Intense Storm Lashes Atlantic; 2 Ships Lost

BOSTON (AP)—An intense storm that lashed the Atlantic with hurricane force winds continued with only slightly less fury Saturday after it left two fishing vessels missing with 12 persons aboard and swept two crewmen overboard from a Soviet motor vessel.

The Coast Guard reported Saturday a distress call from the Soviet vessel Kaspigk about 130 miles east of Cape Cod. The vessel reported a "man overboard" at 4:30 p.m. Friday and asked for a Coast Guard plane to conduct an air search for the man. An airplane from the Salem Coast Guard buoy tender was dispatched on a search mission, was dispatched.

The storm-greave of the British lobster boat Deep Water, out of New Bedford, was missing in the area in 38 degrees latitude and 73 degrees longitude. The man could live for half an hour in that water," the spokesman said, "and those men have been in it for a day."

Objection Denied In Milner Case

MILNER — A district court case in which three landowners of the Milner Low Lift Irrigation District sought to intervene in the handling of water priorities by the district directors was denied by Judge Theron Ward Friday.

Judge Ward ruled Friday that Mark Moorman, Bernard Bradshaw and Howard Conrad could not intervene in the plans of the district directors to give equal priorities to both old and new landowners throughout the district.

A joint suit was brought last fall by several water districts against H. C. Eagie, Snake River Water District No. 36 water master, in an effort to get water decrees with priority date of April 1, 1929.

Earl Sears, Milner low lift irrigation district manager, points out Snake River water users were given various amounts of flood waters prior to the installation of Fallsdam dam.

For more than 10 years the Bureau of Reclamation has been attempting to get water users to bring action in district court to confirm the bureau's findings in the matter.

This suit is still pending in district court.

In their legal action, the three Milner area men claimed they did not approve of the director's plans for equal distribution of the water.

The water users were represented by Rayborn and Rayborn. The Irrigation Dis-

NATIONAL WHIRLIGIG

WASHINGTON Martin Luther King, the famous peace advocate and anti-segregationist, is said to have been "delighted" at a telegram from Prof. John Kenneth Galbraith, national chairman of the Vietnam Veterans Against the War, endorsing King's "Vietnam Summer" campaign against the war. King's advisor, Galbraith, is a big name on the fringes of big-time academic politics. He is a writer of some distinction, a former ambassador—and an economist. Judging from his name, Galbraith, the new boss of ADA, however, he also believes that the Vietnam war is merely a hot air balloon which should be kicked around for the ultimate benefit of the Democratic party.

The professor (and I can't help wondering when professors like Galbraith find time to teach kids dispatched to Harvard at enormous cost) maintains that administration should end the war forthwith because it is hurting the Democratic party. Not mind you, that is not being said because it is not good strategy to engage American forces in an Asian land war. No, Galbraith is just worried about his office as an academic politician.

ALL IS POLITICS—Addressing his ADA membership Galbraith thundered a diatribe against "generals" and "high State Department officials" suggesting the war might last another year. Galbraith thundered a diatribe against "generals" and "high State Department officials" suggesting the war might last another year. Galbraith thundered a diatribe against "generals" and "high State Department officials" suggesting the war might last another year.

WHAT DO GYS THINK?—Undoubtedly, such a cynical manipulation could be arranged, perhaps even with a plausible official explanation. But I am not sure the G's in the Vietnam rice paddies would swallow Galbraith's line. Galbraith, though ever so proper, is properly skeptical about the war he lights, it has not yet been even hinted at that Galbraith is a member of the Democratic party in the Democratic party's campaign to perpetuate its hold on the white House. The fact is that Galbraith is a member of the Democratic party in the Democratic party's campaign to perpetuate its hold on the white House.

WOULD YOU REDS WITH NO-BOMBS—However, the union between Galbraith and King perhaps was just a King's idea. Galbraith is a political matter affecting his own ambitions. The Nobel Prize winner believed the war should be ended because its conduct interferes with his own ambitions. Galbraith is a political matter affecting his own ambitions. Washington Viewpoint

BY BRUCE BLOSSAT

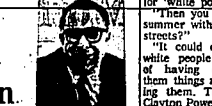

WASHINGTON (NEA)—Aside from its moral appeal, and its argument to make the Vietnam war, Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. is using an economic argument to make his case. He deserves to be examined. The argument is that U.S. outlays for the war represent a problem of the poor which includes a high proportion of U.S. Negroes.

WASHINGTON (NEA)—The fact is, no such dramatic moves have ever been launched. Last September, the venerable Negro leader, A. Philip Randolph, unveiled his "Freedom Budget," calling for huge social reconstruction in American society at enormous cost.

T.F. Highway District Set To Operate In New Building

By Monday all operations of the Twin Falls Highway District will be concentrated in one location, 1122 Highland Ave. District offices are now in the process of moving into modern new office building adjacent to the department's shop and yard area. Ralph Olmstead, chairman of the three-man highway board, said the building was officially accepted from the contracting firm, Chris A. and Eugene W. Jensen, general contractors, Thursday afternoon. Built at a cost of approximately $28,000, the new brick building measures 40 by 38 feet. It includes a large office and meeting room for board business, secretarial offices for Mrs. Isabel Hazard and Floyd Daley, director, as well as records facilities, storage and the first indoor restrooms for the highway shop crew. Until the new building was completed, Mr. Olmstead said, there were no sewer facilities at the district yards and shop. Kenneth Poe, member of the Highway District board, said the new building will make district operations more efficient and convenient in that the entire operation is in one location. Previously, offices for the district were maintained at 115 Third Ave. S., where the highway district rented quarters from George Warberg. The first meeting of the Twin

April 1, 1956, the district office was maintained in the same building until the current move. In the future, Mrs. Hazard said the board will meet on the first and third Fridays of every month, meetings to open at 1 p.m. in the new building. Other member-of-the-highway-board is Ora Jones, Architect for the new building was Carl Benson.

Free World Is Close To Money Plan

By JOSEPH R. COYNE
WASHINGTON (AP) — The free world is inching closer to a plan for "paper gold," international money but agreement on the main issues still eludes negotiators.

And despite the U.S. optimism, "serious doubt" still remains that such agreement can be achieved in time for the September meeting of the International Monetary Fund in Rio de Janeiro.

These results emerged Saturday, however, in the wake of a latest conference on international monetary reform which ended last Wednesday.

There's now unanimous agreement that work should proceed toward creation of a new international money. That money, however, has not yet been dragged up to this point but has already been made this concession.

Negotiators were able to focus their attention on essential issues.

The choice now lies between a new money unit or increased rights to draw funds from the IMF.

Relating any new asset to gold is now out the window, U.S. officials said. France previously had insisted on this connection but American sources said the question will only be raised now as a roadblock.

Pierre-Paul Schweitzer, managing director of the fund, called the latest three-day session very useful and very successful and reported great progress. U.S. officials privately agreed.

The Chiropractic Physician

By Dr. Ludwig C. Landwehr NEURITIS is a severe irritation of the nerve with inflammation and usually causes severe pain. Temporary relief, gained by sedatives and "pain killers" may give the sufferer a false feeling of security, while the inflammation goes on and on, and a severe nerve disease. Treatment should be treated immediately by proper methods. The cause of the condition which is usually near or at the spine and therefore can most often be corrected by adjustment of the spine and adjacent tissues to restore proper nerve transmission. This is done and resulting healing of inflamed nerve fibers. Because it is a degenerative ailment, which can, until its cause has been corrected, progress to the worse, it should be treated without delay. Circumstances Against Small Potato Farmers

BY MARK BROWN
BOISE (AP) — Within the past month farmers in the southern Idaho town of Pocatello were dissatisfied with the prices they brought.

In various cities along the fertile Snake River valley, farm meetings are calling for government diversion programs to take potatoes off the market in an effort to strengthen prices.

Both acts display the frustration of being a little guy in a game where size and diversity are becoming prerequisites for success or even survival.

Almost everyone is crying, but the ones to cry the loudest are the small farmers who lack the financial backing to stand a loss or weather the stormy market.

Even as surplus potatoes are rotting—plans for expanded acreage indicate a larger crop is likely in 1967. Linked to the industry, new acreage consists of large irrigated tracts with the majority of the crop to be processed.

One such operation — utilizing 8,000 acres of eastern Oregon farmlands a few miles from the Idaho border — was announced by a large processing firm earlier this year. Some of the potatoes will be sold on the fresh market, but the majority will be used to manufacture frozen potato products.

Despite an upward swing in the market in the fall, and some large ones are caught with cellars full of potatoes they cannot sell.

Market phenomena and acts of nature appear to have placed the potato farmer in a difficult position this year. And the farmers — for whom each year is a gamble — appear weary and tired to fill the inside straight.

The 1966 season's potato crop was the largest of record and industry spokesmen have called it the year of the "widest of memories."

Total potato production in Idaho during the 1966 season was estimated at 68 million hundred-weight (hundred-pound sacks) with nearly half the crop on hand Jan. 1, 1967. More than 15 million hundredweight was stored on hand March 1.

Early development of the crop had been poor, but an unusually good growing season in September and early October accounted for rapid development.

A killing frost in mid-October damaged many potatoes and left the industry in a state of confusion. All the damage was not, readily apparent, but showed up later among stored potatoes.

Nearly half the crop was harvested before the frost and those potatoes were good. Hoping to hold the good potatoes for an early market, many producers sold the frost-damaged potatoes first.

Expecting a slight strengthening of the market during the past few days, the price of potatoes has fallen.

This leaves the farmer who has a cellar full of potatoes with little choice other than to give them away or call for a government diversion program.

Exactly how much of the potato industry is left with surplus potatoes is difficult to determine. The stock on hand includes potatoes not intended for processing plants. These potatoes will be stored until they can be processed.

Pressure for a diversion program — taking the potatoes off the fresh market for use as livestock feed or conversion into flour or starch products at government-owned plants.

Mental Health Association Fund Drive Goal Is $3,000

A goal of $3,000 has been set for the first organized fund drive to benefit the work of the Twin Falls Mental Health Association, it was announced Saturday by Harlan R. Wainwright, president of the Southern Idaho Life Underwriters' Association.

This initial effort will be undertaken by members of the Underwriter's Association as the service project for the year, it was pointed out, and solicitors are expected to take about two weeks with "kick-off date Monday, May 8.

Drive chairman in Twin Falls County will be Ross Prather while work in the business district will be under the direction of Roy Sinter, with James Winkie heading the individual solicitation portion of the drive. Webb Malone is publicity chairman. All are members of the underwriter's group.

A separate drive in Buhl will be headed by Rev. Richard Tatham.

People who may not be contacted during the drive are asked to send their contributions to Mrs. Earl Haroldson, 853 Fairway Drive, Twin Falls. Mrs. Haroldson is treasurer of the Mental Health Association which is headed by Rev. Harold Nye, president.

Success of the local drive, the officials point out, will enable participation in a program which would see state and federal aid being made available. "If we can get going in this small way," Mr. Baker said, "we are sure that it will mark the start of a very successful health group will be represented by the United States and next year, officials point out.

HAILEY—Ted Uhrig is newly elected president of the Wood River League of Little Leaguers.

Mrs. William Moynihan is vice president and Mrs. Roberta McKercher — treasurer.

Ned Bell is representative for the Ketchikan team; Ted Uhrig, Halley; Rev. James Post, Fairfield; Milton Bame, Carey; Rev. Ron Laughlin and Dennis Head, Buhl; and Clyde Baldwin for the Carey - Picabo (Garabo) teams.

This group will set up league rules, schedule inter-league games and plan for the end-of-season playoffs.

Inter-league tournaments are being held at the Main Dining Room of the Halley City League group and also elected officers.

O. D. Ellinger was re-elected president and Dr. A. E. Richards, Emory Dietrich and Keith Bird named as a board of directors. Mrs. McKercher was also named secretary-treasurer of this group.

July 23, 29 and 30 was set as the date for the Invitational tournament which will again be played here.

