

Reapportionment Plans Studied At Special Meet

BOISE, March 20 (AP)—Tentative plans were outlined today for the reapportionment of the Idaho legislature. Leaders said if they are accepted the special session will complete its job by midweek. The tentative plans provide for a house of 67 members—compared with the present 79—and a senate of 44, unchanged in size from the present one. But whether the plans will gain major approval was questionable, with reaction of the house folks expected to be a factor. The house met for a half day today and the senate was in recess. Both houses will assemble again at 1:30 p.m. Monday.

4 Committees Are Named For Session

BOISE, March 20 (AP)—House Speaker Pete T. Cenarrusa, R., today appointed four special committees to work on problems before the first special session of the 38th Idaho legislature. Cenarrusa named committees on congressional redistricting, legislative reapportionment, capital planning and multi-county districts. The reapportionment committee will have before it tentative plans drawn earlier Saturday by area committees which met in their respective legislative districts. Magic Valley legislators included on the committees are Alvin D. Elmore, redistricting; Ward Chaburn, R., Cassia; Vernon Ravenscroft, D., both reapportionment; Dale Garner, R., Blaine; and Dale Garner, R., Blaine; and Dale Garner, R., Blaine; and Dale Garner, R., Blaine.

Background Outlined On Reapportionment

BY ROBIN TIBBETS
The supreme court of the United States has ruled that both houses of a bicameral state legislature (that is, Idaho) must be apportioned on the basis of population. This creates something of a problem since, under the Idaho constitution, a state legislature of 667 members in each house would be required. The state, therefore, has no choice except to reapportion, for if it does not, and within the required time limit which begins within 30 days following the close of the regular session, the supreme court will step in and take care of the matter without asking anybody.

CELLIST ARTIST, Douglas Davis, will be featured as the soloist at the last performance of the Mini-Cassia Community Concert association to be held at 8:15 p.m. Monday in the Burley high school auditorium. California-born Davis has won many awards that an older artist might well envy.

Cellist Will Present Last Burley Community Concert

BURLEY, March 20 — Douglas Davis, a cellist artist, will be featured at 8:15 p.m. Monday as the soloist at the last performance of the season sponsored by the Mini-Cassia Community Concert association in the Burley high school auditorium.

At 21, California-born Davis stands on the threshold of an important career and has already won a series of awards and accolades that many an older artist might well envy. Young Davis' career began officially in 1957 when he was soloist with the National Symphony orchestra in Washington, D.C., as winner from the Western States in the Merriweather Post National Music contest.

In 1960, he won the Hollywood Bowl Competition, and the following year was chosen to receive the First Biennial Plattigorsky artist award. In 1962 Davis entered the second International Tchaikovsky competition in Moscow and after receiving fifth prize was engaged for a tour of southern Russia, where the consensus of opinion summed him up as "a brilliant, original talent."

The news service, Tass, reported the Russian triumphs of Douglas Davis. "Both specialists and music fans noted unanimously the great elegance and emotionality of the young musician's performance."

Acclaim for Davis' artistry follows him wherever he goes. In Los Angeles, the Mirror praised his "flawless intonation, remarkable technical agility, and sound musicianship," and remarked that "it was fitting that he should receive the YOUNG MUSICIANS' FOUNDATION award just after his brilliant performance, particularly since it was given by his teacher, Mr. Plattigorsky."

In New York, Davis' Carnegie hall debut in 1961 was hailed as an exceptional occasion. In the words of the New York Times, Davis showed himself to be "a

Rupert Membership Drive Nets 28 for C. of C. Rolls

RUPERT, March 20 — Twenty-eight new members were added to the Rupert Chamber of Commerce membership during the drive held this week. The new members were guests of the Chamber of Commerce at the weekly luncheon meeting Thursday at Herring cafe.

C. R. Bob Jones, chairman of the drive which started Tuesday with a kick-off breakfast at Herring cafe, thanked members for participation. He reported this was the largest number of members added to the organization in any previous drive.

All new members were given three-months free membership to the chamber. The new members were welcomed by Mervyn Ling, president of the chamber.

Richard Bohle reported on the organizational meeting of the Eastern Idaho Chamber of Commerce, Inc. held recently at the Ponderosa Inn. The purpose of the organization in eastern Idaho is to further develop the area and encourage industry and recreational areas.

The local chamber voted to become a member of the Eastern Idaho Chamber of Commerce and three representatives will be appointed by the local organization. Bohle reported election of officers would take place in the near future.

At present the eastern Idaho chamber is concerned about the poor air transport facilities in the area and is under way to look into the possibilities of a larger airport which will take care of jet planes. One of the proposed sites is government land located east of Burley.

According to Bohle, federal funds can be obtained to construct runways and for the purchase of navigation aids, and other items connected with air transportation.

Dorland Dickson, program chairman for the month of March, introduced Jose Solano, an American field service student from Costa Rica. Solano discussed the history of the country and many of the tourist sights found there.

Another Chance

Idaho's infant legislative council has another chance to prove its value in the next two years. Everyone concerned should cooperate completely in an effort to turn the council into an effective interim legislative group that will provide legislative continuity and solid, investigative and formative groundwork for future legislation. A measure of the council's effectiveness could be the length of future sessions of the legislature. If the council does its work properly, there's no reason why any session should ever find itself bogged down in a tangle of technicalities, wrangling or aimless exploration.

The 38th session has given the legislative council some assignments that could result in significant changes and constructive legislation. But apparently the council is not confined to these assignments and can do whatever work and/or investigation it deems necessary or desirable to assist the legislature. It would seem that in almost two years the legislative council should have some comprehensive accomplishments.

The council's assignments include a study leading to efficient administration of state government, study the lower court system to make recommendations to the 39th session, study advisability of adopting uniform commercial code, re-codify the state's municipal statutes, survey needs of exceptional and handicapped children and public school transportation of children, and study and recommend joint rules and procedures of the legislature.

The council will not be without authority and finances for these specific studies. The legislature appropriated $192,000 for the assignments. Perhaps by today's yardsticks, that sum of money isn't any great amount, yet it's not chicken feed, either. It comes from taxpayers' hard-earned money and the public is entitled to expect some good results in return. It's something for the council to keep in mind as it goes about its work.

When the legislature convenes again in 1967, other members of the legislature and the general public are entitled to a demonstration of worthwhile accomplishments on the part of the council.

RAT PACK

California is in the process of trying to control the Hell's Angels Motorcycle club, an organization described by the attorney general as a hoodlum group which poses a threat throughout California. It might be noted that such rat packs influence public opinion far beyond their own districts. They're the principal reason why motorcycle clubs across the nation have such a poor public image, an image they haven't earned themselves and certainly don't deserve.

In California, Attorney General Thomas G. Lynch warned, "The publication of this report serves notice on Hell's Angels, law enforcement will not tolerate their hoodlum activities in California. They no longer will be allowed to threaten the lives, peace and security of honest citizens in our state." The report provided names of 463 members of the rat pack to police organizations throughout California along with the names of 438 others reported to belong to other "disreputable motorcycle groups."

As an example of the type of member common to Hell's Angels, the California report lists 466 members with a record of 874 felony arrests—but only 300 convictions—and 1,682 arrests for misdemeanors resulting in 1,023 convictions.

Many law-abiding citizens will wonder how and why such an organization is started and continues to thrive. Sociologists and psychologists have written reams about similar developments but no one can excuse a complacent public. Such movements will never start and certainly cannot flourish when law-abiding members of society live up to their duties and responsibilities as citizens. These rat packs will continue their depredations against society only so long as complacency paralyzes decent citizens.

Law-abiding owners of motorcycles everywhere should rejoice over the California crackdown. Perhaps it will serve to call attention to the fact that many motorcycle owners have absolutely no association with rat packs or their antisocial activities.

Certainly there has been nothing like Hell's Angels in Magic Valley where nearly all motorcycle owners find joy and pride in their two-wheeled vehicles. Motorcycle owners, as a group, have never been a problem here for law enforcement officers. In fact they have not even been so much of a problem as some of their contemporaries who own or drive automobiles. There's not likely to be any problem so long as motorcycle owners generally shun the likes of Hell's Angels.

WASHINGTON, March 20—Perhaps the millennium approaches. In the same week, there has been agreement between George Kennan, former ambassador to Russia and Yugoslavia, and Republican Sen. Everett Dirksen and Jack Miller that the United States is too soft on the world.

It is pleasant to hear Kennan, an authentic Soviet expert, suggest that when other nations tell us to go home we should take them at their word. Similarly, Illinois' Dirksen and Iowa's Miller have a point in suggesting that we cut off aid to countries whose citizens break the windows of our embassies and insult our representatives.

This is the policy I have been advocating for years, and I welcome the Messrs. Kennan, Dirksen and Miller to the club as a sign that even the demagogic and glibly credulous see the light. There is no future in Uncle Sam's role as a let of international fall guy.

LET US YANKS GO HOME!—Uncle Sam has made spoiled brats of such countries as Egypt, Indonesia and Cambodia by turning the other cheek to their insults. During the past year, mob violence has destroyed more than one million dollars worth of American-owned property in foreign countries. Thousands of U.S. information agency books have been burned, thousands of embassy windows smashed and numerous U.S. buildings damaged or defaced. And, of course, there are always the signs, "Yanks Go Home."

Well, Mrs. Butterdash, we should let these folks know that we got their message. Kennan is reflecting the fed-up attitude of plain citizens everywhere when he says, "I wish these people would be punished by having their wishes rapidly accepted."

There is horse sense, too, in the Dirksen-Miller suggestion that if foreign aid were cut off to just one nation for two or three months the mobs might decide to spare a few windows the next time they attack an American embassy. As Dirksen notes, "The world of aid would be a tangible kind of punishment" the world's diplomatic ganyaters could understand.

Views of Others

NOBODY IS BEING INFLUENCED—To be sure, it is in the American interest to try to influence as many nations as possible through diplomatic relations and handouts. But we're not influencing anybody in Egypt or Indonesia. And as Kennan noted, it would be these mendacious nations who would be "punished" by any American withdrawal. All that would happen to the U.S. is that we would lose money, a result most of us could take lying down.

Our leaders should face an international fact of life the British have always grasped. It is that there is no such thing as a natural affection between one country and another. There is a kind of comradeship between, say, the U.S. and Britain, but this founded on mutual respect; both countries discovered long ago that one could not push the other around. Meanwhile, under Charlie de Gaulle, France has shown that what we did for a country yesterday is not negotiable today.

Personally, I am not going to lend more dough to a debt-ridden nation like France and set my house on fire even if I need his cunning to protect me against those thugs in the next block. I prefer to take my chances on some neighbor who has mutual interests and who therefore does not have to be bought.

