New Secretary Of Defense Named

Unofficial Adviser Now Official

WASHINGTON (AP) — The ruggedly handsome lawyer strolled out of his Connecticut Avenue office a block and a half from the White House and saw the familiar covey of photographers waiting for him.

"How are you, it's been a long time," said Clark Clifford as he headed for President Johnson's office Friday afternoon after the announcement he would be nominated for secretary of defense.

Included photographers and all the other signs of life in official Washington have long been familiar to the Kansas-born, St. Louis-reared Clifford, who is 61. For if any man could lay claim to the unofficial title of confidential adviser while Democrats have held the presidency, the 6-foot-7 Clifford could.

He has been a confidant of Harry Truman, John F. Kennedy and Lyndon B. Johnson. Prominent Democrats who never reached the White House also have sought his counsel particularly because of his political astuteness.

"He has been a very wise and prudent counselor to many presidents, and certainly to me," said Johnson in announcing the nomination. The President cited Clifford's advice on defense and diplomatic matters.

The latest mission for Johnson was a trip to Vietnam and other Asian countries concerned with the war.

But presidential missions began long ago for Clifford, who also has managed to acquire one of the largest law practices in Washington. He represented General Electric in 1961 when the firm had to deal with claims totaling millions of dollars following its conviction for price-fixing.

Senate Leaders Applaud Choice

By JACK BELL
WASHINGTON (AP) — President Johnson apparently has bought a measure of peace with Congress in his appointment of Clark Clifford as secretary of defense.

Before he steps into the shoes of Robert S. McNamara on or before March 1, Clifford, the former counsel to Harry S. Truman and a top adviser to John F. Kennedy and Johnson, will face a friendly inquiry into his Vietnam views by the hawkishly inclined Senate Armed Services Committee.

He is expected to be confirmed speedily.

The effectiveness of Johnson's action in moving a comparative outsider into the thankless job of running the Pentagon was demonstrated when the appointment of Clifford was greeted with cheers by both Sens. J. W. Fulbright, D-Ark., and Richard B. Russell, D-Ga.

Russell, who heads the Armed Services group and is by way of Actually, the "toll" was voluntary and most of the Twin Falls residents driving on Addison Ave. W. stopped their cars to deposit their dime and dollars in the Keystone Cop's collecting bucket. The money will be given to the March of Dimes.

The Keystone Kops were at it again in Twin Falls. This time they were operating a toll road along Addison Avenue West.

The Keystone Kops, members of the Snake River Lions Club, operated the toll road for collecting funds for the March of Dimes. According to Lloyd Cox, chairman of the toll road, between $350 and $400 was netted. The toll road was operated between 9:30 a.m. and 4 p.m.

Each year the Snake River Lions Club sponsors a toll road as its March of Dimes project. Assisting the Snake River Lions Club were the Idaho State Police, Twin Falls Sheriff's office and the Twin Falls Police Department.

Mr. Cox termed the campaign a "very successful" one and said "a response" of the public was "excellent."

He added, "Our thanks to the police department, sheriff's office and the state police for their assistance."

Junior Miss

MOSCOW, Idaho (AP) — Miss Donna Miyasaki, 17, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Tommy Miyasaki, Sugar City, was named Miss Idaho Junior Miss Saturday.

Miss Miyasaki won the creative performing arts award. She says she plans to attend Ricks College and Brigham Young University, majoring in nursing.

She received a $500 savings bond, a matched set of luggage, a camera set and a trophy.

She'll also compete in the National Junior Miss competition in Mobile, Ala., March 15.

First runner-up was Miss Marie Wernette, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Florida E. Wernette, Blackfoot. She won the youth fitness division.

Makeshift Life On Island: Wild, Difficult, Wonderful

By LINDA DEUTSCH
LOS ANGELES (AP) — Bruce Johnson and Shari Quam, who set out three months ago to prove that man could start from scratch on a desert island and make it, came home Friday after 90 days and 40 nights on the South Seas island of Wagada.

The adventure was wild, difficult and wonderful, they agreed.

Bronzed and smiling, the couple — former physical education instructor in his 40s and a 22-year-old girl friend, a former nurse — said it was "a good experience" but they wouldn't do it again.

"We can't say it was an ideal paradise, because it wasn't,

Johnson told an airport news conference. The bearded adventurer said the greatest problem was getting food and coping with rats, bats and ants.

"We sometimes went without eating for four or five days," he said. Food was so hard to find, and the brown-eyed Miss Quam. She said the staples of their diet were crabs and coconuts, and after awhile they couldn't stand the sight of crabs.

The Santa Monica, Calif., couple traveled to the uninhabited island in the Laotian group of about 200 miles southeast of Suba on a boat heading there to pickup coconuts.

'68 Budget Deficit Figure Is Slashed

By JOSEPH R. COYNE
WASHINGTON (AP) — The budget President Johnson will submit to Congress on Jan. 20 will offer less of a stimulant to the economy than his two previous budgets.

Administration officials said Saturday the budget deficit figure count has been projected at $2 billion for the fiscal year which begins July 1 — the lowest in three years.

This is the bookkeeping system which economists consider the best guide to the impact of federal activity on the economy. It is one of three systems of government accounting.

If the national income account runs a deficit the government is priming the economy. The extent depends on the size of the deficit.

During last year's economic sluggishness, the national income account deficit rose substantially, and in the third quarter reached $1.7 billion at an annual rate.

The deficit under this accounting is expected to reach $1.5 billion during the current fiscal year; it totaled $7.5 billion a year earlier. It ran a $300-million surplus in the year which ended June 30, 1967.

At the same time, officials confirmed earlier indications the administration will seek to impose higher taxes on individuals beginning on April 1 and on corporations retroactively in January.

These dates will be disclosed officially on Monday when the House Ways and Means Committee for the third time holds public hearings on the proposed budget.

The committee then plans to set aside the tax bill until it gets a detailed look at Johnson's budget and economic message.

The budget is a complex of 100 pages of numbers, tables, and charts — including another $1 billion in industrial, agricultural and personal income tax increases.

It also includes a 10 percent tax surcharge.

Prisoner Treated At Hospital For Aspirin Overdose

RUPERT — A Mindkoda County prisoner, who reportedly took an overdose of aspirin while in jail, was back in jail Saturday evening after being treated at the Idaho Memorial Hospital.

According to police reports, another county prisoner told officers that Earl Wright, 23, who was being held for attempting to obtain money under false pretenses, had taken some aspirin, but did not know how many. He was taken to the hospital where he was given some medicine.

He was arrested about 1:30 p.m. Friday after attempting to cash a check at Radio Service and Rogers in Rupert.

Profits In Strike Said High

By The Associated Press
The world copper industry "is making a tremendous profit at the expense of striking miners and fabricators" in copper states, Rep. Arnold Olsen, D-Mont., charged Friday.

Olsen said he made the charge in a letter urging President Johnson to use the prestige of his office to bring a halt to increasing copper imports and to encourage "significant, sincere collective bargaining."

Saturday marks the 100th day of the nationwide copper strike which has led to an estimated 61,000 workers.

Clark Views Possibilities Of '68 Riots

By C. YATES McDANIEL
WASHINGTON (AP) — Atty. Gen. Ramsey Clark said Saturday that while law enforcement officials are determined to limit riots this summer, the nation must prepare for the worst.

Clark told a news conference a series of conferences he is holding with police chiefs and other officials is based on the premise that "riots can be prevented by the man in the middle. And in 1968 that is the police."

He said this week's meeting — as will future gatherings with officials of the nation's 125 largest cities — deal intensively with riot control. Clark added, "balancing between 'overreacting' and 'underreacting.'"

Clark said his sessions with city law officers are giving highest priority to gathering and using police intelligence to keep track of the potential "underbasis of violence" and those promoting extremist views.

Funds Freed

More Than 2,000 File Applications

More than 2,000 persons from throughout the Magic Valley area crowded through the Department of Employment office in Twin Falls Friday and Saturday to apply for jobs with a national firm that is considering this area as a location for a new plant.

J. M. Catterton, assistant manager of the employment office, said the two representatives of the firm who were on hand to conduct interviews, were "very impressed" with the turnout.

It had been indicated that results of this labor survey would be an important factor in determining the plant's location. Name of the concern has been kept confidential, but it has been identified as a national concern and that this will be its sixth factory — the first in the West.

One of the questions in the application blanks filled out by those seeking jobs may be an indication of the product manufactured by the firm.

The question asked was if the applicant had any previous experience with industrial sewing. This could mean a plant connected with the garment industry.

Liberal Alliance In Turmoil Over Challenge To LBJ

By HARRY KELLY
WASHINGTON (AP) — The liberal turmoil over Sen. Eugene McCarthy's challenge to President Johnson is heating toward a climax that threatens to shatter an alliance hammered together 20 years ago.

A pro-Johnson union leader predicts labor members will march out of the liberal American Labor Union building if the ADA endorses McCarthy in his confrontation with Johnson over the Vietnam war.

The upheaval within the ADA exemplifies — and some say magnifies — the stresses and strains within liberal ranks over the war and the Johnson-McCarthy contest.

It puts friends who have worked together for a score of years into opposite camps or leaves them uncomfortable straddling fences.

Washington lawyer Joseph Rauh Jr., an ADA vice chairman who once headed the Democratic committee in the nation's capital, says there will be a move at the special ADA board meeting Feb. 10-11 to put the original ADA record as endorsing McCarthy.

"There will be a motion to endorse McCarthy and then there will be a brawl," says Rauh, a McCarthy supporter.

"I could be a perfectly happy member," Rauh added in an interview. "If it weren't for the latent threat of the Johnson crowd to walk out."

The ADA board, with dovish Harvard professor John Kenneth Galbraith as national chairman, meets on Feb. 10-11. A showdown would involve such figures as I.W. Abel, president of the United Steelworkers of America, Walter P. Reuther, United Automobile Workers president, Sen. Wayne Morse, D-Ore., historian and former White House aide Arthur M. Schlesinger Jr.; Richard Goodwin, former assistant and speechwriter for President John F. Kennedy and for President Johnson; and civil rights leader Bayard Rustin.

Working to rally Johnson sentiment is Gus Tyler, assistant president of the International Ladies Garment Workers Union. Rustin calls Tyler "hatchet man" for the White House.

Tyler grins at this. He says he also tried to keep, or bring, liberals in line for Harry S. Truman and John F. Kennedy.

"If you want to call it hatchet man," he says, "I'll take credit for it down the line."

Tyler figures the McCarthy people have a 50-50 chance of winning an endorsement for their man.

But he feels the tide is running toward Johnson again. "They (McCarthy people) would have had a better chance of winning an endorsement if the ADA had the meeting when Galbraith wanted it. But the McCarthy campaign is proving to be a dud so far," Tyler says.

Grandmother Of Dillon Testifies

By FRED DOBBS
Time-News Staff Writer
JEROME — It was an all-day court session here Saturday as the prosecution in the first degree murder trial of Michael Dillon, 18, continued to lay a foundation for its case against the defendant.

Young Dillon is accused of killing Mrs. Alta Smerly, 66, in her Jerome home on the evening of MARCH 14, 1967.

The trial started last Monday and is expected to continue for another week. So far 87 pieces of evidence have been submitted and about 20 witnesses have appeared for questioning.

Friday, three FBI agents from Washington, D.C., testified with one of them saying a palm print found in Mrs. Smerly's home is the same as a palm print from the hand of the defendant.

Twelve people testified in Saturday's session, with the last of witnesses led by Dillon's grandmother, Mrs. Mary Dillon, 57, Quincy St., Twin Falls, and Dillon's brother-in-law, John Laswell, Jerome.

Defense attorney James May protested the appearance of Mrs. Dillon, claiming she was a prosecution witness, and should not be forced to testify against her grandson. He also alleged she destroyed some evidence following the murder of Mrs. Smerly. He requested she be advised of her rights.

Mrs. Dillon washed a pair of blood-soaked socks worn to her house by Dillon.

Fifth District Court Judge Thorton Ward overruled the objection and she was allowed to testify. She said she washed the socks without knowing anything about their importance to the case.

She says Dillon came to her home on the morning of March 15, then left after getting a pay check. She said she made him remove the socks so she could wash them, but told the court she was "informed" that three by Dillon that the blood on the socks was sheep blood.

There was no cross examination of Mrs. Dillon by the defense. Her house is about a block from where Mrs. Smerly's car was found abandoned in Twin Falls.

The prosecution alleges Dillon killed Mrs. Smerly, then took

Blaiberg Becomes Longest Heart Transplant Survivor

By DAVID Y. PAINTE
CAPE TOWN, South Africa (AP) — At about 4:30 p.m. Saturday — or 9:30 a.m. EST — Dr. Philip Blaiberg reached another milestone in his life with another man's heart. He became the longest survivor of a heart transplant operation.

In his 19th day with the heart of Clive Haupt, who died of a brain hemorrhage, the retired South African dentist had lost his procreative feebleness and revived vitality by Christian Barnard, the chief heart transplant surgeon, and other medical men at Groote Schuur Hospital said Blaiberg continued to make excellent progress and that his body showed no signs of rejecting the new heart.

But for Mrs. Blaiberg it was "D-Day."

"I know it is just superstition, but I have been very worried. On Sunday I shall feel much happier," she said.

The previous longest survivor was Louis Washkansky, Cape Town grocer, who died 18 days after receiving the heart of automobile accident victim Denise Darvall, 25, at 5:52 a.m. Dec. 3.

Blaiberg received his new heart at about 3:30 a.m. Jan. 2. His condition before the operation had been weakened and doctors said he did not have much longer to live.

Washkansky died of what was diagnosed as pneumonia on Dec. 31. His new heart beat strongly until a few minutes before his death.

LAW ENFORCEMENT OFFICERS surrounded a suburban Overland Park, Kan., apartment building in which two bank robbers took refuge Friday afternoon. A Kansas Highway Patrolman, Sgt. Eldon Miller, was killed by shots fired from the apartment. One of the two men in the apartment was shot in the stomach, but the second one escaped. The robbers set off a dynamite blast at the Overland Park City Hall in an apparent diversionary action. (AP wirephoto)

Second Man In Robbery, Death Sought

KANSAS CITY (AP) — A man charged with bank robbery and the murder of a Kansas highway patrolman was under guard in a hospital today while officers pressed a search for a second gunman.

Sgt. Eldon Miller, 48, the first Kansas patrolman to die by gunfire, was killed by a carbine bullet that crashed through the windshield of his patrol car and struck him between the eyes Friday during a gun battle.

Henry Floyd Brown, 38, Cedar Rapids, Iowa, was wounded in the 15-minute battle at a two-story apartment building an hour after the Metcalf State Bank in suburban Overland Park was robbed by two men.

Police recovered $13,100 from Brown's apartment.

James W. Bouska, Johnson County attorney, filed bank robbery and murder charges against Brown and a man identified as Bud Jackson, 45.

Police said Jackson escaped on foot from the scene of the shooting.

Two robbers, with theatrical make-up on their faces and carrying carbines, entered the bank, walked down a corridor to the drive-in window and forced two men in the cage to hand over the money.

At the same time, a small bomb exploded outside the Overland Park City Hall, breaching windows in the police offices but doing little other damage. It drew patrol cars to headquarters and police said it obviously was a diversionary stunt.

Senator Feels Nixon Has More Potential Support

By The Associated Press

Kentucky Sen. Thurston B. Morton, a former Republican national chairman, says Richard M. Nixon appears to have more potential convention delegate support than any other GOP presidential prospect.

Morton also told newsmen in Boston Friday that Michigan Gov. George Romney seemed to have the united support of the Republican governors six months ago but that disaffection has prompted several of them to be favorite-son candidates.

The Kentucky senator said congressional elections in New England, New York and New Jersey will be the key to whether the GOP can capture control of the House for the first time in 14 years.

Minnesota Sen. Eugene J. McCarthy, campaigning in Wisconsin for the Democratic presidential nomination, told a Milwaukee audience that included more than 100 civil rights demonstrators American Negroes constitute a "colonial nation living among us."

"We have had in this nation a colonial dependency, a colonial nation—living among us in the way we have exploited the Negro," he said. He added the Negro never has been given "the full benefits of citizenship."

"McCarthy is running in six Democratic primaries, basically in opposition to U.S. policy in Vietnam.

A prospective third-party candidate for the White House, former Alabama Gov. George C. Wallace, discussed war critics in a speech in Lexington, Ky.

He said "pseudo-intellectual" professors abhor bombing Hiroshima but "shouted with glee when we bombed European capitals in World War II that were on the opposite side from the Russians."

Wallace also had a warning for any demonstrator who gets in the way of his lousiness if he's elected president. He said "they'd better not lay down in front of my car or it will be the time they ever lay in front of a car."

In other political developments:

Romney told Washington newsmen he "closing the gap" in his New Hampshire primary campaign against Nixon, his chief—but unannounced—opponent there. Nixon's formal entry is expected soon.

Nixon told an audience in San Antonio, Tex., this country should pursue a policy of "preventive diplomacy" to help other countries repel aggression without sending Americans out to fight for them. On the Vietnam war he said "Never has so much military and diplomatic strength been used so ineffectively as by this administration."

A Reminder: Defense Begins At Home

WASHINGTON — Senate Majority Leader Mike Mansfield of Montana will deserve the gratitude of the American taxpayer if he goes through with his plan to press for additional, substantial cuts in American forces in Europe. It's about time somebody reminded the NATO countries that defense begins at home.

Mansfield has said he'll hold hearings later this month or early in February on his long-standing resolution to bring home four of the six American divisions in Germany within the next three to five years. This seems a modest goal, but the administration has been dragging its feet on it for nearly a year under the chivvying of our loyal allies, who want Uncle Sam to continue to pick up the sucker's share of the check for guarding Europe against aggression.

Last May, the United States finally worked out an agreement with Great Britain and Germany whereby 35,000 American troops will come home this spring. Mansfield was not satisfied with that deal, and now he says the balance of payments crisis makes it imperative that more U.S. troops be relieved of the burden of protecting such jokers as Charlie de Gaulle.

He couldn't be more right. Our allies are deserting the defense line as though it were a contaminated area. The French have said they'll pull an additional 5,000 men out of their forces in Germany and perhaps more, depending on the British. Charlie's digestion. The British are cutting their military commitments all over the world, which means they'll slash their Rhine Army.

If Mansfield's view that the United States should not spend its precious dollars on a Europe that refuses to help defend itself. "These nations," he says, "should have the primary responsibility for European defense, and yet none of them have provided troops at the promised levels." So far, the U.S. has had little luck in pressuring Germany for more dollar support, including buying more American bonds, and the British are seeking more offset German purchases in Britain to cover the full cost of their forces in Germany.

Meanwhile, Washington is having trouble trying to deal with other foreign countries who have wobbled on currency provisions in the Food for Peace program. The U.S. now holds excess currency for 17 nations for a total of $2.3 billion, as a result of these deadbeat tactics.

The provisions require the countries to convert local currency into dollars when it is used to pay for air travel, from-and-in countries getting ready to send troops. The amount that U.S. airlines flying in those countries would accept local currencies for this travel with the understanding the countries involved converted it into dollars as the airlines would have spendable money.

However, more and more American airlines recently have refused requests by federal agencies to accept payment for fares in local currency because the countries still convert for months. In Pakistan, for example, one U.S. airline now holds $350,000 worth of local currency, which is nice for shopping in Rawalpindi but not worth much in Chicago. Airlines also have been stuck with heavy losses as a result of currency devaluations, notably in plus old India.

Allies are wonderful, of course, but enemies are less expensive.

Washington (AP) — What does the price tag say? If the United States called a pause in the bombing of North Vietnam, and the North Vietnamese responded by slowing down their fighting in South Vietnam, then the pause would be worth it and peace talks might get started.

If the United States stopped bombing the North in the hope of a reciprocal response, but the North used the pause to build up its forces in the South with men and supplies, U.S. ground forces in the South would have to pay the price.

So far the North has never shown any intention of slowing down its own side of the war when there was an American halt to the bombing. The North has built up half-temporary or permanent, go on.

Senate Democratic Leader Mike Mansfield is the latest one to oppose the bombing. He wants a permanent halt to it. He thinks the North will call off New Year's Day may be "one small indication" that if the United States stopped the bombing, the North-Vietnamese might be willing to talk peace.

This is what he said Sunday. He was referring to the North Vietnamese statement Jan. 17 that an end to the bombing will bring peace talks. In the past Hanoi had only said such U.S. action could—rather than will—bring talks.

But North Vietnam really didn't make it that simple. Hanoi said there will be peace talks if the United States unconditionally ends the bombing and all other acts of war. But it didn't say it would stop its own bombing. The United States met its demands.

And so far President Johnson, thinking of the price tag, has refused to end the bombing. Instead, he has imposed a moratorium on our own bombing, but not on the North's.

Recruiting

It is a seller's market in education. With more and more youths clamoring for admission, no college today has to go out and recruit a student body.

Yet some are beginning to do just that, for there is a vast group of young people who are potential college material but who, for one reason or another, will never find out unless someone takes the trouble to help them.

A pioneer program of this kind is appropriately called SEEK, launched in 1966 by The City University of New York under mandate of the state legislature.

Its purpose is to provide a chance for high school graduates from poverty neighborhoods to be prepared, motivated and financially aided to enter one of the colleges of the university.

SEEK gives each candidate a protracted and individualized entrance process that can last a year or longer.

or. During that time, with the help of teachers and counselors, he either brings his scholarship up to college level or is encouraged to pursue some other goal.

During the first year, 1,400 students were enrolled, about 600 full time and 800 in part-time evening classes. Seventy-six per cent were Negro, 18 per cent Puerto Rican and 6 per cent "other." Most were between ages 17 and 20, but 10 per cent were over 26.