Halley plans to have two Little League teams, a Pony, Pee Wee and Funks team as they did last year. Other communities are urged to organize Pee Wee and Funks age teams in addition to their Little League teams.

In discussing the building program for the diamond in Worthheimer Park, where all games are played, members pointed out that larger concession and storage facilities are needed, as well as new toilet facilities and some improvement on the grounds.

It is anticipated the city, school and riding club will cooperate in gaining these additions. Mr. Ellinger, Mr. Bird and Raymond Nelson were named to investigate costs.

Mr. Ellinger, Mr. Bird and Mr. Uhrig will represent the Halley League at the Magic Valley Youth Baseball League meeting in Twin Falls Monday.

The swift and bloodless coup over the club was reported by Col. Nicholas Makarozos, minister of economic development and Col. George Papadopoulos, minister to the premier. "They still are considering the power behind the government of Premier Constantine Kollis.

Greek Army Plans To Set New State

BY ALLAN JACKS
ATHENS (AP) — A leader of Greece's ruling army says Saturday his regime plans to create a new Greek state under a "reformed constitution."

He did not say how the constitution would be rewritten or whether it would restore democratic freedoms in the April 21 army coup d'état.

In a statement to Greek newsmen, Brig. Sivilianos Patacos, interior minister in the new government, also discussed the aims of the regime and promised that extraordinary martial law restrictions now in force will "not last long."

Another minister promised the regime would not establish concentration camps for the 5,000 or more persons now in detention.

Paul Tselomis, minister of public order, said it is "our wish that all Greek citizens should be released and returned to their families as soon as possible."

Patacos was one of the three officers who planned and led the

Time For Living

By ROGERS FRANKLIN
The changing picture of America has been well documented by numerous articles the last few years. Some people seem to be very excited about it all. The debate appears to be, "What role will the church play in this new America?" While this debate goes on among the intellectuals, the little people who form the backbone of every church are finding many interesting programs in which to participate if they are interested.

Today churches of all denominations are providing housing programs to help underprivileged children to stimulate companionship and recreational pursuits. Training programs directed toward creative and educational endeavors, and service programs to help underprivileged members of the community.

Many groups have formed what they call "A-Z Clubs." This means "A-Z" for "All-around Zest." With this as the desired objective, group travel, hobby centers, language and visiting hours or like situations, if developed, will be successful.

The adult center of the First Baptist Church of Los Angeles expanded its Y.V.Z. Club to include a travel program which features an annual overseas trip and monthly trips in the Southern California area.

The Y.V.Z. Club of Baton Rouge, La., concentrates on training programs directed toward creative and educational endeavors, and service programs to help underprivileged members of the community.

In San Francisco the Marine Visiting Project of the Catholic Church is centered in providing a visiting service for the sick and homebound. This program encourages both young and retired church members to take an active part.

The idea is for a younger person to team up with a retired member to make each visit interesting and profitable to both.

In addition to such activity programs, sponsored by churches, most religious denominations have members interested in housing for the elderly. These include lifetime-care facilities, rest homes, and Downtown, Inc. in St. Louis has an excellent hotel, and Carmel House in Detroit is a very pleasant and well run facility.

An annual and interesting activity is the retreat movement in religious groups. Catholic, Protestant, and Jewish groups have retreats available which vary from a weekend of meditation to a full week of conference-style activities.

4-H Member Tells Of Trip For Rotarians

SHOSHONE - Kathy Ross, local 4-H member, told the Rotarians of the Shoshone Valley on Tuesday night, but the final results will not be known for about two months, according to George Forscher, Burley, commander of the Idaho wing.

The CAP, formed during World War II, includes about 450 private citizens in Idaho. The organization has three missions—air-space education and the training of youth in aviation; aid to the nation and state in times of national disaster; and search and rescue for both air and people lost on the ground.

Agencies throughout Idaho should be aware, and will be made aware, of this capability in regard to manpower communication, aircraft and other available aircraft without cost to the Idaho taxpayer.

"We of the CAP on a local, statewide, regional and national level are willing and anxious to do our part to make this a better state and world in which to live through giving and developing projects and programs which will be meaningful and have a definite purpose in our daily lives."

Meeting with the governor, Bessie Col. Forscher and Col. Don Edson, and other officials, including Lt. Col. Edson, Mr. Moran, Burley, wing inspector, Ed. ISU Dominates Running Events, Sweeps To Easy Track Win Over Vandals

BOISE (AP)—The Idaho State Bengals nearly dominated the track events and swept to a 109-3 dual meet track victory Saturday over the University of Idaho Vandals. Three Tie For Lead In Texas Open

SAN ANTONIO, Tex. (AP)—Bob Gosby led the first four holes of the third round to drop into a three-way tie for the lead in the $100,000 Texas Open Saturday.

Gosby, who had a 69 Saturday, and Miller Barber, who had a 67, and Bob Charles, who shared the second-round lead with Gosby, had a 21, along with Chi Chi Rodriguez.

A high wind bothered the pros all afternoon as it did both of the earlier rounds. Gosby dropped a 40-foot putt on eight for a birdie, a 40-foot putt on nine for an eagle and a 10-foot putt on 10 for a birdie. "I hit a tree on the 10th and lost my confidence after that," he said. Gosby three-putted 15, was in a bunker on 16, hit another tree on 17 and was again in a bunker on 18 to card his first straight bogey.

Damascus Is Favored In Kentucky Derby

The well-built son of Sword Dancer-Kerala, owned by Virginia's Mrs. Edith W. Bancroft, will carry the white and red duds and silks made famous by such Ken-

TWIN FALLS, IDAHO, SUNDAY, APRIL 30, 1937

WINDBLOWN PHYLLIS SULLIVAN, flying instructor at Jerome, started flying when she was nearly 17. Daughter Leslie, 14, seated, is following in her mother's footsteps.

THE THRILL OF a lift-off in a fragile-looking plane, or any plane for that matter, is one cherished by Mrs. James (Phyllis) Sullivan, flying instructor at the Jerome airport. Flying Mrs. Sullivan loves flying, but dislikes the drive to Twin Falls in a car.

Phyllis Sullivan, Jerome Airport Instructor—She Shuns Highways, Prefers Sky Anytime

By CATHERINE TATE
Times-News Staff Writer

Condensed steam trajects a delicate pattern on the window in back of the parking coffeepot at the Jerome airport office and Mrs. Jim Sullivan washes out another cup. Company is coming. But the visitors at the airport office may not find room to sit down, since the building is already filled with pilots, housewives, businessmen and flying students who like good coffee, good conversation and Mrs. Jim Sullivan, the flying instructor at the airport.

Windblown and exuberant, Phyllis, as she is better known to her many friends, has the raw courage required to take a student pilot up in a plane and not scream on the way down, but she won't drive "clear into Twin Falls" unless it's an absolute emergency.

"That traffic can kill you—I'd much rather fly in and have somebody pick me up at the Twin Falls airport," she explains.

She has been teaching area residents, both male and female, to fly since 1934. The male students seem to have a few computations about flying with a woman, according to one who said "I was a little apprehensive until I learned how good she is."

A trim blonde with laugh lines she doesn't try to hide, Phyllis has a string of pilot's and instructor's licenses which she keeps in a tiny packet around her neck because she dislikes having to bother with a purse.

She has a commercial license, airplane single engine land and sea license, multi-engine license, instrument license and a flight instructor's license.

Phyllis has been flying since 1946, when she was a mere slip of a girl nearly 17 years old. She didn't, however, get a driver's license until many years after she was married. She learned to fly while attending Lawrence College in Appleton, Wis., and got "too involved" with aviation to graduate from the school.

"At this point," she has chalked up more than 5,000 flight hours and can't even remember the number of times she has soloed. Forty flight hours are required for a private pilot's license and 200 hours are required for a commercial license.

Housekeeping isn't easy for any working mother, particularly one who teaches flying, but Phyllis and her four daughters "manage nicely" at their home-airport office at the Jerome airport.

Her home is comfortable, friendly and the chairs are the type that invite a person to sit down and then casually persuade him to linger awhile. And linger most of the visitors to the Jim Sullivan home do.

Phyllis currently has 20 students, less than one tenth of whom are women.

She and her husband, who is employed by the Reader's Flying Service during the day, manage the Jerome airport by themselves. Jim Sullivan also has a commercial pilot's license.

When she was 20, Phyllis tried sky diving but only made about five jumps, she noted while explaining her "absolute lack of courage."

"I was at the age when you have to try anything once, and I only regret that sky diving as such wasn't popular at that time. The only way I did was to jump out of planes—the acrobatics weren't brought into the activity until much later," she said.

Phyllis does a little charter flying in addition to teaching. She commented that she has had only one or two prospective customers who "bucked out" of a charter flight when they discovered that it would be a woman behind the wheel.

"There was this one guy who called up from Jerome and I told him to come right over. He did, but when I said 'Let's go, and headed for the plane, he incredulously asked if I was going to pilot. When I told him 'yes,' he left here in a mighty big hurry," she said with a touch of amusement.

Another man, she said, declined a charter flight on the grounds that there were clouds over San Francisco, although the flight was destined in the opposite direction.

The coffeepot is always full at the Jerome airport, and Phyllis welcomes any and all visitors who "just come to chat."

Since many of them are pilots or flying students, one observer noted "we hang around the airport. In hopes we might find an evening or two of 'quality' or 'test' flights" are made in an afternoon than actual business or charter excursions.

The pilots and students find a champion in Phyllis, a woman who scarcely gives a second thought to a broken dish but who will go forth with blood in her eye if "someone hurts a plane of hers," Leon Littlefield, Twin Falls, a visitor at the airport, commented.

As for her qualifications as a flying instructor, the record of her students is the best indication of her competence. More than half the pilots receiving safe pilot awards earlier this year had been students of Phyllis Sullivan at one time or another. These awards are given pilots having flawless safety and citation records for their years of flying.

Phyllis, who has been teaching at the Jerome airport since 1934.

Chances are she will be around a lot longer.

SHE'S GOT THE raw courage required to take a student pilot up in a plane and not scream on the way down, but Phyllis Sullivan, Jerome, won't drive "clear into Twin Falls," unless she has to.

FROM CHECKING THE OIL in a single-engine plane to whipping up a pot of coffee, Phyllis Sullivan, flying instructor at the Jerome airport, keeps a smile on her mug.

Feathered Insecticide May Well Be Answer To Pesky Insects Of Summertime

By PEGGY LALEY
Times-News Feature Editor

Has anybody seen a Purple Martin?

No, it's not from outer space. The Purple Martin is a member of the swallow family and instead of eating seeds as many other birds do, it survives on a diet of flying insects.

The Purple Martin, or the Progne Subis Subis, has been on the decline in this country, but in recent years people are beginning to pamper this little purplish black bird.

The biggest reason for this is the fact that each Purple Martin is estimated to consume 10,000 to 12,000 mosquitoes per day where the insects are plentiful.

A couple of years ago the people in Griggsville, Ill., began a concentrated campaign to encourage these two-legged insect eaters to live in their community. This campaign has been duplicated by several other cities since that time.

Reports from these communities claim a complete disappearance of nuisance insects such as flies and mosquitoes. Martins are not selective eaters and they relish nearly anything in insect form that flies.

They seem to prefer apartment house living and a company in Griggsville, the Trio Manufacturing Co., is now making aluminum birdhouses that seem to fit the Purple Martin's requirements perfectly.

Besides liking condominium living these birds will stay only where there is plenty of flying room around the nest, therefore, the metal houses are placed on high poles in the open.

The Purple Martin is an extremely clean bird, carrying its waste sacs far from the nest for disposal.

Griggsville was not, however, the first town in this country to treasure the Purple Martin. The residents of Griggsville, Pa., have been erecting large wooden apartment houses for these birds since 1840, except for a period of 15 years immediately after the Civil War when the Martins failed to return for some unexplained reason.

These are a migratory bird, wintering mostly in Brazil but returning north around March of each year.

Scouts are sent out to find areas inhabited by a sufficient number of flying insects to insure food for the flock.

