Crash Blamed On Pilot's Heart Attack

WASHINGTON, Jan. 3 (AP)—The Civil Aeronautics Board Thursday blamed the fatal crash of a C-47 plane near Los Angeles more than a year ago on an aviation rarer heart attack in the cockpit.

The CAB said the accident involved a flying Tiger Constellation that crashed while approaching the Lockheed air terminal in Burbank, Calif., on Jan. 17, 1962.

The board said the crash probably was caused by the incapacitation of the captain at a critical moment of the approach.

It also noted that the copilot who tried unsuccessfully to land the plane after the captain had been stricken, had "significantly" lost his aviation background and flying Tiger Constellation crash.

At about 10:00 a.m. on Jan. 17, 1962, the flight engineer and two persons who boarded the flight in Chicago were killed. Three others were injured.

The CAB said an autopsy on the body of Capt. Carl C. Rasmussen, 42, showed he was suffering from a severe heart condition which had been diagnosed during his regular federal aviation agency and company medical examinations.

Heart attacks have been suspected as a possible contributing factor to several crashes, but this was the first time a heart condition had been specifically mentioned as a cause of a crash since World War II.

The board said the crash occurred on a flight from Chicago to Los Angeles. The plane was a Lockheed C-47, registration N47400.

N. Y. Residents Warned of Danger in Cigarette Habit
NEW YORK, Jan. 3 (AP)—New York City residents Thursday heard an official warning from the city that cigarette smoking had been "amply demonstrated" as one of the major causes of lung cancer.

A year-end report by City Health Commissioner George A. James said 70 per cent of the lung cancer deaths among males in the city in 1962 were traceable to cigarette smoking.

The 70 per cent estimate, representing more than 1,500 victims in a 528 death toll, was considered conservative, James wrote in the report issued yesterday.

James said the health department planned to begin a program of "smokers withdrawal clinics" to help people who want to give up smoking.

BUHL, Jan. 3.—Not all of Twin Falls county is included in the Twin Falls soil conservation district. In the western and end of the county, another soil conservation district has been carved out to serve the many farmers and ranchers who reside near Buhl and to serve the farmers and ranchers who are taking land out of the brush west of Salmon Falls creek valley.

This other district in the county is known as the Balanced Rock conservation district, with headquarters at Buhl.

Stripe Rust Losses in Twin Falls County Could Total Million Dollars

Twin Falls county wheat growers lost more than a million dollars in 1963 because of stripe rust. If climate conditions are favorable for this dreaded wheat disease to spread, the damage may be as bad or possibly worse in 1964, says Olan Owen, county agricultural agent.

During the fall of 1963 and early spring of 1964 the disease took hold the winter in northern California and parts of Oregon and Washington. It did millions of dollars damage in those three states. The disease remained in existence in those areas and spread northward in the late fall of 1963.

Northern Idaho wheat became infected. It was later last spring that the fungus disease showed up in Twin Falls county. It came from wheat that was thought to be from spores in the air, giving the fungus a start in about every wheat field in the southern Idaho area. Research studies showed that weather conditions were just perfect for the fungus to grow and do damage.

These favorable conditions started in March and continued until the middle of June. By this time the disease was so prevalent that it almost effected nearly every wheat field.

Europe War On Chickens Costs U.S.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 3—An international panel appointed by the general agreement on trade and trade determined that the U.S. suffered a loss of $1 million dollars a year as the result of increased tariffs imposed by the European Community market countries on American chickens.

Value of American chicken exports to the six common market countries was $1 million dollars in 1962, but jumped to $6.2 million in 1963. Visible tariffs and other costs will cut the total to $1 million dollars this year.

The "chicken war" became an issue as an example of the effect of common market policies on U.S. exports to Europe. That happens to chickens can happen to other farm commodities, was the point.