UNENVIABLE DISTINCTION

Residents of suburbia in Oregon live in a maze of local governments denser than exists in most states.

Oregon's plight is reflected in a report of the national commission on intergovernmental relations. It points out that Oregon has only about one per cent of the national population but more than 4 per cent of the nation's special districts to provide water, sanitation, lighting, fire protection and other services to relatively small populations among the states. (32nd, Oregon ranks fourth in the number of water districts (118), sixth in fire protection districts (203), and seventh in the number of sanitation districts (33). The commission's report indicates that Oregon is well behind in the organization of metropolitan government, a tardiness which encourages the formation of special districts to provide essential services.

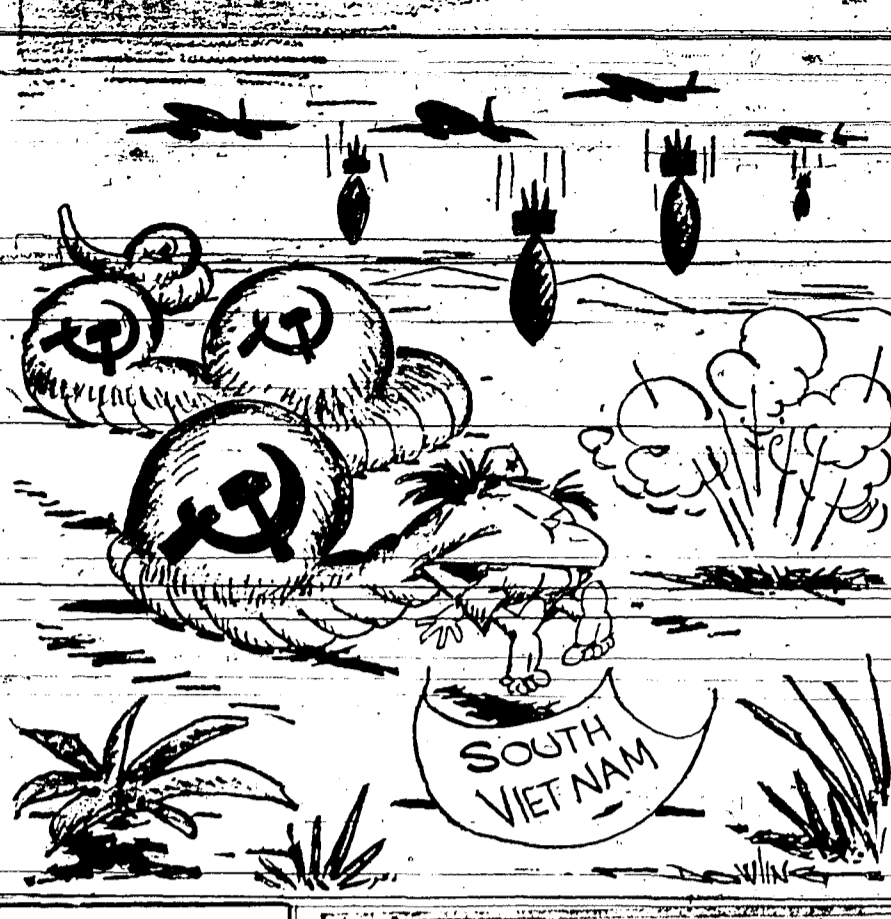

The commission is a creature of congress; its 26 members are representative of federal, state, county and city governments. It recommends that city-county agencies be created to review proposals for the creation of special districts and to give priority reviews to be given rights of comprehensive authority, like the city.

The study is commended to the Oregon legislature, the Portland Metropolitan study commission and other agencies that have it in their power to bring better organization of services in suburban and rural areas. The implications are that Oregonians are paying a disproportionate price both in taxes and in confusion, to support a clutter of special districts—the Oregonian.

WASHINGTON, March 20 (AP)—The two most powerful individual forces helping the Negroes' struggle for civil rights laid their foundation stones nine years ago: President Dwight D. Eisenhower and Dr. Martin Luther King Jr.
In 1956, still boiling over the Supreme Court's 1954 decision outlawing segregation in public schools, King and others in both houses of congress signed a "manifesto" which they denounced the court action.
They pledged themselves to use "all lawful means" to undo the decision. Only three southern senators didn't sign the manifesto: Tennessee Democrats, Estes Kefauver and Albert Gore. Kefauver died in 1963.
If Johnson had signed, almost certainly he could never have been chosen the Democratic party's vice presidential candidate in 1960 or its presidential candidate in 1964.
By not signing he left the way open both to his political future and to one action after another in support of civil rights.
On Dec. 1, 1955, a 43-year-old seamstress, Rosa Parks, was arrested for refusing to give up her seat to a white man and move to the back of a bus in Montgomery, Ala.
The decision was momentous although it may not have seemed so then. The whole Negro community of Montgomery should boycott the buses in mass protest. Out of that mushroomed all the Negro protests and demonstrations since.
Negroes walked to work or formed car pools. They crippled the bus company, 65 per cent of whose passengers had been Negroes. The boycott continued into 1956. The eloquent King, spokesman of the leaders, became a spokesman for Negroes' aspirations.
He said, "Integration is the great issue of our age, of our nation."

NEW YORK, March 20 (AP)—An interesting thing happened to me recently. I went on the wagon.
It seems like it was only yesterday, although actually it was 10 weeks, 5 days, 12 hours and 37 minutes ago that I had my last drink.
It wasn't my idea. It was the doctor's. He decided that in all fairness to my life insurance company I should take off 30 pounds.
"You'll also have to take that tiger out of your tank," he said. "You'll lose weight a lot more quickly if you go on a liquor free diet."
"You mean a free liquor diet, don't you, doc?" I asked hopefully.
"No, you heard me the first time, it's 30 pounds. No vodka, gin, beer, wine or rum either. As a matter of fact, if you keep any bar tonic in your medicine cabinet, you might throw that away, too."
What is it like to go on the wagon and cut out the social drinking that seems to be so much a part of our life?
Well, there are advantages and disadvantages, such as:

In Yugoslavia a young scholar named Mihajlo Minajlov has been jailed for an essay called "Moscow Summer, 1964."

It stirred the sensitivities of the Soviets, who in turn protested to President Tito. Minajlov thus was jailed.
The most noted case of an author who overstepped the bounds in recent years is that of the late Boris Pasternak.

He wanted as much information as possible before trying to locate that missing queen. South ran off 10 tricks in spades hearts and clubs. While doing this he noted that East showed the second club lead. This meant that West had started with six clubs. Then West followed to three hearts, leads accounted for 12 of West's cards and meant that he could hold more than one diamond. Hence South led a diamond. # MARQUIS CHILDS WRITES ON WASHINGTON

WASHINGTON, March 20—The light is the net of secrecy around the American operation in Vietnam that each planned phase is leaked out at the discretion of the Pentagon.

At the same time every effort has been made to quiet discussion of any alternative.
That any choice other than the gradual escalation of the war was possible has never been made known. Yet a proposal stopping short of the present course was considered briefly. It was the work of a task force of able younger men who spent six weeks in Vietnam and who had previously made several visits to Southeast Asia.

Theirs was a two-track proposal. On the military track the United States and South Vietnam would conduct unannounced bombing raids against military installations in North Vietnam. These would be like the raids conducted against the communist-held area of Laos. A persistent day-to-day pressure would be applied.
But on the second and diplomatic track concessions would be held out to Hanoi to halt the Viet Cong guerrillas in the south. These concessions would include trade with the West, possibly international development assistance through a Mekong delta project, access to the rice surplus of the south on a trade basis, perhaps been watered down by compromise, in which Johnson took part. Some Negro leaders were angry over its weakness. But it was a beginning. The ancient power of southern Democrats to stifle civil rights legislation had been broken. The door was open to new and stronger action.

In 1960, Johnson, still as senator, pushed through another civil rights bill and, as President in 1964, still another. Now, under pressure of the present trouble in Alabama, Johnson has asked quick approval of still another bill to wipe out all discrimination against Negro voting.

Anyone who hadn't been following the news but read his address to a joint session of congress last Monday night, using action on his bill might have wondered whether it was Johnson or King speaking.
Johnson said in part: "Our mission is at once the oldest and most basic of this country: to right wrong, to do justice, to serve man. . . . The time of justice has now come. . . . It is right and in the eyes of man and God — it should come."

even help through American food-for-peace program. Such concessions were to be held in strictest secrecy through available diplomatic channels. The restriction of the area between the 17th and 20th parallels so that Communist China and the Soviet Union would understand that the intention was not to destroy the Hanoi government. The bombing would, of course, be stopped if and when Hanoi responded to the diplomatic approach.
At what level this was considered and how seriously it is impossible to say. But it was debated and the opposition of Secretary of State Robert S. McNamara is believed to have been decisive. The force opposed such small secret raids—no more than 24 planes have ever been employed against Pathet Lao centers in Laos—because they would require frequent refueling and, therefore, be likely to produce more casualties than the recent 160-plane raid.
Those favoring the two-track proposal argued that it would give Hanoi a face-saving way out. They contend that the present course of announced attacks would be a signal of retreat to a demand for unconditional surrender. This plays directly to the argument went, into the hands of Communist China, since Peking's objective is to draw America deeper and deeper into an endless jungle conflict.
The phase unconditional surrender has a grim sound, since it is a reminder of what was the last program Roosevelt's gravest error in the conduct as commander-in-chief of World War II. It is argued that it prolonged the war and cost an untold number of additional casualties. It violated a fundamental canon of diplomacy—an enemy should be in battle or at the conference table must be allowed a way out short of total destruction and abject humiliation. As history shows, such humiliations lead almost inevitably to new wars.
The two-track proposal with its diplomatic complement to military pressure has, insofar as this observer has been able to determine, had only one other public airing. That was in a dispatch to the New York Times from Saigon on March 1. Nothing more has been heard of the alternative to what many now feel is a collision course with Communist China.

Those who carry the official White House line pull out in response to any challenge to the resolution adopted by congress last August at the request of the White House in response to the Gulf of Tonkin incident. That resolution empowered the President as commander-in-chief "to take all necessary measures to repel any armed attack against the forces of the United States and to prevent further aggression."
But the debate that preceded unanimous senate adoption of the resolution is overlooked. Sen. Gaylord Nelson, D. Wis., offered an amendment stating that it was continuing policy to limit our role to the provision of aid, training assistance and military advice" and to expect when asked to do a greater response we should continue to attempt to avert direct military involvement in the Southeast Asian conflict.
Sen. J. William Fulbright, chairman of the foreign relations committee, replied that he did not want to delay adoption of the resolution by such an amendment. But he said that with one or two exceptions members of his committee interpreted the resolution in accord with the proposed amendment. The use of the word "prevent" was not two dissenting votes. It may be literally true that he is carrying the policy of Presidents Eisenhower and Kennedy. But that is only a small part of the truth.

