Vandals In Five States Zero In On Truckers

By ROBERT A. DOBKIN
PITTSBURGH (AP) — A truck driver was killed by a rock Saturday as snipers and vandals zeroed in on trucks in five states, shattering the relative calm of the past two days in the steel haulers' rebellion.

Police Battalion in East Pennsylvania were ordered to march in the troubled western part of the state. The governor's office said the action didn't constitute a call-up, but interpreted it as a psychological move to stem the violence and quiet the fears of highway travelers.

Steel firms have been forced to cut production, workers have been laid off and construction in many areas has been crimped.

The Pennsylvania Mines Department said coal mines operated by the steel producers face a possible shutdown. A spokesman said delivery of rock dust used to avert coal dust explosions has been hampered by the strikers, severely limiting the supply.

Trucking executives in the Pittsburgh area have agreed to enforce federal regulations granting pay for wait time—a chief issue in the strike. Current Interstate Commerce Commission tariff schedules in the area allow $4 after two hours. The drivers want $15 after two hours.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Senate Majority Leader Mike Mansfield challenged the Soviet Union Saturday to offer a resolution in the U.N. Security Council to put that body on record in favor of a halt in the U.S. bombing of North Vietnam.

The Montana Democrat addressed his statement principally to Moscow but suggested that this step might be taken by any Security Council member that feels cessation of the bombing is an essential prelude to negotiations for ending the Southeast Asian war.

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Johnson said Saturday night next year's election campaign "will be a testing time for America," giving voters a choice between progress under the Democrats or abandonment of national hopes "in a shroud of inaction and reaction."

PREPARING TO DEPART to pick up two survivors of a simulated airplane crash Saturday is Lt. Col. Dan Chessman, Bonners Ferry, left. Lt. Col. Arnie Oslund, right, also participated in the mock search and rescue mission staged by the Idaho Wing of the Civil Air Patrol. Traveling with Col. Chessman to the "crash" site at Murphy Hot Springs landing strip was Lt. Col. Jack Voelker, USAF. The Air Force is evaluating the effectiveness of the CAP as a search and rescue organization. Sunday mock radioactive fallout will hit the Magic Valley for the second day of the CAP maneuvers.

Air Force Is Evaluating CAP Effectiveness Here

By RUTH KOONCE MILLER
Times-News Staff Writer
The United States Air Force was judging the effectiveness of the Idaho Wing of the Civil Air Patrol this weekend as complicated search and rescue missions were being conducted out of the Twin Falls Municipal Airport.

Saturday the group successfully located a "downed" plane and its two "survivors" and Sunday a mock nuclear blast, with accompanying radio active fallout, will be set off.

Mr. Barry said the "plane" also was simulated, but the phony craft appeared to have attempted a landing at the strip and nosed into some brush at the end of the runway, knocking a wing loose.

According to the mission procedure simulated by the CAP, a man took off from the Salt Lake City Airport at 3 p.m. Friday, en route to Boise.

Simulated weather conditions were low cloud ceilings and scattered rain over the mountain, although in reality, the CAP had a bright, sunny day for its practice.

Another plane, a Stinson Reliance, built in about 1940, was dispatched to bring back "Survivors."

Registration For City Election Still Light

By BONNIE BAIRD JONES
Times-News Staff Writer
More than 6,500 persons who are otherwise eligible to vote in the Nov. 7 Twin Falls municipal election are not currently registered for the election.

Two years ago there were only five candidates seeking the four offices and very few new registrations were received.

Residency requirements for a municipal election, she said, include six months in Idaho and three months in Twin Falls.

LBJ Says '68 Election Campaign Will Be 'Test'

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Johnson said Saturday night next year's election campaign "will be a testing time for America," giving voters a choice between progress under the Democrats or abandonment of national hopes "in a shroud of inaction and reaction."

WASHINGTON (AP) — House members who have voted twice in recent weeks for curbs on federal spending get another chance this week when they consider a multibillion-dollar pay increase for federal employees.

His remarks were prepared for a $1,000-a-couple dinner-dance designed to raise money for the Democratic party.

And although there is little likelihood of action soon on President Johnson's tax increase proposal, members will vote on what Rep. H. R. Gross, R-Iowa, calls a "stamp tax" in the form of increases for all classes of postal rates.

Conceding that he faces mounting difficulties—and dwindling popularity in public opinion polls, the President said: "We can take the easy road now, denying our responsibilities, hoping that a rise in our polls will compensate for what we ought to have done for our country."

The two proposals are combined in a bill that comes up for House debate Tuesday, with final action scheduled Wednesday.

Johnsons said there are plenty of suggestions on how to get out of foreign and domestic troubles "cheaply and fast" but he said most of them boil down to irresponsibility.

Secretary of Defense Robert S. McNamara next day was the first to publicly announce a response. He said the Pentagon would refrain from commitments on all future military construction projects not necessary for the Vietnam war effort.

Junior Ski Champ Survives Plane Crash

THE WINGS of this Taylorcraft two-place plane which crashed early Friday morning at the Ketchum Airstrip came to rest about 30 feet from the main section of the airplane, on either side. The airplane, piloted by 16-year-old Pat Simpson, pivoted completely around as it nosed into the ground. Simpson said frost formed on the wings and the plane stalled.

Jerome Man Will Head Association

KETCHUM — The Junior National Ski Champion received slight leg injuries in a Friday morning plane crash here, but not serious enough to hamper his skiing this winter.

Pat Simpson, 16, son of Mr. and Mrs. Jack Simpson of Ketchum, was alone in the Taylorcraft two-place plane when it took off from the Ketchum airport and then fell some 50 feet back to the runway.

The plane, owned by the Simpson family, apparently stalled because of ice on the wings. Young Simpson said he noticed the ice as he took off on his way to Hailey High School for classes, but did not realize the potential danger.

It took the young ski champion about five minutes to get free of the wreckage of the plane.

He had to remove his shoes to free his legs which were entangled in the wreckage.

Young Simpson has a student pilot license, which allows flying alone.

The wings have been removed from the plane so it can be taken by trailer to Hailey where the family hopes it can be rebuilt.

Idaho State Patrolman Larry Platt investigated the 7:30 a.m. mishap.

JEROME — Leon C. Felder, administrator of St. Benedict's hospital, will be installed as president of the Idaho Hospital Association during the group's annual convention in Sun Valley, Oct. 7-11.

Felder is North Side district Boy Scout chairman, a director of the Jerome Chamber of Commerce and a member of the Jerome Rotary Club.

Speakers at the convention include Roy Neal, NBC news correspondent, H. Warren White, manager of management service division for Ernst and Ernst, Los Angeles, Calif., Clifton H. Linville, administrator of Fresno Community Hospital, Dr. E. Dwight Barnett, coordinator for the Western Center for Continuing Hospital Education, University of California at Berkeley, O. Ray Hurst, executive director of the Texas Hospital Association, and Dr. David B. Wilson, president of the American Hospital Association.

Congressmen James McClure and George Hansen and Sen. Len B. Jordan are members of a special panel dealing with national and international issues.

Felder will be installed as president at the delegate assembly on Oct. 10.

More than 600 persons from throughout the state will attend the convention.

Two Candidates Have Filed Petitions For Four-Year Terms On Buhl Council

BUHL — Dave Munroe and Joe Fehrenbacher announced their intentions this week, to seek election as council members in the city of Buhl at election time Nov. 7. Incumbent members of the council, Howard Hopkins and Del Wuebbenhorst, announced that they did not intend to seek reelection to the posts. Both terms of office are four years each.

Munroe is a salesman for Magic Valley Motors and was awarded the Jaycee Distinguished Service Award in 1966. He is a member of the Rotary Club and has been active in the Jaycees.

Fehrenbacher is field superintendent for the Green Giant Co. and has been a resident of Buhl for more than 20 years. He is an active member of the Lions Club.

At this time no nominating petitions for the office of mayor of Buhl have been from the city clerk's office. Deadline for nomination petitions for both mayor and council members is 5 p.m. on Monday, Oct. 9.

The city council accepted the resignation of Mayor Reed Maughan effective Jan. 3, 1968.

Holdover members of the council are Dr. Myron Thompson and George Harvey.

Registration of voters for the city election on Nov. 7 is now under way and will continue until the evening of Saturday, Nov. 4. Only the signatures of registered voters are accepted on the nominating petitions, and 31 names are required on each petition.

Election officials for both precincts one and two have been appointed. Jackie Van Ostran and Joanne Martin are clerks in precinct one with Emily Kramer, Leona J. Parnell and Betty McMurdie, judges, and Kenneth Curtis, constable.

Clerks for precinct two are Grace Stample and Maxine Van Ostran. Daisy Holthe, Bernice Topy and Laura Aland are judges. Rev. H. B. Thomas is the constable.

In other business, the council authorized Police Judge Karl Lewis and Richard Frazier, chief of police, to attend the governor's state-wide safety conference in Boise Oct. 5 and 6. Lewis and Frazier will be granted expenses for attending.

Farmers Realty was authorized to provide an insurance policy with blanket coverage for fire, extended coverage and vandalism. The policy is retroactive to Oct. 1.

Five ordinances were passed by the council. Four of the ordinances are "housekeeping" ordinances made necessary by the passage of the new municipal code by the 1967 legislature. These ordinances deal with uniform election laws, setting up the qualifications for election to city office, division of the city into election precincts, designation of the local paper as official publication for the city of Buhl and designation of the Idaho First National Bank and the Farmers National Bank as the official depositories of the city for city monies.

A revised curfew ordinance for the city of Buhl was passed by the council with the provision now that any child or children under the age of 15 cannot be in public in the city of Buhl between the hours of 10 p.m. and 6 a.m. and in addition any child or children over the age of 14 and under the age of 18 is prohibited from being in a public place in the city of Buhl between the hours of 11 p.m. and 6 a.m. Sunday night through Thursday night and between the hours of 12 midnight and 6 a.m. on Friday and Saturday nights.

100 Idaho Well Drillers Are Licensed

More than 100 well drillers in Idaho have passed all qualifications set forth by the last state legislative session and have either secured a license or have become qualified to work as operators under other licenses.

Many drillers in the state, however, have not met requirements, and, according to the Department of Reclamation, to drill without a license is a misdemeanor.

Jack Barnett of the Department of Reclamation, said the license requirement was established to insure that each person drilling a well into ground water resource is qualified so that the water resources of the state can be protected against waste or contamination.

Building permits were issued to E. E. Butler, 726 Broadway N., reshingle roof, $200; Gordon Van Ostran, 324 Broadway N., reshingle roof and install Masonite siding on walls, $500; Roy McMurdie, 710 Poplar, construct frame tool shed in rear yard, $25; Jake Surber, 1210 Maple, install Masonite siding, $200; Les Hoobing, 617 13th N., construct carport, $150; Charles Zaruba, 706 12th, reshingle part of roof, $135; Frank Quigley, 201 9th, reshingle roof, remodel windows and remodel interior of the house, $1,500; West End Realty, install electric sign, $78; The Merc, 1140 Main, install metal sign, $500, and Lawrence W. Liberal Makeup Of Group To Study Riots Scorned

Editor, Times-News: Our pious President has, with great fanfare, appointed a "Blue Ribbon Commission" to investigate this country's urban riots and their causes.

The makeup of the commission itself is a "riot"—Gov. Otto Kerner, liberal Democrat, and Mayor John V. Lindsay, super liberal "Republican." These men represent the Liberal Establishment that has been in control of this country for 35 years. New Deal, Fair Deal, New Frontier, or Great Society, the names change but the song is always the same.

Money, federal money, solves all problems. The result has been a period when campaign promises were made to be broken when wars prevail, when taxes soar, when inflation hits hard and ever harder at those very people these politicians pretend to help.

How do these riots start? Possibly the permissive and provocative statements of men in high office lay the groundwork. Does a man who aspired to the presidency in 1964 (LBJ) making a statement "I will take from the haves and give to the have-nots" really differ greatly from the looters who take from the stores for their own gain?

Could it be that riots are encouraged when the vice president of the United States shrilled that if he lived in ghetto conditions he would be inclined to riot too? (Cleveland, 1966). Maybe they were inspired when a governor (Brown) stood on university steps, and mentioned what a great sight it was to see demonstrations.

Could they come about in part by junior senators who say its great to supply blood to the Viet Cong? Perhaps they are helped along by Supreme Court justices who no longer follow the rules of law (constitutional) but the rule of man (personal ideology).

Are they aided by men who make alibi after alibi for looters, arsonists and murderers, saying "society" (that nebulous scape goat) is to blame for all they do?

This nation has experienced over the past several years demonstrations, anti-war rallies, lie-ins, sit-ins, and urban riots which are all traceable to a massive breakdown in respect for law and order, personal property, personal freedom and morality.

When a country is ruled, not governed by power hungry men, when these men set standards which lead us to an abyss of anarchy, will the country survive as a civilized Republic?

PAUL VICTOR (Twin Falls)

Woman Scores British Method Of Education

Editor, Times-News: Seems Queen Elizabeth has a great problem. She just doesn't have storage room for all the jewel-encrusted swords, canes, etc., that have been brought by royal visitors.

Well, perhaps she could turn them in for cash and pay the U.S. part of the money they owe us. Those old smelly palaces, castles and such should be remodeled and made into hospitals and schools for the common people. Their tax money was used to build them.

Higher education in England is just for the rich who send their kids to private schools. There is some talk of a system such as we have for educating all classes but the millionaires over there are fighting it. They do not want every one prosperous and educated. They want a class of poor people. Therefore they can have lots of servants and nannies, as they call those poor women who bring up their spoiled kids for them.

When people become well-educated they will not do that kind of work. When the Paytons (my daughter and her husband) were over there three years ago they saw an awful lot of poor people on the streets of London.

England, like most all other nations, seems to have a lot of land just for fox hunting and such to amuse the rich. This ices voice it through vote and not over a cup of coffee or a glass of beer (crying beer that is) after the election.

By not registering you only aid the machine (if one exists). If you are registered and you vote you can make sure that it doesn't exist or at least pour a little sand in the bearings.

Your license to gripe is—register, vote, then you have every right to gripe if it goes opposite of what you wish. By the time this comes out, I will have my right to gripe. Will you? RAY T. CRANDAL (Twin Falls)

Critical Ground Water Area To Be Topic At Meet

RAFT RIVER—R. Keith Higginson, state reclamation engineer, will conduct a meeting at 7:30 p.m. Thursday on the Raft River Critical Ground Water Area.

Because of declining ground water levels, which appeared to be the result of well development in the area, the Raft River drainage was closed to additional well permits in July, 1963, by the then State Reclamation Engineer Carl E. Tappan.

Since then most outstanding permits allowing for drilling have been completed and an extensive investigation of the water resources in the area was made by the U.S. Geological Survey in financial cooperation with the Idaho Department of Reclamation.

Ike Supports Tax Increase, Spending Cut

WASHINGTON (AP) — Former President Dwight D. Eisenhower said today the nation needs both a tax increase and a cut in spending.

Looking well and declaring he felt fine, the former president left Walter Reed Army Hospital after an overnight stay for a routine physical checkup.

Newsman asked him his opinion of the current disagreement between President Johnson, who wants Congress to impose 10 percent income tax surcharge, and Chairman Wilbur Mills, D-Ark., of the House Ways and Means Committee, who insists spending must be cut first.

"They're both right," Eisenhower replied, saying both the higher tax and the reduced spending are needed.

As to which should be decided first, Eisenhower noted that Johnson and Mills are both of

Writer Urges Voters To Be Sure They Are Registered

Editor, Times-News: Can it be possible that only one out of every eight prospective voters in Twin Falls has enough civic pride to get out and register for the city elections?

I can't believe it is possible. I have heard such remarks as "what good will it do, we can't beat the machine," or "why look what happened to our petitions."

The answer to number one is people build machines, machines don't build people. The answer to number two is—your petition was beaten down because the signers were not registered voters.

Our city fathers are misusing the word qualified and, whether it is intentional or not, misleading the public. A voter is not qualified in this city until he is registered, yet our Sunday, October first, Times-News says "out of 8,000 qualified voters only about a thousand are registered."

What it should have stated is "that out of 8,000 prospective voters only about 1,000 have become qualified by registering."