The U.S. estimated its chicken exports to the common market as $1 million dollars in 1962. The common market said it was $6.2 million in 1963. The U.S. said it was $1 million dollars in 1962. TUTTLE, Jan. 3—A water forecast for the 1964 season will be given by A. J. Webster, Soils, of the state office of the soil conservation service, at a meeting at 8 p.m. Friday at the Wendell city hall.

The meeting is sponsored by the North Side Water Users association and the report of the nominating committee will be given, reports Vernon Raventhorpe, president.

Hereford Group Holds T. F. Meeting

Directors of the Idaho Hereford Breeders' association met here to complete plans for the annual Hereford show and sale to be held in Gooding, Feb. 18-19. Registered Hereford bulls and heifers will be offered in the auction, according to Wayne Naugle, Nampa, association president.

For the first time in the history of the sale, only clear pedigreed animals will be entered. Five-year-old animals will be checked by the American Hereford association for all information that is available.

This is a real opportunity for H and FFA members as well as Hereford breeders to purchase foundation heifers to start and build herds, Naugle said.

Catalogs soon will be available from the association office, 2240 Irving street, Boise.

Livestock Chains Aid Future Farmer Students to Acquire Quality Herds

By G. H. CHAMBERS

Livestock chains are proving to be one of the best methods by which a vocational agriculture student can get off to a good start in livestock projects without the student digging deep into his pocket for hard cash.

Probably the best way to answer the question of how the livestock chain works is to trace its history of a chain animal.

First of all, a chain livestock animal is acquired by an FFA chapter. The chapter can purchase a quality animal, or more often the animal is donated by local businesses. The animal generally is "top quality" and can be any kind of animal—Angus, beef, Hereford, pig, swine or sheep.

The animal, or the calf of the animal is given to a deserving FFA student to start the student's herd. It must return to the chapter a quality calf for another student. This can be an offspring of the original animal or an animal of equal quality.

Several factors are considered before a student is awarded a chain animal. The student must demonstrate that he can take adequate care of the animal, show sufficient interest and ability to take care of the animal and maintain the high quality of the chain. Also the student must have the necessary facilities to properly raise the animal. Then the student's overall school record is considered.

While the student has the chain animal under his charge adequate records must be kept for use by other students who will acquire an offspring from the chain animal.

Gary Askew, president of the Twin Falls high school Future Farmers of America chapter, acquired a chain animal from the chapter in 1961 to supplement activity in his animal project.

In August of 1960, Askew purchased an Angus cow from D. A. Jackson. The animal calved in 1961 and dropped a bull calf.

Two bull calves in a row weren't building his herd.

The chain animal came from the H. C. James farm in December of 1960. It was a 6-month-old heifer. The heifer calved in October of 1961, a bull calf, which later became a junior reserve champion. The heifer and dropped a heifer calf.

In the meantime, Askew sold the two bull calves from the original Angus, and the original Angus dropped a heifer calf. This heifer calf was returned to the FFA chapter as a replacement calf for the chain animal.

While this was going on the chain Angus dropped another heifer calf, while also winning a grand championship at a junior showing.

Askew then went back to the James herd and purchased a young springer which has since dropped two heifer calves. He then sold one of the calves.

The selling of the bull calves has furnished Askew with capital to make necessary purchases of other Angus animals. The chain animal gave him an opportunity to increase his herd in a short time.

A total of 11 animals has passed through Askew's pens and he has retained eight of them and is well on his way to getting a good start on a sizeable Angus herd. The blue ribbons hanging on his wall indicate that the quality of the chain animals hasn't been impaired.

Askew "logs" his "chain" through an agreement with his father, and everything is computed at current market prices.

This spring he will have high school and junior college in the fall. The Angus herd will furnish the necessary cash for him to attend college. He can either sell some of his animals or use them for security on a college loan.

In the meantime, John Lawrence, Twin Falls high school vocational agriculture instructor, is adding another student who picked the next chain animal from Askew.

