boys realize the army can help them to mature and to learn at the same time," he continues.

"About 70 per cent of the boys enlisted—here are 17 years old. This is a year before they even have to sign up for the draft. And the drafting age for the past few years has been 22, not counting the special buildings such as calling in the reserves.

"The standing army is something like 973,000 men. It's over a million now with all these reservists but in normal times the congress has set the former figure. Of that total, only eight per cent are drafted. Enlistments far surpass the draft totals every year.

"This indicates to me that the boys realize the educational value that goes along with a tour of duty. Our latest figures show 674

Basic First Aid Can Spell Life Or Death in Many Car Accidents

As the summer is a time for motorists to enjoy themselves and scores have comment of "thank the number of the phone I lived in."

But in any accident, the victim is the most important thing. If the victim is unconscious, it is better to move the vehicle on fire than move the victim. In common sense directions, an accident victim can be made more comfortable with a blanket or coat. Some first aid can be given. But don't pile on too many blankets. There is some shock in any accident. The victim may be unconscious. Get him to relax and make sure the victim is breathing before applying any artificial respiration. If artificial respiration is used, use the new mouth-to-mouth method.

If you are the first one at the accident, remember your first obligation is to the victim. (Continued on Page 11)

Shakers May Continue Life With New Recruits

The Shakers, one of America's oldest religious sects, may be dipping out after all. New recruits from an average, it was considered something of a miracle that, thus handicapped, the Shakers managed to last two centuries.

The last brother in the sect died last year. Until very recently there were only two dozen elderly sisters left to carry on.

But now two thirtyish women have become novitiates at one of the last two Shaker communities, Sabbathday Lake near Portland, Me. The other is at East Canby, N.H. The Maine colony also cares for a high school girl who may join.

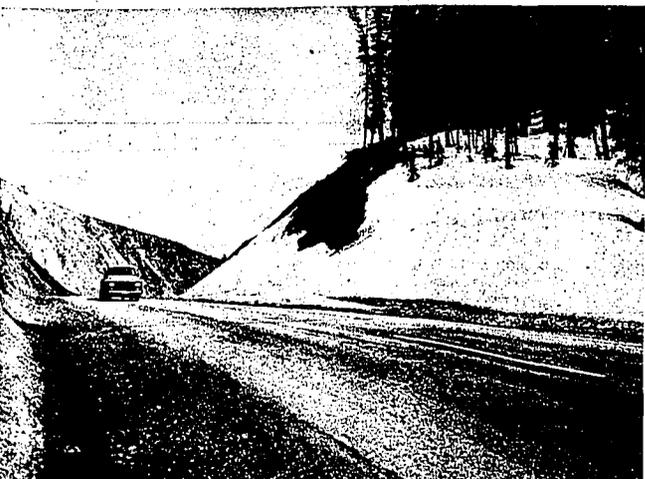

The Shakers historically kept going by adding converts and adopting orphans.

Sister Mildred Darker of the Maine colony said the Shakers are philosophical about the future.

"We feel that the Shakers have been given a mission to do. If God feels it has been completed then that is His will. If the mission is to continue it will provide."

There are incentives to join. Shaker resources are substantial; each colony owns all property in common. Above all the Shakers hold out the inducement of a simple rewarding life of strict celibacy and abstemiousness.

Put your hands to work and give your hearts to God" was the guiding precept of Ann Lee the mother of the sect who led the

JOE, A 10-WEEK-OLD COYOTE BEING RAISED AS A FAMILY PET ON THE ERVIN BRAUN FARM, NORTH OF SHEBOEN, RECLIN IN HIS BOX IN THE KITCHEN. HE IS ONE OF 12 FEMALES BORN BY BRAUN, HIS SON, ELTON, AND CLIFFORD TACHANEN. HE WAS FED ON A DOLL BOTTLE FOR SOME TIME BUT NOW EATS TABLE SCRAPS, HAMBURGERS, DOD FOOD AND DRINKS MILK FROM A PAN. HE RECENTLY VENTURED OUTSIDE AS WEATHER PERMITTED.

