MAKE THAT ONE FOR THE ROAD COFFEE HAVE A FREE CUP WITH US

MAKE THAT ONE for the road coffee. The Idaho state police in conjunction with a coffee firm are holding a 10-day free coffee bar at the port of entry offices. ### Idaho State Police Ports of Entry to Serve Free Holiday Coffee Again

The Idaho state police force in conjunction with a national coffee firm, is holding a 10-day free coffee bar, as its contribution to the holiday spirit. The coffee bar will be open from 8 a.m. Dec. 24 until 8 a.m. Jan. 2 at the port of entry offices at King Hill, Hollister and Strevell.

The Hollister port of entry has received about 1,000 cups of the coffee from the coffee firm, according to Kenneth Shew, officer in charge. All the coffee needed for the bar also is furnished by the firm, Shew said.

He pointed out that last year only about 400 persons stopped at the port of entry for the service, but this year more should stop due to the fact more are hearing about the service.

"A lot of people like to stop and see just how the port is run," Shew said. "We like this sort of interest and all people who want to observe the port operations are welcome to stop and do so—and sample our coffee."

Last year during the coffee bar period they had one man stop who was quite intoxicated. Shew quickly pointed out that the coffee bar is not a sobering up station, and such persons will be cited and the proper action will be taken.

The port is open 24 hours a day and at least two officers are on duty at all times. Any person traveling through one of the ports is welcome to stop for information, maps or data on road conditions, any time of the year, Shew said.

The King Hill port will serve coffee from 8 a.m. Dec. 27 through 8 a.m. Jan. 2, according to F. C. Anderson, officer in charge. The port will be closed from 4 p.m. Christmas until 8 p.m. Dec. 28.

Smylie Appoints Airline Committee

BOISE, Dec. 21 (AP)—Gov. Robert E. Smylie Friday appointed four southern Idaho men and one from the north to a new airline service coordinating committee to work for improved air service for the state. Named to the committee are Marvin Wicklund, president of the Lewiston Chamber of Commerce; Bruce Markham, member of the Pocatello airport commission; Glenn Lungren, immediate past president of the Boise chamber; Pete Hill, president of Idaho Aircraft company, Idaho Falls, and Edward Woods, manager of the Twin Falls airport.

The members will serve without pay, Smylie said they were chosen as broadly representative of the economy and regions of the state.

The governor declared in his order creating the committee that after reviewing the council's recommendation and the history of Idaho air service, "it appears both desirable and necessary to provide and maintain an organized liaison between the people of the state and the air carriers serving the needs of the state."

"The necessity for better communications between carriers and the communities they serve appears to be more urgent as industrialization continues within the state."

He declared that the committee (See AIRLINE, page 2)

Water Plans Of Governor Called Folly

BOISE, Dec. 21 (AP)—Ada county Democratic chairman Emmett Bennett charged Saturday that Gov. Robert E. Smylie's plan for bond-financed water projects would "enrich large land companies at the expense of war veterans and family-size farms."

At the same time, he labeled the governor's suggestion that southern California divert water from the mouth of the Columbia river as "Smylie's folly."

Bennett asserted in a statement that Smylie's proposal for the state-issued revenue bonds to develop Idaho resources would be pass the 160-acre limitation which he said is standard on all federal bureau of reclamation projects. He said this would enable the state to circumvent the veterans preference act which awards farms to war veterans.

He also accused Smylie of supporting state development of power plants and at the same time backing four Washington state private power firms in their requests for permits to construct a dam at the high Mountain Sheep site between Idaho and Oregon.

"If the high Mountain Sheep dam site is awarded to the bureau of reclamation," he said, "the revenue from it would go into development of Idaho desert to irrigate farm lands. However, if the Washington firms are granted the permit for the economy of Idaho."

Bennett said there has been no feasibility study made of Smylie's suggestion that California build a 1,500-mile pipeline in the Pacific ocean to carry fresh water to Los Angeles from the mouth of the Columbia river.

"Governor Smylie's Pacific ocean pipeline—Smylie's folly—is an engineering feat which even Jules Verne would not have had the imagination to dream up," Bennett said.

Woman Killed

SHELLEY, Dec. 21 (AP)—A two-car collision on U.S. highway 101 at the south city limits of Shelley killed one person and boosted Idaho's traffic toll for the year to 202.

State police said Mrs. Ruby H. Hansen, 42, of Firth, was killed in the smashup, which occurred Friday night on an icy highway and during a snowstorm.

Five Special Audits Asked By Council; Blick Resigns

BOISE, Dec. 21 (AP)—The Idaho legislative council recommended Saturday special audits of five state agencies by a private firm. It also approved a plan to lease for state offices two floors of the new 13-story Bank of Idaho building, to be used until a new state office building is constructed.

The council approved members of two committees and accepted the resignation of State Sen. George L. Blick, R., Twin Falls. Naming of a successor was deferred until the next session.

The next meeting of the council was set for March 16, in Moscow.

Blick resigned because he said he also is a member of the permanent building and fund advisory council. He said he lacks time for both assignments.

Congress, Deadlocked On Foreign Aid, Gives Up Plans to Adjourn

WASHINGTON, Dec. 21 (UPI)—The 88th congress—in a shouting mad temper—settled plans to adjourn for the year tonight and ordered sessions next week in an effort to end a bitter deadlock over the foreign aid spending bill. ### Auditorium Drive Adds 11 Members

Eleven new members were added to the Civic Auditorium-Convention Center Campaign Executive Sales committee roster during the past seven days, to make a total of 51 volunteer members.

The campaign headquarters is temporarily located in the Chamber of Commerce office.

New committee members not previously announced, are Miles Browning, Steve Bancroft, John Peterson, Eugene Stacey, Olean Seannons, Ray Neilson, Dr. Wallace Bond, C. H. (Cap) Kregel, Alton Young, Carl Berg, Ted Smith, Howard Allen and William G. Koch.

"There is virtually every type of Twin Falls business and professional represented on the executive committee," noted Ted Roth, a committee member, "but that still is not good enough—the only time a job of this magnitude can be accomplished efficiently, quickly and without creating individual hardship is by having 100 percent representation to do the work."

The first goal of the campaign is to enlist the voluntary physical and financial aid of not less than 60 persons to serve on the executive sales committee.

A general sales organization of an additional 85 men and like number of women is the second step of the campaign.

The goal of the 230 volunteer campaign sales workers is set at $500,000 in public subscriptions to construct and equip a modern civic center in Twin Falls that will have a fixed seating capacity for 1,200 persons, in conjunction with complete convention and banquet facilities to accommodate 600 persons.

Subscriptions will be offered to the public for 10 percent down and 90 months in which to pay the balance.

"This time payment plan means that virtually every family in Twin Falls will be able to part (See AUDITORIUM, page 2)

Hailey Group Criticized By Senator

WASHINGTON, Dec. 21 (AP)—Sen. Frank Church, D., Idaho, took issue Saturday with a Hailey Chamber of Commerce resolution attacking the civil rights bill under consideration by congress.

Church also asserted that the "coordinating committee for fundamental American freedom," which he said has placed anti-civil rights ads in Idaho newspapers, has been financed by the state of Mississippi.

In a letter to Ira Hoffman, Hailey chamber president, Church criticized a portion of the chamber's resolution, which he said described the civil rights bill as "a long leap" toward communism.

"I regret the fanaticism of the language which fills your resolution and the insidious damage it does to the confidence we must have in one another if our free institutions are to function."

The Idaho senator called attention to the civil rights act passed by the 1961 legislature.

"In comparing the Idaho law with the proposed federal law," he wrote, "I am sure that you will find the provisions for equal opportunities and public accommodations are more stringent than the proposals contained in the federal law. Yet I have not heard (See HAILEY GROUP, Page 2)

Clear Skies Trail Storm Across Area

Clear skies were reported throughout Magic Valley Saturday after a light snowstorm covered the Twin Falls to Rupert area Friday night. No snow fell in the Wood River valley Friday and it was clear there Saturday.

Winter, which becomes official at 2:02 a.m. Sunday, will be greeted with bare streets in Twin Falls and only a slight skiff of snow still on lawns from Friday night's storm.

About one-half inch of snow fell at Rupert Friday night, making a total of two inches on the ground. Nine-hundredths of an inch of precipitation was reported in Friday night's storm. Streets there were slushy Saturday.

About an inch of snow was reported at Burley, but snow on the streets was beginning to melt.

It snowed for approximately an hour and one-half at Jerome Friday night, but it was clear Saturday. The ground was hardly covered at Gooding by the storm.

HANDING OUT COMPLIMENT is Rep. Charles A. Halleck, R., Ind., left, house minority leader, to Rep. John J. Rhodes, R., Ariz., who introduced a motion to send a three-billion-dollar compromise foreign aid money bill back to a separate-house joint conference early Saturday during an all-night session of congress. The house, in a Republican-led revolt, voted 141 to 138 to return the bill to conference and insist on its original amendment, which did not include a guarantee of credit on sales of wheat to communist countries. ## Real Estate Situation Is Discussed

HEYBURN, Dec. 21—The FHA mortgage loan situation was discussed Wednesday evening by members of the Chamber of Commerce and two local real estate agents.

