The Magic Valley Newspaper Dedicated to Serving and Promoting the Growth of Nine Irrigated Idaho Counties

DISTINGUISHED SERVICE AWARDS presented at the annual Jaycee-sponsored DSA banquet Friday night at the Elks Hall were given to four area people who have contributed to civic betterment and have shown outstanding strides in civic and business ventures. Those receiving the awards

4 Given Service Awards At Dinner

Idaho's senior senator, Frank Church, told more than 125 area people attending the annual Jaycee's Distinguished Service Awards banquet Friday night that today's young people are "seeking for solace with weed or pill."

"We can dissociate from them, but we cannot dismiss them," he continued.

Sen. Church, assuming his familiar hand-in-spocket stance, said that while a large majority of today's youth are not demonstrating, rioting or withdrawing from society, they are "highly disturbed about their country."

"I believe they are mistaken on the way they have chosen to conduct themselves," the senator asserted, "but still we are confronted with the ugly fact that they feel a deep estrangement from their country."

Following his speech the four awards were presented, including the senior award which went to College of Southern Idaho president Dr. James L. Taylor. Last year's winner, Bill Grams, in making the presentation, noted that Dr. Taylor is a man who has done "much more than that for which he is paid."

Since coming to Twin Falls two years ago Dr. Taylor has served on countless civic boards and has been involved in betterment projects throughout Magic Valley.

John Rosholt, who has also been in Twin Falls for only about two years, was recipient of the junior award, presented to those under 35. J. Robert Alexander, who won the award last year, cited some of Mr. Rosholt's achievements, including his work on the United Fund board and his chairmanship of the local fund raising committee for the University of Idaho's performing arts center. Mr. Rosholt is a partner in the law firm of Parry, Robertson and Daly.

Bill Mathers, who farms his own and some leased and rented land near Kimberly, was given the outstanding young farmer award by Ron Ballard, last year's winner. Mr. Mathers runs cattle in addition to his farming enterprise.

Mrs. Shirley Nelbass, a mathematics instructor at Twin Falls High School, received the outstanding young educator award from Dr. Ernest Ragnlan, school superintendent. Last year's winner, Larry Christoferson, is no longer teaching in Twin Falls.

Mrs. Nelbass is presently teaching five Algebra II classes and has lived in Twin Falls for

Jerome Youth Is Convicted By Jury Of Second Degree Murder

JEROME — Eighteen-year-old Michael Dillon, after waiting 11 hours, was convicted of second degree murder when a jury of four women and eight men returned its verdict early Saturday.

The defendant, composed during the two weeks of the historic trial here, showed some signs of concern but made no comment when the verdict was delivered.

The jury took the case at 4:10 p.m. Friday after hearing prosecution and defense summations during the morning and afternoon.

Just before the jury returned to the courtroom at 3 a.m. to deliver its verdict, one member of the panel fainted and a physician had to be summoned to the Jerome County courthouse. The juror was cared for and was able to return with other members of the panel to deliver the guilty verdict.

Dillon was convicted of murdering Mrs. Alta Simerly, 66, in her Jerome home last March 14. The defense had contended all the way through the trial that another man, not Dillon, murdered Mrs. Simerly.

In the charge to the jury before it began its deliberations, Judge Theron Ward said verdicts of guilty of first or second degree murder or manslaughter could be returned. The jury could also have acquitted the defendant.

The trial started Jan. 15 and in the two weeks it was on more than 100 pieces of evidence were submitted. A total of 52 witnesses appeared for both sides in the case.

Sentencing was continued to 10 a.m. Feb. 6 and Dillon is being held in the Jerome County courthouse pending sentencing.

The death penalty cannot be ordered in a second degree murder conviction.

There have been indications the defense will appeal the decision, although this has not been confirmed yet.

The prosecution alleged that Dillon went to the home of Mrs. Simerly on the evening of March 14 and following a discussion Dillon killed her, hitting her with several pieces of wood, a metal weight and a lug wrench. Dillon was then accused of taking the body to the sand pits south of Jerome and hiding it in a dump of Christmas trees.

He was accused of using Mrs. Simerly's car to remove the body from the house. The car was later abandoned in Twin Falls.

Shoshone Couple To Take Free Hawaiian Vacation

Jack Dunn, Shoshone, an employe of the district office of the Bureau of Land Management, was declared winner of two free trips to Hawaii on the Times-News and Magic Carpet Travels tour which leaves Twin Falls the morning of Feb. 7.

The winning ticket had been deposited by Mr. Dunn at Roper's store in Twin Falls. John Roper, owner, will also receive two free tickets to join the tour.

The winning ticket was pulled from a large drum by Janna Thacker daughter of Mrs. Betty Thacker, Little Miss Thacker, who has not yet learned to read, reached inside the drum and took out Mr. Dunn's coupon. The drawing took place outside in an area surrounded by snow which fell in Twin Falls early Saturday morning. Witnesses to the drawing were Ray Rostrom, manager of the Twin Falls Chamber of Commerce, and Sallie Turner, owner of Sallie's Gift Shop in the Lynwood Shopping Center. Thousands of coupons were made available at many participating merchants.

"I don't know how many coupons we put in but it was a lot," he said over the telephone. "I See HAWAII, Pg. 8, Col. 2

Defenbach Sees Need For Revised Accounting Procedure

By EARLE L. JESTER
BOISE (AP)—Confusion over the state's financial condition in advance of the special session of the legislature is, in the opinion of Idaho Budget Director James A. Defenbach, proof of the need for revised accounting procedure.

The present system, he says, fails to maintain a continuing check on expenditures and fails to provide the information needed for accurate estimates of future trends.

Programs already under way in the new department of administrative services will greatly improve the situation, Defenbach thinks, but some legislative action may be necessary to make them fully effective.

The difficulty develops primarily, Defenbach says, because of the diverse bookkeeping systems which are in use. The state auditor is required, by law, to keep his books on a cash basis which does not provide a satisfactory basis for predicting the financial position at some time in the future.

"State departments usually are using a semi-accrual system of accounting which gives them a more accurate picture of their financial position in relation to the total appropriation available for the full year," he said.

"The problem," Defenbach says, "is to provide methods whereby we can accurately project revenue and more accurately reflect total expenditures at any given time."

Gov. Don W. Stansel, at his news conference during the week, complained at projections being made. He blamed news media for some of the confusion.

But, in response to newsmen's questions, he acknowledged the figures used were provided by the State Tax Commission, an agency under his direction.

The governor argued the trend during the past six months might not be indicative of the financial trend for the full year, which ends June 30, 1968.

"The legislature makes appropriations for the state's operations by depending on projec-

North Korea Declares Itself Ready For Combat

By K.C. HWANG
SEOUL, (AP)—North Korea declared itself ready for combat Saturday and said it would deem null and void any U.N. Security Council resolution "connected to cover up U.S. imperialism aggression" in the case of the USS Pueblo.

A broadcast statement issued by the North Korean government in Pyongyang contended the U.S. complaint to the Security Council over the seizure of the Pueblo and her 83 crewmen was illegal and that the council has no jurisdiction.

"The North Korean government," it said, "resolutely opposes the discussion of the illegal complaint of U.S. imperialism at the United Nations Security Council, will not recognize any resolution or agreement to cover up U.S. imperialism aggression and will declare it null and void."

"If the United Nations wants to act in conformity with its charter and mission, it must condemn the acts of aggression perpetrated by the U.S. imperialists against the Democratic People's Republic of Korea and take measures to check their maneuvers for provoking a new war," the statement said.

It was carried in a broadcast dispatch of the official Korean Central News Agency.

The North Koreans claimed they were "entirely right" in capturing the vessel last week and that they were correct in taking "decisive measures of self-defense against the unpardonable aggressive acts of the U.S. imperialists."

In Seoul, U.S. and South Korean military spokesmen reported small-scale incidents along the armistice line dividing North and South Korea. U.S. troops beat back two small bands of infiltrators 35 miles north of Seoul while South Korean troops traded gunfire with the Communists. Neither spokesman reported any casualties to friendly forces.

South Korean President Chung Ilse Park was reported by the Seoul press as being gravely concerned about increased Communist provocations along the demilitarized zone and is said to have asked the United States for more military aid. Park has been seeking more U.S. aid for some time to fill a gap created by the dispatch of 48,000 South Korean troops to South Vietnam. There was no confirmation of the news reports.

The North Korean statement gave no hint as to what the Communists might do about the Pueblo and her men.

But if Pyongyang follows the pattern of past seizures of foreign vessels, the likelihood is that the men would be held for a month before any decision is made on whether to release them.

Late Friday afternoon it was discovered that no arrangements had been made to assure that Dr. Taylor would be at the banquet to receive his surprise award.

So, Dr. Taylor was induced to break previous commitments and prepare a speech to deliver in the event Sen. Church called back to Washington by the Korean crisis.

In his speech Sen. Church cited the seizure of the USS Pueblo as "more than piracy, it is an attack and kidnapping and a provocation of the kind that requires satisfaction."

Exploring the nation's problems, both at home and abroad, Sen. Church advocated less involvement in international affairs.

There was speculation in Seoul that, judging from past North Korean actions, it was likely the Pyongyang government will release the 83 Pueblo crewmen but keep the ship. It was considered possible, however, that the Communists would demand an official U.S. apology before turning the men back.

There were these other developments:

Gooding Man Gives Kidney To Brother

DENVER (AP)—Larry G. Butler, 31, became the 17th person to receive a transplant of kidney at the University of Colorado Medical Center Friday.

Butler, a seventh grade teacher in Spokane, Wash., and his donor-brother, Dale, 41, Gooding, Idaho, rancher, were reported in satisfactory condition following the surgery.

The new kidney began functioning immediately, spokesmen at Colorado General Hospital said.

Butler has been kept alive by an artificial kidney, transplanted by his own kidneys failed in 1966.

The Butler men are the sons of Mr. and Mrs. K. T. Butler, Gooding. Larry was reared in Gooding, attended school here and farm with his three brothers until developing kidney trouble several years ago. He then went back to college in 1962 and has taught school the past two years. The other brothers are Milton and K. Dwan Butler.

Hall Of Fame Banquet Slated To Be Held Here On Feb. 19

Five area men have been named honorees of the Southern Idaho agricultural livestock industry Hall of Fame and will be installed at the ninth annual banquet of the organization at the Holiday Inn in Twin Falls the evening of Monday, Feb. 19.

The five who will be honored, joining the 48 previously elected to Hall of Fame membership, are the late Warren Dalgin, former county agent for Twin Falls County; John W. Noh, Kimberly and Twin Falls sheepman and farmer; Otto Florence Jr., general manager of the Independent Meat Co.; Frank Jougla, Rupert sheepman, and Dr. D. A. Jackson, Twin Falls veterinarian.

The selection was announced by Earl R. Stansell, Hall of Fame president, after the selection was made by members of the board of directors. The five were named from more than a score of men considered.

Mr. Stansell said that about 300 are expected to attend the banquet at which the men will be honored. Ray Rostrom, manager of the Twin Falls Chamber of Commerce, will be master of ceremonies. The complete program will be announced later.

The Livestock Hall of Fame activities are sponsored each year by local individuals and companies. In addition to Mr. Stansell, there are 16 members of the board. They are Edward Shafl, Fidelity National Bank, secretary-treasurer; Gene Hull, Twin Falls Bank and Trust Co., vice president; Cecil Brim, See FAME, Pg. 2, Col. 1

Firemen Plan Protest On Budget At Council Meeting

Twin Falls firemen said Saturday they plan to make a formal protest against the 1968 city budget at the city council meeting Monday night in an effort to get a pay raise.

The announcement was made by Walter Lambert, vice president of the International Association of Firefighters. He is a representative for local firemen and made the announcement at a meeting with Twin Falls firefighters.

Mr. Lambert said it was his understanding that a tentative budget would be approved Monday night, followed by a public hearing in February and final approval in late February or early March.

"If a pay raise for all city employes is not approved, we may seek signatures from citizens of Twin Falls to get a referendum this fall," he said.

Mr. Lambert said it was his understanding that all city employes would get a blanket $15 a month raise in the upcoming budget. "This is just a token raise and does not even come close to meeting a minimum budget for city employes or firemen," he said.

The long-range plan, Mr. Lambert said, is to work toward an overall increase for city employes that will bring local wages "in line with wages paid in other cities in the state."

Twin Falls firemen start at $300 a month, Mr. Lambert said. "Considering their work hours, this is about $1.38 an hour," he said.

Boise firemen start at $457 a month, Pocatello at $480 a month and Idaho Falls firemen start at $508 a month, he said.

Mr. Lambert said past negotiations in Twin Falls for pay increases for firemen and other city employes "have failed."

He said a study will begin to determine the past history of wage negotiations in Twin Falls. "We will use this history for a presentation before the Idaho Legislature in 1969," he said. See FIREMEN, Pg. 2, Col. 2

Tax Official Applauds Action On Special Meet

Members of the Idaho Tax Equality Association, through Don Fredericksen, Gooding president, Saturday expressed "thanks" to Gov. Don Samuelson that he did not include any consideration of the inventory tax phase-out in his call for the special session that gets under way Monday.