Life in MAGIC VALLEY

He's called Joe and has become quite a farm pet, though his kin are considered a foe to farmers. That is the situation of the 10-week-old coyote on the Ervin Braun farm northwest of SHEBOEN. The little coyote is one of 12 found in a den 14 miles northeast of Sheboen by Braun, his son, Elton, and Clifford Tachanen. Because of the coyote menace, all of the animals were killed except one which was taken home for a pet. For food he eats a limited amount of table scraps, has eaten hamburger, dod food and milk from a pan now.

He was fed on a doll bottle for some time and he didn't get his eyes open for 10 days after he found his new home.

While very young, the pup would lie on his back with his feet in the air.

The Brauns are teaching him to shake hands, roll over, receive a ball and other tricks. Part of the time he seems to respond to instruction well. When Braun imitates the coyote howl, the pup will howl, too.

Though a little shy with strangers, the little coyote really shows delight when the Braun family returns after having been gone for a few hours, and behaves in typical pet fashion.

Veterans Are Warned on Term Policies

BOISE, June 16—Some 13,000 veterans in Idaho should give careful study to their GI insurance holdings, according to Lynn E. Koppan, director of the Boise veterans administration center.

They are still holding GI term insurance, which can play a valuable role for a growing family, but which may become prohibitively expensive for a veteran nearing the retirement age.

Veterans should remember that a term GI insurance policy that carries an annual premium of $9 a thousand at age 35, jumps to an annual premium of $17 a thousand at age 65 and to $73.25 at age 70, Koppan said.

Many older veterans are now finding themselves unable to continue their term insurance payments at their greatly increased rates and unable to obtain new insurance coverage.

Koppan pointed out: if they die, their widows will have nothing; yet, over the years the veteran likely conceals service courses, totaling $7,000 or $8,000 in this form of insurance.

High School Graduates Seek Service

per cent of all first-term men have reentered. Career men in for more than one enlistment — are reentering at 98.7 per cent.

"Basically, this all goes back to education. Right now I can offer schooling in 107 different categories. There are 2,200 vacancies. The men in this area have a break over those attending high school in the East. Due to the agricultural aspects, I assume, school and graduation are completed nearly a month ahead of those in the East. Right now Magic Valley men can get their pack-up courses. They won't have to leave immediately, but at least they will have the course and program reserved for them by the service."

"On the basis of education, Sergeant Cooper lists his greatest reward as a recruiting officer.

"Most of these boys come from homes that aren't financially able to send them to college or help set them up for a start in life. Rather than become liabilities to society, they are seizing the opportunities of education within the service. Most of the service specialists have comparable jobs on the outside where a man can step into security right out of the service. Something that this generation remembers very well is that the job of 'unskilled' worker is rapidly vanishing. They realize the tab of 'unskilled' worker is rapidly vanishing. They realize the tab of 'unskilled' worker is rapidly vanishing. They realize the tab of 'unskilled' worker is rapidly vanishing.

"Another thing that pleases me is seeing these high school 'drop-outs' come to their senses before it is too late and choose the service as a means of stabilizing their lives and completing their education."

"Unfortunately, not many of these boys who consider themselves too smart at 14 and 15 years old, wake up until it is too late both for them and the service. If this re-awakening comes when the man is 19 or 20 years old, you can spot them most of their careers. Most of the time, the man is 19 or 20 years old, you can spot them most of their careers. Most of the time, the man is 19 or 20 years old, you can spot them most of their careers.

"When I am able to place one of these men on the program of his choice and follow his career line something good is solid. Many realize the army has done much more than just fill a uniform for three years."

MAGIC VALLEY PORTRAIT Equal Opportunity for Youth Results In Good Citizens, Businessman Opines

"With no children of his own, Morris Roth has spent a lifetime working with and for youngsters and shows no signs of slackening his efforts.

All during his years of volunteer and professional work he has held that "equal opportunity for every boy and girl in Magic Valley" work and play will make a good citizen."