Many resort and recreational areas have reported a virtual annihilation of pesky insects with the influx of the Purple Martin.

The farm is discovering the value of the balance in nature in the form of this small bird.

If a single Martin will eat 400 flies in one day, a colony of 24 Martin families can consume nearly two million flies in one month.

Stockmen who are utilizing these voracious appetites to rid their feed lots of flying pests claim a reduction in profit loss due to the growth rate of calves and weight gain on cattle.

They also say there is a reduction in fly-carried diseases such as bots, anthrax, anaplasmosis, scab, cholera, poultry tapeworm and others.

The Purple Martin's value to orchards and groves has also been proved. It has also been made clear that the bird will not bother honey bees.

In fact, after five years of testing the Martins have revealed no undesirable characteristics other than their chatter in the early morning.

When you think of it this is much better than continually sleeping mosquitoes and shooting flies on the patio.

Because of their lack of distinctive coloring, Purple Martins are often confused with other dark colored birds, but they are known to nest throughout the United States and Southern Canada except for the dry areas of the Great Basin of the West.

In their natural habitat the Purple Martins nest in a variety of oak, pine, sycamore and other trees used by woodpeckers. The holes made by the woodpeckers are common nesting sites.

The Martin's stun heavy forests because of their need for flying room and because more thickly forested areas are safer from predators.

However, these birds will colonize readily in man-made houses built to suit their preferences. The earliest known Martin house-ing provided by man consisted of hollowed gourds suspended near Indian teepees.

Yes, the Chickasaw and Chickasaw Indians were perhaps the very first Americans who recognized the value of the Purple Martin. When the white man first set foot on this continent he discovered that the Indians were attracting the birds deliberately to their villages.

All of this information comes from a new book, "What You Should Know About the Purple Martin" by J. L. Wade.

I had never heard of the Purple Martin before, but what I read in this book caused me to speculate about the marvelous prospect of mosquito control and the absence of flies that bug every picnic.

Perhaps this little feathered friend is indeed as close to a picnicer's prayer and an end to awful-melting insecticides.

Sound Of New Music Issues From Corners

NEW YORK—The assumption of the general public when making a purchase at their local record shop or scratching a disc off a rack in a super market is that the recording has been produced in multi-million dollar studios associated with New York or Hollywood—and only recently the ch-chi facilities in Nashville, Detroit and Chicago.

But, you'll find they're very busy scouting "the obscure studios in the swamp bottoms of Louisiana, the deep pine woods of Alabama," especially the town of Muscle Shoals, where "the music is made but mustily 're-voiced' elsewhere."

Other hot spots of "sound" are Memphis on the Mississippi, New Orleans and certain areas of Texas.

These professional music men authoritatively attest to the fact that while the records sometimes come from the strangest places—and that the "special sound" found in these southern areas "doesn't exist anywhere else."

"It's an environmental blend of Negro, white and universal music here ... and its universal appeal now and then becomes legend."

Actor Tries Escape Route In New Film

In MGM's "Point Blank," Oscar-winner Lee Marvin proved that his training as a Marine wasn't wasted, when he dove in to the 38 degree waters of San Francisco Bay, swimming 200 yards from an anchor back to the shores of Alcatraz.

He followed this by racing up the prison cliffs, jumping over its top wall, slipping, and hanging by his bare hands from a fence of barbed wire.

If anyone who knows why no prisoner successfully escaped Alcatraz, ask Lee Marvin.

"Point Blank" is the first motion picture to film on the prison fortress, is a Judd Bernard-Richard Winkler production, also starring Angie Dickinson.

The contemporary suspense drama was produced by Bernard and Robert Charoff and directed by John Boorman from the novel by Richard Stark.

The Money Box

Studies Reveal Deposits Of Minerals In Offshore Sands

Underwater deposits of gold, platinum, chromium, manganese and iron in the black sands off the coasts of Oregon and Northern California will be the subject of much study in the years to come, a spokesman at the United States Geological Survey has said.

Dr. H. Edward Clifton of the Office of Marine Geology and Hydrology in Menlo Park, Calif., said that the agency recently began investigation of the heavy metal potential of the black sands with particular emphasis on the minerals deposited offshore areas.

"Purpose of the investigation," he said, "is to delineate and evaluate the mineral resources and to also determine the processes whereby heavy minerals are concentrated offshore and on the beaches."

Clifton made his remarks in a paper presented at the Pacific Northwest Metals and Minerals Conference held recently in Portland, Ore., sponsored by the American Institute of Mining, Metallurgical and Petroleum Engineers, the American Society for Metals, and the American Welding Society.

Geologists have known for many years that rivers from areas containing gold and other valuable minerals deposit some of the metals or minerals on beaches as they meet the sea. The same streams deposit valuable deposits on the ocean floor.

"The fact of the sea was substantially lowered during the Ice Age as a result of water piling up in the continental glaciers," he said. "During the Ice Age, the sea level was possibly much farther inland than it is today. The same streams deposited their minerals on the beach and then caused by or lower to bring deposition again at a different level."

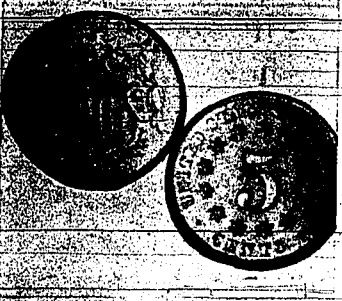

A number of beaches above and below the present beach level were thus created. The continental shelf between Coos Bay, Ore., and Trinidad Head, Calif., receives sediment from streams draining the Klamath Mountains and Northern Coast Ranges, areas rich in gold, platinum and other valuable metals and minerals.

Beach deposits of gold and platinum were first discovered in the same area in the 1850's. During the last half of the 19th century, according to Clifton, beaches and very nearshore waters underwent considerable exploitation for gold and to a lesser extent for platinum.

In the area, black sands of beach loam since past were found a distance above the present day beaches. By studying these sands, the USGS is finding out much about the amount and physical characteristics of the minerals entering the marine environment. Using geophysical techniques and sampling the beach, the known beach or shore characteristics were found to extend onto the continental shelf.

Preliminary surveys made last summer by Clifton indicated areas of favorable sediment thickness and distribution as well as sites of heavy mineral concentration at the top of the sediment.

Gold from offshore areas taken in samples was found to be in a very small particle state, the largest passing through a mesh (No. 125) sieve. According to Clifton, new techniques will have to be engineered for the recovery of the gold because of this fine size. Stringent requirements were also placed on the sampling and analysis of the bottom sediment because of the grain size and generally low grade of the deposits.

of the gold in the United States from 1790 until about 1840. The gold coins minted in North Carolina were not regular government issue, but were minted by a family named "Bechtler" who operated a private mint for a good many years. They contained 21, 22.50 and 25 cents. Their 21 gold pieces were coined before the regular government issue was made.

All of the Bechtler gold is extremely scarce and commands a high figure from collectors.

Your coin bears the image of Adolphe, who ruled the country from 1800 until 1850. Collector value of the coin is about 25¢ if brand new. It has very little value otherwise.

A Comfortable Religion
BY PASTOR EUGENE F. HARKINS
Our Savior Lutheran Church.
A Comfortable Religion?

The Church and the people who are in it are constantly criticized by others, those who go to church and those who want no part of the church.

"The accusation is often made that church-going people use the church as a license for committing all manner of evil deeds. Forgiveness is easy and repentance is a mere formality. Church-going is a mere social custom, a mere habit, a mere routine."

"Forgiveness is easy. The Lord Jesus lived a righteous life, and died a cruel death, so that every man might be freed from the guilt of sin. A man has only to believe that Jesus was his substitute, trust that the payment made through the cross was sufficient, and make a proper response to the love God has shown in Christ Jesus."

"The Lord has laid on him the iniquity of us all. (Isaiah 53:6). God's forgiveness of the payment He planned to make for our sins. The Easter event is the proclamation that God did what He said He would do."

Those of us who read in Scripture of Jesus' life, teachings and struggles to save men's souls, should not cheat and let our minds manipulate for our personal profit.

We should not come to church with the feeling that we are better than others. We should not have a comfortable religion. But we often do what we should not do, feel the way we should not feel and are very comfortable and secure in our church affiliations.

When the world outside the church sees us, they have reason to be critical, and even disgusted with us. This is because both the church member and the one who has never come into the church forget that the church is a human institution. God is surely present in the church in a very real way. One can say He has forsaken the church in a very real way. He reminds us in Matthew 18:20, "Where two or three are gathered in My Name, there am I in the midst of them." But this doesn't make us who are

Filming Of New Movie Covers Many Miles, 72 Days, Nights

AGAY, France—A 10,000 mile, three-and-a-half-month odyssey (started on a windswept mountain top near the Mediterranean resort town of St. Tropez).

After 72 days and nights of filming in Dahomey, West Africa, Paris, Nice, and locations in the south of France, principal photography on Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's "The Comedians," starring Elizabeth Taylor, Richard Burton, Alec Guinness and Peter Sellers, has been completed.

Produced and directed by Peter Glenville, "The Comedians" is based on the international best-seller by Graham Greene. Production began in the sweltering heat of Cotonou, Dahomey, on January 11th.

Following a month's shooting in West Africa, the 11-member unit traveled to Paris for three-and-a-half weeks' interior photography, then to Nice for five weeks' work at the studio. Victor and nearby countryside.

Stars Elizabeth Taylor and Richard Burton leave the Riviera in mid-May for a three-month vacation that will take them to America, Southeast Asia and Wales.

Sir Alec Guinness will also begin a vacation that will include his son's wedding and a trip to the Moscow Film Festival as guest-of-honor of the Russian Government.

Peter Ustinov completed his role several weeks ago and returned to Paris to work on his forthcoming play "The Unknown Soldier and His Wife," which is set for a New York premiere at Lincoln Center.

"The Comedians" promises to be one of the most important films of the year. The topical dramatic adventure, set in turbulent Haiti, also stars Paul Ford and Lillian Gish, and features George Stanford Brown, Roscoe Lee Brown, Gloria Foster, Raymond, Saint Jacques, James Earl Jones and Cicely Tyson.

Graham Greene adapted his novel to the screen, the noted author's first screenplay in seven years.

It's Been A Long, Hard Road, But It Was Worth It, Says Mrs. Anna Nichol

By PEGGY LALEY

Mrs. Anna Nichol was born in Cleveland, Ohio, but she went to Poland with her parents to live when she was seven years old. Later she returned to the United States and she happened to her in those intervening years.

In Poland she grew up on a farm. Her father was a farmer. Then came the war. Her husband, Paul, was taken into Hitler's army and the farm became a battlefield.

Paul was sent to Russia and later to France to fight. Anna and their three children were sent to a concentration camp. One camp where they were interned had 1003 inmates when they arrived. When they left four weeks later, the number was down to 145.

With tears in her eyes, Anna recalls the hunger, the fear and the crying of the little children who had nothing to eat for four or five days at a time.

She remembers that they would beg food from the nearby farms — a crust of bread.

But eventually it was over and Anna and her two daughters and son were set free. They had very little money and no home to go to. Anna's parents were dead and the last word she had had of Paul was a notification from the Red Cross that he was missing in action.

Some of the people who had been friends in the British zone of Germany and they decided to try to make it across the border to them. They sold their clothing, shoes, anything that they could possibly get along without in order to bribe the officials and guards.

They walked twenty miles and at last reached safety. Once in the British Sector Anna worked at whatever jobs she could find and they existed on ration tickets and CARE packages given her by the American government.

Two years later she found Paul and their troubles were far from over. They could not prove that they were married or that the children belonged to her. Finally they located enough witnesses and people to swear that they were a family — and the papers that they needed.

Because Anna was an American citizen the United States told her that they would help them to the United States. She was allowed to bring the oldest child, a girl 12 years old, but Paul and the other two children must remain in Germany.

Anna was expecting their fourth child and this would mean another separation. She was reluctant to go, but Paul urged her saying, "Finally they would find a way to be together again."