A similar effort in Cleveland, called Project Search, is stirring up interest among educators. Financed by the U.S. Department of Health, Education and Welfare and sponsored jointly with Cuyahoga Community College, the project has placed more than 100 people from the city's predominantly Negro Hough area in colleges and technical schools and has another 100 waiting.

SEEK, Search: Two different ways of spelling help—help not only for the individuals involved but in the long run for the nation as a whole.

Vanishing Trains

Even as the Broadway Limited and the Twentieth-Century luxury trains clatter off into history, Postmaster General O'Brien issues a denial that Post Office policies are in any way responsible for rail passenger service decline.

Under fire has been the policy of shifting the mail to other forms of transportation, notably the airlines, which are now handling first class mail on a space-available basis. This raises the question why users should pay air mail rates if there is a good chance their letters will go aloft anyway—and with the rapid curtailment of train service, the chances grow better every week.

As for the Post Office contributing to curtailed train service, Mr. O'Brien says it isn't so. He argues the railroads are removing the trains and that he can't help it if few are available for the mails.

A plausible argument, until one recalls the removal of 66 Railway Post Office cars from the Santa Fe, a road with an outstanding record in maintaining passenger service.

As a result, the railroad plans to discontinue 33 passenger trains between Chicago and the West Coast.

Mr. O'Brien can hardly be blamed for the passing of the passenger train, but postal policies seem to have led to some derailments here and there.

MR. SPECTATOR

Idaho's A Good Place To Be

News of more killings in Guatemala came with interest to Mr. Spectator who, just a year ago, was down in that country doing a special feature for the Times-News.

Behind the latest killings involving some Americans is the fact this type of thing goes on day by day and few pay any attention to it. For instance, during the last 18 months an estimated 4,000 people have been murdered in that nation for political reasons.

During the two weeks Mr. Spectator was there last year there were 40 bodies found in a relatively small area.

If you want to really appreciate your home in Idaho then just take a trip to Guatemala. The whole nation has a feeling of uneasiness and you feel it as soon as you step off the plane. This, probably, is not so noticeable in the big hotels but when you get out in the far areas—where Mr. Spectator spent his time at a Catholic mission—it is apparent.

Mr. Spectator has been many places in his life, but Guatemala was one place he was glad to leave behind. No doubt about it, the killings are Communist inspired and backed.

Some experts have said that Guatemala will be the next Cuba or Vietnam and they could be right. Someday it will blow sky high.

Like President Johnson said, he wants everyone to confine their travel to the Western Hemisphere. There is a lot to see in that area and a lot to do but when you plan that trip, just hop over Guatemala.

For instance, how about Yellowstone where the bears don't bite (?), or Mexico where they kill the bulls, or Alaska where it's always colder, or Los Angeles where you cannot see where you are going because of the smog, or Magic Valley where the people are great, the weather is great and the life is great?

ACCIDENTS

It wasn't the best of years, but neither was it the worst, as far as accidents go. An estimated 112,000 people died in accidents of all kinds in the United States in 1967. This was about 1,000 less than in 1966.

Fatal accidents in and about the home showed a decrease, while motor-vehicle deaths were about the same as a record high of 53,000 set in 1966. Because more miles were traveled in 1967, the rate per 100 million miles was slightly below the previous year's.

About 100 more people died in fires in 1967 than 1966. The total was 12,200. Figured on a per capita basis, the rate declined slightly because of an increase in population.

Property destroyed by fires, however, zoomed up by more than $200 million to an estimated total of nearly $2.1 billion. Riots in U.S. cities accounted for more than $25 million of that, but single disasters, such as the Apollo spacecraft fire which killed three astronauts and cost $75 million and the destruction of Chicago's McCormick Place—$32.5 million—were not far behind.

Both these disasters took place in January. So far, the current year is off to a relatively quiet start. But if the record of almost every other year is a guide, 1968 will have its share of calamities.

Sad to say, it is a statistical certainty that more than 100,000 Americans, now alive, will perish in accidents, large ones and small ones, before next January.

Bring Home The Faded Flag

Is patriotism diluted by accident or by design? By both, I suspect.

Today's school-agers recognize so many imperfections and contradictions in their government that many consider it unworthy of their allegiance.

Improvements should challenge them, not defeat them.

It is the glorious quest for improvement in government and self-improvement which motivated our nation's founders and its pioneers. But this heritage is being obscured, too, because our own history textbooks are not what they once were—either by accident or design.

Let me give you a for instance: let's compare the 14 most-used American history textbooks published before 1920 with today's top-45.

In the old textbooks, Patrick Henry's inspired and inspiring statement—"Give me liberty or give me death"—appears in 12 of the 14 textbooks. Of today's 45 most-used textbooks, that quote appears in only three.

Nathan Hale's utterance—"I regret that I have but one life to give for my country"—appears in 13 of the earlier texts. In only one of the recent ones, John Paul Jones replied to a surrender demand with a remark which inspired his men then and generations of Americans since: "I have not yet begun to fight!" That reply is included in nine of the old books, none of the new.

In recent generations there has been a conscious effort to denationalize us, to encourage you to make no pledge of allegiance to a United Nations instead of a United States.

If the end product of this experiment in One Worldism were good, none of us should quarrel with it.

On the contrary, the result has been to dilute our national allegiance, disparage our Americanism, leading to such extremes of malcontent as flag burnings, draft card burnings, and even more violent antigovernment demonstrations.

At the same time, by superimposing a mongrel flag over our own, our leaders have misled us into needing a military and economically—in the affairs of 40 other nations—the conspicuous utility of this posture has, in turn, tended further to denationalize our young Americans with their own government.

I will not believe that our "one nation under God" cannot be salvaged, revitalized.

Indeed, our humiliating experience in Vietnam could well be the turning point for our misplaced minority.

Perhaps out of the agony of this tragic experience will come a new awareness that our world role as leader implies only an obligation in the good example of nothing more, nothing less.

Then—the republic—where our fathers considered worth-dying for, our sons will consider worth working for.

If that's not the way to bet, that is the way to pray.

WASHINGTON (AP) — What does the price tag say? If the United States called a pause in the bombing of North Vietnam, and the North Vietnamese responded by slowing down their fighting in South Vietnam, then the pause would be worth it and peace talks might get started.

If the United States stopped bombing the North in the hope of a reciprocal response, but the North used the pause to build up its forces in the South with men and supplies, U.S. ground forces in the South would have to pay the price.

And so far President Johnson, thinking of the price tag, has refused to end the bombing. Instead, he has imposed a moratorium on our own bombing, but not on the North's.

MARQUIS CHILDS

The Intention

WASHINGTON — The diplomatic quadrille that began with Hanoi's challenge that "could" "will" on peace talks to start with the end of the bombing is running down. The unanswered question is whether there was even any intention to give negotiations a chance to open for negotiations to end the Vietnam war.

The trap of Vietnam is shown with appalling clarity in the inability, only slightly disguised by obscure promises of "exploration" and "talks," to respond to the risk given privately is that the risk is more than a half-million men on the ground was far too great for a halt in the bombing.

The tragedy is that this may be true. Contrary to virtually all reports are weighted by military authorities in the recent past, the United States is caught in a full-scale ground war in Asia, with no exit in the foreseeable future.

The risks in this massive involvement are weighed in different scales. The threat of a greatly enlarged war growing out of a confrontation with Red China or the Soviet Union or both is rather cavalierly dismissed. Even after the latest reports of damage to a Russian ship in Halphong Harbor and the strong Soviet note of protest the theory is that Moscow will avoid a confrontation.

As for China, the comfortable assumption is Mao's cultural revolution created such conflict and disorder that Peking is paralyzed. Although no one really knows, this may be true. But in North Vietnam today a work force of more than 50,000 Chinese are helping to repair the bomb damage.

Still another risk is the further alienation of world opinion. The Social Democratic party of Germany's deputy chancellor and foreign minister, Willy Brandt, called for a halt in the bombing to test Hanoi's intentions. How long Prime Minister Harold Wilson can continue to give nominal support to American Vietnam policy is questionable, since he is under such British pressure on so many other fronts as to be hard to get the cloth of Britain's economy to fit the urgent need for retrenchment.

The two Scandinavian NATO partners, Norway and Denmark, are convinced of the need for an immediate cessation of the bombing.

Here at home the challenge can hardly be ignored. A responsible Republican, Sen. John Sherman Cooper of Kentucky, and a responsible Democrat, Sen. Mike Mansfield of Montana, the majority leader, are calling for a stop to the bombing of North Vietnam.

Reports persist of a division within the administration over whether—and how—to respond to the declaration from Hanoi.

In the debate the inner sanctum of the hard liners insist that if a bombing pause fails to bring talks and the Communists use the pause to bring up more men and materiel while carrying out sneak attacks, the United States would be compelled to go to all-out attack on the north.

The diplomatic quadrille has had its curious aspects. While Secretary of State Dean Rusk has taken a cautious line and promised to "explore" the pledge of "could" to "will" the Assistant Secretary for Far Eastern Affairs, William P. Bundy, supplies the hard line.

And obligingly Gen. Nguyen Van Thieu, the president of South Vietnam, came through with a denunciation of the Hanoi opening, dismissing it as propaganda.

Only the President can find a way out of the trap if there is a way. And he seems at times to have dug himself in beyond rescue.

BRUCE BLOSSAT

Rocky: With Baffled Backers

WASHINGTON (NEA) — The most-baffled men in politics today are the moderate Republican leaders who want to see New York Gov. Nelson Rockefeller nominated for president next August.

"They know who they want but they do not know how to get him."

Within the moderate camp a kind of running debate is raging over possible tactics and strategy. Sources in this fold say there is nothing even remotely approaching agreement. Says one:

"There is a feeling among some of them that no matter how it is played it may be hopeless."

By the polls, Rockefeller appears to be the Republican most likely to defeat President Johnson in November.

At least half of the 26 Republican voters surveyed by the magazine said they would want him and some of the conservative remainder say they would take him as nominee. Some "want-to-win" GOP members of Congress talk him up.

Ordinarily, such evidence of vote potential and of top-grade support would be more than enough to assure a high driving campaign effort. Yet pushing Rockefeller's candidacy seems to be a thing of almost eggshell delicacy.

The toughest road ahead is Rockefeller's," says a friend, "even with all this stuff going for him."

At the moment the "strategy debate" centers on the issue of whether he should continue to stay totally inactive or whether his name to be entered into the May 28 Oregon primary—and whether his prominent advocates should take their cue from him or from charging into action now.

So far, he is holding to neither resolves not to get involved in Oregon or any other hand-to-hand pre-convention combat. There is fresh word that the governor simply has no taste for the kind of politics warfare which scarred him so deeply in 1964.

The feeling in the Rockefeller entourage and among some moderate leaders is that any such move would merely stir the same right-wing forces which were unleashed against him before. It might in other words, galvanize his enemies even as it could encourage his frustrated friends.

The other side of the argument, consequently, is the off-heard contention that Rockefeller and moderate leader inaction is the only sane course to his nomination—the only way not to fire up ancient adversaries until, through possible polls, showing him the only likely Re-

Four Charged In Deaths Of Two Men

YERINGTON, Nev. (AP)—A Nevada sheriff, George Allen, said "Friday" four men were charged with murder in the deaths of two Jackson, Wyo., men whose bodies were found in a shallow grave last October in the Nevada desert.

Ted Linn, 34, and David Goldsmith, 44, were arrested in Jackson, and Glenn Frederick Lucas, 46, was arrested in Reno, Allen said. A fourth person was being sought in several states.

The sheriff said they were charged in the deaths of Robert Stucker, 30, and Larry W. Olinger, 33, of Jackson. The two victims, and Goldsmith, were partners in the Alpine Village in Jackson, which burned last summer.

Stucker and Olinger were shot in the head with either a .38 or .45-caliber pistol and buried in common grave 10 miles east of Dayton in western Nevada. Some rock-hunting sailors from Fallon Naval Air Station found the badly decomposed bodies.

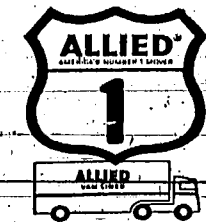

The two Jackson men had checked out of a Reno motel Aug. 22 and were not seen alive again. Their small airplane was found at a Reno airport.

Teton County sheriff Lawrence Cheney said Goldsmith and Linn are being held without bond. Allen said Lucas was arrested without resistance in his Reno home and jailed in Yerington without bail. Preliminary hearing was set for Feb. 3.

"We're still after a fourth suspect," the Nevada sheriff said, "and probably by tomorrow or the next day we'll name him unless we arrest him before then."

In past years these musicians have played to capacity crowds each night. Proceeds from this year's program again will be given to the Twin Falls Easter Seal Center. A check for $315 was given to the center last year.

During the past six years, approximately $5,000 has been donated to worthwhile organizations, all of which has remained in Magic Valley to benefit local people.

The jamboree, headed by Gene Bosserman, Gooding, former Twin Falls resident; and Rudy Williamson, Twin Falls, will feature 12 different bands, with a complete new program each evening.

At Lee of KART Radio Station, Jerome, will be master of ceremonies for both shows.

Firm Course
By U.S. Is Urged By VP

WASHINGTON (AP)—The fall of Great Britain from the ranks of the world's most powerful nations makes it more imperative than ever that the United States steer a firm course and fully honor its commitments, says Vice President Hubert H. Humphrey.

Living up to commitments is "what it's all about in Vietnam," Humphrey said Friday at a conference of the Nonpartisan Political League of the International Association of Machinists.

Great Britain's decision to cut back drastically on its overseas activities indicates this ally no longer considers itself in the great-power category, the vice president said.

That leaves only the United States and the Soviet Union and makes a U.S. posture of strength more necessary than ever, he said.

"We have to know that you cannot appease and have peace," Humphrey said.

The Soviets, he added, will always know where the United States stands and the Americans will never know where the Soviets stand.

While Humphrey argued for continued U.S. support of South Vietnam in the war, this policy came under attack on the Senate floor.

Sen. George D. Aiken, R-Vt., said identifying the Viet Cong as a North Vietnamese ally is a sign of a worldwide Communist movement "is simply a self-destructive fantasy."

Aiken charged the administration "has had to create a monolithic enemy to justify its refusal to admit past mistakes."

Cub Scout Pack 76 Holds Derby

the church can make religion a major factor in solving problems of the big cities.

The idea was born three years ago in the eastern Idaho community of Idaho Falls. With funding by the Episcopal church and participation by five other Protestant denominations, it has grown to a statewide force.

Now the Ecumenical Training Council of Idaho is shifting its status from a shaky experiment to an accomplished fact.

Among its activities:

- Making courses, ranging from study of theology to seminars on social problems, available to residents of small and isolated communities.
- Sponsoring community action programs through locally based interfaith organizations.
- Providing training for lay clergy to serve in areas where churches cannot afford to hire an ordained minister.

A side effect of the program is breaking down denominational barriers in a move toward church unity. And in its emphasis on lay participation, the council has brought the church closer to its members, one layman feels.

Chairman Morfit of the council is Dr. John Morfit, a Presbyterian and a nuclear physicist at the Atomic Energy Commission's National Reactor Testing Station near Idaho Falls.

Laymen are, for the first time, determining how the church will meet problems facing society, Morfit feels.

The Rev. Jack Viggers, whose efforts in the early stages of the council were responsible for its funding, says:

"If there were a genius in the council's formation, it has evolved from the idea that the ministry of the church is shared."

Viggers is an Episcopalian clergyman in Idaho Falls.

The primary goal, Morfit says, is "providing the kind of theological education in sparsely populated areas that is readily available in urban areas."

Problems of the poor, whether in the cities or on the farms, he adds, "are probably the most important question facing the church today."

Morfit represents the new attitude among laymen. By waiting for unanimity among its members before acting on social problems, the church "has dealt badly" with them in the past, he contends.

"The idea of consensus has gone by the board... we can now operate on the basis of conscience rather than consensus."

By working together, members of the different denominations find they can "minimize their peculiarities and accentuate a common concern for human life," Viggers believes.

"The basis for church unity is in community action," he says, "but if we are eventually to find unity, it will be through education."

Four Elders Elected By Area Church

BURLEY—Four elders were elected at the annual congregational and corporational meeting of The Burley Presbyterian Church.

They were Jim Roper, Mrs. Jean Minshew and Don Morse, all three-year terms, and Bill Drew, one year.

Annual report of the congregation outlining the various programs of the church, was reviewed.

The annual budget $24,352 was accepted. It was noted the figure is exclusive of budget items from different congregational groups. The board reported the total amount the church's financial program is in excess of $32,000 annually.

During the past year, 22 new members were accepted into the congregation, 10 families have moved from the area and four members have died. Present adult membership is 406.

A film was viewed on the Fifty Million Fund which has been in operation in the church for the past two years. Goals of the capital fund include raising money for mission and educational institutions.

Mrs. Truman Bradley was in charge of the dinner served prior to the dinner meeting sponsored by the United Presbyterian Association.

Outgoing elders were Bert Klink, John Drew and Clifford Sutton.

FOR GOIN' ROAMIN' malleons are legion on Both Lovino's very serious white calf play sandal. When in Rome do as . . . or when just roamin' around, these supple sandals are comfortable on feminine feet.

TURTLE AND OSTRICH skins are used in those two fashion setters. The Ostrich walkers are set off by gold buckles and the Turtle skin high-tongued shoes feature a monk strap. Both are best when worn with mod hose.

SNAKE CHARMERS are featured with slings, a fan of guinea feathers and solid heels. The durable snakeskin is being used year in many go-everywhere shoes reminiscent of the 1920's and 30's.

Fickle Fashions Go To "Dogs"

BY NORMA HERZINGER

With fashions as fickle as the women who wear them, the shoe styles to enhance these ensembles must change to coincide with trends—and change they have.

The reminiscent baby dolls and Mary Jane styles are back in full stride for the new season and pointed toes and slender heels take a back seat.

Consider the shapes of shoes in years past, the broad rounds and squares, the accentuated vamps that made the foot look short and the walled-and-blunted. Well, they all look right again.

So for you gals who stashed styles like these away several years ago, dig them out, polish them up and step right into perfect fashion.

When the broader toe shapes were popular they were almost always seen on lowered heels. Now they look right at any height as the heels are inching up, with the highest about two and one-half inches. At every height they are sturdy and strong. This means that anything resembling a spike is out, period.

In fact, it was recently pointed out to me by a man whose business it is to point up and point out the latest in fashion, that my faithful black pumps, with very pointed toes and very slender heels (purchased a short time ago for a very special occasion) are out-dated.

Too good to throw away, the shoes are going to stay right in my closet until they come back into fashion, which could be anytime.

But, for you up-to-date fashion conscious gals, here's the latest info on footwear for spring.

A large share of the heel action has to do with the shape, which is curved or angular in endless variations. There are rounds and cylinders, cones and ten-drops. There are the zig-zags, and inverted pyramids and the ones that are faceted or deeply grooved at the sides.

In whatever shape, however, heels light up with color, or cracks with jewels. They can be painted or mirrored, or appliqued or sequined. Even more popular are those studded with uncut jewels or gemmed with flowers.

One pair of shoes I saw the other day, combining the luxe and the lively that are so essential for today's woman, was of tortoise patent, springing to life on a tense coil of steel. Another pair combined pitch-blue ostrich with a silver door-knob heel. They might be elegant, but are definitely for the adventurous.

Color is still the power that makes fashion go. Colors are bright and true for the new season and can truly be found to match every outfit, with reds, shades of orange, yellow, green and blue topping the list.

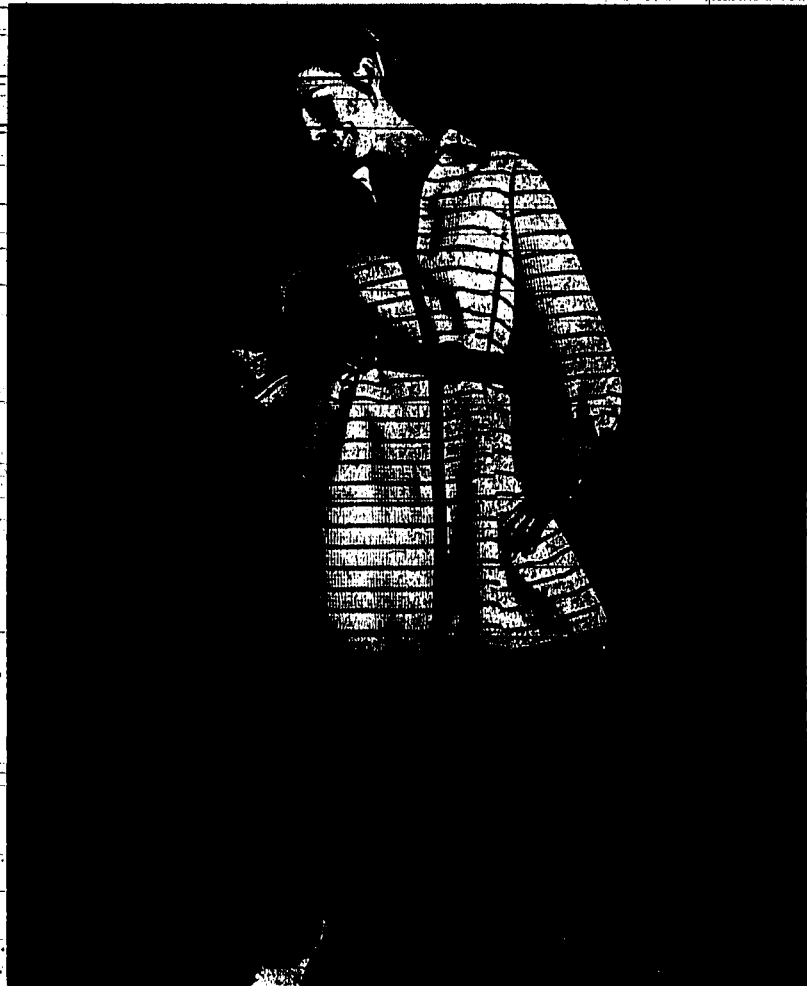

Colors, of course, are softened for some styles, but nevertheless, when you look over a display of spring shoes you're reminded of "everything coming up roses."