The chain livestock program is excellent. It gives the beginning student an opportunity to get into the livestock business while in high school without digging up cash that "laid" to come by for high school students. It promotes quality animals and the support of businesses in Twin Falls has been excellent," said Lawrence.

ARS Reports On Process To Aid Taste

WASHINGTON, Jan. 23—With an eye toward expanding the use of milk, the Agricultural Research Service is working on a process for full-scale commercialization of a manufacturing process that will produce a high-quality, fresh-flavored drink, the U.S. department of agriculture reports.

The process, developed to its present form by agricultural research service, combines high-temperature, short-time (HST) sterilization, which does not destroy the fresh milk flavor, and use of phospholipids, which prevent evaporated milk from gelling in storage. (Polyphosphates are widely used in cheese and other foods.)

ARS scientists are working to produce, especially to prolong its fresh-milk flavor and to prevent the slight sedimentation sometimes noticed after a few weeks of storage.

Scientists hope to overcome the difficulty by the time industry is ready for production.

BUNDLE OF POSTS at the Penta Post company, Tuttle, is being valued by a lift-on-the-traveler operator by Vern Weaver. Wendell, employee of the firm, is standing by Mr. and Mrs. Vernon Weaver. The posts are stacked together in bundles of 100 and held in place by wood and steel slapping. A combination office and storage building is being enlarged and remodeled at the firm, this winter. Penta Post Firm at Tuttle Enlarges Combination Office, Storage Building

By MRS. BARNARD WRIGHT
TUTTLE, Jan. 23—(Continued) enlarging of the combination office and storage building of the Penta Post company here is being done this winter by Mr. and Mrs. Vernon Weaver. Wendell, who added a 10-foot extension onto the old building and installed three air-by-three-foot windows in front of the new addition.

Dean Williams, Tuttle, is supervising the work on the inside with the help of regular employees of the company. The new addition is finished and there will be two office rooms, one for the bookkeeper, who is Mrs. Weaver, and another for her husband, with an extensive archway between. A counter will be added with a stock rack.

Much of the old office space will be used for storage, with new bolt racks inside. Besides the building being remodeled, the company has a 24 by 64-foot shop.

It is equipped with a bolt threader, small lathe, power saw and welding equipment.

This family business was started in 1941 on a two-acre plot on Highway 20, just north of the old army tent. Now, in addition to the plant at Tuttle where poles, poles and lumber are treated and sold, the firm has a 40-acre desert yard near the Idaho river two miles east of the main yard.

Green poles and posts are soaked and dried there and the bark is removed with a mechanical peeler which will do poles and posts from one and one-half inches in diameter to 14 to 18 inches. Approximately 300,000 of these are handled by the plant in one year.

Wooden construction materials which are to be sold in the future to the ground are treated in a process compound by the thermal method. The chemical preservative is put in metal barrels and cement tanks designed to hold the pieces upright.

Both chemicals and posts are heated to 220 degrees with red heaters submerged in the fluid. The Idaho Power company loves us for those heaters. Raymanor chuckled. The wood is not in the preservative until it is cooled, when the chemical goes into it. The Weaver family believe this method "is far superior to pressure one and this way at the end of the posts may be treated, if needed, with a considerable saving to the customer."

Raymanor said 2,000 pieces can be treated at once in his present facilities. The company has a full line of rough lumber and construction poles. Among their customers are the highway department, forest department and private service. Their products are sold from Reno, Nev., to Salmon. The poles and posts are bought on credit from Crofton.

An innovation at the plant is the building of posts. They are stacked 60 or 80 together and held in place in four-by-four squares by wood and all steel pins. It is planned eventually to will most of their post this way, the owner said.

"Frank West, Hagerman, is assistant yard manager and handles all sales and orders in the field as well as serving as mechanic in the maintenance shop. From 10 to 15 other men are employed at the yard and work goes on year around except for some slowing down if the weather gets too bad."