Jordan Raps Relief Plan In America

WASHINGTON, March 20 (AP) — "The problems of rural America and of our total economy cannot be solved by substituting credit for earnings and relief for employment," he added, "can they be solved by shifting farm income to rural anti-poverty programs?"

Jordan, a member of the joint economic committee, said that 26 percent of the "persistently unemployed" in this nation are farm workers.

"When we consider the fact that a large portion of these unemployed are not prepared with the skills needed to work in our industrial and urban areas, its effect on our attempts to reduce total unemployment becomes doubly apparent."

Jordan said he was concerned if the administration proposal to cut back on expenditures for soil conservation assistance in the soil preservation program.

"To achieve full utilization of our farm labor on the farms," he said, "we need more, not less, investment into new uses for farm products as well as production and marketing."

New Subway Still Isn't Working

WASHINGTON, March 20 (AP) — Everything seems to be working in the new Rayburn house office building — the congressmen, their staffs, the cafeteria, the gym and the elevators — everything but the most prized possession of all.

For years, congressmen look green at their senate colleagues' (subway) system.

Now they have their own, a new $7 million dollar subway taking the $64 million dollar Rayburn building with the capital.

But it isn't working, despite optimistic forecasts it would be in operation by the end of February, and later by the middle of March.

A workman standing beside the two subway cars, asked when they would start rolling, shook his head. "Don't ask me that," he said. "Well, we had to make some adjustments. Maybe next week."

A congressman, who refers to the big Rayburn building with a maze of levels and corridors as "Puzzle Palace," said he had heard the subway would open "April 1, All Fools day."

Marine Corps Enlistments Processed

The United States marine corps is now processing high school seniors for enlistment in a 120 day delay enrollment program. It was announced Friday by Gunnery Sgt. Dalton E. Pelletier, recruiter for Magic Valley High School.

This unique program enables a high school senior to enlist now in the marine corps and receive training until after graduation in May or later. Prior to commencement of training he is administratively discharged from the regular marine corps for either three or four years.

Several benefits for enlisting in the program counts toward fulfilling part of one's military service obligation; it counts toward pay increases, a fact that could mean $300 and more additional longevity pay, and also the time spent in the program counts toward professional eligibility which means additional pay increases.

Sergeant Pelzel further stated that several Magic Valley young men have already enlisted in this program and will be leaving for San Diego, Calif., and basic training the last week of June. They will train as a buddy group.

For additional information on this program as well as other enlistment programs, call Postoffice 232-7100.

Sergeant Pelzel visits Twin Falls twice a month. His next visit will be April 2 and 3.

Richfield PTA Hears About Mental Health

RICHFIELD, March 20 — A mental health program and election of officers made up the March PTA meeting Thursday evening at the high school.

Percy Christensen, unit president, introduced the guest speaker, the Rev. Ralph R. Fothergill, former Jerome mental health unit president.

The Rev. Mr. Fothergill stressed the importance of the proposed Magic Valley area clinic for early diagnosis, treatment, after treatment follow-up and out-patient care.

Parents attending the meeting were told a sudden change in behavior of a child at school and home can be a symptom of mental stress, hard to get along with, or withdraws from contact with others. Early diagnosis and treatment usually result in the child returning to normal living habits with as few as three visits to a clinic and psychiatrist. It was told by the speaker while citing cases. Regular medical check-ups reveal need for medical treatment instead of psychiatry.

Early diagnosis, clinic treatment and follow-up care reduces readmission of patients for hospital treatment from 35 per cent to 10 per cent, he said.

An area clinic is needed because cost of diagnosis, fear of public stigma, and distance to be traveled keep too many afflicted persons from getting help when needed. A clinic, staffed with a psychiatrist, clinic psychologist and social workers, trained in psychology would serve eight counties in the area. They are Cassia, Minidoka, Twin Falls, Jerome, Gooding, Blaine, and Lincoln counties. Such care would keep many patients in their homes and on the job. Twenty cents per taxpayer each year would supply this care, the group was told.

This program was one of a series of mental health programs brought to the Richfield community by the PTA during the past five years.

Mrs. LeRoy Magallon was also present.

Dilettante Unit Feted At Buffet

By NORMA HERZINGER

What is more alluring than a midnight buffet following a show?

Dr. and Mrs. Harry Brumbach were hosts to such a buffet in their lovely new home for members of the Dilettante Group of Magic Valley following a recent performance of "South Pacific."

The buffet supper was served from an L-shaped table and featured such luscious foods as ham, various types of breads, cheese, relish trays, many types of salad and baked beans.

The buffet was served in the recreation room and later the guests divided into groups, some to dance, some singing and others just relaxing and talking over the performance.

This buffet is an annual event hosted by Dr. and Mrs. Brumbach for members of the Dilettante group.

Part of the fun, satisfaction and pleasure of this group is the close fellowship, not only of the actors, but members of the orchestra, production crew, ushers, etc. Perhaps this is the reason behind the complete sellout of each and every performance of "South Pacific" and the high quality of the performance.

Hosts, Dr. and Mrs. Brumbach, are part of the Dilettante production. Even their son, Kim, took an active part this year. Mrs. Brumbach helps in the props department; Dr. Brumbach is a member of the stage crew and ushers and is past president of the Dilettante group. Kim plays the part of Jerome.

Under the able direction of Paul Kliss, Buhl, this year's show, the seventh annual production of the Dilettante group, has employed the time and energy of more than 100 persons throughout Magic Valley.

While the audience sees only the actors on stage, perhaps notices the 28-piece theater orchestra in the pit and is aware (Continued on Page 12, Col. 1)

A "SING ALONG WITH HANK" session was held at the Dilettante after-performance buffet at the home of Dr. and Mrs. Harry Brumbach. Henry Willis is shown in the center leading the group singing. Willis is a member of the board of directors for the Dilettante group of Magic Valley. The buffet was served in the recreation room. (Times-News photo)

R. PAUL KLISS, Buhl, left, is shown conversing with members of the Dilettante "South Pacific" cast at an after-performance buffet supper at the home of Dr. and Mrs. Harry Brumbach. Kliss directed the successful performance of "South Pacific" and has directed the Dilettante performances the past several years. An experienced actor, he has participated in the Shakeran Productions at Ashland, Ore. (Times-News photo)

COMPLETELY BEAT after a recent performance of "South Pacific" at the Filer high school auditorium is Mrs. Osmer Lowe, right, as she relaxes (with shoes off) at a buffet at the home of Dr. and Mrs. Harry Brumbach. Mrs. James Miller is shown seated on the hassock. Mrs. Lowe helps with the costumes for the current Dilettante production and Mrs. Miller is one of the dancers. The buffet was served in the recreation room and later the guests divided into groups, some to dance, some singing and others just relaxing and talking over the performance. The Dilettante group has employed the time and energy of more than 100 persons throughout Magic Valley for its production of "South Pacific." (Times-News photo)

Miss Stefanatz Is Bride of William Houk

JEROME, March 20—Nuptial vows were recited Jan. 30 in the St. Jerome's Catholic church by Sandra Dolores Stefanatz, daughter of Mrs. Madge Stefanatz, and William Alvah Houk, son of Mr. and Mrs. William Allen Houk, Ann Arbor, Mich.

The Rev. Bernard McBride performed the ceremony. Acolytes were Michael Last, Ted Klaas and Frank Glodowski.

Erwin GascH, Boise, was soloist. The church choir sang and Mrs. John Hosman was organist.

The altar was banked with arrangements of white chrysanthemums, red carnations and white pom poms accented with huckleberry. Side altars were decorated with white candles, in candlesticks and huckleberry. White pom poms and white satin ribbons decorated the pews.

The bride, escorted to the altar by Glenn Davis, Hillyer, was attired in a gown of Chantilly lace with bow-tie design. The gown was fashioned with a fitted bodice and lily-petal sleeves. Sequins and pearls enhanced the rounded neckline. The full skirt fell into a chapel train.

Her bouffant veil of Huston, attached to a heavy, rose-shaped tiara adorned with pearls, was made by Mrs. George Stefanatz, San Diego, aunt of the bride.

She carried a bouquet of white orchids and white, pink and white ribbons on a mother-of-pearl prayer book.

The bride wore an English six-pence and a nickel in her shoe, a gift of the bridegroom, carried an heirloom handkerchief from Mrs. Harold Hall, wore earrings borrowed from Mrs. Jerry Davis, and two blue pearls as tokens of sentiment.

Eulene Haddenham, Pocatello, was maid of honor. She wore a red lace gown fashioning with long sleeves and a scooped neckline.

She carried a colonial bouquet of feathered white carnations accented with white tulle and white satin ribbon.

Bridesmaids were Emy Stefanatz and Louise Stefanatz, twin sisters of the bride, and Beverly Houk, sister of the bridegroom. They wore gowns of royal blue, fashioned like that of the maid of honor.

Carrie Goodson, Pocatello, wearing a blue dress, carried a basket of red and white petals.

Lon Redman, Pocatello, served as best man.

Ushers were Gerald Love, William Lenz, Jerry Nerbovig, Larry Clotinger and John Doonan, all Pocatello.

The bride's mother chose a beige lace dress with matching accessories. Mrs. Houk wore a beige crepe sheath ensemble. Earl wore a cybindium orchid corsage.

A reception was held at the parish hall. Deyla Goodson, Pocatello, was in charge of the guest book and Dolores Fields and Madeline Meyers displayed the gifts.

The bride's table was covered with lace and featured a three-tiered blue skirt highlighted with red ribbon bows. The lace cloth was borrowed from Mrs. Doris Knight.

The four-tiered wedding cake, decorated with powder blue roses and lilies of the valley. Four white lattice hearts topped with a miniature bride and bridegroom surrounded with red and white pom poms and greenery decorated the top tier of the cake. White swans separated each tier. Tapers in silver candleabra thanked the cake.

Mrs. William Last and Mrs. Harold Klaas presided at the silver coffee service and silver punch bowl.

A wedding dinner was served to friends of the couple. Arrangements for the reception and dinner were made by the Catholic Women's league.

The bride chose a handmade royal blue wool suit with gold accessories for her wedding trip. She wore the orchid corsage from her bridal bouquet.

The bride is a graduate of Jerome high school and Grimm's business college, Pocatello, and attended Idaho State university. Houk attended Purdue university and is in the navy, stationed at Charleston, S.C., where the couple will reside.