The local businessman, owner of Beck's shoe store, came to Idaho as athletic director for the Hunt relocation center established for displaced Japanese during World War II.

At a glance his early life will show hard work among youngsters because he was involved in it.

He was born in Scranton, Pa., where his father was a merchant. The family stayed in the coal mining district only about a year after his father's death and moved to Chisholm, Minn., by way of New York City.

It was at Chisholm that Roth received his basic education. He went through grade and high school there and after that to nearby Hibbing Junior college. After two years he entered the University of Minnesota, majoring in health and physical education. His minor was in orthopedic work, which became the basis of his knowledge in working crippled youngsters into exercise programs.

While a student he became assistant to the university's intramural director. Graduation from the university saw him accept a position as coach and head of the physical education program at Alden, Minn., high school for three years.

From there he went back to Hibbing junior college, where he did his first college work as a student, and became coach. In the summer he was on the staff of the University of Minnesota recreation director who department had the reputation as being the second best sport department in the nation.

When Leighton became director of the St. Louis county rural school relocation department during World War II, Roth went with him.

The rural program was year-around and involved 216 schools. It was here he met his wife, Mary DePaul, college graduate, who was supervisor of academic work in the county rural schools.

"She had a bigger job than I did," Roth recalls.

It was later that he decided to enter the business field but still maintain his contact with students. He opened a "hangout" for students which was known as "Morris's Stadium" in Virginia, Minn. He sponsored various athletic teams and started a practice that ended up with national recognition in Look magazine. When a student would go into the service, his picture was hung on the wall with his picture.

Boat Use Booms in Idaho, as in Rest Of Nation; State Regulations Listed

BOISE, June 16—Signs of the times are marine dealers everywhere selling fishing gear, and vendors adding boating equipment to their list of wares. Researchers say at least half of the nation's 25 million fishermen use boats with regularity.

While boatmen and fishermen are essentially the same people, a contest is coming up fast between those who use boats for water skiing and aquaplaning and those who use boats for fishing. This challenge is being met in many sections of the country because, without proper regulations concerning safety and equipment, too many people are being killed and drowned.

Idaho laws complying with the 1958 federal boating act are as follows:

1. All motorboats and sailboats with the exception of those used by non-profit organizations for commercial purposes, must be licensed each year.
 2. This applies both to residents and nonresidents who operate boats on any Idaho water.
 3. All licenses are obtained from county assessors.
 4. Boats owned or operated by nonresidents must have an Idaho county license where it is to be used even though the craft carries a federal safety certificate from another state. The Idaho code requires a motorboat safety certificate to be obtained from county assessors.
- The first laws regulating operation, equipment and traffic rules for boats in this state were passed by the legislature in 1941. They are still on the books, providing in part:
- No boat propelled by machinery shall be operated at a speed greater than 10 miles per hour in 50 feet of another craft, nor at a speed in excess of 10 miles per hour at any time unless vision is unobstructed 300 feet ahead.

The Idaho code requires the owner of any motor boat that is destroyed or abandoned to notify the department of law enforcement in Boise within 15 days of the accident. However, a written report must be submitted within 48 hours of a boating accident causing death or serious injury. Other circumstances about or involving any vessel the written reports are:

1. The death of any person from whatever cause.
2. The disappearance of any person under circumstances suggesting any possibility of death.
3. The injury of any person sufficient to cause their incapacitation for 72 hours or longer.
4. The loss or damage to property of any kind (including the vessel) in an amount exceeding $100.

Of course there are prescribed rules specifying what the report must contain.

As in the case of boats that are destroyed or abandoned, Idaho regulations require a written report to the department of law enforcement whenever a boat is sold or the ownership otherwise changes. This must be filed within 15 days of the transaction.

There are many boat owners who have failed to do this in the past, causing inaccurate reports, problems of identification in the event of theft, and difficulty in getting accurate information when an accident is involved. All such cases should be corrected immediately insofar as possible.