Not to be forgotten are the basic blacks, browns and whites which are always in good taste.

Just as a size 14-plus granddither should not wear miniskirts, the truly fashion conscious woman should select smart, flattering styles, with the thought in mind of turning a man's head—in a lady's direction.

TRIPLE CROSS strap sandals with a blunt heel accent this diamond-patterned cotton ensemble especially designed for spring. Over the soft dress is a short-sleeved coat sporting a stand-up collar, a great look by Chuck Howard for the new season.

SIMPLE WHITE PATENT shoes with rounded toes and blunt heels complement this peach-rose and lace shirtdress of imported Italian woven lattice cotton. The dress is beaded and belted in back, all in the new soft, feminine mood.

for a day in the city viewing the sights. Crisp white defines the band-box neat shape of the sheltering jacket which covers the close-to-the-body sleeveless dress at right. Dime-sized white dots are displayed to enhance the ensemble.

Demanding Life Dictates Style

NEW YORK — Jane Brown, head of the national Fashion Board of Sears, gave her theory on fashionable clothes for the coming months at the annual Sears dinner in the Plaza Hotel Persian Room.

Mrs. Brown felt she "had to make her choice between the extremely young and often way out looks which were wrong for her, or conservative styles that were uninteresting to her because they didn't have youthful fashion excitement."

"The demanding way of life for a woman requires precision cut, simply styled clothes that express her personal flair.

"She needs a wardrobe that works around the clock. The classic, flattering lines of the Fashion Board Collection suits the woman who must change her role and personality with Houlihan speed.

"Therefore, the collection, selected and accessorized by Sears Fashion Board under the direction of Miss Brown, is a complete of the major fashion looks of this season—complete, with the essential shoe, stocking, handbag, glove, hat and jewel.

This collection was shown to approximately 300 members of the fashion press in New York recently.

"In the quick-passed presentation Miss Brown said that "The girl who is active on the world-wide or local circuit, can't now make her choices from a morning through dancing wardrobe that is chic and well within her clothing budget. I see her as the woman who lives in the country and visits in the city."

She wants a tailored . . . not a trite wardrobe."

Favored looks "pin-pointed" by Miss Brown were costumes of crisply tailored plaids and handsomely shaped coatdresses. Skirts move with a flip or flare. It's the era of the motorized mother, so skirts must travel in their stride. The colors are true and clear—right from an artist's palette.

For country club dances or theater in town the discriminating woman chooses black or white for late evening dressing, shaped with feminine flattery.

The new Fashion Board Collection is thoroughly plotted by experts to give vital tip-toe coordination.

"Kneesy" Look Is Introduced

By JEAN SPRAIN WILSON NEW YORK (AP) — The nation's neglected women, the wide of girth and short of purse, now has a champion—a man who believes in covering up her shortcomings with longer skirts. A new length called "kneesy" and sometimes "peackaboo" by its designer Stanley Herman was shown for the first time Friday at the closing sessions of the American Designer series of spring previews.

The length hits just slightly above the knees.

Ironically, this impact on controversial skirts length came from a high couture house, or even a garment maker who caters to older women. Herman designs for Mr. Mort, an inexpensive house with largely a junior clientele.

"The length is much better for the woman with heavier thighs," he said as three ladies who had nothing to be ashamed of came forward in bias-cut knickerbockers.

The mannikin received tremendous applause.

The peackaboo knee is not really new, Herman admitted. After all, hemlines have been from up to here and down to there in fashion history. This time the controversy goes back to 1940.

"It's the next logical length," he said. "It is a newer look than we have had for a while but it remains contemporary."

Dear Abby

BY ABIGAIL VAN BUREN DEAR ABBY: My husband has many business associates whom I know casually or not at all. Recently he received a wedding invitation from some business friends. It was addressed to "MR." only.

I've met these people, so I know they are aware of my existence. I thought it was in very poor taste to exclude me, but I put it down to ignorance and let it go at that.

When my husband bought an expensive gift and attended the wedding alone I was flattered. What would have been the way to handle this? My husband is the "infallible" type, so naturally I didn't offer my judgment in the case.

DEAR CIRCUMVENTED: Your husband isn't responsible for the boorishness of his business friends, but he is responsible for his own. If you offered no judgment when your husband went solo to the wedding, don't be surprised if he tries an encore.

DEAR ABBY: I'm too old for love problems, but my problem is very important to me all the same. What ever happened to the machine permanent wave used to get a beautiful hair in that really held, but those days are gone. Now all I can get is a meaningless permanent. It doesn't take so long, but what good is it when the wave doesn't hold? I have very straight hair and need a permanent that won't wash out with the first shampoo. Thank you.

PROBLEM HAIR DEAR PROBLEM: Perhaps there is an old-fashioned permanent wave machine gathering dust in the basement of a beauty parlor somewhere, but I haven't noticed one lately. Ask your beauty operator if she knows of one. And if she does, I hope she knows someone who is old enough to remember how to operate it.

DEAR ABBY: I have a

LASAGNA AND CRAB are combined in this tasty dish to make a perfect addition to any winter meal. This artistic creation is simply a matter of layering crab sauce with cheeses and cooked lasagna, then baking.

Crab Sauced Lasagna Tempts Loyal Italians

From Italy where pasta is traditional comes the base for this sumptuous crab creation. The meeting of ruffled lasagna from old Italy and crab from one of our newest states, Alaska, occurs amid rich tomato sauce, sour cream and mellow cheeses. The Italians say the key to good cooking is in simplicity. This artistic creation is simply a matter of layering crab sauce with cheeses and cooked lasagna, then baking to set the ingredients together.

The fragrant sauce simmers long enough to develop the flavors of garlic, oregano, basil and fill with its marked affinity for crab. The sauce is layered with sour cream to give moist smoothness. Over all, the cheese layer features Mozzarella, light and mild, and Cheddar that melts into a golden soft topping.

The secret of the sauce is succulent Alaska King crab. Its large white pieces tinged with bright red add unique flavor to this Italian favorite.

Modern homemakers have no advantage over the chefs of Italy with conventional Alaska King crab. No precooking here since it is processed before it ever reaches the markets. Either canned or frozen, it is thus fresh from the sea flavor without the problem of tendons and cartilage. Your family will want to enjoy Alaska King crab just as often as you will prepare it.

The Art Song was discussed by Mrs. Mead, her favorite music media. She traced the history of this form of art and presented examples from Italian, French, German and American musicians. Music as an art was developed through the centuries, and is often set to man's most beautiful poetry.

She discussed several composers as Schubert, Schumann, Brahms, Wagner and Hugo Wolf, all German composers, and Stephen C. Foster, American.

"There Shall Be More Joy," by contemporary composer, Paul Moroff, head of music at the Philadelpia Conservatory, was Mrs. Mead's American selection.

She was accompanied by Mrs. Donald Youtz, Twin Falls. Mrs. Tom Wildman, program chairman, announced the third Community Concert will be held Feb. 12; the Sweet Adelines Charter Concert Feb. 17 and the American Music program Feb. 29, sponsored by the Burley Music Club.

The annual White Breakfast honoring past presidents and officers will be at 11:30 a.m. Feb. 19 at the Stampede Cafe Dining Room.

Mrs. Triford Bray, first vice president of the Burley Music Club, which is affiliated with the National Federation of Music Clubs, is serving as chairwoman for the annual White Breakfast.

Co-hostesses were Mrs. Mack Crouch and Mr. William Sugg.

Refreshments were served by Betty Gross and Sue Ann Robinson.

Elements Add To Woes Of Quake Areas

PALERMO, Sicily (AP) — Driving rain, hail, snow and spreading diseases kept Sicily in a nightmare state today as more than 40,000 refugees huddled in soggy tent camps or waited in the hills for rescuers.

An emergency program of an typhoid inoculation was begun, and other inoculations were stepped up amid outbreaks of scarlet fever, chicken pox, whooping cough, bronchitis, dysentery and pneumonia. Two deaths were reported from exposure.

Trudging through the debris of what was the town of Gibellina, Italian Premier Aldo Moro told hungry, bedraggled refugees: "My poor people, whatever we can do will be done."

"More bread! More tents!" the earthquake victims shouted at him, and angry crowds stopped him several times along the road.

Italian newspapers wrote bitter editorials to deplore what they termed the government's chronic inability to manage relief work efficiently. They said the chaotic cleanup effort supplies, because of bungling and red tape.

Already depleted and depressed, the refugees were battered by violent thundershowers driven by strong winds. The rain drenched leaves of broad-leafing trees and plants, turned back helicopters trying to fly in rations, medicine and blood plasma. Flashes of lightning lit the sky, and the sea crashed against jetties and docks with a roar that of seven on a nine-point scale.

An estimated 15,000 persons streamed out of Sicily to Italy. Many said they were tired of waiting for aid.

The miles of rubble from the killer earthquake that rocked western Sicily Monday yielded more signs of human life.

While the hunt for survivors was over, the search for the dead went on. The number of bodies so far recovered totaled 100, with only a fraction of the ruins sifted. Officials fear the final death toll will be close to 400.

Mr. Blauer has served for the past year as vice-trustee. His appointment as director is for three-year term.

Dr. Theophilus will serve until December, 1968.

Re-elected unanimously for three year terms were Clyde Greenwell, Paul; John Rast, American Falls; Will Roper, Burley; Dr. A. K. Krueger, Ashton; and Mrs. Boyd Martin, Moscow.

Director Roy Miller, Pocatello, reported that a scholarship of $500 will be given each year by Grimm's Business College to a Youth Ranch boy. The boy is to be chosen by the Minico High School administrators.

Clyde Greenwell reported that the farm land has been leased by Harold Smith and L. L. Denton for next year.

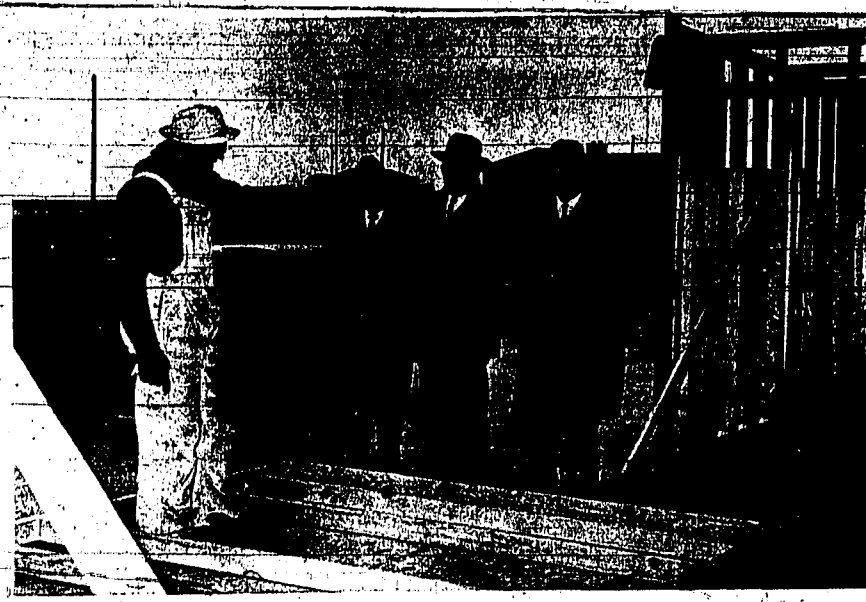

Director Earl Peck of Twin Falls told the group that the Blaine county agent had noted what fine 4-H work the Youth Ranch boys had entered in the district fair at Jerome.

Tom Mahan, chairman of the board, Jerome, read a report from the construction superintendent Jack Lott telling what progress is being made on the new building.

John McGowan, ranch administrator, introduced two new staff members, Mrs. Marie McGregor and Mrs. Laura Kenaston.

Directors present were Tom Mahan, Roy Miller, Earl Peck, Arlo Montgomery, Roy Nelder, Tom Mahan, Clyde Greenwell, John Rast and Ernest Blauer. Area trustees attending the meeting were Mrs. M. H. King of Burley, Ruth DeThomas, Rupert; I. T. (Pete) Greed, Twin Falls; and Eli W. Boring.

The invocation was given by Rev. Fred Penner of the Paul Baptist Church.

JACK LOTT, building supervisor at the Idaho Youth Ranch, Rupert, points out progress on the new building under construction for Will Roper, Roy Miller and Eli W. Boring, directors.

Mr. Boring, former Rupert businessman, was elected a new area trustee from the Buhl area. Directors were elected during the quarterly meeting.

PTA Founders' Day Program Set At Glens Ferry

GLENS FERRY — Co-president James Kling reported that next month will be the Glens Ferry Area PTA's annual Founders' Day program.

The meeting will be held at the Glens Ferry High School January 15, March will be the school open house.

Hubert Ludden will make a plaque for the school hallway on which will be inscribed the book of the month winners' names.

The meeting the award went to Kathleen Johnson.

Mr. and Mrs. LeRoy Trowbridge's kindergarten class presented the flag and sang "America" at the program's opening.

Mrs. Jean Cox, treasurer, reported $689.02, and Mrs. Edwina Williams, membership chairman, said that there were 180 members.

School Superintendent George Powell introduced Lindell Penner, new junior high school social studies teacher. Larry Maxwell resigned to devote full time to his church duties. Powell also explained the new football league and suggested that the PTA pay half the cost of a new popcorn machine for the school. This was voted the year's project.

Mrs. Maxine Jones explained the new English being taught in the school now which uses "Roberts English Series," the textbook written by Paul Roberts, one of the researchers who developed the new concept to teaching the language.

Mrs. Jones said that the reason for changing the method of teaching English is that ideas about language have changed. Grammar is now approached systematically, and many forms that used to be considered incorrect are now acceptable. Reading selections are still included but the approach differs from that used in the past.

In demonstrating the way sentences are now broken down and parts labeled, Mrs. Jones said this is not necessarily easier, but it now follows a system. English study now includes very little review, but instead there is continuous progress each year, making it more interesting to the students.

Included in the next text are letter writing, use of the library, correct usage and differences in colloquialisms. Differences in background are revealed in the child's word usage, and the dialect study shows how varied it is in the different areas of our country. Mrs. Jones pointed out that words are pronounced completely and differently and are used for the same article, and words usage differs in parts of our land.

At the conclusion, Mrs. Jones handed out sheets showing how different Old English is from our present-day English. The history of language is included in the new classes.

Market Takes

Loss Amid Uncertainties

NEW YORK (AP)—The stock market took a thumping loss last week amid uncertainties as to what course Congress and President Johnson will steer for the business and financial world in 1968.

It was the worst loss since the week ended last Nov. 4 when "The Associated Press" average declined 11.0. This week the AP average fell 6.4 to 319.3.

Trading continued extremely heavy totaling $3,000,780 on the New York Stock Exchange, close to the record $5.0 billion piled up a week ago.

The mounting volume from week to week caused a paperwork logjam in the back offices of brokerage houses and the major stock exchanges therefore ordered an indefinite period of curbing trading day to four hours from 9:30 a.m. to 1:30 p.m.

The Dow Jones Industrial average last week fell 18.66 to 880.32. This was quite a relief from the recovery peak of 906.84 made Jan. 2.

Of 1,000 issues traded last week on the New York Stock Exchange, 828 declined and 709 advanced.

Bond prices declined after recent rises. Governments led the drop, giving up one-fourth to three-fourths of a point after President Johnson renewed his bid for higher taxes in the State of the Union message.

Corporate bonds were mixed. New issue yields were higher but investor receipts was moderate.

ADMIRAL DIES ATLANTA, Ga. (AP)— Rear Adm. Richard J. Lynch, 53, died of a heart attack Jan. 19, 1967, after a long illness. He was decorated World War II submarine officer, also commanded the Hawaiian sea force and the naval base at Pearl Harbor.

LBJ Presents Congress With Multi-Point Economic Plan

By PHIL THOMAS NEW YORK (AP)—A multi-point economic package containing a $16 billion budget, a tax increase, and repeal of the nation's gold cover was opened and presented to Congress by President Johnson this past week.

In his State of the Union message, the President said the proposed budget for fiscal 1969 has expenditures of approximately $166 billion, with total estimated revenues, including the tax bill, of about $178 billion.

The President warned that failure to adopt the tax could result in accelerating price increases and continued erosion of the dollar.

His plan that the gold cover be lifted was aimed at freeing the $12 billion in gold remaining in the Treasury for international settlements.

The stock markets announced Thursday that, beginning Monday, trading hours will be shortened by 90 minutes to allow brokers more time to handle papers resulting from record volume.

The announcement came on the day when American exchange volume topped 10 billion shares for the first time in 1967.

In another move, the American Exchange directed its members to "review all sales procedures in order to dissuade unwarranted speculation by public customers."

Twin Falls Blitzes Caldwell And Boise

Staples' Defense Wilts Cougars; Henning, Wells Gun Bruins Past Braves

A one-man full court press named Bret Staples beat the Caldwell Cougars into submission in the first 12 minutes of the Saturday night game. Staples, who currently is in his sixth season as an assistant coach at the Southern Idaho Conference lead. The victory came on the heels of a 60-45 decision over

Boise Friday night and left Twin Falls tied with Caldwell and Borah with 3-2 records. It was the revenge win Twin Falls had been pointing to for six minutes and the Bruins didn't waste much time in establishing control. Caldwell hit 10 of 23 and 6-6 before Staples' ball handling resulted in three quick turnovers and Twin Falls quickly ran up a 17-0 lead. Over the next several minutes the quick Staples appeared to be everywhere, stealing passes, driving for crumples, passing off to teammates for easy buckets. By the midpoint of the second quarter Twin Falls had a 27-point advantage and before half-time had moved in front by 20. Caldwell never came closer than that thereafter.

In the furor that arises in athletic circles at each major victory that comes along, most people get the idea that a coach — Rulon Burley at Burley excepted — is a three or four-year phenomenon.

That when you talk about long-reigning coaches, the man second only to Coach Burley in the district probably is Glenn Sheen, who currently is in his sixth season as an assistant coach at the Southern Idaho Conference lead. The victory came on the heels of a 60-45 decision over

Boise Friday night and left Twin Falls tied with Caldwell and Borah with 3-2 records. It was the revenge win Twin Falls had been pointing to for six minutes and the Bruins didn't waste much time in establishing control. By the midpoint of the second quarter Twin Falls had a 27-point advantage and before half-time had moved in front by 20. Caldwell never came closer than that thereafter.

When Staples was stealing the defensive thunder—and catching 21 points — John Henning and Von Wells came up with some fine outside shooting. Caldwell, with men at 6-7 and 6-8 underneath, kept the Bruins outside quite well but Henning and Wells hit with fine accuracy from 12 to 20 feet.

The big surge of the game came in the opening minutes of the second quarter. Caldwell backed back to within seven points at 26-19 before everything went blew. Wells hit once, Junior Mike Nowell for three points and Staples for six points—all off steals — to explode Twin Falls into a 36-19 edge.

Caldwell, which beat Twin Falls 60-57 in December, could have made the game a bit closer by making his free-throwers, hitting only 18 of 37 attempts, in beating Twin Falls at Caldwell the Cougars had 55 free-throw attempts.

A five-for-five scoring blitz late in the third quarter let Twin Falls blow away from Boise and into the 60-45 decision.

Boatwright Hits 32 As Minico Thumps Burley

By GARY SNEEL
Times-News Sports Writer
RUPERT — The Minico Spartans, with sophomore Jim Boatwright pumping through 32 points, had no trouble defeating the Burley Bobcats 68-46 Friday night.

Boatwright went into the game midway through the first period to help the Spartans take an early lead and after that there was no stopping the tall sophomore.

Lefty Fink gave the Bobcats the early lead on a free throw but Fink's own team tied it at 1-1. About a minute later Jay Wardle put Burley ahead once again, 2-1, but it was short-lived as Bob Seamon hit two quick field goals to give Minico the lead for good.

The Spartans, with Boatwright and Tom Cook hitting eight quick points, jumped to a 16-7 lead by the end of the first period and were never really tested after that.

The Bobcats went cold in the second period and did not score until the late minutes, while Boatwright hit nine points to bring the Spartans lead to 42-15 by the end of the first half.

The Bobcats tried to make a comeback in the second half but again Boatwright was the man of the hour as he pumped through 14 points to keep the Spartans out of trouble.

Hot-Shooting Weber Sweeps Pair From ISU, Has Big Sky Loop Lead

POCATELLO (AP) — Hot-shooting Weber State College took over undisturbed first place in the Big Sky Conference Saturday night with an easy 94-72 basketball victory over Idaho State.

ISU's only bright spot of the evening was senior guard Ron Boone who scored 16 points to bring his career scoring total to 1,001 points. Boone made 15 of his points in the first half, however, and his cold spell after that further hurt the ISU effort.

Making it two straight victories on the Bengals' home court, the Wildcats hit 51 per cent from the floor in staging a great all-around performance. ISU hit only 24 per cent from the floor.

Guard Justus Thigpen of Weber State pumped in 31 points for high scoring honors.

Making it two straight victories on the Bengals' home court, the Wildcats hit 51 per cent from the floor in staging a great all-around performance. ISU hit only 24 per cent from the floor.

Boone and center Tom Baird sparked the Bengals in their brief comeback which pulled them to within 2 points with seven minutes to play. However, the Wildcats then fired in 20 quick points against the frustrated Bengals.

The loss dropped ISU to a 3-2 Big Sky record and 8-6 overall. Weber pumped in 41 in conference play and 10-2 overall.