Don't make the mistake of assuming that you are registered. Double check. Don't wait until you are turned back at the polls. Minority voting power builds corruption. You can be very sure that anyone wanting to push anything against the good of the majority will get that vote in. That is how machines are built. If you are against certain pol-

GOP Doves Quietly Work For Hand In Writing Policy

By JACK BELL
WASHINGTON (AP)—Republicans who disagree with President Johnson's Vietnam policies are quietly campaigning for representation on the party's 1968 platform committee to have a hand in writing the foreign-policy plank. Senate Republican Leader Everett M. Dirksen of Illinois is expected to be handed the post of temporary chairman of the platform group by the party's national chairman, Ray Bliss. No temporary occupant of the job has failed to be elected by the committee as permanent chairman in modern times. Dirksen supports Johnson's basic Vietnam policies and recently criticized Republican colleagues for suggesting bombing pauses and other changes in the course of the conflict. GOP war critics like Sens. Mark O. Hatfield of Oregon, Charles H. Percy of Illinois, Clifford P. Case of New Jersey, and John Sherman Cooper and Thruston B. Morton of Kentucky don't expect Dirksen to carry his support of the President to the point of any me-too endorsement in the platform of Johnson's Vietnam course. But some of them would like to be around when and if Dirksen names a subcommittee to deal with foreign-policy questions. They have been talking among themselves of suggesting Morton, a former party national chairman, as head of any such subcommittee. Morton was one of those criticized by Dirksen for advocating an end to U.S. search-and-destroy tactics and a concentration on defense of populations and port areas in South Vietnam. Morton and Dirksen are old allies ever though they differ now over Vietnam. They are strong party men and no one-

Your Spine and Your Health

By Dr. Ludwig C. Landwehr
OBEISITY frequently is a result of glandular malfunction. Most cases of obesity rest upon a basis of disturbed metabolism. This may take the form of improper digestion, in such cases the digestive system fails in its function of breaking down the food, or there can be glandular malfunction—an insufficient thyroid secretion of thyroxin, the substance that burns fat and sugars, to convert them into energy. Sometimes the pituitary gland is at fault. Improper functioning of the digestive system, of the thyroid gland or of the pituitary glands all have a common cause, of which the original trouble can be traced to some impingement of the nerve supply to two or all of them. Your Doctor of Chiropractic directs his work to the restoration of a normal flow of vital energy over the nerves and gradually reverses the bodily metabolism. At the same time he will want to adjust the food intake. FOUND GUILTY
BLACKFOOT (AP)—After deliberating for 11 hours Friday night and into Saturday morning, a jury of six men and six women found a 27-year-old Pocatello man guilty of raping a 18-year-old girl on the Fort Hall Indian Reservation June 18. District Judge Paul Crane set sentencing date for Robert Wilson for Oct. 23 at 2 p.m. and ordered probation and parole officer Joe Spivey to conduct a pre-sentence investigation. The verdict came at the end of four days of proceedings. The jury was handed the case about 4:30 p.m. Friday.

ONE SENTENCED
BOISE (AP)—One of 12 young persons arrested Aug. 11 for alleged narcotics law violations by Ada County sheriff's officers was sentenced Friday to 30 days in jail and six months probation. Fourth District Judge Alfred C. Hagan sentenced Rod K. Samuelson, 19, Boise, after Samuelson pleaded guilty to a charge of illegal possession of a narcotic.

OBTAINS PETITION
BLACKFOOT (AP)—Ray Kesler, a Blackfoot motel owner and manager, became the seventh man to obtain a petition from the Blackfoot city clerk to file for candidacy on the city council.

Others who have obtained forms are incumbent councilman Austin Stover and Bud Joyner, Clarence Pack, Dr. J. O. Young, Dr. Jack Christ and Max Covington. The city clerk said Monday will be the final day for obtaining and filing petitions.

Eddy Gilmore, Prize Winning AP Writer, Dies In London

LONDON (AP)—Eddy Gilmore, a Pulitzer prize winning correspondent of The Associated Press who reported the wartime and postwar Stalin era in Russia, died of a heart attack Friday night at his home near London. He was 60.

Before and after his years in Russia, Gilmore was widely known for his witty news stories on the lighter side of life and even in Moscow he wrote with a lighter touch at times between the grimmer episodes. He had worked as usual in the London AP bureau Friday before going to his home in the English countryside at East Grinstead. He was stricken with a coronary thrombosis in the late evening. Gilmore is survived by his Russian-born wife, the former Tamara Chernashova; three daughters and a son. He was born in Selma, Ala., and christened Eddy Lanier King Gilmore, all of them family names. The southern accent stuck with him all his life. He was educated at Washington and Lee and Carnegie Tech and worked on the Atlanta Journal and the Washington Daily News before joining The Associated Press staff in Washington in 1935.

Gilmore was chief of the AP Moscow bureau in the darkest days of the Soviet defense against the invading Nazi armies of Hitler and remained in Moscow until after the death of Joseph Stalin in March 1953. He was elected mayor until Jan. 1 when the person elected on Nov. 7 will take office. Reappointed officers include Mrs. Martha Messenge, city clerk; Richard Smith, city attorney, and Welton Allen, treasurer. Under House Bill No. 3 as amended by the 39th session of the State Legislature, all villages with boards of trustees were required to appoint a president of the City Council, mayor and operate with a city council. City clerk, Martha Messenger, announced that there have been several petitions taken from the office for filing of the three city council seats that will be elected on Nov. 7, but none have been returned as yet. They must be returned by Oct. 10. The office of Mayor George Schrenk also will be up for election. Claude Vallet holds the only council post not up for election, while Earl Darrington and Myrl Riding have not announced their candidacy for office. Chester Behr is moving out of the Declo City and will resign his post in the near future.

HAMBURG, Germany (AP)—The Gideon Society is happy to report that about 400 Bibles are stolen each year from West German hotel rooms. "We're not at all sorry about that," a society spokesman said. "Indeed, it makes us quite happy. It means that 400 people a year are coming in touch with the Bible, probably for the first time." Jack Steneck, director of community mental health, said the first step in detection of children with apparent mental problems is for their parents to ask their family physician to check for such problems as hearing, vision or speech defects. Many of these perceptual difficulties now can be corrected surgically, Steneck said.

Chances Of Brilliant Person Being Confined In Mental Institution Slight

By ALLEN M. BAILEY
BOISE (AP)—There isn't much chance now that someone not needing treatment would find himself in a mental institution. But health authorities say that only comparatively recent safeguards prevent the situation. The question developed following the recent report that a patient at the Idaho State School and Hospital in Nampa has relatively high intelligence. The immediate reaction by many was one of shock that such a person could have been confined. Health authorities say the question isn't that simple. Intellectual brilliance is useless if physical or emotional problems prevent its application. The patient at Nampa is a deaf-mute, explained the hospital superintendent, Dr. John Marks. "The patient is in his mid-30s and has been in the institution since he was an infant. "Any individual who comes to the State Health Department as being possibly mentally retarded is given extensive and intensive evaluation," said Dr. Terrell O. Carver, state health administrator. He said the testing procedures developed in the past five years have made it possible to detect such problems, even among infants. These techniques would make it improbable that a person with high intelligence, but with some physical, emotional or environmental impairment, would be institutionalized for mental retardation. Many of these perceptual difficulties now can be corrected surgically, Steneck said. Once physical handicaps are ruled out, a variety of tests can be given to find out why a child is developing more slowly than he should — or not developing at all. For exceptionally bright youngsters, ordinary schoolwork may be boring, according to Steneck — they may do nothing in class and appear to be retarded. Another child may be "environmentally retarded," he said. In other words he appears to be underdeveloped mentally because of something in his surroundings. As an example, Steneck told of a young boy in southern Utah who was old enough to start school, but did not talk. Investigators could find no reason for the child's not learning to talk until a health worker spent a day in the child's home on an isolated farm. So much activity was going on that the child's parents seldom spoke. Only seven words were spoken during the day of investigation, Steneck said. The lack of communication convinced the child there was no need to talk. Other children may be tested for neurological problems, which are connected with the actual functioning of the child's brain and nervous system.

United Fund Helps Boy Scouts

Boy Scouting is dedicated to community betterment, and with this in mind people are working hard with the United Fund to help boys in Twin Falls during the coming year.

The Boy Scouts is just one agency of eight that will get some benefit from funds raised in this year's United Fund effort. The goal is $72,000.

Twin Falls scout officials said recently that because of the support of the United Fund, the Snake River Area Boy Scout Council has the ability to continue to expand its programs throughout the Twin Falls area.

On Oct. 17, every grade school in the area will hold a special night for scouting to give parents and boys a chance to become more informed on scouting programs and its purposes. The United Fund makes it possible, scout officials said.

Through this month, citizens will be contacted by members of the United Fund. The "fair share" plan will be explained.

TOURISTS COUNTED

LBJ Proclaims Day Of Prayer

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Johnson, proclaiming Wednesday, Oct. 18, as a national day of prayer, urged Americans today to pray for "the constancy to prevail in defense of freedom" and inspiration "to take the law into our hearts, not into our hands."

He suggested prayer and meditation at churches, in groups, and as individuals.

"Let each of us pray that God will endow us with the constancy to prevail in defense of freedom, and with the courage and resolution to preserve and extend his blessings of liberty," the proclamation stated.

Examinations Of Dam Sites Set Oct. 19

By The Associated Press
Examinations of three contract sites in the vast Libby Dam project by prospective bidders were scheduled for Oct. 19, the Corps of Engineers reported Friday.

And in a Missoula meeting, Phillip Cole, resident engineer with the corps, said that Thursday's suspension of civilian construction awards should not affect Libby Dam seriously.

"I don't foresee any delay to our overall completion date," Cole told the Montana Section of the American Society of Civil Engineers, "and because of the treaty with Canada, I don't think that the project will suffer any major effects from the cut-back."

The Libby Dam reservoir on the Kootenai River will extend 40 miles into Canada.

Petitions Taken Out At Rupert

RUPERT—Only two petitions have been taken out and only one of those filed, Mrs. Loretta Klingenberg, City Clerk, reported Thursday.

Incumbents Grover Newman and Clark-Cameron will be running unopposed unless action increases in the last days before the filing deadline.

Newman, a Minico High School teacher is seeking reelection to a four-year term. His petition has been filed.

A petition is out for Clark Cameron, who is finishing the four-year term of Wayne Hollenbeck.

Hollenbeck resigned when he was appointed public works administrator.

Mrs. Klingenberg noted that there were only 133 registered voters to date which is the result of the last election in which there was no competition either.

Trombley Denies Rumors Fire Was Unmanned When It Blew Up

COEUR D'ALENE, Idaho (AP)—Idaho State Land Commissioner Gordon Trombley denied rumors Saturday that the Sundance Mountain fire was unmanned when it blew up and raged out of control in North Idaho last month.

Legislative Council's interim forest and range study committee, Trombley said every agency and organization used all men and machinery available. He said he feels more revenue is needed to upgrade forest protection work.

of the Kaniku National Forest, said the Sundance Mountain fire could have been held down in size if the U.S. Forest Service had full command of the fire control work. The Priest Lake Timber Protective Association, he said, didn't have sufficient manpower or equipment to control fires the size of the Sundance Mountain blaze. The fire burned more than 58,000 acres. Lee L. White, president of the Priest Lake Timber Protective Association, listed three main problems of the "association" in meeting the serious fire situation the past summer. Most important, he said, was the lack of access roads to the fires, which started in the most inaccessible portion of the association's land. Another problem, he said, was the fires' resistance to control. He said the Trapper Peak fire, which burned some 18,000 acres, started in high, rocky country and that men had to walk to the fire and were not as valuable in combating them after the long trek. A third reason was the weather. He said winds changed direction several times in one day and downhill winds at night were severe. State Sen. R. H. Young, R-Nampa, chairman of the special committee, said testimony from the Saturday hearing will be used to develop a formula to deal more effectively with any future forest fires.

"This investigation is not a witch hunt," he said, "and the committee is not going to lay any blame or liability on anyone." Trombley said he hoped the committee's review of the action taken to fight the fires this year will lead to an improvement in fire fighting techniques.

Dam To Be Shut In Hells Canyon

HELLS CANYON—Idaho Power Co. announced Saturday that Hells Canyon Dam will start storing water in its reservoir this week, moving the huge project in North America's deepest gorge another step closer to its first production of electricity.

J. F. Emery, vice-president and general manager, said the water storage will begin about 7 a.m. Tuesday when gates are dropped to seal off a cavernous diversion tunnel that has carried the Snake River's entire flow around the project during construction.

The start-of-water storage, to be accomplished in two stages, will enable Idaho Power to begin mechanical tests on the project's first generating unit to go "on the line."

This unit, one of three designed to generate a total of 425,000 kilowatts of electricity, is expected to begin production early in November.

Emery said the first stage of water storage, requiring "about five days," will raise the reservoir to its halfway mark. The second stage will completely fill the reservoir about Nov. 1.

When it is full, the project's man-made lake will extend 23 miles up the rugged, scenic gorge to Oxbow Dam.

With the diversion tunnel's closing, Idaho Power also will start collecting migrant salmon and steelhead in a new, all-aluminum floating barge to be permanently located in the tailrace of the project's powerhouse.

The fish were collected during construction in temporary facilities at the mouth of the tunnel. Emery said the reservoir storage will be accomplished by a complex procedure of river control in which water will be held back upstream by Brownlee and Oxbow dams—the first two projects in Idaho Power's Hells Canyon development—beginning at 12:01 a.m. Tuesday.

The tunnel then will be partially blocked, starting the build-up of water but permitting a reduced flow of 5,000 cubic feet per second to pass downstream.

When the water in the reservoir reaches the dam's low-level sluiceways—a step estimated to take 24 hours—the tunnel will be completely sealed by the gates.

The flow of water downstream then will be returned to normal and pass the project through the sluiceways.

Emery said Idaho Power will drop leaflets from a low-flying helicopter Monday at remote ranches and fishing camps between Hells Canyon and Lewis, advising the occupants of the reduced river flow beginning the following day.

Channel Swimmer Arrives In N. Y.

NEW YORK (AP) — Linda McGill, 21-year-old Australian who set the women's record for swimming the English Channel last week, arrived Friday at Kennedy Airport for a two-week vacation.

"Right now I never want to see another channel again," she said.

During her nine-hour and 59-minute crossing, she said, her only sustenance was a soft drink and kangaroo-tail soup.

Miss McGill missed the men's channel record by 25 minutes in her swim from Cape Griz Nez, France to Dover, England, but she told newsmen she's not anxious to try and break it.

Air War Halts Expected In Coming Months

By JOHN T. WHEELER SAIGON (AP) — Both diplomatic and military sources here expect one and possibly several halts in the U.S. air war against North Vietnam in the coming months.

The chief reason seems to be, they say, that the allies can win a maximum number of points internationally at a minimum cost to the war effort.

Bad weather already has begun to cut back the number of missions against major targets in the North. The bad weather, which is spawned ironically from high pressure systems in Soviet Siberia and Red China, became far worse over the winter.

Military sources say both the Navy and Air Force presently are on maximum effort schedules to inflict as much damage as possible, especially on targets newly approved by President Johnson, before the clouds move in.

During the peak of the winter monsoon, bombing missions often are cut to 75 per cent of summer schedules. Most of the raids carried out then are directed at secondary targets.

President-elect Nguyen Van Thieu has promised to ask the United States to stop the air war for at least one week after his inauguration if he feels this could lead to opening peace negotiations with Hanoi. Thieu is expected to be installed as president early in November. Also traditionally there is a bombing halt and a military standdown for Christmas and the New Year, as well as for Vietnam's lunar new year.

There is some speculation that, in response to strong pressure on Washington for a major bombing pause which advocates say could create a climate favorable to negotiations, a prolonged halt may come this winter—one of several weeks or possibly longer.

During this period fresh diplomatic efforts could be carried out in neutral and Communist bloc capitals by the United States to get North Vietnam to the peace table. One argument is that a long pause would provide time to gauge North Vietnam's intentions, cover the traditional truce periods and satisfy world opinion with little military risk beyond that which would be caused by the weather.

Equitable Savings is opening four new offices in Idaho

A newcomer to Idaho? Hardly: Equitable's new Idaho offices in Boise, Pocatello, Idaho Falls and Twin Falls are an expansion of service that began in Boise City on January 19, 1897. On that date, Equitable Savings made its first loans in Idaho. When the Federal Savings and Loan Insurance Corporation was created in 1934, Equitable had active loans in 20 Idaho counties, containing 86 percent of Idaho's total population. Idaho's distinguished Senator William E. Borah was one of the first Equitable savers in 1897. Now there are over 85,000 Equitable savers in Idaho, Oregon, and Washington. Each of these savings accounts is safeguarded by Equitable's 76-year history of safety and sound money management. Savings are further protected by insured safety and the strength of $280 million in assets including more than $20 million in reserves. You are invited to open a savings account at any of the new Idaho offices. Earnings are attractive: 5.10% at maturity on One-Year Savings Certificates, $1,000 (minimum) or more in multiples of $100. 4.75% current annual rate on Passbook Savings, compounded semi-annually.

Fire Prevention Week Begins Throughout Magic Valley Today

Fire Prevention Week in every city in Magic Valley begins Sunday, area residents are reminded.

Twin Falls Fire Marshal Fred Higgins said talks are planned before civic and school groups during the coming week. Demonstrations on how fires start in business and the home will be given, and an outline on exit drills from the home will be offered.

Mr. Higgins said groups or individuals interested in touring fire facilities in Twin Falls should contact the Fire Department for arrangements.

He added that any group interested in having a fireman talk on fire prevention should contact him.

Fire Prevention Week is observed annually throughout the nation. It is to commemorate the great Chicago fire on Oct. 9 nearly 100 years ago in which an estimated $100 million in damage was done.

Mr. Higgins said fire prevention should be practiced throughout the year, but added that special emphasis is given the subject during Fire Prevention Week.