So she and her daughter came to Twin Falls. She had no money and could not speak English, but she obtained a housekeeping job where she could live in with her two children, the daughter and the new baby who was born three months after she arrived in this country.

This was in June of 1949. In the next 18 months Anna was able to pay her hospital and doctor bills and to save $200. The members of the First Mennonite church heard of her plight (Paul was a Mennonite) and they took up a collection.

With this money Anna had saved Paul and the other two children came to Twin Falls in November of 1950. That fall Paul had some working points earning $13 to $17 per week. Anna worked as a chambermaid at a restaurant and at the Griggs Motel and Cafe.

The oldest son went to work for a local farmer who, in addition to his wages, supplied a house so that the family could live together once again.

The Nichols have six children. Walter, the oldest son, operates an Arctic Circle in Salem, Ore. The oldest daughter is Elfrieda Eismenhor who husband has a gun shop in Twin Falls.

Two other daughters, Gertrude and Hilda, are employed locally. Danny is a senior this year at Twin Falls High School and works part-time at the Times-News. Eddie is the youngest, a straight A student at O'Leary Junior High School. He has a paper route.

A good descriptive motto for this industrious family is "God helps those who help themselves." They believe that if you want something you must work for it.

This family wanted something. They wanted a home and a life free from fear — fear of hunger and oppression.

In the Twin Falls they have accomplished this and all of it through hard work and working together. They bought a home several years ago. It is paid for. The house did not have a basement so after work they dug a basement — by hand.

It was with help from the parents that the oldest son was able to acquire his drive-in in Salem.

Just recently Anna and Paul have purchased Shorley's cafe in the 200 block on Truck Lane. Paul has worked for the Twin Falls Feed and Ice for the past 14 years and Anna will now operate the cafe with help from her family.

Paul became a United States citizen this month — the last of the family to obtain citizenship. In this, their adopted country, Anna said that they owe nothing. Their children have always worked, they have had to, but it has paid off. She firmly believes that juvenile problems of today are caused because the youth don't have enough to do.

"If they are busy they don't have time to get into trouble,"

SHE HAS NEVER operated a cafe before, but Mrs. Anna Nichol seems to have the talent for making things go. When she came to Twin Falls 18 years ago she was a displaced person with nothing. (Times-News photo)

Suggestion Box Pays Off For Detroit Man—Like $10,000

DETROIT (AP) — If you use the work suggestion box to dispose of cigarette butts, the thought of Thomas Gawlik might spur you to approach the idea bin with a different gleam in your eye.

Gawlik, 52, has won more than $10,000 from Kelsey-Hayes Co. in the past 10 years for 89 ideas.

Gawlik, of suburban Livonia, was named suggester of the year by the Detroit chapter of the National Association of Suggestion Systems.

As a tool inspector with Kelsey-Hayes for 35 years, Gawlik has submitted 215 ideas to the company, 20 of them now under consideration.

"I've been with the company so long I can see when something's not going to work," he said. "What looks right to the designer, doesn't look right to me, so I think up a way to make it better."

His biggest award was $4,100 for improving an out-of-balance condition on a machine affixed to a lathe.

Industry believes it saved $100 million because of the ideas. The federal government awarded nearly $5-million last year for employees' suggestions which resulted in a saving of $20 million.

"General Motors Corp., the nation's most generous idea buyer, dished out $10.2 million last year."

FRY TIMES-NEWS WANT AD FOR FAST SELLING RESULTS

His ideas sometimes range to other company levels. "I said the company should diversify itself in the component field for its own assembly operations," Gawlik recalled. "My idea was turned down because the company thought the board of directors should handle things like that."

Suggestions are becoming a big business. NASS officials said in honoring Gawlik, Gawlik's awards—paid beside the $72,000 once given by International Business Machines Inc. to two repairmen who suggested a method to eliminate some magnetic tapes in computers.

NASS said that 243 members of the association awarded some $4.5 million for 37,692 ideas in 1965, the last year for which figures are available.

New Survival Plan Outlined At Shoshone

SHOSHONE—The New Idaho survival and recovery plan was presented to Lincoln county civil defense workers at a special meeting last week at the court house.

Charles Roundtree, state director, and Merle Tebb, chief of plans and operations, presented details to the civil defense workers at the court house.

This plan will allow greater use of local initiative, ingenuity and know-how in isolating local problems relative to war or natural disaster. It is one of the few plans which has the blessing of the federal government, but stresses community self reliance, Mr. Newby said.

The information is being distributed to each of Idaho's 44 counties and each county is instructed to coordinate its respective organizations to become an integral part of the total state effort.

Six Persons Naturalized At Shoshone

SHOSHONE — An impressive program was presented in conjunction with the naturalization services held Thursday morning at the courthouse to six candidates-received citizenship.

Mrs. Della L. Kierck, clerk of the court, arranged the program and administered the oath of citizenship to Jesus Bolivar Goitandia, Shoshone, formerly of Spain; Jesus Uriate Golland, formerly of Czechoslovakia; Emma Elizabeth Bralwhite, Halley, formerly of Germany; and Arnold H. G. m. n. Halley, formerly of Germany.

Gerard F. Crowley, general attorney for the U. S., Naturalization Service, presented the petitioners to the Court. District Judge Charles Scoggins addressed the new citizens and presented their certificates of citizenship.

Clut Floyd from the American Legion Post, presented each new citizen with an American flag.

The high school band ensemble, directed by Burton R. Thorne, played and songs of patriotism were sung by the class of Mrs. L. M. Hammiker, Lincoln school fifth grade.

Scott Troop 57 Boy Scouts of America advanced and retired the colors. Kevin Guthrie was singer. Playing in a flute quartet from Wood River High School were Jeff Garetto, Sue Anderson, Helaine Hanselman and Melody Watson.

Rev. Ralph Cairns of the Shoshone and Richfield Methodist parish, gave the invocation and Richard Jones gave a choral reading.

New Piano, Organ Instruction Book Written By J. Hill Hits Market

Let's face it—no very many of the millions who struggle with piano lessons are destined for Carnegie Hall.

Therefore, it makes sense that most of those who want to play for their own enjoyment—stand in need of a method of learning which is fast so that they can make progress and yet satisfactory so that some foundation in music is attained.

All of this became apparent to J. Hill, who has been playing and teaching the piano and organ for some 30 years. About three years ago he wrote a series of lessons for his students that taught the natural progression of chords and their application to melody.

This method worked so well with local students that Mr. Hill sent his ideas to the Pointer System, Inc., in Winona, Minn. He had been working with this company's teaching program and materials and they were impressed with his technique and approach to teaching.

Mr. Hill states that all music moves in a definite pattern and chords follow a distinct and definite progression always returning to the original chord.

Every melody follows this rule and there are a great many tunes that can be played using just the C chord progression for the base. The pianist, or organist, plays the actual notes only in treble clef or the melody. Accompanying chords are marked by number.

So, although J. Hill's method is a new here in Twin Falls, it is new in other parts of the country.

Then, too, there will be students who will want to advance in music along the more classical line and it would not be fair to ignore the basics completely. In explaining his new method, this new technique developed.

Life in MAGIC VALLEY

"Tall tales" passed down through the years in the Sawtooth valley were heard and a rancher who has lived in the valley the greater part of his life was honored for his work in fire prevention at a recent meeting of the Sawtooth Valley Association. Charles L. (Chuck) Hansen, who has served as a per diem fire guard for the Forest Service more than 20 years, was presented the Smokey Bear award by Reed Christensen, TWIN FALLS, director of fire prevention work for the Sawtooth National Forest. Mr. Hansen, who over the years has watched fire destroy hundreds of acres of valuable forage and timber, leaving a watershed to be washed down the mountainside onto the ranches below with the next heavy rainfall, considered the only way to handle forest fires is to prevent them.

Chuck Hansen, as he prefers to be called, and his wife, Mattie, own and operate a ranch on the banks of the Salmon river. Their son, Clifford, and his wife, Betty, own a ranch on the edge of a partnership with him in operating the Summer Home Trailer Park a few miles south of Stanley, which sits on a hillside overlooking the canyon with stockmen who graze their sheep and steers, ready for retirement. Mr. Williams said the remains of one fallen perfected redwood tree some 30 feet long and two feet in diameter had been completely chipped away and carried off by tourists. He said this is the only known tree in the state showing redwood and eucalyptus trees grew here at some prehistoric date.

Popularity Of Snow Machines Rivals Boats For Outdoor Recreation

By JIM HUMBERT
Idaho Fish-Game Department.

Snowmobiles with top speeds near 50 miles an hour covered on a coyote in the deep drifts of Muldoon Basin above Carey in the Little Wood canyon and brought the grey prairie wolf to bay.

Scores of such hunts were made in Idaho and the rest of this nation and Canada last winter. It was good sport for sharpshooters who ran the grey prairie wolf as it runs across the white field several hundred yards away.

Human considerations should keep most gunners from playing a "cat and mouse" game with the founding coyote. It is exhausted and helpless.

Other drivers made the long trek from Stanley around Carey Horn and through Bear Valley to try for steelhead below Dog Falls in the headwaters of the Middle Fork of the Salmon River.

The same goal was reached from Lemman, and one snowmobile party went on to Deadwood Reservoir. Eleven of them chugged east from Cascade over two night summits, past Warm Lake and down Johnson Creek to a dude ranch near the old mining community of Yellow Pine.

One group went to Silver City in the Owyhees. Dozens of extraordinary back-country trips made in the dead of winter could be added to this list of feats.

Howard M. "Duke" Wellington, Boise, is a leading president of the Western Snowmobile Association, which has over 1,000 members in the 11 western states. He was elected vice president and assumed full charge when President Bob Bromley of Spokane resigned.

The club secretary is Norman Harvey, Osborn.

Anticipated sales figures for snowmobiles in this country and Canada this year are expected to soar to more than $20 million. Wellington will not even guess at the amount sports-minded people will spend on snow machines accessories such as trailers, pickups, sleds, toboggans and insurance.

No good count of the number of snowmobiles can be made because, unlike boats, no state registration or even country licensing system is required either here or in Canada. Only a small fraction of the people who buy them join clubs.

Wellington does not think that the coming of snowmobiles was a great day for big game hunters. If elk could be surprised out on a prairie, as a coyote sometimes are, they would not have a sporting chance to escape. But he has seen only an occasional big hunter use snow machines, except during two mid-winter trips into Yellowstone Park.

About 125 people made the first trip from West Yellowstone, Montana, through the Park to Old Faithful, and over 200 made the trip two years ago. The animals just stood and looked,

Mr. Williams said the remains of one fallen perfected redwood tree some 30 feet long and two feet in diameter had been completely chipped away and carried off by tourists. He said this is the only known tree in the state showing redwood and eucalyptus trees grew here at some prehistoric date.

Perhaps one of the happiest persons at the meeting was 4-year-old Shawn Ellis. That afternoon he had been playing with a large beach-ball his aunt from California had sent him, when a stiff wind carried it over the snow and off down the valley. Brokenhearted, he went crying into the house. His mother, HAILEY — Colored slides of the Primitive Area were shown and narrated at the Thursday luncheon meeting of the Rotary Club.

Dave Lee of Redfish Lake Information Center, who showed the films, was introduced by Dick Anderson, Hailey ranger of the Sawtooth Forest program chairman. C. R. Higgins of the Twin Falls club and Jack Davis of the Ketchum-Sun Valley club were visiting Rotarians.

Whether snow machines of various types are becoming status symbols or not, their popularity has grown tremendously in the last few years, rivaling the spread of boats and outboard motors after World War II.

One thing is that the cost is about half that of a medium-priced boat, outboard and trailer. Another big consideration is that snowmobiles offer outdoor recreation when most other sports are closed and ice skating is not possible. Hardy winter fishermen and predator occasional big hunters are exceptions to the general rule.

Snow machines have many advantages over other recreational vehicles. They are practical, compact, they are folding jobs for such as, buying them over deep snow.

All told, the Idaho Fish and Game Department has 25 snow

Nobody's got a family plan like Chevrolet.