Weber shot a torrid 67 per cent from the floor Friday night to drop Idaho State 87-75. The Wildcats' quick-paced offense, revolving around 6-8 center Dan Sparks, pushed up a 46-30 half-time lead. Sparks hit 14 of his 18 points in the first half.

In the second half, junior college transfer Justus Thigpen pumped in all of his 15 points to hold off the Bengals' desperation rally effort.

Nenning Earns Olympic Nod By Taking Hahnenkamm Downhill

KITZBUHEL, Austria (AP) — Austria's Gerhard Nenning won the Hahnenkamm downhill ski race Saturday and established himself as the favorite for the event for the Winter Olympics next month.

At the same time, Bill Kidd of Stowe, Vt., indicated he might be ready to challenge for an Olympic medal by finishing sixth after lagging far behind in 16th place in last week's downhill at Lauberhorn, Switzerland.

Three other Americans finished in the top 20—Dennis McCoy of Bishop, Calif., 12th; Ken Phelps of Lyons Falls, N.Y., 16th, and Jere Elliott of Steamboat Springs, Colo., 18th.

Nenning, who also won at Lauberhorn, finished down the 3,310-meter sprint track with a copy of 80 meters in two minutes, 14.49 seconds, edging Jean Claude Killy of France, whose time was 2:14.93.

It was a great improvement for Killy, who has been having troubles this season after sparking French dominance of the event in last week's downhill at Lauberhorn, the French ace was only 13th.

Kidd finished in 2:16.87, McCoy 2:17.64, Phelps 2:18.01 and Elliott 2:19.27. Spider Sabich of Kyburz, Calif., was 36th in 2:20.02, and Jim Heuga of Squaw Valley, Calif., placed 55th in 2:24.33. Loris Werner of Steamboat Springs, Colo., was among those who fell.

"I don't think I did badly, but I need more practice," said Kidd, who missed all last season after injuring an ankle and fracturing the other leg in 1966.

"I'm pleased with my progress," Coach Bob Schindler said after the race which was held in brilliant winter weather. "It feels very confident about his skills. He has not tried to come along too fast. Now he has to attack just a little bit more."

Beattie said the other Americans, except Jim Heuga, don't have much international racing experience. As for Heuga, Beattie said, "He is off to his usual bad start, but he has a great way of being very good in important competitions."

Kidd and Heuga very likely will head the U.S. men's Alpine team for the Olympics Feb. 6-8 at Grenoble, France. "We will have much international racing experience. As for Heuga, Beattie said, "We are going to select seven men and seven girls."

Jerome Takes 48-43 Win Over Gooding

By GARY SNELI.

Times-News Sports Writer JEROME — Brad Capps hit two free throws with six seconds remaining in the game Saturday night to ice a 48-43 win for the Jerome Tigers over the Gooding Senators.

The Tigers had jumped out to an early lead as the Senators could not get rolling and did not get a point for the first five and a half minutes of the game while Capps and Ron Blake hit six points each and Gordon Ford added a free throw to give Jerome a 10-3 edge at the end of the first period.

The Senators came roaring back in the second quarter with the help of Larry Larson and Ken Krahn to come within one point, 10-18, by the end of the first half.

In the third period, Larson hit a field goal with 4:17 left to tie the score at 24-24, but Capps put Jerome ahead again on a free throw.

"The Tigers' slim lead" was short lived, however, as Larson put the Senators in front once again.

Jerome battled back and pulled ahead 31-28 with 2:23 remaining, but the Senators soon tied it at 31-31 and Krahn hit a three-point play to boost Gooding ahead 34-31 by the end of the third quarter.

Blake and Capps started hitting again for the Tigers as they went ahead 40-34 with 5:03 remaining in the game and the Senators could not get closer than three points after that.

The Jerome Jaycees won the preliminary game 40-35.

EDEN-HAZELTON — The Valley Vikings were ice cold but Murtaugh was even colder Saturday night as the Vikings took a 46-40 non-conference victory.

Murtaugh took off like a champion, running up a 17-0 lead while Valley had trouble with everything. The Red Devils hiked the lead to 30-0 at intermission but then it was their turn to drop. Murtaugh scored only one field goal in the final two quarters as Valley's Don Meyer finally warmed up and paced Valley to victory.

West Is Favored In National Grid League's All-Star Battle Sunday

BY BOB MYERS
LOS ANGELES (AP) — It may seem like only yesterday — give or take a few hundred days — that the professional football season got under way, but now it just as suddenly will come to an end. The season will close Sunday with the Pro Bowl game in Memorial Coliseum where the All-Stars of the Eastern Conference will face their opposite numbers of the Western in the National Football League game. This is the 18th annual such event and it will be televised nationally over CBS starting at 4 p.m. EST, with Southwestern California screaming out. Pride has become a true and wonderful word with the professional players. Packers got for the East Coach Otto Graham of the Washington Redskins put it nicely when he gazed at the nine Green Bay Packers here for the contest. "They're taking an awful cut to play in the Pro Bowl," said Graham, in reference to the $25,000 a player got for winning the Super Bowl over Oakland last week and the amount handed out in this bowl — $1,500 to the winning athletes, $900 for the losers.

The West since prevailed 10 times, the East seven, including the past two years when the West was favored, as it is again this time.

Coach Don Shugh of Baltimore, the West's leader, has indicated Johnny Unitas will quarterback in the first and second quarters and Roman Gabriel of the Los Angeles Rams in the second and fourth. Graham will alternate Don Meredith of Dallas, who was called in to replace Washington's Sonny Jurgensen and Bill Clinton of the New York Giants' Fran Tarkenton.

The West has such offensive stars as the Chicago Bears' Gayle Sayers, Los Angeles' Les Josephson and Bernie Casey, the Minnesota Vikings' Ed Bennett and the Detroit Lions' Mel Farr.

The East can counter with Cowboys Bob Hayes and Don Perkins, Washington's Charlie Taylor, Cleveland's Leroy Kelly and New York's Ernie Koy. The defensive giants for the East include Atlanta's Tommy Nobis, Dallas' Bob Lilly, George Andrie and Leroy Jordan; Cleveland's Bill Glass, and Paul Wiggins and St. Louis' Dale Melner.

The West has the Rams' Maxie Baughan, Deacon Jones and Merlin Olsen, Green Bay's Willie Davis, Bob Yeter and Herb Adderley and Chicago's Dick Butkus and Richie Petitbon.

Raider-Dominated West Squad Is Pick In AFL All-Star Game

BY JIM MACFARLAND
JACKSONVILLE, Fla. (AP) — The Oakland Raiders, American Football League champs who weren't able to work their magic on Green Bay, set out to re-establish their AFL superiority in the league's All-Star game

Sunday at 1:30 p.m. EST in Jacksonville's Gator Bowl. Eleven Raiders, including quarterback Daryle Lamonica, fullback Howie Dickson and defensive line stars Ben Davidson and Tom Keating, form a nucleus of the 33-man West team.

With the best of last year's champion Kansas City Chiefs and San Diego Chargers added to the top Raiders, Coach Lou Saban of Denver has a team so good he scarcely had to instruct them on the practice field.

While the West is favored to win, as it has in four of five AFL All-Star games, Coach Joe Collier's East team may have the great equalizer in Joe Namath of the New York Jets.

Namath's passes looked sharp all week in practice, helping along by having his familiar receivers from the Jets, George Sauer, Don Maynard and Pete Liska.

Collier plans to combine 240-pound Jim Nance of Boston and 225-pound Hoyte Granger of Houston in a power running backfield to go with the Namath passing attack.

But under the special All-Star rules which forbid defensive blitzes and require man-to-man pass coverage, the air attack is bound to be the chief weapon of both teams.

Lamonica and alternate quarterback Len Dawson of Kansas City both had to learn the patterns of West receivers. Only Fred Bilek of Oakland and familiar Lamonia among wide receivers. Fred Arbans is the only Kansas City end on the squad. Lance Alworth of San Diego and Al Denson of Denver are other receivers.

The West has competent running backs in Dison and Mike Garrett of Kansas City. Collier is content to have his opponents favored but says "anything can happen in an All-Star game."

"Neither team is favored with the Pro Bowl," he said.

Oakley Stalls 7 Minutes, Tops Trojans

OAKLEY — A seven-minute-plus cliff helped the Magic Valley Conference leading Oakley Hornets cool off the upset-minded Raft River Trojans Friday night with a 33-27 decision.

Raft River took the second half top but missed the shot. Oakley took the ball and held it until just before the buzzer. Neither team scored during the third.

Golf Course Gets Extra Hole

COVENTRY, England (AP) — A nine-hole golf course suddenly got a 10th hole but it's six feet wide and two feet deep.

The course lies in an area heavily bombed during World War II.

The hole, eight feet in diameter, was discovered by early morning players Saturday. They scurried back to the clubhouse, fearing that the earth may have collapsed around an unexploded bomb.

Golfers waited for police and the police called in Army bomb disposal experts. Neither set of experts could reach a conclusion but they declared the course unplayable.

Crash Mars First Day Of Rally

MONTE CARLO, Monaco (AP) — One Italian driver was killed and six other persons seriously injured Saturday in a crash that marred the first day of the Monte Carlo Rally, one of the most grueling auto events.

Luciano Lombardini was killed and his co-driver, Sandro Munari, seriously injured in the accident. It killed north of Skopje, Yugoslavia, police told rally officials. The pair had been considered to be among the favorites.

Mountain Home seized the early advantage and looked like it was ready to turn it into a laughter when it posted a 30-18 halftime lead.

Gooding scored 12 of the first 13 points of the period. But that one point kept the Tigers ahead and in the final 12 minutes the Tigers broke away, keying the late attack was fine work on the offensive board for Mountain Home.

Marr Fires Five-Under Par 67 To Grab Kaiser Tourney Lead

NAPA, Calif. (AP) — Methodical Dave Marr, returning to his form of 1965, fired a five-under-par 67 for 207. Archer fired 67 Saturday to maintain his lead after three rounds in the $25,000 Kaiser International Open Golf Tournament with a 54-hole score of 204.

That put the New Yorker two strokes ahead of San Francisco's George Archer and three in front of rallying Gene Littler of San Diego, who scored a six-under-par 68 for 207. Archer fired a 68 on his third round.

The 34-year-old Marr, who says he played terribly in 1967, won over par on only one hole Saturday as he fired six birdies to put his tally at 68-69-67 for three days of play over the par 36-72 Elvertado Country Club's new north course, measuring 6,849 yards.

Marr and the 3-foot-6 Archer dueling in the nine threesomes on the warm, sunny day and at one point the Californian had shaved Marr's lead to a single stroke. Then Marr dropped a 25-foot putt at the 18th hole and on the 19th dropped a 10-footer.

That won the 1965 PGA tournament champion his two-stroke lead going into the final 18 holes Sunday as the pros battle for a $25,000 first prize.

Littler carried six birdies without going over par once. Deadlocked at 208, four strokes off the pace, were Kermit Zarley and Jacky Cupit, who fired 70 and 68 respectively Saturday.

Billy Casper and Arnold Palmer went to 213 and 217 respectively with scores of 71 and 74. Johnny Pott, winner of the Crosby by tournament last Sunday, had a 74 and 215.

Late Burley Flurry Beats Skyline 59-47

BURLEY — Calculating Burley picked a fourth-quarter flurry to beat the Skyline Grizzlies apart Saturday night and ended up with a 59-47 Eastern Idaho Conference victory.

Although Burley never trailed in the game, the Bobcats couldn't open up much daylight. The biggest margin was a 23-14 edge at intermission.

Skyline enjoyed its best quarter right after the half and behind Monroe and Rich Ronnie cut back to within seven at 38-31.

But Burley went into a deliberate game at the start of the final quarter, forcing Skyline to come out pressing. Then deft passing netted several close-in buckets and fouls gave the Bobcats more points at the foul line.

UCLA had one more chance, but blew it on an uncharacteristic mix-up in signals on which the Bruins' Mike Warren tipped the ball out of bounds. Houston took over with 12 seconds left and ran out the clock.

Reitz and Erickson each hit 10 points in the third quarter to hoist the Bulldogs into a 30-24 advantage and Kernin and Reitz split 12 more over the final eight minutes to shove off Wood River's closing rally.

... 105 years ago, we've grown steadily — by providing a needed service to the people and industries of the 13 Western states we serve — until today we have over 32,000 loyal, energetic employees (many of them in Utah and Idaho) and a 2 billion dollar investment in properties, equipment and other assets.

We contribute mightily to the economy of the states we serve through huge payrolls (over $248,000,000 in 1966), large tax payments (over $71,000,000 in 1966), and vast annual expenditures for everything from computers to lubricants for train locomotives (over $207,000,000 for new equipment and improvements).

We pride ourselves on being good citizens and pledge our best efforts to continue to be an important factor in the growth and progress of the West.

North Idaho Surprises Southern Idaho In 58-57 Double Overtime Upset

COEUR D'ALENE — North Idaho Junior College, getting clutch points from Sweeney, nipped College of Southern Idaho 58-57 in double overtime Saturday night to even up the season series at a win apiece.

The Eagles, ice cold in their shooting, twice had opportunities to win it in the closing seconds of the regulation time and again in the first overtime. But a second shot frustrated the first chance and an offensive foul against the Eagles lost them the opportunity the second time.

When North Idaho got into the second overtime, it quickly established a three-point lead and the ice-cold Eagles couldn't overcome it.

Colorado Staters Nip Utags 80-74

FORT COLLINS, Colo. (AP) — Utah State, after trailing all the way, rallied to tie the score after flying it twice more behind to drop an 80-74 non-conference basketball decision to Colorado State University.

The Aggies, aided by a 31-point performance by Shaler Hallman, knotted the count at 66-66, 68-68 and 70-70, the last time with 4:49 to play.

CSU's Floyd Kerr hit a 20-foot jumper with 4:32 left that boosted the Rams to the lead for good.

After A Century, Man And Wife Prove That Love Is Lovelier The Second Hundred Years

By JAN A. SAINSBURY
 Times-News Feature Editor
 Henry C. Gettert was born on a farm near Muscatine, Iowa, by a village called Sweetland Center, one hundred years ago. It was the same year in which the Republican National Convention at Chicago nominated Gen. Ulysses S. Grant for the Presidency, and a bill was passed providing an eight hour day for laborers and workmen employed by the government. It was the same year a struggling inventor named Charles F. Sholes secured two patents for a crude and unworkable machine called the typewriter. And it still wasn't perfected until 1875, when Henry Gettert was seven years old.

Ulysses S. Grant was President then, but by the time Henry Gettert had turned 17, ten years later Grover Cleveland had become the 22nd President of the United States.
 During Henry Gettert's 17th year, on his way to more than a century of living, congress first prohibited the unauthorized fencing of public lands in the West, and the U.S. Post-Office established special delivery service for the first time. And it cost Henry Gettert 2 cents to mail a first class letter that year.
 And when he turned 21, in 1889, William McKinley was President. It was also the year the first Secretary of Agriculture was appointed as a cabinet rank, and the year the first "safety" bicycle was marketed (the one with two wheels of equal size.)

Henry Gettert's 21st year saw the official opening of the famous Oklahoma land rush, and the tragedy of the Johnstown Flood, which killed 2,295 persons when a dam broke above the town of Johnstown, Pennsylvania.

The first electric sewing machine known in the U.S. was produced by the Singer Manufacturing Company when Henry was 21, and the University of Idaho was chartered at Moscow; the classes met for the first time three years later.

And it was the year the last bare-knuckle championship fight between John L. Sullivan and Jake Kilrain was held. Sullivan defeated Kilrain after 75 grueling rounds, and claimed the world's championship.
 It was the period that Henry C. Gettert, a man who would live to see more than a hundred years of history, went to Chicago for the first time, at 21.

He was employed by John B. Drake, who owned the Grand Pacific Hotel. It was the largest in Chicago, and later Drake's sons built the Drake and Blackstone hotels. Gettert stayed with Drake for 14 years, and then resigned to work with a bank, dealing in real estate and insurance.

Henry Gettert went to night school in Chicago, took an agricultural course and was elected president of the agricultural club. The school principal was Charles Perrine, brother of I. B. Perrine, founder of Twin Falls.

The acquaintance with Charles Perrine later led to the lasting friendship between H. C. Gettert and I. B. Perrine.

In 1908 Gettert took his first trip West. That was a time when the tallest skyscraper in America was the newly built 47-story Singer Building in New York City, and Orville Wright crashed in his airplane while experimenting at 150 feet above the ground and his passenger was killed the first victim of an airplane accident.

And although Henry Gettert didn't ride in one on his trip out West, Henry Ford introduced his famous Model T automobile that same year at a cost of $850.

 Henry Gettert headed for Seattle but stopped off in Butte, Montana to see a friend. He joined a special tour of Yellowstone Park and learned that he went on to the Yukon. Excursion in Seattle and heard William Jennings Bryan, three times a Presidential nominee, speak. Bryan later would visit Twin Falls many times and become fast friends with I. B. Perrine who said of Perrine, "He has been my great privilege to travel over this world and to meet nearly all the great men and women of my generation. In actual accomplishment, in transforming the desert which this was into the Garden of Eden it is today, I place my friend I. B. Perrine among the first half dozen men I have met."

MRS. HENRY GETTERT worked for ten years in a Chicago publishing firm, and married Mr. Gettert in that city fifty years ago.

WORKING AT ONE of his many interests, Henry Gettert adjusts a projection screen in a basement room at his home. Mr. Gettert shows slides taken in all five countries he has visited to school children, and interested adults.

And the rest of the basement was fascinating. Pictures of I. B. Perrine and many of the pioneers of this area lined the walls. Hardly an inch of bare wall was visible.
 And Mr. Gettert talks the same way he has lived. His stories are colorful and long. He makes one feel somewhat inferior. I felt, after my initial three-hour visit with him, as if I had better get busy. . . . I have a great deal to accomplish in the 72 years I have left before my one hundredth birthday.

I was filled with instructions: "Please mention that we are having a reception Sunday, Jan. 28, to celebrate our Golden Anniversary; and my 100th birthday. But please mention 'no gifts; that's very important.' And 'not too much' I would; and I did."

Mrs. Gettert is just as interesting and delightful as her husband. Both are individual in the finest sense of the word. At one point Mr. Gettert leaned over and said, "I never butt into politics, I think . . ." and at that point he was cut off as Mrs. Gettert interjected, "I do. I enjoy politics."

The two are well matched, which is something of an understatement, after two people have been married for 50 years.

Mr. Gettert wanted to see this finished article before it was printed. He said, "I don't know how to feel. I don't work that way, he just smiled wryly, and patted me on the shoulder, as if to assure me that he understood. And there is very little, I am sure, that he doesn't understand. A hundred years is a long time. He has letters from celebrities ranging from Nixon, to President Johnson, and from Robert Taft to former President Hoover. Many of the letters were sent to him years ago, and many congratulate him on his combination of anniversaries.

And to those, we wish you a happy Golden Anniversary; and to Mr. Gettert personally: Happy Birthday, Sir; and may you have a hundred more.

And in that same week, a few days earlier, but celebrated on the same day, Jan. 28, he and Mrs. Gettert will share memories on their 50th Wedding Anniversary.

I asked Mr. Gettert why he waited so long to get married, and he said, "I told myself I wouldn't get married until I could support a wife."

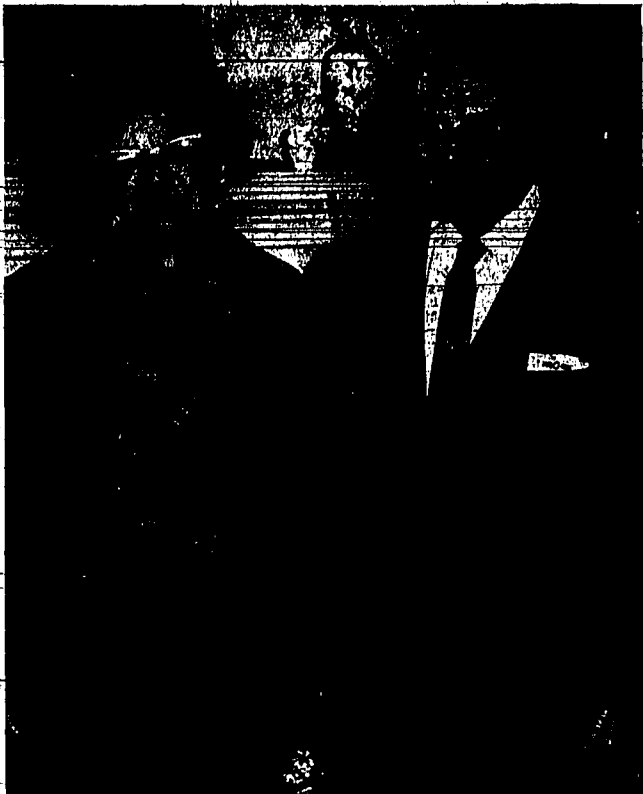

And I asked Mr. Gettert a great deal more . . . things about his past, and his future.

There are 25-year-old men who are not as bright and witty as the 100-year-old Henry Gettert. His mind is clear and his wit is crystal.

He mentioned that he was the first man to secure the term "Idaho Potato" on a major hotel's menu. With that I mentioned that as a soldier in New York City in 1950 I was a bit lonely one evening. I was dressed in civilian clothes and I was in the city. It was near Christmas and the music from Macy's could be heard down Broadway. I walked along, slightly cold and, as I said, just a bit lonely; and at that moment I passed a window in a fine restaurant called Toffenetti's. In the window was a sign which read, "Idaho Baked Potato." And so I ate. Not only was I delighted and well-fed, but I was no longer lonely. I had seen something from home.

When I had finished my story Mr. Gettert looked at me and said, "I know Toffenetti."