THIS METER MAID is used to checking nickles in Twin Falls parking meters, but here she is counting out the $33 she received in the Times-News Lucky License giveaway. She is Mrs. Lyle (Nancy) Trueblood, who works for the Twin Falls police force. She said part of the money she would use to buy breakfasts for the policemen who were on duty Friday morning and called her up before she got to work and informed her that she was the winner of $33.

Crater Lake Will Someday Spread Out

CORVALLIS (AP) — The deep, blue water of Crater Lake someday will be spread across a broad, shallow basin.

The lake is dying, along with 1,200 other Oregon lakes, says Dr. John Donaldson, an assistant professor in the Department of Fisheries and Wildlife at Oregon State University, Corvallis.

The lake won't be dead for another half million years, he said. Crater Lake, a national park in Southwest Oregon is 1,932 feet deep, the deepest in the United States, according to The World Almanac.

Donaldson spoke in a recent seminar series on water pollution at the university.

He said Crater Lake is lucky because access by man is limited.

"Each lake is dying at a different rate. Those lakes used by man in his effort to get rid of his wastes get older faster," Donaldson said.

He said recreation has the least damaging effect on water quality.

The more damaging uses are personal consumption, agriculture and industry.

Area Ford Dealers Have Month Supply

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — Ford dealers in Utah, southern Idaho and western Montana have a 40-day supply of 1967 and 1968 cars, despite the strike against Ford Motor Co., Inter-mountain district sales manager Kenneth O. Shrewsbury said Friday.

As the strike moved into its 30th day, Shrewsbury said the region's 102 dealers had 1,405 new cars in their showrooms. Only 426 of them are 1968 models, he added.

Shrewsbury said dealers in Idaho, from Boise to Idaho Falls, had 360 new cars left. In Utah there were 708 and in western Montana 268. This, he said, would be enough to last 40 more days. He was hopeful the strike would be over before then.

Cassia Voters To Decide On Need For School Bonds

 are for the bond election, Mr. Moore said.
 "There have been no 'no' votes at any meeting in which the bond election was considered," he said.

The need for the election, according to school board members and Mr. Moore, is an overcrowded situation in almost every school in the district. In 1957, there were 3,994 children enrolled in the district. This fall, 5,241 were registered—a 31 per cent increase in 10 years.

By 1976, an estimated 6,580 children will be enrolled.
 "We are very overcrowded right now," Mr. Moore said.

To compensate for the overcrowding in schools, officials included: Eliminating auditoriums to make classrooms in Southwest, Miller and Overland Grade Schools; eliminate the library to make a classroom at Dworshak Grade School; rent an additional room for the junior high school; purchase two barracks buildings for classrooms and a small industrial shop class, and transfer three sixth grade rooms to the junior high school.

There are also inadequate library, reading or other special facilities at schools in Malta, Declo and Oakley.

This reporter toured the Miller-Grade School, the junior-high in Burley and the grade school at Declo. The one at Declo reminds one of what buildings looked like near the turn of the century. It was built then and is still used.

To support it, large poles have been forced into the framework and joists underneath.

Recently, one large pole fell and nearly struck a group of children.

Fire escape ladders at the junior high school are dangerous.

Walking down them, Mr. Moore tripped, and if he had not been near the bottom rung could have been hurt seriously.

At Miller Grade School, children eat in the hallways during the lunch hour.

To help this situation, officials want to tear down the grade school at Declo, and replace it with a nine-room structure that is modern.

They also want an 18-room building in Burley and a new 500-student junior high school.

Other improvements, if the bond election is passed, include 10 new rooms at the Burley high school; three rooms at Declo High School, and three rooms at the Raft River High School, including provisions for a library.

Oakley High School also needs a library.
 To get the job done, officials said they have to pass a bond election for $2.5 million, which is just under the school district's bonding capacity. Right now, there are two bonds out from previous elections, with the total paid down to $949,000.

What will it cost the taxpayer?
 With the new tax equalization law passed by the 39th Legislature, the cost to a homeowner with property worth about $16,000 will be about $6.50 more annually. To the owner of a farm or business worth $56,000, the yearly cost will be about $22.65 more.

A man with a house worth about $18,000 paid $178 in taxes this year. Next fall, if the bond election is approved, his taxes should be about $185 a year.

A little less than half of that $185 goes to the school district.

Why a bond election? Why not plant facilities, the only other way to raise money for school improvements?

Mr. Moore said plant facilities could raise only $230,000 a year. It would take 10 years to raise the money needed, and part of that money would have to be spent for current school expenses.

The two bonds out now will be paid off in three years.

Mr. Wildman was asked if his being an executive with a savings and loan had anything to do with the bond election. "No" was the answer.

 He said his company would not bid on the bonds. Mr. Moore added that $2.5 million "is a lot of money for any one bank to bid on."

Getting back to Mrs. Whiteley's opposition to the bond election, she wonders why so much money is needed. School officials said that is what is needed to provide the proper classroom space for district children.

Other opposition seems to be that people in Burley don't want to have to pay for the education of children in Oakley or Declo, or any other town in the district. The same for Declo toward Oakley, or Malta toward Oakley.

Former member of the school board Joe Gillett, Declo, said little towns "could not operate properly on their own. If we had a school district just for Declo, we would have to operate with reduced income. And if we had to do that, it would be hard."

Mr. Moore said Cassia County school children are offered a good education because all the towns and cities are combined into one large district that can afford to spend more on education.

If voters approve the bond election Tuesday, they will not be taxed for it until the fall of 1968.

To vote, people must be over 21, a citizen of the United States, a property taxpayer in Cassia County School District and a resident of Idaho and Cassia County.

Polling places are at Burley High School; Burley Junior High; Almo Grade School; Albin-Grade School; Southwest Grade School; Bean Grower's Warehouse at Milner; Raft-River High School; Declo High School and Oakley High School.

Voting will be from noon to 8 p.m. Tuesday.
 The election must pass by a two-thirds majority by those who vote.
 Mr. Moore said: "If the election does not pass we will just have to do the best we can with what we've got." He said the present situation exists "because voters have passed this problem by before."

IT COULD BE a mine, but it isn't. This tunnel is right under the Declo Grade School, and to prove it the principal, Kendall Daley, is seen here. Many log poles have been brought in to support a sagging structure. Once a large pole fell and almost hit a group of children. Youngsters are not allowed in this portion of the building, but Mr. Daley said some manage to slip in. Cassia County School District officials are asking situations like this be corrected with $2.5 million which could be raised if a school bond election is passed next Tuesday.

Burley Author Dedicates Novel To Forest Service

BURLEY — William R. Filler, Burley, has dedicated his first novel, "Where There's Smoke," to the Forest Service employees in Idaho.

Mr. Filler refers to his book as a "distinct pleasure to have written, rather than a painful effort," even though he has lost useful vision.

He spent 15 weeks at a blind rehabilitation center, discovering that writing would allow him to express his feelings to the people and the area he loves.

Mr. Filler is an avid fisherman and believes that one can "live and enjoy that living in Idaho." To him, Idaho is a "little corner of heaven; a part of our great nation."

"But apart from the commotion and turmoil and indifference of most cities I have lived in, the wealth here isn't in skyscrapers and marble halls, but it springs in eternal abundance from the rich soil and bountiful harvest. It's not New York City, it isn't Las Vegas and it isn't San Francisco. Idaho to me is all the beauty and grandeur our creator could endow," remarked Mr. Filler.

THEY KNOW THE ANSWER

The question—What fuel heats our school? The answer—Natural Gas!

Natural gas is used to heat many southern Idaho schools and public buildings because it offers so many sound advantages. Gas is dependable and economical. No delivery, storage or handling are required . . . and this versatile fuel moves silently underground to its destination. Gas heat is instantly responsive to sudden temperature changes which occur frequently during the fall and spring months.

Today, Intermountain Gas is supplying natural gas to 64,000 residential, commercial and industrial customers throughout southern Idaho at a cost equal to or below that of any other gas utility in the northwest.

Community Meet Held At Glens Ferry

GLENS FERRY—At a community committee meeting Thursday evening in the Glens Ferry City Hall it was decided to investigate the possibility of establishing a site for the proposed labor camp in a different location to that which has brought down the wrath of some Glens Ferry residents.

Ruth Sheaffer was chosen as spokesman for the committee, which represents the Lions Club, the Chamber of Commerce, the farmers initially interested in locating the labor camp in this vicinity, as well as the opposition group which presented a petition to the Glens Ferry City Council recently.

One potential location discussed is north of town, another west of the Glens Ferry city limits now, and still another to the east. It was agreed by those attending, according to Glenn Hall, president of the Chamber, who represented that body, that there is a need for the camp and that a suitable place must be found. He said that spokesmen for the opposition group said that the objection arose from the location within the city and near residential property.

Mrs. Claude Chess was appointed new city clerk, replacing Mrs. Carlos Berriochoa Jr., who resigned. Bids will be called for purchase of a new police car.

Incumbents File For Hansen Race

HANSEN — With the deadline for filing petitions nearing, only incumbents, Vergil Ball and Norville Reynolds have signified they would run, but both commented they felt that others should be given the opportunity to serve the community.

Vergil Ball is the mayor, and Reynolds is councilman - clerk.

Petitions for filing as candidates are at the office of the city of Hansen and may be obtained by contacting Harold Warren or Mrs. Thomas Steel-smith.

According to the new laws governing municipal policies, all electors must be duly registered prior to the election date which is November 7, at the city hall. Final registering date is 9 p.m. Saturday, Nov. 3. Anyone of the residents not voting in 1965, must register in order to be a qualified voter. BOTH DR. KENDALL AND DR. ROBERTS have their hands on a piece of equipment they discarded in favor of smaller and lighter equipment for packing. Bill Kendall, left, has his hand on a traditional camp stove — and next to the stove on the ground is the small stove the two men use to cook excellent meals on each day. Dick Roberts, right, has his hand on a good two man tent they do not use which is not only large but heavy. Next to the larger tent is a one man nylon tent, fully enclosed, snake and insect proof, which is extremely light. A large pair of binoculars rests next to the tent — and has been discarded in favor of the smaller ones on the left, which are the same magnification. A matchbox sits in front of the small gas stove to show the relative size of a pressed pound of bacon resting on top of it.

"I THINK ITS one of the best rams ever taken out . . . but then I guess every sheephunter thinks his is one of the best," said Dick Roberts. This ram hangs on the wall of his home next to his gun case. Other trophies can be found throughout the house, including some excellent examples of Rocky Mountain Goat. "Goat hunting is good sport," says Bill Kendall, "but it just can't compare to the Bighorn." And most hunters agree that have hunted the Bighorn.

SHOWING RELATIVE SIZE of modern packing equipment, a full sized one-man tent is rolled up directly under the scope of the rifle. The cooking stove, completely self-contained is just to the right of the tent. The tent is made of mosquito netting, mesh nylon, and a zipper. Dick Roberts and Bill Kendall, a dentist and a doctor, respectively, decided that conventional tents are far too heavy. They made two of these . . . each weighs 1 lb. 8 oz., and they intend to make a lighter one next year. The two say that the tent is so constructed that they could sleep on top of an ant hill and never be bothered. "Psychologically it's a great help if you're not extremely fond of rattlesnakes," said Roberts.

Short Lesson In Hunting Bighorn: Climb, Climb, Climb, Climb, Climb

By JAN A. SAINSBURY
Times-News Feature Editor

In the opening paragraphs of a massive book called "The Big Game Animals of North America," Jack O'Connor, gun editor of Outdoor Life Magazine, makes this statement, "Of all the superb trophies found on this fortunate continent of North America, I'd put the wild sheep right at the very top of the list. And of all the wild sheep, I'd give first place to . . . the brown bighorn, that monarch of the crags and canyons . . . hunted for the most part in the Rockies, up around timberline, in the most beautiful country ever trodden upon by unworthy man."

And Jack O'Connor isn't the only one who thinks so. That notion about the best sheep, the best country, and the best hunt, is shared by thousands of hunters each year. Two of those hunters are Dick Roberts and Bill Kendall. Dick Roberts is a dentist, and Bill Kendall a physician . . . and both are experts in the fine art of packing in to Idaho's roughest country, hunting the trophy at the "top of the list."

A lot of sportsmen hunt the Bighorn, but few hunt them in the way Roberts and Kendall do.

Both are believers in the supremacy of the Rocky Mountain Bighorn. "Once you've hunted sheep in these mountains," says Dick Roberts, "you either hunt sheep the rest of your life, or you don't hunt at all." And, according to Bill Kendall, "Once you're a sheep hunter, nothing else quite makes it."

And to quote O'Connor again, of Outdoor Life Magazine, "The sheep hunter is willing to climb until his lungs are bursting, to walk until his legs are dead weary, to grow hungry and thirsty for great rewards. There is no half way. After his first exposure a man is either a sheep hunter or he isn't. He either falls under the spell of sheep hunting and sheep country or he won't be caught dead on another sheep mountain."

To those who say there is something else as good, Kendall and Roberts simply reply, "Then you've never got a ram."

Hunting the Bighorn presents a thousand problems not encountered in other types of hunting. Sheep country is not rough country . . . it is impossible country.

Hunters encounter climate ranging from the hundred-degree temperatures of desert canyons to the penetrating cold of an Alpine range.

They climb from altitudes of less than 3000 feet to those higher than 8000 feet. They get sunburned, snowed in, cut and bruised, and plagued by rattlesnakes. Roberts and Kendall have seen as many as 20 rattlesnakes on a single trip.

"If nothing else," said Kendall, "it is a great psychological barrier . . . and it's always with you."

And at that the hunters may not get their sheep.

On an average, according to Martell Morache, the Regional Conservation Educator at the Magic Valley Regional office of the Idaho Fish and Game Department at Jerome, 500 tags are sold on a general-hunt basis each year . . . and on an average about 50 sheep are taken out. This amounts to about 10 per cent in a good year.

The reason for the small percentage consistently in the hunting of Bighorn, is that only about 10 per cent of the herd are 3/4 curl rams or better . . . and to have the 3/4 curl animal must be at least 4 1/2 years old and usually considerably older.

The general hunt this year was held from Sept. 1 to Sept. 15.

In 1965, 451 tags were issued and 53 rams were taken. In 1966, a bad hunting year for the Bighorns, 455 tags were issued and only 14 rams were killed. This year 517 tags were issued, and so far 24 hunters have returned letters to the Fish and Game Department indicating a kill. More reports are expected this year.

But what of the man who hunts the Bighorn? Dick Roberts and Bill Kendall have been doing just that for several years. They hunt together, and separately . . . but they always hunt.

"And the best hunt," says Dick, "is the one you pack-in. There is no other way to get to the real sheep country."

Roberts and Kendall have been packing-in to Idaho's rugged sheep country for years now and have the difficult art nearly mastered. I say "nearly" because the two are making minor changes in their methods and equipment every year.

DICK ROBERTS with a full pack, his old khaki-colored T-shirt, hat, and gloves, looks at a far peak. The peak is always farther than it looks. And according to Dr. Roberts "you're always hunting . . . from the moment you get in the area to the moment you leave . . . you're always hunting."

BILL KENDALL moves through the rugged Middle Fork country with a pack on his back, and a set of horns. "One thing about packing-in," says Dr. Kendall, "you're always hunting . . . from the moment you get in the area to the moment you leave . . . you're always hunting."

This past season, which lasted from the 1st of September to the 15th, Roberts and Kendall each packed-in with a total of about 28 pounds in equipment to sustain them for seven days.

Each man had a down-sleeping bag, a pack, one-man tent, food, and his own personal equipment. They shared other equipment such as the small gas stove, binoculars, spotting scope and cooking can (they used a large coffee tin in which they cook all their food).

Light at night was provided by a candle lantern which weighed 5 ounces including the candle. The binoculars weigh 11 ounces. The packboard and sack weigh 4 1/2 pounds. The sleeping gear including the shelter weighs 7 pounds.

The two men eat food that would make a French chef delight in the menu.

All their food is dehydrated or pressed . . . light, and easy to prepare. The men have Beef Stroganoff, Ham Omelet, Beef Patties, Beef and Rice, Bacon, Potatoes, and just about anything else they could want.

Most of the Bighorn in Idaho are now found on the drainages of the Middle Fork and the Salmon River. The country is steep, and very rough. Most of it is impassable for horses or pack animals.

"There are some main trails," says Bill Kendall, "but not to the sheep."

Some of the canyons are over 6,000 feet deep from top to bottom . . . and one year, according to Kendall, it snowed and nearly caught us. "I got below it fast."

"The rattlesnakes are a psychological problem for most of us," says Roberts. "We've seen 15 or 20 on a single trip."

The country, if it is true sheep country, varies an unbelievable amount. The sheep hunter can find sage brush, juniper scrub, Alpine spruce, and everything in between. And as Dick Roberts points out . . . "a billion rocks, all loose and ready to roll with you."

There are a number of ways to get into sheep country. People can fly in, ride in, or walk in. But in the final analysis the walking proves the most rewarding, if for no other reason than that "the best places are still accessible only on foot."

"The easiest way to hunt the Bighorn is from boats in the Middle Fork or the Salmon River."

"This year it took Bill and me three days to pack in," said Dick. "The places we went few men ever go . . . the only sign of civilization we ever saw was one rusty can."