Under the circumstances, the actual rate of fatalities has fallen dramatically. Using the number of outboard motors for comparison, that rate dropped from 47 deaths per thousand motors in 1949 to 24 in 1957, and 23 in 1958. The downward trend is continuing.

Most accidents occur on small lakes and rivers, as opposed to the Great Lakes, reservoirs and farm ponds. Over half the fatalities (53.8 per cent in 1958 and 56.7 per cent in 1957) happened on fishing trips. Less than 10 per cent of the boat operators and victims involved in fatalities are women.

per cent victims' men aged 20 to 40 years most often are involved in fatal boat accidents, either as passengers or boat operators.

17,025 in 1960; 20,253 in 1961; and Idaho waters, added emphasis must be placed on enforcement made up this year. The enforcement comes from the Quinn, director of prison industry and recreation. This in the main will be educational in nature.

Since the increase in boating activity has been so rapid, and it is faced with the country sheriff's in cooperation with the departments of fish and game and law enforcement.

DEMONSTRATION OF HOW to land a boat is given by fish and game department officers during the two-day Governor's Boat Safety training session at McCall. Fish and game department men participated under direction of the U.S. coast guard, bureau of reclamation and American Red Cross. From left are W. H. Morlock, Nampa; Albert Lyle, Emmett, and William H. Dorris, McCall; Department of law enforcement enforces Idaho boat laws.

another vessel caused the most common causes of death, injury and property damage are those which could have been eliminated if the boat operators had followed basic safety precautions. The coast guard says copies of the Idaho boating laws regulations, and safe boating tips are available free from many states that collision with the department of law enforcement.

There are excellent collections in the Shaker village at Hancock, Mass., and the Shaker museum at Old Chatham, N. Y. Sabbathday lake still has much of the stately old furniture perched incongruously around a television set.

Edward Deming Andrews and Faith Andrews, authoritative writers on the Shakers, have credited them with inventing a screw propeller, a rotary harrow, a threshing machine, the circular saw, cut nails, a pea-sheller, the common clothes pin, a machine for paring, coring and quartering apples, and the first metal pen and flat brooms.

Important as all these achievements were, the thing that has most intrigued successive generations of observers was the Shaker attitude toward sex and marriage.

It goes back to Mother Ann Lee. Ann suffered greatly in marriage and childbirth. All her four children died in infancy.

DEMONSTRATING one of the steps in making cottage cheese is Mrs. Clifton Peterson, a Jerome farm wife. She claims her formula for the cheese is close to the perfection of the local creamery. Mrs. Peterson recently was elected state president of her sorority, also makes local creamery. Mrs. Peterson recently was elected state president of her sorority, also makes local creamery. Jerome Woman Makes Cottage Cheese, Keeps Farm Books, Active in Politics

JEROME, June 16 — Mrs. Clifton U. (Nuth) Peterson lives in a desert and is self-sufficient. She is a Jerome farm wife who has attained a professional status in many activities and is interested in many more. She has received almost last cooking techniques in her farm kitchen, and is willing to share her methods with Times-News readers.

Mrs. Peterson has graduated from a beauty college, recently took her second course in tailoring at Idaho State college; has several years experience in accounting, and is capable of preparing many unusual dishes in her kitchen. Her interests also include first of all, people, school, her politics, her church and home decorating.

She says, "I could enter the fields of public relations, medicine and law with much vigor, vitality and enthusiasm."

Mrs. Peterson is married to a farm salesman and has four children, Jill Dunigan, 17; Kristin, 15; Clifton II, 17; and Jeffrey, 14. They live seven miles north-east of Jerome.

"Our home is small for us, but we really live in it," she said. The front room, which also serves as their family room, is decorated with tones of red and American. Their large bedroom is unusual in that it has a fireplace on one end.

From the closet she displays professionally made clothes. She makes her entire wardrobe and all of her children's clothes. Her latest endeavor is a three-piece Christian-Dior-wool-suit, which she plans to enter in the "all wool" contest.