Mr. Fredericksen said that "We (the members) are encouraged by your action. There are numerous examples where promising new business is developing in our state, and these feed yards, warehouses, manufacturing companies, and other developments have been favorably influenced by the passage of the phase-out bill. It would be a serious mistake to tamper with the phase-out program at this time."

Mr. Fredericksen said that the organization was also "confused" with conflicting reports that have been issued concerning the financial position of the state. He urged that cooperation be established with the Legislature to issue an official and documented summary of the specific tax collections by funds.

At the same time Mr. Fredericksen said that a major tax problem exists, in the abuses which prevail statewide, where by numerous taxing units have collected surplus monies, many over and above their published budgets.

"This has resulted from the loss of the roll back authority formerly granted to our county commissioners," he said. "We petition you that the re-enactment of the roll back authority to the county commissioners be undertaken." Among the abuses listed by Mr. Fredericksen was one concerning Twin Falls county. He claimed that, according to all information, they collected much more than their actual budgets.

Recovery Of Bombs May Take Months

THULE AIR FORCE BASE, Greenland (AP) — Maj. Gen. Richard O. Hunziker said today it may be months before the Air Force recovers the four hydrogen bombs lost in North Star Bay near here last Sunday.

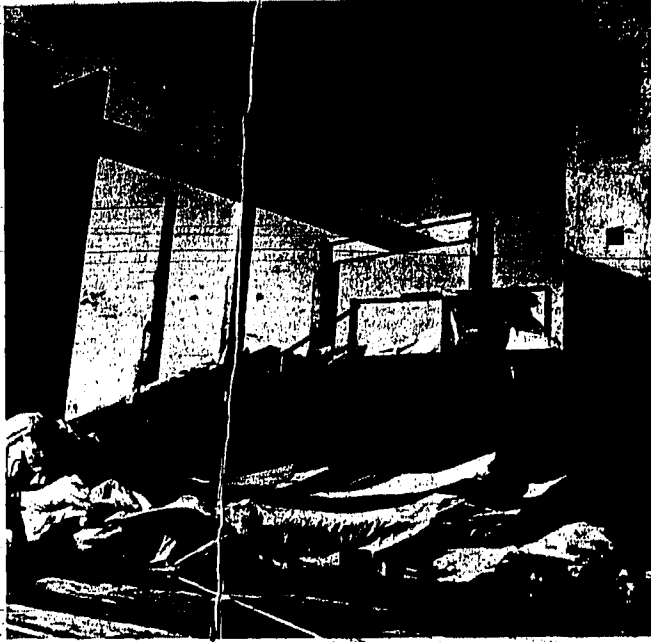

Hunziker heads the Air Force recovery team sent here after a Strategic Air Command B52 bomber carrying the bombs crashed and burst into flames on an emergency landing. Although the Pentagon has said the bombs were unarmed and thus in no danger of detonating, radioactive bomb fragments have been discovered on the first-accident strip of ice where the crash occurred.

Hunziker said he has no idea how long the recovery task will take, adding that it may well be a matter of several months. His primary mission, he said, is "to get this stuff back and to reach a point where we and the Danish government are satisfied." So far, he continued, "we haven't even determined the magnitude of the problem."

The Danish caretaker government in Denmark said Friday it is accepting the Pentagon explanation of the crash on Danish territory and plans no protests to Washington.

Officials have found fragments of the bombs and the parachutes that would be used during attack to lower the bombs slowly and permit the bomber to escape.

'Model Son' Arrested For Poisoning

NEW YORK (AP) — Police say Vincent McNamara, 37, appeared the model son after he had his mother admitted to the hospital for treatment of ulcers. He visited regularly and always brought a soft drink, milk shake or cola.

But Metropolitan Hospital authorities became suspicious when Mrs. Mary McNamara, about 60, did not respond to treatment. They called police.

Detectives said they took a sample of a milk shake McNamara brought his mother last Sunday and found in a laboratory analysis that it was spiked with arsenic.

Friday night the faithful son arrived at the hospital carrying a cola but this time police were waiting for him. McNamara was arrested and held in $20,000 bail on a charge of attempted homicide.

His mother was reported in serious condition.

Monday Night

Monday is budget night in the Twin Falls city council chambers and it is hoped citizens will turn out in force to see how the city arranges to pay its bills.

Twin Falls is a large business. It operates in this manner, but it is a business at which every resident of the city can take an active part.

Since the budget determines what the taxes will be, citizens should be interested. The budget spells out just where the money is going, how it is going to be spent.

Beyond that, there are indications the Monday night session will be an interesting one.

If citizens don't want to attend just for the education of it all, they can attend for the entertainment.

At the first meeting in January very few citizens attended. In fact, there were only about 25 people in the audience, and most of them were city employees. The first meeting was interesting in the respect that a new city councilman and three returning councilmen were sworn into office.

After a stormy election in November, it could have been anticipated that at least a few would have shown some interest in the swearing in ceremony. Alas, this did not come to pass.

But we have hopes interest in local government will be renewed. We have hopes that citizens will not take their government for granted.

City councilmen, who work long and thankless hours, welcome anyone who attends.

The meeting begins at 7:30 p.m. Monday and will be in the Twin Falls city hall.

Will we see you there?

The Earth

Man has delved in the earth for food, water, building materials, fuel and facts—not to mention gold and silver. Some of the facts concerned earlier, barbed civilizations, some concerned the structure of the earth itself.

As a general rule, facts about the earth have appeared less to the imagination, or theories, about the skies. The astronomer scanned the heavens for man's fate, whereas, as concerns the earth, magic seldom flourished.

Underneath the earth's lighter crust lies the earth's basic outer surface, known as the mantle. Thus the outer surface floats upon an inner core, into which the enormous weight of mountains pushed down, as icebergs push into water.

Science predicts that when the sun, which is finite, dies, the earth will die, too. Thereafter the earth will roll through space, dark and dead, all man's miseries and glories unnoted, forever forgotten. That, however, will be several billion years from now. Meanwhile, the earth is a going concern, at least as a planet revolving around a star among the galaxies.

As long as man endures, he cannot cease to be curious about the earth and the skies. Geologic research is less dramatic than astronomy, but the earth still has a multitude of secrets to unfold.

MR. SPECTATOR

The Water's Full Of Rocks

After being down to very near 163 pounds, Mr. Spectator has suddenly started to gain weight again with the result that the doctor last week revealed the scales now topped out at 200.

Well, for a tall guy that really isn't too much weight but in this span of life in which Mr. Spectator is now living—the one where there is little personal exercise—100 lbs. is more massive than carrying the load in other words, it's just like carrying a 23 pound pack on the back. Really kind of silly, isn't it?

But in doing some close investigating and a lot of inquiring, Mr. Spectator found out what was causing the weight gain. What was it? It was because he was drinking city water. Why? Because city water is full of rocks!

It was only a suspicion until the other morning when Mr. Spectator was getting ready to come to work and was in the bathroom throwing tap water over his face in an effort to wake up.

There was only one trouble. The tap was flowing so lightly there was hardly enough water to cover the face. Pressure must be down, Mr. Spectator thought, Ah, but how wrong he was. Trouble was the tap screen was all clogged up.

Unsuspecting the end of the tap to get at the screen therein revealed the trouble. This might be putting it a little on the heavy side but there were rocks in that screen that were so big they chipped the porcelain of the sink when they fell out.

And there wasn't just one rock, there were scores of them—all sizes and shapes. Mr. Spectator didn't dare wash them down the drain because it surely would have stopped up and put them in the garbage can. Now, when the garbage man comes around next Tuesday morning to pick up the stuff, we bet he will not be able to lift that particular can.

Mr. Spectator doesn't really think a lot of water as such. But looking at those rocks in that screen convinced him that he should quit drinking it entirely.

So now Mr. Spectator is afraid to drink city water because he will swallow the rocks and gain more weight.

But just how does a guy get rid of 23 pounds of rocks he has acquired? They still must be hanging around inside Mr. Spectator because he still maintains the 206 pounds.

Anyone know how long it takes city water rocks to dissolve?

ONE ROOM SCHOOL Latest breakthrough on the education front, as reported by the educational affairs news weekly, "Education U.S.A.," is something called "multilage grouping." Translated into English, it means putting children of different ages in the same classroom.

For the first time we have shared knowledge horizontally and assumed that such age or grade group could only take one step at a time, one year for each step," says the Department of Elementary-Kindergarten-Nursery Education (EKNE) of the National Education Association, in a bulletin explaining the new idea.

A walking classroom, judging by the EKNE description, has so many advantages it's hard to know where to begin to list them.

For one thing, children work at their own pace on their own interests. They stimulate and challenge each other.

Younger children have someone to look up to and a chance to find out what will be expected of them later. Older ones can look back at the less mature ages they have just passed through, with increased security and emotional maturity. They can also tutor the younger kids.

Children of all ages learn appreciation and concern for others, self-respect, habits of helpfulness and cooperation—in short, good social behavior. They see themselves as part of the "full tapestry of life," not as separate and unimportant because of their younger kids.

Furthermore, say the educators, multiple grouping is lifelike and natural, not school-like and regimented. It gives every classroom a wide diversity of experiences and interests, thus providing a good foundation for learning.

Multiple grouping. Something "new" under the sun. Except that the one-room schoolhouse was there about 100 years ago. And we always thought our ancestors were culturally deprived.

WASHINGTON — One available fact, amidst a welter of confusion and recriminations is being offered by Defense Department sources to justify the mission of the USS Pueblo, hijacked by North Korean patrol boats off the North Korean coast.

It is that the Pueblo, an intelligence ship loaded with electronic eavesdropping gear, already had intercepted North Korean military messages indicating that the recently initiated campaign of harassment against American and South Korean troops below the 1953 cease-fire line would continue. These messages, it was said here, made it clear that the harassment campaign was a device intended to throw off balance the massive U.S. effort in Vietnam. Sources here also said other "diplomatic" messages intercepted by the Pueblo "suggested" that the communist North Korean regime — probably with the encouragement and support of communist China — hoped to lure the United States into a "non-war" in that area. The aim of this play, of course, would be to try to divert some U.S. power from Vietnam by confronting Washington with a second military venture in the Far East.

If these revelations can be believed, the Pueblo's mission can be considered a success. The little spying vessel was lurking off the North Korean coast for one purpose—to find out how serious was the series of North Korean provocations—and would seem to have succeeded. Even if the Pueblo learned nothing, however, it was still merely doing its job in accordance with American intelligence policy. That policy dictates an around-the-clock electronic surveillance of the entire world to guard against surprise attack. Thus the Pueblo was one of the creatures of the hush-hush National Security Agency, which enjoys semi-autonomous status within the Department of Defense. The NSA is bigger than the Central Intelligence Agency and spends twice as much money as the CIA—probably more than a billion dollars a year. It is charged with protecting American codes and breaking the codes of other nations, and with the interception around the world of all radio and other electronic "conversations" of other countries. One unverified report is that the NSA intercepted and read a message from North Vietnam. President Ho Chi Minh to Soviet Premier Alexei Kosygin in July, 1967, in which he rejected Kosygin's offer to mediate the Vietnam war.

Perhaps the biggest volume of intelligence, however, is collected by the SAMOS (for Satellite and Missile Observation System) satellites which eavesdrop on communications and photographs and televise missile installations—military bases and airfields—from 180 miles up. SAMOS satellites listen in on radio transmitters, radar signals and microwave telephone lines, and transmit their findings to ground stations or ships at sea for instant deciphering by NSA cryptanalysts.

These efforts presumably give the U.S. an advantage in diplomatic maneuvering during the cold war. As part of the nation's defense system, such electronic spying also helps U.S. experts devise ways of confusing Soviet radar which might detect and locate American bombers and missiles in time of war.

Those Clues To U.S. Codes

WASHINGTON (NEA)—From an intelligence standpoint, North Korea's capture of the USS Pueblo is a very serious matter, indeed.

If some of the Pueblo's sensitive equipment was captured intact or not fully destroyed, this incident could mean a quite unfortunate breach of U.S. security.

Naval intelligence collection ships carry sensitive coding and decoding equipment. They also carry sophisticated communications and radar equipment that could be of considerable interest to an unfriendly foreign power. Probably the Pueblo carried a destruct button which, when pressed, would obliterate the coding equipment and other gadgetry not supposed to fall into the hands of enemy forces.

It is hoped that the security officer on the Pueblo pressed this destruct button. Certainly the Pueblo will be changed immediately.

But this won't retract coded messages the U.S. signal men have sent out in the Far East in the recent past. Information gathered from the parts and pieces of the coding equipment aboard the Pueblo could give the Soviet Union considerable knowledge on some codes used by the United States in Asia in the recent past. Assuming the Communist intelligence nets have kept tape records of all coded classified U.S. messages sent in the area during this period, the Pueblo capture could possibly enable the Russians (after considerable research, to be sure) to decipher and read parts of these secret communications.

This assumes that the North Koreans, currently on Moscow's side in the Sino-Soviet split, will give the Russians immediate access to the Pueblo.

South possession and study of places of coding gadgetry from the U.S. ship would not automatically enable the Red specialists to read future U.S. coded messages.

But a careful study of the charged after-action material from the Pueblo could help the Communist experts to better understand current U.S. coding and decoding techniques. It could, therefore, put the Soviet Union a step forward in their attempts to break future U.S. codes.