And in the spirit of all family plans, you get more for your money.

Plan I—Impala Sport Sedan (foreground)—First of Chevrolet in the family car in America (last best automobile). New! 12/28/66. Second, it's got exclusive life acrylic lacquer finish and Body by Fisher. Third, it's got Chevrolet's traditional high resale value. Three reasons why Chevrolet is selected by more families than any other car.

Plan II—Camaro Sport Coupe (rear left)—The widest, lowest, most maneuverable car at the price. Comes with bucket seats, carpeting, a fully synchronized 3-speed transmission, and a big 300-horsepower engine.

Plan III—Chevy II Nova Sport Coupe (rear right)—Nobody's been able to copy the six-cylinder efficiency or protective features like flush-and-dry rocker panels you got in our stylish economy cars, IV, V and VI—Chevelle, Corvair, Corvette (not pictured)—You can see them all at your Chevrolet dealer's. Stop in soon. Bring the family.

Chevrolet's outstanding worth is another reason you get that sure feeling

The bidding in the box shows how the slam is bid by use of the Jacoby transfer. North's two diamond response shows at least five hearts and demands that South go to four diamonds to find out.

North's three diamond bid is a "game force." South does not know if it is showing a heart-diamond two-suiter or is a slam try of some sort. In any event, South goes to four diamonds to find out.

North's four-heart bid says, "I might have bid four hearts right away but I wanted to suggest slam possibilities. South's five-heart bid announces no trump of maximum quality for play at hearts. North accepts the invitation and goes over to the slam."

Turn A Deaf Ear At 'Did You Hear—'?

There's nothing brave or courageous about gossip. How can there be when we're attacking from the rear, slipping a dagger under the cover, and indulging in hit-and-run slander? Called by its honest name, gossip stands revealed as nothing less than "character assassination."

We're a long way from our goal, but we are trying to give you a personal addition to gossip. To this end, we've devised some techniques for our use. RECOGNIZE THE CUE LINES. Whenever we start to say "There may not be any truth in this," or "Don't let me tell you this," it's time to leave the room. Whatever was going to follow shouldn't be our business.

CHECK THE FACTS. RUMOR RECEIVED? THEN INVESTIGATE. Basic to the American dream is the belief in the right of innocent citizens to live in peace and freedom. If we allow stories to be spread that are untrue, we are not only failing our country, we are failing ourselves.

IF WE'RE GOING TO HEAR Gossip, we must go on to get the facts. We can't allow ourselves to be misled by the words of a gossip. We must have the opportunity to see the person whose name is being mentioned. We must have the opportunity to see the person whose name is being mentioned.

BLOCK THAT PASS. It's very hard to keep a spy story in our head and off our tongue. If you have any desire to know what's going on in your neighborhood, you'll be seduced by the siren song of a gossip. Calling the cops, who arrested the guilty little thief. Their pigeon turned into knowing ourselves, isn't it hawk.

Thaw In Cold War? Correspondent In Russian Capital Doesn't Believe So.

By FRED SPARKS
NEW YORK (NEA)— Since returning from Moscow I have been shocked to find that, concerning the Soviet Union, many Americans apparently are once again naive, glib and trusting.

Hopeful speculation about "improved relations" has made some people believe that the Soviets have changed their plans for world domination by communism.

I heard a radio commentator say faintly: "The cold war is over!"

This would have a hollow ring to American GIs in Vietnam being shelled by Russian built mortars. Certainly, no one I met in Moscow's foreign diplomatic circles believes it.

In a rambling Marxist mansion alongside the ice-choked Moscow River, a British employee of the British Embassy told me that he had been in the Soviet Union since it conquered East Europeans increasingly defiant and his Red Chinese protégé a terrifying Frankenstein's monster, so it seeks a Cold War armistice. Perhaps such an armistice might serve the West.

"But, good Lord, don't assume the Kremlin has suddenly come to confession, that it admits past evils or has changed its determination to bury us."

That's one comment on illusion in America vs. fact in Russia. Here are others:

ILLUSION. On a Sunday night I heard a Chicago educator state: "Seeking better relations, the Soviets are softening anti-American propaganda."

FACT. Nightly Soviet television pictures American GIs as barbarians, making war primarily on Vietnamese civilians, the aged and sick.

I discussed this discouraging reportage through an interpreter with Perlevy Syrovatko, deputy editor-in-chief of Moscow Central TV. "American television," I said, "shows our soldiers' misconduct as well as their humanity. And our television carries Premier Kosygin's speeches denouncing our Vietnam policy."

"Russian TV doesn't even acknowledge our soldiers to be humane. And President Johnson's explanations of why we're in Vietnam haven't been seen in America—apparently we obtain fair coverage?"

"By getting out of Vietnam!" snapped Syrovatko.

ILLUSION. At a Manhattan buffet with eggheads, I heard one "expert" pontificate: "Events Russian news know what's going on in the world."

FACT. Soviet editors print what they know the government wants. A Russian editor who criticized the Kosygin-Brezhnev dictatorship might not get the Siberian deep-freeze treatment as in Stalin's day. But he'd be unemployed.

Spot news is delayed while editors decide whether it lives or dies. While I was in Moscow the momentous flash that Peking mobs had besieged the — 48 hours late.

The only foreign publications sold in Moscow are Communist sheets like New York's "Worker" or London's "Star," both as newsworthy as the message on chewing gum wrappers. The Soviets even ban the Ladies Home Journal, perhaps fearful that canned tomato soup ads might enchant Soviet housewives with home-cooked borscht.

ILLUSION. A reader wrote the editor of Art News: "The visit of Russian poet Yevgeny Yevushenko proves art is free in the Soviet Union."

FACT. Yevushenko wouldn't have made America if he'd deviated one rhyme from the party line. The smash movie, "Dr. Zhivago," from Boris Pasternak's book is forbidden in Moscow. Why? Before he fled Muscovite Pasternak implied that Russia had a fat Establishment that did the Pork and Barrel Rock as merrily as Tammany heaters.

One recent evening several pioneering artists opened the first exhibition of Russian pop art, even though brave souls knew officially pop art is OUT. Three hours later the cops closed the showing, seized the pictures. In Russia the likes of Andy Warhol would probably be painting NO SMOKING

"It would be rough getting you inside," sighed Paul, and for photographs — forget it! Russians are leery of being photographed with Americans."

The Soviet attitude is: A fair exchange is no bargain. Russian bullets, pots and dancing bears come freely to the United States, but the Soviets, at the last minute, canceled Mary (Marion's) Russian tour. They also canceled concerts Earl Hines and his swinging coward-Leningrad—you'd think "St. Louis Blues" was a secret weapon!

"Perhaps this was a Vietnam protest," shrugged an attache at the American embassy. "The Russians didn't even say: 'Sorry about that!'"

CONCLUSION. All Russia remains a prison without walls. All Russians, excepting party members, are faceless and speechless. Even though white-collared Premier Kosygin doesn't have the oriental bloodiness of a Stalin or a shoe-humping redness of a Khrushchev, his "slight modernization, is a continuation of their tyranny."

A tyranny that trafficked with the Nazi Hitler — a tyranny that peopled a world with exiles — a tyranny that turned Budapest into an abattoir — a tyranny that encouraged the invasion of South Vietnam — a tyranny that has degraded and is degrading, with whip and rifle butt, the dignity of man.

Advice For Wedding Photos Given

"For the first few hours of a girl's marriage, her photographer should be more important than her husband-to-be," in the opinion of John Duricka, a photographer who has taken hundreds of wedding photographs.

Duricka advises girls to cooperate completely with their photographer for a wedding album that will provide happy memories 25 years after the big event itself.

The bride should get in touch with a photographer at least two months before the wedding, Duricka says. Always pick a professional, he advises, rather than relying on family shutterbugs.

It's a good idea for the girl to look at retaining albums of friends and relatives, check her local newspaper to see whose pictures appear most often and visit various studios, looking at photos of wedding albums. The bride ought to know exactly what she will get for her money.

Prices vary according to area and services required. A 2500 black and white photographic set for $45 could include a dozen different eight by ten shots of the wedding. A $250, also black and white, might include a wedding album with anywhere from 25 to 40 shots of the wedding. A $250, also black and white, might include a wedding album with anywhere from 25 to 40 shots of the wedding. A $250, also black and white, might include a wedding album with anywhere from 25 to 40 shots of the wedding.

More and more girls are having color pictures taken of their weddings. Color can cost as much as double the price of black and white, but usually is less than that.

The Next Step
After the girl has selected her photographer, she should make arrangements for the pre-bridal photographs. These should be taken at least a week before the wedding, as soon as a girl has her dress and accessories. The preferred pose is a formal shot from the waist up, which is of the type usually used in newspaper announcements.

When it comes to the wedding itself, "it's the photographer's show; he has to run it the way he wants to," Duricka says. The bride should arrange with her church and minister for their cooperation if she wants particular photos which could involve disrupting the normal pattern of the ceremony.

Wedding photographs usually begin at the bride's home, about an hour before she wakes up with a series of preparation pictures, showing the bride putting MODELING ALENCON lace petals, pearl trimmed with a pearl crown that holds her 72-inch elbow veil of English silk tulle is Mrs. Lucien Lafriere.

Today's Trousseau Is Tomorrow's Wardrobe

The lovely, lacy things that every bride wants in her trousseau do provide glamour. But the smart bride today will plan her trousseau with tomorrow in mind.

Since many of today's brides work after marriage, it's a good idea for the bride to plan her trousseau wardrobe around on make-up, adjusting her veil, etc.

At the church, the photographer may take as many as 40 to 50 different shots, including a number of standard poses.

The typical poses include the formal "bridal party," the ring passing ceremony, the wedding procession, a pre-wedding picture at the church with the bride and her mother, the cake cutting and toasting at the wedding and the throwing of the bridal bouquet.

Duricka suggests the bride should wear normal makeup for her pre-bridal photographs. Heavy, theatrical makeup not only will look unnatural, it won't be attractive.

He also says the bride should not be surprised if the photographer requires a deposit of at least 25 per cent of the cost of the pictures.

clothes that will be usable for business after the honeymoon. Suits, basic dresses that can be made more or less formal with accessories, and knit costumes that travel well all can't do double duty.

The bride also should think ahead to what kind of social life she'll have after marriage. Will most of her entertaining be done at home? Will the young couple and their friends prefer informal, country-type socializing, or will they do most their partying in the city?

Another, and possibly most important, thing for the bride to consider is her husband-to-be's taste. If he doesn't like one particular kind of clothes, she shouldn't buy them, maybe she can convert him afterward.

Jane Justin, a 27-year-old designer for Don Sophisticates, says that young brides should choose "a good cross section of working clothes and dinner dresses." She also says that "the understated dress is much more important" than the "way-out 'mod' look."

Jane also advises girls: "Wear what's flattering to yourself. If half of these people (in looky clothes) took the time to look in the mirror, they wouldn't wear

Gail Drown, Clark Reveal Wedding Date

Mr. and Mrs. Floyd Drown announce the engagement and forthcoming marriage of their daughter, Gail Gay, to Ronald Clark, son of Mr. and Mrs. Glen Clark, of Twin Falls.

Miss Drown is a senior at Twin Falls High School. Mr. Clark is a 1964 graduate of Twin Falls High School and attended Ricks College for two years during which he was president of Gamma Beta. He is attending the College of Southern Idaho. A June 9 wedding is planned. *

Omega Chapter Members Meet

BUHL — Mrs. Jon Edmons hosted Idaho Omega Chapter, Beta Sigma Phi, at her home, with two guests present, Mrs. Mike Barron and Mrs. Bill Broden.

It was noted that Beta Sigma Phi Week was observed during the week of April 24. The initial of weeks was held at the home of Mrs. Dick Love, following the Founder's Day Luncheon in Twin Falls. New pledges are Mrs. Val Deane Anderson, Mrs. Darrell Burnett, Mrs. Jack Jardine, Mrs. Bob Weaver, Mrs. Gale Stevens, Mrs. Charles Langley and Mrs. John McCandless.