Chamber President Forest Blake was informed last month by the agencies here there were several persons wishing to buy homes in Heyburn, but it was impossible to secure FHA loans because of the shallow wells and sandpoints.

Charles Moline, Burley, representing the Sparkman and McLeon company, an agency specializing in FHA and VA loans, told the chamber one of the requirements of FHA is having a drilled well. He explained, there are numerous septic tanks in the Heyburn area which eventually may deteriorate or leak and contaminate the shallow wells and sandpoints.

He pointed out the sewers continually in use do not create the problem as much as the sewers which are not in use.

"The water in Heyburn has been tested several times and it has never, yet been found contaminated. But they still won't go along with loans where the source of water is coming from shallow wells or sandpoints," said Moline.

Glen Kunau, Burley, representing the Burley Abstract and Loan company, suggested the chamber meet with the regional FHA director to see if there is a possible way of qualifying for loans.

The group discussed the possibility of a central water system in Heyburn. Bruce Brower, vice president of the chamber, pointed out the village currently is heavily bonded for the present village sewer system.

Blake said he would call a special meeting with the chamber board of directors and name a committee to meet with the FHA. Bill Welborn announced the Bannock Paving company, Pocatello, was the low bidder for completing the four-lane highway from Rupert to the Burley-Heyburn bridge.

Blake commended Leo Hardy for his time and efforts spent with the state highway department the past two years to get the highway project completed. Hardy is past president of the Idaho Motor Transport association and past president of the chamber here. He is currently chairman of the chamber legislative committee.

Oscar Egbert, Heyburn postmaster, explained need for organized house and lot numbers. He noted persons often inquire at the postoffice and village office for directions to certain residences. He feels house numbers would simplify this condition.

The chamber voted to offer the numbering project to the village recreation committee.

Chamber members will decorate the blue spruce tree in the village park on Saturday, with Ronald-Judd in charge.

Ronald Draper announced the Heyburn Feed and Milling has joined the chamber, bringing membership to 40.

Joe Sabala, owner of Joe's bar, asked the chamber to help him in his efforts to open on Sundays and sell package beer that day. He was informed by Blake the chamber does not have jurisdiction in the matter and was advised to discuss it with the village board.

The Salvation Army's Christmas basket project is now under way and the baskets will be distributed to needy families throughout Twin Falls Monday and Tuesday. Between 40 and 50 baskets will be filled and distributed. (Times-News photo)

Tips Are Given on Putting Through Yule Phone Calls

The old-fashioned switchboard phone and Telegraph company office in Twin Falls expects fewer calls to go through the operator this Christmas since the company has changed from the partial direct dialing of last year to full direct dialing.

The change is emphasized during the Christmas season, one of the busiest times of the year, as fewer calls are handled manually by operators.

The Mountain States Telephone and Telegraph company office in Twin Falls expects fewer calls to go through the operator this Christmas since the company has changed from the partial direct dialing of last year to full direct dialing.

Since Christmas eve and Christmas day are so busy, the suggested time to make calls is early Christmas eve and early in the morning, or in the middle of the afternoon Christmas day.

On Christmas eve, the later in the evening it gets the harder it is to get a call through, while Christmas day calls start to slack off about 10 p.m. to 12 p.m.

During a busy day such as Christmas, the direct dialing comes to its first handicap, and that is when so many calls are put through to one place that it runs out of circuits. The telephone company wants to remind that if the caller can't seem to get a call through by the direct dial system, he should keep trying. The operator cannot help, since they are using the same equipment and could not get the call through any faster.

Grows and Grows

With a capable administrator, there appears to be no end to growth of the Boy Scout movement. Announcement of the impending departure of Executive Richard W. Best brings the natural inventory of achievements for Scouting in Magic Valley. The record is impressive. In four and one-half years, there has been a 50 per cent increase in boys involved in the Scouting program. Equally encouraging is almost a 24 per cent increase in the number of volunteer leaders, adults who are willing to devote time and talents to working with boys.

NATIONAL WHIRLIGIG

WASHINGTON, Dec. 21—As usual, the British government is cruelly raising false hopes that something could come of Nikita Khrushchev's cynical offer to reopen East-West negotiations for a nonaggression pact.

SAME OLD GOODS—But at this point at least it is utter rot to discuss Khrushchev's offer seriously. It is the same offer of Khrushchev made last summer when the nuclear test-ban was initiated.

STRINGS TO OFFERS—What attracts the British, of course, is Khrushchev's offer to negotiate proposals to establish observer posts in Eastern and Western Europe.

GREAT FRENCH ROAD-BLOCK—President de Gaulle of France is still insisting on going his own way, and the devil take NATO. And the West Germans are not about to look kindly on any East-West talks that even hint at legitimizing his speech, as vice president, in Brussels last Nov. 8 when he noted that "if we fall in the West, relations with the East are sure to go against us."

Filer Man Says Youngsters Not Hurt by Parents' Talk

Editor, Times-News: In your editorial of Dec. 11, entitled "Parents to Blame," I would like to differ on your opinion that politics, personalities or that should not be discussed in the presence of children. It is only by exposure to sensible parental discussion of these subjects that children can develop an early philosophy of politics. While parents may have prejudices, they do not necessarily seed hate. It is more important that the next generation shall learn to think and discuss by themselves than that they should never hear extreme statements. But extreme statements in themselves are not necessarily evil. It is the voicing of actual hate and violence that contains the danger. There is greater danger to free Democratic institutions in an uninformed youth than there is from a tiny minority of hate-mongers. Why not determine to discuss these subjects in a reasonable attitude rather than ban them from our topics of conversation. PAUL BROWN (Filer)

Too Much Publicity Given To Crimes, T. F. Man Thinks

Editor, Times-News: Knowing the secret efficiency of Scotland Yard, I predicted that the English train robbers would soon be behind bars. One after another they have been picked up red-handed. No public notice is ever given by Scotland Yard as to clues, roadblocks or where they think the criminals may be. During World War I a companion and I made a Sunday afternoon "ramble" into the country from St. Albans, north of London. En route we were told that the previous night a girl had been assaulted and murdered along the pedestrian lane. The newspaper gave no report on it for a month, then the full story came out. The murder account of the victim and the assassin was contained in one short news release. The assassin had been apprehended, tried, convicted and executed before the newspapers printed it. Printing of where roadblocks are set up, of the payoff, the type of money used, how the money is marked and where the criminals are being sought, serves to aid the fugitives in their escape. The full-scale publicity of the assassination of President Kennedy has set off a rash of assassination threats all over the world. News of the progress of a trial, with television coverage especially, tends to build up public sentiment for the accused to the point that it is difficult for full justice to be administered. Is this not so? ARNOLD G. HOLLAND (Twin Falls)

Buhl Man Cites Threat to Private Utilities by BPA

Editor, Times-News: If the people of southern Idaho don't wake up, nothing said or written can forestall the taking over by the Bonneville power administration of privately owned utilities which presently serve the needs of southern Idaho. Once a course of action has been determined by politicians of the federal government, no amount of factual presentation, no appeal of the principles which created America, no challenge to the business ethics involved will long stay the takeover of private utilities by those who seek to perpetuate themselves in political office and politically created administrative positions. The steamroller tactics of the public power advocates within our federal government have been amply demonstrated in the present move into southern Idaho and Eastern Wyoming. Study the map and the strategy is plain—to isolate the present companies from each other and from further expansion. It is within the means of every individual to become aware of the implications which are evident in the various moves to nationalize the key industries serving our nation. No politician would dare come directly before the people with a platform of nationalization such as was foisted upon England at the close of World War II. He can, however, sell them the same program under the guise of "public service" or false promise that someone else will pay the bill. In every instance where we surrender private initiative to the bagmen of congress, as outlined by Edwin P. Nellan in his historic speech before the National Press club, our nation becomes correspondingly poorer. R. D. JONES (Buhl)

Writer Fears Government Will Be Turned Over to U.N.