But a careful study of the charged after-action material from the Pueblo could help the Communist experts to better understand current U.S. coding and decoding techniques. It could, therefore, put the Soviet Union a step forward in their attempts to break future U.S. codes.

Underlying all this is a basic, selfless American motive: Unless the United States tries to stop Communist expansion while it can, communism will be left free to gobble up every nation in sight until in the end the United States has neither friends nor allies and is practically surrounded and helpless.

Month after month North Vietnam said that if the United States stopped the bombing and pulled its forces out of Vietnam, peace talks could start. For the United States this was too vague, too indefinite. It urged North Vietnam to be more positive and specific.

Finally, at the end of 1967, the North said peace talks "will" start if the United States stops the bombing and ceases all "aggression" against the North. President Johnson still wants to know whether this meant peace talks would start promptly, once the bombing ended.

The North, in its latest word over the weekend, called this a "trick." That's where the two sides stand after more than three years of jabbering.

PAUL HARVEY

Fool Me Once

Electron year orators almost unanimously favor peace in Vietnam "through negotiations."

President Johnson has insisted that "Watch it! They fooled us once."

In June, 1951, after a year of ceaseless fighting in Korea, our side suddenly got going, our troops were advancing, the enemy was hurting.

The Communists hollered "uncle," requested a truce conference. We agreed.

That was a tragic mistake. Though talks began in July, Americans continued to die.

Trying to hold casualties down, our American forces were ordered to cancel all offensive and fight only defensively. This took the pressure off the enemy and put it all on us.

Those negotiations at Panmunjom continued for two years before there was a cease-fire. Through 575 meetings, enemy delegates stalled and bargained and demanded and walked out and walked back and stalled some more.

All the while, American battlefield casualties were increasing. The more the enemy flinched, the war took place during the truce talks. Twice as many Americans were killed during the truce talks as before.

The Communists employ "tactical peace" negotiations. As they do their military technique. Documents captured in Vietnam prove they mean to use this same tactic again.

Over the signature of the deputy chief of staff of the North Vietnamese Army, the directive says: "Our policy is to continue fighting until we can fight and negotiate at the same time."

I have seen this document quoted in U.S. News and World Report, now in the hands of the exception of that publication, almost nobody has been warning Americans of the futility of premature negotiations—the hideous price our sons will have to pay if we agree to "stopping bombing" as a condition for stalling the war.

In June, 1951, it was our superior firepower which was cutting the limitless hordes of Asia down to our size; they were beginning to hurt—so they offered to talk.

Today, 17 years later, they are still talking! There is no peace treaty in Korea. There is no unified Korea. Two American divisions, 80,000 of our sons, remain tied down there.

Most of the $18 billion that we have spent was spent during the talking.

To this day, North Koreans, Red Chinese and Russians continue to violate the armistice with border harassment, infiltration of the South and a military buildup.

At Panmunjom's continuing meetings they still demand that we hand over all of South Korea.

In the Vietnamese war a policy of total surrender is more desirable than an armistice. Every bomb we don't drop on North Vietnam kills Americans in South Vietnam. Let's not let the enemy again use talks as trap bait.

Fool me once, shame on you; fool me twice, shame on me.

ART BUCHWALD

Doubtful? Punt!

WASHINGTON—"Well, ladies and gentlemen, this has been quite a football game. The heavily favored Johnson Regulars are leading the Democratic Dissenters by a score of 1-0 in the first quarter, though we don't seem to be much chance of the Dissenters overcoming the Johnson Regulars' lead. As you know, the winner of this ball game goes to play in the Presidential Super Bowl in November, 1968, and all eyes are focused on what is happening today.

Leading the attack for the Dissenters is second-string quarterback Gene McCarthy of Minnesota. The star quarterback, Bobby Kennedy, a transfer student from Massachusetts to New York, is suited up but is sitting on the bench. A doubtful starter because he was afraid of being prematurely injured, Bobby is now working out with the team in practice, but no one knows if he'll get into the game.

"That cheering you hear in the background comes from the Dissenters' fan section of the stands. In case you can't understand what they're chanting, it's 'We want Bobby.' We want Bobby." Bobby has a blanket around his head as if to drown out the chant.

During the first quarter, every time Gene McCarthy was thrown for a loss, he got up and looked over at the bench as if to inquire if Bobby were going to come into the game. But so far there has been no indication that Bobby is going to play.

Coach Lynn Johnson of the Regulars doesn't seem to be bothered by the McCarthy of the stands. As a matter of fact, during the game he substituted the regular defense captain, Bob McNamara, and put in Clark Clifford to replace him.

While Clifford has never played defense before, he got a rousing cheer when he came into the contest.

"They haven't been too many fumbles in the game. The Dissenters just can't seem to get the ball rolling. Their strategy has been hitless, and they just can't seem to catch the imagination of the crowd. Wait a minute, folks. Wait a minute. Bobby Kennedy has just taken off his blanket and he's starting to warm up with a football with his brother, Teddy. The crowd has gone crazy. Bobby is throwing the ball back to the fans now, and more fans are watching him than are watching the ball game.

"McCarthy is looking over at the bench again, wondering if he will be substituted. Now Kennedy is talking with the coaches.

Now he's in an argument. He's nodding his head and he's sitting down on the bench again and is putting a blanket around himself. The fans are booing, but Bobby doesn't seem to be paying any attention.

"The fans are Bobby's partying off the bench again. He's thrown off his blanket and he's running up and down. Now he's doing knee bends. The fans are going wild. It looks as if this time he may go in.

"Oh, Bobby is talking to the coaches again. Now he's on the phone to the scouts up in the boxes. He's examining the field. He's studying the Johnson Regulars' bench. He's on the phone again. Now he's talking to the press. He's picking up a football and is juggling it in his hand as he walks by himself along the sidelines.

"Now he's back at the bench. He shrugs, his shoulders, sits down and puts the blanket around himself again and sits out toward the goal line. Front where he sits it seems awfully far away."

Khe Sanh Base Considered 'Cork'

By ROBERT D. OHMAN
KHE SANH, Vietnam (AP) — "It is the cork in the bottle," the major said. He kicked a shell fragment in the red dust and added: "If they get past us, they can tear up the countryside way over to the coast."
Holding the cork in place are 5,000 U.S. Marines, either within the barbed wire that encircles the Khe Sanh combat base and its air strip or along a ridgeline that points like an arrow toward the base from the northwest.
Maneuvering against them are some 4,000 North Vietnamese regulars, forward elements of two Hanoi divisions that perhaps total up to 20,000 men. A half dozen flights developed last week in what Marine officers considered the prelude to a major offensive.
If the North Vietnamese could blast the Marines out of their stronghold here on a red clay bluff in the northwest corner of South Vietnam, the broad Quang Tri and Cam Lo river valleys would lie ahead of them. A 30-mile march would take them to Quang Tri, the capital of South Vietnam's northernmost province. Ten miles farther, and they would be at the South China Sea and within reach of the bulk of the U.S. 3rd

Marine Division stationed along the demilitarized zone.
The terrain around this base, 16 miles south of the DMZ, is not ideal for defense. A forested ridge towers 1,500 feet above it to the northeast.
Narrow jungled ravines lead south into the district town of Khe Sanh, three miles away from which a company-size garrison withdrew last Monday after a sharp engagement.
To the west a valley broadens out as it stretches about 10 miles to the Se Poon River, the frontier line in that area between South Vietnam and the Communist-controlled Laotian territory through which the Ho Chi Minh Trail carries North Vietnamese reinforcements and war supplies.
And in the northwest are Hill 881 South and North and Hill 881, where Marine detachments watch and wait. The hills rise above a second smaller valley that is also pointed toward the main base.
The Marines lost 138 men killed and 307 wounded last May in a week of bloody battles to drive entrenched North Vietnamese off the three hills.
This thwarted a drive against the base at that time. The Marines killed 800 enemy soldiers and then dug new bunkers and settled in to wait for the Communists to make another try.

From the Marine airstrip the dome of Hill 881, a half peak of scarred earth, is clearly visible three miles away once the morning fog has lifted. The twin 881 peaks are about two miles west of 881. From there north, the mountains of the Annamite range station up to the peaks more than 5,800 feet high, creating a virtually impenetrable block between North and South Vietnam.
To cut in, North Vietnamese troops move into Laos along the Ho Chi Minh Trail, skirt the highest mountains and turn back into South Vietnam via various valleys. Khe Sanh happens to be at the narrowest point of one of those valleys.

Administration Braces For Question Over Its Handling Of Pueblo Crisis

By JOHN M. HIGHTOWER
AP Special Correspondent
WASHINGTON (AP) — Already faced with a charge of bungling, the Johnson administration is bracing for a storm of questions from Congress over its handling of the Pueblo crisis.
The key question shaping up, by whose decision was the intelligence ship, with its potentially dangerous mission and highly secret equipment, stationed directly off the North Korean coast?
Administration officials say the operation was approved at high levels of the government—but the question remains whether specific moves of the ship were handled routinely by officials in the CIA or some other intelligence agency or controlled from day to day by officials with broad policy responsibilities.
The embarrassments of congressional inquiry into the responsibilities for what has been a semisecret operation in the past are thus likely to be added to the difficulties of living with that officials' solution to the problem of the Pueblo and its 83-man crew.

Secretary of State Dean Rusk said in New York earlier this week: "There can be no satisfactory result—short of prompt, immediate release of that ship."
Some authorities here think an initial blunder may have made the situation difficult to deal with. The Defense Department announced at the outset that the United States was asking the Soviet government to intervene with North Korea for release of the ship and crew. This official public disclosure apparently put the Russians on the spot.
Soviet officials twice rebuffed requests by Ambassador Llewellyn E. Thompson on Washington's instruction, for help with the North Korean government. Administration officials feel, however, that despite this outward pose of indifference the Russians, who can profit by American embarrassment, will try to bring the incident to a peaceful conclusion since they too operate spy ships along the shores of many countries, including the United States.

But frustrated officials here acknowledge that so much damage has already been done that no solution now possible can really be considered satisfactory.
There have been reports of the wounding of four crew members of the Pueblo. The ship has undoubtedly been thoroughly examined by Communist intelligence experts. The United States has been pictured by Communist propaganda as a violator of North Korean territory, despite vehement U.S. denials. It has been shown incapable of dealing decisively with the defiance of a far smaller and weaker hostile country.

North Korean coast. Munds said that if the gain in information made such a risky intelligence operation necessary then the Pueblo should have had air or naval protection available.

Israeli Sub Is Missing

By ED BLANCHIE
TEL AVIV, Israel (AP) — An Israeli submarine was missing Saturday and navy sources said they were baffled by her disappearance Thursday afternoon.

"If she had sunk we would have debris and an oil slick," one navy man said. "Perhaps she has run into trouble and is not able to surface."

But other military officials privately were giving her up for lost.

The submarine is believed to have run into the kind of difficulty in the Mediterranean Sea about 120 miles west of the island of Cyprus and 250 miles off the Israeli coast.

The Dakar, formerly the British navy T-class submarine Tom, was built in 1945 and was bought from Britain in 1964.

She was on her way to Haifa naval base from Portsmouth, England, where she was extensively reconditioned, when she vanished.

The navy has ruled out hostile action as the reason for the 22-year-old submarine's disappearance.

U.S., British and Greek planes and ships, called in by Israel Friday when it found the search area too vast to cover by its own craft, assisted Israeli aircraft and warships in the wide-sweep sea.

The search zone centered for the second day around the submarine's last reported position.

Elfers landing at dusk reported they saw "sign of the sub" or her crew of 69.

The army said, however: "There are still large areas we have not yet covered. The search will go on tomorrow."

It was the second disaster to strike Israeli navy in three months. On Oct. 21, the Egyptians sank the destroyer Elath with salvos of Soviet-made missiles off the Sinai coast with a loss of 47 lives.

can hardly wait to tell my wife, Vivian."

Mr. Dunn said that he and Mrs. Dunn have three children living at home.

"I am sure we will be able to make the trip and to say I am thrilled is an understatement," he concluded.

Mr. Roper, who was also informed by telephone while he was home for lunch, couldn't believe what he heard. Shortly after he was informed, he called the Times-News.

"I just wanted to be sure you were not fooling," he told an official of the newspaper.

Joe Salisbury, who with his wife will head the annual joint trip, announced the list of those making the trip. Those named are in addition to Mr. and Mrs. Dunn, Mr. and Mrs. Salisbury and Mr. and Mrs. Roper. POINT PLEASANT, W.Va. (AP) — Two more bodies and a car were recovered from the Ohio River near here Saturday as search operations for the victims of the Dec. 15 collapse of the Silver Bridge continued.

BLACKFOOT, Idaho (AP) — An inquest at Blackfoot into the death of a 17-month-old boy has been continued until Monday.

The boy, Shane Turley Sanchez, was dead on arrival at hospital Jan. 9. His stepfather and mother, Mr. and Mrs. Margit Sanchez Jr. of Blackfoot said the boy fell down basement stairs.

The autopsy showed a massive internal hemorrhage was the cause of death.

GOVERNOR SPEAKS
BOISE (AP) Gov. Don W. Samuelson told Idaho members of the American Legion today if a diplomatic solution is not found soon to the North Korean crisis, "stern action will become necessary."