Raymanor, a graduate of the University of Idaho in forestry, worked for nine years as forester

Farm Bureau Secretary Gives Opinion on Trade

WASHINGTON, D.C., Jan. 23—The American Farm Bureau Federation's U.S. regulators at the conference of the general agreement on tariffs and trade (GATT) strongly believe that the United States should obtain maximums on all variable fees proposed by the common market and then to negotiate the reduction of these maximums to the greatest extent possible, a national farm leader said here today.

Roger Fleming, secretary-treasurer and director of the Washington office of the American Farm Bureau Federation, told the trade information committee that it is essential that the United States maintain its expressed position that agriculture must be considered a full participant with other export industries in the benefits of trade negotiations.

The trade policy committee is advisory to the President and to the U.S. delegation to GATT. It will recommend to the President which foreign restrictions on U.S. exports this country should seek to have removed or reduced, and which products on which the U.S. should not offer concessions to foreign nations.

Fleming emphasized the "extremely important role" U.S. farm exports play in total U.S. export earnings.

They are vital to the solution of the U.S. balance of payments problem, he said.

"In recent years, total exports of U.S. agricultural products have held at around a billion dollars annually and have contributed 2.5 billion dollars to annual dollar export earnings."

He stressed the importance of negotiations on the "variable fees" placed on U.S. farm exports by nations—the European Common Market.

"A variable fee, which can be manipulated at will, is a disadvantage to the unilateral decision of the country or instrumentality imposing the fee, is inconsistent with existing trade agreements and should not be a part of any future trade agreement," he said.

He warned that international commodity agreements are not in the interest of U.S. exporters.

"A commodity agreement that provides export and import quotas would be a trade restrictive device rather than a trade liberalization device if member countries lived up to their commitments," he said.

"If the common market can maintain an unrealistic and unsound farm program through international commodity agreements, the United States could lose markets equivalent to 700,000 tons of wheat, feed grain consumption will expand greatly in the common market as consumption there increases and the world greater meat consumption."

With an international commodity agreement for feed grains, and high enough target prices, France could put from two to seven million acres of ad-

Board Reports Hay Crop Slumps

WASHINGTON, Jan. 23—Production of all kinds of hay in 1963 of 11.8 million tons, or 120 percent less than the previous year and slightly less than the 1957-61 average, the crop reporting board said in December.

Alfalfa and alfalfa mixtures bulked larger than any previous year except 1961, clover, timothy and clover mixtures were down four percent from the year before, legume hay was up slightly and wild hay was 10 percent over the 1961 bumper crop.

Gem Lentil Crop Slumps in 1963

BOISE, Jan. 23—The 1963 Idaho lentil crop is estimated at 12,000 tons compared to the 1962 crop of 20,470 tons, says the crop reporting service.

The 1963 acreage harvested, placed at 20,000 acres, down 3,000 acres due primarily to poor planting weather.

Yield per acre at 605 pounds is up from the 500 pounds of 1962 largely due to favorable growing weather during the summer.

Production of lentils in Washington is estimated at 42,000 tons compared to 38,200 tons in 1962. The 1963 Washington harvest is placed at 44,000 tons, up 13 percent from the 39,000 acres harvested in 1962.

"A variable fee, which can be manipulated at will, is a disadvantage to the unilateral decision of the country or instrumentality imposing the fee, is inconsistent with existing trade agreements and should not be a part of any future trade agreement," he said.

University Economist Says Gem State Farmers Have Stake in World Trade

BOISE, Jan. 23—Idaho farmers have a stake in the continuation and expansion of exports, the University of Idaho economist says in the December issue of Economic Facts for Idaho Agriculture.

The discussion of world trade was prepared by R. Wayne Robinson, economist for the Marketing Information Service, which is a unit of the university's farm management specialists.

It is estimated, the report said, that the output of one acre in every six harvested in the United States goes into the world market. Of the many farm products we sell abroad, three commodity groups—wheat and flour, livestock and livestock products and cotton—make up more than half the dollar value of U.S. exports.