"The rams are usually bunched into groups . . . the biggest I ever saw was a herd of nearly 50 lambs and ewes," Roberts said. "And the first year I packed in I saw a group of eight."

But you're lucky if you run into one group of rams, that are legal-size . . . that is they have 3/4 curl.

"With the odds against getting a ram as strong as they are," said Kendall, "most people will never go back again unless they get one the first time . . . and if they ever do get one, nothing will keep them away the next year."

"The animals are spread over so much territory," said Roberts. "The big rams spend a lot of time in heavy timber near a spring in hot dry weather . . . in cool weather they'll come out. Generally the only time they seem to feed is early in the morning and late in the evening . . . and you can spot them then. We spend the middle of the day taking naps . . . or walking."

And both men agree . . . "If you try to approach one, they're off . . . there's no catching them. Even a falling rock might set them off and when they do go they go, straight up or straight down. An elk will run that way some of the time but the sheep make a practice of it. They go straight up and straight down before you know they've moved."

The only extremely good trophies are "those 10 years old or older . . . and they only live to be 13 or 14." And Dick Roberts added . . . "and then they only die because their teeth fall out." Roberts is the dentist.

What's the most important item in sheep hunting? "First you take care of your feet . . . then your boots. Everything else comes later."

The two get most of their equipment in the area but some is imported. One of the men wears French mountain climbing boots . . . and most of the basic equipment was developed for mountain climbing.

The sleeping bags which are extremely light and small will take a hunter down to 10 degrees below zero, and is the only expensive item in the hunter's pack.

The French mountain climbing stove that the two sportsmen use instead of building campfires ("It takes too much time," says Kendall) costs only $7.00, with a fuel supply that will cook for two men.

For breakfast the men mix an "instant breakfast" powder with water, providing needed energy, and they're on their way.

Later they have one main meal . . . usually something on the order of Beef Stroganoff or Scrambled Eggs and Sauces. Their average cost per meal is $1.00 apiece.

And still the men are able to go in for seven days with less than 30 lbs. on their backs including their rifles.

According to Roberts, "One of the great things about sheep hunting is the fact that you get no second chances. One shot and the rest of them are gone . . . they just take off."

Roberts and Kendall have been lucky . . . or are they really that good?

"They have packed into the primitive area for five years now and have gotten a ram every year but one. The year they didn't get a ram was the year only 14 were taken out in Idaho."

But for four years they did what thousands of other hunters want to do . . . and only a few hundred attempts . . . and only a handful achieve . . . they got their Bighorn.

Is there a secret to successful hunting of the "greatest trophy?"

Both men agree . . . "One thing about sheep hunting . . . they never tell anyone how they did it."

The Money Box

BY FRANK SCHELL

The column has an interesting letter from an Oakley reader regarding a Federal Reserve $5.00 note. Since this question has come up before, we will include it in this column.

Question: I have in my possession a five dollar bill that is Series of 1928B, that says on it "Redeemable in gold on demand at any Federal Reserve Bank." The number is L 321-95168A, and it has a No. 12 on it in four places and the letter H in two. The letter "L" is encircled with "The Federal Reserve Bank of San Francisco."

Answer: Your description is very accurate. You have a regular issue of 1928 Federal Reserve Money. At the time the note was, indeed, redeemable in gold—but of course the National Gold Act repealed this particular phase of the note and it no longer became possible to ask for and receive gold for this note.

The letter "L," of course, designates the 12th letter of the alphabet—thus, San Francisco is the 12th Federal Reserve District Bank.

You do not indicate to me what condition this note may be in, but such notes of Series 1928-B are currently selling at $20.00 each, if brand new in condition. If badly worn, it would have little value over face.

From A. L., Burley, Idaho: "I have a piece of paper money which says on it, 'Philippine Islands' and 'One Peso.' One name on it I cannot read, but the other looks like 'Dwight F. David.' It looks a lot like United States money. Does it have any value?" Answer: This is regular issue of the Philippine Islands. The name on it is "Dwight F. Davis" and the treasurer's name is "Salv. Lagdamco."

The note is quite common, and sells for about $2.00 if in "Fine" condition. Uncirculated, it would bring you about $6.00.

Question from G.G., Hatley, Idaho: "I have a Canadian penny, dated 1857. Some of my about the size of a quarter—but made of copper. It is dated 1896 and has a queen's head on one side."

It is in good condition—does it have any value?"

Answer: Your coin is not a penny. It is a one cent piece, and is so designated on the reverse (back) side. The queen, of course, is Victoria. This was a standard coin of Canada, and the date 1896 is not particularly scarce. However, since Canadian coinage is scarce than United States it is still worth considerably more than face value. You do not state the condition—except to say that it is in "good" condition. The "good" condition coin is one in which the hair over the ear is worn through—and this coin would bring you about 35 cents. Better conditions will bring more money.

Question: Mrs. L. R., Buhl, Idaho: "I have a 'flying eagle' penny, dated 1857. Some of my friends have told me this coin is worth over $500.00—is this true? If so, where can I sell it?"

Answer: I am sorry—your friends have misinformed you. The Flying Eagle Cents, struck to replace the old "Large Cents" were first officially released in 1857, and only used that year and in 1858, when they were replaced by the Indian Head Cent, designed by Longacre.

In 1856, there was a pattern Flying Eagle made. Usually such patterns were made in only a few copies, but for some unknown reason, the Flying Eagle was struck in at least a thousand copies.

It is this 1856 Flying Eagle which commands such an excessive premium—selling as high as $1,000.00 in proof condition. The coins of 1857 and 1858, however, are worth from $1.50 up to $35.00 and $40.00—depending upon condition.

This column is attempting to create a map which will list all the towns in Idaho from territorial days up to the present.

We are much in need of any old maps or directories which might help in this effort. If you have knowledge of such maps we might acquire, please drop a card to the column.

Life in MAGIC VALLEY

Leafing through family albums, remembering good times of the past, chuckling together over old family jokes—this was the scene of a family reunion recently when four sisters and one brother were together the first time since 1958.

It was the brother's first visit to Idaho but the three ladies have been guests of their sister, Mrs. Homer Schnell, FILER, a number of times.

Mrs. Effie Clark, Haxton, Colo., is 82 years of age and oldest of the group. Maude Kenzie, Denver, Colo., is 80 and Pearl Kyger, also of Denver, is 77. Mrs. Schnell, at 74, is youngest of the sisters, and Fred Kenzie, Spindale, N.C., is 70 and "baby brother" of the group.

The four sisters had made plans for the reunion but none except Mrs. Schnell knew Mr. Kenzie was coming, so it was a great surprise for the other three when he got off the plane at the TWIN FALLS airport. They had supposed they were at the airport to meet a friend of Mrs. Schnell's.

Parents of the five were Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Kenzie, who lived in Kansas and later in Colorado. They had visited in Idaho a number of times. Mr. and Mrs. Schnell came to Idaho in 1926 and Mr. Schnell served as a ditch rider in the Filer area for over 27 years.

Mr. and Mrs. Schnell celebrated their 50th wedding anniversary March 27, 1966, and their four children were able to come for the event. It was the first time the family had all been together in 25 years. Mr. Schnell died in April of that same year and the youngest son died suddenly just a week after his father's death.

Mrs. Schnell's oldest daughter, Edna Egner, lives in San Francisco, and a son, Lawrence Schnell, is in Kent, Wash. The other daughter, Mrs. Betty Hendrix, resides in Twin Falls. Mrs. Schnell has eight grandchildren and six great-grandchildren.

Mrs. Schnell is active in church work at the United Missionary Church and has taught a junior girls' Sunday School class for 23 years. Taffy pulls, slumber parties, Valentine parties, and many others are special events she holds for her class.

Another of her many interests is canning and preserving, and her jellies, preserves, pickles and many other good things to eat earn her many prizes at the Twin Falls County Fair each year.

Van Engelen At Burley Has New Manager

BURLEY—Changes in personnel for Van Engelen Department Store, Burley, were announced Wednesday by Henry Van Engelen, president of the company.

Dean Van Engelen, manager of the Burley store, is moving to St. Louis, Mo., accepting a position in the Famous-Barr Department Store, one of the largest in the nation.

Bud Brinegar has returned to Burley to take over management of the Van Engelen Store. Mr. Brinegar formerly managed the Idaho Department Store, Burley, prior to moving to Grand Junction, Colo., where he managed a Keith O'Brien store.

Mr. Van Engelen plans to leave Burley this week-end for St. Louis, and will move his family there as soon as suitable housing is found. In St. Louis he will serve as assistant merchandising manager.

"It was a hard decision to make and I had and still have mixed emotions about the move. However, I feel the St. Louis proposal is so good and offers such a future that after careful investigation and consideration, it was impossible to turn it down," Mr. Van Engelen stated.

A life-long resident of Burley, Mr. Van Engelen has been active in community and political activities here.

For the past 10 years he has been prominent in local Republican activities and was elected Cassia County Central Republican committeeman.

Mr. Brinegar stated he was delighted with the opportunity to return to Burley. "I am particularly glad that I returned to become associated with Burley's only home-owned department store," he said.

New plans for the store call for the opening of a new home furnishing department in the lower level of the building, and some of the departments on the main floor will be enlarged.

While Mr. Brinegar lived in Burley prior to moving to Grand Junction, he was active in community affairs. He was a member of the Downtown Merchants Association, and served as a director for the Burley Chamber of Commerce.

Visitors At Craters Set New Record

CRATERS OF THE MOON NATIONAL MONUMENT, Arco—A new record for visitor attendance at Craters of the Moon National Monument was set during the first nine months of 1967, according to Supt. Paul Fritz.

During the first-nine months of this year 200,335 visitors went through the park, compared to the 1966 yearly total of 198,744.

During September of this year 27,476 visitors were at the park, representing a 22 per cent increase over September, 1966.

The influx of Californians is greater than visitors from any other state.

The visitor center, with new interpretative exhibits, is open during the winter months and non-summer visits to the area are becoming more popular, Mr. Fritz said.

Workers Needed

Mrs. Eugene Sturgill, director for the upcoming Community Children's Theatre production of "The Invisible People," said that self foreman Dick Wentworth is in need of carpenters to assist on the project.

She said, carpenters are needed to build the "invisible city," and that they will be paid with "invisible money."

Those interested in assisting should call Mr. Wentworth at 733-3489.

ROCK CREEK STATION, weathered and somewhat lonely, sits as it did over a hundred years ago. The largest artery of wagon travel in the United States passed the station on the old Oregon Trail. The area is currently fenced in, but is accessible to visitors. The Rock Creek Station is located south of Hansen about eight miles.

Stand Close Enough To History, And You Can Taste The Dust

In 1864 when construction began on the "Home Station," at Rock Creek, the first stages were coming through the area from Kelton, Utah, to Boise, en route to Walla Walla.

The year 1864 was a long long time ago. "In God We Trust" was placed on the first U.S. coin in that year. It was an 1864 2-cent piece.

General Ulysses S. Grant was named commander-in-chief of the Federal Armies, and the Republican party nominated Abraham Lincoln for the presidency.

The formation of unions leaped ahead that year until 26 unions were formed, representing 300,000 men by 1872.

It was in 1864 that the world first heard the phrase, "Damn the torpedoes! Full speed ahead!" uttered by Adm. Farragut to his flagship attacking Confederate forces in Mobile Bay. The "torpedoes" in this case were mines.

At the same time history as the Rock Creek Station was being built near what is now Hansen and Twin Falls, the world saw its first professional baseball player. Al Reach, who accepted money from the Philadelphia Athletics to leave the Brooklyn Atlantics.

By the time the Rock Creek Station was completed and wagons stopped regularly in 1865, Lincoln had defeated General McClellan for the presidency. President Jefferson Davis named General Robert E. Lee general-in-chief of the Confederate Army. Free mail delivery began to all cities with populations of at least 5,000 (which left anything near this area out) and America saw its first paid firemen established in New York City by the State Legislature.

In the early years of the Rock Creek Station people receiving news in the west heard about the death of Abraham Lincoln. The Ku Klux Klan began its infamous history in Pulaski, Tenn., and derived its name from a Greek word meaning "circle."

Andrew Johnson became president. The first train hold-up took place. Alice's Adventures in Wonderland were published for the first time. The Atlantic cable was completed. The first practical typewriter was invented and the slogan, "Now is the time for all men to come to the aid of their party," coined by a court reporter to test its efficiency. And the "Cincinnati Red Stockings," wore the first baseball uniforms.

By the time the Rock Creek Station was five years old the world was to see Ulysses S. Grant become president and the population of the United States reach nearly 40 million. The first transcontinental railroad was completed at Promontory Point, Utah. General Phillip H. Sheridan said in reply to Comanche Chief Tachaway's remark, "Me good Indian," that "The only good Indian is a dead Indian."

The first woman suffrage was granted in the United States in the Wyoming Territory. And America's first mail order house, Montgomery Ward & Co., opened for business in Chicago, and its catalogue was a single page.

And since that time a thousand events a year have dotted the history books. But little has happened to change the Rock Creek Station.

If you visit the Rock Creek Station early in the morning when there are few sounds of civilization to encroach on the stillness, it is almost possible to hear other sounds. . . ones that aren't really there. Sounds of stages, wagons, riders, and windy nights.

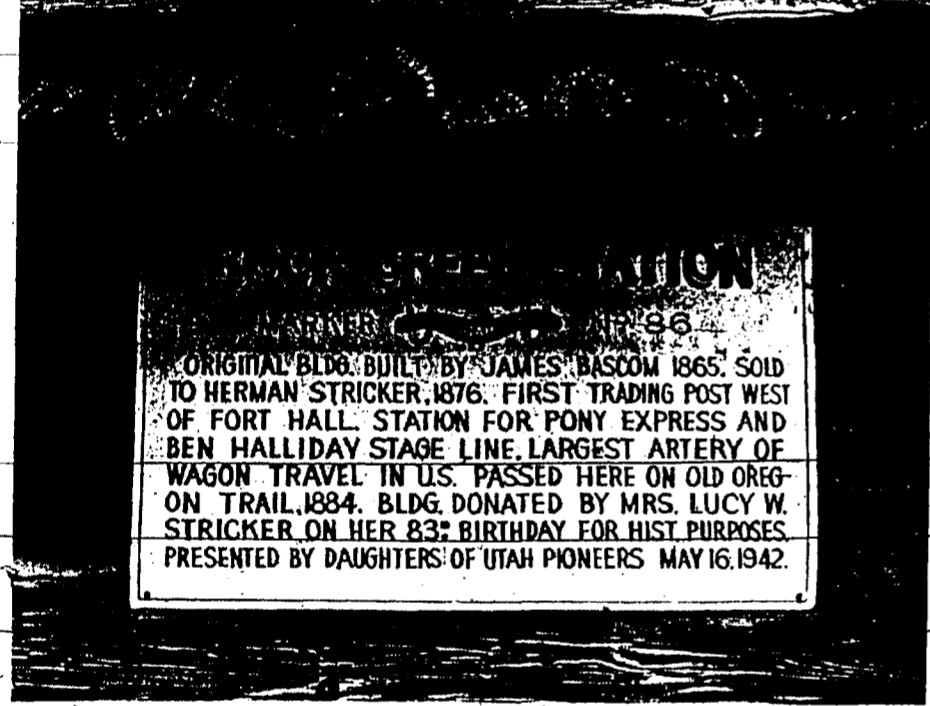

The Rock Creek Station is on land at the site of the present Stricker Ranch. The first store was built there in 1865, the year gold mining in the Snake River began.

The mining was profitable at first but declined soon after and continued only on a small scale after 1875.

Cattle raising became an important industry in the late 1870's and many ranches were in the Rock Creek area.

Early settlers established water rights using the water from the creek for irrigation. The high productivity of the soil encouraged more, and larger irrigation projects in the area.

And now . . . a hundred years later, the Rock Creek Station still stands, and those who built it no longer remain.

THE ROCK CREEK SIGN is now duplicated on the side of the station itself. Another marker of stone and bronze rests only a hundred feet away and was erected by the Daughters of Utah Pioneers in May of 1942.

Wealthy Zambia's Road To Progress Is Pitted With Problems And Bitterness

By KENNETH L. WHITING LUSAKA, Zambia (AP) — This is Black Africa's wealthiest nation, but its road to progress is pitted with problems and bitterness like some that afflict less fortunate countries.

For one thing, there's muttering about the fact that many whites still fill roles in defense and industry. And President Kenneth Kaunda has warned that tribal friction — akin to that which spread chaos in the Congo and civil war in Nigeria — could wreck Zambia's future.

Recent elections for top posts in the ruling United National Independence party were marred by electioneering along tribal and provincial lines.

Kaunda termed it "a spate of hate based entirely on tribe, province, race, color and religion which is the negation of all that we stand for in this party and government." He spoke of tribal nepotism, vicious election tactics and assassination threats.

Zambia has 72 distinct tribes. Radio Zambia broadcasts in nine tribal vernaculars plus English.

Kaunda's party presidency was not at stake in the balloting.

Reuben Kamanga, a member of the Angoni tribe, was ousted as deputy national president of the dominant party. His successor is Simon Kapwepwe, political leader of the Bemba — the largest tribe in Zambia and one that is aggressive and seemingly ambitious for a greater role in governing this former British protectorate.