The legion's annual mid-winter conference is being held in Boise.

Samuelson said North Korea's seizure of the Navy intelligence ship Pueblo was the latest step on the path to a Communist conspiracy to try to weaken and eventually destroy America.

"The Communists have hurled the challenge," the governor continued. "We simply cannot pussyfoot at this time."

DIVIDEND TOLD
BOISE (AP) — Directors of Boise Cascade Corp. Friday declared a quarterly dividend of six and one-quarter cents per share on the outstanding common stock. The payment will be made April 4 to stockholders of record Feb. 28.

A quarterly dividend of 35 cents per share was declared on the company's convertible preferred stock.

NEXT STOP IS HAWAII for these four people—three of them winners of free trips on the annual Times-News and Magic Carpet Travel tour which leaves Twin Falls Feb. 7. From the left are Mr. and Mrs. Jack Dunn, Shoshone, who won free trips because their coupon was drawn from among thousands entered in the contest, and John Roper, owner of Roper's Store in Twin Falls. Mr. Roper received two free tickets for the jaunt because the winning coupon had been deposited at his store. At the right is Joe Salisbury, operator of Magic Carpet Travels who, with his wife, will serve as tour guides. Interested persons may still sign up for the tour at Magic Carpet Travels.

YET LITTLE JANA THACKER displays a coupon she has just drawn from a drum containing thousands. The one who pulled out meant two free trip tickets to Hawaii for Jack Dunn, Shoshone. The coupons in the drum were those which had been deposited in stores of participating merchants in Twin Falls. The outside drawing took place Saturday following a heavy snow. Sallie Turner, owner of Sallie's Gift Shop in the Lynwood Shopping Center, and Ray Rostrom, manager of the Twin Falls Chamber of Commerce, looked on as the girl drew the winning coupon which, because it was deposited at the Roper Store, also won two free tickets for John Roper, the store's owner. Jana is the daughter of Mrs. Betty Thacker, Twin Falls. Members of the Times-News and Magic Carpet Travel's annual "tour" leave the Twin Falls airport the morning of Feb. 7.

ACTION PLANNED
BOISE (AP) — A spokesman for the Idaho Writers' Association said Saturday the Wallace organization will go to court in an attempt to get Wallace's third party presidential ticket on the Idaho ballot.

Atty. Gen. Allan Shepard has ruled that presidential electors of a third party could not be placed on the Idaho ballot.

3 Captive U.S. Pilots Are To Be Freed By North Vietnam

By JOHN RODERICK
TOKYO (AP) — Three captive American pilots—who the Communists say have a repentant attitude—are to be freed by North Vietnam, a brief broadcast dispatch from Hanoi said Saturday.

These would be the first of some 500 U.S. airmen believed to be in North Vietnamese hands to be turned loose. Precisely who, when and where were questions unanswered in the dispatch, from Hanoi's official Vietnam News Agency. It gave no names.

A spokesman for the U.S. Embassy in Saigon commented: "We haven't yet been able to confirm the broadcast yet, but if it is true we would certainly welcome it."

The only American pilot to get back after being seized by the North Vietnamese since the anti-communism campaign against North Vietnam started Feb. 7, 1965, is Navy Lt. (j.g.) Dieter Dengler, a German-born Californian who escaped from a Communist prison camp in Laos in 1968.

Hanoi said North Vietnam's army had decided to free the men in connection with the lunar new year. This is the greatest of the Vietnamese holidays on both sides of the border. Called Tet, it arrives Tuesday.

First-hand reports on conditions in the northern camps would be helpful to Washington officials concerned with prisoner of war problems, Hanoi consistently has refused to permit International-Red-Cross representatives to inspect the camps.

American officials have expressed belief the prisoners are receiving adequate food and medical care, but beyond that little is known. There has been no revival in recent months of a

The Vietnam News Agency announcement said: "You the people of the lunar new year festival 1968, proceeding from the humanitarian and lenient policy of the government of the Democratic Republic of (North) Vietnam—the general political department of the Vietnamese People's Army has decided to set free three American pilots captured in North Vietnam."

"These pilots had shown a repentant attitude during the period of detention."

Though there was no mention of where the three might turn up, Cambodia seemed to be a possibility. Three U.S. Army sergeants captured by the Viet Cong were freed last fall in Phnom Penh, the Cambodian capital.

Amnesties are part of a regular pattern for Tet.

Montessorian-Type Education Comes To T. T.

THIS MIND'S EYE sees the letter as Aaron Vecera traces an X in the air. He is one of the kindergarten-age youngsters who are learning their ABCs and other pre-school subjects in preparation for first grade work.

"GESUNDHEIT!" Little Miles Clinton is caught sneezing while he and Randy Silvey play with a musical educational device at Children's Village, a new montessorian-type school in Twin Falls. The school opened in September.

DOUBLE FUN on a cylinder-type structure is what Lisa and Laura Hill, identical twins, are up to. Which is which is hard to determine, because the only eye-catching difference was the ruffles on their panties.

Pre-Schoolers Enjoy Learning, Playing

By NORMA HERZINGER

Would you believe that 30 or more youngsters, jumping, playing, laughing and running, are learning the meaning of authority?

Mrs. Charles (Ruby) Hopkins does. She has inaugurated Idaho's first montessorian-type of pre-school educational facility and believes that such activity can be a type of free expression. "The children need this time," she said when explaining the ear-shattering clamor. After they are done with this "free time" they go back into their respective class or play rooms and are ready to learn.

A montessorian-type school is a training ground for young children, emphasizing free physical activity, informal and individual instruction.

It is set up for children three, four and five years of age, classed in nursery, pre-kindergarten and kindergarten groups.

The general objectives of this type of training are to supplement the home in the growth of the child's development; to further his mental, artistic and physical development, and to supplement the home in the growth of the child's social and emotional life.

It is most important, Mrs. Hopkins noted, not to push education on the three and four-year-olds, but let them learn at their own speed. Then, of course, the kindergarten aids in preparation for first grade work.

The school in Twin Falls, first opened in September, 1967, using temporary facilities, has since moved into its own specially designed building on Locust Street.

Mrs. Hopkins, who designed the house for the school and the children who attend it, pointed out individual features of the facility.

Laboratories and water fountains, geared to the varying sizes of the youngsters, are in each room. Tables, desks and chairs have also been designed with the children in mind.

Play and instructional equipment has been constructed with the thought of developing and drawing on the child's natural senses.

The three and four-year-olds work at nursery-type tables, but graduate to small school-room type desks.

SLEEPING BEAUTY is personified in little Kathy Nicolin as she takes her regular nap during the rest period set aside each day at Children's Village for those youngsters who spend the entire day there.

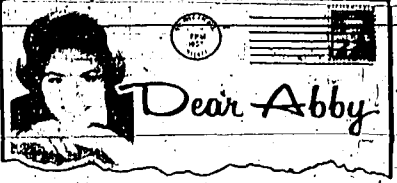

EYES AHEAD and paying strict attention to one of the teachers in a new montessorian-type school in Twin Falls are students in the kindergarten department. They have graduated from nursery tables and chairs into the scaled-down desks.

A TREE, TRIMMED for safety, has been laid horizontally, providing an ideal outdoor location for children to engage in physical activity. The tree is one of the many, basic type items used at Children's Village. This type of play and educational aids encourages the children's freedom and ingenuity in their recreation and study.

Dear Abby

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN
DEAR ABBY: I am 20 and Henry is 33, and here is my story:
 We moved in with Henry's parents right after we got married. ("Only until we find a place of our own," he promised). Do Well, it's been four years, and here I sit with two lovely children and a closet full of unwrapped wedding presents.
 My in-laws are very nice, and some people think I've got it easy with Henry's mother to do all the cooking, and a built-in baby sitter for the children, but I am miserable, Abby. Henry's mother has her own way of doing things, and I help her as much as she lets me, which isn't much. And it's still her house.
 Every time the subject of moving comes up, Henry's father says, "Why move and pay rent when you can live here for free? We have plenty of room." (It's true, but I would rather have one room of my own.)
 The children are getting spoiled by their grandparents and I feel trapped. Please help me.
 NO NAME, P.L.S.
DEAR NO NAME: Face it. You are married to a man who isn't ready to give up the comfort and security provided by his parents. And unless you can help him grow up sufficiently to make him want to leave the nest, you can expect to be there indefinitely. In other words, he needs the council of a wise and impartial friend. This could be a clergyman, doctor, or marriage counselor.
DEAR ABBY: I used to think you made up all the letters in your column because I couldn't believe that people could be so dumb, but here I am, with a problem of my own that sounds like it couldn't be true, but it is. I am 23 and I have been married for five weeks to a swell guy I've known for a year. This is my second marriage and I have three small children.
 My husband never said anything about his being married before, but now I find out that he has been married twice and has five kids whom his mother is taking care of. I found out only yesterday and I am ready for a nervous breakdown. When I told my husband I knew about the five kids, he said he was glad, as he didn't know how much longer he could keep it from me. Then he said as long

Southern Idaho Smothers Jackson JC 111-77; Teams Slate Rematch On Monday

College of Southern Idaho's Golden Eagles trimmed Sheldon Jackson JC of Slika, Alaska, 111-77 Saturday afternoon but not before the Seals had given the home team an early surprise.

The two teams will meet again at 8 p.m. Monday in the led by Tim Tittle, the all-fresh Jackson club crammed through the first eight points of the game and wiped the nonchalant out of the CSI defense. But within five minutes the Eagles were back on top by 10 and won going away.

It took about 11 minutes for CSI to finally shake free from the Seals. CSI took the lead at 11-10 on a Larry Barnett field goal and Mark Rich started hitting medium jump shots to extend that lead to 16 points. But Jackson twice came back to within six points. Buckets by Ron Adams, Fred Trenkle, Tom Bush and Barnett shoved CSI into a 12-point lead with 4:23 left in the half.

After that it was a matter of whether the Eagles would, as the small crowd hoped, get 100 points. Tom Bush Steve Miller put the bucket that made it 100-67 with 3:37 left in the game.

Declo Erupts In Last Half, Rips Indians

DECLO — Declo's Hoopes put together a hot shooting second half Friday night as they exploded from a halftime deadlock into a 76-55 decision over the Shoshone Indians.

The score was tied at the end of the first two periods but the third Declo started moving away as four Darringtons in double figures. The fourth quarter was all Declo, the Hoopes running through 25 points. Shoshone won the first game, Declo 74, Shoshone 55.

FAIRFIELD — The Camas County Mustangs downed the Bruneau Bobcats 75-49 with ease Saturday night.

Camas jumped out to an early lead and had a 10-point lead after the first quarter. Bruneau's offense sputtered freely throughout the remainder of the game.

Dietrich Tips Carey In Hot Second Half

DIETRICH — A tight defense and some hot shooting in the final half carried the Dietrich Blue Devils past the Carey Panthers 70-56 and kept the Devils tied for the Northside Conference lead.

The loss knocked Carey out of a share of the lead.

Carey, getting 35 points from Jim Murdock, jumped into the lead at the outset but Dietrich came back to within one point at halftime. In the second half the Blue Devils started getting points from everyone and the defense shut off the prolific scoring of Murdock.

In the fourth quarter Leon Ballard and Dietrich Leo divided 14 points as Dietrich won going away.

Action Helps Muscle Pulls

TORONTO (AP) — The team doctor for the Toronto Maple Leafs hockey team has some advice for professional coaches — send that player with pulled muscles back into action as soon as he can stand the pain.

D. N. Fair, McPherson said Friday if a player is kept out of a game for the usual convalescent period of four weeks, fibers in a pulled muscle shorten. The first time he plays again, the muscle injury recurs.

If the player keeps moving as soon after the injury as he can stand the pain, "he'll be back playing in a week to 10 days."

Wendell Pins 75-63 Defeat On Valley

WENDELL — A balanced scoring attack by the Wendell Trojans, augmented in the late going by Brandon Eaton's scoring points, let the Big Six Conference leaders beat the Valley Vikings 75-63 Saturday night.

The victory avenged an earlier loss to Valley.

After three early ties, Wendell, with four men in double scoring figures, jumped into the lead and held it until the third period. Then Valley's Don Meyer started hitting. The lanky Valley junior pumped through 12 points to pull the Vikings into a 47-47 draw.

But Wendell pulled away from that immediately and moved steadily away in the fourth quarter. Eaton coming up with his best effort during that time.

Casper Fires 68 To Take Lead Into Final Round Of Tourney

By BOB MYERS
Associated Press Sports Writer
PASADENA, Calif. (AP) — Cool Billy Casper fished out a three-under-par 68 for a 54-hole score of 205 Saturday and it was good enough to stave off a spectacular 65 by dark-horse John Schlee and a belated rally by Al Geiberger in the $100,000 Los Angeles Open Golf Tournament.

Casper, two-time U.S. Open champion, goes into the final round Sunday with a one-stroke lead over the 28-year-old Schlee. Geiberger, who birdied two of the last three holes to finish with a 69.

Casper had to beat back the challenge of several others, including Arnold Palmer, during the cold, windy and cloudy day.

Schlee, playing head of Casper, finished even with Casper at seven under par for the three rounds. But Casper's bird on No. 17 went in from seven feet out to break the tie and send him eight shots under par.