On December 1, the United States moved about 13 percent of its agricultural production into the world market.

Interest in exports will be intensified in 1964, the report stated, because the United States will then negotiate for the first time under provisions of the trade expansion act of 1962. The act gives the President wide authority to adjust our trade policy to economic research service.

The prospect of large quantities of U.S. wheat and flour moving to the Soviet has brought attention to exports, the report said. Exports are handled by private trade but the government plays an important supporting role.

The domestic price of U.S. wheat for several decades has tended to be higher than the world price because of government programs to support prices. This has helped to improve farm income, but has raised the price of U.S. wheat for foreign buyers.

The U.S. price of wheat has been supported through purchase of surplus wheat and loan to farmers by the commodity credit corporation. These loans have had the effect of raising the price of U.S. wheat from the market and placing it in the U.S. market through these programs. U.S. growers have received an average of $1.80 to $2.00 a bushel in the past several years.

It is obvious that U.S. wheat could not move into the world market unless there were some compensating device to offset the difference in world price and the higher U.S. price. This device is the "export subsidy" or "export payment" in kind to the exporter, enabling him to offer wheat to foreign buyers at competitive world prices.

The export subsidy does not pocket this payment in the form of cash. Actually, the payment merely compensates him for the loss he would otherwise suffer by buying high and selling low.

It is the U.S. farmer who actually receives the ultimate

Ore-Ida Foods Approves Action On Trust Fund

ONTARIO, Ore., Jan. 23—The board of directors of Ore-Ida Foods Inc. has approved an executive committee action allocating $100,000 to the employee profit sharing trust fund.

This payment is being made from operating profits for the year ended Nov. 3, 1963.

With this addition profit sharing trust assets will be approximately $400,000.

On Dec. 4, a group of 185 Ore-Ida employees received profit sharing payments totaling $112,000. Ore-Ida Foods Inc. was one of the first companies in the Northwest to create an employee profit sharing program.

COAST GUARD INCOME
WASHINGTON, Jan. 23—Lower net farm income in 1963 will be largely a result of rising production costs, according to Economic Research Service.

part of the program was to raise the domestic wheat price to levels higher than world prices. The export subsidy also makes it possible to export surplus wheat to U.S. wheat-out-of-storage and thereby reduce the cost of stabilizing inventories.

Extended Garden May Carry Fights On Own Net

NEW YORK, Jan. 3 (AP) — The Garden's network television of boxing events in the American Broadcasting company drops the weekly Friday night show. There's a possibility that Madison Square Garden, which holds the contract for television rights of the week, may set up its own independent network and continue with the boxing program. The National Basketball Association has done it this season and other groups have done up their own networks for certain types of events.

ABC recently announced it was dropping the fight program this season. The Garden has a contract through September, CBS and NBC are also making deals, carried boxing for a long time before dropping the sport. The conference season makes a cautious debut Friday and Saturday with Magic Valley high school teams playing in 19 games. "Nothing Controversial" Is Expected at NCAA Meeting

NEW YORK, Jan. 3 (AP)—An air of quiet expectancy... much of it centered around the 2,400 delegates began arriving for the 68th National Collegiate Athletic association convention. The official word from NCAA Executive Director Walter Byers was that "nothing of a really controversial nature" was expected in the week-long meeting of the group, the governing body for the nation's collegiate athletics, and its affiliates.

Y. A. Title Will Miss Pro Bowl

LOS ANGELES, Jan. 3 (AP)—Quarterback Y. A. Title of the New York Giants has withdrawn from the National Football League's pro bowl game because of a knee injury and will be replaced by Norman Studs of the Washington Redskins.

The change was announced Thursday by New York Coach Alvin Sherman. Sherman is coach of the Eastern conference team which will meet the Western conference All-Stars in the 14th annual Pro Bowl game Jan. 12 at the coliseum.