Kapwepwe was foreign minister for two days — howe — as vice president and Kamanga foreign minister.

"Tribalism hasn't been a problem up to now," says the minister of presidential affairs, Mainza Chona. "And anyway I don't like the word tribe — we are simply one big family with normal family differences."

Kaunda, however, warns: "We must admit that we come from various tribes and racial groups interested in various religious organizations. At the same time we know that if any one of these groups pulled in opposite directions, Zambia would be destroyed and in the process each one of these groupings will also be destroyed."

Kaunda's personal image is that of an idealistic, above-the-battle national leader. Many observers praise as overdue his call for unity. But some question whether "K. K." as he is known to friends, can muster the force necessary to crack down on tribal dissension.

Although born in the eastern province, Kaunda is of Malawian parentage. His lack of strong tribal ties makes him an ideal compromise leader.

Unlike Nigeria, where there is little racial animosity, Zambia faces uneasy black-white relations. About 3.6 million Africans and 70,000 whites live in this landlocked nation, formerly Northern Rhodesia.

HALF THE FUN of duck hunting is spreading the decoys. Idaho hunters have good waterfowl hunting with an average harvest estimated at around 400,000 ducks a year. And even for an avid hunter that's a lot of quackers.

Idaho Duck Hunters Have Excellent Shooting . . . And There's A Reason

By MARSHALL EDSON
 Idaho Fish-Game Department
 The first cool fall winds bring high V's of ducks and geese into Idaho on their migration to wintering areas in the south. All along the routes, hunters crouch in blinds, or walk the marshes and stream sides as the waterfowl season begins.
 The Idaho season starts one-half hour before sunrise, Oct. 7, but winds up with different closing dates in different areas. The Columbia Basin Mallard Counties in the north and southwest will be open for duck hunting until Jan. 14, 1968. Central and eastern Idaho will close Jan. 4 for all waterfowl hunting.
 In general, Idaho duck hunters have good shooting. Waterfowl populations and weather make a lot of difference in total harvest, but flights through the state have been fairly stable for years.
 State and federal agencies, private associations and clubs contribute to provide better breeding, resting and nesting areas for waterfowl throughout the North American Continent. Someone said, "Duck hunters pay their way!" In general this is true.

four per cent of the total waterfowl produced in the Pacific flyway are hatched and grown in the state.
 Fall flights through Idaho are of interest. Volume and peak of annual migrations vary but total numbers are astounding; estimated to run from over eight million in 1960, to as low as 4,223,000 in 1965. The largest concentration of Canada geese last year was at American Falls Reservoir when 16,000 of the big honkers were at the lake in November.
 Although results vary from year-to-year, Idaho usually has good duck and goose hunting. Many dyed-in-the-wool hunters drive from other states to shoot along the lower Snake River in late November and December when flights "peak up" in southern Idaho.
 Opening week of each hunting season is usually fair to good, depending on weather, flight patterns and local production. As soon as ducks "learn" that their normal movement in local areas is being interrupted by hunters, they soon change flight times and use refuges or large reservoirs for daytime resting.

The totals are rather impressive. Based on the annual hunter questionnaire survey, the long-term average is around 428,000 ducks taken in Idaho each year! Goose hunters account for close to 20,000 Canada honkers each season.
 The history of waterfowl hunting is full of droll stories and hundreds of questions. The novice who wants to be a duck hunter asks almost as many as the unhappy wife while her husband drags muddy boots, decoys and wet clothes in and out of the house.
 When everything is just right, ducks will pile into feeding areas or waterways without hesitation. Most of the time conditions are different and many are the methods used to lure the birds within range.
 A well-built blind is important. A good spread of decoys helps a lot. A learned man with a duck call can often turn the trick. Those who know will tell you that even the best of everything often fails. Probably one of the best rules of duck hunting is to keep from moving about. The slightest movement is a danger signal to any duck and more good chances have been spoiled by this act of carelessness than everything else put together!

Rich in flavor and tradition, the sport of duck hunting stands alone as an outdoor discipline. It has a certain spirit that is found in no other sport. But too often, the hunter looks to the sky with no thought of what needs to be done to perpetuate and preserve the flights.
 Just as with any living thing, waterfowl have basic requirements to exist. The vast migrations that covered the sun from dawn to dark are no more. The huge central marshland and potato country of the United States is gone. The once untouched breeding and nesting grounds of Canada are in trouble. A place for a duck is mighty small today compared to 50—or even a few—years ago.
 Efforts are being made to improve conditions mostly through funds supplied by the sportsmen themselves. The Federal Fish and Wildlife Service has acquired over 200 refuge areas with close to four million acres, much of it for production, or protection, of waterfowl.
 In many parts of the West, development of irrigation reservoirs and now croplands has provided new living space. The Moses Lake region in Washington is one example where hundreds of acres of water and feeding areas were created through man's efforts.
 Bag limits, shooting hours, equipment restrictions and other regulations are used to control the harvest. But more hunters and less space for waterfowl remind us that the future holds the key to survival.

The federal Migratory Waterfowl Hunting stamp which now costs all waterfowl hunters $3 is extra payment by those who love waterfowl. The stamp originally cost $1, but has been raised to provide more funds for acquisition of lands and waters suitable for waterfowl in the United States.
 Ducks Unlimited is a national organization of hunters who donate vast sums of money for acquisition, restoration and management of nesting and rearing areas in Canada.
 Hundreds of local sportsman's clubs and individuals help by acquiring small land or water areas which furnish resting or feeding spots for the birds.
 Idaho cooperates with waterfowl management in many ways. The Fish and Game Department helps by: (1) banding ducks and geese; (2) aerial breeding census and ground nesting surveys of Canada geese; (3) production surveys on ducks; (4) weekly fall flight counts at concentration points in Idaho; (5) hunter bag checks; (6) winter waterfowl inventory; and (7) hunter questionnaire analysis of harvest.
 The Department has acquired a number of Wildlife Management Areas which are operated to provide benefits for waterfowl as well as other wildlife. These areas and many public access sites help duck hunters enjoy their favorite sport.
 Idaho is a pretty good duck "factory" in itself. Production figures show probably about

North Idaho and eastern Idaho hunters usually have their best shooting in early fall as flights move through from Canada. Eastern Idaho waters (upper Snake River area) sometimes freeze in October, forcing ducks to the south and west. Hunters around Sandpoint, Bonners Ferry and Coeur d'Alene have their best shooting during November.
 The lower Snake River region, generally from about American Falls Reservoir into the Boise Valley, starts to receive a build-up of ducks about mid-November. Weather is a big factor. Some years the entire picture will change almost overnight when huge storms in the north trigger the mass migration to warmer climes.
 How successful are Idaho waterfowl hunters? Individually, results vary from around zero to those with prime hunting spots, good retrievers and a lot of know-how. When statewide figures are gathered

Many hunters merely walk along small creeks and drain ditches for "jump shooting." These are often productive, especially when heavy shooting is taking place along main rivers and reservoirs. Fields are excellent hunting at times. Locating a field where ducks are feeding takes some scouting, but often pays off with good shooting.
 Mallards seem to prefer big, open fields to light and feed out from the center.
 A good retriever is worth his weight in gold. Thousands of ducks are lost through crippling. Often only a wing is broken, with the bird dropping far out in a river or lake. Sometimes birds fall into grass or brush and cannot be located without a trained dog. A good retriever loves his work. He lives for the time when the shotgun is uncased, the decoys spread and his master settles back in the blind.

Worthwhile AAUW Project Under Way

By NORMA HERZINGER

Community service projects, as conducted by many local women's groups, play an important part in the welfare of the community and other times go unseen and unthanked by the general public.

One such worthwhile project is a loan fund which provides short-term loans for students at the College of Southern Idaho and is sponsored by the local American Association of University Women.

This educational loan fund, with Mrs. E. H. Gyer as chairman, is made possible from proceeds obtained from the Old Book Nook, a used book store, located above the Western Union office. It contains books for all age groups and boasts a nice collection of National Geographic magazines. The books are donated to the club and sold for very nominal amounts. The Old Book Nook is open on Fridays and Saturdays and by appointment at other times.

Chairman of the book shop is Mrs. A. J. Peavey, with Ruth Brown as co-chairman. The Old Book Nook is not the only community service accredited to this group by far, but to this writer is one of the more outstanding. The local branch installed a magazine rack at the office of the Department of Public Assistance, and keeps it stocked with reading material for the needy, free for the taking. Mrs. James Bondurant is chairman of the magazine rack.

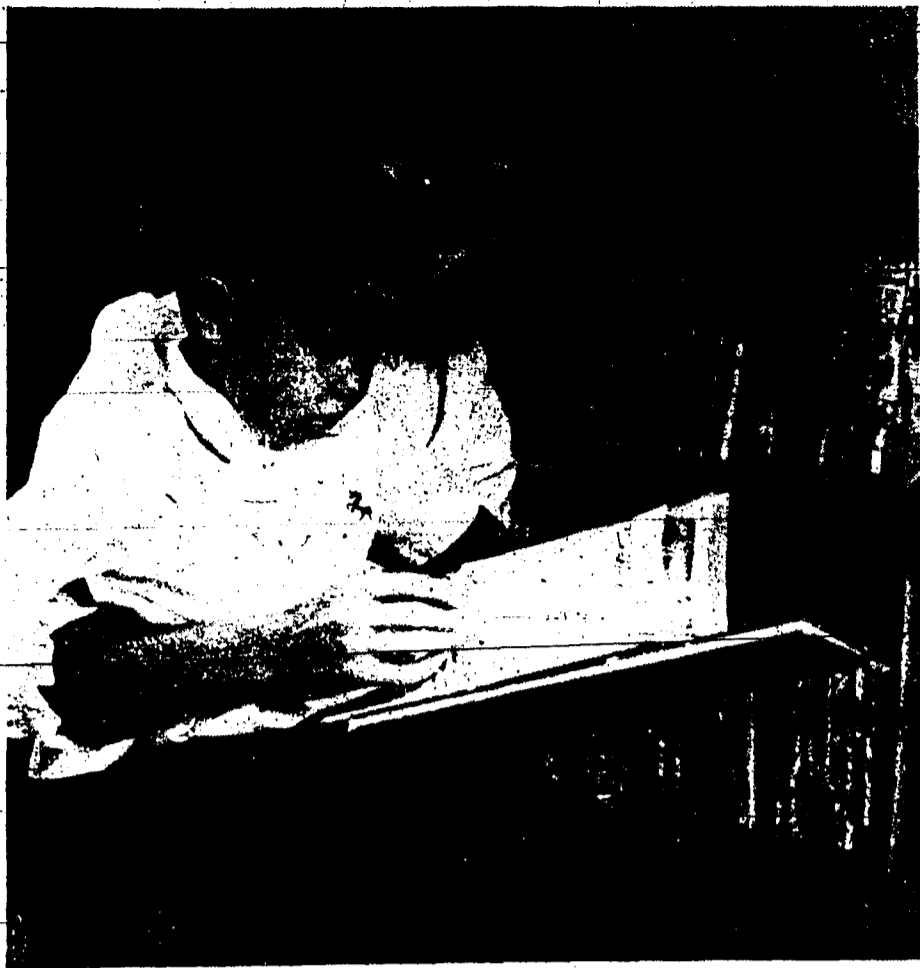

Mrs. Gareth Wilson, president of the local group, in giving the welcome address at a recent AAUW Membership Tea, spoke on the history and purpose of the group, noting that the organization was first incorporated under the name of the Association of Collegiate Alumnae in 1899. She stated the purpose of the association is the uniting of the alumnae of different institutions for practical educational work, and in general, for the maintenance of high standards of education.

Prerequisites for membership in the AAUW is a degree from an accredited four-year institution of higher education.

The Membership Tea was held in honor of the charter members at the YWCA building. Charter members include Mrs. Paul Thoman, University of Chicago; Mrs. Craig Bracken, University of Montana; Mrs. W. A. Van Engelen, University of Washington; Mrs. Clifford Evans, Mills College, Oakland; Mrs. Ruth Edmunds, University of Kansas; Mrs. James G. Bradley, University of Nebraska, and Mrs. Peavey, University of Idaho.

Other guests at the tea were Mrs. L. L. Breckenridge, BUFFALO, N.Y. (AP) — Marguerite Fleming, a teacher of eighth-grade English and science in the daytime, literally lets down her hair when she sings in a coffee house at night.

Two nights a week she releases her hair, which falls to her waist, from its pinned-up schoolroom style. She takes up her guitar to perform as a folk-song artist.

Miss Fleming finds her two careers have much in common and has introduced folksinging in her classes. "There's nothing like singing to bring out the rhythm and musical words of a poem," she says.

Dear Abby

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN
DEAR ABBY: I went with John (fake name) for four years and my mother hated him. In fact she told me she would rather see me dead than married to John. Well, when I became of age I married John against my mother's wishes and you should have heard the terrible things she said about him. I couldn't even put them in this letter. She did her best to ruin his reputation.
 Now that we are going to have a baby my mother is trying to make-up with John. John says he will never set foot in her house and if she wants to see me or the baby she will have to come here during the day time while he is not at home. My mother even wanted to have a birthday party for me, and John said I could go if I wanted to, but he wasn't going. What can I do, Abby? I can't blame John for feeling the way he does, but she is still my mother and this is making it awfully hard on me.
 JOHN'S WIFE

head filled with things like that and to give him time yet. How much time should I give him?
WORRIED.

DEAR WORRIED: First about your sleeping arrangements. Your son should have his privacy and your daughter hers. Even if one of them has to sleep in the kitchen or the hall or on the floor.

It doesn't matter who tells a boy (or girl) the facts of life as long as they are told as soon as they become curious. Try to cultivate a relaxed family atmosphere so that if either of your children has a question he will not hesitate to ask. (P.S. And tell your husband to hurry with his "facts" or it will be like giving a fish a bath.)

CONFIDENTIAL TO WONDERING IN WORTHINGTON: "Age" doesn't mean much with some fellows. They'll take anything from two to toothless.

Troubled? Write to Abby, Box 69700, Los Angeles, Calif., 90069. For a personal reply, enclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Lana Baker Is Initiated Into Job's Daughters

WENDELL — Lana Baker, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Noel Baker, Hagerman, and granddaughter of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Hoagland, Wendell, was initiated and enrolled as a member of Wendell Bethel No. 12, International Order of Job's Daughters. Anna Schrenk, honored queen, was in charge of the ceremony and meeting.

A letter was read from the grand chaplain explaining the memory names are to be listed. An invitation was read from Glens Ferry Bethel No. 23. Plans were made for a cooked food sale, and a hayride and chill supper.

Members voted to purchase a Job's Daughters white Bible for the retiring queen.

A contest was planned to secure 50-cent pieces for the grand guardian's project. Sides were chosen and the junior and senior princesses are captains of the two teams. The winning side will be feted at a party by the losers.

Appointed to the Bethel calling committee were Debby Gilbert, Kay Henderson and Cindy Brown. Sunshine helpers named were Sally Maltz, Jill Brunzell, Vikki Pepper and Bonnie Trounson.

Members set up a fine for "hard to remember" things such as chewing gum and talking during meetings.

"New Friends and Old Friends" was the librarian's report given by Cindy Brown. Bethel members were in charge of the social hour.

Toes Are Put Bluntly For Fall

Toes are being put bluntly this fall. And in heels, as the National Footwear Institute so cleverly says it, medium is the message.

To some disgruntled fugitives from three-inch spikes, the new crop of shoes look like some of their tiny daughters should be wearing. To the more age-conscious, they may look like not very cleverly disguised orthopedic gear that old ladies with foot problems and infirmities hobble around in.

An awful lot of women, however, like the general trend for comfort. The blunted look makes the shoe seem shorter and younger, like the medium heel, (slightly higher than the recent low) because it gives a kind of elegance to shorter skirts. Details are important this fall—bows, buttons, buckles, embroidery, pastel kid flowers, scallops, brass rivets, rhinestone decorations.

What do you wear with pantsuits, or knickers and knee socks? The Institute suggests one of the high fronts, or one of the shoe boots.

For sheer femininity, there are the new closed shoes, shal-

Dr. Weaver is with the Public Health Service. The son of Mrs. Charles R. Weaver, Twin Falls, he received degrees from the College of Idaho and the University of Oregon Medical School.

The new Mrs. Weaver, the former Pamela Kae Duffield, is the daughter of Mrs. Herbert Hatzenbeler, Santa Barbara, Calif., and Curtis Duffield, Beaverton. She attended Portland State College.

Linda Duffield was her sister's honor attendant, and Mrs. James Sells, Beaverton, was bridesmaid.

low at back and sides for a fragile look. For evening, the naked diamante thong is featured.

You can't overlook boots which go to the knee and beyond, and are as slim as you are. They're the one indispensable, says the Institute. The highest ones are so soft they have the feel of stockings or stretch tights, and they come with the new mid-heel.

GLENNIS FERRY — Mr. and Mrs. Miles T. During the Job's Daughters meeting recently at the Masonic Temple, Mr. and Mrs. Miller were presented a gift and afterwards during the social hour they received a cake. Women Make Up Work Force In Hospitals; Men Are Leaders

NEW YORK (AP) — Women make up most of the work force in hospitals, but the majority of executive leaders are men. Only one out of five administrators is a woman.