A resume of the year was read by Mrs. Garry Meyer. Mrs. Vernon Rodig read Walter W.

Lodge Harvest Festival Set

Plans were made for a Harvest Festival to be held in the fall at a recent meeting of Princeton Lodge. It is planned to have only a country store and cooked food sale.

Mrs. Carl Ridgeway was appointed chairman of the event, with Mrs. Sigrid Smith, co-chairman.

Striving for a rummage sale to be held in May were discussed. This was left to the management of the Triple Link Club, with the entire lodge participating.

The program was given by William Boyd, who gave a talk on the origin of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows in commemoration of the 148th Anniversary of the organization.

A social hour was held after the meeting.

Most men, Jane says, don't like to see extreme fashions on their wives. They may look once if they see a far-out dress on another woman, Jane says, but they'll rage if the woman is their wife.

GAIL GAY DROWN

Ross' message, "What is Beta Sigma Phi?" The program was presented by Mrs. Gary Bonar who introduced Mrs. John Unzicker. Mrs. Unzicker spoke on her experiences as Idaho Mother of the Year.

The next meeting is Wednesday at the home of Geraldine Beach, with Mrs. Richard Bencken assisting. Mrs. Mike Felton will present the program.

Ruth And Naomi Society Leaders Are Installed

FAIRFIELD — Mrs. Leg Dan-iel was installed president of the Ruth and Naomi Society at a recent meeting.

Mrs. Walter Pearson was installed vice president; Mrs. Don Bauscher, secretary, and Mrs. Melvin Brooks, treasurer. The candlelight installation ceremonies were conducted by Mrs. John Gaskill in the Community Church Recreation Room.

The meeting opened with group singing. Mrs. Gwin Rice presented the devotional service. Mrs. Gaskill gave a reading and Mrs. Pearson read letters from children in Japan.

Secret pals were revealed and new secret pals issued for the coming year with Mrs. Edward Krabin in charge of activities. It was decided to have a church cleanup May 11.

The next meeting is May 17 and will start at noon. Members are asked to bring a sack lunch. Some quilts will be worked on. Hostesses were Mrs. Floyd Clutter, Mrs. Loy Vanslike and Mrs. Gaskill.

Bridegroom Or Bride Should Include Camera When Packing For Honeymoon

When you're planning your honeymoon, you'll also want to be sure to plan ways of recording the trip.

Home movies provide one of the most vivid records, and easy-to-use cameras on the market today mean you don't have to be a professional to get good results.

There are a few things you ought to remember, however.

Learn about the places you plan to visit. Send for pamphlets from local chambers of commerce, travel agents or consult travel magazines or commercial travel guides. Practice with the camera before you leave on your trip. Shoot and have processed at least one roll of film to make sure your camera is working properly and you are using it correctly.

Be realistic. Don't try to see or photograph too much. Try and make some sort of plan of what you want pictures of, then stick to it.

Don't worry too much about the weather. You'll have only one opportunity to get the pictures so take them—even if conditions aren't ideal. And remember that while landscapes usually look best in bright sunlight, close-up subjects are better taken on overcast days. The lighting is softer and people don't squint.

Ways Are Listed On How To Get Along With In-Laws

Mothers-in-law probably are the single biggest subject of jokes in America.

All the jokes in the world, however, won't help a bride establish a warm and friendly relationship with her husband's mother. A little care and thoughtfulness will.

Here's a list of Do's and Don'ts for both brides and mothers-in-law.

Do take an interest in your mother-in-law's activities. If she invites you, attend club meetings with her and ask her to join you in some of your activities.

Do ask her advice—even if you don't always need it. She is more experienced than you are and will be flattered that you want her help.

Do make sure you and your husband spend some time with her if she lives nearby. Show that you are not trying to compete with her for her son's affection and are not trying to replace her in his heart.

Don't run to your husband every time you feel your mother-in-law is wrong. Trying to make your husband take sides between you and his mother will hurt both you and her as well as forcing your husband to make an unfair choice.

Don't object if she frequently gives you recipes for her son's favorite foods. She is not criticizing your cooking, just trying to help.

For the mother-in-law: Do respect your daughter-in-law's privacy. Especially in the first few months after marriage

Makeup For Wedding Day Listed

It may not have mattered before the wedding if you spent half an hour putting your hair up—in curls before you went to sleep and another half hour combing it out in the morning. But when you're married you won't have that much time. Instead, why not try one of the new hairdos which rely on curl, and a permanent to help them keep their shape, rather than nightly settings?

Another area you can simplify is hand and nail care.

A one-week complete manicure may seem to take a long time, but it will eliminate the need for in-between touch-ups and will prevent ragged nail edges.

Allow yourself a full hour for the manicure. Start by removing all traces of old polish, then use a cuticle remover and orange stick to keep the cuticles in shape. Base coats and top coats add a few extra minutes to the manicure, but prevent cure last longer.

Choose a base shade of polish that will go with almost everything you wear rather than one of the "far out" shades you might want to use once and a while for dress up. Be sure to let the polish dry thoroughly between each coat. Finish-up the manicure by rubbing cold cream into your hands. Don't forget elbows. And here's another tip—medium length, oval shaped nails are less likely to break than long, pointy ones.

When you're putting on makeup in the morning, have a definite lineup. Keep all your make-up supplies in one place, preferably lined up in the order you plan to use them. Start with soap and water, then use either a skin cream or a skin freshener, depending on whether your skin is dry or oily.

Your makeup will last longer if you use a foundation. One product is now available in an aerosol can, looks rather like fresh-colored whipped cream and is one of the easiest foundations to apply.

Next use powder—either pressed or loose—and top off with one of the new "blushers" to add a touch of color. Eye make-up can be kept to a minimum for daytime. A little eyeshadow, eyeliner and mascara are plenty for most girls.

If your trip lasts longer than two or three weeks, it's a good idea to send your exposed film to be processed. This is especially true of color film if you're traveling where it's hot or humid.

Don't shoot out of the side window of a bus, car or train. All you'll get is a blur. On a plane, try to shoot from the shady side and at low altitude.

Even more important is what you shoot after you arrive. One "must" is signs. Shoot all kinds of signs and markers for color. Road signs, historical markers, a life preserver on a ship, car bumper stickers, a famous monument—these are just a few examples of natural-little.

People make pictures more interesting. Scenic views, distant buildings and snow-capped mountains are fine, but a little of this goes a long way. You'll have better results if you take lots of close-ups. Concentrate on things like close-ups of hands weaving rugs or making pottery or baking bread.

Take pictures of faces, costumes and anything else involved in your trip. When photographing buildings or monuments, remember that people should be included. Wait for interesting passersby, and have them walking into, not out of, the picture.

3 Ways To Look Prettiest On Wedding Day Are Listed

Two important days in a woman's life are the days she is born and the day she is married. A bride doesn't have any control over her looks at her birth. On her wedding day, she does.

Brides Susceptible

A noted female "psychologist" has been quoted as saying that emotional strain and fatigue affects a woman's skin adversely and may cause blemishes and skin eruptions at the time when she wants most to look her best.

Brides are especially susceptible to pre-nuptial complexion problems because of the tension caused by the excitement of preparations, parties, packing and chores. If you would like your skin to look its loveliest on your wedding day, try these three tips from the Pacquin skin care specialists:

Beat Face Forward

In some cultures, a groom didn't see his wife's face until after the ceremony. She was completely veiled from view. Today, a bride's complexion is very much in evidence, both "live" and in the wedding photographs.

The "sensible modern bride," says the experts, will spend extra time on complexion care weeks before the wedding. A complete facial, cleansing at least twice a day will not only keep skin sparkling clean, but will also discourage formation of unwanted blemishes caused by surface grime and careless makeup removal.

One neat way to deep-cleanse quickly is with a new Rise Oil cold-cream. A unique formula for all skin types, it washes away dirt and makeup with plain water. Non-drying, it cleans as thoroughly as soap, yet leaves skin dewy, not goopy.

On the wedding day itself, experts suggest wearing a light, natural makeup that provides coverage without looking theatrical. A light-makeup requires less frequent touch-ups during those hectic hours, and also photographs much more effectively.

Now Join Hands

The ring ceremony is a most meaningful part of the wedding ritual that goes back many centuries. On this occasion a bride's hand should look smooth and well-manicured. Before the wedding use a specialized hand cream daily to soften and moisturize.

Now there are creams designed for specific skin types, such as a fast absorbing cream for normal skin, super-moisturizing for extra dry skin or medicated cream for chapped skin. Try using a hand cream on elbows, too, an often-neglected area that can look conspicuous in a short-sleeved wedding gown.

Feet First?

Whether you will be carried over the threshold or walk in on your own two feet, make sure those feet look as pretty as the rest of you. Beautify feet nightly with an application of lotion designed to smooth dry skin areas.

One pleasantly creamy moisturizer, a lotion for extra dry skin, contains a light medicinal

Men's Night Is Observed

Mrs. Warren Saunders, program chairman, introduced Mrs. David McClusky, chairman of the American Field Service Exchange Student Program. Mrs. McClusky presented Harvard Skelsoy, an exchange student at Twin Falls, from Andalsnes, Norway.

Mrs. Skelsoy talked about the exchange student program and showed slides of his homeland. He pointed out the differences in the education program here and in Norway.

He also helped promote healthy tissue. For a professional pedicure, try using Mani Magic, a crystal clear cuticle remover.

Invitation Etiquette For Bride-To-Be Is Explained

Customs today are getting more and more informal. But let the word "wedding" be mentioned and even the most informal girl runs for her etiquette book.

Here are some pointers for the bride who is in a quandary about wedding invitations.

Invitations and announcements, are sent to the family, friends and acquaintances—including business acquaintances—of both the bride and groom and their families. The invitations are always issued by the bride's parents, if they are living, even if they cannot attend the wedding.

If the bride's parents are not living, the invitations may be issued by the bride's nearest relatives or a close friend or guardian.

Engraved invitations still are the most formal, but modern printing methods have made simulated engraving almost as popular.

It is wise to remember, however, that engraving takes time and should be ordered well in advance.

Paper should be white, light ivory or a very pale tint. Usually, invitations and announcements have two envelopes. The inner one protects the actual invitation.

Once the bride has decided on the type of invitations, it must be decided exactly who gets invited. The job falls to the mothers of the bride and groom.

Among those who should get invitations, for the sake of formality rather than practicality, are the clergyman and his wife, the members of the wedding party and their husbands or wives if they are married, grandparents of the bride and groom and even brothers and sisters who are living at home.

In some cases, more people will be invited to the wedding ceremony than to the reception. When this occurs, a separate reception card is engraved and enclosed in the invitations of outer one is for mailing and the inner one protects the actual invitation.

This card usually is a little smaller than half the size of the invitation, and is of the same color, type and quality of paper. Any form used to invite guests to a reception should have, in the lower left-hand corner, the letters R.S.V.P., which stand for the French words "Repondez s'il vous plait," meaning a reply is requested.

Informal wedding invitations may be issued in the form of handwritten notes, telephone calls or even telegrams. Bear in mind, however, that formal invitations may be sent even if the wedding is small and informal.

Items For Newlyweds' Gift Given

You do not need to give a wedding present just because you've been invited to the wedding, but people who attend the reception do feel obligated.

Silver, linens, china and crystal are the most popular presents for the bride. Once a girl's silver pattern has been chosen, it's simple to give her a piece of silver in that pattern. Registries are kept in stores so that pattern and pieces selected are recorded to avoid duplication and help the giver to make a choice.

Relatives and close friends may elect to give complete settings in silver. Others may choose extra forks and knives, easy on the budget. You can go on to serving spoons, gravy ladles, tomato servers, steak sets, holloware.

The same idea applies to china. A bride may not want a hodgepodge of china. Except for a beautiful and distinctive turquoise, the china pattern should be the one the bride selects.

An unusual set of bone china cups or a complete breakfast set in a cheerful motif will be appreciable and cherished, but odd serving pieces are likely to be undesirable.