Guests attended from Halley, Twin Falls, Boise, Pocatello, Denver, Washington, D.C. and Ann Arbor, Mich.

The bride was feted at a kitchen shower hosted by Mrs. William Last, Mrs. Harold Hall and Mrs. Harold Klaas.

The bridegroom's parents hosted the wedding party at a dinner at Wood cafe following the wedding rehearsal.

In addition to the people visible on stage there are others responsible for set design and construction, scenery, properties, lights, costumes, tickets, makeup, pages, script girl and curtain.

Dilettante is a non-profit organization and proceeds from the productions have been given for scholarships at Sun Valley music camp and to the Civic auditorium association.
Membership in the group is open to anyone and the organization is governed by a board elected from the membership, which acts as producer of the shows, according to Roger Vincent, president.

ONE OUT OF THREE in a situation like this isn't had for Idaho fish and game department conservation officer Marc Bingham, Burley. Although it might appear to be a miss, Bingham netted the middle bird during a six-hour tagging stint on the Owyhee desert Friday night. Some 17 birds were caught as part of a migration study. (Times-News photo)

Sports FROM ALL ANGLES

BY LARRY HOVEY
It never had particularly occurred to us before but on Friday night it was discovered that birds can express emotions in a glance. At least it seemed that way when the Idaho fish and game department sent a three-man delegation into the Owyhee desert to spotlight, net, tag and release sage grouse in the initial phase of a migration trend survey. At 3 a.m., a strut-adorned rooster can look just as miffed as you when the phone rings at the same hour. Although one automatically thinks of wide expanses of sagebrush plains when the Owyhee desert is mentioned, the inroads of man, his machines and sprays have made the future outlook dim for Idaho's primary indigenous upland bird. The fish and game department, with bird biologist Duane Pyrah heading up the study, is trying desperately to find ways to help the birds adjust to diminishing native habitat.

Part of that study includes trapping and banding of the birds. This is the time of year banding is most feasible. The roosters are on the strutting grounds. To get an early start, many of them stay on the grounds overnight. The method employed is cold and arduous but effective. It's a three-man endeavor. As it worked out Friday night, Jim Uranga, Twin Falls area conservation officer, drew the coldest duty — perching atop a jurching panel truck and armed with a bright, searching spotlight, a refugee from an aircraft landing seal-beam.

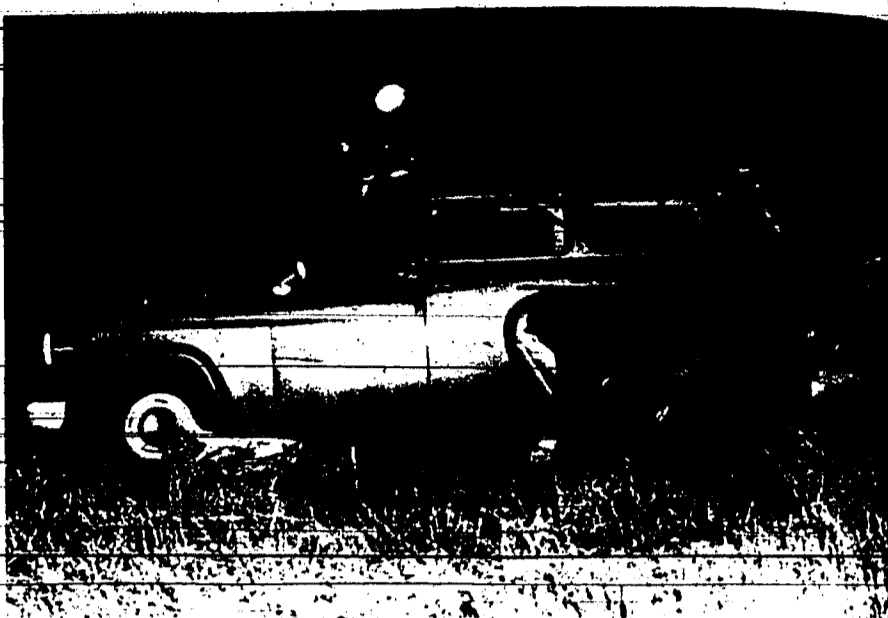

While Uranga slowly spans the ground in a 150-foot semi-circle in front of the truck, Pyrah herds the panel along with another spotlight on his lap for auxiliary purposes. In the rear, seated on an old farm implement type seat, Marc Bingham, Burley area conservation officer, waited holding a long-poled net. When a bird is sighted, both spotlights — although sometimes only one — remain fixed on the bird. Pyrah maneuvers the vehicle to within 10 to 20 feet of the rooster and then cuts around it in a hard left arc. The intention of the moving vehicle and light is to keep the bird confused long enough for Bingham to leap from his station on the rear bumper and make the catch. Most of the time it works. But at Saylor wells, three birds flew with Uranga flailing with the net five to 10 feet back. At Crows Nest, one rooster, which didn't relish night flying, flew prematurely the first two times but was netted after his third landing some 150 yards away.

The fish and game department weren't the only ones stalking the strutting grounds. Twice coyotes were spotted, their eyes glinting green in the reflected light. Neither was in much of a hurry. Both stayed 25 to 30 feet away. Despite these four rooster hunters, the sage grouse get in plenty of sleep. Only infrequently are signs found that the coyotes have been successful. Pyrah, who is in his third year of sage grouse study, has found this method the best for handling the birds.

"In an area like this where the bird population isn't great, it's the only thing feasible," he said. "Some places you can work five or six hours and never go more than a few miles from where you started. Cannon nets used to be used on big concentrations but the birds never stop fighting the nets. It takes quite a while to handle a big catch and there are bound to be more injuries. Then the mortality rate becomes higher." "With this method we can handle a bird in a minute or two and get him back on the roost before he hardly knows he's awake. We've had little or no mortality problem," he concluded. There are certain problems though, even with this system. "Sometimes we will catch the same bird two or three times in a big strutting area. Usually you can see the band reflecting the spotlight but once in a while you get the same bird. They don't fly far in the dark, not even after being handled and tagged." It is Pyrah's theory that the birds strutting on the Saylor creek area grounds become the "creek fall" roosters of the Three Creek area. This is part of the reason for the tagging. But overall, Pyrah is looking for concrete facts that will help the sagehens remain on Idaho's sporting list. "All the spraying and reclamation work being done by the BLM and private enterprise directly affects the future of sage grouse," he said. "Things look a little brighter now that the BLM has gone into a multi-purpose idea on its lands. Now it must consider wildlife. Before it wasn't required to and it was left to the discretion of the individual field men. But even if all the spraying stopped, we've lost a lot of prime habitat. And it will be years before any of these sprayed areas come back — if they ever do."

And so at 4 a.m. eight hours after spotting the first bird, the crew calls it a day. Uranga, who spent the day at a safety instruction course in Twin Falls, junior high schools, had some field work to be done Saturday morning. At least, Bingham still had the drive from Twin Falls to Burley.

END RESULT of eight hours of work on the Owyhee desert was the tagging of 13 sage grouse roosters. Bird biologist Duane Pyrah affixes the leg band to this bird in the Saylor-creek area and hopes some nimrod will report the band this fall. Migration trends are needed on the diminishing Owyhee flock. (Times-News photo)

AND, BUDDY, IT WAS COLD. If you don't believe it ask Jim Uranga, Twin Falls conservation officer, who appears here more akin to a B-17 waist gunner. It was Uranga's job to spot the birds and hold them with the aircraft landing spotlight until a 15-foot-poled net could bring the sage grouse in. In the driver's seat, a bird biologist Duane Pyrah, who mapped the campaign. (Times-News photo)

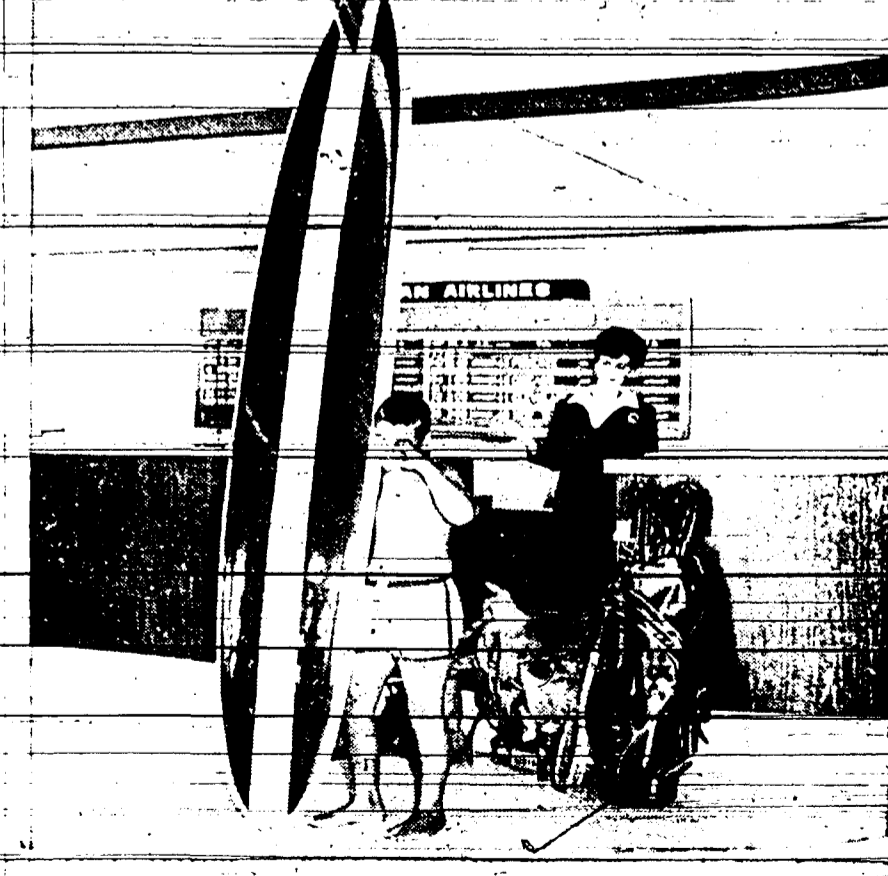

REDEEMED AND BANNED — a sage grouse rooster is returned to freedom by bird biologist Duane Pyrah after a one-minute interruption of his night's rest on a strutting ground in the Saylor creek area. Although painstaking and arduous, this method has proved the best in preventing mortality. (Times-News photo)

Redmen Let Lapchick Bow Out on Top

NEW YORK, March 20 (AP)—The kids were happy for Joe Lapchick but Lapchick was even happier about the kids. "It's all over, he said. 'The kids let me go out a winner. Every guy wants to go out a winner. If you didn't win it would be horrible.'"