Furthermore, these women administrators tend to be paid less, to hold smaller positions and to be older than their male peers.

That's what Dr. Miriam Terry Dolson writes in a recent issue of "The Modern Hospital." Dr. Dolson's findings resulted from a study of hospital administrators she and associates at Cornell University conducted in 1965.

She found that the women in top hospital administrative jobs are concentrated in certain areas: New York, Pennsylvania, California, Minnesota, Illinois, Ohio, Texas.

As for age, women administrators are not only older than men in the same jobs, but they're older than the average woman worker. Fifty per cent were over 50 years of age.

In 1965, Dr. Dolson says, women 45 and over made up 39 per cent of all women in the labor force. However, 67 per cent of women hospital administrators were in that age bracket.

She found that most of the women administrators operate relatively smaller hospitals than do the men, and few are married.

The Cornell Study shows that 85 per cent of the women hospital executives receive less than $15,000 a year. Dr. Dolson points out, though, that salaries are lower in smaller institutions and that 41 per cent of the women administrators are in church-controlled hospitals. In some of

Gooding WSCS Hears Program About Youth

GOODING—Gary Major from the Department of Public Assistance in Gooding discussed the youth program of the church at the meeting of the Women's Society of Christian Service at the Methodist Church. Major talked concerning "Youth—Society's Untapped Resource."

He pointed out that the purpose of the program was to provide guidance for parents and other adults in relating helpfully to youth. He pointed out that youth demands ideals in their church as well as in their democracy and that they want an intelligent church which is more concerned with social action than with mumbled creeds.

Youth, he said, sees no fight between scientific religion; they believe that scientific methods can spur the church into becoming a vital force.

Major was introduced by Mrs. Margaret Chigbrow, vice president. Yearbooks were presented to members and Mrs. Chigbrow stated that the theme for the year would be "search for identity."

The rummage sale was scheduled for Oct. 6, beginning at 9 a.m. Mrs. Chigbrow closed the meeting with a poem "You Are the Leaders of Our Youth."

MR. AND MRS. IVAN DEAN LATTIN (Dudley photo)

Connie Allen, Lattin Wed In Kimberly Rites

HANSEN — Connie Lavonne Allen, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Orville E. Allen, Hansen, became the bride of Ivan Dean Lattin, son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Lattin, Kimberly, at rites solemnized at the Kimberly Methodist Church.

The double ring ceremony was performed by Rev. Delbert P. Remaley, pastor of the church. Candelabra of lighted tapers and tall pedestal baskets filled with bouquets of white gladioli and light blue carnations adorned the rostrum.

The bride, escorted by her father, wore a floor-length A-line white satin gown with a band and bow accenting the empire waistline. The gown was enhanced with bands of lace at the hemline and around the elbow-length bell-shaped sleeves. A lace train flowed gracefully from a bow fastened at the back waistline. Her fingertip illusion net veil was held by a pearl encrusted crown. It was loaned to her by a cousin, Mrs. Joe Marshall III, Caldwell. The gown was designed and made by her sister, Mrs. Denny Naylor.

She carried a cascading bouquet of white gladioli entwined with blue net and tied with blue ribbon streamers. The high rounded neckline of her gown displayed a cross-shaped pendant, centered with a diamond, a gift from the bridegroom.

Mrs. Denny (Koreen) Naylor, sister of the bride, Moscow, was matron of honor. Bridesmaids were Mrs. Norman (Dena) Brooks, Montrose, Colo., sister of the bride, Charlene Lucht and Virginia Moore.

Julie Naylor, niece of the bride, was flower girl. Byron Naylor, nephew of the bride, was ringbearer.

Garrell Moore was the bridegroom's attendant. Kirk Claiborn, Phillip Arnold, and Duane Allen, Boise, brother of the bride, were ushers.

Kevin Brooks and David Brooks, nephews of the bride, were candlelighters.

Janice Walker was organist and accompanied Sylvia Freestone, soloist.

Sandra Prentice registered guests.

Donald Lattin and Vernon Lattin, brothers of the bridegroom, were giftbearers, and Janice Boyer, Jennifer Brown, Christi Brown, Kay Steelsmith and Diane Yawser arranged the gift tables.

Mrs. Ronald Strolberg, Twin Falls, pinned on corsages.

A four-tiered square white cake, decorated with sprays of blue-forget-me-nots, white roses and Lilies of the Valley and topped with a miniature bride and bridegroom figurine encircled by a net heart, centered the reception table. Lilies of the Valley florets tied with blue ribbon were pinned to the skirt. Crystal candelabra and lighted blue tapers flanked the cake.

Mrs. Kenneth Naylor and Mrs. Chet Hillman, cousin of the bride, cut and served the cake.

Mrs. Lloyd Persons and Mrs. Boyd Brown, aunts of the bridegroom, served punch and coffee.

Mrs. Clifford Urie, Mrs. Bryan Harris, Mrs. Harold Moore and Mrs. Ralph Nelson assisted in serving.

The couple took a wedding trip to Sun Valley.

Guests attended from Hansen, Kimberly, Twin Falls, Rupert, Boise, Moscow and Montrose, Colo.

Pre-nuptial showers were given for the bride by Mrs. Gary Custer and Mrs. Boyd Brown at the Custer home, Twin Falls, and Virginia Moore and Charlene Lucht hosted a shower at the Moore home.

The bride's parents entertained members of the bridal party at a rehearsal supper.

ASK THEM YOURSELF

FOR SEN. ROBERT F. KENNEDY

● How do you feel about groups in America that send supplies to belligerent countries?—A. N., Waco, Texas

● I have always opposed any direct action by groups in this country to send supplies to belligerent nations. After receiving reports some time ago that a group known as the "May 2nd Movement" in New York City has engaged in such activity, I asked the Attorney General to have the Department of Justice investigate for possible violations of Federal law.

FOR CAROL BURNETT

● After every Gary Moore Show, you made a signal by pulling your ear. What did it mean?—L. T., Albany, N.Y.

● The ear-pulling started as a sneaky way of saying "Hello" to my grandmother. My grandmother has passed away, but I still pull the ear for sentimental reasons.

FOR DR. CHARLES HUDSON, past president of American Medical Association

● What does the field of medicine offer women in the future?—R. Olson, Idaho Falls, Idaho.

● Opportunities for well-qualified women are greater in medicine today than ever before. Currently, more than 8 percent of the nation's 33,000 medical students are women. A woman, however, must seriously consider whether she is emotionally equipped to make the sacrifices or compromises which will permit her successfully to blend married life with the lifelong practice of medicine. Most women prefer to enter family practice or pediatrics, two of the 35 medical specialties and subspecialties.

FOR DAVID JANSSEN

● What are you doing since "The Fugitive" is off the air?—M. W., Bartleso, Ill.

● I'll appear in a John Wayne movie, "The Green Berets," a story of the Vietnam war. My role will be that of a war correspondent.

FOR BARBARA EDEN of "I Dream of Jeannie"

● Does the fact that you and your husband (Michael Ansara) are both career people complicate your marriage?—R. N., Glendale, Calif.

● I'd be lying if I said it didn't. Things are much simpler when the little wife is waiting at home with a kiss every night. It is another matter when wife-dear and husband-dear come home at the same time, dead tired. Yet neither Mike nor I would change things now because we've worked hard for the success we are enjoying. We're honest about the problem anyway.

FOR ED SULLIVAN

● Why do you use so much talent from overseas? We have many performers here in America with talent—why not give some who are not so well-known a chance? They live here, pay taxes here in America, and need a good break.—Mrs. Helena Babb, Danville, Ill.

FOR WILLIAM ECKERT, Commissioner of Baseball

● What are the chances of baseball expanding to 24 teams instead of the present 20?—D. R., Rochester, N.Y.

● I think it is not only possible but probable that the major leagues at some future date will expand to 24 teams, 12 in each league. When this happens, the leagues in all likelihood will be split into two divisions of six teams each.

All at Sea The Burtons are now boatsmen. Richard and Elizabeth have just purchased a 61-year-old, 130-foot, 279-tonner for $210,000 and have christened her the Kalizma, a contraction of their various youngsters' names. "You know how it is when Elizabeth wants something," says Richard. "The boat can run with a crew of four, but for comfort you really need nine. We have nine crewmen—after all, I'm married to Elizabeth Taylor."

Hard Hats Football authorities are becoming increasingly worried about players' helmets. Originally designed to prevent head injuries, the molded plastic helmets may today be causing more game casualties than they avoid. Dr. Carl Blyeth of the University of North Carolina issued a report stating: "The practice of 'spearing'—driving the head directly into the body of an opposing player—is extremely dangerous to the ball carrier." Ironically, it may be even more dangerous to the tackler: neck sprains and strains are frequent.

Judy's Girl What makes Liza Minnelli a success? Her Australian husband, Peter Allen, says it can't be her looks. "Your nose is too big, your mouth is too full, your eyes are too big," he taunts her. And she says being a star's daughter is no bed of roses. "For all the people who want to help me because I am Judy Garland's daughter, there are just as many who won't help me for the same reason." Conclusion: it must be something called talent that makes Liza a star.

Indestructible No sooner does one press story announce Maurice Chevalier's "final" retirement than another headline reveals a new venture. The irrepressible Frenchman confesses, "Often people ask me what it feels like to be almost 78, and I say wonderful, considering the alternatives. I get my energy from the audience. When I come on I am 77, but when I go off, I am 15 again."

Face the Front They say that the biggest part of being a great actor is a consummate ego. Oscar-winner Martin Balsam agrees. He recalls how he chose between music and the stage: "We were playing a school dance and the trumpet man had a flashy solo. Everybody stopped dancing and applauded him, and I had a vision of myself, sitting at a keyboard the rest of my life facing the wall. I never played another band date."

How Our Space Program Recovered from Tragedy

An exclusive interview with

JAMES E. WEBB
NASA Administrator

By JAMES C. G. CONNIFF

New safeguards will back up astronauts Down Eisele, Walt Schirra, and Walt Cunningham (l. to r.) when they blast off in first Apollo manned flight.

In what ways, if any, has the recent Apollo tragedy changed our space program?

The Apollo accident has not changed our program. We still intend to develop the broad range of space capabilities required to send men to the moon and bring them back safely.

When do you think the first manned moon flight will take place?

In my opinion, a lunar landing before 1970 is still possible. The Apollo accident reduced our chances for a manned flight by then, but did not wipe them out entirely. According to present plans, the 11th of our 15 Apollo flights will take place toward the end of 1969. If all goes well in the early flight tests of the complete Apollo spacecraft and the Saturn V rocket this year and next, we should be able to make the lunar landing on the 11th flight, possibly even earlier.

What new safeguards for astronauts have been added as a result of the Apollo fire which killed three astronauts?

A large number of changes are being made to increase astronaut safety during future ground tests and flights. For example, we will replace such combustible material as nylon netting with noncombustible or fire-resistant materials. Flammable materials which have to be taken aboard, such as food packages, will be stored in fire-proof containers. We plan to redesign the interior of the spacecraft so that fire cannot spread easily. All these modifications will, of course, be fire-tested before the next manned flight.

What about emergency-escape exits?

We are installing a new outward-opening, quick-release hatch for the spacecraft that can be activated by either the crew inside or by test personnel outside. I might add that an Office of Flight Safety is being established within the manned space-flight organization with important powers and responsibilities.

What are some physical dangers in the space program?

Everything we do is hazardous. Men have been electrocuted when a crane hit a high-tension wire on a test stand, or when they were starting up a rocket engine to test it, and it exploded. As you know, three of our astronauts were killed in plane crashes. As for the launch itself, when you take three men and put them on a vehicle with the power equivalent of a small atom bomb, and you've got to fuel it and launch it automatically without anybody being near it, you've got a difficult, complicated process. It's bound to be dangerous.

Is there a chance of our losing an astronaut in space?

Yes, but we keep it to a minimum with the best guarantees modern technology provides. The danger to the astronaut is calculated as carefully as we know how and is about the same as a test pilot would face flying a high-performance airplane for the first time.

Would we be able to rescue an astronaut marooned in space?

Increased capability with rendezvous and docking techniques will make this a possibility but not in the immediate future. To prevent it from happening, we equip our vehicles with multiple back-up systems in case of primary system failure. You will recall that at least one re-entry was a manual performance of great skill. Remote rescue from the moon's surface would be a problem at present, but by the time that need might arise we would expect to have the necessary knowledge and equipment.

Have the astronaut losses suffered by the U.S. and the U.S.S.R. done anything to speed up a joint space effort?

No. But, as I said at the time of the Soviet accident, I have much hope that the dramatic events will be looked at against the background of the many statements made by the leaders of this nation to the effect that we desire cooperation.

Why can't our astronauts make hard landings like the Russians?

We could bring the Gemini and Apollo spacecraft down on dry land if we had to. It is just safer and more convenient for us to land on water. The Russians have to fly over land for long distances, an advantage for their tracking stations, but hard and bumpy on the touchdown. In fact, in five of the six manned Vostok flights, the cosmonauts ejected themselves from the spacecraft and came down by parachute.

Why is there a two-year lag in our space program?

Because of the nation's other problems, Congress wasn't able to appropriate the necessary money. But shortly, I think the world will become stabilized, because people will see a vision of what such new forces as space technology can mean to them. We're already pointing the way with our communications, weather, and navigation satellites. What they will do for education and agriculture in the emerging nations and for improved safety on the oceans is inestimable.

Do you foresee space exploration beyond the moon?

Indeed I do. We are pushing on to other planets now. Mariner spacecraft have been to Venus and Mars. We are hoping to start the Voyager program next year. If begun in the 1968 budget year, Voyager will let us fly to Mars by 1973 with instrumented equipment to send back data. The present budget will let us send another Mariner to Venus this year and another to Mars in 1969.

What is the present position on future manned planetary expeditions?

We're not yet planning manned planetary exploration because we want more experience with the Saturn booster and Apollo spacecraft. When we get to the moon and back, we'll have been in space only 14 days. To go to Mars, we have to stay in space for one to two years. We have to do a lot of testing to develop life-support systems that will keep a man alive in space for that time.

Do we have the capability to send a manned flight to another planet?

We've long known that nuclear fuels are twice as efficient in space as chemical fuels, and we now have the capability and could build a nuclear rocket. But all this involves a decision on whether to send men to the planets and how soon. It's a process that has to mature a bit.

Will we ever mine metals on the moon and planets?

Right now that's simply science fiction. The moon is a hostile place—just living there will be difficult, let alone working. I see a more likely scientific payoff in the erection in orbit of a very large optical telescope.

Is our space program paying off, or is there a great deal of waste?

I think the country has gotten more for its dollars spent in space than for any other program. We said we could develop all the technology needed to go to the moon for $20 billion. If Congress had appropriated the requested money, we could have. Even with the two-year delay, we're going to do it for little more than $20 billion. One reason: a flexible organization able to adjust to the unexpected.

We pay the University of Indiana, for example, to put everything we learn from the space program into a computer. Some 44 companies pay the university to take that information out and help apply it commercially. We are experimenting with eight such regional centers. We'll assist for five years, then leave them self-sustaining.

How else does the space program create benefits for the nation's economy?

Already the folding-door industry, steel processing, lubrication, pump manufacturers, and others have benefited. Tin and plastics manufacturers now turn out better products faster and cheaper, thanks to space technology. Perfection of the cardiac pacemaker and other bioelectronic marvels owes much to space science.

Our gross national product has jumped in five years from $500 billion to $700 billion annually. I can't tell you what part of that $200 billion increase the space program is responsible for—over and above the 20,000 firms employing more than 400,000 persons directly connected with it—but there certainly are many, many areas where it has had tremendous impact.

Now that NASA is nine years old, what new perspectives on our space aims do you have?

First of all, we are keeping in mind that the major programs planned for this decade, including the manned lunar landing, must be brought to a successful conclusion. But we also see the need for crucial decisions and resolute action to begin the major new programs that will develop our space capabilities during the next decade.