Palmer, seeking his fourth Los Angeles Open victory, is four strokes behind Casper after his round of 69 Saturday.

Schlee's 65 equaled the competitive course record for the revamped Boro's 18-hole Golf Course's 7,120-yard par 36-35-71 challenge. It had been established just a few minutes earlier when Miller Barber had a 34-31-65. Schlee's nines were also 34-31.

The round started with Casper and Geiberger for the lead — Geiberger, Dave Marr, and George Archer and Dave Stockton. At the conclusion, following Geiberger, Stockton, with a 73 in a tie at 210; Marr, a 74 for 211, and Archer, a 75 for 212.

Speed Weeks Open Monday At Daytona

DAYTONA BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Annual speed weeks open Monday at Daytona International Speedway with more prize money, bigger crowds and the official entry of a turbine car that is a smaller version of one which dominated the Indianapolis 500 last May only to suffer mechanical failure in the closing seconds.

The Howmet turbine was named a surprising official entry Friday and will compete for cash against Ferrari, Porsche and Alfa-Romeo sports cars in the 24-hour Daytona Race-Feb. 3-4. Earlier it was entered on an experimental basis.

The race will mark the first time a turbine has been entered in an endurance test.

Another innovation in this race will be the Trans-American Division for Camaro, Mustang, Cougar, Durr and Javelin models.

The big Ferraris and even bigger Ford sports cars which have dominated the endurance race are out of the running this year. New international regulations which restrict prototype division engine sizes to 3 liters eliminated the bigger engines.

The 24-hour race starting at 1 p.m. Saturday offers a total purse of $75,000.

The new 1968 American stock cars are expected to reach speeds of 184 to 185 miles an hour on the high-banked outer track when they try Feb. 11 for pole positions in the Daytona 500.

A week later the Automobile Racing Club of America will run its annual 300-mile winter championship.

UCLA Drops College 84-77

NEW YORK (AP) — UCLA's national basketball champions survived a closing spurt by Boston College and beat the Eagles 84-77 before a sellout crowd of 8,400 in Madison Square Garden Saturday night.

Big Lew Alcindor and Mike Warren, known as Little Lew, combined for 53 points to spark the Bruins to their second straight victory after their 47-game winning string had been broken by Houston a week ago.

Alcindor finished with 28 points, 22 of them in the first half, and Warren, a demon floor general, wound up with 25, 15 of them in the first half.

Both fouled out in the last 34 seconds.

It was only the second time that Alcindor, the All American 7-foot-1 1/2 player of the year, has been banished. He went out with 13 seconds left.

In the second half the Bruins opened a 17-point lead at 57-50 and a rout seemed in prospect. However, the inspired Eagles suddenly caught fire and pulled within 75-67.

Warren sank a field goal to break the Eagles' spurt. He did it again with 1:11 remaining when he sank two free throws after the Eagles pulled within six at 79-73.

Vikings To Open College Football Draft Tuesday

NEW YORK (AP) — Unless Minnesota Vikings trade their wild card No. 1 draft choice for a quarterback, they will have first pick of the college football crop Tuesday in the combined-draft of the American and National Football Leagues.

A total of 462 players will be selected in the 17 rounds by 26 teams with Cincinnati, the new AFL club, getting 28 extra picks. Only players who have completed their college football eligibility will be drafted.

Commissioner Pete Rozelle has ruled that a 15-minute time limit will be in effect for the first two rounds and a five-minute limit for each choice in subsequent rounds. As the draft will start at 10 a.m. EST Tuesday and no round will be started after 9 p.m., it is probable that only two or three full rounds will be completed Tuesday. The leagues hope to finish up Wednesday.

Coaches, scouts and personnel chiefs will operate from their home offices through a representative who will remain in constant telephone communication from the draft room in the Belmont Plaza Hotel.

Green Bay winds up with two first-round choices having acquired New Orleans' No. 1 pick as compensation for Jim Taylor who played out his option and signed with the Saints. San Diego, Kansas City, Detroit, Miami and, of course, Minnesota get two picks in the first round.

The Vikings must decide whether to gamble on the top collegian or trade their rights for an experienced NFL player.

There have been reports that Los Angeles offered Bill Musson, its backup quarterback, for to take Gary Behan, UCLA's first pick which would use a quarter-back and Heisman Trophy winner. One source said such a deal had been rejected.

Cincinnati was awarded 45 selections to augment the 10 veterans from other AFL teams. However, the Bengals already have traded away three rights. Minnesota gets the first pick in the first round, followed by Cincinnati. The order then follows — the combined-won't-standings of the two leagues in reverse order with the exception that the two Super Bowl teams, Oakland and Green Bay will have the last two picks. Coin flips break ties and the teams involved will trade positions in alternate rounds.

AL To Have Majority Of Night Games

BOSTON (AP) — Night baseball will comprise more than half of the 810-game American League schedule in 1968, league President Joe Cronin announced Saturday.

The AL schedule, released by Cronin, shows 420 night games — an increase of 20 over last year. Two-night doubleheaders, however, will drop from 32 in 1967 to just 12.

The April 8 presidential opener at Washington pits the Senators against the Minnesota Twins. Boston's 1967 AL champs make their debut at Detroit on April 9 while Cleveland is at Chicago, Oakland at Baltimore and California at New York in other second-day openers.

The regular schedule, which will wind up on Sunday, Sept. 29, shows 57 doubleheaders — including the dozen two-night attractions.

PLACES SECOND

HELSINKI, Finland (AP) — Diane Holm of Northbrook, Ill., took second and Mary Meyers of St. Paul, Minn., finished in a tie for fourth in the 500-meter race of the Women's World Speed Skating Championships Saturday.

Twin Falls Times-News A-1

"LOOK UP THE road there. The businesses in our town that don't make any money just don't have people in them that are workers. The potential is here, but people are lazy, and it's easy to gripe." (Jim Lulow, mayor, Eden.)

"THE HIGHWAY helped my business . . . two other service stations went out of business, and we got a lot of their business; it's as simple as that." (Kerm Douglas, part-owner, Douglas Service, Hazelton.)

"THE ROAD WAS a wrong choice. It disturbed too many farms and houses. They should have picked Plan C instead of Plan B. I'm glad there's a road, but it hurts Hazelton, and a lot of people." (Oscar Vowlin, farmer, Hazelton.)

"THE ONLY THING I don't like about the highway is that the frontage roads aren't kept up the way they were. Weeds grow tall, and it's dangerous driving because you can't see at intersections. But I'm glad the highway's there." (Mrs. Pat Bevis, teacher, Eden.)

It is typical of a small town to see a boarded up theater and a vacant gas station somewhere along its singular main street.

The theater was boarded up so long ago that teenagers can't remember what the theater looked like. All they remember is television—and to see a movie they drive to a larger town.

The gas station, grim and dusty, falls to have the usual "for lease" sign propped up on the dead-fly covered ledge in the empty office. There is no one who wants to lease the station.

It is a town one drives through noticing little more than a speed limit sign—and for the most part ignoring that.

The small town is one of residents. Unless one knows someone he intends to see, there is no reason to stop.

The boarded up theater along with the absence of any other form of recreation, with the possible exception of a worn and battered pool table in a dimly lit bar, gives credence to the assumption that the only place to go at night is somewhere else.

America is undoubtedly a nation of small towns. They sprang up as farming centers, and near rivers, and at railroad junctions. They were competitive with other towns their size until for some economic reason people began to settle in one rather than the other, and a larger town in a nearby developed. The small towns were then funnels for the larger ones—they fed them from their network of highways, and sub-highways. And to get from one larger city to another, small towns became stepping stones.

But, by 1932, when the Interstate system of highways is due to be completed, stepping stones will no longer be needed and the small towns will grow smaller.

It has happened to many already. With the growing network of interconnecting highways, designated Interstate, a motorist can travel from one large city to another and his only awareness of those small towns comes when a small child in the back seat says, "Daddy, what's that over there?"

And when the Interstate system is complete the motorist can travel from one coast to the other without a stoplight or stop sign to hinder his progress. And certainly without a small town.

So what of the small town? What happens when smallness becomes the most you can ever hope for? What happens when THE highway cuts off the community from the general flow of traffic? What happens to people, students, businesses, dreams, and ambitions?

Just over a year ago Highway 25 ran through the two communities of Eden and Hazelton, both towns of less than 500 people.

If you can believe the figures painted on the white signs as you enter those towns. And although the highway is still there it is not a highway in the modern sense of the word. Few cars travel the route, and with the exception of farm vehicles, a truck is seldom seen.

Then what are the opinions of the people who live there. Are they bitter because of the highway? Are they depressed at being "cut off" from the main flow of traffic? Some of the answers are surprising. And some are predictable.

According to Carl Kelly, owner of Kelly's American Service in the town of Eden, "It's terrible; summer before last you couldn't get across the road, and now you don't even have to look. There is no business." (Carl Kelly, owner, Kelly's Service, Eden.)

"IT'S TERRIBLE; summer before last you couldn't get across the road, and now you don't even have to look. There is no business." (Carl Kelly, owner, Kelly's Service, Eden.)

er of Kelly's American Service in the town of Eden, "It's terrible; I've had at least 60 per cent drop off in gas sales. It's terrible, that's all."

Traffic used to stop in the community of Eden, as well as Hazelton. Most of the traffic was from Utah, Pocatello, or other points and traveling to Jerome or Rupert. Residents of the communities say that half of the traffic between Burley and Jerome traveled on the Eden-Hazelton strip of highway. "It was really a better road, and a nicer trip."

But now there is a much better road, providing a much better, or at least faster trip: Interstate 80-N.

The two projects that linked sections at I-80-N began at State Highway 30 and ended at the Valley School Road. The first project was 7.1 miles long and cost $2,003,600. The second was 5.6 miles long and cost $1,012,000. Both were started in 1963, and both were completed in Nov., 1966.

A total strip of asphalt and rock 12.7 miles long had stopped the flow of traffic through two towns, and they would never be the same again.

"Actually, I think it's for the best. I like it better this way," says Harry Kurtz of Hazelton. "It is quiet, and safe, and besides, we never lived on tourist trade anyway. Oh, a few stopped, but for the most part the town is the same now as it was before—only better." Mr. Kurtz is principal of Eden and Hazelton Grade School, and teaches Math at the high school.

Another teacher, Mrs. Pat Bevis, young and attractive, smiles at the mention of the highway. "I like it this way. Some of the property that used to be private property isn't kept up the way it used to be. Weeds grow tall now and make it hard to see at intersections. But then I don't think that's any fault of having a new highway. We can get to wherever we want faster than we could before. Personally I think it makes us less isolated than we were."

Mrs. Bevis teaches Speech, among other courses at Valley High School.

Four teachers in the Teacher's Lounge at Valley High School all agreed—"It's for the best. It's progress."

Most of the people in Eden and Hazelton are convinced that it does make travel in the winter easier. The Interstate highway system is usually clear of snow and ice in comparison to other highways traveled on less. It is simply faster and easier to get to other cities.

For Kerm Douglas, part owner of a service station in Hazelton the highway was good news. It put two other service stations out of business. Douglas didn't honor credit cards in the first place, so he had little tourist trade anyway. He got the local trade from the other stations along with one other station in Hazelton.

Some profit, and others do not.

According to many in the Eden-Hazelton area the farmers suffered the most. Not all of them, but the ones who had their property split by the highway.

C would have disturbed only 185 acres of land, but the way they went it chewed up about 12,000 acres."

And Mr. Vowlin doesn't stop at that. "The whole damn trouble though is that Twin Falls County always wants comes from the Mayor of Eden, things close to them, and they get their way. Jerome pays for garage and according to him, it and Twin Falls gets the cream."

And yet he cautions, "But, don't get me wrong—I'm glad we've got the road . . . but it did hurt Hazelton."

EDEN, IDAHO: There are no tourists passing through, from or to Hazelton.

the highway didn't hurt his business at all. "And it wouldn't hurt the other guys if they'd work at it. Trouble is they're too lazy. They'd rather sit and complain than do other work to get their money. Sure the guys lost gas business, but they won't even pucker a wheel now, at least one of them won't. I always felt it was the job of a service station to do that kind of work, but they don't. The potential's here; you just gotta work for it . . . and some of those don't."

And he remembers the noise. "One thing I sure don't miss is those big trucks shifting right in front of my place to make that little hill."

And so it goes. Complaints that business is the big towns get bigger, and terrible; that farmers gripe too much, that they were not justly compensated, or that the weeds grow too tall now, will always prevail.

The people in favor are that way because they can travel to the larger surrounding towns faster and easier, and because there is less noise, and because the town is safer for children.

The small towns today are smaller in a way. Traffic really doesn't go through them anymore—and if it does, it probably doesn't stop.

It is a fact of our times: the big towns get bigger, and the small ones just stay that way.

"I LIKE IT; it's easy to get from place to place." (Mrs. Howard Johnson, teacher, Eden.)

"PROGRESS ALWAYS HURTS somebody, but we like the quiet that pervades now. It wasn't this quiet before with the trucks." (Mr. and Mrs. Harry Kurtz, teachers, Hazelton.)