"The defense won it. Fifty one points—that's fabulous. Our offense against their zone put us on the gravel train. And when they started catching us our defense did the job. They started breathing on our necks but our kids didn't falter."

Coach Jack Kraft, whose top-seeded Wildcats had been favored to win, agreed with Lapchick. "St. John's is a good club," he said. "They don't throw the ball away. They get the job done. Our zone didn't work. We couldn't put pressure on them. We couldn't close up the passing lanes."

Ken McIntyre, the tournament's most valuable player who scored 20 points in St. John's victory, said he was "worried when he got his fourth personal foul with about 15 minutes to play. He missed five minutes of the game before returning for the final six and one-half minutes."

"I was going back in," McIntyre said. "It was just a matter of time. But, while I was out, I felt the way I feel all the time when I'm sitting on the bench—lousy."

Sonny Dove, who scored 18 points in the first half but only two in the rest of the way for St. John's, explained what happened in the final half. "I was rushing my shots. My back began to bother me. I hurt it in the Army game when I took a very bad fall and it's been hurting since. I wanted to hurry up the game because I knew the soreness would catch up with me."

Ampose Nips Old Hat in Appleton 'Cap

MIAMI, March 20 (AP)—Gray Willows farm's Ampose edged out Old Hat, the even money favorite, to write a blistering finish today to the $16,600 Appleton Handicap at Gulfstream park.

Ampose, under jockey Ken-nard Knapp, came down the stretch on the outside to beat Old Hat by a neck in a photo finish. Ampose paid $9.20, $3.60 and $2.40.

Old Hat, with Buck Thornburg up, returned $2.60 and $2.20 while Editorials, under Don Brum-field, was $2.40 to show. # New Irrigation Projects Could Delay Threat of World Hunger Revolution

By O. A. (Gus) KELKER, Times-News Feature Editor

Living in a land of plenty, where crops come and crops go, but are mostly good ones, it is hard to visualize the fast-approaching day when scientists say there may be world revolution because there just isn't enough food to go around.

To many people, the opening of new land to irrigation for the purpose of producing food seems beside the point what with some farmers being paid for not growing crops and others guaranteed a certain income for growing other crops which end up in warehouses, unused.

But behind it all is the scientific mind which looks into the future of a world where there will be just too many people.

In fact, these scientists say that the situation will be so acute that there is liable to be a worldwide revolution involving the hungry people and the well-fed ones.

Viewed in this light the development of the new tract along the banks of the Snake river in the Magic Valley area, and the enlargement of those areas already producing, makes sense.

One of the newest ones—the Magic Valley Water company with land about a mile north of Buht and six miles west—is new from a side wall spring, the amount of water that reaches the Snake is just about the same as that which goes past the new "taking" point.

The new pipe will have an approaching vertical rise of more than 100 feet and it will take 770-feet of the steel pipe to reach from the pumps to the top of the rim.

In addition to the Sligar company, other firms involved in the extensive project include the engineering firm of Hoffmeyer, Risler and Milar, Twin Falls, and the Burgraff Construction company, Idaho Falls, charged with enlarging the existing main canal to carry the additional water.

The area is in the Twin Falls Highway district and new farm-market roads are being contemplated or are in the state of construction or improvement.

Maurice H. Eckert is vice president of the Magic Water company while Asa T. White is manager. The land involved is, or was, government desert land and the people forming the company made the entries on the land.

There are six farms in the area at the present time on the 4,000 acres and there are about 50 stockholders in the company, which is incorporated.

Construction of the new line presents some problems but all

MOST MATERIALS needed in construction of a new irrigation pipeline for the Magic Water company must be let down into the Salmon Falls creek canyon by means of this large crane. Probably the heaviest piece of material to be lowered will be a piece of 30-inch steel pipe, 95 feet long and tipping the scales at about 10,000 pounds. The vertical drop involved is more than 100 feet, while the pipe from water source to canyon rim will be 710 feet. (Times-News photo)

Local DeMolay Chapter Ends Observance Of 18th Anniversary in Round of Events

BELIEF IN GOD is one of the stabilizing influences followed by members of the order of DeMolay. The Twin Falls unit has just completed observance of the 18th anniversary of its found-

The members of the Twin Falls Order of DeMolay have just completed observance of the 18th anniversary of the establishment of the unit in Twin Falls and it proved to be a hectic week for the youthful participants.

But, according to Larry Hall, dad adviser, it was a productive one, with events featuring presentation of a state of Idaho flag to use in the local high school, free washing of car windshields throughout the city and visitations to patients at the Magic Valley Memorial hospital, including presentation to each of a carnation.

Many civic projects are carried on throughout the year by the local order, made up of boys between the ages of 14 through 20. It is only during anniversary week, however, that they are really called to the attention of the general public.

"The boys find that they can carry on good work with a minimum of publicity. They find that the things which are accomplished without thought of reward are usually the best things to do," Hall said.

Building of better citizens is the chief goal of DeMolay. It is an affiliated Masonic organization, but membership is not restricted to sons or relatives of Masons.

Even the initiation into the order contains no "horseplay," but rather is divided into two parts. The initiatory degree is, according to officials, one of great solemnity and dignity. It is a service of consecration. The DeMolay degree is one of dramatic intensity and depicts the great lesson of fidelity.

Among other things, a member of the order promises to love and serve God, to be a better son, to honor and protect every woman, to stand no one to aid

HEAVY, BIG CEMENT BUCKET appears small on its way down into the canyon on the end of a cable attached to a crane being used in construction job for the Magic Water company. In later stages of the project the cement—in 600-pound loads—will be lowered into this canyon by Reader Flying service helicopters because the stationary crane will be unable to reach all points where the cement will be needed. Mrs. Morrison's mother, Mrs. James Ferguson, Grand Rapids, Mich., is on the left while her grandmother, Mrs. J. P.

Life in MAGIC VALLEY

Most people might keep one or two scrapbooks during a lifetime but Mrs. Wallace Hale, OAKLEY, has in her possession close to a dozen that she has kept during the 65 years of her married life. She notes that she began keeping the first one when her oldest boy of 10 children became a high school senior and she began keeping his treasures for him. Since that time she has given each one of her four boys a book with his own personal papers, special honors, etc., for a keepsake. From the time she began the first one she also started one of her own and if a person is to browse through it he will find that it contains quite a variety of things.

Mrs. Hale believes that she has not missed any of the deaths or marriages that have occurred in Oakley in the last 20 years and also has quite a vast knowledge of historical news as well as historical items which have occurred in recent years.

Old photographs bring many remembrances and sometimes a few tears. One in particular is a picture of the old skating rink which used to be located west of the present stake house, with smoke pouring from the roof. Later in the day the building burned to the ground. How she acquired the picture she does not recall but it certainly is not a common one.

On the sentimental side there are many many poems that she particularly liked and saved along with several old-fashioned valentines. On one particularly beautiful one a note written in pencil reads "My first valentine" and it was revealed that it was the first one her husband had given her years ago.

She explained that she has gathered material for her books from any source which might help her. A page taken from the Deseret News, Salt Lake City, retells the story of the Donner-Reed tragedy.

Many were taken from the old Oakley Herald and one article found that was thought to be rather amusing was entitled "The Anthology of the Oakley Herald, Novelty and Nonsense. Oakley Enjoys First Earth Quake in 19 Years" and was dated March 16, 1934.

It reads: "Oakley people were given a thrill Monday morning at 8:07 when the first earthquake in 19 years was felt here. Very little damage was done at Oakley or elsewhere in Idaho, but the shock was more violent around the north end of the Great Salt Lake, where the disturbance centered.

"Dry springs resumed long-suspended activity at Locomotive Springs. Almost every house in Snowville, Box Elder county, was damaged, it is reported, at least to the extent of losing a few bricks from the chimneys.

"Additional shocks of lessened intensity were felt during Monday and on succeeding days, although these supplementary tremors were noticed by only a small percentage of the population.

"The earthquake 19 years ago is said to have caused a crack in the front of the old Red Cross Drug building. The elementary school was dismissed for the day," the account continues.

"Some of the people who were in the elementary school said there was so much motion and noise that they thought the building was going to fall in. In addition to keeping all these scrapbooks Mrs. Hale keeps busy with her many articles of handwork which includes making quilts.

She has 70 grandchildren and has at one time or another presented each one of them with a quilt that she has made. Also eight of her great-grandchildren have received one and she is currently working on one for her ninth great-grandchild.

"W. T. Harper said it was his opinion that there hadn't been any earthquake. Water was spilled from barrels and milk from buckets."

"The earthquake repaired a clock at the H. R. Matthews home. The clock, which previously refused to run, started when the first shaking arrived and has been going ever since.

"Bertha Howells said she thought that someone had crawled under his bed and was shaking it. Mr. Howells got up and looked under his bed, saw no one and returning to bed he found the shaking continued.

"Fred Ellison was drinking a cup of coffee. The quake knocked the cup out of his hand.

"Robert Mack's little boy, Rodney, came running from his bedroom and said, 'The wind is blowing my bed away.'

"Richard Poulton said that trees at his ranch at Warm Creek awayed as if in a strong wind.

"Extra Clark says he was standing on the sidewalk in front of the postoffice. He felt the sidewalk begin to move and heard a sound like the wind. Trees awayed, windows popped, magazines suspended on a cord in the drug store window were swaying violently.

"Symptoms at the Oakley Merc were so violent that all the employees rushed into the street. The metal ceiling bulged and popped. Articles rattled on shelves, electric lights were swinging back and forth in an east-west direction. The Merc is of stone.

"A chimney was wrecked at the home of Mrs. Polly Bedke and a great deal of plastering was knocked from the walls. Plaster was cracked in a number of buildings. Individual bricks were knocked from several chimneys.

"Earl Whitley, who was cutting wood when the shakeup came said that the experience made him feel dizzy. He noticed that his car started forward and he wondered who was pushing it. The car went three feet forward up a slight elevation and then rolled back.

"Frank Lynch said he was on his knees at his ranch in Island when the shaking started. He felt the ground roll in an east and west direction.

"Some slight damage was done at the elementary and high school buildings. The elementary school was dismissed for the day," the account continues.

"Some of the people who were in the elementary school said there was so much motion and

Where Have All The Flowers Gone

ERNEST HASELBLAD, First Baptist Church, Monday night will study the songs of this generation to find out what kind of people we are. They will give particular attention to our popular songs and ballads. One that might especially catch their attention is one that asks the rather haunting question, "Where have all the flowers gone?" It goes on to ask about the young girls and the young men and the husbands, the soldiers, and even "Where have all the graveyards gone?"