By that time I wasn't sure if Mr. Gettert was pulling both my legs . . . about everything. But then he took me into the basement of his home. And there on a wall was a large and impressive poster from Toffenetti's, proclaiming just what I had seen in the window on that

MR. AND MRS. H. C. GETTERT: a great occasion—Mr. Gettert's 100th birthday anniversary, and the couple's 50th wedding anniversary.

a way with words

A few weeks ago we wrote in "A Way With Words" that the definition of a "paradox" was "two doctors." We received a letter from Janet Meeks of Jerome which pointed out that the definition didn't really go far enough. A REAL paradox, said Janet, is when an M.D. and a chiropractor walk down the street side by side.

And last week a list of actual epitaphs garnered this reply from Harold Young of Filer, Idaho: Many years ago my uncle wrote an epitaph to be placed upon the monument of one who had died. A few years later it came out in a newspaper with an answer . . . "Friends, as you pass by, as you are now, so once was I. As I am now, so you must be, prepare for death and follow me." And the answer given was . . . "To follow you, I'm not content, until I know which way you went."

Ever stop to think what happens when both teams in a championship playoff pray for victory in the locker room before the game? The stock answer is that the prayers are answered for the team which practiced the most. Which, by the way, gave rise to such homilies as: Pray for a good harvest, but keep on hoeing.

And speaking of homilies, or more specifically homiletics, that fine art of preaching or giving sermons, it is interesting to note how much preaching is done by way of the short and terse comment—for example:

- There is always free cheese in a mouse trap.
- When down in the mouth, remember Jonah. He came out all right.
- If you must kick, kick toward the goal.
- Don't brag—it isn't the whistle that pulls the train.
- A man wrapped up in himself makes a pretty small package.
- The man who rolls up his sleeves seldom loses his shirt.
- And remember, friends, a hangover is the thing that occupies the head you didn't use the night before.
- So much for the homily.

A new sports car is on the market. It will travel at a top speed of 178 miles per hour and stop on a dime. It is equipped with a putty knife which emerges and scrapes you gently off the windshield.

Anyone have any "Misplaced Mottos, or Addressed Feature Editor, Times-News, Twin Falls, if you come up with any. Here are a few to give you the idea:

- Sign above an electric chair: "You can be sure if it's Westinghouse."
- The pause that refreshes: Sunsweet Prune Juice.
- It is better to light one candle than to curse the darkness: Idaho Power.
- We give S & H Green Stamps: U.S. Post Office.

Remember the story about the man and woman, newlyweds, who had simply spent too much money, and were down to their last two dollars and it was 10 days until payday?

The man lived only three miles from a Nevada casino and in a mood of depression told his wife he was going to see if he could win some money to last the month out. They had no food, and no fuel for the furnace; and two dollars simply wouldn't last.

The man left and drove to the casino. He walked inside and put both dollars on the pass line of a crap table. And he won. He left the money there and won again. And once again he let the money ride and once again he won.

He now had $16. He decided to let it ride once more . . . and he won. Now he had $32.

He was about to leave when he decided to take one desperate chance. He walked to the roulette table and without hesitation he placed the $32 on the number 20, the date of the month he and his wife had been married. The wheel was already spinning and as it slowed the man could hardly refrain from reaching for the $32 and running with it. But he left it there. And when the small ball dropped, it came to rest in number 20. The man couldn't believe his eyes. At 35 to one the man was given $1120.00. He stood there stunned. And the wheel began to spin again. He started to put the chips into his pockets and as he did he was aware of a gasp from the other players at the table.

And then he heard: "Number 20 . . . a repeater." His original $32 was still sitting on number 20. Another $1120.00, plus the first $1120.00, plus the original $32 bet he now scraped from the table totaled $2272.00.

He could hardly breathe. Perspiration was rolling down his back, and his eyes were blurred.

Fantastic! He couldn't lose. He bet $500.00 more in smaller units, and won an additional $800.00. His total was now $3072.00.

He was ready to leave, but with such fantastic luck he had to try once more. He obtained permission from the house to place the $3072.00 on the pass line of the crap table. There he had the best odds. And a little old man began to shake the dice.

As the dice came out of the man's hand, they jumped down the green felt bouncing and rolling with unusual speed. They hit the back and slowed as they came off. They rolled to a stop . . . and the man couldn't believe his eyes. He had lost. He had lost everything.

He drove those three long miles on the Nevada desert toward home, slower than usual, afraid to even think.

And when she greeted him at the door, hoping for some good news . . . the man managed a weak smile, and then confessed: "I'm sorry, dear—I lost the two dollars."

"Home, Family" Part Of Student's Education

For six years now the American Field Service through their international scholarships has been working to bring foreign students to Twin Falls. The organization, along with the cooperation of parents, students, and the school administration at the high school level, is responsible for bringing five foreign students to Twin Falls, each spending a year here.

The students have been from Holland, Germany, Argentina, Norway, and most recently, South Africa. Terla Blignaut, who is 15 years old and pronounces her name Ter'sha Bl'no, is from Potchefstroom, South Africa; she came to Twin Falls in September. She is living in the home of Mr. and Mrs. John H. Peterson, of 1021 San La Rue Ave. The Petersons have a daughter, Christine, who is the same age as Terla and who is also a senior at Twin Falls High School.

After her school year as a senior in Twin Falls, she will leave here in the last week of June. Terla will join other American Field Service scholarship students and bus tour the United States, ending up in Washington, D.C., where they will view Congress and meet the President.

For Terla, and everyone connected with her, it has been a rewarding experience. The American Field Service sets rigid rules for both exchange student and family. The family should have a teenager in the home if possible, and both parents must live in the home. The woman may not work outside the home except for school hours. And it must be a "good" home.

For Terla, as for all other

THE PETERSON FAMILY looks over a booklet on South Africa which Terla brought with her from her country. The Petersons have learned nearly as much about South Africa from Terla, as Terla has learned about the United States.

The organization urges all interested in the American Field Service to contact an officer of the local chapter for more information. A meeting is scheduled for Monday, Feb. 5.

TERLA BLIGNAUT TAKES typing at the Twin Falls High School. Typing is not offered in high school level classes in South Africa, but is offered in trade school training outside of regular classes. She enjoys the course and does well at it.

Arab World Seems Defiant As Ever In Refusing To Make Peace With Israel

By DAVID LANCASHIRE BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Seven months after Israel's victory in the six-day Middle East war, the Arab world seems as defiant as ever in refusing to make peace with the Jewish state.

Brothers Found

CLEARVIEW, Wash. (AP) — Two missing brothers from Snohomish, a hungry but unharmed, were found along with the automobile of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Jones Friday morning in brush near the grocery store from which the car had vanished 14 1/2 hours earlier.

A widespread search, spurred by fears of a possible kidnaping, had been continued through the night by law enforcement officers and civilian volunteers.

The boys are William Lee Jones, 2, and Torrance Charles, 2 months.

While some Arabs privately feel the Palestine issue is a lost cause and that a deal with Israel should be made, no individual Arab regime is willing to jeopardize itself by saying so, or with Tel Aviv.

King Hussein of Jordan, who lost most in the war, is thought to be the most desperate for a settlement, but even Hussein shuns such a risk unless he gets full backing from an Arab summit conference.

Such backing is almost out of the question. The only way to consider ending the postwar stalemate, Arab leaders maintain, is from a position of Arab solidarity.

The present unity shows distinct signs of cracking, probably off the largesse and force Nasser to desperate measures.

As some here see it: If the Arabs went back to their old feuds, there is no telling what actions the various regimes would take.

Israel might be able to force peace agreements upon a divided Arab world, but any such agreements would be immersed in chaos.

Demonstration Given To Grange

HAGERMAN — Robin Lemmon gave a demonstration and spoke on home economics and EIA projects at the meeting of the Hagerman Valley Grange.

She was assisted by Susan Waitte and Katherine Cary. Also speaking were Gail Hoskove, Steve Bennett and Jeff Tupper who attended the National FFA convention at Kansas City last fall.

The boys showed slides and spoke on the convention and their trip. Proceeding the program, a potluck supper was served. The next meeting will be held Feb. 15.

Meeting Is Set

SALMON, Idaho (AP) — The annual midwinter meeting of the Idaho Elks Association is to be held Friday with Dan Ralvillo of Lewiston replacing Dan Turnipseed of Boise as president.

Turnipseed, unable to attend because of health, submitted his resignation. Ralvillo, vice president at large, automatically moved into the presidency.

About 200 registered for the convention, which will continue Saturday. Ritual competition was scheduled Friday afternoon.

Life in MAGIC VALLEY

The near-full moon took a wayward path last Sunday morning, as it slowly disappeared from sight. Instead of "going down" behind Idaho mountains southwest of HAILEY, as it is wont to do during warm weather, or sliding down the north side of the mountain into the crochety, dry gulch, as it frequently does during winter months, it wandered away up north, to disappear behind the long skyline of Carbonate mountain.

"No wonder it's been so darned cold around here," declared an old timer. "I never saw that moon so far to the north before."

When Hailey residents see the full moon come up as far north as the deep "V" of Quigley gulch, directly east of town, they don't need a weather forecaster to tell them it is going to be cold.

On such occasions the cold, gold hall usually sets behind Kelly mountain, standing watch over the gold-belt country far to the west of Hailey and Gray gulch.

"What that moon is doing way up there is more than can figure out," continued the old timer, as he scratched his head. "The sight of Sunday morning's setting moon was one which rivaled the most eulogized sunset. For half an hour before the sun back-lit the skyline to the southeast, back of BELLE VUE, the crimson fingers of an aurora borealis rivaled the spectacle of the far north, reached up from the long skyline of Carbonate mountain to the west into the deep blue over the valley. Intense red flames seemed to shoot up from behind the snow-covered mountain.

As a jealous rival, in the somber twilight, the sun cast its first rays onto the cake-frosted whiteness (decorated with Christmas trees) of 7,000 foot high Kelly mountain. Or was he pointing out to his wayward sky-companion the proper path? Little by little the "fire" of the northern lights and the deepness of the background blue was dissipated.

But those who rose between 7:30 and 8 a.m. Jan. 14 will always remember—the beauty of that particular moon-set, and wonder why their Lunar Lady wandered away from her beaten path.

Two wonderful events happened to a former Magic Valley couple, Mr. and Mrs. Norman Brooks, now living in Colorado. The second event, a result of the first, was written in a note

Lights

FILER—Two flashing beacon warning lights are now in operation at the Filer Elementary School crosswalk.

The lights were acquired and assembled by Charles Cunningham for the school district at an approximate cost of $600. Wiring for the project was done by Guy Matsuoaka and city employes Paul Patterson and Miles King erected the lights.

nan conflict. His affiliations include Montrose Lodge No. 1053 BPOE.

The other half of the busy couple, Mrs. Dona Brooks, is well known in Magic Valley. Although born in Yuma County, Colorado, she attended grade and high school in KIMBERLY and was graduated from FILER High School.

The couple met at a mutual friend's wedding, and in the fall of 1954, they were married. While he was in service, she received her secretarial training at Del Mar Junior College in Texas. She is secretary and past Ceres of Riverside Grange. She was lecturer in the Pomona Grange and was elected Pomona in State Grange. She is also a room mother this year at Oak Grove school.

Mr. and Mrs. Brooks are president of the Young Marrieds Couples, a social organization of the State Grange. They are active in church work and are members of the Oak Grove PTA. Both are 4-11 leaders.

Although residents in the Riverside area when they became Grange members, they now live on a ranch in the Oak Grove vicinity. Their sons, Kevin, 9, and David, 8, are active in 4-11 and Cub Scouts.

The Brooks, instead of taking the plane, took their children and drove making it a three-week vacation trip.

Snow Survey Is Made In Camas

FAIRFIELD—There was 10 inches of snow with a water content of 3.8 on Couch summit north of Fairfield, according to a survey made Dec. 28 by aircraft.

Dave Cinkovich, soil conservationist, said that the district has not made a ground survey yet this year. He stated that the snow was below normal as a 15-year average shows a snow fall with 6.1 water content for the same period.

Since then the mountains have been receiving new snowfall and the next measurements should show much more snow on the summit.

After College And Army Training In Pharmacy, Man Prefers Twin Falls

Dave Nelson is one of the young men interested in the City of Twin Falls. Like many others, he has been away, and has returned to this valley because he finds it a wonderful place to live. He is at the same time a present and future businessman in Twin Falls.

Dave Nelson is 27 years old, and is married to the former Beverly Burgenmoller of Antleron Falls. They were married in 1954.

But prior to their marriage, Dave left Twin Falls to secure an education in the same occupation his father works at. Both are now pharmacists. Dave's father, Al Nelson, is a long time member of the Twin Falls community, and was a member of its city commission.

When Dave left Twin Falls he moved to Pocatello to attend the Idaho State University Pharmaceutical College. He went to Pocatello after his graduation from Twin Falls High School in 1950, and graduated from ISU and the five year pharmacy program in 1954.

While at ISU, Dave was a member of the band, and a member of Intercollegiate Knights, and honorary fraternity. He was also a member of the student chapter of the Idaho State University Pharmaceutical Association.

He was elected by popular vote to become President of the Associated Students of ISU, and served in that capacity in 1952-54. He also spent three years as dorm manager of Owen and Dyer Halls during his years at the university.

It was after graduation from ISU that Dave married Beverly Burgenmoller in 1954.

After his marriage he went into the Army and was initially stationed at Ft. Sam Houston, Tex., with the Army's Medical Corps. He then went to Ft. Bliss, Tex., and from there to Ft. Knox, Ky., for brief training before being shipped out to Que Nhon, Vietnam, with the 85th Evacuation Hospital. He spent a year in Vietnam from Aug. 1955 to Aug. 1956, and then returned to Twin Falls to become partner with his father in their business, Sav-Mor Drug Store.

While in the service Dave Nelson received the Army Commendation Medal for his work in Vietnam. His wife had lived with her parents in American Falls during Dave's stay in the Army, and joined him in Twin Falls on his return.

He is a member of Our Savior Lutheran Church in the past he has been a tennis worker and a team captain for the United Fund drives in Twin Falls, and his wife, who is a school teacher, was head teacher with the Twin Falls Operation Head Start organization.

His plans? "I intend to stay in Twin Falls. I like the people and the area. I've traveled around a bit, and I have yet to find a nicer place to build a future."

Iwo Jima Garrison Is Serving Two Purposes For Americans

By BOB POOS

IWO JIMA (AP) — Rustling, crumbling landing craft still rest on one beach. Spent rifle and machine-gun cartridges litter the ground. Hugo Japanese cannon, knocked from their mounts by counterbattery barrages, lie askew.

This is Iwo Jima, allowed in U.S. Marine Corps annals as a place of blood, death and glory, where that corps met one of its sternest tests.

Two Iwo peace and almost forgotten in the vast stretches of the Central Pacific, its sulphur pits bubbling and reeking. The eight-square-mile island is inhabited only by cats and dogs gone wild, birds, lizards, poisonous centipedes — and a tiny garrison of American marines and Coast Guard sailors.

Still under American control, it is scheduled to return to Japanese rule this year.

U.S. Marine veterans of 1945 say the island is engraved indelibly in their memories — that, no matter where you fought, Iwo somehow stands above all others.

At first look from an airplane circling to land they would have no trouble recognizing it today. Iwo resembles an oval meat platter with a lump of potatoes at one end. The lump is Mt. Suribachi where Marines from the 2nd Battalion, 28th Regiment, raised the Stars and Stripes — their feat recorded by Associated Press photographer Joe Rosenthal in a memorable photograph. Partly because of this photo, the flag is never lowered atop Suribachi except to be replaced by a new one.

The flag flies near the site where the photo was taken. Around it is a small monument of whitewashed concrete with two bronze plaques. One reports that this site marked the site of the historic flag raising. The other quotes tough old Adm. Chester Nimitz: "Uncannable among those who served on Iwo Jima."

Americans serving here now almost unanimously object to the planned transfer of the island to Japan.

Sen. Dick Mica, D-Spokane, N.Y., an Air Force medical observer, says: "I don't think we ought to give it back. We paid too high a price for it. Put it this way: anyone here wants to stay on this place just to keep it but no one wants to see it go back to the Japanese."

Iwo's price was high for the Japanese as well as Americans. The invading Marines suffered 28,000 men killed, almost one-third of all Marine combat deaths in World War II. Soldiers and sailors who died on Iwo brought American dead to 6,821.

More than 18,000 Japanese soldiers perished while about 1,000 stunned survivors were captured.

Members of the current American garrison, about 60 men commanded by Air Force Maj. Paul Gerber of New York City, spend much of their spare time "housekeeping" — preserving the old battlefields, bunkers and caves. In summer an old white phosphorus hand grenade may detonate, starting a brush fire. The Iwo garrison serves two purposes: as an emergency air-

Proposal To Dredge River Stirs Clash

REELOGG, Idaho (AP) — The proposal to begin dredging the upper St. Joe River in the St. Joe National Forest is reported to be stirring controversy among sportsmen and conservationists throughout the northern Idaho region.

Several groups already have announced opposition to the proposal of Idaho Mining Co. of Texas to dredge about a 50-acre wilderness site about 40 miles upstream from Astoria.

The company has applied to the Idaho Board of Land Commissioners in Boise for permission to do the dredging. The board has scheduled a public hearing at nearby Wallace for Feb. 2 at the courthouse.

Presumably, the company would dredge for gold in the stream, in what once was a gold-producing area.

Already announcing opposition to the plan is the Coeur d'Alene Chamber of Commerce, which adopted a resolution Thursday night calling for denial of the mining company's application.

Roger Carlson, president of the Coeur d'Alene Chamber, called the St. Joe "one of the most beautiful rivers in America and is a haven for fishermen and a vast, unspoiled number of outdoors people. We hope to keep it that way."

Carlson noted that a similar effort to dredge along the river was made "many years ago and failed. It is hoped this attempt go-will-fail."

An editorial in the St. Maries Gazette blasted the proposal, saying it would turn "one of the country's most beautiful rivers... into a clay-lined draining pipe!"

It was reported that a large humidifier had been ordered for the sanctuary and would be installed as soon as it arrives.

Discussion was held on an outside tool shed, and the trustees were instructed to draw up plans for the shed and Leo Moore and Fred Tjaden will begin construction.

Lenten Services were set for 8 p.m. each Wednesday beginning with Ash Wednesday. Collections from the Lenten Services and Easter Service will go into the building fund.

Lyle Foster was requested to submit a progress report on the Spiritual Life Mission to Rev. Martin Daumann, who served the congregation as guest missioner and was authorized to proceed with implementing the suggested improvements of the Spiritual Life Mission.

"SHOP TALK" around the home of John C. Tucker, 727 Shoshone St. N., results when one of the family's four court reporters sits to practice on the stenographic machine. Mrs. Tucker, left, was the first to become a court reporter and was soon joined by her husband, John. Others from left are their son-in-law, John W. Gambee, and daughter, Susan Tucker Gambee, all engaged in the profession. Formerly from California, the Tuckers are now all-out boosters of the Gem State. The Gambees reside in Boise where Mr. Gambee is employed as a reporter for the Industrial Accident Board.

Court Reporting Is New Family Tradition

By BONNIE BAIRD JONES

Times-News Staff Writer

Court reporting runs in the family of John C. Tucker, 727 Shoshone St. N.

Mr. Tucker is the reporter in the Fifth Judicial District court in Twin Falls, working for Judge James M. Cunningham who was appointed additional judge in this area last August.

He moved to Twin Falls from Rexburg after being selected by the newly appointed judge last fall.

"There are a lot of court reporters likely to be plenty of 'shop talk,'" Mr. Tucker's wife, Grace, is also a court reporter as is their older daughter, Susan. Not only that, but Susan is married to a court reporter, John W. Gambee, now working as a reporter for the Industrial Accident Board in Boise.

"Our younger daughter, Diane, still in high school, hasn't made up her mind as yet, but there's a good chance she, too, will become a court reporter," Mr. Tucker commented.

Almost as enthusiastic about Idaho as they are about their chosen vocations, the Tuckers have purchased a small acreage west of Twin Falls near the site of Rock Creek canyon, where they hope soon to build a new home.

Their entry into the field of court reporting began when Grace decided she had time to go to work and he, with some of the family's earnings.

She enrolled in a court-reporting school in Los Angeles and with every spare dime the family had for her school, and everyone pitching in to help with the work, she completed the course in between two and three years. After perfecting her speed sufficiently, she went to work in Downey, Calif., as a court reporter.

At the time John Tucker was working as a foreman at the Post Office and although his income was not low it was not as high as the salary his wife had begun bringing home.

"The worst part about my work was the total lack of interest and I was bored," Mr. Tucker recalls.

The Tuckers talked the situation over the next morning. Mr. Tucker walked into the post office and resigned from the agency he had worked with for some 15 years.

Now it was his turn to go to school and Mrs. Tucker pitched in to keep the family solvent. Working part time, it took three long years for Mr. Tucker to complete his training. He was still working to build up his speed and accuracy when Mrs. Tucker suffered a neck injury and he took over her court job despite a slight lack of confidence in his being ready for full time court reporting.

After that the two shared the court reporting duties which had become too much for one reporter.

In the summer of 1965 the family decided it was time to leave the smog, congestion and traffic of California. They spent three weeks touring the northwestern states and decided to return home and wait for a court opening in the northwest region. In their three weeks' tour they didn't even skirt the Magic Valley area and in fact, saw only a little of northern Idaho and part of eastern Idaho.

The first job opening was in Rexburg. As the Tuckers explained there was just too much quiet there after Los Angeles.

After a year in Rexburg they heard of the additional judge appointments and decided to try for Twin Falls.

Now ardent boosters of the area, they say Twin Falls is just right in size and they like the intensified farm area opportunity for recreation and the fresh air and easy moving traffic.