Editor, Times-News: After reading President Johnson's U.N. address, every American should ask himself, are we going to stand by and see this administration turn the reins of our government to the United Nations, with a U.N. police force, which would be controlled by Russia, to be accompanied by the abandonment of our army and navy? Last July a militant group met in Boise. Five Idaho counties sent delegates, also there were delegates from Montana and Nevada. The speakers were from out of state. They laid the cards on the table. The first speaker spelled it out in detail in regard to what we can expect if congress surrenders its sovereignty to the U.N. He pinpointed the seriousness by saying, "I have five children and I do not expect to go through this ordeal with my family intact." Another out-of-state speaker said get tough with the public; resort to anything to arouse the public. A lady arose, tried to speak, choked up, sat down sobbing. Another lady able to control her emotions, arose and directed her statements to a former congressman and said, "What is the purpose in shipping our soldiers out of here and importing foreign troops to police this country?" The congressman said, "The American soldiers would not shoot their relatives, foreign troops would. Look what the U.N. troops resorted to in Katanga." This is a horrible picture to paint. As this writer sat and listened to the discussion it recalled to mind a statement made by Thomas Jefferson: "The time will come when it will be necessary for the ringing of the church bells to awaken the American people." HUBER REES (120 Sidney Street)

Judgment of President on Aid Questioned

Editor, Times-News: We hear that the new President, L. B. Johnson, has come out with the statement that the foreign aid amount be increased instead of diminished, as we finally have been able to do. How stupid can we get! We have had it proved that this foreign aid grant is nothing but an almost complete giveaway of our billions for worthless causes and for communist aid. Even our senator, Frank Church, who keeps on the right side of the political Democratic fence, has recently climbed over it, realizing that foreign aid is getting to be quite a drag with the voters. Is it possible the President is not too astute? M. R. BRANT (Kimberly)

School Office Getting New Parking Lot

The maintenance crew of class school district No. 411 is in the process of constructing a parking lot on the west side of the new administration building, located in the old postoffice building, according to Ernest H. Ragland, superintendent of the school board.

Ragland pointed out the school district's property comes within three feet of the next building, which is occupied by the Twin Falls cigar store.

The maintenance crew will construct a six-foot wood fence from one corner of the administration building to the border line, Ragland noted. He also stated that a pipe bumper will be placed on the border line to allow the other owner the benefit of his property.

On the remaining property, in front of the building, school officials plan to plant seeds and landscape it in the spring. The school board hopes to blacktop the parking lot, Ragland said.

Unsafe

BURLEY, Dec. 21—Speer's pond is unsafe for ice skating because of recent thawing conditions, rotted ice and air pockets which have formed, the Burley city recreation department reports. Members are advised not to take any chances skating on the pond.

Speer's pond, northwest of Burley, is a joint venture by city recreation department, Burley Chamber of Commerce and Mr. and Mrs. Fred Speer, who made a 16-acre pond available for winter ice skating use.

Daily inspections and reports of the conditions of the ice are made by the recreation department, although skaters must skate at their own risk.

Future for Rupert Eyed By Chamber

RUPERT, Dec. 21 — "Rupert will continue to be one of the top agricultural communities in Idaho with our enthusiastic effort and support," Wayne Anderson, president of the Rupert Chamber of Commerce, told members Thursday when they met for noon luncheon at the Elming cafe.

"Anytime we say Rupert is dead, we must look to ourselves for the reason, and we must push and sell what we have to offer. Instead of just having it available, we should look far enough ahead to see where we are going, and why, and work to that end," Anderson stated.

The chamber president told members the economy in this area is based on agriculture and "we, as a community, are no better off than our agriculture." He felt agriculture has been in a real squeeze the past few years, and those who were better businessmen and farmers had made it through the depressed economy.

Anderson explained the Minidoka project is one of the oldest projects in the country and eventually there was no room for expansion on the project and it stabilized itself. When Julian Clawson struck water on the Northside project, some 180,000 acres of land was opened for irrigation.

Most of the farmers came with limited capital to work with, and the majority of this capital went into machinery and farming equipment. When these farms are well established and the bulk of machinery and equipment expense has been narrowed, a much brighter outlook will result and they should do even better with better prices.

Anderson stressed that Rupert has "everything we need as a community" and pointed out the growth changes in the business area in the past year. New stores have been built, new businesses have come into the area and a good majority of the local firms have either enlarged or remodeled.

He mentioned also the fine schools and churches to be found in this area.

The Rupert Chamber of Commerce spent some $3,500 this year on Christmas decorations, lighting, Santa Claus and treats, Anderson said. "The decorations and Christmas atmosphere in Rupert are second to none, and we should take pride in this."

He felt the lack of advertising in Rupert is noticeable and explained "if we don't sell it no one else will."

In conclusion he praised chamber members for the amount of work the committee has done on various road projects and felt this had a vital effect on the economy of Rupert.

Richard Bohle, vice president, conducted the meeting and thanked members for getting the 3,000 Christmas treat bags stacked in record time.

The chamber voted to cancel the Dec. 20 meeting and meet the following Thursday. At that time all city employees and telephone employees helping with the installation of the Christmas decorations and lighting will be invited to the luncheon.

Bohle reported a merchant's meeting was held Thursday morning at the Elming cafe and Dean Judd and George McDonald had been appointed co-chairmen of the committee for the coming year.

Guest at the club was Dean Lloyd, Pocatello.

"Comfort and Convenience"

Your way of living is a personal thing. Your decorating can enrich your life if it helps to make your family's day-to-day living more comfortable, pleasant and beautiful.

Plan first to suit your family's tastes; plan secondarily—or not at all—to please your friends or neighbors—who are pretty good at times in advising you. Plan your home to reflect your own personality and way of life.

Start your decorating plan on paper, with a list of the things your home must have for your family's comforts and conveniences.

Start with something you like—a patterned fabric or wallpaper, or your favorite color—or a picture, a family treasure, a remembered view, your garden in the spring time. Use the colors as the basis of your own color scheme. You'll probably enjoy the results longer if you choose neutral or muted colors for the large background areas such as walls, ceilings and carpeting. Bring your favorite colors into your rooms in your upholstered pieces, pillows, lamps, etc.

But, first and last key your home to your own personality and that of your family for comfortable and pleasant living.

If you have any problems or questions, stop in and ask. We are at your service without obligation.

Yuletide Is Bright for Local Man After Successful Cancer Surgery

By O. A. (Gus) KELKER
Times-News Feature Editor
Outside the day was bright. There was a little breeze which was moving fluffy white clouds across a blue sky. It was Thursday afternoon, July 30, 1963. Inside the office of a local physician Paul M. Bull had just been told by the doctor that what he was about to hear had better be taken sitting down.

"I'll take it standing," Bull said. And so the doctor spoke: "Paul, you have cancer." What flashed through his mind at that time cannot even be remembered by Bull, but it is not too hard to put it in the proper perspective. He was a young man, he was married and the father of five children ranging in age from 8 to 16 years—he had a responsible position with the Idaho Power company.

Now he had cancer. Actually it was back in the first part of 1962 that he had his first indication of trouble. A small area on the right side of his tongue became inflamed and felt like it had been burned by a mouthful of hot coffee. After about a month the pain and soreness returned. So in June, 1962, he decided he should consult a doctor. The tongue was carefully examined and a small portion was cut away for laboratory analysis. In about a week the report came back from the laboratory. It was a negative report—there was no sign of cancer.

Relieved as the soreness went away and dismissed the whole thing from my mind," he said. Then, in December, 1962, the soreness returned. This time it was about one and one-half inches back on the side of the tongue from the original location. "I just stuck with it until February of this year and then decided that perhaps another visit to the doctor was in order. For two years I had been volunteer county unit chairman for the Cancer society, so I must have been unconsciously thinking of that possibility," he said.

LIPS ARE TIGHTER DRAWN and a thin scar bleets his chin, but otherwise Paul M. Bull, Idaho Power company commercial and industrial official, looks much the same as he did before cancer operation which saved his life. (Times-News photo)