This question, "Where have all the flowers gone" may give researchers in centuries to come reason to believe that we are a pessimistic, hopeless, despairing age. They may conclude that we never expect spring to come, but they would be mistaken. We still have flowers, not only of field but of character and faith and dedication.

I suspect that upon the crucifixion of Jesus there were those who believed this, the loveliest of flowers, "The lily of the valley" had been crushed, never to grow again. But the resurrection demonstrated that the flower was still alive and more beautiful than ever.

Sometimes it has seemed as if Christianity were a flower that had wilted beyond renewal, but information and revival have brought this flower back to full bloom.

Just now we may sing this song asking "Where have all the flowers gone?" and by it make reference to the flowers of personal purity, courage, devotion, patriotism and many more. But the fact is that many never bowed at the altar of the new morality. There are happy times. Those that want happy times can have them.

There are men of great courage in our day, such as Martin Luther King facing a hostile force without flinching; or President Johnson standing firm in great crisis at home and abroad, and our missionaries staying in the Congo and other dangerous places.

There are men of great love and devotion, Dr. Albert Schweitzer, for example, and many unnamed mothers, fathers, doctors, nurses and teachers.

For one, do not believe that the flowers are all gone. Out of all our fine youth only a very small minority are delinquent or drop-outs or troublemakers. Most of them are lovely flowers indeed. May I even assert not many of our ministers are communists or communist influenced, or even dangerously liberal.

Just why we feel we should be prophets of false witness and gloom I do not know. Why do people enjoy writing vitriolic letters cruelly castigating another for such a thing as a simple typographical error. Instead of mournfully crying "where have all the flowers gone" let's get out and spade up the good soil, plant the seeds, and raise a few flowers of beauty and fragrance.

Highlighting the regular meeting of district I, Idaho State Nurses association, was a talk entitled "Listen, Your Speech Is Showing," by Ralph Bowman, sponsor of the Dale Carnegie course.

With the aid of demonstration and group participation, the ability to carry on conversation through developing good listening habits were identified. He said persons can develop their memories through associations, and as they become more sensitive to others they tend to think less of themselves.

A legislative report of the passing of the amendments of the nurses practice act and the good Samaritan bill was given at the business meeting.

An afghan made by Mrs. Walter Lackey, first vice president, was used as a drawing prize.

Chevelle Malibu Sport Coupe

No matter how you look at it, this car makes a lot of sense. If you're interested in value (and who isn't), the eleven features above give you a good idea why more intermediate-size car buyers are thinking Chevelle. If you're looking for a wide power choice, Chevelle starts out with a standard 120-hp Six, an ideal city performer. After that you can order from a variety of engines that turn it into an even greater highway performer. Room? Large door openings. Wide curved side windows for extra shoulder room. Great front and rear leg room. Those four, five or six passengers have it made. And so do you. Chevelle may seat like a big car but it handles like a smaller car (especially when you park). Comfort? Thick wall-to-wall carpeting in Malibu models. Foam-cushioned seats. Easy-to-read instrument panel. The whole interior looks like those in cars costing far more. Come on down to our showroom and take a drive soon. Chevelle begins to make even more sense after you've gone a couple of miles.

YOUR BIRTHDAY and HOROSCOPE

SUNDAY, March 21 — Born today, you are one of those rare persons whose physical senses are acute in the extreme. Such a person is surely destined for a career in one of another of the arts — and if not a career, then surely an avocation. The heights you achieve will depend a great deal upon early training — particularly should your strength be in the field of music — so it is important that your gift be recognized early. Although you will probably achieve what amounts to absolute sureness in your career, you may never achieve the same thing in your emotional life. Destined to lead an emotional life of ups and downs, you must learn to swim with the tide, as it were, and not give in to the moodiness which may try to dominate you. Marriage — even an early marriage — is indicated, and for more reasons than one. You need the emotional security of home and family; you also need the outlet which a willing shoulder to cry or laugh on would provide. Since you are not likely to gain much of the world's goods — though you may gain much of its admiration — you would be wise to choose a mate to whom spiritual things matter more than material. To find what is in store for you tomorrow, select your birthday and read the corresponding paragraph. Let your birthday star be your daily guide.

Monday, March 22

ARIES (March 21-April 20) — Tremendous possibilities for leadership may arise today. Make an effort to consume several and you should know benefits beyond your wildest dreams.

TAURUS (April 21-May 21) — Arm yourself well with all the facts, and figures necessary to the arguing of your cause. The well-prepared Taurus is the successful Taurus.

GEMINI (May 22-June 21) — Draw on your unusually retentive memory to discover the cause of this day's difficulties.

project alone, do not let foolish pride stand in your way — for aid!

LIBRA (Sept. 24-Oct. 23) — Good intentions, extended beyond the limits of possibility, may fall miserably. Limit yourself to the things you know you can accomplish in one day.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) — Trust to judgments other than your own today. These are times when Scorpio may well run into trouble by relying on himself alone.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 22) — The Sagittarius who allows himself to be led around by the nose may soon regret the lack of independence. Know your own mind and follow it!

CAPRICORN (Dec. 23-Jan. 20) — Avoid going to extremes of behavior for any reason. Let your feelings be known, but don't indulge in any temperamental plays!

and uphold public schools and to walk uprightly before God and man.

The original order was founded in Kansas City in 1919 and the Twin Falls unit was established on April 28, 1947.

Chapter affairs are not limited to "lodge" work. Rather, for instance, the annual DeMolay dance is a highlight of the social season of the younger set. In addition, members participate in civic events, athletics and many other areas.

During the years more than three million young men have been members of the DeMolay. Today there are 100,000 active members in more than 2,300 chapters in 12 countries and territories. Membership is by petition.

"In Twin Falls our chapter is active in many worthwhile projects, both in the community and in the school," Hall said.

"At the same time we realize that much of the success of the order is because of the cooperation given us by school and community officials, and for this we are most grateful."

DeMolay sessions are held regularly at the Masonic temple on Blue Lakes boulevard north. Sessions are conducted by the officers of the unit and adults participate only in an advisory capacity.

"We figure that the boys learn by running their own affairs," Hall said.

Choir to Sing In Area April 1
FAIRFIELD, March 20 — The Cascade College Concert choir, Portland, will present a concert in the Camas County high school auditorium at 8 p.m. April 1. The choir is currently on its annual tour which this year includes Oregon, Washington, Montana, North and South Dakota, Wyoming, Colorado and Idaho. The program will include sacred, classical, contemporary anthems and inspiring gospel songs.

The concert is being sponsored by the Fairfield Community church, according to the pastor, the Rev. W. James Post.

The choir is under the direction of D. George Dunbar. Members present a varied program, utilizing different styles of choral singing, brass accompaniments and small vocal ensembles. The public is invited.

Cascade college is a co-educational four-year liberal arts and science college, interdenominational, and is fully accredited.

WHO IS THE DEMOLAY BOY?

He's the fellow between the ages of 14 and 21 who has dedicated himself to God, his country and to his parents.

He's the fellow who is privileged to give expression to these virtues in DeMolay Service.

He's the fellow who believes in spiritual values, and has the courage to live them every day.

He's the fellow we ask to fight for our country when it is in danger, and the measure of his service is the measure of our security.

He's the fellow who reverences Mother, and who is never happier than when his Dad is his pal.

He's the fellow who seeks to serve others, and aspires to leadership, as prerequisites to good citizenship.

He's the fellow who likes to work and play with other boys and work and play make a good DeMolay.

He's the fellow for whom you are working, and he will carry on what you have started.

He's the fellow into whose hands we will deliver the fate of our nation, and perhaps the fate of all humanity.

That's the fellow who is the DeMolay Boy, and he is your Son and my Son.

have been solved, according to Sigar. For instance, the heavy pipe is let down into the canyon by using a big 10-ton crane and concrete is let down in the same manner. Conversation by workmen on top and those in the canyon is by walkie-talkie radio. The entire job is expected to be completed by April 5 and water should be in the canal system soon thereafter. One interesting sidelight is that some of the cement will be lowered into the canyon by helicopter because the big crane cannot reach all necessary areas. Sigar said that a contract has been made with the Reeder Flying service, Twin Falls, to provide the helicopters which will lower the cement at the rate of about 600 pounds a load. This cement will be placed in special bags before the helicopters pick it up and lower it to the canyon floor.

Biggest piece of pipe which will be lowered by the crane will be a length of 30-inch steel 95 feet long which will tip the scales at about 10,000 pounds. Diversified crops have been raised on the farm in production at the present time. These include, according to Eckert, potatoes, grain, corn, hay, beans and even popcorn. The soil is deep and fertile and the "lay of the land" is right for good irrigation. Up and down the Snake river, pumping water onto adjoining rim lands has been going on for some years—but it really got a shot in the arm when California officials cast eyes on the excess water flowing down the Snake. The new pipe being installed in connection with the Magic Water company lands will not be the last. Other lands in other areas will also be irrigated with water which formerly just ran down the stream. And, as the scientists say, perhaps this farm land increase going on now will prevent a worldwide revolution in the future of man.

MAGIC VALLEY PORTRAIT . . .

A. E. Corless, Heyburn, Has Donated 30 Years to Developing of Cemetery

HEYBURN, March 20 — If you were to ask A. E. (Bert) Corless, 84-year-old young Heyburn man, if he "knows" where he will go after he dies, he will more than likely tell you, "yes, sir."

And in a manner of speaking, the answer given could be somewhat a little more than accurate. In fact after donating about 30 years of his life to overseeing and developing of the cemetery here, he "should know where he's going."

During his service on the board of directors, Corless mapped out every grave and plot at the Riverside cemetery and put his findings in a book for future use. He knows the condition of the ground on every plot concerning the danger of possible sub-water threats.

He has devoted many years to cemetery care. He worked with his three "H's" which to him means success with any undertaking—the hands, head and heart.

When he went on the board, he worked with two other men, the late Angus MacRae, who served as chairman, and Carl Merz, who cared for the books. Corless played the more active role in the manual labor with the development.

At the time he started his service, the cemetery was only about one-half of its present size. He worked with pick and shovel and did everything he could possibly think of to improve the appearance of the area. He planted all the trees in the current cemetery with the exception of the evergreens which were planted by Conner.

He got the consent of the board members to have the large popular trees removed to give it a more modern landscaping.

Corless was born Jan. 21, 1881, at Salt Lake City. His parents were Robert Edward Corless and Mary Elmer Corless. He worked as a sheepherder in Idaho, Wyoming, Nevada and Utah.

In visiting the present Salt Lake City, it is hard to visualize Corless' early day experience of trailing sheep through that area. He ran sheep herds across the area which is now thickly populated with people and heavy with tall business buildings.