"IT'S BETTER FOR farm equipment; the trucks don't run you off the road. And we got a couple of new kids at school from the workers here when the highway was built. The parents stayed on, and the kids go to our school." (Bruce Barnett, 17, Eden, left, and Charles Kimball, 19, Hazelton. Both attend Valley High School.)

Mother Protests Results Of Trial

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — A mother stood up in court and cried, "These people killed him after a judge dismissed homicide charges against three of four persons accused in the death of her son."

Paula Bell, also cried, "You are a whole pack of animals!" and the youthful defendant who had been charged with the Nov. 8, 1966 slaying of her son, Donald, 18, Police said he was shot during a gang fight, but Mrs. Bell said he was not a member of a gang.

When two witnesses refused to testify Thursday, Judge Samuel H. Rosenberg dismissed the homicide charges against Wayne Quarles, 16, Gregory Hawkins, 15, and Eunice Beeks, 21. He held a fourth, Demetrius Gordy, 17, without bail on murder charges.

Her yard is a profusion of blooms in the summer and meticulously clean from weeds as she busies herself with her roses and all kinds of flowers. Relatives of the area agitated with the open house and during the evening she received a telephone call from her only living brother, Virgil Penfold, who lives in Driggs.

Although she has no children of her own, as her one child died as an infant, she has raised several step-children as her own.

She is a favorite of the children in the community. On commenting on her age, Aunt Belle remarked that when she awoke in the morning on her 90th birthday Jan. 16 she "doesn't remember when I've ever felt better," with nary an ache or pain, something which many persons much younger than she.

Recalling the years, Mrs. Morgan said she can remember crossing Lee's Ferry with an ox team when she was about 4 years old. She was one of a family of eight born in Utah. She, her mother and later, Florence Cherrington, Oakland, Calif., are the only remaining members of the family.

Aunt Belle served a mission for the LDS church in England and was married by the late Fred Morgan, who died several years ago.

She retains her keen mind and wonderful sense of humor. When someone at the birthday party remarked about "doing this again" in 10 years, she retorted with a laugh, "they'll be a century apart."

Seeing celebrities pepped up the Sun Valley hospital treatment of Mrs. Everett (Mary) Ward, RICHFIELD, She happened to be in there at the same time as Joe Kennedy, son of the Robert Kennedys.

Little incidents caused some of the chance meetings. A girl wanted her cast photographed by Andy Williams so her mother paraded her in front of Mrs. Ward's signature. Mrs. Ward's only requirement for use of her pen was that Andy Williams bring it back. He did and she got his autograph.

She met Son, Kennedy in the hall and got a nod and a smile from Jimmy Stewart talking as well as Astronaut John Glenn. Hospitalized like Mrs. Ward with respiratory infections, were Mrs. John Glenn and Ann Sullivan. Mrs. Ward got to meet Mrs. Glenn and was pleased to be introduced when a water plant was sent to her by Mrs. Glenn as she left the hospital to join her family at the lodge.

A poem written by a HANSEN fifth grader has been published in a children's magazine, "The Golden Magazine," which is available on newsstands.

Kurt Daw, son of Mr. and Mrs. Kurt Daw, wrote the poem "The Blizzard" last year for the Federation of Women's Clubs poetry contest. At the urging of his teacher, Mrs. Virgil Wilson, who also was chairman of the local contest, the poem also was sent to several other publications.

And like any veteran writer, young Daw has had several copies of his poem, along with completed questionnaires to various publications, including "The Highlight," another children's magazine which is available only through the schools. It was published there.

Mrs. Daw's mother, Mrs. Fern Prior, who is a librarian at Ontario, Ore., also added her influence to urge the young author to submit his work. The poem was accepted by the "Idaho Farm" from which he received a monetary award.

According to Mrs. Daw, Kurt has a book of poems of his own composition, and she feels many of them are as good or better than the one which has been published.

THREE DAUGHTERS of Mr. and Mrs. Darrel Rawson, Rupert, from left, Lanette, Julie and Tamara, hold paper hearts advertising the annual Penny Parade, held throughout the LDS Church in February to support the work of the Primary Children's Hospital, Salt Lake City. Lanette underwent heart surgery when 18 months old.

Parade Of Pennies For LDS Primary Children's Hospital Is Scheduled

Primary workers throughout Magic Valley will be calling at homes in their respective wards soliciting funds to support the annual Penny Parade of the LDS Primary Children's Hospital in Salt Lake City.

Primary workers will be inviting anyone interested in the welfare of sick and crippled children to donate two pennies or more for each birthday anniversary for each member of the family.

Known as the annual "Penny Parade," funds that are collected are used for service cases only. Parents assume financial responsibility for private patients.

According to Mrs. Nayona Bird, chairman for the drive in Maladok Slacks, the Children's Hospital is a small world, which for the length of the child's stay becomes his home, school, Sunday School, Primary, recreation and corner store.

She noted that any child, regardless of age, religion or color, and who can be cured or rehabilitated to become a normal useful citizen is eligible for admittance to the hospital.

Last year some 6,652 patients from 27 states and three foreign countries were admitted to the hospital and of this number 928 were service cases. Of the average age of 87 patients per day in the hospital, an average of 55 were private patients and 32 were Primary service patients, Mrs. Bird said. One of every five patients admitted in 1967 were non-LDS, indicating the non-denominational appeal of the hospital.

The hospital is a non-profit organization and is operated by a board of trustees and the medical staff is appointed, chosen from the finest specialists available.

In 1911 leaders of the Primary organization of the church decided to support a few beds in the LDS hospital. The beds were used for Primary children whose parents were unable to pay for their hospital care. Money for the support of the facilities came from Primary children throughout the church. The purpose then, as it is now is to help sick or afflicted children get well and help well children know the joy and satisfaction that comes with giving from the heart.

As Primary grew, and as the need grew, it became evident that this facility was not large enough and a large home was purchased and remodeled.

This was used for the convalescent care of children. Any surgery was performed at the church approved payment for one-half the amount, the Primary Association was to raise the other half, which was one million dollars.

Each Primary worker in the church was asked to earn, not donate, one dollar toward the construction of the new wing. With the hope of getting 575,000, in actuality the primary workers earned $103,000. The balance was eventually pledged which were given to those people who contributed $100 or more, which swelled the fund to nearly $100,000.

Over the years the building fund grew, supplemented by generous donations and assistance from many groups who worked together to make the hospital a reality and in 1949 approval for the building was given and completion and dedication was held in 1952.

In 1964 authorization was given for a new wing which would make possible more complete services for children. The hospital is now a complete medical center for children. Besides additional facilities for the young patients, one floor of the new wing is now devoted exclusively to the care of teen-agers.

Among those treated at the Primary Children's Hospital in 1967 was young Bret Swan, 2-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Gary Swan, Oakley. Bret entered the hospital to undergo eye surgery, one of several he would reportedly need. Three muscles in the right eye were repaired during the surgery and such success was gained during the first operation that very little, if any further surgery will be needed, according to his mother.

She said when Bret entered the hospital he was given a "net acquainted" coloring-book which introduced him in verse to all the things he would encounter during his stay at the hospital. She noted the hospital decor was in keeping with young children, including the furniture as well as other features.

She reported that Bret was treated with old-fashioned loving care in a hospital that is as modern as tomorrow.

Delores Bartlome, 13-year-old daughter of Mrs. Darlene Bartlome, Gooding, has recently benefited from the Children's Hospital. Born with a congenital hip defect, Delores first entered the hospital when she was 3 years old. Now after numerous casts, and braces, and two operations, Delores is leading a normal life in Gooding. She returns to the hospital once a year for a check-up. Delores said she most liked the "way they treated you at the hospital."

Mrs. Bartlome reported that children, even sick ones, were always alert for something to do, and being in a wheelchair had its advantages, with patients drag racing, with the permission of the nurses. She noted school was conducted in the hospital every day for those who could attend or Delores was able to keep up with her classes.

Volunteer workers came each day to help the children learn to make things, to read to them, and entertain them generally. Delores is now in the seventh grade at Fraham Junior High School.

When Traces Ann Schellin, Twin Falls, was born she spent the first six weeks of her life on the fifth floor of the LDS Hospital as a "preemie." When she was less than 3 months old it was discovered her head was growing rapidly and she was admitted to the hospital again.

After many tests it was decided that two bloodclots were causing pressure on the brain and surgery was necessary if her life was to be saved. According to Mrs. Schellin they were without medical insurance and had exhausted all their savings during the previous stay in the hospital and they were interviewed for Primary service. Because the operation was to be performed in the LDS Hospital they were given the Primary service there.

All stories should have a happy ending. Mrs. Schellin said and Traces now is a normal happy 8-year-old, with no memory of her stay in the hospital. She returns to the hospital each year for tests and a visit with the neurosurgeon and the staff at the Primary Children's Hospital.

"Without the Primary Pediatric Traces wouldn't be the happy normal girl she is now, her mother relates. "And we are thrilled to have had the opportunity to be one of the families helped by the hospital."

A Rupert girl, Lanette Rawson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Darrel Rawson, has benefited from the services of the Children's Hospital. Lanette had open heart surgery in the LDS Hospital when she was 18 months old, and is a normal healthy 8-year-old today.

Mrs. Rawson said they were interviewed by the board of assistance at the Children's Hospital, even though the surgery was performed in the LDS Hospital due to lack of facilities at the Children's Hospital.

On Sept. 14, 1967, Bryant Stringham, son of Mr. and Mrs. Melvin Stringham, Oakley, was admitted to the Primary Children's Hospital for eye surgery.

According to his mother, he was so pleased with the atmosphere at the hospital, he is looking forward to returning for continued treatment in March or April of this year.

Mrs. Stringham said there were children from all over the world in the hospital and like nationalities were put together when possible, with a nurse who could understand them. She said the playground was supervised by volunteer workers, usually older people and children are encouraged to call them Grandma and Grandpa.

During the dedication of the Primary Children's Hospital, David O. McKay, president of the church, said, "The Primary Children's Hospital is a blessing in thousands of children in need of medical skill and treatment. It is a monument to all who believe in doing gracious deeds to their fellow men, meriting the approval of the Savior who said, 'These deeds shall thy memorial be. Fear not, thou didst them unto me.'"

To Paraphrase Jam Jar: With Name Like Domowitz He Has Got To Be Good

A challenging teacher is said to be one of the great and memorable factors in the life of a student. If that is true, the most remembered teacher ever to come out of Twin Falls High School might well be Julius (Julie) Domowitz.

A descendant of Jewish Polish stock out of Brooklyn and transplanted in Twin Falls by way of California, Mr. Domowitz rather fills the bill as Twin Falls' answer to the Brooklyn Dodger, old Greek. Mr. Domowitz has a few people around town who wouldn't mind mixing up the hemlock. But none of them are students at the high school.

A well-educated person, Mr. Domowitz is an insatiable reader who evidently devours every magazine from Life to Sports Illustrated in Harper's Bazaar, not to mention a couple hundred books a year. Blessed with a great curiosity and a need to know, he is quick to pick the brains of anyone he encounters who he feels may know more about a subject than he does.

If the subject really grabs his fancy he immerses himself in research. The upshot then becomes a man who has more than a nodding acquaintance with any subject that arises from sports to international situations.

Few people realize that Mr. Domowitz has them overmatched at their first meeting and within a few minutes can dominate them with a shrug of his shoulder.

With the ability to be very complex, he remains very simple. He is what he is and if someone doesn't want to accept him as such, Mr. Domowitz hardly minds. It is this approach that leads the unwary to underestimate him.

For instance, when Twin Falls High School wanted to offer French, Mr. Domowitz was the only qualified instructor. When economics was added, he was the only one with a course book on at UCLA, and headed the job. When the high school principalship opened, he was one of the few qualified, but, as he says without rancor, "like they say at the race track about the horse that ran dead last all the way, I never got a call."

The thing that sets Mr. Domowitz apart and puts him in that "unforgettable" class is his ability to convert humor and a quick wit into a vital teaching force. He believes a key to success in a driven home with a smile will be better remembered than one with footnotes and a long list of references. It is not that he can't be deadly serious, it is simply his command of his topics combined with his marvelous mind can make things such as stock reports interesting.

"I took government from Mr. Domowitz," recalls Bob Magee, formerly of Twin Falls. "It didn't seem like we studied government much at the time but right now I remember more about that subject than any I ever took. He evidently crammed me full of government and at the time I didn't realize it." Essentially, Mr. Domowitz is pretty special in that his background has precluded prejudice and bigotry. As stated before, he came from Jewish Polish stock, spent several years teaching in a predominantly Negro high school in Los Angeles where he absorbed all that culture could bring his way and now is getting along like a native waster. But it also should be pointed out that he enjoyed the Arab army jokes last summer with a little more relish than most, too.

Mr. Domowitz is a retired Brooklyn with a burning interest in the city. Like the Brooklyn Dodger, there were 54 ways to sneak into Ebbets Field and I knew them all," he says. Later he broadened his scope to boxing where he, and all his Jewish community friends, found a real hero. When the Negroes of Harlem once began offering odds on an upcoming Negro fight against the Jewish hero, Mr. Domowitz figured on taking them for a week's pay — $17.50.