She also displayed a wool coat of a similar pattern that won last year's wool contest. She enthusiastically demonstrates her "stain line perfection" method of sewing. Mrs. Peterson says this is part of the "blabop method." She exploded many myths of sewing, saying she finds it unnecessary to try garments on, measure hems, or pre-pin seams.

She merely measures—the pattern first and all adjustments are made on the pattern.

She also says that sometimes she would like to conduct a class in sewing.

Mrs. Peterson says, "I even made a gold brocade dinner suit before Sam Zee. One of the things she was buying one." Her latest venture in sewing is a last fashioned with a Sally Weir pattern, she explains.

It is a red and white flowered luncheon hat with full red roses pinned above the brim in front. "Even the men who have seen it in it have commented," she said.

Mrs. Peterson said her children are very interested in sewing. "They are served such food at home every day," she says. "I make and butter in an electric blender. The method of making cottage cheese that comes out close to perfect each time."

She says her secret for cottage cheese is first, she turns the sweet milk with cultured butter. She never uses milk that is cold, as any off flavor will be carried over into the finished product. After the sweet milk is turned she cuts the solid mass into squares and adds water. She then heats it very slowly until it is 145 degrees.

The hottest a human hand can stand is 150 degrees," she said to explain the easy test of the heat. The mixture is allowed to cool before pouring cold water over it and rinsing it thoroughly.

The final step is letting it stand in water for 24 hours. "The curd will tender this way," she notes.

She also makes commercial whey sour cream by turning the cream with cultured butter-

"Until recently, she has taught an adult education class in the LDS church. She is active in politics and was recently appointed to the publicity committee of the Democratic central committee.

Her fervor for good school was demonstrated in the school election in district four and five. Mrs. Peterson had been working for a year before the elections by contacting and talking to people. The day of the election she contacted more than a majority in her own district four, and kept in close contact with district five which also voted that day.

It is perhaps a tribute to her that both candidates she was backing were elected by a large majority.

She is proud of a fight she won against the mayor and all the councilmen in her California hometown. She helped force an issue concerning cut-rate gasoline concerns to a vote of the people. The result was an ordinance permitting the cut rates, which still stands today.

The Jerome woman was born in the Oklahoma oil fields and graduated from high school, she took a beauty course at Frank Wiggins trade school. Mrs. Peterson said, "All my life people have broken rules to be kind to me." One of the examples she cited was when she applied for beauty school though there was a waiting list of 800 she was enrolled almost immediately. She also has been noticed by such famous people as Red Skelton and Richard Nixon, she said.

Mrs. Peterson was recently elected state president of Epulion Sigma Alpha sorority. As president of the sorority she automatically became a member of the Idaho Crippled Children's society. She is justifiably proud of her sorority's record with the crippled children's group and the muscular dystrophy campaign.

Last year the sorority raised $1700 for the Easter Seal society. The state membership raised $3,000 in support of the Muscular Dystrophy association, (this is the international philanthropic project that is supported throughout the world by the membership).

Mrs. Peterson's theme for this year is "No stronger our unity, love and loyalty."

As her three younger children get older and less dependent, Jerome residents will probably feel the presence and influence of Mrs. Peterson more and more.

cut down they gainfields open to cattle and their meeting places burned.

Violent mobs from time to time demanded the release of adopted children from Shaker communities. The Shakers' refusal to bear arms also set them apart from their neighbors.

But if they were spared the rigors of military service, they had to obey some pretty rigid regulations back home. William Haskett, once a member, reported it was against the rules to do 81 different things.

The moral seems clear: To be a Shaker you need a gift for work.

 Mrs. Carl Voigt, Nampa

"Because my husband is an electric heating engineer, my pinochle pals thought I was 'stretching things' when I told them how cool you can be with a heat pump," says Mrs. Voigt. "I'll admit it was 'sneaky' but the day they came to our home, I set the thermostat below 65 degrees. It was 110 outside. Three of my guests had to borrow sweaters. Now they know you can keep your home cool on the hottest days with an electric heat pump."

WEATHER MAP SYMBOLS are really not too difficult if such explanations are given in the accompanying text.