He married Ella Mae Randall in about 1903 in Salt Lake City. Their children are Bert Corless, Moscow; Earl Corless, Salt Lake City; Mrs. Wallace Carrier, Burley; and Ross Corless, Heyburn.

A daughter Beth, died in about 1940. He has six grandchildren and 15 great-grandchildren.

They settled in Salt Lake City after their marriage and he was employed with the Utah Power and Light company for seven years. They went to California for four years and returned to Salt Lake City and employment with the power company about four years later and his brother, Robert, went into the sheep business.

In 1911 the two families each purchased 120 acres in the Emerson district, located west of Heyburn. The farms laid next to each other. The two brothers went into the sheep business forming a partnership and at one time ran 5,000 head.

Corless enjoys landscaping and feels one of the most beautiful sights is a "straight row," especially rows of "crops" trees and fenceposts. Persons often commented on the attractiveness of the Corless farm.

One day a stranger who introduced himself as J. J. Conner stopped by the farm and told Corless that any man that would take care of a farm like that would certainly take good care of a cemetery.

UNIVERSITY OF IDAHO, Moscow, March 20 — Two Hiley high school students ranked first and third in the annual National High School Mathematics contest.

Louis Holliday ranked first in the contest in which 3,000 Idaho students participated. Richard Goldberg was third.

The contest is sponsored by the Mathematics Association of American and the Society of Actuaries.

Improvements still were being made. He had the roads graveled, put in wire fences, tore out ditches, filled in ditches and did everything that tree-gratis. The caretaker working under his supervision was paid wages but as a public service, Corless continued to donate his time and talents.

During a six month period when they didn't have a caretaker, Corless did the work himself—without compensation. Near the end of his term on the board, he was paid $25 a month for his efforts.

He retired from the cemetery board about three years ago.

In 1953 he purchased a lot near his son, Ross, in Heyburn and built a home.

Mrs. Iona Corless's mother, Mrs. Margaret Eronson, was a widow and visited them often. One day while Corless was visiting with his son and family, his granddaughter, Deanna, 8, said, "Gramps, you're building a house, and Grandpa has the furniture; why don't you two get married?"

The two grandparents laughed but felt the idea had possibilities and started courting. Later that year, they were married in what Corless termed was the best thing that ever happened to both of them.

He was employed with the J.R. Simplot company at the time of his marriage but was later "relieved" of his duties to "make way for a younger man." Corless strongly feels someone should amend the working age law to suit the individual as he is finding it very hard to retire.

At 84, Corless would be thrilled to be hired out for a "good days work."

Idaho Hunters May Someday Be Able To Shoot Wild Turkeys in Gem State

By JIM HUMBIRD
Idaho fish-game department BOISE, March 20 — Hunters report sighting a flock of wild turkeys in wooded country on Squaw creek, a tributary of the Payette river northeast of

They want to know if these handsome birds are offspring of the Merriam's or mountain turkeys imported from Colorado a few years ago and introduced to the lower Salmon river

"Is it possible they have spread to the south?" they ask. "Can they be hunted?"

The answer to all these questions is no.

The partly tamed flock of turkeys belongs to a Gem county rancher. He pen-raised the birds on his ranch, just as thousands of other ranchers across the nation have done for many years.

These turkeys, semi-domesticated, are products of the Rio Grande race or subspecies. They nest in trees near the ranch house and take easy handouts of feed throughout the winter.

Some range of the Rio Grande race of wild turkey consists of heavily open country in eastern Texas and Mexico far different from the forest habitats of Idaho.

This particular race of turkey, though usually wild in its native Texas habitat, domesticates readily when offered the helping hand of man.

Wildness is a natural trait of the Merriam's turkey, whose native range is central and southern Colorado, eastern Arizona and most of New Mexico.

There is good reason to believe that this characteristic is inherited, especially when the wild blood has not had any dilution from domestic turkeys. Eggs from other races and subspecies rarely commonly are hatched in incubators and game-farmed wild turkeys are ready to go before the gun.

But Merriam's turkeys rarely ever are raised on game farms. They are live-trapped and released without delay into similar habitats where there are good reasons for believing they will establish themselves and spread throughout the drainage.

The second phase of wild turkey transplanting in Idaho was started several weeks ago when two tons and eight hens, in the release. Dave Neider, game biologist, and Howard Livengood, refuge manager, both Lewiston, place neck and leg bands on turkey. (Fish-Game photo) rather, it helps disperse them over the suitable portions of the range as well as maintain the degree of wildness necessary for turkeys to be healthy, thrifty and able to shift for themselves at all times of the year.

Hunters planning to bag an Idaho wild turkey in the near future are studying the habits of this noble game bird even now. Much information already is available in the literature about this bronze monarch of the wooded hills and, of course, some Idaho sportsmen have hunted them in other states. But never before could a sporter hope to encounter and shoot a wild turkey in this wide, wonderful region.

Such an encounter by an Idahoan in another state recently stirred the Lewiston "Morning Tribune" to write as follows:

"To the travelers attuned to the manners and moods of the wild creatures, the first glimpse of a wild turkey is an experience to be prized for a lifetime.

"The tourist may be driving through the high, clean Ponderosa forest toward the north rim of the Grand canyon, when he first sees a proud, graceful tom stalking through a bright cluster of aspen.

"Or he may be hiking up a mountain trail in Colorado when he first glimpses three wild turkeys at a bend in the path."

"Wherever the encounter occurs, it imprints upon the memory of a grateful human a picture which can be recalled in all its splendor when the winds of the winter blow or the turmoil of daily problems beat upon frayed nerves.

Yes, another bright new hope has been added to the dreams of the watchful sportsman in Idaho.

Union Financial Statements Due On March 31

SEATTLE, Wash., March 20—Officials of labor organizations in Idaho must file financial statements in accordance with provisions of the labor-management reporting and disclosure act no later than March 31. William C. Pfeiffer, Seattle, northwest area director of the U. S. department of labor's office of labor-management and welfare-pensions reports, said Friday.

Pfeiffer noted that the law requires that a union must file its financial report within 90 days after the close of its fiscal year, and he said most unions close their books Dec. 31.

Report Says Thousands of Londoners Live in Misery

LONDON, March 20 (AP)—Thousands of Londoners live in misery because of unscrupulous slum landlords who put snakes in the bath and itching powder on bedclothes, an official said today.

Many more thousands live in privation and squalor—rotting floors, no bathrooms, peeling wallpaper, dangerous wiring, leaky roofs and windows that cannot be opened—because of a crisis of overcrowding in this capital, it said.

The report on the London housing situation, regarded as political dynamite, said a minority of landlords will go to almost any length to get rid of tenants living on fixed rents to make bigger profits.

Among the methods: Spreading itching powder on bedclothes; putting live snakes in the bath; dumping dead rats on the floor; and even threats of murder.

The report said at least 3,000 tenants a year suffer such abuses. But it said "the prime cause of hardship is insecurity of tenure in conditions of shortage."

On the overall situation in London, the report said 368,000 to 532,000 families live in homes needing improvement, including a bathroom. Another 190,000 need better homes altogether and 150,000 are homeless—they live in welfare accommodations. At least 45,000 homes urgently need to be reseed, it said.

The 450-page report was made to parliament by a 12-man committee appointed by the former conservative government in August, 1963, in the wake of the Rachman scandal. Polish-born Peter Rachman, who died in 1962, was accused of ruthlessly exploiting tenants and "Rachmanism" has now become a part of the language here.

The report is certain to cause a stormy debate in parliament March 22. It is seen as ammunition for the governing Labor party to use against the Conservative housing policy when they were in power. Its publication also comes just before the government presents a bill to repeal the Conservative rent act

The new bill would make rents controlled again and attempt to give security to tenants.

The committee, headed by lawyer Sir Milner Holland, found few of the abuses by unscrupulous landlords were against the law and expressed surprise at this. It pointed out that in New York interference by a landlord was a criminal offense, with penalties of a fine of up to $5,000 or a year in prison.

"There is an acute shortage of rented housing in London and many difficulties and hardships arise from it," the report said. "They are the product of social and economic trends which will continue for the foreseeable future, and they cannot be eliminated without a radical reappraisal of present policies and procedures."

HARRY HOLMES, the new manager of Sun Valley, and his wife, Gayle, pose for their first picture at the famed resort now operated by the Janus corporation, Los Angeles. Holmes, at one time, attended junior high school in Boise and graduated from the Moscow high school. He also attended the University of Idaho for a year before enrolling at the University of California at Berkeley following air force service during World War II. Holmes succeeds Winston McCrea, who was manager for years while the resort was owned by Union Pacific. (Sun Valley photo)

Learning to Ski Is First Step for Sun Valley's New General Manager

SUN VALLEY, March 20 — After his third ski lesson Harry Holmes, Sun Valley's new general manager, was standing with his ski instructor and two others in front of the private lesson meeting place on Dollar mountain. Two girls were waiting to be assigned to class and one was overheard saying, "I wonder who the one in the gray parka is. It's like to be in his class."

It's the outdoor look that does it. Whether skiing becomes a favorite sport of Holmes or not, he is a sportsman and lover of the outdoors. He also likes people and it shows in his manner.

He feels that he has been most fortunate in his hotel experience. Without the drudgery of being in the hotel business through long years of apprenticeship, he has managed three very different hotels, but all privately owned rather than chain hotels, and all giving the kind of service that Sun Valley guests expect.

The smallest of these, the Sun Yaldro ranch at Montecito, an old and exclusive resort catering to as few as 80 pampered guests, gave him a chance to manage every facet of a hotel operation from ordering the food to welcoming guests.

Since a hotel keeper's business, in the opinion of Holmes, is to please guests, he considers the close contacts he had with guests at Sun Yaldro invaluable. Contrary to the opinion of many hotel people, he thinks that the best possible training for hotel management is in a resort. "Here more than in a city hotel," he says, "you can see what services guests and which displease people. A hotel, whether in a resort or in a city, that pleases people has customers."

The Santa Barbara Biltmore, which he also managed, he describes as having much the same atmosphere but larger and more formal. It has the similarity to Sun Valley in that many guests return year after year.

"These guests dislike changes, but they do like improvements, which is what the Janus corporation is planning for Sun Valley," he says.

He also learned much about the operation of a hotel business at the Santa Barbara Biltmore. Just one of reasons this hotel is noted for its fine handling of business groups and organizations.

At the Cliff in San Francisco, he had the experience of managing a big city hotel but one as he says where, "the clientele demands a little better service."