If table glassware is given and no pattern has been decided upon, you should give at least six goblets or wine glasses. The bride can add to the starter set or exchange it for a pattern she prefers.

Table linens may be the most desirable present of all. A bride can always use another set of linens, and the extra linens will be an especially welcome idea, considering that she will be entertaining a lot at the outset of married life.

House Hunting By Couple Takes Thought

Young married people often prefer to rent that first house or apartment because they haven't the necessary down payment. Once they've acquired some furnishings and have studied the community where they want to live, they may think about buying a house.

The big question at that point is, how much can you afford to pay each month to own your own house.

It is one thing to rustle up a down payment, and quite another to meet those monthly expenses.

There's more to owning a house than the mortgage payments. You should add to the mortgage payment the cost of garbage pick-up and such items.

The first step is to add up your own monthly take home income.

This should not include the working wife's salary. Even though young people vow to save all the wife's salary to apply to mortgage payments, the best plans go awry.

After estimating take home pay, estimate monthly expenses. Good people to advise you on this score are the budget keepers in your immediate family. The advantage is that they know your standard of living and they are in a better position to judge expenses if they know the community that you've chosen for your home.

You must take into consideration such things as food, clothing, transportation, life insurance, utilities, fuel, recreation, dues, installment payments, maintenance, garbage pick-up, medical care, savings.

Also a miscellaneous category to take care of the hundred and one little things that occur from unexpected wedding presents to a ladder for the handyman.

Once they have arrived at an approximate total of monthly expenses, deduct the sum from your monthly income to find out how much is left. That is the mortgage payments, the best figure for mortgage payments. A pretty safe approximate figure to use as some sort of guide is one that has been suggested for those in a position to make a large down payment. If your take home pay is $200 a week, you can probably afford a house in the $18,000 bracket. If your take home pay is $300 a week, you may swing to $20,000 to $25,000 houses by this method of estimating. All this is based on the assumption you do not have extraordinary expenses.

If you are buying a house on a shoestring, be prepared for certain expenses at the time of closing. You will have legal fees, insurance payments, the cost of a title search and of taxes to date. If there is fuel left in the house, you may be asked to pay for it. You may also wish to buy some furnishings, fixtures and appliances; and so on that previous owners have left for sale.

You should have a little cash left over "to play with" as they say.

Kitchen Shower Rains Cookware For Bride

A cookware shower is always lots of fun, and the girl friends can get you off to a grand start in the kitchen.

It's a good idea to choose basic type ware that you know, rather than something with some that are attractive to look at—but may not be serviceable. The main objects are pots and pans that conduct heat well and do an efficient cooking job.

Pans should be the right type and size for each job. If you want good cooking results, in range-top cooking, pans should have a flat bottom, with straight or slightly tapered sides, and the bottom of the pan should approximate the size of the heating unit. Tight fitting covers are needed for such foods as vegetables and cereals.

Here is a basic cookware wardrobe:

Saucepans with covers: 1 pint — for heating prepared sauces or reheating leftovers; 1 to 1½ quarts for vegetables, cereals; spaghetti sauce; 2 to 2½ quarts for deep fat frying or for cooking larger quantities of foods. A 3 to 4 quart Dutch oven or sauce pot is good for stews, whole chickens, pot roast or spaghetti.

Skillets or frying pans: For range-top frying of such foods as meat, fish, eggs and potatoes. You'll want at least one 8-inch skillet and one 10-inch skillet with cover. The 10-inch covered skillet is ideal for frying chicken or for preparing one-dish skillet meals.

Double-boiler or combination cooker: For custards, sauces and frostings. Useful for reheating foods, made ahead of time or for heating a few rolls when you don't want to get the oven hot.

A good coffee-maker: Size of the coffee maker depends on coffee drinking habits, but whether you prefer percolator or drip, you prefer percolator or drip, you prefer a sturdy coffee maker and preferably one that is handsome enough to be used at the table.

For even cooking: Covered casseroles in various sizes for even dinners and for preparing new packaged casserole mixes. You'll need an aluminum roasting pan large enough to accommodate a good size roast, chicken or Thanksgiving turkey.

There never was a bride who didn't want to face the challenge of pie crust or cookies as soon as she gets her first oven, even if she doesn't relish the idea of cooking. So don't forget to add cookie sheets and pie pans to your list.

Wedding Styles Of Today And Yesterday Are Listed

By STAN BENJAMIN, Associated Press Writer

PHILADELPHIA (AP)—"The bride wore dark grey." Sounds odd, doesn't it, in this age when the young bride almost invariably walks down the aisle in white?

White, with its suggestion of purity, however, is almost as much a matter of fashion as sleeve length or hemline in bridal gowns.

Green, gold, tan, even purple (worn by a lady mourning her father, killed in the Civil War) found their places in the bridal styles of earlier days, along with such passing fancies as the "leg-of-mutton" sleeve and the bustle.

The Philadelphia Museum of Art has about 100 such gowns, from colonial days to the present and recently put about one-third of its collection, including gowns from 1783 to 1962, on display.

Mrs. Elsie S. McGarvey, the Museum's curator of costumes and textiles, attributes the modern vogue for white to the influence of Greek and Roman classical art.

almost childlike in proportion. Of the average, they probably had about a 14-inch waist and could corset themselves into 12 inches," she explains.

Many women in those days even used a white-rice powder on their faces to heighten the resemblance to a Greek goddess.

The Empire style, attributed to Napoleon's Empress Josephine, was to fall with the Napoleonic Empire, but its classic lines recently reappeared in a modern revival.

"Fashion repeats itself," says Mrs. McGarvey. "During the late Victorian—the 'Gey' period—there is a definite repeat in the leg-of-mutton sleeve."

That particular style had come and gone some 60 years earlier, during the "Romantic" period that followed the neo-Classical. The sleeve, formerly a modest little puff, developed into an elaborate affair, narrow at the elbow, but swelling to an overstuffed shoulder and looking like—well, like a leg-of-mutton.

Low-Budget Household Aid Does Big Job For New Bride

If you're a bride just coming into command of your first home, one of your greatest needs is a good list of housekeeping shortcuts.

Remove protective coating from new copperware—when the protective coating on new copperware has begun to peel, you can remove the remainder by boiling for a few minutes in a non-aluminum pan full of water to which three tablespoons of baking soda are added.

Prevent plastic dinnerware from discoloring—wash regularly in a baking soda solution. If minor stains have already established themselves, you can "buff" them by rubbing with dry baking soda applied with a damp sponge.

Shine stainless steel surfaces—wipe with a sponge that's been wrung out of a baking soda solution.

Prevent steel wool from rusting—steel wool won't rust if stored in a cup or a jar of water to which a dash of soda is added.

Shine silver flatware—line enamel pan with aluminum foil. Spruce silver-ware foil cover with boiling water, add three tablespoons of baking soda and let sit for a few minutes. Rinse and dry. This method is not recommended for pieces with cemented-on handles or that are ornately patterned with darkened backgrounds for contrast.

Jessie's sponges, dishcloths and dishmops—if dishwashing equipment develops a sour odor, soak in a sinkful of hot water laced with three tablespoons of baking soda. To prevent sponges which float from getting a one-sided treatment anchor them under water with a plate or other heavy object.

OFFICERS NAMED RICHFIELD—Richfield Girls' League officers for the 1967-68 year are Carlene Stevens, president; Cathie Flavel, vice president; Dorothy Atkins, secretary; Deanna Behr, treasurer; Joy Alexander, representative, and Pamela Edwards, historian. Installation is at 8 p.m. Tuesday in the home economics room.

Announcing Engagement: Chart Of Do's, Don'ts Given

One of the first things any newly-engaged girl wants to do is tell her friends the happy news, but in today's cosmopolitan society her friends may be scattered all over the globe.

To make things easier for the bride, there are several rules to follow:

The first people to be told are the girl's parents and then the boy's parents.

Before making a formal announcement, the young couple should send handwritten notes or make telephone calls to close relatives and intimate friends, telling them the news.

A public announcement of the engagement is optional, but is usually preferred by the young couple if they want to inform all their friends and acquaintances easily.

girl personally.

If the girl has lived away from home for a long time or is a student, a reason for not wanting her parents to announce the engagement, the announcement may be made impersonally by the girl's parents, or not living, the announcement may be made by her guardian or one of her close relatives.

In addition to a public announcement in the newspaper, the girl may want to announce the engagement at a private party.

The party should be given by the girl's parents or close relative and the guest list should include both the boy's and girl's parents, close relatives and friends of the boy and girl and their parents.

Films Shown At Club Meet

TUTTLE—Two films on canvas were shown at a recent meeting of the Tuttle W Club at the home of Mrs. Greta Graves.

Mrs. B. S. Sickett, Gooding showed the film which was arranged for the club by Mrs. Leland Maude and Mrs. Leland Brooks.

The group discussed making the young men in the Gooding Tuberculosis Hospital and the club's birthday anniversary dinner.

Mrs. Earl Fish, Gooding, was the co-hostess and Mrs. Earl Lohker, Gooding, and Mrs. Larry Graves and Mrs. Frank boy's family or the boy and Graves, both Bliss, were guests.

There are certain cases where a public announcement if the wedding is to be a very quiet one of either the girl's or boy's parents is very ill, or if the wedding is shortly after the death of a close relative, an announcement is out of order.

The announcement usually is made three or four months before the wedding, although an exact date need not have been chosen.

It usually is made no later than six weeks before the wedding unless the young man is in the armed services and the change in the wedding date is likely at the last minute.

The announcement almost always is made by the girl's family and never comes from the boy's family or the boy and Graves, both Bliss, were guests.

Marriage—Is It Bliss Or Business? It All Depends On Point Of View

To young people in love, marriage means glamor, romance and living happily ever after. To the Census Bureau of the U. S. Department of Commerce, marriage means statistics.

The Census Bureau makes periodic checks on the marital status of the population, size of families and such other things as the number of men versus the number of women.

In a recent study, the Census Bureau found that the excess of females over males continued to rise during the 1950's. In 1950, for example, midway through the decade, there were only 82 men for every 100 females and in 1959 there were 81 men for every 100 females.

In the country as a whole there were 2.8 million more women than men in 1959, with the gap in numbers between males and females greatest among those 20 years and over because the increase in life expectancy has been greater for women than for men.

Hospital Gowns Made By Valley Church Women

HAZELTON — Three gowns were made toward the quota of five by the members of the United Presbyterian Women's group at a meeting held at the Presbyterian Church.

These gowns will be used in hospitals.

Mrs. Gertrude Detweiler gave the opening devotional service and Mrs. Walter Shouse gave a report on the new study book, "How In The World."

It was reported that the World Wide Clothing truck will be at the church May 23 to pick up clothing left there.

The group decided to furnish refreshments the first week of vacation Bible school to be held on June 5 through 16. The Eden unit will furnish them the second week. Members made the menu for the Lions Ladies Night to be held Tuesday.

The next meeting is May 19 at the home of Mrs. Claude Bernard.

Among those 75 years and older, 71 per cent of the women and only 34 per cent of the men are widowed.

The Census Bureau also had some heartening news for parents who are worried about teenage marriages has slowed down. In 1950, half the women had married by the time they were 20.3 years old. The median age declined ever further to 20.1 years in 1956.

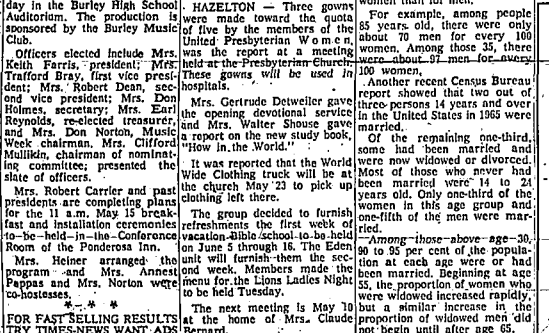

A gradual rise followed, however, with a 20.3-year age median in 1960 and a median of 20.6 years in 1965.