Title sustained the knee injury last Sunday when the Giants were beaten 14-10 by the Chicago Bears in the NFL championship game.

Sherman said Title wanted to play here, but was told by a doctor to rest. Title's knee injury was not serious, he said, and he couldn't work out for several days.

Sherman attempted 30 passes last season and completed 17 for 184 yards and 13 touchdowns. This will be his first Pro Bowl appearance.

Charley Johnson of the St. Louis Cardinals is the other quarterback on the Eastern roster.

Hoopie Points to Texas Woes as Grid Year Ends

The eyes of Texas are upon me! Egan! It must be Evil-Eye Fiegle the way the eyes of Texas have been upon me this season. Eight times I went with Longhorn opponents. Rather than say I predicted incorrect-ly, just let me state "Fiegle!"

Giardello Is Named Boxer of Year

PHILADELPHIA, Jan. 3 (AP)—"I thought it would never come. It was the first time in 15 years."

This was the reaction Thursday night of midweek champion Joe Giardello, when he learned from his wife that he had been named boxer of the year by the World Boxing association.

"Gee, it's an honor, really," he said, "I feel very happy about it. It's the first time in 15 years."

Looking ahead, Giardello said he planned two or three non-title fights in the next few months. He said he may fight in Europe. He also said he was considering an offer to fight in Puerto Rico.

As for his next title fight, Giardello said it likely would be next May or June in Philadelphia and that Dick Tiger, the man he defeated Dec. 7, probably would be the opponent.

Moslem Monarch Hopes for New Era With Pope's Visit

JERUSALEM, Jordan Sector, Jan. 3 (U-P)—King Hussein says all objectives of the 21-year-old Moslem monarch are achieved, the Holy Land monarch told a crowded press conference Thursday.

Hussein saw no possibility, however, that the Roman Catholic pontiff's visit could better relations between Arab nations and Israel, the Jewish state that the king said is a "keeper of Christian shrines."

"It is my earnest hope that spiritual leaders of both religions will take concrete steps with a view toward achieving this blessed historic goal," the king addressed about 400 newsmen in a room overlooking the old Walled City, which he buzzed with preparations for the Pope's visit.

The king said he was "glad to see the Pope's visit, but he is not here to put up with the black, green and white standards of Jordan. Strangling the streets were desert troops assigned to help guard the pontiff."

A jet fighter escort, a 21-gun salute, presentation of an olive branch and release of flocks of white pigeons are arranged for Jordan's welcome to the Pope on his arrival Saturday at Amman, the capital.

Though Pope Paul is to tour holy places of both Jordan and Israel on his three-day pilgrimage, the king said he believes there is no political implication and it can handle any hope Arab-Israeli relations could improve.

Jordan was among the Arab states that were "battered" by the war of 1948, he said. "The more than a million Palestinian Arab refugees of that conflict live in Jordan."

Asked if Jordan would accept papal mediation if it is offered, the king said this question has not arisen, but commented that the Israeli must "ready to wrongs they've committed."

The feeling in the Arab area is that Israel, as it stands, is designs and plans to carry on their aggression and "steal" our expense," Hussein said.

Fuel Tank Redesign Is Proposed

WASHINGTON, Jan. 3 (U-P)—To help prevent lightning-induced explosions in commercial airplanes, the Federal Aviation Board has proposed major redesign of fuel tanks.

The proposals, made public Thursday, were among half a dozen submitted to the federal aviation agency Dec. 17 in connection with the CAB's continuing investigation of the Dec. 8 jet airliner explosion near Edinburg, Tex.

All 81 persons aboard the Boeing 707 jet of Pan American World Airways were killed.

The FAA already had recommended that "wicks" to discharge static electricity be installed on all jet-powered aircraft not so equipped. The ill-fated jet, the first put into service by Pan American, was not so equipped.

The CAB suggested that the FAA, as maker of safety rules, also consider requiring that only one jet fuel—be designated as Jet-A—be used in commercial air operations.