Holmes was born Dec. 5, 1925 in Abilene, Tex., but he says he has lived in so many places that it is rare that he cannot find friends or acquaintances in common with his hotel guests. His stepfather was an army officer and for six years was assigned to duty in Idaho, so that Holmes

Doorway to New Life

By DR. PAUL BRAND

How does a person receive a call from God? To undertake a particular task in this world? Those who have received one know that the experience is like walking through a doorway into a new life. Yet many seek the door and never find it, while others walk in without ever knowing that they have passed through. The latter must surely have applied to me.

Back in the fall of 1948 I boarded a ship bound for India from England. In my pocket was a telegram which had uprooted my plans for a medical career in England. "You must come at once," the cable had read. "We need you here desperately. Signed—Cochrane." Dr. Robert C. Cochrane, then head of the Christian Medical College at Vellore, India, is a great missionary-statesman. I felt it my duty to respond.

Arriving in India, I told Dr. Cochrane good-naturedly, "You have bullied me into coming."

All right, I said, but only for a year, to see you through this shortage of your staff."

Because of my wartime surgical experience in rehabilitation I was asked to instruct in orthopedics. One day while visiting a nearby hospital devoted to treating leprosy, I stopped to examine one patient whose hands showed the paralyzed, claw-like deformity typical of the disease. The hand had lost all sense of feeling and the fingers were curled tight against the palm.

I was absolutely astounded to learn that no rehabilitation was considered possible for leprosy patients. At that time perhaps two out of every 100 persons in that part of India were in some way suffering from leprosy and many, like this patient, showed the paralysis and deformation caused by the disease.

Cautiously I pried open the fingers of the patient's hand, grasped my own hand in his and said, "Clasp my hand, squeeze my fingers."

Immediately the patient's fingers closed on mine in a grip like a steel spring. Long nails cut into my flesh.

I drew my hand back in pain. And then suddenly I experienced a wonderful thrill. I realized that the patient's hand still retained life, and some muscles that worked.

Excited by the discovery, I discussed the possibilities with our research staff. These doctors, biochemists and laboratory technicians began making extensive tests of the damaged arms and legs of leprosy patients. The results showed: nerves responsible for the sense of touch were dead; some muscles were damaged, others untouched. But most important of all, the deformed limbs showed no traces of live leprosy bacilli. It was a clue.

About this time a patient saw me trying, unsuccessfully, to turn a key in a rusty lock. Offering to help he took the key and turned it hard—the lock opened. As the smiling patient proudly handed the key back to me, I saw that the flesh of his fingers was torn to the bone. Apparently he did not realize the great pressure he exerted, because the nerves were dead and he had felt no pain.

Further tests showed that it was the use of strength, with its feeling of pain, that did most of the damage—torn flesh, from walking on sharp objects, cuts to the hands, and burns on unfeeling hands. All resulted in simple infections which, because they could not be felt, became serious, sometimes turning to gangrene and ending in permanent damage to the body. This was a most important discovery: the leprosy bacilli, itself, was not the deforming agent.

And then we began to try for rehabilitation. First we operated on hands, grafting arm tendons to the fingers, to provide a new source for activation. For the first time in years a patient was able to open his hand and grasp the tools and articles of daily life.

Since that day we have performed this operation on hundreds of others.

My original contract lengthened into two, three, four years. Gradually I realized I had at last found my "call." Truly, I believe, I was one of those who had to be literally "pushed through the door" to the new life.

Born in India, of missionary parents, I was sent to England to complete my schooling. Undecided about a career I knew only that I wanted to work where I could be of service to people. So I prayed, earnestly, for God's guidance in the matter.

While waiting, I joined a building firm where I learned carpentry, plumbing, architecture and some agriculture. Then I took a course in first aid. It was this that made me decide to study medicine.

I had just finished medical school when World War II cut across my life and I found myself drafted to remain in London, caring for air raid victims. Much of the surgery I performed was concerned with the rehabilitation of shattered hands, arms, legs and faces.

Little did I see, then, how God was quietly preparing me for His call. At war's end I had decided to settle myself in London for practice when Dr. Cochrane's cable arrived.

Faith—it is such a simple and beautiful word. I often look about me here at Vellore and think of the work being done in this medical college is a most remarkable example of faith. For here we are striving to live the compassion that Christ taught—and finding that it passes all barriers of individual belief.

READING TWO of her poems, which were published in the Seydell Quarterly, a Belgian publication, is Mrs. Olive H. Kelley, 136 Sixth avenue north. ### International Recognition Gained By Local Writer for Two Quatrains

Mrs. Olive H. Kelley, Twin Falls, has been granted an award for excellence in poetry and designated a poet as a result of two of her short poems which were recognized by an international 1964 Writers League contest.

The local woman, who has been a serious writer and poet for the past 13 years and who is immediately past president of the Idaho Writers League, was informed of her win by George C. Koch, Staten Island, N. Y.

Her two short poems, called quatrains, were published in the 1964 winter issue of Seydell Quarterly, a publication, circulated world wide and printed in Belgium.

Articles and stories by Mrs. Kelley have been published throughout this area and some have appeared nationally in the 1964 Writers League contest.

She won a prize for her poem "A Clouds and Green." They follow in that order: "Clouds there are that undermine like thorns in hostile shadow, And somber clouds, although benign that discipline and mellow But the ominous darkest clouds of night are closest to the starry heights. Wide winged through the boundless skies, countless miles. Homeless, and tense as refugee, a caravan of honking geese."

Vietnamese, U.S. Advisers Deal With Red Forces Directed by Professionals

By RAY CROMLEY
Newspaper Enterprise-Military Analyst

WASHINGTON, March 20 (NEA)—In facing Viet Cong first-line forces, the South Vietnamese and their U.S. advisers are dealing with units directed by professionals.

The "units" coming south from North Viet Nam include sizable numbers of officer and sergeant specialists—in anti-aircraft artillery, intelligence, counterespionage, airborne tactics, amphibious landings, sabotage, logistics, maintenance of "foreign" weapons and, of course, guerrilla warfare.

They include fistfuls of civilian specialists—chemical engineers, doctors, union organizers, policemen, editors, pharmacists and experts in psychological warfare.

Their importance lies less in numbers, more in the quality of many of these men. North Vietnamese leader Ho Chi Minh is sending south.

Examination of the backgrounds and training of these cadres is one reason why many U.S. military men underline the importance of slowing traffic on the so-called Ho Chi Minh trails into South Viet Nam. This information also explains why staging barracks such as those at Dong Hoi were special targets of the U.S. and South Vietnamese retaliation air strikes.

The following cases are real. But all names used are fictitious to protect their families:

MAJ. Nguyen Xuan Ton, 38, commanding officer of the Viet Cong 1st Battalion, joined the Viet Minh 20 years ago at the age of 15. He fought against the French until the end of the Indochina war in 1954, then moved north.

In North Viet Nam, he joined the communist party, became an officer of the peoples army of North Viet Nam. Maj Ton received orders in March, 1962, to move south with the 600 men in his unit and joined up with the Viet Cong 1st regiment in central South Viet Nam.

Civilian radio technician Tran Duc Thanh, member of the North Viet Nam communist party since 1955, was selected for assignment to the South in February, 1963. Thanh infiltrated into South Viet Nam with a group of 70 civilian specialists, including doctors, pharmacists, union organizers, radio specialists, propagandists and youth organizers.

One of the infiltrators in Thanh's group was a man named Lam Dat Minh, publisher of the newspaper Labor of the communist party. Another was a member of the City Soviet of Hanoi. The specialists in Thanh's group received three months of basic military training at Son Tay. Their orders were to report to the central office of the Viet Cong in South Viet Nam where they would be assigned according to their individual specialties. Thanh and Minh were to help run a radio station of the liberation front.

Weapons technician Phan Huy Trang joined the Viet Minh in 1950, worked at a secret arsenal manufacturing crude weapons for guerrilla forces. He went to North Viet Nam in 1954, attended a technical school specializing in arms manufacture, receiving special training in "foreign" small arms and artillery.

At the end of 1962 Trang was ordered to Ho Dong at attend a special course of training in preparation for infiltrating South Viet Nam. On completing the training course he was assigned to a group of 14 men who would move south together.

The group included four armaments specialists, two chemical engineers and eight middle-level technical cadre. They left Ho Dong in March, 1963, crossed into Laos and reached their destination in South Viet Nam in May, 1963.

Trang went to work at a secret Viet Cong arsenal. Fifty men, some local workers, manned the arsenal weapons section. The group manufactured mines and grenades for Viet Cong units in the area.

Military security officer Duong Van Thieu, born in North Viet Nam in 1936, infiltrated into South Viet Nam in April, 1964, with a group of 34 police and security officers.

Capt Lam Ngoc Khanh was a member of the 1st group, made up of 124 artillerymen, ranging from company sergeants major to captain, left the Xuan Mai training camp for the south on July 4, 1963.

Lieut. Huynh Ngoc Phat, 39, grew up in Quang Ngai province of South Viet Nam, served in the Viet Minh against the French in the Indochina war, went to North Viet Nam in 1954.

After three years of military service, Phat was assigned to a military farm. In December, 1961, he was recalled to his unit and went to the special training camp at Xuan Mai in preparation for going to South Viet Nam.

Phat was assigned to the 1st battalion of a 350-man cadre selected from branches of the North Vietnamese army—engineers, artillerymen, anti-aircraft specialists, transportation technicians, marines and some factory workers and students.

About 75 per cent of their four months' training was in subjects—guerrilla tactics, business sabotage. The 75 per cent was political, with emphasis on the necessity of armed seizure of power in the south.

Phat became a platoon leader of the 1st Viet Cong land battalion.

MORTY MEEKLE

BY DICK CAVALLI

NO LUCK, MORTY?

NOPE-- NOBODY SEEMS TO BE ABLE TO GET O.L.S.T. TO PLAY GOLF TODAY.

I GUESS I'LL HAVE TO PLAY BY MYSELF.

SOMETIMES I THINK I OUGHT TO GET MARRIED. IT'S NO FUN ALWAYS BEING ALONE.

DON'T TELL ME YOU'RE GOING TO PLAY GOLF AGAIN?!

AND WHAT AM I SUPPOSED TO DO WHILE YOU'RE OUT CAROLING WITH THOSE LOAFER FRIENDS OF YOURS?

THAT'S THE THANKS I GET FOR COOKING AND CLEANING FOR YOU, SCRUBBING AND SEWING, SLAVING AWAY...

I SHOULD HAVE LISTENED TO MOTHER... HEAVEN KNOWS SHE TRIED TO WARN ME!

THERE, AFTER THAT BRIEF SAMPLE, IF YOU STILL THINK YOU OUGHT TO GET MARRIED...

I FEEL AS THOUGH I'VE JUST HELPED AN INNOCENT MAN ESCAPE FROM JAIL.