Another recent Census Bureau report showed that two out of three persons 14 years and over in the United States in 1965 were married.

Of the remaining one-third, some had been married and were now widowed or divorced. Most of those who never had been married were 14 to 24 years old. Only one-third of the women in this age group and one-fifth of the men were married.

Among those above age 30, 50 to 95 per cent of the population at each age were or had been married. Beginning at age 35, the proportion of women who were widowed increased rapidly, but a similar increase in the proportion of widowed men did not begin until after age 65.

Twin Falls Has Its First Wedding Center

Weddings are traditionally supposed to be beautiful events, all satin and lace, and Edna Pack and Mrs. Ivan (Dauna V.) Alfred have kept that tradition in mind in designing and decorating one of Twin Falls' newest and most needed businesses. The Carillon wedding center.

Last year 648 marriage licenses were issued in Twin Falls County. 228 of those licenses to out-of-state people. Most of these out-of-staters were presumably married in the drab justice of the peace's office — not a very romantic way for 400 young people to start married life.

This is just one of the reasons Mrs. Pack and her daughter have opened the Carillon. They have completely renovated the inside of the Grace Baptist Church at 250 Third Ave. N.

Most of the work was done by the two women with the aid of Mr. Alfred and several friends.

Much major work has been done to the old building and professionals have handled those duties. The building has acquired a new furnace system, plumbing, air conditioning, new electrical system and carpeting throughout.

The transformation of the two women have wrought since they began work about three months ago is remarkable and beautiful. The upstairs has been done in white with gold accents. Furniture was designed by the two women and follows the motif of the decoration. Doves, one of the symbols of love, fly from the ceiling on strings.

The downstairs is done in dark green and wood paneling. Part of the walls are covered with the same cut velvet green material as the curtains are made of. The two women have made all the curtains displayed so effectively throughout the building.

In fact, there isn't too much they haven't done. They knocked out the wall between the two rooms. This project was for the sake of a gift display table. Previously the upper deck, about an eighth the size of the main floor, had been used for a Sunday School classroom. Mrs. Alfred and her mother thought the area would make an ideal display area, but didn't want it shut off by a wall.

So, the two very fashionable and ladylike women tore into the wall and got their aim accomplished, just as they have throughout the building.

Mrs. Pack, who was in real estate in Utah before coming to Twin Falls, said the center was opened in Twin Falls because there was such a need for this type of facility. "Being in real estate, she said, "I knew a good thing when I saw one."

The good thing has been getting better. "After the center work began in February, and the services offered are nearly unlimited.

The "one-stop" wedding center has room for two functions to be held at a time, can accommodate about 300-400 people in an evening. It is equipped with two kitchens. Mrs. Pack said receptions can be held in the center or they will cater food at other locations. All wedding specialties, including cakes, punch, etc., will be available at the building.

Both retail sales and rental of gowns, dinner jackets, floral arrangements, and nearly any-

ARRANGING FOR FLOWERS for a wedding with Mrs. Julie Filmore, right, are Fontella Hargraves and her mother, Mrs. Arthur Hargraves, Twin Falls. Fontella was married Thursday to Dave Erb, Buhl.

Decorate With Ideas Instead Of Income

The young bride starting out to buy furniture rapidly finds she must substitute ingenuity for income if she wants to fill her home without emptying the family budget.

No matter how large or small an area the bride is furnishing, no matter what size her pocket book, the first rule is always the same: plan first, buy later. After the young couple have selected their home, be it a house or an apartment, they should get a complete floor plan, have several copies made and take at least one copy with them every time they shop penning in items they buy.

It also is a good idea for the bride and groom to sit down and discuss their individual likes and dislikes in furniture. He may like early American while she is not comfortable in anything but Danish modern.

Talking these preferences over ahead of time saves arguments in the furniture store and allows the two to compromise—an early American bedroom set with a Danish modern dining room, for example.

The newlyweds also should decide what purposes they want their furniture to serve. They should plan a lot of entertaining at home and are most of their parties casual or formal.

Each bride and groom need a private area for study or work at home? How long do they expect the furniture to last? Would they rather get a few very good pieces which will last them most of their lifetime or would they prefer to get more inexpensive furniture now with an eye to replacing it in a few years?

Finishing touches to the furniture should take careful stock of what wedding presents they have received or would like to receive. It may seem mercenary to count presents, but it is only practical to avoid duplication in buying.

A Buying Plan
After all these things are decided, the young couple is ready to begin shopping.

The bride and groom should first study various model apartments and furniture store displays, paying careful attention to color schemes and accessories. One thing to remember is that a standard furniture arrangement into an individual living area.

They should plan to buy the most expensive item first, then match the rest of the furniture to it. Usually this item will be either a rug or sofa.

They should study a few of the kinds of carpeting, wall-to-wall carpets, wall-to-wall and area rugs. Then they should decide which will best fit their needs. Wool may last longer, but synthetics are easier to clean. Wall-to-wall carpeting looks elegant, but is more expensive than rugs and is difficult to move.

If the bride and groom expect to move several times in the first few years of marriage, they would be wise to avoid wall-to-wall carpeting which will fit only one apartment.

If the bride and groom choose the rug first, they should obtain a sample of the carpeting to use for matching colors. They select the sofa first, they should get a sample of the cover material.

The young couple also should not be afraid to mix styles in furniture. The tastefully buying a complete set—sofa, chairs, lamps and tables—in one. Matching or complementary colors will draw the room together even if the furniture is not part of a set and will look individual.

Computers Taking Over For Cupid In Matrimony

BY LOUISE LEVITT
Associated Press Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — Stephanie Strong, 20, a receptionist for a veterinarian was single.

She was John Linakis, 24, a systems analyst.

Each of them decided to apply for advice to "Project TACT," a program which matches people by computer.

Stephanie got a list of seven boys' names. Fourth on John's list was Stephanie.

"Everything worked out very well," says John a dark-haired serious young man.

John was everything I asked for, chimed in Stephanie, a brunette who gleams shyly at every young man.

John and Stephanie are only two of thousands of young single people who, finding it hard to meet people of the opposite sex, fill out questionnaires and mail them to firms which match people by computer.

"I had some difficulty with blind dates," John says explaining why he tried TACT, which stands for Technical Automated Compatibility Testing. Computer dates are like "qualified" blind dates.

"They're tailor made," John says. "I got 10 names at $8 a computer." The boy and girl who participated got a list of names, addresses and phone numbers.

Questionnaire topics include appearance, religious beliefs, educational and family background and social interests.

Not at all says Stephanie. "I checked out on their questionnaires. They both like theater, reading, the casual life and sailing."

Doesn't the computer take the romance out of dating? "All the computer does is introduce two people and after that it's just as any other sort of dating pattern."

John points out there would be other differences, however. "It's like having a computer for a thing sort of monochromatic."

"I feel too that attendants should have the same kind of bridal bouquet design as the bride whether it is the cascade style — with a spray from the center of the bouquet; colonial, the round nose — gay type of bouquet; or crescent — sort of a quarter-moon with a long garland to the side."

White doesn't care much for nosegay type bouquets, the colonial style. He thinks they're too still looking, unless carried with a ballerina-length dress.

But if a bride has a cathedral and bridesmaids' another, many people reverse colors for bouquets. I prefer to keep everything sort of monochromatic.

The Bureau also says that by age 25 most adults have established their own households and throughout the country most people are either married household heads or wives. Even the elderly continued to head their own homes after they were widowed.

Cost Of Marriage: Budgets For Weddings

The girl who thinks a budget is something she will have to worry about only after she is married is in for a rude awakening when she starts making plans for her wedding.

Traditionally, it is the bride and her family who must bear the burden of most of the expenses of the wedding and the reception with costs ranging from a few hundred dollars to $10,000 and up. The average formal wedding costs about $1,000.

What does the bride, or her family, have to pay for?

Her expenses include her personal trousseau, her household trousseau, bridal clothes, the ceremony with organist's fee and decorations plus church rental, the reception and transportation for members of the wedding party to and from the church.

The groom pays the clergyman's fee and provides corsages for the mothers, bridesmaids and groomsmen and boutonnières for the ushers. He also, of course, pays for the honeymoon.

Before the wedding itself, the groom must worry about the engagement and wedding rings, the marriage license, the bachelor party and gifts for the bride, best man and ushers and his own clothes.

It is always a good idea to have a rough estimate of what per cent of the total budget will be spent on which items. Here are some typical budgets, for different size weddings:

(friends' cars)	—
Ceremony	3 per cent
Reception (at home)	25 per cent
Invitations, announcements, etc.	5 per cent
Photographs	7 per cent
Presents, etc.	5 per cent
Parents outfits	5 per cent
For a $5,000 wedding:
Personal trousseau	15 per cent
Household trousseau	10 per cent
Bridal attire	10 per cent
Transportation	5 per cent
Ceremony	6 per cent
Reception	35 per cent
Invitations, announcements, etc.	5 per cent
Photographs	7 per cent
Presents, etc.	5 per cent
Parents outfits	5 per cent

Households

The number of households in the United States increased at the rate of 800,000 per year during the first half of this decade, the Census Bureau reports.

Most of these households had both husband and wife present. Of the 57.3 million households in the nation in 1965, the Bureau says, 41.8 had a head of the household and a wife present.

There were 6 million households with other kinds of families and $5 million households in which the head of the house had no family present, but lived alone or with people not related to him.

Wedding Gift For Bride Tradition

With all the other things on his mind, a groom is likely to forget that it has become traditional to give the bride a wedding gift.

The top favorite for years has been the string of pearls the bride wears on her wedding day. But with wedding gowns becoming less formal, semi-precious stones set in simple settings and strung on fine gold chains have been selected by some bridegrooms, and these look well with formal or informal wedding gowns.

Some grooms make a matched wedding and engagement ring set their wedding gift, although the ceremony may be performed with a simple gold ring.

Watches rank on "the gift list as necklace sets, from diamonds to well as matching earrings and costume pieces.

DEAR ABBY: Designers seem determined that men shall wear miniskirts. O. K. But that brings up lots of problems. While I came from a long line of belt wearers, I haven't had much practice with that sort of thing. If men skirt-wearers abide by the Scottish underwear customs described by my late great-grandfather, we should have problems indeed. Namely, how can we remember to hold our knees together? When women stare should we call a policeman? What if they whistle? Is it appropriate for a man to throw a modesty rock across his knees while riding on a bus? And lastly, Abby, should we shave our legs? ROBERT McMORRIS, Omaha

DEAR MAC: If menfolk take to wearing miniskirts, they'll have to look out for themselves — same as womenfolk do. I don't recommend shaving the legs, however. That's practically the only way left to tell some of the boys from this is for "shocked" with the new carpet. He must not have been a telephone major or he would know that touching wood just prior to the kiss would prevent the shock of static electricity. It's much simpler than treating the carpet or installing a humidifier. E. K. M., DEXTER, N.M.

DEAR E. K. M.: Static electricity or no static electricity, it's always a good idea to touch wood before kissing.

DEAR ABBY: I have been courting a 28-year-old divorcee who has 5 boys between the ages of 2 and 8. I am 48 and enjoy excellent health. This

Good Planning Leads To Wedding Success

A prospective bride may read and reread lists of things necessary for a successful wedding. But she should then ask herself what is necessary for her wedding to be successful.

The truth is that no bride needs a stage managed wedding to be "happy" if she loves the groom.

A girl with enough time to plan a wedding usually will not be content to marry in a judge's chambers or at a city hall. She will want something more memorable than that. But she doesn't need to spend every cent she can muster up to have a large wedding with lots of guests she has never seen before and may never see again.

The wedding need consist of no more than:

1. The ceremony.
2. Male relative or friend to give away the bride.
3. Two witnesses.
4. A ring.
5. Flowers and/or a prayer book.
6. A reception of some sort with a wedding cake.

A great many small weddings take place every year and many of these weddings sparkle because of their sheer simplicity. A bride may wear white and wear a veil and be married in a church without all the fanfare associated with a church wedding.