Weather Map Is Easy to Understand If One Can Have Symbols Explained

By C. B. NELSON, Advisory Agricultural Meteorologist, Twin Falls Weather Bureau. The purpose of a weather map is to fit the various weather elements and conditions into a picture.

Weather as we know it, hot and cold, rain and snow, clear and stormy, is just a by-product of the actions of this sea of air circling the atmosphere that we live and breathe in. To understand weather, it is necessary to understand something about this sea of air.

As with any moving body, car, tractor, train or airplane, the energy released by an atmosphere must be measured. The weather, the usual way of measuring the motion of the atmosphere is by air pressure. Thus high pressure is actually an area where there is more air above.

High pressure areas are the most common and relatively low pressure being forced from a wet sponge when the sponge is squeezed.

At most farm homes, friends come to the back door and the front door and deliveries are made at the back. No one would be considered a

Court Rules On Benefits For Children

BOISE, June 16 (AP)—The Idaho state court ruled Thursday that children are entitled to the right of children to workers' compensation benefits awarded after the death of their father.

In a unanimous opinion the court upheld a decision of the state industrial accident board.

Basic First Aid Is Vital In Accidents

Even if you are the third or fourth person to arrive at an accident, stop and offer assistance. Often accidents are avoided as a result of first aid.

Some of the best first aid that motorists can use this summer is to keep their vehicles in good condition.

There are four kinds of fronts—cold, warm, occluded and stationary. All have a similar effect on the weather.

When a cold front overtakes a warm front or vice versa is termed an occluded front.

Most motorists usually enter the Intermountain area from the west or north coming from the Pacific or Canada.

Countless Women Invade Male Sports Of Hunting, Fishing, Writer Declares

By JIM HUMPHREY, Idaho Fish-Games Department. BOISE, June 16—The days of big game are gone but dainty fingers on despite the invasion of countless women into traditionally men's sports such as fishing and hunting.

What ever the underlying cause, the fact remains that the most spectacular trout and the brown trout, the brook trout and the cutthroat trout.

Because rainbow eggs stand shipping well and are easily stored, they are the most popular of the annual production of the 14 Idaho hatcheries.

On the positive side, the woman who wants to go fishing is permitted to trail her much fun—it can be. Awakened for the day's adventure at 3 a.m., she sees high hills tops out of bed immediately with zip, zeal, and cheerfulness.

For every crumpled body the motorist sees, the state patrolman sees a dozen. Many accidents at the scene had used a little more common sense.

Some 100 people will be killed in accidents between now and Christmas; those hundred might not have to die.

WASHINGTON, June 16—Who is chairman of a house foreign affairs subcommittee that keeps tabs on U.S. diplomats in the American ambassador in Cyprus?

1,000 Minidoka Children Will Attend Circus

RUPERT, June 16—Plans for taking an estimated 1,000 children from Minidoka county to the annual Shriner circus at Twin Falls June 23 are announced by the local sponsoring group.

Ward Woodford says the use of Minidoka county school buses was approved by the board recently, and about 22 loads of youngsters will make the trip. They should be of school age this fall, Woodford said, or attending elementary school within the county to be eligible to go. Younger ones must be accompanied by older brothers or sisters or by a parent, he said.

The trip will require about 30 mothers as chaperones, he said, and anyone wishing to go may contact Woodford or Robert Adams at Rupert or Roy Skinner, Heyburn.

The buses will leave at 8 a.m. June 23 at the Rupert, Paul and Heyburn schools and return there at the same places about 2:30 or 3 p.m.

Windmills Fast Becoming Objects of Interest; Disappearing From Farms

KIMBERLY, Jan. 16 — Back around 1910 windmills were as common as the asparagus which was being grubbed from a new land.

Today they are rare. Indeed, their place has been taken by electric pumps because, for the most part, the windmills were a cheap means of pumping water.

Windmills used to be put in place almost before the house was built. At the present time, in Twin Falls county, probably no more than a dozen or so exist, and only a few of these are still operative.