Mr. Tucker, who pioneered the profession for the family, said the field is a good one for young high school graduates to enter. Court reporters are well paid and the work is a good profession. Basic salaries are about $9,000 a year in Idaho and as high as $14,000 in such states as California.

There is now a high demand for good reporters nation wide.

"Training for the work is the biggest stumbling block. Many who undertake it never finish because it is a very dull subject while learning and also a very difficult one," Mrs. Tucker says.

Mrs. Tucker now does most of the typing of her husband's notes taken and who first when a reporter is needed for court cases, depositions or statements and hearings.

"For every hour of note taking there are about eight hours of transcribing and typing," Mr. Tucker explained.

Strangely enough court reporting is now done almost exclusively with the stenographic machines, began as a shorthand procedure and is generally thought of as a shorthand operation. Very few court reporters now understand shorthand. The eventual replacement of the reporter will probably be a tape recording machine as soon as one is perfected that can distinguish between individual speakers.

A good court reporter must write about 54,000 words a day with 99 per cent accuracy. Too often, the Tuckers say, attorneys and others in the courtroom think of the reporter as just a fixture and forget to speak so that their remarks are understandable by the reporter.

Reporters must be good at limited vocabularies, Mrs. Tucker adds. Often they must take technical testimony such as medical terms, chemistry formulas or phrases associated with an unusual business or industry. These must be properly spelled and recorded in an instant.

All court reporters do not work in court. Many work for private companies or agencies where hearings or conventions must be recorded. Many others simply free lance as does Mrs. Tucker, working only when she is called.

Education for the work involves studies in law, spelling, writing and numerous subjects likely to come into court proceedings. Once the reporter can operate the steno-type machines, he must practice to establish and maintain his speed.

Mr. Tucker said it is not unusual for one reporter to be unable to read another's notes although they are machines taken. However he has an unusual situation in that his boss, Judge Cunningham, often glances over his shoulder to check the notes. Judge Cunningham began his career as a reporter.

STINKING CREEK

John Fetterman

Who are these hillbillies who came to the Hollows of the Appalachians? They are people whose forebears were driven by intense desire and who first saw Stinking Creek and other streams of the Kentucky hills. These were men scarred from the abuse of the debtor's prisons and the filthy streets of Britain. These were fighters and strong men burning with a desire to escape the authority that was destroying them, and later another authority half a world away in a new country. The debasement of these mountaineers is a tragedy of epic proportions.

This is a moving look at the mountain people of today. John Fetterman lived with them and listened to them. He lets them speak for themselves both in their words and the magnificent photographs he took.

"What don't work is drawn" is the way Goldo Slusher divides the citizens of Stinking Creek into two groups. He is a logger and strains his powerful muscles all day to keep him from being laid up. Not many men have his stamina.

Fetterman found the older people easier to talk to. There are Frank Patterson and Ed Sizemore who did most everything in the way of Stinking Creek until they and the hills wore out. No timber, no nothing. Gilbert Bargo is a man whose opinions merit respect. He is 62 and has lived hard. He scoffs at "government business."

"Sometime the government might get overloaded and collapse," he, like most on Stinking Creek, are sustained partly from the inspiration he receives from the Salem Baptist Church and the preaching of Preacher Marzoe.

The Rev. Marzoe preaches with a simple strength that is both jolting and refreshing. On Stinking Creek there can be no rewards here on earth — all promises have failed. Preacher Marzoe offers gladly what he has to offer: "I'll take someone where in another life."

Hope here on earth was offered boldly to these people when President Johnson signed the Appalachia Act. If this isn't Paradise, it will be something less to those who ever know. There was no celebration on Stinking Creek at the signing. Too many times before have there been cries of Utopia.

If there is a wrong side of the tracks on Stinking Creek, it is Brown's Hollow. There's quite a drove of Browns with a common ancestor, Steve Brown. The only thing that keeps the Browns alive is welfare. Henry Brown, spokesman for the group, invited, "Come on up on the porch, brother. You're welcome to stay with the Browns 'til you starve out."

The children receive their first lessons—draft-of-knowledge at Shady School. "Jack and the Beanstalk" and temporary shortage of food is nothing to get excited about. That's a fairy tale? Not on Stinking Creek.

The addicts are too old or too big to attend Shady School, and if they want to attend high school they must ride 20 miles each way. They just wait—for what they are never sure.

"Lots of our kin buried here." This remark by one of the young men as he helped clean the little cemetery, revealed their true feeling. They want to be buried here and not in Detroit or Chicago.

There are not many young marrieds on Stinking Creek. A few like Earl Broughton and Truman Messner are determined to live and raise their families without welfare. But for every Broughton and Messner there are dozens who abandon the hills and go north. Uptown Chicago is a hillbilly ghetto. The exodus from the Appalachians is the most significant migration of our times.

There are scientists, dedicated and skilled people who have sacrificed themselves to bring a glimpse of hope to this defeated land. Peggy Kemmer and Irma Galt are well known in any emergency — they will come at a hard top. They say the people need something to give them a sense of dignity and a meaning to life.

What are the answers? Perhaps each hillbilly must find his own — in the Salem Baptist Church — perhaps in the War on Poverty. Perhaps in Linda's note with the four letter word L-O-V-E. Perhaps in the answer the old mountaineer gave when he was questioned, "I'll cryptic words come back to haunt the mind."

Memory Of Cold, Loneliness, Still Lingers

(Editor's Note: The following story was sent to the Times-News by its author. It is a story of an adventure, one which happened to him many years ago. It is published here because in simple language, it captured much of a memory. The author, who lives in Twin Falls, entitled his story, "Stop and Think.")

By ROBERT L. GILBERT

It has been about forty-five years since I had that almost fatal episode.

The day was one of those cold grayish cloudy days in late fall and you could sense a change in the weather, a change that would force the late Indian summer of warm hazy days into sudden winter.

At that time I lived in Corinne, Utah, a small town in the northern part of the state, situated on Bear River. I had a good home in town and a wife and five children.

I did a lot of duck hunting in those days and I never needed much coaxing to take me on a hunt, even on short notice. About noon on that unforgettable day of November 29, 1920, a friend and neighbor, Bill Baker, stopped to see me.

"Bill," he said, "this is just the kind of day to go down to the lake and get some mallards and canvas-backs." I agreed with him. But I had an uneasy and queer feeling at the time that I should stay home and not go out. Bill, however, shrugged the feeling off and in a few minutes we were on our way to the lake about eight miles south of town. Bill had a fast trotting mare and a two wheeled cart and we arrived at the shooting grounds in about an hour's time.

For many miles south and southwest of Corinne—the land was flat and mostly alkali. Only saltgrass and tules would grow in the soil or water-covered areas. Most of the water-covered areas was covered by alkali mud sloughs, connected to each other by shallow channels of water, a great place for ducks and geese to stop and feed for a few weeks on their way south for the winter.

Just a few miles south of the lake we had selected that day to shoot on was the mouth of the Bear River and the Bear River Bay.

At that time it was considered the best duck and goose shooting area in the United States. The bay must have had forty miles or more of shore line along which grew tules as high as a man's head. In rough and rainy weather ducks by the thousands would leave the "a" areas and fly north to the quieter feeding grounds on the lakes and sloughs.

Bill and I arrived about 2:00 p.m. at the lake and I picked out a small patch of tules about a quarter of a mile from the center of the lake and Bill picked a spot at a point that extended into the lake about a quarter of a mile down. The lake was about one inch deep along the shore, and about two inches deep in the middle. It was connected to the Chesapeake Gun Club on the south by a channel of water about one hundred yards wide.

Throughout the lake there were places where the water was a depth of six or eight inches and a person could take his time and wade almost anywhere on the lake moving around the deeper places. But wading in darkness with a heavy wind, rain and sleet storm in progress was a different matter. And that's just what happened that fall day, November 29, 1920.

Hunting was excellent that afternoon until dark, and mallards and canvas-backs passed over my blind in great numbers. I had a few mallards in my net and a few mallards in the small patch of tules about the center, and by leveling off the rat house a little and cutting some tules and standing them around it I had a comfortable and snug place to shoot from. I was encouraged as well that ducks passed over it only fifteen to thirty yards high. I was a pretty fair shot and was fast approaching my limit of ducks. I was so interested in shooting that I never realized darkness was closing in and the wind was getting stronger; and rain and sleet was getting heavier.

I glanced toward the north shore at a little patch of willows where we had tied the mare and I could barely make out the spot. When big fat mallards and canvas-back ducks are quickling and milling about your blind it's hard to quit shooting. I got in a few more shots, then gathered up my ducks and tied them to my shoulder and started wading toward (what I thought) was the north shore. Suddenly it dawned on me that I was wrong. I should have started wading for shore at least one-half hour sooner.

Wading in water over knee deep with a soft muddy bottom and a load of about fifty pounds of ducks on your back is a hard thing to do. And now in seconds an ink darkness settled around me.

I felt smothered. I could barely see the water around my knees, and I fully realized now that I was in serious trouble. I could feel the icy fingers pulling at me from that awful darkness.

I did not have the slightest idea in which direction the north shore was, and if I had known the right direction, with my eyes watering from the cold wind and the sleet and rain, I doubt if I could have held a straight course for long. And there were the deeper spots to avoid. In wading to shore, I had almost lost my nerve at this point. I turned back and tried to find the muskrat blind I had set only minutes before. I looked in vain, but I could not find it again. If I could have found it I would have spent the night in safety.

I took the ducks off my back and shouldered and put them down in the water, then tied a small length of rope to them so I could pull them along with small effort into the float. I started wading again, north I hoped, toward my ducks behind me. I did not proceed far before I realized I was getting into deeper water and I could feel it lapping over the tops of my hip boots. I had to retrace my steps back into knee deep water. At this point I nearly abandoned the ducks and gun and rest my arms on the ducks and try to swim out using them to help hold me up. But I realized I would soon chill and become helpless in that icy water, and if I swam into deep water I might swim rather out into the lake. The storm had now reached its peak and was a raging ugly thing; the rain and sleet hours to return. I knew that I would have to find my way out before that time or drown. Each minute that passed I was getting colder and more exhausted. I thought then that I might throw away my boat and gun and rest my arms on the ducks and try to swim out using them to help hold me up. But I realized I would soon chill and become helpless in that icy water, and if I swam into deep water I might swim rather out into the lake. learn to live with nature

National Wildlife Week 1968

LEARN TO LIVE with nature is the theme for this year's annual observance of National Wildlife Week, March 17-23. It emphasizes a question many people in all walks of life are asking these days, including Col. Charles A. Lindbergh in a timely magazine article: Where is the value of superior transport that will carry passengers at fifty-hundred mile per hour speeds that will travel between earth and moon and nearby planets; of cosmic value literally in the hands of man; if all this dooms irreplaceable wildlife qualities of even greater worth?

National Wildlife Federation Urges Planned Conservation 52 Weeks A Year

By JIM HUMBRID
Idaho Fish-Game Department

No one can say just how much the annual observance of National Wildlife Week each spring had to do with the publication in December of a special double issue on the theme of the wild world in a slick, picture magazine which circulates runs to millions of copies a week.

It is known for sure that the sponsoring National Wildlife Federation prides its state affiliates, including the strong Idaho Wildlife Federation, to push fish and wildlife conservation "52 weeks a year" in the press, schools, service clubs and the like. The "week," which this year falls March 17-23, is just the focal point around which other events are built. The annual conservation survey contest for Idaho Junior and senior high school students is one of these activities.

But just how much all this had to do with getting the "Lone Eagle" to strive mightily through the years in the fight to save elephants, white-winged doves, grizzly bears, trumpeter swans and other wildlife species from extinction, or to write the recent lead-off magazine article, called "The Wisdom of Wilderness," is a moot point.

Why is Col. Charles A. Lindbergh giving so generously of his time and fortune to do these things? Why is he taking up the subject of fish and wildlife so earnestly in his quiet publicity shy way?

There are two reasons. He is loved by God's miracle of life and is saddened that many of His creatures are menaced by the clash of civilization and wildlife, which destroys so much habitat of all kinds—fish, bird and mammal—in the course of a year.

He sometimes wonders if progress—as typified for example by his solo flight over the Atlantic Ocean in 1927 in the tiny, underpowered "Spirit of St. Louis"—leads to the disappearance of fish and wildlife species it took billions of years of evolution to produce.

Lindbergh, now 65, writes in the pre-Christmas magazine piece that: "If I were entering adulthood now I would choose a career that kept me in contact with nature more than science. This is a choice an individual still can make—but no longer making in general. The few natural areas remain. Both by intent and indifference we have insulated ourselves from the wilderness that produced us. Our emphasis of science has resulted in alarming rises in world populations that demand an ever-increasing emphasis of science to improve their standards and maintain their vigor.

America's celebrated "Lone Eagle" was named a couple of years ago as a director of the World Wildlife Fund, which is headed by Dr. Ira N. Gabrielson, former director of the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service, and global authority on saving rare and endangered wildlife species.

Lindbergh spoke out in another magazine article, "Man's Back in 1964 on the same subject, as follows: "Is civilization progress? The challenge, I think, is clear; and as clearly, the final answer will be given not by our amassment of knowledge, or by the speed of our aircraft, but by the affect our civilized activities as a whole have upon the qualities of our planet's life—the life of plants and animals as well as that of man."

He questions the value of super-sonic transport that will carry passengers at rifle-bullet speed; of spacehips that will travel between earth and moon and nearby planets; of cosmic power literally in the hands of man; if all this dooms irreplaceable wildlife qualities of even greater worth.

Ideas such as these have been expressed in many ways by great numbers of people the past few decades, at least. It is not hard to see the hopeless plight of man as fashioning for himself—the desolated, barren, salted water and air, the sad state of massive cities that are outdated with their anti-nature technologies. In other words, mankind is fouling its own nest by expanding the gross national product by 10 per cent a year.

Of importance here is that Lindbergh said these things in print where millions of readers can see them. People are quoting "Lucky Lindy" to the effect that it is important to put a man on the moon, but even more so to save a chunk of wilderness for all time. The words have weight, since most people love and respect this great American.

It was Peter Scott, first president and chairman of the World Wildlife Fund, who summed the whole thing up in these words: "Man is the most dangerous and destructive predatory animal the world has ever known. He is also the most imaginative and creative (animal). Man has evolved important differences from other animals like reasoning power and accumulated experience which are rather striking. Not least among these is the evolution of a conscience."

Idaho still has about 27 million acres of land that is classed as public domain. This land is managed by the U.S. Forest Service, National Park Service, Idaho State Land Department, and the Bureau of Land Management. These lands generally are open for public use to play, hike, hunt, fish, swim and recreate with few responsibilities. This great public domain with its rich fish and wildlife resources can be maintained through sound conservation measures as a place of beauty and enjoyment and passed on as a better land for those who follow. The dollar impact of such resources on the state's economy is of enormous importance.

Some people charge that Indians are insensitive to the fundamental nature of their wildlife heritage that most of the natives take it for granted. Just the opposite may be true. Instead of being highly vocal and getting some of their pleasure into words, they may simply enjoy with their five senses the unique privilege of being just a few minutes from their homes to good hunting and fishing—wherever they may live.

Such people have learned how to see the rhythm of poetry and grace in the most of the native swan in flight; how to feel textured rock, or grass underfoot and the multitude of surfaces all around; how to hear the symphony of the storm, and of quiet emptiness; how to smell pine needles; and how to taste wild sage that blends with the horizon on all sides.

Without knowing how to find words to capture such pleasures, Idaho outdoorsmen somehow know or feel that man and nature are not two things apart. Man is nature—fully and completely—no more and no less. Such knowledge is a sixth sense. It also is what National Wildlife Week is all about, with its theme this year: "Learn to Live With Nature." As Lindbergh so aptly wrote, "The human future depends on an ability to combine the knowledge of science with the wisdom of wildlife."

PROOF SET displaying the "5" mint mark. All proof sets will be made in San Francisco.

From W.L. Shoshone, Idaho: I have a Wells Fargo and Company Traveler's Check, $10.00 denomination.

A purple ink stamp indicates it was issued at Seattle, Washington but no date is readable. A line below the picture gives a list of various exchange rates. The English rate at the time was 2 pounds 10 pence. On the back is a list of redemption offices around the world.

Do you have any idea of the value of this check now?

Answer—Without a definite date on the note it would not have as much value as it would if you could pinpoint it. The English value would indicate though that it was valid around 1900 to about 1918—perhaps before. Wells Fargo merchandise is much in demand by collectors. I would imagine this note would bring you about 2 1/2 times face value, since it is not dated.

From E. T. Bellevue, Idaho: I have a 1901 coin. I believe it is a nickel because on the back it has a "V" surrounded by some tree limbs and on top of that is "E. Pluribus Unum" and surrounding that is the "United States of America" and "Cents".

On the front is a woman's head surrounded by stars. I think the head is the Liberty Head. Do you know how much this coin is worth? If I wanted to sell it, what should I do? It is in good condition.

Answer: You have a regular issue United States Five Cent piece, 1883-1912. This coin is called a "V"-nickel, or Liberty Head Nickel.

Your designation of the coin as good leaves me in doubt as to the condition. The dealers grade called "Good" means that there is no detail in the head and the word "Liberty" on the headband has been obliterated. Apparently your coin is in better condition than the grade of "good."

The Liberty Head type of five cent pieces were struck in great numbers and saved by many people. Indeed, it has only been about ten years since they were occasionally found in circulation. There were 20 million pieces struck in 1901 and lots of them are still around. The coin sells now for ten cents in the poorest condition to one dollar in Extremely Fine. If you want to sell it, mail it to this column and we will try to find a buyer for you.

Collectors will be happy to know that mint marks are again being added to our coins. On January 2nd, the mint began striking coins at Denver with the "D" mint mark, and because of a recent ruling, Proof Sets will again be available for collectors. All Proof Sets will be manufactured at the S. N. Francisco Mint. This is a radical departure, since traditionally, Proof Sets were made at Philadelphia and have had no mint marks on them. With this year's issue, they will bear the "S" Mint Mark, so they will be a "first" in numismatics.

Proof sets are coined from specially prepared blanks, and struck on special presses so that they represent the finest examples of our coinage.

Beginning this year they will be packaged in special packages, also, marked with a mint seal.

They can be secured from the U.S. Mint, San Francisco and consist of 1 each of current coinage—that is 50 cents, 25 cents,

State School Is Discussed By Bliss PTA

BLISS—Stanford Rupert of the State School at Gooding was the guest speaker at the Bliss PTA meeting. Mr. Rupert spoke on the State School and the methods of teaching used there. The Bliss PTA will sponsor the "Profiles on Education" research project. This research will involve research on teaching curriculum and quality of teachers and equipment. The findings will be compared with other schools as a means to improve schools. This program is presented through the NEA and IEA. An executive meeting will be held Feb. 7 and the next PTA meeting will be held March 6. Refreshments were served by Mrs. Ronald Stroud, Mrs. Robert Byce and Mrs. Ivan Garand.

FORESTS URGED OTTAWA (AP)—About 10 million acres of farmland in Canada should be converted to forest. If the country is to make best use of its soils, said A. W. Hlyth, director of the Ontario region in the Forestry Department's rural development branch. He added, in a paper prepared for a Commonwealth forestry conference, that over the last 40 years only 250,000 farm acres have been converted.

Utah Scientists Say They May Have New Particle Of Matter

By LARRY KURTZ
SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — Scientists at the University of Utah say they may have discovered a new particle of matter — something even more elusive than the mysterious neutrino.

They call it an intermediate vector boson. It was suspected for some time that such a particle exists, but until now they have had little to go on.

Indications of evidence, that such particles may exist were announced recently by physicists analyzing data from the university's neutrino chamber.

It sounds complicated, but read on.

The chamber is deep underground. It was blasted out of solid rock in the old Silver King Mine at Park City, east of Salt Lake City.

In the chamber is scientific apparatus designed to record the movement of neutrinos as they pass through the earth.

To understand neutrinos and intermediate vector bosons, you must start with larger particles — like molecules.

A molecule is the smallest particle that will keep the makeup of the original substance.

Molecules, in turn, are made up of atoms. And atoms are made up of protons, neutrons and electrons.

A molecule of water consists of two atoms of hydrogen and one atom of oxygen — hence the formula, H<sub>2</sub>O.

How small is a molecule? The World Book Encyclopedia says the tip of your finger would measure one mile wide if each of the molecules in it were as large as a grain of sand.

Even at that, molecules are large in comparison with atoms, protons, neutrons and electrons — not to mention neutrinos, muons and intermediate vector bosons.

BODILY HARM
NICE, France (AP) — People have been killed defending parking places in France but this time it was less serious — only a broken arm. Mrs. Anne Barthel refused to heed shopkeeper Maurice Casadei's warning that she had parked in a forbidden area, so when she tossed off to her shopping he let the air out of her tires. On her return they scuffed and after having her arm set she had her lawyer file charges of bodily harm.

Now we get into the area of the unknown.

Scientists aren't sure just where these subatomic particles come from, but they think neutrinos and muons develop as the result of collisions in space between protons, neutrons and electrons.

The resulting debris decays, they contend, and muons and neutrinos are formed.

The scientists say muons have great penetrating power — they penetrate the atmosphere and the earth, reaching the university's neutrino-detecting chamber. But they don't go much farther.

Neutrinos, however, keep on going — supposedly all the way through the earth and on into space.

The scientists had thought most particles able to penetrate the atmosphere and the earth would have to strike the earth at an angle.

They thought the particles would be destroyed if they fell vertically, because of the greater resistance they would encounter.

But in a three-week test at the neutrino chamber, the physicists concluded that many particles had made a vertical drop.

"It came to be known as the too few skew mu effect," said Dr. Haven E. Bergeson, who with Drs. Jack W. Keuffel and Richard O. Stonerog reported finding evidence for the intermediate vector boson particle.