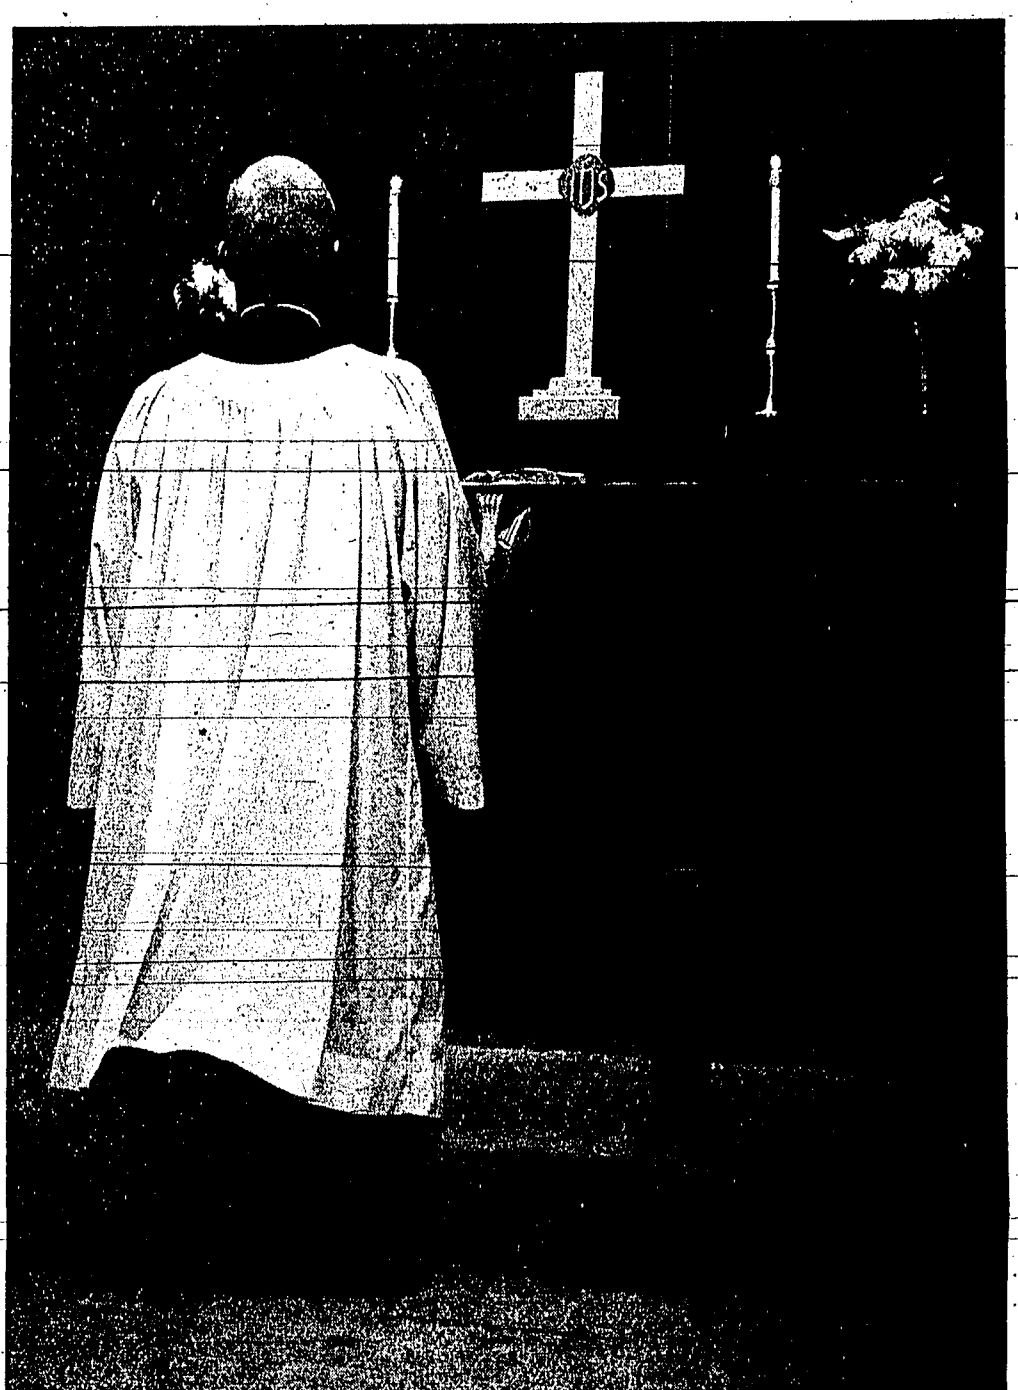

Examination by the doctor covered many possibilities. Perhaps a sharp tooth, or teeth, could be the trouble. A trip to a dentist resulted in the teeth being polished. Right after that the soreness disappeared. "That is what kept fooling us. Everything had apparently returned to normal. There was no pain, no discoloration on the tongue. Everything felt normal and so once more I dismissed the possibility of anything being wrong," he said.

Then once more the soreness returned. This was last June. In July it had failed to let up, so another visit was made to the doctor's office. This time even the possibility of an allergy was explored and tests were given. All were negative, so it was decided once more to do a biopsy—remove a piece of the tongue for laboratory study.

This was done and a week later—that typical summer day of July 30 — Paul Bull was told that he had cancer. His first thought was that his vacation started in a couple of days—and the youngsters were looking forward to it. "Can I wait a couple of weeks so we can go on the vacation?" he asked the surgeon who had been called into the case by the doctor.

Then he was told straight from the shoulder — the cancer was vicious. It was fast growing and there was no time to be lost. It was more than a vacation he stood to lose—he stood to lose his life. Today, Paul Bull recalls he was not especially afraid of facing death. He had been—more or less—prepared for that eventually years before. His mother was a very religious woman and had brought Paul up to believe death was a perfectly normal thing.

Then there was the day he had been on a strafing mission over (Continued on Page 24)

Boise Musical Troop Travels to Area to Rehearse With Vocalist

FILER, Dec. 21—On Jan. 13 the curtain will rise on the production "Kismet" in Boise. The production will run for six nights during that time Roger Vincent will step into the role created by Alfred Drake.

members from Boise traveled by bus to spend the evening rehearsing at Vincent's home, two miles north of Filer. The trip was made in appreciation of his effort to help the production. Vincent is the only member of the cast from Magic Valley. "We feel that it is going to be an excellent production," said Vincent. "It's too bad the residents of Magic Valley won't be able to see it. The singing farmer was referring to the lack of an auditorium in Magic Valley to stage such a production.

While many members of the group, Musical Productions, Inc., of Boise, indicated that they would like to bring "Kismet" to Magic Valley, there isn't any place to stage it. At present a drive is under way to raise funds for an auditorium capable of seating enough people to make plays and musicals profitable. The facility at Filer high school has limited seating and backstage facilities. If the people of Magic Valley want to see "Kismet," they'll have to go to Boise.

A good preview of the production could have been viewed at the Vincent home. However, it was a little disconnected. The cast broke into small groups with one group using the living room, some using the rumpus room, while others converged on the kitchen. The cast took pity on the Vincent icebox and filled up on sandwiches at Bliss on the way down. According to Kenneth Hartzler, the director, the drive to Filer not only returned a favor for Vincent, it also provided a pleasant change.

WARM HOME near Filer was converted to a rehearsal hall for members of the cast of "Kismet" chartered a bus from Boise to Filer. Roger Vincent, center, will sing the lead, made famous by Alfred Drake, with the Boise group. Vincent has been commuting to Boise and the cast decided to return the favor by showing up in Filer. Kenneth Hartzler, left, directs Vincent and Mrs. Richard Wilcomb through one of the scenes. Vincent is the only Magic Valley resident in the cast. Because of the lack of auditorium facilities in Magic Valley, the production will not be staged here. (Times-News photo)

First Christmas in Town Had Big Sagebrush "Tree," but No Snow

That first Christmas tree in Twin Falls will always be a talking piece. It was a large sagebrush bush! When Mrs. Edward Cooper, 151 Seventh avenue north, came to Twin Falls in 1912 it was still the "big story," although it had taken place eight years before. But today, Mrs. Cooper has the complete story of that first Twin Falls Yuletide in the form of a newspaper clipping. "I really cannot remember why I saved it," she said, "but I did and it tells all about that first Christmas in 1904, even though it was written the year I came to town. "Perhaps on that initial observation it wasn't written down right then because no one realized how historically important it would be some day."

an attempt to blow from the tract or bury from sight the intruders of the vast, silent sagebrush desert. But tents and shacks stood firm and unmoved and were neither blown away nor buried. "A spirit of hope pervaded the new city, for the future looked bright. True, everything needed for the making of homes had to be freighted 35 miles from Shoshone, along dusty roads and down through the canyon at Blue Lakes—everything from hairpins to tobacco to building materials. And the cheery housewife more often used a shovel and a pall than broom and duster to remove the dust from her humble home. This was because the wind, with the force of a mighty catapult, hurled fine dust by pallfuls over the sturdy little city.

mination and straightaway a generous amount of money was subscribed for the purpose. The committee on arrangements consisted of Mrs. C. B. Taylor, Miss Mary Yates, Mrs. W. H. Griffiths, Mrs. S. W. Hazen who was chairman of the program committee, Miss Elva McCollum, now Mrs. Walter H. Craven, drilled the children for the entertainment and all were assisted by other women in Twin Falls, including Mrs. H. W. Cloucheck, who had charge of the program; Mrs. Fred E. Ramsey, Mrs. J. O. Milner, Mrs. I. B. Perrine and Mrs. J. M. Spackman. "Early in December a small frame building was completed which was to triple as a schoolhouse, public hall and church. Here, of course, the exercises were to be held. "F. W. Eickhoff and attorney S. T. Hamilton were delegated to provide the Christmas tree. They secured one most appropriate—a giant sagebrush over eight feet high and nearly nine feet wide. "Many of the women said "how ridiculous, a sagebrush Christmas tree" in disgust and Messrs. Eickhoff and Hamilton were not complimented on their choice of this all-important feature of the exercises—until later. "This splendid specimen of the desert tract was festooned with strings of popcorn, red berries and tinsel cord and decorated with fancy ornaments and candles, apples and oranges. "In lieu of netting with which to make Christmas stockings for the candy and nuts, pretty bags made of paper napkins were filled with these goodies and daintily tied to the tree. "Was ever a graceful fir tree prouder than this much-maligned sagebrush of the desert? And it had reason to be proud, for it proved a tree of beauty and a pride to the pioneers of the tract who have always been glad that the first Christmas tree was a home product.

The article is illustrated with a picture of the decorated bush. It was listed as being eight feet high and practically as wide. The newspaper picture shows a box of apples at the base. No other "presents" are visible. The article carried the byline of Jessie Warrington. It is reprinted here without deletion.