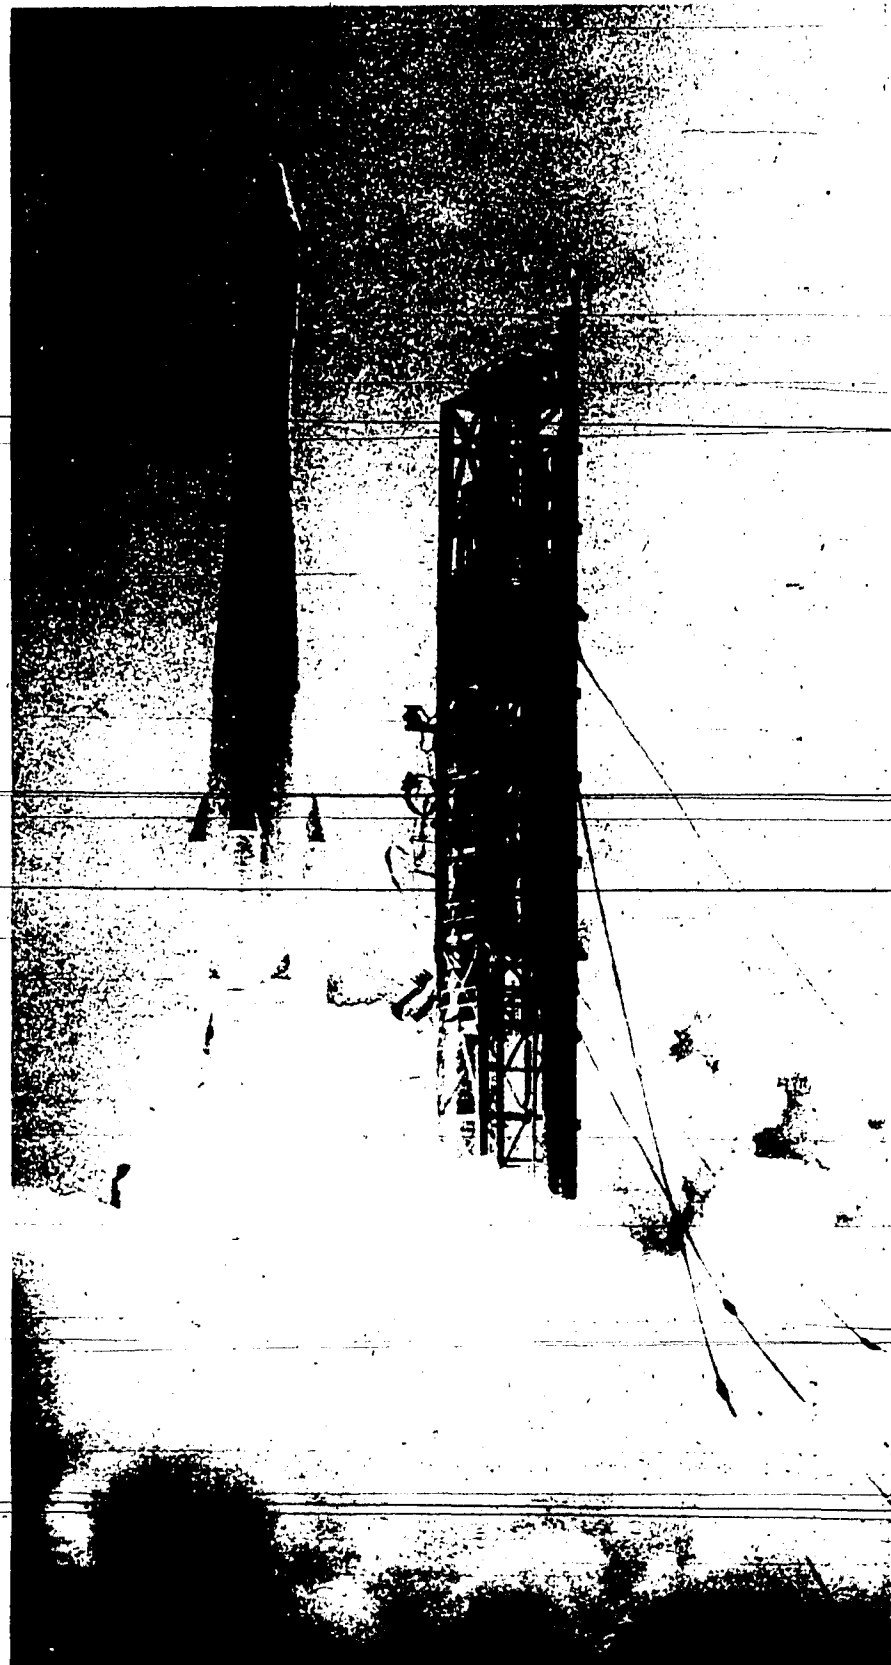

It is my view that with the world situation the way it is, and with clear indications that the Soviets are going ahead with a large-scale, long-term program in space, it is important that the United States go forward with equal vigor as well. And by going forward, I mean specifically:

1) The use of Apollo-Saturn equipment in earth orbit as a preliminary step to development of large orbiting manned laboratories.

2) The use of Apollo-Saturn equipment for more extensive manned exploration of the moon after the first landings.

3) The use of the Saturn V rocket and the Voyager spacecraft for the next essential steps in unmanned exploration of the planets.

4) Development of a nuclear-powered rocket engine for use in the next decade. *

Aside from Apollo flights, we're also probing space with Interplanetary Monitoring Platforms such as Explorer XXXV, which was launched in July.

The Day I Started Painting

On the eve of his 77th birthday, Ike modestly recalls how he took up his hobby and what it has meant to him through the years

By DWIGHT D. EISENHOWER

■ Saturday, Oct. 14, Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower will be 77 years old. These years have been heavy with the burdens of military and political responsibilities—but relieved by the pleasures of a man who recognizes the revitalizing qualities of various sports and hobbies.

In 1948, about to launch a new career as president of Columbia University, General Eisenhower undertook a new hobby—painting. An exhibition of his paintings recently was shown at New York's Gallery of Modern Art on behalf of Eisenhower College in Seneca Falls, N.Y., which welcomes its first freshman class July 8, 1968. Our cover painting was included in that exhibition, and the following personal recollection tells how the General took up his pastime.

AN ARTIST, Thomas E. Stephens of New York, began a portrait of Mamie. I was an interested spectator.

Having completed a sitting for the day, he asked Mamie to go with him through the house so that they could agree for a proper place for the portrait, when finished.

Sitting alone after the two of them left, it occurred to me that I might as well make use of the paints remaining on his palette to try poking away on my own. The problem was to find anything on which to begin. It happened then that my old companion, Sgt. John Moaney, came into the room, and I had an idea.

"Sergeant," I said, "in my room there is a little box about 12 inches on each side. Will you please knock out the sides, take any kind of white cloth you can find, and stretch it on the board by tacking the edges?"

Within a matter of minutes, Moaney was back with a clean dust cloth and the bottom of the box. Together, we fastened the cloth to the board.

The only subject I could think of was right before me—Mamie's unfinished portrait. So I started out and kept going until the two explorers came back about 45 minutes later. I displayed my version of Mamie, weird and wonderful to behold, and we all laughed heartily.

Tom Stephens, for some reason, urged me to keep on trying. I did not even bother to argue; painting was beyond me. So when he said that he wanted my "painting" as a keepsake, I was glad to give it to him, this product of my first grand venture into "art."

A few days later a package arrived. Opening it, I found a present from Mr. Stephens: everything I could possibly need—except ability—to start painting. I looked upon the present as a wonderful gesture and a sheer waste of money. I had never had any instruction in painting; the only thing of possible help was a working knowledge of linear perspective, a subject we had studied at West Point.

I left the open package in my room. Each day I seemed to develop a little more curiosity about painting a picture. The result was that I took the plunge, to find that in spite of my complete lack of talent, the attempt to paint was absorbing.

My most urgent need at the start was a generous-sized tarpaulin to cover the floor around the easel. The one thing I could do well from the beginning was to cover hands, clothes, brush handles, chair, and floor with more paint than ever reached the canvas. With the protection provided by the tarp, and with my painting clothes always stored in a dark recess of a closet, I succeeded in avoiding total domestic resistance to my new hobby.

The penthouse retreat at Columbia was an ideal studio. A professional might have objected to its lack of north exposure and a skylight. But privacy and quiet were more important to me than lighting.

After 18 years, I am still messy; my hands are better suited to an ax handle than a tiny brush. I attempt only simple compositions. My frustration is complete when I try for anything delicate. Even yet I refuse to refer to my productions as paintings. They are daubs, born of my love of color and in my pleasure in experimenting, nothing else. I destroy two out of each three I start. One of the real satisfactions is finding out how closely I come to depicting what I have in mind—and many times I want to see what I am going to do and never know what it will be.

In spite of this, I have frequently wished for more, daylight hours to paint. Its only defect is that it provides no exercise. I've often thought what a wonderful thing it would be to install a compact painting outfit on a golf cart.

In the White House, in bad weather, painting was one way to survive away from the desk. In a little room off the elevator on the second floor, hardly more than a closet, the easel, paints, and canvases were easy to use. Often, going to lunch, I'd stop off for ten minutes to paint.

In Gettysburg, I've tried many landscapes and still lifes, but with magnificent audacity, I have tried more portraits than anything else.

I've also burned more portraits than anything else. ♦

German Cooking

FOR PEOPLE WHO LOVE TO EAT

■ The average American may be partial to German food because the seasonings and food combinations so frequently relate to his own. German people are enormously interested in food, and so their cuisine is as delicious and varied as the picturesque countryside.

Schweinebraten

For a traditional German dinner, bring this succulent pork roast to your table accompanied by a casserole of sauerkraut with apples.

- 3½ lb. (8 ribs) pork loin roast
- 1½ teaspoons onion salt
- ½ teaspoon marjoram, crushed
- ¼ teaspoon pepper

1. Rub roast with a mixture of the salt, marjoram, and pepper. Secure roast on spit. Insert meat thermometer. Adjust spit about 8 in. above prepared coals, placing foil pan under pork to catch drippings. If using a gas-fired grill, adjust flame size for personal preference following manufacturer's directions.

2. Roast until meat thermometer registers 170°F., or meat is tender. About one-half hour before roast is done, score surface (see photo).

3. Place roast on a warm serving platter; remove thermometer. Garnish with parsley. 8 servings

Note: To cook in oven, place roast, fat side up, on a rack in a shallow roasting pan. Roast, uncovered, at 325°F. until meat is tender, about 2½ hours.

Kartoffelsalat

The amount of potatoes used for this tangy hot potato salad will determine the number of servings.

- 12 slices bacon, diced and fried until crisp, reserving 6 tablespoons drippings
- 3 medium-sized onions, chopped
- 1 cup plus 2 tablespoons cider vinegar
- 1½ tablespoons sugar
- 1½ teaspoons salt
- ¼ teaspoon Accent
- ¼ teaspoon pepper
- 2 to 4 lbs. potatoes, cooked, peeled, and cut in ¼-in. slices

1. Heat bacon drippings in a skillet. Add onion and cook until tender, stirring occasionally. Stir in vinegar and next four ingredients; heat to boiling. Mix in bacon.

2. Pour over potato slices in a serving dish and toss lightly to coat evenly. Garnish with snipped parsley and paprika. About 6 servings

Kraut mit Äpfeln

Serve this adaptation of a German cooked-sauerkraut speciality as an accompaniment to pork.

- 4 cups drained sauerkraut
- 2 apples, thinly sliced
- ½ cup apple cider
- 1 tablespoon light brown sugar
- 2 tablespoons butter or margarine

Mix all ingredients. Cover and simmer 5 min., or until apples are tender. Garnish with apple wedges and parsley (see photo).

About 8 servings

Sauerbraten

Kartoffelkloße (Potato Dumplings) and Sauerbraten are a famous German duo.

- 3 to 4-lb. blade pot-roast
- 1 clove garlic, halved
- 2 teaspoons salt
- ¼ teaspoon pepper
- 2 cups cider vinegar
- 2 cups water
- 2 onions, sliced
- 2 bay leaves
- 1 teaspoon peppercorns
- ¼ cup sugar
- 2 tablespoons lard

1. Rub meat with cut surface of garlic, then with salt and pepper. Put meat and garlic into a deep covered casserole.

2. Heat just to boiling, the vinegar and next five ingredients; pour over meat and allow to cool.

3. Cover and refrigerate 4 days, turning meat each day.

4. Remove meat; strain and reserve liquid for cooking the meat.

5. Brown meat in hot lard in a Dutch oven, turning to brown evenly. Add half of reserved liquid; cover and simmer 2 to 3 hrs. or until meat is tender, adding additional liquid as needed. Slice and serve with potato dumplings.

6 to 8 servings

Haselnusstorte mit Erdbeer Schlagsahne

Topped with juicy ripe strawberries in whipped cream, this filbert-rich dessert is positively irresistible!

- Graham cracker crumbs (about 3 tablespoons)
- 2 cups sugar
- ½ teaspoon ground allspice
- 1 teaspoon grated lemon peel
- 1 cups (about 1 lb.) filberts, grated in rotary-type grater
- 6 egg yolks (½ cup)
- 6 egg whites (¾ cup)
- ¼ teaspoon salt
- 1 tablespoon light corn syrup
- 1 teaspoon water
- 1 egg white, slightly beaten
- Strawberry Whipped Cream (see recipe)

1. Thoroughly grease a 6½-cup ring mold and coat evenly with graham cracker crumbs; set aside.

2. Blend sugar, allspice, and lemon peel in a large bowl; mix in the filberts until completely blended.

3. Beat egg yolks until thick and lemon colored. Using a fork, blend into nut mixture.

4. Using a clean bowl and beater, beat the 6 egg whites with the salt until stiff, not dry, peaks are formed. Blend into nut mixture. Turn into prepared mold; spread evenly using the back of a spoon.

5. Bake at 350°F. 45 to 55 minutes. Remove torte from oven (leave oven on); cool 10 to 15 min. on a wire rack. Loosen mold and turn torte out onto an ungreased baking sheet before glazing.

6. Blend corn syrup and water; brush over top of torte. Brush entire torte with egg white.

7. Return torte to oven for 5 minutes. Transfer to cake plate. Serve warm or at room temperature with Strawberry Whipped Cream.

One 9-in. torte

Erdbeer Schlagsahne

Slice 2 pts. rinsed, hulled, fresh strawberries (reserve a few whole berries for garnish). Fold berries into 3 cups sweetened whipped cream. Mound mixture in center of torte; garnish with reserved berries (see photo).

Napfkuchen

Here's a kaffeeklatsch spécialité to please all "kaffeeklatschers."

- 2¼ cups sifted regular all-purpose flour
- 2¼ teaspoons baking powder
- ½ cup butter
- 1 tablespoon grated lemon peel
- 1 teaspoon vanilla extract
- ½ cup sugar
- 4 egg yolks (½ cup), beaten until thick and lemon colored
- ¼ cup milk
- 4 egg whites (½ cup)
- ½ cup sugar

1. Butter a 2-qt. (8-in.) fluted tubed or Turk's-head mold; set aside. Blend the flour and baking powder; set aside.

2. In a bowl, cream butter, lemon peel, and extract. Add ½ cup sugar gradually, creaming thoroughly after each addition. Add the beaten egg yolks gradually, beating well after each addition.

3. Beating only until smooth after each addition, alternately add dry ingredients in thirds and milk in halves to creamed mixture.

4. Using clean bowl and beater, beat the egg whites until frothy. Add the ½ cup sugar gradually, beating well after each addition. Beat until stiff peaks are formed. Gently fold into batter; turn into prepared mold.

5. Bake at 350°F. about 55 min., or until cake tests done.

6. Invert pan on tube end and let cake hang in pan 1 hour. If cake is higher than tube, invert between two wire racks so top of cake does not touch any surface.

7. Loosen cake from pan, invert, and remove cake. Sprinkle with Vanilla Confectioners' Sugar or, if desired, spread with warm Chocolate Glaze (see recipe) allowing about 2½ hrs. for glaze to set.

One 8-in. cake

Chocolate Glaze—In a saucepan, partially melt 4 oz. semisweet chocolate and ¼ cup butter over hot (not simmering) water, being careful not to overheat. Remove from water and with a spoon beat vigorously until blended. Quickly spread on the cake while mixture is still warm.

Here are some tips to keep you from falling flat on your travel etiquette

By JULIE SMITH

AN AMERICAN lawyer in Bogota, Colombia, created a minor incident not long ago.

After he had been kept waiting over an hour for a confirmed appointment, he walked out on the Minister of Finance. He failed to realize that Latins, unlike North Americans, refuse to be dominated by the tyranny of time and often think nothing of being an hour late.

Other Americans who have failed to familiarize themselves with the way things are done abroad have even run afoul of the law. Americans have been arrested or fined or warned for such an assortment of "crimes" as: wearing mini-miniskirts in Spain; taking pictures of veiled women in the bazaars of Syria; and leaving a car in Brussels from the door on the traffic side.

"Different people honor different practices," Plutarch observed nearly 2,000 years ago, "but all honor the maintenance of their own peculiar ways." Proximity in the space age has not as yet erased this diversity, and there are "peculiar ways" aplenty which behoove the traveler on the international circuit to honor.

Let us begin with a few pointers on dining in Europe:

Send or bring flowers to a European hostess and remember it's often customary to tip the cook.

When pouring wine, do not touch the bottle to the glass. That's gauche.

Do not sip your drink in a Swedish home until the hostess has made her welcoming remarks. Thereafter, drink only after a "skål" or toast. Ladies do not propose these toasts, and don't toast the hostess.

Be prepared to dine late in Spain and all Latin lands, where the cocktail hour doesn't get underway until everyone in town is asleep.

Moving on to the Far East, gird yourself for the Chinese banquet, a four- or five-hour affair, with the most succulent dishes served near the end of the meal. If you're the guest of honor in Hong Kong or Taipei, take the seat facing the door and remember it's polite to leave a bit of food on your plate.

When you are in Japan, however, don't begin a dish unless you're going to finish all of it. Do not sit on your floor cushion until the other guests begin to do so, and do not, whatever you do, invite the Japanese lady of the house to join you.