Bergeson said the discovery was "related with a certain amount of dismay among high-energy physicists who felt the field was well understood."

Bergeson said the "too few skew mu effect" could be caused by this strange intermediate vector boson particle, he believed to live a small fraction of a second before decaying into a neutrino or muon.

"Perhaps more will be learned when the neutrino-detecting apparatus is activated again, probably in early spring. It was in operation for three months last summer, but the data was not compiled until recently."

What does it all mean? No one knows. For now, it's just another example of how man, in solving old mysteries, keeps another battle with Congress bumping into new ones.

To Hold Funds

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Johnson administration will hold back about $300 million in federal highway funds this calendar year, sources said Friday.

Secretary of Transportation Alan S. Boyd would say only that no decision has been reached on the possibility he raised last October of deferring expenditure of part of this fiscal year's $1.4 billion in federal road money.

Announcement of the possible deferral at that time produced sharp replies from Congress and the nation's governors. The concern has revived recently as another example of how man, in solving old mysteries, keeps another battle with Congress over spending cuts.

Social Security Authorities Believe Earnings Base Must Keep Pace

By BRUCE BLOSSAT
WASHINGTON (NEA) — One of the surest things about the Social Security system's future is that the earnings base for Social Security taxes will not stay indefinitely at its new high level of $7,800 yearly but will go on rising.

The 1967 revisions which lifted the base to that point from the old $6,600 level do not, it is true, provide for further upward changes — though the tax rate itself is to be increased many times starting in 1969.

But Social Security authorities are thoroughly convinced that, in the era of constantly rising wage levels, the earnings base from which the taxes are taken must keep a similar upward pace if the system is to remain strong and healthy.

If the base does not rise with climbing wage levels, they foresee these serious consequences:

More and more workers would have earnings higher than the base, and fewer and fewer of them would ultimately get retirement or other benefits related reasonably to their full earnings.

The system's ability to respond financially to new and changing needs would be reduced, and a smaller and smaller proportion of the country's payroll would be subject to Social Security tax contributions.

To finance a given rate of benefits or to increase benefit scales would mean higher and higher tax rates imposed on the same limited base.

A greater and greater part of the program's cost therefore would be thrown on the nation's lower-paid workers — those earning less than the limit fixed by the law.

Some specialists argue that the earnings base could quickly be pushed from the new $7,800 to around $15,000, since at this latter level the tax would be applied against the full earnings base in the automatic progression of U.S. workers as was true in the late 1930's when the base was just $3,000.

There have been suggestions that a formula be developed to provide for raising the earnings base in automatic stages as wage levels rise.

It is also being argued that, with or without such a feature, rising wage levels seem sure to bring enough added revenues into Social Security coffers to make possible another formula to secure ties between rises in the cost of living and higher retirement and related benefits.

The chief objection to this proposal is that it would constantly and automatically channel new money into the established benefit structure, rather than allow flexible attention to improvements needed to meet presently unforeseen problems.

As we have seen earlier in this series, there is mounting talk of drawing more of the program's future financial sustenance from the general U.S. Treasury revenues rather than Social Security trust funds.

Right now about $1 billion of general revenue supplements employee-mandatory tax contributions under the system. By fiscal year 1972, it is figured the regular federal treasury will be paying out $1.8 billion annually for parts of the program.

Sen. Robert F. Kennedy of New York has proposed that the treasury supply 35 per cent of total Social Security financing, to make possible far higher benefits and lift more aged folks out of poverty.

But resistance to this is high in many quarters. The self-help aspect of a contributory tax under Social Security seems to have wide citizen acceptance; a heavy turn to general financing might greatly intensify demands for more benefits, such as in turn conversely might limit the program by putting it in competition for the general federal treasury dollar and weakening its present financial independence.

If there is a swing toward the general treasury, the demands of Social Security's Medicare offshoot may prove to be the principal cause. Treasury supplies somewhere around half the money paid out for doctor bills under optional, supplemental medical insurance (patients also pay premiums). In 18 months of Medicare, 28 million doctor bills totaling $1,311,000,000 were paid. The outlook for much more of the same in the years ahead.

To prevent even greater future reliance upon general tax monies, defenders of Social Security's "insurance-style" financing count unmistakably upon wage levels soaring upward so rapidly and constantly that their "magic" will finance most of the current instant poverty-fighters and others may put up on the continuously enlarging Social Security system, in the decades to come.

Draft Forecast
WASHINGTON (AP) — Defense officials predicted Friday the United States will draft 72,000 more men this year than in 1967.

This increase to an expected 302,000 total reflects the large numbers of men who were drafted during the Southeast Asia buildup of 1966 and will be leaving service this year.

About 230,000 men, an average of about 19,100 a month, were called to duty last year. This year's average will reach around 25,100, although the March draft call already has been set at 39,000.

ERROR NORTH'S FOUR-TO-ONE

The play at five hearts doubled but was short but not sweet. South ruffed the spade lead in dummy and played ace and another high diamond in order to South bidding we want to call attention to East's two-spade call. East and West were playing that they showed strength over a takeout double by doubling. Hence, East's two-spade bid showed a weak hand but West could still afford to raise to game. Incidentally, four spades would have made with careful play.

Now for the adjudication. We charge North 80 per cent and South 20 per cent wrong doing. We don't like North's takeout double at all. He couldn't stand spades and he didn't really like hearts. What he held was a good hand with solid diamonds. He might have merely overcalled with two diamonds or he might have jumped right in five hearts but he had nothing to gain from his double.

Where does South's per cent come in? If South had thought things over carefully, he would have seen that if North wanted a choice between hearts and diamonds, North would have bid four hearts instead of four spades instead of the five diamonds he did bid.

force dummy again. South cashed dummy's ace of trumps and played the king of clubs. West won and led a second club which East ruffed. West still had to make his king of trumps, so South was down two.

There was no way to beat five diamonds, and North and South got into a heated argument about the bidding. North said, "I don't need a nursemaid. When I bid five diamonds, I don't need trump support."

South said, "Why did you double with a one suit hand?" Eventually they turned the matter over to us for adjudication. Before getting into the North-

ELE AND WALT DULANEY

Truth-Teller Lives A Fuller Life

Dear Ele: I am an avid fan of yours, but I emphatically disagree with the answer you gave to "half-engaged" who asked how to tell her boyfriend that she wore a padded bra.

Twelve and a half years ago I was faced with this same problem, and padded bras weren't as acceptable then as they are now. I had 36-inch hips and a 30-inch bust and without padding I looked like a boy in girls' clothing. When I met the man I wanted to marry, I decided to tell him how things were. You hit a home nerve with me. I've always thought it was a somewhat superstitious-to-keep-up this ancient custom. (In olden times people believed in invisible devils, and so they'd shout "God bless you!" whenever loved ones sneezed so the devils wouldn't be paralyzed in mid-air and consequently couldn't enter the sneezers' open mouths.) Let's make a mutual support-deal. I'll gather my courage to stop sneezing "devil-bloot" if you'll do the same. Perhaps we'll inspire others—Walt.

TRY HARDER

Dear Walt: Do you think it's below a guy's dignity to accept a girl's invitation like this? I asked a girl to a dance. She said: "I'll accept now, but don't feel hurt if Brad asks me later and I go with him." I really want to go with her, and I don't think the other boy is going to ask her because he's pretty hung on this other girl. But...?

Dear Jason: I see nothing wrong in accepting a "second-best" rating and then trying harder. If you want to take the risk, go for it. This gamble, go ahead—Walt.

"Could you drive my girl friends home? They don't want to drag their fathers out in the snow!"

Fire Damages House At Rupert
 RUPERT — Extensive damage resulted from a fire at 200 West Baseline Tuesday morning in a house which was under construction by John Tracy of Big Valley Construction Co. It is believed that it started from a small portable heater. The house was being used to store most of the Tracy's household goods as they are in the process of moving into a new home near the one which burned. A number of Mr. Tracy's tools were also stored in the house. No estimate has been made as yet of the damage. The house is located in the Mountain View Subdivision and was being built to sell.

Memory Of Cold, Loneliness, Still Lingers

ed down and hitched to the cart. Then we started home chilled to the bone and soaking wet. Every once in a while on the way home Bill would break out cursing me and each time I would apologize to him. While we were hitching the mare up Bill had said, "Bob, you could have yelled 'hello' or 'suppin' you didn't have to go and shoot off a blast like that right in my face."

We reached home after an eight mile drive over a dark, muddy road with the rain still beating down on us. Bill let me off at my house and I went in. There was the lighted room, a warm fire, and a hot meal waiting for me in the good old Majestic cookstove's warming oven, not to mention loving wife and five small kids. I still had the two dozen big blinds and canvas-back ducks. Dosing by the fire that night before going to bed I reviewed those past few hours. What a day! I was thankful to be safe at home again and not too bad off after the ordeal that afternoon.

Many times the past forty-five years I have dreamed at night of going through that experience again and again, always waking up in a cold sweat and feeling like I could not determine from which direction it came. It was still because of the noise from the wind and rain. I fired more shots but they made my ears ring and the flash from the muzzle was blinding me. I soon gave up the idea.

Then a thought came to me of what a school teacher had once said to me. "Robert, whenever you have a real tough problem to solve just sit calmly down and think, forget all else and really put your mind on it. You can most always solve it." Well, I could not sit down but I leaned on my gun, the butt resting in the water and mud, and I began to do some serious thinking. I forgot the roar of the wind and rain. I was thinking, and hard, to find a way out of the mess I had so foolishly gotten myself into. Then in a flash I remembered that when I was sitting in the blind I was facing south and the wind was blowing from the southwest. If I turned around so that the wind blew from behind and about halfway from my left ear to center of my neck I should be facing about due north toward shore.

I started wading again, hopefully, and for quite a ways I got along fine using my gun to prod the water ahead of me. Suddenly I hit deep water. I stopped and reasoned that I should bear a few degrees right; maybe I had circled to my left. I bore right and came again into knee deep water.

This procedure was followed each time I ran into deeper water, and I turned right a little and came into knee deep water again. Resting now, I was tormented by the thought "what if the wind had changed? To the west or northwest? Then in that case which direction was I headed?" I broke into a cold chill, but finally my better sense (if I had any, I wondered) came back, and I trusted that the wind had not changed and I kept wading slowly on using the water as a guide. Then I wondered if Bill was right in the storm or had left for town to bring help? Maybe he had decided I was staying in my blind until daylight. Thoughts were constantly racing through my mind—some good, some despairing. I ran back now. I was stopped, leaning on my gun handle. I had lost all track of time and more water had stopped over the tops of my boots adding to my misery. It seemed as if I had been wading for hours but looking back now it was probably just over an hour from the time I left the blind until I finally reached the shore.

I kept wading on, foot by foot, when suddenly I realized I was in very shallow water—at last, and my bunch of ducks were dragging bottom. A little farther on the water was only one or two inches deep. I figured I was close to shore. Now I debated whether I should rest there and lie down on top of my ducks and keep going on. I decided to move on and soon came to hard, bare ground, not dry land, but good old solid earth.

My nightmarish dilemma was about over and I was safe at last; I could stick it out until daylight. My senses had returned to near normal. I had won the battle over the ghostly darkness and the storm. I walked on to find Bill. I now figured I must have kept a quarter of a mile from him. I put a shell in my gun, being careful to make sure there was no mud in the barrel and that the water was all drained out. I must not have been over twenty or thirty feet from Bill who was trying to hitch up the high-strung mare to the cart and was having quite a time in the inky darkness and wind and rain. Almost before the beam and flash from my twelve-gauge shotgun died away Bill let out an awful yell, "What-the-hell you trying to do? Get me killed?"

The mare had let out a squeal and whinny when the blast went off from my gun. She almost came down on top of Bill who was struggling to hold her. All the while Bill was cursing something awful. There was quite a commotion there in the dark for a few minutes before the two of us finally got the mare quiet-

Baboons Pave Way To Conquest Of Organ Transplant Problems

By KENNETH L. WHITTING
JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — Baboons by the hundreds are being used in medical experiments in this country. The long-faced apes are paving the way toward conquest of the problems involved in transplanting organs from one human to another, medical men say.

Baboons are common in South Africa's mountains, and research centers buy them for 10 rands, or $14. The same animals would cost perhaps $200 in the United States. Moreover, scientists say, baboons are more susceptible to pneumonia or tuberculosis than humans in South Africa's mild climate.

Rhesus monkeys are no longer widely used in research in South Africa since India banned their export here because of revulsion against this country's policies of race relations.

"The only primate available in unlimited numbers is the baboon. Gorillas and chimpanzees are almost extinct," says Prof. J. J. van Zyl of Stellenbosch University.

Two West German surgeons who flew to South Africa after the first human heart transplant said the availability of baboons contributed to Dr. Christian Barnard's operation. Dogs used in Germany were not nearly so satisfactory, they added.

Experiments have been conducted on more than 400 baboons in five months at Cape Town's Karl Bremer Hospital. Van Zyl says, "The purpose of our experiments is to study the problems of transplantation in an animal more closely related to man than the dog."

A serum to fight the body's natural tendency to reject foreign tissue is one objective. Rejection is considered the greatest single postoperative threat to transplants whether of the heart, kidneys or other organs.

More than 150 baboon-to-baboon kidney transplants have been done at Karl Bremer. They are a joint project between the Brady Institute of Urology in Johns Hopkins in Baltimore, Md., and Stellenbosch University of South Africa. Dr. G. P. Murphy of the Brady Institute has spent six months working on transplant experiments with South African researchers.

A Bremer Hospital spokesman said, "We have found that baboons have survived transplant operations and have lived for at least three times as long as dogs do without immunosuppression."

Barnard has suggested that baboons be used as living storage units for human organs. Organs would be transplanted as they became available into the animals and later implanted in human recipients as needed.

"There is a chance that we will be able to store heart-lung transplants for several days," he explained. "The circulation of the baboon will keep it alive and the storage time will also give the heart the opportunity of recovering from damage caused to it just before the death of the donor. This procedure will be a great advantage in cases where plant operations and have lived for at least three times as long as dogs do without immunosuppression."

Ask Them Yourself

FOR RAMSEY CLARK,

Attorney General of the U.S. Can a person who has been erroneously imprisoned by the Federal Government sue for compensation?—T. R., Green Bay, Wis.

● No. Under 2680 of Title 18 of the U.S. Code (Federal Tort Claims Act), the U.S. Government cannot be sued for false imprisonment or false arrest. The only way a person could be compensated is through an act of Congress.

FOR PETE ROZELLE

Have plans been made for an NFL-AFL All-Star game?—Exabiel Alba, Austin, Texas

● Existing contracts make it unlikely that there will be an NFL-AFL All-Star game before 1970. Until that time, there will be separate All-Star games in each league. When the first game is scheduled, it will probably be played one week after the Super Bowl.

FOR PHYLLIS DILLER

I understand that a book helped to give you your positive and joyous attitude on life. Could you please tell me its name and author?—Mrs. Ann Lehr, High Point, N.C.

● The name of the book which helped me so much is "The Magic of Believing" by Claude Bristol.

FOR MICKEY SPILLANE

Have you ever been a private detective?—Mrs. L. M. Moore, Bloomington, Ind.

● No. I have many friends, however, who are law-enforcement officers, and I have ridden in squad cars and gone on raids.

FOR BRAD CRANDALL, NBC Radio

How can you talk so spontaneously and interestingly on almost any subject? Are you from a literary family?—Ruth Abeling, Hopewell Junction, N.Y.

● I have had a long courtship with books and reading matter of all kinds, and I've retained a little from each. I come from a railroading family.

FOR DR. EDITH SPROUL,

author of "Science Book of the Human Body." Are good posture and good nutrition important in maintaining good looks?—Pierrette Komarek, Burlington, N.J.

● Definitely. In part, good posture determines a person's figure. Good nutrition contributes a great deal to the clarity of one's complexion.

FOR RAYMOND BURR

Does it bother you when people refer to you as the character you are playing?—Mrs. Sharon Hughes, Island, Ky.

● No. When people call me by my character name, I'm flattered. After all, it means my portrayal was convincing enough to persuade the viewer that I really am as smart as Perry Mason or as clever as Ironside. As to which of the two I like better, it's like asking a father which of his sons he prefers.

FOR JAMES E. WEBB,

director of NASA. Could a person who wears eyeglasses become an astronaut?—D. L., Iowa City, Iowa

● Yes. The visual requirements specify 20/20 vision for scientist-astronauts, but exceptions may be made for candidates who are otherwise exceptionally well-qualified. It is quite possible that in future selections no waiver will be required.

FOR MARLO THOMAS of "That Girl"

Do you have a special diet to keep you so slim?—Beaury Brandt, Hartsville, Wis.

● No. Doing "That Girl" keeps me so busy that it's not necessary for me to diet in order to keep trim. In fact, since my schedule is so demanding, I have to eat quite a bit to keep up my weight.

FOR JIM LANG of the "Dating Game"

How many of the couples introduced on "The Dating Game" have married?—Lillian Grant, Midland, Texas

● Six marriages have resulted from dates we've arranged.

Citizens lined up to have blood samples taken. In minutes, machines scanned samples to report on cholesterol levels. Excessively high levels are regarded as forerunners of heart disease. Since the problem can be treated with diet and new drugs if spotted in time, several other cities now are considering mass testings.

White House Dinner If you haven't been invited to break bread at the White House lately, don't feel bad. The guest list is prepared in mysterious ways. Some are asked because they represent one of the guest of honor's passions, be it baseball or ballet. Others are there because they do business with a visiting potentate's country. Others are chosen at random to provide "a cross-section" of America. And if you're a member of the press, you're expected to be friendly. Reading a critical story once, President Johnson complained, "Now why did he go and do that after we'd had him and his wife to dinner twice?"

Sanger, America's family-planning pioneer, visited the Pandit home. "That night, as I was putting my young daughter to bed, she asked worriedly, 'Mother, what if you'd met Mrs. Sanger sooner? Would you have shared limiting your family sooner?'" Madame Pandit said no.

Stormy Weather There ought to be international laws to control man's attempts to change his climate, says D. S. Halacy, Jr., in a new book, "The Weather Changers." For instance, Russia once planned to warm up Siberia by damming the Bering Straits. If they hadn't changed their minds at the last minute, it would have altered the weather all around the world—and not necessarily for the better.

All Dotted Up Ever wonder what happens to the old dolls you donate to Goodwill Industries? They come flooding in after Christmas, when little girls discard them in favor of new ones. Each doll is washed, cracks are mended, missing limbs replaced. Old-fashioned metal curlers are used to set new-fashioned hairdos. The dolls' clothes are washed, mended, and pressed. # THE GREAT UFO MYSTERY: Visitors

A famed space expert gives his explanation of the eerie lights that shadow

IT WAS supposed to have been a routine commercial flight over Peru. Flying at 7,000 feet, the plane had just passed through a minor electrical storm. Suddenly, without warning, a ball of dazzling light appeared off the starboard wing.

It moved to a point directly above the airliner and, maintaining a constant air speed, the mysterious light stayed there for a while.

Inside the plane, the lights grew dim, and the beginning of panic was evident. In the cockpit, the compass was going haywire and radio reception went dead. Transmission, however, remained unaffected.

Just as suddenly, the ball of light was gone. Was the unidentified flying object an uninvited visitor from another planet?

The report reached the desk of Edward U. Condon of the University of Colorado. Doctor Condon is under contract to the Air Force and is the official watchdog for such aerial phenomena.

He immediately began checking the persons aboard the plane who had seen the mysterious object.

Cutting bits of information from each, he quickly dismissed the obvious explanations. It had not been an exceptionally bright planet, such as Venus or Jupiter, nor a plastic weather balloon. It had not acted at all like a meteor or a re-entering satellite. It was obviously not a strangely shaped cloud formation.

Could it have been a simple reflection? Reflections, mistaken by many people to be UFOs, are sometimes caused by the meeting of two layers of air with widely differing temperatures. This was also checked and proved false. What Doctor Condon then had was a rarity—a "genuine UFO."

For nearly 15 years, various groups have expounded the theory that UFOs are actually spacecraft from other worlds. On the surface, this appears to be the simplest explanation. I believe, however, that it is by far the hardest explanation to swallow.

In the first place, alien spacecraft would most certainly explore rather than engage in a futile game of hide-and-seek. And, more importantly, there is the irrefutable fact that space is under constant surveillance. The United States maintains a large number of tracking stations, whose main function is the careful plotting of the movements of some 200 artificial satellites as well as so-called "space junk"—used rocket casings, for example. Needless to say, the Soviets keep their own tracking equipment in constant use, and other extensive tracking facilities are headquartered in West Germany.

These space watchers are quite thorough. This fact becomes evident when one considers that all but three of the bodies currently orbiting the earth have definitely established origins. Two of the three orbit around the poles, which gives rise to the speculation that they are the remnants of a Russian space shot that went astray and was unreported. All three, however, stay quietly in their orbits, like dead pieces of metal.

What then was this fiery ball of light that tracked the Peruvian airliner? I have always suspected that most UFO sightings could be explained by natural phenomena, and I personally believe that what the people on that plane saw was an aerial phenomenon as strange and enigmatic as UFOs themselves.

Its name is "ball lightning," and, as the name suggests, it is spherical in shape. Appearing usually after a thunderstorm, its size ranges from 10 to 30 inches in diameter and can last for up to one minute. Since it is electrical in nature and is seen for such a short period of time, little is known about it save one thing: its behavior is decidedly weird.

Lightning balls can hover motionless or move slowly along some form of conductor, such as a telephone line or a metal fence. When moving in mid-air, they seem to be following a draft.