"The first Christmas in Twin Falls was one of the most interesting holiday seasons that the Magic City has known—and it is doubtful if the Christmas spirit ever permeated any community more than it did this few-months-old city that Christmas season in 1904.

"Twin Falls was a decidedly new town that season. There were not more than 75 dwellings," all told, in the vicinity at that time as the first town lots were not sold until August of that year. There was but one "sure enough" residence to give a touch of real civilization to the frontier scene and that residence belonging to Robert M. McCollum was not finished until the middle of December. It loomed, above the sagebrush like a castle. Tents and shacks made up the town.

"The weather was ideal during the autumn and early winter months, only the wind and dust combining forces now and then in

In the Indian pueblos on Christmas Eve natives recite the prayers taught them 300 years ago by the Spanish priests who came with the conquistadors. After the midnight masses in the dirt floor churches, the Indians begin their day-long dances that tell of the coming of Christ. Others light the pinon wood fires to guide the lost Christ child to the village.

New Mexico Fiesta Marks Christmas Season Start

SANTA FE, N. M., Dec. 21—EBENEZER Scrooge would have found life even more unbearable in New Mexico at Christmas than in Dickens' London. That's because Christmas here is a mixture of Indian drums and dancing feet, luminarias and panatas, streets filled with singing processions and holiday fun. The atomic age visitor who isn't on guard sees the barren New Mexico hills, turn into a view of ancient Palestine. Lonely shepherds tend their flocks as they did 2,000 years ago in the Holy land. Narrow dirt roads wind up hillsides to adobe villages that could be Bethlehem. A "bah humbug" attitude is hard to find. In the pueblos and villages around Santa Fe during the festive season, natives enact Los Posados — the Processions. In

And so Christmas eve came that Saturday night, Dec. 24, 1904, and at the proper time men, women and children left their tent and shack homes and waded more than ankle deep—through snow? No, indeed! Through fine, powdery dust to the little frame dwelling where the Christmas tree was. "The one room was soon packed by some 200 adults and 100 children and the crowd extended out to where the sidewalk should have been. "And the Christmas spirit packed all the corners and every bit of space left, and glorified the proud sagebrush tree and enveloped the folks outside. "The stars overhead shone brightly and the children's eyes shone brightly and a stealthy tear here and there shone brightly as some lonely heart in transient and citizen warmed at the sight and thoughts turned for a moment back home. "Songs, recitations, dialogue and cantatas in turn entertained and finally in a hush of almost painful expectancy to the children (Continued on Page 25)

Life in MAGIC VALLEY

The workroom of a baby tender (for underprivileged children) turned toy maker in PAUL would make Santa's workshop look obsolete. Displayed at the home of Mrs. Walter Stoller, better known by numerous children as Grandma, are her little pixies placed on shelves in all positions. Small in stature, but big at heart, Grandma Stoller for several years took small children into her home and cared for them until their parents could make arrangements. With her age against her, she was persuaded by her family to stop taking children and find a less strenuous pastime. As her first love always has been children, she chose the next-best activity—that of making toys and dolls.

Always an active woman, Grandma Stoller cannot find contentment in just sitting around holding her hands. Making things is nothing new in the Stoller household, as she has been doing this all her life.

For her own children and the "little guests," she would make toys and dolls. She couldn't understand people buying everything at the store when there was more contentment found in giving a child's toy that "home-made touch."

She makes all sorts of hand work, rugs, stuffed animals, dolls, wall ornaments, and several other items.

Today, this woman's "pastime" has developed into something that makes Santa's workshop look somewhat obsolete compared to the display room located in her home. The first sight of this room gives the viewer the impression the little objects are life like.

The pert little pixies, placed on the high shelves in their bright colors are in all positions. Some are lying on their stomach with their feet upwards and their hands around their face, while others are sitting very ladylike, with their knees crossed. Most of the dolls are made with mall order faces, while others are made of cloth in the raggedy Ann style. Unlike the "Frankenstein tales" of the doctor getting human beings to make their lifelike monsters, Mrs. Stoller journeys to the local beauty parlor to obtain the human hair (left over from hair cuts) for the pixies. Her daughters-in-law also are willing to save a lock of their hair now and then.

The pixie's frame is made of electrical wire and cloth to make it bend easier. The hands and feet are made of stuffed felt. She points out the pixie is made for the woman or older girl as a bed decoration, but others are stuffed and more cuddly designed for the children.

Last Christmas she filled 40 orders for pixie dolls, and this year she has so many orders in, she doubts if she will be able to complete every order. It takes her a day to complete a doll. She started making dolls from plastic, but found it difficult to work with. Most of her dolls are made of cloth.

She has a brother, Gus Radke, Las Vegas, Nev., who also enjoys this type of hobby. He makes doll furniture.

The little children in the neighborhood frequently visit the display room. She enjoys watching the expression on their faces when they enter the room, but says they never touch anything. It's enough for them to just stand and admire the quaint little figures.

Mrs. Stoller often gets her ideas from magazines, but doesn't always follow a pattern. "I get an idea what it should be like, then I go make it," she said. She still has a stuffed rabbit she made for her son 23 years ago. It's still in good condition. Her children always had toys and dolls to play with, but never abused them.

Mr. and Mrs. Stoller built a home north of Paul five years ago after retiring from the farm. They designed the home and transformed a utility room into a sewing workshop for the dolls and toys. She braided a large rug for the living room. In fact she makes rugs for several homes in the area. "I like to make things and see what I can accomplish," she remarked. In the summer time she concentrates on beautifying her yard with flowers. A son came over last summer and took movie pictures of her yard and showed them to her later. Her innocent comment was, "Oh, who's pretty flowers are those?" Her boy smiled and informed her they were hers.

Stamp Window

A four-cent postal card will be issued in Washington Feb. 22 to commemorate the 175th anniversary of the U.S. customs service, which virtually supported the cost of government in the nation's early years.

The card, which will have an imprinted "stamp," probably in two colors, will be issued in a quantity of 40 million. Customs officials have suggested a design featuring a blue outline map of the United States.

In announcing the stamp, the postoffice department noted that of total government income of 2.5 billion dollars in 1959, two million dollars came from tariff duties. Customs collections today total nearly two billion dollars a year.

The department also announced that the Sam Houston commemorative stamp, originally scheduled for Dec. 13, will be released Jan. 10 at Houston, Tex.

An album for the popular Red Cross centennial stamps has been added to the Whiteace line. It includes spaces for stamps and souvenir sheets from 45 countries, and a second section is due shortly. The first group of pages, punched for standard three-ring looseleaf binders, is available from stamp dealers for $2. A deluxe, gold-stamped binder costs $3.50.

New issues: Ghana, India and Korea issued stamps on Human Rights day in honor of the late Eleanor Roosevelt. Ghana released four stamps, India a single denomination showing her spinning on a fabric-making device, and Korea issued a 3-won stamp picturing Mrs. Roosevelt and a 4-won with a symbolic touch. Ghana marked Human Rights day with one stamp showing a torch being raised by two persons of different races and another featuring eight men of several races with arms linked and a balanced scale. This year's three Christmas stamps from the Vatican depict a circular Nativity scene in a stockaded African village. The Vatican also released three commemorative honoring Sts. Cyril and Methodius, ninth century apostles to the Slavs. The Canal Zone will issue an eight cent stamped envelope Jan. 6 with the usual red and blue border and a red imprinted "stamp" featuring the tail of an airplane. Collectors desiring first-day cancellations should send nine cents for each cover, and a legibly written return address, to the Philatelic Agency, Balboa Heights, Canal Zone.

How Long Can a Man "Live Beyond His Income?"

Not very long—that's for sure. Neither individuals, nor families, nor businesses can do it.

Some people think our federal government can do it year after year after year. There's ample excuse for federal deficits and debts in time of all-out war; there are equally compelling reasons, in the national interest, to reduce those debts and live prudently within income during times of peace.

How did we get off the track? By apathy, by the delusion that massive federal extravagance and indebtedness somehow doesn't harm us, by permitting our political representatives in Washington to do it.

Isn't it about time to eliminate unnecessary federal expenditures?

According to a recent estimate, government is operating some 19,000 business installations, competing with its own taxpaying citizens and using their funds in the process. If efforts toward frugality are to be meaningful, here is an excellent starting point.

For example: the Bonneville Power Administration seeks to spend about $100,000,000 of taxpayers' money to bring subsidized electric power into southern Idaho—where there is already an abundance of low-cost power that generates tax payments.

We think this is wasteful and unnecessary. Don't you?

MAGIC VALLEY PORTRAIT Salvation Army Leader Says Working To Help Others Is Soul-Satisfying

There are a lot of better ways to make a living, but when everything is added up there is really nothing more soul-satisfying than doing things for other people who really need something done for them.

That, in a nutshell, is the thinking of Capt. Leonard H. Blix, commander of the Salvation Army post in Twin Falls. And he should know. Before he reached an age of about 25 years and made his final decision that Salvation Army work was for him, he had had responsible positions in the general accounting office and as an underwriter, both in the army division of "the veterans' administration."