"The bet was $12.50; $2.50 went for a good dinner in the city. I showed up proactively for $2.50 for getting into the fight," he recalls. "The dinner was the only thing I enjoyed. That was Sugar Ray Robinson's first fight in New York!"

From there Mr. Domowitz entered the service for World War II, showed a proclivity for French and went to the University of Idaho by the government to become an interpreter. He could play a little football and after the war he returned to Idaho on a scholarship, playing football in the great Idaho upset of Stanford.

The next year he was suddenly thrown into a game as a line-backer for the first time and surprised even himself by intercepting a pass. "I took about a half hour to get the play and I sneered me. It was the first time I ever carried the ball. The only thing I could think of to do was look up at the official and yell 'he held me!'"

He always wanted to be a guard, but he was somebody else's man and that was one of the few things that eluded him. "I couldn't catch and I couldn't hit," he says.

Also at the university he met his wife, Dorothy Van Engelen, and in the way Twin Falls caught in his life or vice-versa.

Before that, however, he taught at Los Angeles Jefferson High School, about 95 per cent colored. He was sitting in a conference of athletic greats. He first knew the coach, Willie Davis as a broad-jumper, singer Johnny Mathis as a high jumper.

Despite his love for sports, Mr. Domowitz always has had trouble getting along with basketball. But suddenly one year a late resignation by the regular coach found Mr. Domowitz assigned the hoop job. How does a basketball coach who doesn't really like his sport get along? "We were 25-1," he reports, searching the disbelieving eyes of his listeners. Then he explained "I had McGill" Bill (The Hill) McGill went on to be an All-American at Utah and led the nation in scoring. That season has special memories for Mr. Domowitz. "We'd been practicing about six weeks when McGill came up to me one day, and said, 'Hey, coach, what was your name again?'" He put everything into the job. "When we had the ball I yelled 'Okay, set it up and move the ball.' When they had the ball I said 'hands up' and 'defense.' All—hands up—'I had McGill—'what's the score?' He'd told me and if we were ahead — and we always were. — 'I'd any 'okay, we'll do the same thing in the last half.'"

But inevitably, he had to come to this. "Everytime we had a couple days off, Thanksgiving, Christmas, Easter, summer, we'd have to come to Twin Falls. I was making about $2,000 a year more down there but the trips were wiping it out so we decided to move here," he remembers.

These interim trips had a side benefit. A city boy, Mr. Domowitz didn't bother about learning to drive until one day his wife suggested they buy a car in Twin Falls and drive it back to Los Angeles.

"I said, okay, and she asked what kind? Now what I knew about cars was nothing. I knew there were different makes. I'd read the ads—but I didn't know there were different styles. 'Hold this shirt,' I wanted a car, and he looked at me like I was nuts."

"After we bought it, those mechanics really took me, too. I'd go in for a tank of gas and they'd find something that would cost me $25 more. In fact, one time I took the car in for an oil change and lube job. When I went back to get it, the mechanic told me the muffler was about shot. I figured that was enough. I said 'Okay, we'll look at it and then I went around and looked at the car in for a smile. 'After that every time I went into that garage everyone started drifting away from their work and toward me. They all wanted to see what the mechanic genius was going to come up with next.'"

But finally the car was purchased and Mr. Domowitz learned how to drive on the way home. He remembers he couldn't have learned as fast as he thought as one day, while giving some students a ride, one in the back seat moaned, "Coach, you drive like you own lots of cars."

He had only one problem the first year in Twin Falls, confessing one fall night, "all these white kids look alike to me." But he surmounted it and immediately became a hit with the kids. Now he is firmly an Idahoan. His oldest daughter, Susan, is a freshman at Michigan State and Janet is a junior at the high school. Fred, a sixth

Based on reports from 122 cities, the pneumonia and influenza rose and again exceeded the normally expected number in most of the United States, the National Communicable-Disease Center reported Friday.

The largest increase was in the west south-central region, where there were 208 deaths compared to 133 in the previous week. An increase of 23 deaths for a weekly total of 102 was reported in New England.

The only significant decline was in the West North Central Region where the 97 reported deaths were a drop of 34 from the previous week.

State Aide Addresses Power Meet

BURLEY — Louise Shaddock, Boise, spoke at the Utility Light and Power firm's 52nd annual meeting Wednesday at the View LDS Church.

Miss Shaddock, director of the state's Department of Commerce and Development, gave a briefing of the activities which had to be completed to obtain the three Scout Jamborees at Pezart State Park.

"The Scout functions in our state have put Idaho on the world map," she stated.

The Girl Scout encampment brought 69,000 visitors into Idaho followed by the first International LDS Boy Scout Jamboree and last year the first American World Jamboree for Boy Scouts brought in 91,000 visitors.

In 1969 National Jamboree will involve between 45 and 60 thousand boys which the state will host.

"The National Jamboree alone may be worth as much as $9.8 million to our state," she stated.

Others on the program were Peggy Hanks, who gave a dance number; Mr. and Mrs. Nell Anderson sang a duet accompanied by Ilona Mal, and Irma Anderson directed community singing, accompanied by Mrs. Rex Gerratt.

Master of Ceremonies was Glen Larsen, Carl Mellin, vice president, conducted the meeting and Raymond Searle gave the prayer.

COMPLETION REPORT REVIEWED BY Roger Williams, chief of the game division of the Idaho Fish and Game Department, (left), and Dr. Paul Dalke, retiring unit leader of the Idaho Cooperative Wildlife Research Unit, Moscow. As a graduate student, Williams is one of many young men who finished his training under Dalke at the Idaho Field during the past two decades. Prior to that, Dr. Dalke served as unit leader in Missouri for 10 years, when Dr. A. Starker Leopold (son of Aldo Leopold) of wildlife management earned his Ph.D. Degree early in the cooperative wildlife research program in this country.

Wildlife Research Unit Provides Aid For Graduate Student, Outdoorsman

By JIM HUMBIRD
Idaho Fish-Game Department
One of the odd quirks in the history of graduate schools comes when laymen are as eager as scientists to lay hands on a technical thesis. Such is the case now when hundreds of Idaho outdoorsmen from all walks of life are as impatient as professional people to read a treatise that is based on a three-year ecological study of the mountain lion on Big Creek and the Middle Fork of the Salmon River.

Just completed by Maurice Hornocker of McCall, it was in partial fulfillment of requirements for a Ph. D. Degree in wildlife management for the University of British Columbia. Sponsors include the American Museum of Natural History, Boone and Crockett Club, the New York Zoological Society, the University of Idaho at Moscow, the Idaho Fish and Game Department, the U. S. Forest Service, and the U. S. Department of the Interior.

Systematic field observation of this kind is one phase of the broad scope of learning called research. Some biologists claim that the best way to find out what they want to know is to ask the birds, mammals and fish. Some graduate students do go into the back country and virtually live for one, two or three years with the animals, individually or in groups as a means of collecting verifiable raw data to be used as part of scholarly theses.

AS YOUR MINISTER SEES IT

By DONALD L. HOFFMAN
Minister, First Christian Church
An inscription written on the wall of an Egyptian tomb 4000 years ago states that the youth are "going to the dogs." Yes, in every age the "pups" have grown up; then they have turned upon the next generation of "pups!" It is also said, "You can't teach an old dog new tricks." It is true that the "old dogs" can teach their tricks to the "young pups."

Asburys" of every city, the irresponsible "kids" of every village and town. And we have to admit that there are those youth who seem bent on "going to the dogs" as quickly as possible.

Just today the news reports the Minuteman deserter from the American army has sought asylum in Sweden. True, this is news. But the news media fail to tell of the scores of youth who the same day reported to their draft boards VOLUNTEERING for service, not having waited to be called up in the draft.

Church May Step Into River Dispute

ST. MARIES, Idaho (AP)—Sen. Frank Church, D-Idaho, will be asked next week to step into the dispute over proposed dredging of a section of the St. Joe River near here.

St. Maries Mayor Otto Holstein said Church is scheduled to make a day-long appearance here Tuesday and will be asked then to help block the proposed dredging operation.

The Idaho Mining Co. of Texas has asked the Idaho Land Board at Boise to permit dredging in the Red river District to recover pearls and gold.

The proposal has brought strong opposition from conservation and outdoors groups in the region, contending such an operation would spoil the stream for fishing and beauty. The property is inside the St. Joe National Forest.

Holstein said the State Land Board "doesn't seem to believe it has adequate authority to rule in the case. If so, we'll have to go to Senator Church to heat this thing."

Church is scheduled to hold an open-door meeting with the public at the courthouse from 2-4 p.m. Tuesday and that night will address the Chamber of Commerce banquet.

The Land Board has scheduled a public hearing on the dredging proposal in Wallace Feb. 2. Meanwhile, Holstein predicted Church's appearance here may be touchy because a former St. Maries resident is leading a drive to have the senator recalled by petition.

Gene Milcek, who was a dog-catcher here last summer for about two months and now is reported to be a resident of Spokane, Wash., has headed several attempts to gather signatures on a petition seeking Church's recall.

FBI Arrests 7 Men Over Robbery Plot

SEATTLE (AP)—FBI agents arrested seven men Friday and accused them of a bizarre plot to dynamite a police station and power plant to divert police before trying to rob four suburban banks.

The FBI in Washington said several of those arrested were members of the Minutemen, which the agency described as an anti-Communist group.

Howeater, Robert DePugh of Norborne, Mo., head of the Minutemen, denied that any of the men are currently Minutemen members.

An FBI spokesman said the men, parked in two automobiles loaded with weapons and explosives, were seized shortly before the chain of events was to have begun.

The seven were arraigned before U.S. Commissioner Walter Reeburg Jr. on charges of conspiracy to rob a bank. Bail ranged from $500 to $30,000 and by late afternoon only one man had posted bail.

time let's remember that it is the older generation that has sold the marijuana, the LSD, the heroin, and the opium that has "rocked" our youth. It is the older folk who have stirred up the younger with their "peace-nik" banners, their civil disobedience marches, their "burn-your-draftcard" demonstrations, and their riots by the streets.

Truly, for every army deserter, there are thousands of American youth just as loyal to our country as our adults, maybe more so. For every "hippie" there are thousands of clean, wholesome American youth who respect their respectable parents; who respect high ideals, who respect the rights of others, and who respect the laws of our land.

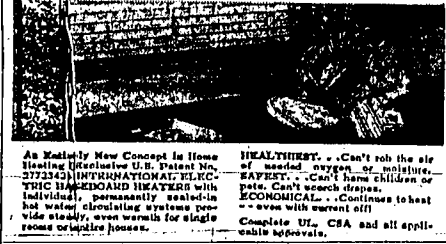

We need to remember that the older generation has made some of our youth become the wrong kind of citizen. But we also need to look at the many fine older citizens who work in the Boy Scout-Girl Scout programs, the Campfire Girls, the YMCA, YWC, various civic and youth organizations, and in the Churches of our land, all trying to help our youth advance "in wisdom and stature, and in favor with God and man."

If we had more parents, more citizens interested there would be less and less in the news about the wrong kind of activities among our youth.

For the youth themselves, if they do read this column: The Apostle Paul wrote to a young man of the first century A.D., "Do not let any one look down on you because you are young, but be an example for the believers, in your speech, your conduct, your love, your faith, and purity. . . . Practice these things and give yourself to them, in order that your progress may be seen by all" (I Tim., 4:12, 15, "Good News For Modern Man").

This Sunday, January 28, is the beginning of "Youth Week." Let's let the youth tell us their youth, the vast majority of whom are fine, clean Christian people, that we respect them, and will do our best to help them to be better than we were in our youthful generation. And above all, let's set them a good example as active Church members, citizens of our community, and loyal Americans.

Protest Food

PASADENA, Calif. (AP)—Students staged a "Declaration of Indignation" and then plunked about 30 trays of tuna casserole and squash on the floor Friday at the administration hall at California Institute of Technology.

The students, who said they were fed up with cafeteria food, left their lunches in front of the office of President Lap A. DuBridge.

The demonstrators said meals are of poor quality and poorly prepared.

Graduate students such as these have made obvious technical contributions to the field of Idaho wildlife management for the past two decades and a review of these projects is revealing. But students have made significant contributions in other ways. One of those is their help in getting general public recognition of wildlife management as a profession. Modern methods and the professional approach to management problems owe much to a host of young graduate students. The role of college-based research in fields other than wildlife management has been recognized for years. Its role in game and fish management is not so well known.

Idaho's Cooperative Wildlife Research Unit was formed at Moscow in 1947. The key agencies supporting it are the Idaho Fish and Game Department, the U. S. Fish and Wildlife Service, the Wildlife Management Institute, and the University of Idaho. Ten similar units already had been organized on other campuses over the nation.

There are now 18 cooperative wildlife research units throughout the country. In addition, Idaho's Cooperative Fishery Unit, one of 23 in the country, was established at Moscow four years ago. The first of these was started at Logan, Utah, in 1961.

In both cases, the main purpose is to train graduate students in fish and wildlife work, while conducting field research that probably would not get done in any other way, and disseminating information to the public.