Dining is an obvious stumbling block for many Americans abroad; a less obvious but no less important matter involves what the American is to do with his and other people's hands when not at the table. The answer in Europe is that you shake them with anyone and everyone in sight at the slightest provocation.

There is even protocol in some places about how and with whom you should shake hands. Confronted with a roomful of industrialists in Germany, for example, you start with the most important and work down; on the Iberian Peninsula, you generate good will with a series of arms-around-the-shoulders embraces.

This sort of Continental effusiveness might be misplaced in Britain, but it's most common in Spain and Latin America. There's also the Latin practice of talking with one's hands, notably "body" Italian, very apt for saying the right thing at the right time. Closing the forefinger, middle finger and thumb and shaking them at nose level conveys extreme frustration and puzzlement throughout Italy. When an Italian waves with his hands palm-up (a gesture which means "come here" in America), he's really saying good-bye.

Like manners and mores, temperaments vary from country to country. Everyone does not laugh or cry or get angry for the same reason. A Japanese may talk about a tragedy with a smile on his face; expressing sorrow freely or saddening his listener is considered a breach of etiquette. An Iranian, on the other hand, believes that anyone who hides his feelings lacks humanity.

The old advice about "when in Rome" is as sound today as when St. Ambrose whispered it to St. Augustine en route by donkey to the Eternal City. Knowing what the Romans do is not so simple in a world full of oddities. Who would know that: when bathing in Japan, you soap and rinse before entering the tub; when catching a bus in Paris, you take a numbered ticket and get in line; when entering the Bolshoi in Moscow, you are considered a boor if you do not check your coat?

Males should be extra cautious about the courting customs of far-away places, too. In the Philippines, for example, the groom's family is expected to pay for the wedding reception, ring, gowns, flowers, and transportation of the bridesmaids and ushers. What is more, such is the respect for the aged that elderly Filipinos live with their daughters and sons-in-law.

Doctor Shows How To

Check Thinning Hair and Wash Away Dandruff

from BOTH Men and Women

by Richard Estrin
Owner and Manufacturer

A leading New York physician, working with a team of hair and scalp specialists, has developed a simple, medicated home treatment plan, that may mean the difference between saving your hair, or losing it to eventual baldness!

This important advance in hair and scalp care meets the very serious needs of so many people troubled by thinning hair, dandruff, itchy scalp, dull, dry hair, minor scalp irritations. All these symptoms can lead to serious chronic scalp diseases. If you are one of millions troubled by these common symptoms — read this carefully.

LOSS of HAIR THROUGH NEGLECT

Many people lose hair, even become bald unnecessarily through neglect and mistreatment. Yet Nature gives you fair warning. Two such warnings are itching scalp and excess dandruff. These signs, as well as subsequent loss of hair, appear to be more common among men. Women tend to take better care of their hair. They shampoo regularly, brush vigorously and some have frequent conditioning sessions with hair dressers.

Is This for Women Too?

But don't be misled or feel complacent just because you are a woman and you appear to have a full head of hair. Many women tend to suffer from serious scalp problems and even thinning hair, or partial baldness are not uncommon! There are over 500,000 bald-headed women in this country!

What most people fail to realize is that the scalp is skin and needs the same careful cleansing, nourishing and stimulation we give skin on the rest of our body, no matter if you are a man or woman!

The healthy condition of the hair, therefore, is mainly dependent on the condition of the scalp and proper stimulation of sebaceous glands and muscles.

A Medical Fact

With proper hygienic care, hair can grow longer and stronger! This is due to the added power of stimulated scalp muscles, which contract and keep the hairs in close touch with their papillae for a long time.

HOW NATURE WARNS YOU ABOUT APPROACHING BALDNESS
Check These 8 Danger Signals NOW!

Anyone of the above danger signals could mean a serious hair or scalp problem and be treated at once.

For the First Time a 4-Way Home Treatment

Through exhaustive research and testing, this team of hair and scalp specialists has formulated an amazingly simple 4-way home treatment to combat most common trouble-some problems.

The treatment begins with the use of a specially designed Scalp Stimulator. With its hundreds of magic "fingers", it is scientifically designed to loosen dry, flaky dandruff and bring fresh revitalizing blood closer to the surface to stimulate and nourish hungry hair follicles. You'll delight in the tingling and exhilarating feeling of your scalp after each treatment.

Next they added a unique Medicated Mint Shampoo containing a combination of natural and essential oils and chlorophyll in a mild coconut oil base. This shampoo not only cleans away surface dirt but more important, reaches down deep and loosens pore impurities embedded in the scalp, and rinses away dandruff. A shampoo once a week keeps hair and scalp thoroughly clean.

The third step in this treatment is an exhilarating application of Balsam Peru Lotion. It is a hair-conditioning emulsion of rich herbal extracts and hexachlorophene in a natural lanolin and vegetable oil base. Apply after shampoo to feed, lubricate and moisturize hair and scalp.

To complete the Treatment they added Medicated Sulphur-H—anti-dandruff formula, a highly effective tissue healing ointment. It is a greaseless mixture of colloidal sulphur, and lanolin. Rubbed into the scalp, its antiseptic actions goes to work immediately, positively checks itching, infectious dandruff, heals minor scalp irritations and imparts new body and lustre to the hair.

Each of the four items play an important part in your hair and scalp's well-being and each should be used in conjunction with the others according to this simple and easy plan. A few minutes a day insures you of keeping hair and scalp healthy and looking its best.

Nothing Else Like It

So positive have been the benefits of this treatment that it is easy to understand why professional hairdressers feel these products are the most important hair and scalp treatment items developed.

The medically developed products in this Treatment are manufactured and quality-controlled by a thirty year old laboratory famous for hair and skin-care products under the name of Queen Helene.

Thousands of beauty and barber shops are using these products and many are charging as much as $10 a treatment.

Now Available to the Public for the First Time!

This doctor-developed treatment is called TOP-CHECK. It is now available to the public in limited quantities only through certain select stores. The complete TOP-CHECK KIT sells for just $5.95 (less than 20¢ a treatment). A bargain when you think of what it will do for your hair and scalp.

How You May

Never Take a Laxative Again!

New Miracle Regulator Helps Relief Come Naturally

New York, N.Y. (Special)—Research has discovered a wonder-working substance that helps correct constipation without laxative!

Doctors say most constipation occurs when waste loses moisture in the colon. To give relief, laxatives have to force action—flush, irritate or distend the intestine.

The new miracle substance works in a completely different way. It helps natural moisture in the colon work more effectively. Thus by working on the problem, not on you, it helps correct constipation as no laxative can.

This discovery is now available under the name REGUTOL. It is not habit-forming. No warning on the label—no prescription needed. Try REGUTOL—you may never take a laxative again!

Barbara Bain and
Martin Landau:
Costars of
"Mission: Impossible"

say— "Hollywood Marriage Is Possible"

By PEER J. OPPENHEIMER

FOR BARBARA Bain and Martin Landau, costars of tv's "Mission: Impossible," it was hate at first sight. Naturally, they married and fought happily ever after.

"We met 11 years ago at an acting class I was teaching," Martin told me in a Los Angeles health-food restaurant where he carefully watched his vitamins as well as his diet. "I thought she was just an empty-headed model who had a lot of nerve walking into an acting school where, well, you know, people just crawl on the ground!"

I met Barbara for lunch at an Italian restaurant a few days later. As she stuffed herself with antipasto ("I always eat like a truck driver..."), she told me, "I hated him. I found him really crude, shallow, and arrogant."

They met again at a party the following week, began talking, and reversed their opinions. They were married 15 months later—twice! The first time was at New York's city hall on a rainy Thursday morning, Jan. 31, 1957.

"Our families felt left out, and so we did it all over again—with a rabbi," Martin said. "That made a lot of parents happy."

Neither one will forget the open-mouthed astonishment of the elevator operator who took them down en route to the second ceremony. They had lived together in the apartment building for ten days, now here was Barbara wearing a white bridal gown and veil!

Brooklyn-born Martin originally wanted to become an artist. "I studied at an art school during the day and worked evenings on a newspaper for $150 a week—until I just quit one day to become an actor."

A Chicago girl, Barbara was graduated from the University of Illinois with a degree in sociology. "I was ready to save the world. My mind was set on becoming a teacher. Then a friend suggested modeling. Of course, the pay difference was a good selling point; teachers got $40 a week at that time while models earned $40 an hour."

Barbara became a high-fashion model in New York but could never become totally committed to her work. "I didn't consider a four-hour discussion of lipstick shades important. It was on a whim that I went to the acting class."

At the beginning of their marriage they had a hard time making ends meet. But gradually Martin's career gained momentum. As he became more and more involved with films, they moved to the West, where Barbara's professional pickings were lean. Still she didn't mind too much, being busy becoming the mother of two daughters.

Yet it was Barbara who became one of the original stars of "Mission: Impossible." Martin started as a guest but gave such an outstanding performance that he did 26 out of the first 28 shows the first year. He is now a regular.

Working together has not hurt their marriage. Says Martin, "Living with Barbara is a fascinating experience. Our tastes coincide in almost every respect. We read the same books. We like the same music. We even can walk into a supermarket and pick the same things."

He candidly admits that they have big fights, invariably about small things. Barbara agrees. "When he starts yelling around, I take it as a personal offense. Particularly if I feel I'm not to blame." She pointed to years of fights about starched shirts.

"Why do you always shout at me? I don't starch them!" Barbara says angrily.

"That's right, but you sent them out!"

"How did I know they'd starch them? I've told them to stop doing it!"

"Change laundries then!"

"I've changed five times already."

"Contrary to what people may think, this kind of relationship is good for a couple," Martin insists. "We don't bottle things up within us—we can live and work together and like it."

I lost my husband before I lost 70 pounds.

By Farley Heward—as told to Ruth L. McCarthy

I LIVE in a hotel. Alone. And I can't tell you how many times I used to call on the help to zip up my dresses. My problem, of course, was my weight. I'm only a little over five feet one inch tall, yet, at one point, I weighed as much as 198 pounds. Most of this I carried in my upper arms and from my waist down. When I walked, I waddled. Was I ever fat! A big reason, I think, why my marriage broke up.

As long as I can remember, I've had to fight fat. Once, I recall, a friend of mine sent me a snapshot, showing herself, her brother and me. I was so disgusted with it that I took a pair of scissors, cut me out of the middle, glued the two pieces together, and sent it back to her. She was furious.

Perhaps one reason for my weight problem was that I've always been a good cook. When my husband married me, I was fairly thin. But when he left me, I was fat. He really went for my cooking. In the beginning, he used to want me to put on weight. "I don't want anybody else to look at you," he'd say. And I believed him. But in the end, he didn't want to look at me, either. So we were divorced.

After that, I crash-dieted. I think I've been on every diet ever invented. The banana-and-milk diet. The grapefruit diet. The low-carbohydrate diet. The cottage cheese diet. The liquid diets. I can't remember which one I tried at the time, but whichever it was, it worked. Temporarily. At least, I lost enough weight to satisfy me for a while. But only a short while. As soon as I went back to my regular way of eating, I began to gain. My appetite was enormous. Pancakes, French toast, spicy Italian foods, baked beans, ice cream, candy—I ate anything that was good. And fattening. In about one-eighth the time it had taken me to lose the weight, I had put it all back on again.

It wasn't a very good example to set for my daughter, I must admit. But I guess I didn't give it much thought at the time. As a result, she learned young what it's like to struggle with the scale.

The years rolled on, and eventually, I came to Buffalo, New York, to work in a very large beauty salon. I'm a hairdresser and wigger, by profession. At the shop, the wig ovens are on the second floor. And each time I had to climb those stairs, I really puffed. Everybody knew when Farley was going to shrink a wig. Too bad I couldn't shrink myself.

Finally, my weight began to affect my health. My blood pressure was high. And headaches were frequent. I'm ashamed to say, however, that it was not until I had to spend ten dollars on alterations of a size 22½ dress that I decided I had to do something about my weight. But what? I'd already tried diet fads, gimmicks and reducing pills, and all I did was go down and up and down and up the scale.

One day, during a break at the beauty parlor, I picked up a magazine and saw the story of the woman who'd lost close to one hundred pounds with the help of a little vitamin and mineral reducing plan candy. It was called Ayds. And it contained no harmful drugs.

I thought if she could do it, maybe I could, too. So, on the way home, I bought a box of Ayds at the drugstore. The chocolate fudge-type, though I've since tried the vanilla-caramel and the new chocolate mint ones.

How did I take them? Before meals with a hot drink, just as the directions say. And I didn't have to make any special meals. Fact is, I don't have any cooking facilities at the hotel, so I eat out. In the morning, I'd have my Ayds and coffee in my room, then go down and have juice, two eggs, toast with a pat of butter, and more coffee. At noon, I wouldn't be very hungry. But I'd have another Ayds with coffee, and maybe a cup of soup and a sandwich. And for dinner, after still another Ayds, I'd order a regular meal. Often I wouldn't even feel like dessert. That was the great thing about the Ayds Plan. I really felt like eating less. I'd found something, at last, to help me cut back my appetite. If I did get the urge to eat between meals, there were always more Ayds. They taste just like ordinary candy, so they satisfied my craving for sweets.

Soon, the weight began to come off. Pound after pound. I weighed myself daily in the five-and-ten across the street, so I know. I've got to admit that I also did some isometrics to help tighten up the muscles. But they're easy.

I realized, suddenly, the stairs were easier to climb. The headaches were less frequent. And my clothes were getting big. By the time I'd lost seventy pounds, nothing fit. But I felt great.

I lost so much weight in the thighs and legs that I can now wear medium-length stockings, instead of extra-long ones. Even my shoe size has gone from 8½ D to 7 C. You should see me scurry up to the wig ovens these days.

One thing more that makes me feel good. When I was heavy, and friends used to introduce me to a man, everything would go along fine—while I was sitting down. But the minute I stood up, that was the end. Today, thanks to Ayds, I'm as popular standing as sitting. Who knows? I may even marry again.

How My Son Became a Hero

Mom's proud of how Stephen earns his own way.

For National Newspaperboy Day, a mother tells how her teen-age son made headlines in the very newspaper he delivers! By MONNA JOHNSON

WHEN I shook my drowsy teen-age son awake at 4:30 that morning, I never dreamed that this was the day I would become the mother of a "hero."

Stephen, 14, had been running a newspaper route for the Muncie (Ind.) Star for just a week then, and on this day, after he'd left the papers, he was supposed to return later on, knock at each door and receive payment for the week.

Stephen knocked on one door, he told me later, and waited for the elderly woman who lived there to come to the door. When she didn't, he knocked again. After a while, he peered through the glass pane in the door. What he saw inside scared him.

In the morning light, he could make out a woman's body lying on the floor. He tried the door and found it was locked. He kept knocking—"more like banging," he told me—hoping the noise would rouse her. But she never moved.

I suppose Stephen could have just shrugged and gone about his business. We've all heard of how crowds of people will simply walk around a man who has fallen unconscious on a city street.

But Stephen isn't like that. He raced next door and banged on a neighbor's door. "Something awful's happened," he told him excitedly. "We'd better get an ambulance." He didn't leave until he was sure the woman would be taken care of. As he learned later, she had fallen into a coma. If he'd turned his back on her, she would probably have died.

When Stephen returned home from his paper route that morning, he told me what had happened. I said he'd done the right thing, and then we both forgot all about it. Several months later, we were both startled when the Muncie Star office called. They reminded us of that morning; Stephen, they said, was a hero.

Stephen was in a state of shock. "A hero? Who, me? I didn't do anything," he kept saying. But everyone else insisted just as strongly that what my boy had done was to save a woman's life.

We went down together to the office when they presented Stephen with the Valor Award of the American Newspaper Publishers Association. Stephen is the first boy from the Muncie Star ever to receive this award.

The plaque hangs in a place of honor in our home. To us, it represents a lot more than just the events of that one morning. It stands for all the new people Stephen has met along his paper route. It stands, too, for the special sense of belonging and pride that you feel for a city when you're the first to walk its streets in the morning.

My younger son, Daniel Lee, who's 12, figures that he, too, owns a piece of the plaque since he helps Stephen deliver the papers on those days when they're extra heavy with news.

These days, if Stephen is a little late getting back from his route, I know it's because he has stopped to talk with the woman he saved. She's usually awake and waiting for him when he comes by with her paper, and when he can, he stops to visit with her. She likes to hear all about him and to reminisce about her late husband or about the son she lost in the Battle of the Bulge. "Gosh, Mom," he tells me, "she talks to me as if I were her own son."

I know it makes him feel good to think that, because of him, this woman is a little less lonely. I'm prouder of that than of the day he became an official "hero." ♦

Now Possible To Shrink Painful Hemorrhoids

And Promptly Stop Itching, Relieve Pain In Most Cases.

Science has found a medication with the ability, in most cases—to stop burning itch, relieve pain and actually shrink hemorrhoids.

In case after case doctors proved, while gently relieving pain and itching, actual reduction (shrinkage) took place.

The answer is Preparation H—there is no other formula like it for hemorrhoids. Preparation H also soothes inflamed, irritated tissues and helps prevent further infection. In ointment or suppository form.