Actually he had been exposed to the work and surroundings of the Salvation Army as a boy. A friend talked him into attending Sunday school in Chicago, where he lived with his parents, and Captain Blix recalls:

"I guess it was the beating of the drums and the sight of the throngs of happy people that made me decide, although I didn't realize it then, that put the idea of Salvation Army work in my thoughts."

In fact, he learned how to blow a horn while still a youth, entered Boy Scout work in the Salvation Army troop and worked up to Scoutmaster.

The road from that early exposure to Salvation Army work as a boy to the present position in Twin Falls was a rather long one.

Blix was born in Chicago Oct. 13, 1914. His father was a merchant tailor with a business located in the northwest portion of the city. Both his father and mother were religious people, he recalls.

In fact, he remembers that his father sat in the pew behind the children casting an eye right or left, and an indication that attention was not being centered on the minister called for a quick boxing of the ears.

Young Leonard went through the Monroe grade school in Chicago and was graduated from Lane Technical high school, the largest such high school in the nation. His graduation date was 1934 and the depression was still on. Jobs were just not to be had.

Like hundreds of graduates at the time, he joined up with the civilian conservation corps—called the CCC's—and was sent west, landing at Roseburg, Ore. It was his first trip west. He was impressed and secretly told himself that this was the country in which he wanted to live.

But his desire was cut short with the death of his father, so it was back East to aid the family financially. During this period he held positions with the veterans administration but, as he puts it, "I guess the drum beating was still in my head and so I made the great decision."

In 1940 he married a girl who felt the same as he did. They decided to enter the Salvation Army training college together.

After a two-year course they were graduated and he received the rank of captain. Salvation Army officers are those whose

Best Gift for Idaho Sportsmen Will Be More, Better Public Access Roads

BY JIM HUMBIRD

Idaho Fish-Game Department
BOISE, Dec. 21—With snow on the ground in most places in Idaho and cold winds blowing, Christmas decorations on main streets and store windows loaded with Christmas things, what can the Idaho sportsman want that he does not have already?

He lives in the state where myriads of people come for their vacations, to hunt, fish and loaf. Shopping for him is trying, to say the least, because he has "everything."

But does he, now? Granted he already has a shotgun, rifle, fishing tackle and other gear of his own choosing. These may not be the best on the market, but they are familiar, serviceable and good for many seasons to come. True, industry spends millions of dollars every year trying to create something new, something different that will induce him to buy. But the Idaho sportsman just might be highly indignant if you even tried to replace his old hat.

But does he have everything? Consider, for example, that next year there will be more hunters, anglers and vacationers in the field with more new shotguns, rifles, fishing gear and other paraphernalia. This means increased hunting and fishing pressures.

Of course, Idaho has large areas of public domain. In fact, hunting for deer and other big game animals is done mainly on forest service and other public lands.

The problem is finding enough public access rights-of-way to them. The solution is beyond the means of the Idaho sportsman, lucky as he is to live in one of the best hunting and fishing states in the nation.

Figured this way, probably the best Christmas gift the Idaho sportsman can get is public access routes to major hunting and fishing areas around the state. Let us feel that this is the same present he got last Christmas—and the year before—consider the following:

As part of the Idaho fish and game department's new five-point program for the future, which was adopted by the state legislature last January, the sportsman acquired this year a total of 2,233.46 acres of land in public parcels all over the state to public access sites to good fishing and hunting grounds. Total cost of these rights-of-way across private lands during 1963 was $52,600, not including $283 for annual lease fees on additional properties.

It would require a Yule tree in the Paul Bunyon tradition to place all these parcels of public lands on its base.

Moreover, the lion's share of expenses this year, as usual, went for development costs. This includes the building of roads, parking areas, fences, cattle guards, boat ramps and sanitation facilities, as needed. The total tab for such work during 1963 was $236,030. But $202,180 of this was charged against the federal accelerated public works program, one-half of which is contributed as matching funds by the Idaho fish and game department.

For example, approximately 150 miles of access trails in the five northern counties and in Teton county were built during the summer and fall months under this cooperative federal-state financial effort. More accelerated trail building is foreseen next year.

"Idaho fortunately recognized the growing need for outdoor recreational space before it was too late, acquiring land over the years that perhaps now would not be available at any price. By the same token, public access sites acquired in the next few years may never be available again. Other states are recognizing the need belatedly."

For example, New York has a 75 million dollar program for land acquisition. Wisconsin's is 50 million dollars. Idaho is doing much better with a mere fraction of such sums. The Hagerman, Market lake, North lake and San creek management areas are good examples of land acquisition for purposes other than providing public access routes across private lands. These are for the rehabilitation of wildlife and development purposes to make living conditions more suitable for birds, animals and fish. They also are "people areas."

Altogether, 45 access projects in 22 counties either are underway or were completed this year. Counties having one or more of these new public access projects are Benewah, Bingham, Blaine, Bonner, Boundary, Butte, Camas, Canyon, Custer, Elmore, Gooding, Jefferson, Jerome, Kootenai, Latah, Nez Perce, Owyhee, Payette, Power, Shoshone, Teton and Twin Falls.

The north Idaho and Teton county accelerated public works trail building projects already have been mentioned. All of the others cannot be listed because of space limitations. But some of the major public access routes include the following:

Benewah county—St. Maries river access site acquisition, $4,500; development, $6,800. This includes well drilling, channel excavation to dock, road construction, graveling, boat ramp and sanitation facilities.

Bingham—Snake river access (Pinger segment) development, $3,500. This included approach road construction, parking area, leveling and graveling, boat launching ramp and sanitary facilities.

Blaine—Silver creek access (120-acre acquisition by lease from bureau of land management at $30 a year). Development $3,500 for access road and sanitary facilities.

Bonner—Cocolalla lake access development, including well drilling and hand pump, $1,500.

Canyon-Owyhee—Snake river access development (construction and graveling of five access roads, boat ramps and parking areas at three sites), $6,000.

Gooding—Billingsley creek public access area acquisition, $60,000. This property is slightly more than 283 acres.

Kootenai—Hayen lake access development, including road building, clearing parking area and camping sites, and installation of sanitary facilities, $3,000. Rose lake access development—road, perimeter fence, sanitary facilities, leveling, graveling parking area, $8,400. Both of these were accelerated public works projects.

Nez Perce—Waha lake access area development, $1,600.

Teton—Teton river public access site acquisition, $17,150. An additional $17,280 is earmarked for development work, including bridge construction.

Latah—Spring valley reservoir area development. The dam creating this fishing reservoir was built by the Idaho fish-game department a couple of years ago. Some $36,940 was spent for land purchase, and $117,457 for dam construction. Development, including roads, fences and public facilities, amounted to another $7,350 this year.

Bonner—Already approved and scheduled for 1964, is the development of Garfield Bay public access area on Lake Pend Oreille. This includes construction of a breakwater jetty and dock and boat launching ramp at a total figure of $33,000 in federal-state accelerated public works money.

(This Christmas bundle to sportsmen and all other outdoor recreationists represents just the acquisition and development of public access sites during 1963. Next year the work will continue.

Merry Christmas and Happy New Year!

wives also have completed the training course. They work together as a team, on various assignments. In fact, when Captain Blix is out of the city, "Mrs. Captain Blix" is in command of the Twin Falls post.

Their first assignment was at Virginia, Minn., which as Blix put it today, is "this side of nowhere." Winter temperatures of 35 to 40 below were common in the community of 12,000 people, but the rigorous climate proved too much for the young officer and soon his health made it necessary that he accept another post. He and his wife were transferred to Ventura, Calif.

He spent the next five years in that area and also in San Diego and then they took the jump north to Portland where he was stationed another five years and then to Roseburg—the same town where he had served with the CCC's for another two years. From that point he received his call to Twin Falls, arriving here in 1962.

The Twin Falls unit is a large operation. About one-third of the necessary funds comes through the United Fund campaign and the other two-thirds is raised through the Salvation Army thrift store and by personal donations.

More than 600 free meals are given through the local post each month and lodging, on short term, is provided for about 200 people each month.

"People with nice homes, a fireplace and comfort really find it hard to realize that some in Twin Falls, and some who pass through here, have absolutely nothing. Many are in this situation through no fault of their own," Captain Blix said.

The local post accomplishes more welfare work than any of the other six posts in the state. The shelter here is strictly modern, the best in Idaho or Oregon.

But people who are aided do not just sit—with the exception of those who are ill or are too young. They work to help earn their keep while in Twin Falls.

"Our work really amounts to a rehabilitation program. We try to get individuals or families on their feet again," he said.

Regarding his work, he said: "Sure, I was making much more money where I was, but I really wasn't happy. I felt that I should be helping others, so I turned to the Salvation Army.

"It might be of interest to those who read this when they

ROTTERDAM, The Netherlands, Dec. 21 — The Van de Meer en Schoppe bakery has been convicted of unsanitary conditions after a health inspector found birds nesting above the ovens.

A spokesman for the firm said the inspector had dropped in "at a difficult period."