In Magic Valley the proportion would probably be the same.

One of the few still standing is on the Melvin Hubert Morgan farm southeast of Kimberly. Even it is no longer used to pump water but rather as a post for the yard light.

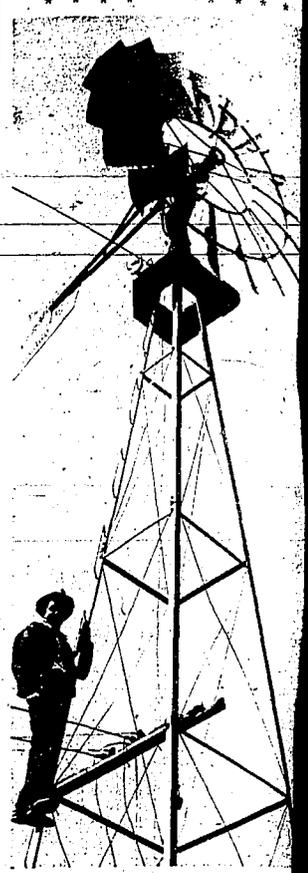

Indication of just how rare the windmill is becoming in Idaho is graphically shown in a permanent historical exhibit which has been placed in the city park at Caldwell by the Kiwanis club there. One of the most prominent pieces to be exhibited is a windmill.

In the early days the windmill was used to pump water from underground. In some cases it was pumped into a cistern and in other cases an above-ground tank to give pressure for a domestic water system.

A flick of the wrist tipped out the tail of the windmill and the blades started turning. The pump started operating and the water came out.

Of course, no wind and there was no pumping action. Those who are not familiar with a pump probably do not realize that it would work by arm power too.

But the early day farmers knew that and so welcomed a breeze. It meant water in the tank.

PRACTICALLY GONE FROM FARMS is the windmill early days of the Twin Falls tract they dotted the landscape they are rare. Melvin Hubert Morgan, who farms south of Kimberly, stands halfway up on one still standing on his farm. (Times-News photo)

THE LINK WAS CUT, NOT TORN, MISS MORRIS. THE STOLEN DIAMOND NECKLACE WAS HIDDEN THERE!

BOSH!

ONLY SISTER CLEO AND I WORE THIS COAT. WE'RE NOT THIEVES!

RETRACING TO MY HOTEL GAVE SAWS MONEY, SAWS STOLEN NECKLACE, I FOUND MY ROOM SAWS HEATHNESS.

SOMEBODY GAVE THE ROOM A GOOD FRISK! THEY WRECKED IT!

AND THIS SOUVENIR WAS SHOT--TWICE! HE'S THE SAME BRUISER WHO RELIEVED ME OF MY DOUGH!

I SHOWN INSPECTOR GROWL OF HOMICIDE, AND MY CLIENT, INSURANCE INVESTIGATOR DAVE CHETNEY.

WHEN'LL YOU LEARN THAT RECOVERING STOLEN GOOP IS POLICE BUSINESS! IT COULD--

DON'T GRIEVE, INSPECTOR. WHO'S THE CORPSE?

I KNOW HIM. HE'S DORIS MORRIS'S MANAGER!

AH! NOW, MR. INSURANCE DICK, PUT TWO AND TWO TOGETHER!

DORIS FAKED THE NECKLACE THEFT, GOT KEELER TO SLUG FLINT, WHO HAD THE RANSOM, THEN POLISHED OFF KEELER!

DORIS COULDN'T HAVE! SHE WAS WITH ME!

THEN HER SISTER CLEO DID! COME ON, FLINT! TAKE ME TO WHERE YOU LEFT CLEO!

CLEO SWIPED THE KEELER AND HID IT IN THE COAT. THEN KEELER TOOK THE COAT OFF YOU, SLUGGED YOU FOR THE MONEY--

TIDY LITTLE CASE, TOO TIDY!

SHE'S GONE!

TOO TIDY, HUH? WELL THIS JUST ABOUT CLINCHES IT!