One of the first reported appearances of ball lightning came from Königsberg in East Prussia some 40 years ago. The owner of a restaurant gives the following account:

"Early in the afternoon, we had a heavy thunder shower, and my restaurant was hit by lightning. I investigated but found no damage. Then, from out of nowhere, a glowing, reddish ball appeared. It was over a foot in diameter. Both doors were open, and the thing seemed to move with the air currents. It was rotating all the time and passed a good number of people. Everyone watched as it climbed along the wiring of the electric bell, and, as

What appeared to be "ball lightning" (above) was sighted over New Mexico in 1958. The unidentified sphere of light (right) could be a very bright planet, or an uninvited visitor.

from Outer Space or What?

airplanes and terrify "flying-saucer" watchers — By WILLY LEV Author of "Watchers of the Skies" and "Rocket, Wizard and Man in Space"

... flight in a draft, travels along another electric wire to the back of the room. Then it just disappeared altogether."

In 1927, from Bad Godesberg, Germany, we hear of "... a ball of light that was perched on the cast-iron post of a wire fence." Or, from Kallspell, Mont., about people who saw "... brilliant balls of light drop to the ground and disappear."

None of these appearances of ball lightning caused a UFO report; people just didn't worry about UFOs then.

During the last year of World War II, however, American fighter pilots began talking about something they called "Foo Fighters." They were balls of fiery light which appeared a few yards beyond the wing tips of their aircraft. Originally believed to be a revolutionary Axis weapon, stories about them were sharply censored.

After the war, suspicion grew that the Foo Fighters were lightning balls, somehow produced by the presence of aircraft in an electrically charged atmosphere. The theory was enhanced by the ground-based report of a similar sighting by a European landowner.

He was driving home in an open horse carriage which had iron-rimmed wheels secured to iron axles. The road led between two wire fences. He reported: "Two brilliant balls of light appeared on both wire fences and moved along at the same speed as the wagon. Sparks jumped from the balls to the wheels and axles. The horses panicked, but the faster the carriage moved, the faster the balls of light moved until they came to the end of the fences. The spheres simply collapsed, without an explosion."

The resemblance of this report to the Foo Fighters is obvious. But to say definitely that Foo Fighters were ball lightning poses another interesting question. Can ball lightning form at high altitudes? All previous observations had taken place on the ground, but this does not rule out the possibility of its appearance in the atmosphere.

The answer to this question was furnished rather dramatically in April, 1952. A British science journal reported that a lightning ball appeared in the cabin of a British commercial airliner flying at 9,200 feet. It most likely had entered the craft through an air-intake vent. We know from other reports that ball lightning can pass through spaces which seem too small because its form is not rigid.

The one that appeared in the plane's cabin slowly drifted along the aisle, probably scaring the passengers silly. It moved to the rear of the plane and simply vanished from sight.

Like most lightning balls, it did no harm. People have actually been touched by them without experiencing any sensation. In one case, a particularly large sphere settled in a basket filled with excelsior without causing a fire.

Another lightning ball startled two pilots of the Royal Canadian Air Force. They were flying a C-119 transport from Goose Bay to St. Hubert, early in 1960. A little after dark, they flew through a heavy rainstorm, but they saw no lightning. Suddenly St. Elmo's fire formed on their windshield.

"It happened only seconds before a blazing ball of white light appeared in the cockpit," one of the pilots said, "and we heard a loud explosion. The captain and the first officer were momentarily blinded." Passengers later reported that they had heard the blast in the rear compartment of the plane. Again, no reported damage.

In 1961 a Canadian fighter pilot wrote me a personal letter about his experience with ball lightning. He and a fellow officer were flying over British Columbia. Because of bad weather, they had ascended to 48,000 feet, but the clouds, so-called cumulus towers, reached almost as high. In one black thundercloud they saw a luminous object. The pilot wrote that the object was as large as his aircraft and had well-defined edges. A photograph was taken, but the object was very indistinct. The fuzziness was probably due to ultraviolet radiation from the sphere.

So what we have here is a well-documented, natural phenomenon. It is mysterious mainly because of its inherent nature, which makes a more thorough investigation nearly impossible.

Luminous, spherical, and capable of fantastic aerodynamic maneuvers, it fulfills most of the attributes of a full-fledged UFO. And, most important, it has been definitely established that ball lightning can form at high altitudes.

It is my firm contention that many of today's UFOs are no more than appearances of ball lightning — and that also includes the report from Peru. ♦

A New Mexico college student snapped this picture, but when he looked down to change film plates, the unidentified object had vanished.

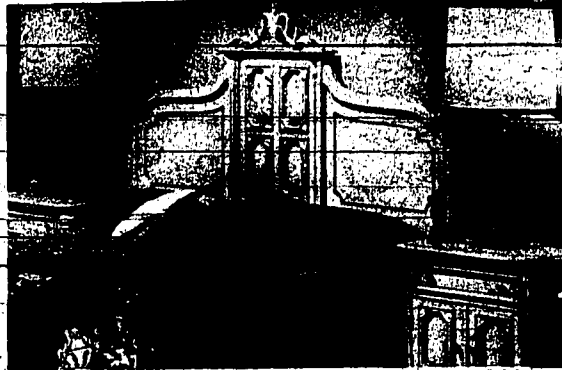

Hundreds of persons witnessed UFOs flying in formation over Lubbock, Tex., early in 1961. None of the obvious explanations adequately cover this famous sighting, and the origin of the series "Lubbock Lights" remains unknown.

This object appeared over the home of a Zanesville, Ohio, barber in Nov., 1966.

1968 FURNITURE— A RETURN TO ELEGANCE

MODERN IS DEAD, according to manufacturers held in High Point, N. C.

In its place for 1968: the neutral, toned-down look in upholstered pieces. Soft gray, pale yellow, and putty browns set the mood. Prints, except for chintzes or stripes, are almost nonexistent.

Attention is being directed more to sleek design, practicality, and "miracle" finishes for both fabric and wood. There's also a return to elegance with emphasis on crushed velvets that wear easier, suedes, and fabric with lots of textured tone-on-tone subtleties.

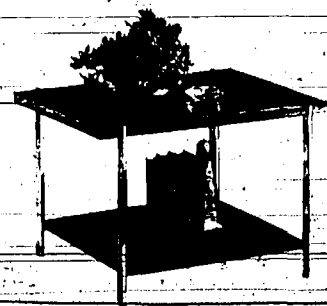

Man-made materials never have been so well adapted, with the stepped-up use of attractive simulated wood components as carvings on furniture. Most exciting of all, manufacturers suggest mixing furniture: an antique-white headboard, for example, to accent a bedroom, while the remainder-of-the-pieces remain in a compatible wood tone.

In furniture styling there is no abating of Traditional or Mediterranean. Early American continues to soar in popularity. Modern—because it is currently being done so well—will find new converts.

What can the consumer hope to find in the near future? More experimentation in mixing furniture for a less-"decorated" look, and the wide use of permanent, protective finishes. This will virtually eliminate plastic covers and cloths from the home-furnishings vocabulary.

Charter Flights: How They Can Save You Travel Dollars

If you're looking for the lowest in-air fares, they may be the answer

By WILBUR CROSS

MR. AND Mrs. Reed Myers of Rochester, N.Y., had planned the perfect summer vacation—four exciting weeks in Rome.

But of all, they had been able to sign up on a charter flight through a club. The extremely low air fare made the whole trip cheaper than their usual summer trips.

Then the unexpected happened. Two days before the departure date, the entire charter flight was cancelled. The club had unintentionally violated one of the strict regulations governing this kind of group travel, and the Myers' dream vacation was sadly cancelled.

Such is not always the case.

Most charter flights are valid and well-planned, providing modern jet travel at rock-bottom cost. A flight like the one to Rome can save each passenger as much as $200 from the "regular" fare and even about $65 on the 14-to-21-day "economy" fare, which has a time limitation.

The saving can be immense for a family of four, when you consider the multiple reductions.

Why? The answer is simple.

On jets, the passenger break-even point is almost 50 percent. So group flights which guarantee capacity booking are attractive to airlines—even at much lower fares. The fares of regular flights are based on the assumption that a certain number of seats will fly empty.

Even so, U.S. airlines could fly you to London for at least $20 less than now and to Athens for $40 or $50 less. The reason for the higher fares is that the International Air Transport Association, to which most overseas carriers belong and which fixes the rates, favors subsidized foreign government airlines. Its concern is to prevent them from taking a greater loss than they do.

If you have no idea what the difference is between a "charter" and a "group" flight or an "all-inclusive tour," don't be apologetic. Few people are experts when it comes to shopping for air-travel rates and plans. There are bargains, however, for the knowledgeable travel shopper, and here are some explanations about charter flying which may help you get the most from it:

1) Inclusive Tours: These are the tours advertised by travel agents as "package" plans, including air fares, stopovers at interesting cities, hotel accommodations, special meal rates, and sight-seeing trips. In most cases the travel agent arranges to lease the plane and get group prices for hotels, dinners, and the other elements of the total package. All you have to do is select the tour that fits your budget and geographical tastes.

2) Single-Entity Charters: These are charter plans for which a corporation or other business organization pays the cost (a "single" payment) and makes arrangements for employees, usually as part of a salesman's incentive program. There is also a "Mixed-Entity" plan for which the eligible employees pay part of the cost or pay for any members of their families who go along.

3) Affinity Charters: These flights are open only to existing, qualified organizations, such as fraternal, social, or professional clubs. Regulations are very strict and, if not complied with properly, can result in last-minute cancellation of the entire flight. To qualify, an organization must have its own charter or by-laws, existing officers, and bona fide membership, recognized responsibilities and privileges, and a history of regular meetings for purposes other than making group travel plans. Another stipulation is that to qualify for participation in a charter flight, a person must be a member of the organization for at least six months.

If you belong to a recognized social club, professional association, fraternal society, lodge, political or religious group, union, or other organization of a similar nature and are interested in forming a charter flight, there are certain steps you can take.

First, sound out other members to see how much interest there is in the idea—you should have 50 to 100 potential travelers. Second, appoint a member to initiate the arrangements. At this point, professional help is recommended. "About 90 percent of our flights are booked through travel agents," says Thomas Ahern of World Airways, largest of the charter airlines. If you do not know a travel agent, you can go to a charter carrier or to a commercial airline and ask for the name of a travel agency that specializes in charter flights. Agency charges are paid by the airline, not the club.

The "do-it-yourself" approach is definitely discouraged. There are too many regulations and pitfalls. You can promote the charter flight, for example, to members through personal letters, circulars, or telephone calls addressed to members only or notices in your organization's newsletter or magazine. You may not announce the flight in advertisements or by means of other public communication, paid or not.

Later, if a member pays his fare but is unable to go, you cannot resell that space to any person other than an eligible member. There are also restrictions on payments for services in organizing flights and on making profit from it for the chartering organization.

The airlines themselves proceed with caution in signing up charter flights because an airline can be fined $25,000 if—even inadvertently—the government finds out that it has arranged a charter flight that does not comply with the strict regulations.

Once eligibility is established, the travel agent and the airline will help you determine which members and relatives are eligible as well as realistic schedules and costs.

Knowing about charter flights and group plans also can be helpful if you, as an individual, have a chance to sign up for some form of budget travel. There are, however, a number of con men in this field, so if you sign up on a group-charter flight, check carefully. Flights can be cancelled at the last minute, for example, if a CAB inspector finds out that ineligible passengers signed up.

All in all, though, if you know what you are signing up for, and if you are certain about the policy on refunds and cancellations, charter flights will be the best answer to more vacation fun for less money. ♦

What's What About Charter Travel

Q. Do I really save a great deal on the fare?

A. Yes, even on the domestic charter flights.

Q. Do charter flights have to go and return within a certain time period?

A. No. Unlike the special economy flights, charters can go abroad for as long as the group wishes.

Q. Can I go one way on charter flight and return on some other flight, or even by ship?

A. Yes. Some groups do this when there are members who want to stay abroad longer.

Q. Are charter flights as safe as regularly scheduled flights?

A. Yes. Supplemental airlines have modern jets and come under strict regulations, just as do other airlines. KLM, TWA, and other carriers that engage in charter business use the same equipment as for scheduled flights.

Q. Do charter flights have the same services and conveniences as scheduled flights?

A. Yes. They provide experienced hostesses and, in most cases, the same kind of food, drinks, and other customary services.

Q. Are the families of group members also eligible to go?

A. Yes. "Family" includes the member's spouse, dependent children, and parents who are actually living in the member's household.

Q. If I join an organization which I know takes regular charter flights each year, do I automatically become eligible for these trips?

A. Only after you have been a member in good standing for six months, figured from the date of joining to the date of the flight's departure.

NOW! Gertrude Enelow says

THROW AWAY YOUR PILLOW

and wake up the next morning looking and feeling up to ten years younger!

This is the first real advance in deep, scientific, beautifying sleep in over 2,000 years. One of America's leading health pioneers—whose wonder-working methods are recommended by dozens of doctors and hundreds of newspapers and magazines—now brings you AN ENTIRELY NEW SLEEP DEVICE, as different from an ordinary pillow as the jet airplane is from the horse and buggy.

This revolutionary new SLEEP INDUCER is designed to give you the following benefits, from the very first night you place it on your mattress:

- 1) Fall asleep in minutes—no matter how much tension or frustration was crowded into your day.
- 2) Sleep more deeply and peacefully than you have known since you were a child. With no tossing and turning. No terrible nightmares. No waking up and staring at the ceiling at 4 A.M.
- 3) Turn every minute of that sleep into a beauty treatment for your face and neck. So—at the very same time that your friends are pressing wrinkles into their faces by sleeping the wrong way—you will wake up the next morning with your skin smoother, your jaw line firmer, the appearance of your face far fresher and younger than you have known in years!

4) Completely relaxes the "energy battery" of your body, so that six hours of sleep, in this new completely-relaxed way, will be equal to ten hours of sleep the old way. So that you will bounce out of bed in the morning—have no need for a coffee break before lunch—soar effortlessly through the day's activities...and still have plenty of energy left over to dance till dawn if you wish to.

And finally, and perhaps most important of all—
5) Soothe away those aches and pains you build up during the day. So that those throbbing muscles in your neck and shoulders become as relaxed as rubber again. Tired legs grow strong during the night. The aches of your back—the worst pain source of all—are drained of stress, and soothed out of existence. So that you never wake up the next morning with a sore spine, or "pins and needles" in your arms or legs, or a stiff neck and shoulders. And years of "accumulated tiredness" seem to have evaporated from your body overnight.

These Are The Proven Benefits This Device Will Give You—Starting With The Very First Night.

Now Here's The Startling Background—So You Can Understand Why It Must Work For You!

Once again, this revolutionary new SLEEP INDUCER—which you may give to yourself, in your own home, for a full thirty days at our risk—was created by Gertrude Enelow, one of America's leading health pioneers.

Perhaps you have read the thrilling articles describing Mrs. Enelow's wonder-working methods in the Chicago AMERICAN...St. Louis CITY JOURNAL...Louisville COURIER...and dozens of other newspapers and magazines—not only in this country, but also in England, Sweden, Germany and Norway.

Perhaps you are one of the many men and women who have been sent to Mrs. Enelow by doctors all over the country to help alleviate torturous backaches...to gain desperately-needed sleep without tranquilizers or drugs...to bring back the natural energy, drive and vigor you may have thought was gone forever.

Or perhaps you are one of the 107,000 people who have already purchased Mrs. Enelow's phenomenal best-seller, BODY DYNAMICS—and learned that the secret to better sleep—discovered by MARY HALE—IS SLEEP that automatically turns off your mind, and lets your body float effortlessly into a deep slumber, that automatically arranges the parts of your body in bed—so that every inch of that body is completely relaxed, freed from worry, disturbing thought, any tension at all from the day that has just passed.

This new method of effortless, automatic sleep has been tested, and proven, on thousands upon thousands of men and women. And now it has been refined and perfected one step further! Now it has been BUILT INTO a revolutionary new sleep device, that simply replaces your present pillow...and then automatically positions your body so comfortably on your bed—without a single pressure on any nerve center...without a single joint resting on another...with the small of your back unburdened at last...with your neck and head so perfectly aligned, and even your ankles and wrists so completely free that sleep simply MUST come!

Again...There Is Nothing To Learn, Nothing To Practice.

It's As Easy As Lying Down, And Closing Your Eyes.

What do YOU have to do, to use this revolutionary new SLEEP INDUCER? Simply this:

First, take your present pillow and put it in the closet. In a few days you will throw it away for good. But first, you will want to prove this SLEEP INDUCER to yourself.

Now, by the SLEEP INDUCER on your bed, NOTICE, OF COURSE, THAT IT IS HALF the size of your old pillow. That it is made of foam-rubber feathers, and therefore ultimately comfortable. And, above all, that it has a tab at the bottom, that tells you precisely where your neck and head go.

This, of course, is the key. It is so simple that you will wonder why it has not been thought of before. It is so incredibly effective that you are about to have the most divine night of sleep you have experienced since you were a child.

Spread a few seconds glancing at the Position Sketch that accompanies the SLEEP INDUCER. Then lie down on the INDUCER with the tab underneath your neck, as the sketch shows you. NOTICE how this simple positioning of your neck, head and shoulder automatically releases the other parts of your body—causes your entire body to sink so deeply into that mattress that it is converted, in seconds, into a completely relaxed, Quartz-Limp "human rubber-duck."

Now, for the first few minutes, simply luxuriate in the marvelous floating freedom this position gives you. If almost at once your body had absolutely no real weight at all. Notice again that your neck muscles "float" and "relax" and "let" your head sink. That your body is automatically uplifted. That every inch of your face is being automatically smoothed, and glowing, and toned. That—as you seem to have suspended gravity and anxiety at the same exact moment...as you irresistibly begin to drift off into a deep, soft, dreamless sleep—your entire face, neck and chin are about to be given a full eight-hour beauty treatment.

And then, when you wake up the next morning more refreshed than you have known for years—go directly to your mirror. You may gaze in joy at the new youth you will see in that mirror, that very same morning!

Try It At Our Risk.

But you must actually try this revolutionary new SLEEP INDUCER to believe it. Its cost is only $14.98 complete, with "custom-made pillow-also." This is less than you would pay for a first-quality mattress. It is very low—less than you pay for spending today on tranquilizers or other types of sleeping pills. And we provide you the results; will refund you from the very first night—or every cent of your money back.

You have absolutely nothing to lose, and everything to gain. You are perfectly aware that sleep—deep, relaxed, completely-natural sleep—is the greatest source of energy your body and mind will ever have. You know that right now, having lost this vital gift of sleep, you are draining energy and youth out of your body the same way that a leak drains air out of a tire.

This is your chance to stop that energy-leak, stop that youth-drain, stop those nights of sleepless torture. Prove It yourself, outright at our risk—TODAY.

NANCY SINATRA:

A "Sex" Image Changed Her from Failure to Success

By PEER J. OPPENHEIMER

"OF COURSE I've changed," says Nancy Sinatra. "My hair is blonder, my skirts shorter, my boots higher.

"All I need is a whip and a haircut to have all the masculine qualities of today's female entertainer. But the doing wasn't mine. The image was dictated by my fans. I just went along with it. I felt it was the only way to become successful."

And successful she is. Today Frank Sinatra's 27-year-old daughter—who four years ago snapped at a producer, "Would you think I was right for the role if my name wasn't Sinatra?"—is America's most successful young female singer. And the Sinatra name has had very little, if anything, to do with it.

It came as a result of a record, "These Boots Are Made for Walking," which sold four million copies. "Until then," she says, "I was perhaps the world's best-known singing failure."

She had cut her first record in 1961 and, in the next four years, did 15 unimpressive singles in a little-girl voice. She also made a few unsuccessful pictures.

Then in 1965 she turned her career over to song writer Lee Hazlewood, who advised a complete change of style.

The "new" Nancy is a businesswoman, a corporation, and a girl whose schedule spans almost 18 hours a day.

For two years she couldn't take a day off. But last November she planned to go to Honolulu for a few days. "Then things happened with Dad and Mia (the on-and-off separation of Frank Sinatra and Mia Farrow), and he was all by himself in Palm Springs, so I felt I should go to him. It was lovely, but it was not what I had really wanted to do. If I could only have talked him into flying to Honolulu with me—but he just didn't want to go any place at all."

Her Boots Productions—named after her best-selling record—supports agents, an attorney, a manager, two secretaries, and even a wardrobe lady.

She has taken offices in a fancy new building on Sunset Strip where she starts work as early as 8 a.m. "Things have been snowballing these past two years," she says. "It took time to get moving. Now I'm embarrassed that I can't devote enough time to my friends."

Nancy herself insists upon being involved in every detail of her career. Last December, for instance, when her publicist arranged two parties for 100 people each, Nancy took care of the seating arrangements. It's not because she feels she can do it better than someone else—she simply wants to do it.

Nancy is not extravagant. "I have a housekeeper who comes in once a week. I do my own cleaning, cooking, and wash my own dishes. I drive a 1967 car, and I don't spend much on clothes."

She is satisfied with her professional image, but she doesn't like it. "It isn't the real me," she says. "I think I am more feminine than I look on the screen." The image was for a generation that has become, in her words, "asexual." So she continues with the hard sounds, high boots, and T-shirts.

In the long run, success isn't what Nancy wants. "I don't want to be a businesswoman. I want to get married again (her first marriage to singer Tommy Sands ended in divorce), raise a family, and devote my time to my husband. For me, marriage and a career can't mix."

In spite of her success, Nancy is still touchy about being Frank Sinatra's daughter. Asked whether she thought it had anything to do with her being cast opposite Elvis Presley in MGM's "Speedway," she snapped, "No. MGM wouldn't be so frivolous as to put me in a big picture with a top star simply because I am related to someone famous. I was signed for 'Speedway' because I'm now an entertainer on my own."

And so she is. Too bad the swinging entertainer is popular with fans but not with Nancy Sinatra—who would prefer to be just her nice "feminine" self. ♦

A very "feminine" Nancy—1963 version.