Now he can eat "practically anything, but stays away from roughage. He plays golf and puts in a full shift at the power company.

After his illness he never received so much mail in his life, even from people he knew only in an informal way.

His acceptance back into the swing of things in Twin Falls has been amusing, by his own evaluation.

"Some people, just a few, actually backed away from me when they found that I had had cancer. Some others asked about my health but never mentioned the word cancer. Others talked frankly with me and this is the way I wanted it," he said.

Bull was an active athlete in high school and college. He smoked "light" but has given it up.

The question that comes back to him is the same one: "How come I got cancer?"

He admits he doesn't know. In fact neither do the doctors. But he knows one thing: "It will be a lovely Christmas at our house."

Early in December the lumnarias go up on the flat roofs and walls of homes. These traditional lights lead the way for the lost Christ child, El Nido Perdido, who walks among the faithful at Christmas.

The age-old fiesta of the Virgin of Guadalupe begins Dec. 11 to honor the Catholic patroness of the Americas. The nine-day reenactment of the Holy family's search for the inn at Bethlehem follows.

In the tiny Rio Grande villages, folk plays with local casts are performed. Stories of the ancient shepherds — Los Pastores — will be retold for the thousandth time, while the churches, centers of village life, will be illuminated with incense candles made by the villagers.

And on Christmas day Santa Fe bursts with fiesta gaiety. In homes the roast turkey is stuffed with pinon nut dressing. In some homes there will be the traditional murrantito, roast suckling pig. The traditional "fixings" are corn, rice, squash, tortillas and a bottle of sugary chockecherry wine.

In Scrooge's London, he was forced finally to say, "Merry Christmas." In Santa Fe he would say it much earlier, "Feliz Navidad."

Christmas Season Bright for Local Resident Following Cancer Operation

(Continued From Page 21) Italy. He was a flier in World War II and a first lieutenant. Captured, he was interned in a prisoner of war camp in the Polish corridor, 90 miles east of Berlin, for over a year. He saw a lot of pain and death during the war and in that year as a prisoner. He was getting conditioned to it.

But now he was closer to death than he ever had been. At least it appeared more certain.

The local physician decided that, because of the location of the cancer, it would be better to go to a physician who did that type of operation almost exclusively. This man, in Minneapolis, was called on the telephone and an appointment was made with him for the following Monday afternoon.

Then Bull told his wife and youngsters, but he wanted life to go on as usual. After all, fright would do nothing.

He worked as usual Friday and told his superiors of the situation. He played golf with the "gang" Saturday and took his family to the Elks picnic Sunday. He kept his story to himself.

Monday morning he took the early flight out of Twin Falls. By noon he was in Minneapolis and within the hour had checked into a hotel. He was in the surgeon's office at 3 p.m. The surgeon, Bull could tell, was feeling him out.

"I told him not to be afraid of me falling apart and to tell me straight," Bull said. This the surgeon did.

Bloods and other data would be studied during the night and Bull would be given the decision the next day. He returned to the hotel and called his wife.

That evening he went for a walk. Somewhere on that stroll a man approached him. He was not too well dressed and needed a shave.

"Could you give me a quarter?" the man queried. "I'm down and out."

To Bull it was funny. "Here" he thought "he was down and out and wanted a quarter. Here I was with cancer and stood a chance to be out of everything," he said.

Bull gave the fellow the quarter.

The next day the surgeon recommended that an operation be arranged and Bull agreed. The details were spelled out to him.

He would lose half his tongue in addition to other tissue. The lymph glands would be removed, as would the muscle that goes down the side of the neck and aids in supporting the shoulder. The surgeon painted a dark picture. He expressed the thought that if the operation was a success Bull probably would be able to let his wants be known by a form of conversation which friends someday would learn to understand, but he would never talk again.

He was ordered to the hospital right away. He checked out of the hotel, called his wife, and entered the hospital. His roommate was a younger man who was in for observation. They talked and talked. Finally a nurse came in with an ultimatum.

"You're talking so much," she told Bull, "that the lady next door cannot sleep. She wants you to keep still."

"You just go back and tell her that this may be the last time I'll get to talk and I'll do it all I want," Bull told the nurse who smiled, nodded her head and left the room.

He had been told he would be in the hospital for at least six weeks. In 15 days he was on his way back to Twin Falls. He had been told that he probably would never talk again, but after five days he had called his wife and was able to make her understand what he was saying.

Pain?

"You have no idea what real pain is like," Bull said. During the operation his lower jaw had been cut down the middle and his entire mouth cavity and throat area opened up. The jaw bothered him, as did the throat and the shoulder had been removed.

He had to learn to eat again and swallow again. He found that he held his lips tighter than he had before the operation and that his shoulder was sore. It still is.

But he was running ahead of the schedule set by the surgeon and he was glad.

He was told his chances of not having to come back for another cancer operation were about 80 per cent.

"That's a better chance than you get a lot of places — say getting hit by a truck," Bull

What to give Children at Christmas

Because children believe, our own beliefs are deepened.

The gifts they give us are enormous, being nothing less than faith, wonder, love, laughter, trust. They give in innocence and without question what cannot be bought in any store for any money — themselves.

What are we to give in return? Surely it must be more than things — the games, the toys, the candy. And more indeed than can be given in a single day.

It must be that which only we can create, alone and with others... a better, much better, world for these our children to inherit.

To this hope, we rededicate ourselves.

MRS. JANET BROWN, 84-year-old Scotswoman, known to her many friends in the Ketchum-Sun Valley area as the "Tartan Queen," has served Scotland and America in three wars. She operates her tiny Scotch shop "Brigadoon" in her apartment at Bald Mountain cabins. Her ambition, before retiring, is to see a group of "pipers" organized here. (Times-News photo)

Ketchum Woman Served Food, Knit Garments for Countrymen in 3 Wars

HAILEY, Dec. 21—Mrs. Janet Brown believes she has knit more warm garments and prepared more nourishing food for men serving their country in the armed forces during time of war than any woman in the nation. She has marched with the rank and file of working women in three great wars.

Her first service was during the years England and the Dutch fought in South Africa.

"During the Boer war every household in Britain had to join the Red Cross to get supplies to the fighting men in the mountains of Cape Colony, Natal and the Orange Free state as quickly as possible.

"We wasted not a minute as for knitting needles fashioned from underwear, socks and balaklavas," she states. A balaklava, she explains, resembled the knit helmets worn by men on ski slopes today.

Reminiscing on her life as a young woman at that time, she remembers the United States kept the money pouring into Britain and sent thousands of horses to Table Bay in Africa to assist the soldiers.

"Some Americans even volunteered and fought on our side," she said.

She remembers Winston Churchill telling of escapes from prison, stealing a Boer soldier's uniform and crawling along the African veldt by night and hiding by day until he reached Pretoria, where he boarded a freight train to the coast. Then he took a train steamer to get back to England and warned his people of the desperate struggle which was to come before the fight could be won.

"Seemed like we had barely caught our breath from the Boer war until we were thrown into World War I," she continued.

"This time Janet Brown served her country by operating the restaurant at the naval base at Rosyth, near Edinburgh, Scotland.

"A picture which will never be erased from my mind was printed there one wild November morning in 1917," she continued. "Villagers stood as statues watching the cantilever bridge at the Path of Fort part 361 feet above the water and the 11 American battleships (the largest ever to cross the Atlantic) and their convoys as they crept slowly into the harbor. Overhead the huge balloons, carrying weapons and supplies for the men, almost grazed the spires of Edinburgh castle as it floated gently to earth."

"You'll never know how thankful the Britons were when that

Split Vote

WASHINGTON, Dec. 21 (AP)—Idaho's U.S. senators, Frank Church and Len Jordan, split their votes on two important bills coming up this week.

Church voted for both the foreign aid appropriations bill and a measure to exclude a ban on export-import bank underwriting of communist-block trade deals. Jordan voted no.

The $3,272,000,000 foreign aid bill won passage 60 to 25. The wheat to Russia measure passed 52 to 32.

not attuned to the pipes, so they set up a terrific howl. Silenced with a cudgel, they were shut in the barn.

It was a gay night, with the pipers swaggering around the room playing, "Scotland, the Brave," "The Weaving of the Green," and other good tunes.

"My first springtime on Poverty flat I shall never forget," Mrs. Brown continued. "The great bands of sheep with their thick long fleeces; the lambs skipping around over the crusty snow. The green grass sprouting where the snow had melted around the bottoms of the sagebrush; the dogs barking and yelping and the Basque riders astride noble-looking horses.

"As they started out on their long summer trek—first to the desert below and later to the high mountain country—a lump rose in my throat and I felt I couldn't swallow. But I managed to wave my checkered apron as they left the ranch."

In a few years, the background of Janet Brown's life changed again. This time it was Sun Valley, where she was housekeeper at the Averill Harriman cottage.

"Those were wonderful years for me. Every day I took a stroll through the surrounding grounds, and it brought me very close to Scotland. While out of doors I always wore the tartan dress of the Balmoral Bonnie of my own Lindsay clan. It was at this time that I received my title, 'The Tartan Queen.'"

"But my time at Sun Valley was all too short. War clouds were gathering thick and fast—and for the third time in my life I heard the war drums roll."

Tom Brown, at 70, forsook his sheep and went to Lake Union, Wash., to paint light cruisers for the American navy. Alex joined the Seabee marines, serving two and one-half years as a gunner first class in Okinawa.

Mrs. Brown again joined the ranks of women working for their country and was stationed for the duration at the University of Washington, where she helped feed some 1,200 V12 students. It had been 27 years since she served American sailors in Scotland. This time she had plenty of hot dogs and pop to offer them.

After her husband died in 1951, her one thought was to return to the Wood river valley.

After living at Bellevue and Hailey for a time, in 1958 she rented a tiny three-room prospector's cabin in Ketchum, made it over into "Brigadoon," and told her many friends, "It is just beside the bonnie briar bush—you can't miss it."

She wrote her old friend, Hugh MacPherson of Edinburgh, Scotland, referred to as the Tartan King of the World, and he immediately sent her tartans, Scotch plaids and other necessities.

City's First Christmas Was Snowless

When Santa Claus (C. Tripp) and the good things from the tree were distributed.

"The crowd was so dense, and the air so warm, that Santa, muffled closely in his furs, had to hasten his part in the exercises and hurry from the building and through the crowd.

"Then he undoubtedly boarded his sleigh, spoke to his team of jack rabbits, and whirled away through the dust and sagebrush as only jack rabbits could whirl him.

"And so the successful and memorable event closed, with $37 of the Christmas fund left for an organ fund for the newly organized school. Everyone went home happy and the proud sagebrush tree, left alone in the little building, was too happy to think of sleeping.

"And out across the lonely, quiet, sagebrush plain, lighted by infinite numbers of twinkling stars, hurried a big jack rabbit, the bearer of great news.

"He had sat just outside at one of the windows and witnessed a most surprising scene where a common sagebrush occupied the place of honor at the most auspicious event that had ever been held in the old sagebrush desert.

"And since that Christmas in 1904, on the Twin Falls tract, sagebrush has been prouder, smelled sweeter, looked prettier and held more tenaciously to life and Earth than it ever did through all the eons of time before man entered the desert with grub hoe and torch."

lies for a well-dressed Scotchman from MacPherson house.

The password to enter Brigadoon always has been a Scotch brogue or some intimate knowledge of the country. For visitors there is always a pot of hot tea beneath the tea-cozy, emblazoned with the Lindsay clan coat of arms, and a can of Scotch shortbread.

Eighteen months ago, Mrs. Brown, now in her 84th year, moved Brigadoon a block away to a heated apartment at Bald Mountain cabins.

She has one more ambition before she retires. It is to see a group of bagpipers in the Ketchum-Sun Valley area. Already one local youth, Jerry Mintun, garbed in full Black Watch attire, is entertaining on the pipes at Sun Valley and the Idaho State university, Pocatello, where he is attending school.

Several young college people who work at Sun Valley during vacation periods have kilts and play the chanters.

Fred Laidlaw, prominent Scotch sheepman of Muldoon, friends from far away Calgary, Canada, and local residents have donated funds toward acquiring a teacher of the pipes for this vicinity.

Those who know Mrs. Brown predict she will have her wish fulfilled before she retires.

"The Wearing of Masks"

By ESCIL HISER
Church of the Brethren

Historians have described in detail for us the armor worn by the knights of long ago, and especially those men of valor of the 15th and 16th centuries. During this period the warrior wore such a complete covering of metal plate that he was an impenetrable fort. And he was so completely locked into his iron hide that he was invisible both to friend and foe.

As a matter of fact, Escil Hiser identifies the armor to have heraldic devices engraved or emblazoned upon shield or surcoat. He also had the good grace to make himself known in other ways while in full armor around the king's court.

This was especially true should he be approached by one of the ladies of the court.

For tradition tells us that in such an incident he would lift the beaver or visor of his headgear, thus making his face visible. It was considered unmannerly to hide behind the mask of his gear, except in combat.

Our generation is being accused by a number of honestly concerned people of wearing masks and thereby violating the principles of intellectual honesty and the highest kind of integrity.

Our masks are many and varied—such as fear, pretense, assumption and deception, to name a few. These masks are used in all sorts of inter-personal relationships and often seem to their wearers completely harmless.

They may be used by employees toward employers, borrowers toward creditors, clerks to customers and, yet, pastors to parishioners—in fact, in any number of relationships where one desires to make a good impression for an advantage. These are only few and perhaps vague illustrations of the multitudes of ways and kinds of masks we might wear because we have fear of letting our true countenance be seen.

Jesus had rather harsh things to say about the extremes of mask wearing. His scathing remarks were couched in such terms as "wolves in sheeps clothing" and "white-washed sepulchres." His position leaves the unmistakable suggestion that we should always be our true selves.

Our modern teachers of personal conduct and inner discipline nobly attempt to impress us with the fact that trying to be what we really aren't or at least striving to make false appearances, endangers one's mental health.

But, we contend for our success in our given field by saying, "We must put our best foot forward." We would always be in trouble if we let our true feelings be exposed. Especially are we fearful that this would be true in our business and professional relationships.

It is true there is a place for tact, but not at the expense of intellectual honesty. On the other hand one does not need to be rude in being honest. But one can practice an honesty that respects virtue void of offense as it challenges others to virtue.

Paul, the apostle of Jesus Christ, has a suggested remedy for the kind of problem we have raised here—a suggestion that will let each one be himself without need of mask or veil of pretense. Though he was speaking in a different context, the principle of his words will still apply. "And we all with unveiled faces beholding the glory of the Lord are being changed into his likeness from one degree of glory to another. For this comes from the Lord, who is the Spirit." R. S. V.

He is implying that, as we abate in our personalities by intellectual honesty, the person of Jesus Christ, and are tempered by His spirit we need not wear masks of danger of losing face or being offensive, but will carry a grace that wears well, a grace not readily vulnerable to offense.

This assuredly is the best way to the peace we hope Christ will bring.

IT MAY LOOK COMPLICATED, but accounting procedures at First Federal Savings and Loan association have been simplified by the installation of a Burroughs E-103 digital computer. Seated at the controls is James Dodds, while Harry Anderson chats with Dodds about operation of the machine. The machine is one of nine in the United States installed in savings and loan associations. (Times-News photo)

Human Error Reduced for Company, Computer Assumes Accounting Duty

At First Federal Savings and Loan association, it is going to be more difficult for the company to make mistakes on savings accounts, interest payments and delinquent accounts.

Not that First Federal makes mistakes, but the minor margin of human error is being eliminated because the company has installed a Burroughs E-103 digital computer.

There are only nine other such computers in the United States being used by savings and loan associations, claims James Dodds, and the one at First Federal is the first such machine installed in southern Idaho for this purpose.

Dodds, an officer for the company, had to journey to Lincoln, Nebr. to watch the operation of a machine there, to study its workings and adaptations. Lincoln was the closest location of a similar setup.

The machine, according to Dodds, will greatly increase the speed and efficiency of the company's operations.

For example, when a customer deposits money in a savings account, the girl at the window would have to post the deposit, look it up in a master index and find the account number, plus a host of other chores. Now, she simply writes a receipt for the deposit. The computer takes it from there.

The computer enters the deposit, totals the account, computes the interest and does the other minor chores the office girl would do.

Originally, the computer was designed to solve mathematical problems in aeronautics. However, it is converted easily to banking use.

The machine does not displace any employees. It releases them to take care of the public, adding the human touch that is missing with the computer. More time can be spent with the customer.

The computer also furnishes the company with instant information on the status of the firm. Up to date totals on loans, savings, interest, dividends and delinquent accounts are immediately available. Before, this would necessitate considerable work on behalf of the staff to furnish up to date accounts.

To a limited extent, the machine can forecast trends. If the trend is to more delinquent payments or to more savings, information can be compared easily and without effort.

Thus far, some nine programs have been fed into the machine. It is capable of handling more programs. In addition, the information which once filled file cabinets has been transferred to cards which are run through the machine.

The machine rejects data not entered correctly. The chance of transposing figures is eliminated and computations are accurate, thus human error is at a minimum.

Future plans of the company call for training several persons to run the computer. At present, only Dodds can operate the machine.

The growth of the company over the past decade indicates a definite need for the machine, Harry Anderson, speaking for the company, noted. Business has almost doubled in the decade and the machine is a necessity rather than a luxury, he added.

Government reports are a necessity in the savings and loan business and a good many of those reports are due Jan. 31. The computer is expected to free employees for routine work or other work while the computer tackles the task of keeping Uncle Sam happy.

FILING WORK is reduced considerably at First Federal Savings and Loan association. Mrs. Cheryl Simms thumps through a drawer of current accounts. For additional information, the cards can be fed through a Burroughs E-103 digital computer. There are some 28,000 accounts programmed onto the cards and programmed into the computer.