Dr. Paul Dalke, an Arizona native, came to the state 20 years ago and organized the Idaho Cooperative Wildlife Research Unit. Prior to that he served as unit leader in Missouri for a decade, where Dr. A. Starker Leopold earned his Ph.D. Degree during the early days of the program. Aldo Leopold, "father" of wildlife management, watched the progress of his son's development with keen interest. Dr. Dalke helped initiate the cooperative wildlife research unit program in the United States in Connecticut in 1935, where he worked 2 1/2 years. He will spend the bulk of his time on lecture tours which will take him to the other 17 cooperative wildlife research units from Alaska to Texas, while on this "visiting scientist" tour.

Some former students — and some are still here now — include Roger Williams, chief of game division, Idaho Fish and Game Department; Tom Lege, currently with the department in game research; Dunno Pyralis, in charge of sage grouse research in Montana; Elwood Bizeau, who recently resigned as game-bird supervisor to accept a staff position with the Idaho Unit; Stewart Brandberg, director of the national Wilderness Society; and Dwight Smith, professor of wildlife management, Colorado State University.

Three years ago, an evaluation of the Idaho Unit effort and project findings was made by Levi Mohler, research coordinator of the Idaho Fish and Game Department, and a team composed of Elwood Bizeau, Roger Williams and Charles Haynes. It was found that the majority of Unit projects have devoted their main efforts toward developing information needed by the Idaho management program. Most of the projects dealt with such things as animal behavior, habitat, limiting factors, life history, productivity, food habits, and distribution of various species of Idaho wildlife.

In addition, diseases and parasites, predation, and game population turnover received some attention in at least five different projects. Information from several projects helped management eliminate a costly unproductive or inefficient procedure. Findings which contributed importantly in this regard include big game salting; predation; range and nesting cover; range management and big game; parasites; Gray's Lake waterfowl management; upland game bird management; beaver management; development or refinement of techniques; and others.

There is no doubt that Idaho's liberal seasons and bag limits on various species, and open seasons on many species which were protected from hunting a few years ago, reflect in part the results of the unit projects which have contributed to better understanding of the factors which help the natural production of game and the harvest potential.

a way with words

With the human heart occupying so much of the news these days, it might be interesting to take a closer look at that most vital of organs:

According to most reports that have analyzed the human heart, it is normal if it beats approximately 100,000 times every day, a million times every 10 days, and between 36 and 38 million times every year. Every hour your heart expends enough energy to carry a 150-pound man from the street level to the roof of a three-story building. Every day it pushes from 5 to 10 tons of blood (depending on the size of your body) through your blood vessels. If you attain your allotted three score and 10 years, or more, in the course of those 70 or so years, your heart will have exerted enough force to lift the world's largest battleship 14 feet out of the water.

And for all of you that hold that the human heart is really the seat of emotion and love rather than just an efficient pump, and therefore are somewhat touchy about transplants and the like, consider the following from a source, if you'll pardon the expression, close to the hearts of many of you: "Out of the heart proceed evil thoughts, murders, adulteries, fornications, thefts, false witness, blasphemies." (Matt. 15:19)

And even Sir Thomas Browne, an English author and physician in the 1600's said that, "The heart of man is the place the Devil dwells in."

So the next time you hear someone say, "Have a heart!" and you're not in a hospital—turn it down!

Someone was kind enough to place on our desk what must be the world's most wonderful typographical error. It was committed by a small English firm that was given the job of printing a batch of placards advertising a cruise ship's eighty-six day around-the-world voyage. The placards were all called back, except those which became priceless collector's items, when it was belatedly discovered that the advertising promised eighty sex days.

Someone once figured out that if one person were to attempt to paint the Golden Gate Bridge at San Francisco alone it would take 150 years to do the job. I don't know who would be stupid enough to try to paint it himself, unless it would be the guy who thought up this whole thing.

Have you realized that lit the modern day and age it is nearly impossible to buy a "small" size anything anymore. Drinks at a movie now come in three sizes: large, gigantic and tremendous. Candy bars come in large and unmanageable. Soap and detergents are sold in containers that run the gamut from the large family size to cardboard bathtubs that you need help with to get them out of the store. And the sad part is sometimes you just don't want to eat a quarter pound pecan log, or a family-sized box of jelly beans.

It will be February soon, in fact, in about four days. And February has one unique distinction, besides the fact that it is indeed February. It is the only month so far since the world began that has had no full moon. Aren't you thrilled? Well, you should be. It happened, as a freak of nature in the year 1866. January and March that year did the robbing as they both had two full moons. But don't wait for the next month with no full moons—and I'm sure you won't—because it is not due to occur for 2,500,000 more years. Care to wait around?

Our tastes do not run to Country and Western music, but it does seem to come up with some of the weirdest song titles in the book. Taken from a recent edition (February) of a country song magazine are these gems:

- I Thought I Heard a Heart Break Last Night.
  - The Only Way Out Is to Walk Over Me.
  - Her Unwee-Love and the Baby.
  - My Uncle Used to Love Me But She Died.
  - A Girl Don't Have to Drink to Have Fun.
  - Heaven Help the Working Girl.
  - I Wouldn't Take Her to a Dog Fight.
  - How Fast Them Trucks Can Go.
- And then daddy of them all—My Can Do Can't Keep Up With My Want To.
- Now those are song titles. (Or is it, "Now those are song titles?")

For all of you "let's-get-away-for-the-winter" crowd, take note of an ad which appeared in the latest issue of "The New Yorker" and reads, "Honolulu water-front house for rent. Charming 3-bed-room, 2 1/2-bath house with swimming beach and superb view of Diamond Head and mountains across Maunaloa Bay. In quiet residential area, 12 miles from downtown. Entertainment patio and formal dining room. You can lease it or rent it. The rent is only a paltry $650 a month. You better grab it up before the price changes!"

Bauer Kept As President Of Paul Unit

Idaho Chamber of Commerce, with Loyd Merrill, alternate. Mr. Bauer is also a delegate from the Paul Chamber to the South Idaho Chamber. Leonard Martin, chairman of the Blaine County School Board, and Dale Franham, director of county school buses, discussed the feasibility of setting up school bus turn-off on Highway 25 between Paul and Rupert, which would keep the flow of traffic moving during school bus route stops. It was reported that during the meeting of the chamber last week, Blaine Sessions, district engineer for the Department of Highways, said this bus turn-off project could be worked out in conjunction with the four-lane highway that is to be built

Cougar Becomes Tranquil Trophy

UNIVERSITY OF IDAHO, natural history, Boone and Moscow — Like man, he stalks Crockett Club and the New York Zoological Society. Working in the rugged Idaho Primitive Area near Big Creek, Hornocker captured 30 cats, some as many as 14 times for a total of 116 different captures. In tracking the big cats, Hornocker walked more than 3,700 miles and 14 mountains ranging from 3,500 to 7,000 feet. To capture the cougars, Hornocker used three hound dogs to track and tree them, and a tranquilizer gun to quiet them. The tranquilizer gun, developed by Hornocker, resembles a shotgun and is fired by a 50-cal. charge. The final step is to mark the drugged lion by tattooing or with a collar for future reference when recaptured or killed. "We had a couple of close calls trying to get the drugged cat out of rotten trees or trees hanging over bluffs, but one incident was particularly close. It happened when I first began the study. In the beginning, I used an immobilizing drug instead of the tranquilizer to quiet the animals. I shot this 155-pound cat in a pine tree and started up the tree to get him down. When I was about 75 feet up the tree and just a few feet from the cat, the drug started to wear off. The cougar took a swipe at me, but I was able to catch his tail and throw him from the tree. He landed in some deep snow, and my partner, Wilbur Willes, threw a rope around him. That's when I changed drugs," he stated. According to Hornocker, "The cougar is an important animal, and one we can't afford to lose. At one time, cougars roamed all of the United States. But today, they occupy only a small portion of that territory. "Many persons worry about cougars when they go camping or fishing, but their fears are unfounded. Cougars are generally shy animals, and don't want anything to do with man; and with the abundant natural food supply, there is no threat. In fact, the neighbor's dog poses more of a real threat than the cougar," Hornocker stated. "The importance of this study is to show the cougar's vital role in maintaining nature's proper balance. Until such time as the surplus deer and elk can be removed by hunters, bringing these populations into balance with their winter food supply, then, cougar predation will remain beneficial," Hornocker concluded.

POWERFULLY BUILT and highly intelligent, the cougar is one of America's most sought-after trophies. He was also the subject of a study conducted by Dr. Maurice G. Hornocker.

Dr. Hornocker studied him during three winters to learn of his effect on deer and elk populations. The study was conducted in Idaho's Primitive Area.

DR. HORNOCKER PREPARES a syringe full of a tranquilizing drug to aid in capturing cougars. The tranquilizer gun, developed by Hornocker, resembles a shotgun and is fired by a 50-cal. charge.

A DRUGGED 50-POUND cougar is carried up an incline by Dr. Hornocker in the rugged Idaho Primitive Area. Following capture, Hornocker marked the cats by either tattooing or with a collar for identification when recaptured or killed.

"Weather Girl" Enjoys Being Girl In Vietnam

By JOHN LENGEL
SAIGON (AP) — Somehow, in the massive build-up of men and the equipment of war, they've happily found room for that lowest every considerable-curve blond American institution: the weather girl. She's Bobbie Oberhansly, 23, Red Cross girl, port blonde, and confessed do-gooder who once worked as a secretary in San Francisco, picking up skin-diving and a terrific frog-weather girl. Bobbie came to Vietnam 11 months ago. "The men here bond over backyards. They turn into real gentlemen. In the States it seems like they'll never open a door for you. I enjoy being a girl here," says Bobbie.

It's from Bobbie that GIs watching her television show in the scorching heat of the delta learn: "In Denver today it was 30 degrees and cloud-out. My five minutes each week-day night on Armed Forces Television also covers the weather in Vietnam and rest of the world, throughout Asia. There are cued with a sponsor's announcer's voice saying, "Let R-and-R open the door to excitement." "Then it's" Bobbie, saying good night to all of you, and especially the heart of the delta. Battalion of the "100th"—the night's special unit. There's a big smile, a fade on the screen. That's all.

But there is more to it than just five minutes of weather, and Bobbie's host, Lt. Col. Arthur James, Alexandria, Va., puts it this way: "You don't see many girls like Bobbie here. She helps morale. She could stand in front of the camera and read the telephone book. When she smiles into the camera, 'Sure, people are interested in the weather. But if we put a corporal or sergeant up there, interest in this show would drop to zilch.' Bobbie, who gets several fan letters each day, knows what is going on.

"The letters say I never project a sexy image. I seem to remind everyone of the girl next door. They see something of their little sister in me. They think I'm a prize, which couldn't be further from the truth." One letter came from the wife of an airman who works in the control tower at Tan Son Nhut air base. The fellow in the tower had "adopted" Bobbie. Apparently, the woman asked Bobbie to remind her husband that his wife and children still loved him very much. Other letters have camera tips and advice on what to wear. "I used to wear big, cool, tent-like dresses. Now I wear this for the show," she said indicating sandals, and a miniskirt and blouse which astoundingly followed every considerable-curve 30-24-36.

Bobbie—a nickname for Barbara—was raised in Tacoma, Wash. She attended Brigham Young University for one year and worked as a secretary in San Francisco, picking up skin-diving and a terrific frog-weather girl.

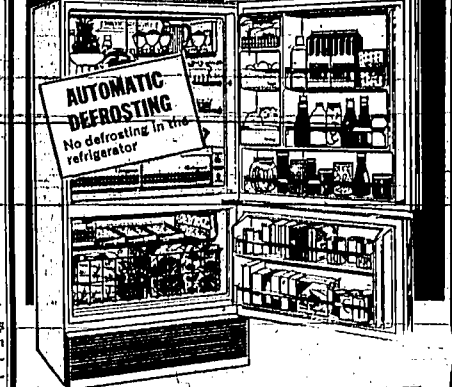

"The men here bond over backyards. They turn into real gentlemen. In the States it seems like they'll never open a door for you. I enjoy being a girl here," says Bobbie.

Doctors Develop 'Blindfold' To Help Cut Danger Of Transplant Rejections

By BURL OSBORNE
DENVER, Colo. (AP) — Doctors here have developed another tool—a sort of biological blindfold—to help lessen the great danger of rejection following organ transplants, without killing the patient with massive drug doses.

This new serum, antilymphocyte globulin, or simply ALG, already has been used with impressive results in kidney and liver transplants at the University of Colorado Medical Center. It may prove to be useful in future heart transplants.

The serum was developed by the transplant research team at the medical center. It works on white blood cells called lymphocytes—the body's microscopic warriors that fight off strangers, whether they be germs bringing infection or the protein of an organ transplanted from another person.

ALG "blindfolds" these lymphocytes to the presence of the new organ, rendering them incapable of rejecting the new kidney or liver.

The doctors say ALG is no panacea—"there's nothing magical about it," said one—but they see it as a promising step along the way to controlling rejection, the big bugaboo facing any transplant, whether it be kidney or heart.

Though some questions about ALG remain unanswered, the Denver team, headed by Dr. Thomas E. Starzl, reports the survival rate of kidney patients one year after transplant—with related donors—has risen from 70 to 85 per cent. About 60 kidney patients have received ALG since mid-1966.

Five liver transplant patients were given the injection. Three still are living, the only known survivors of such operations. In both kidney and liver studies, the fatalities were not related to the serum.

Preliminary work on heart transplant is under way with five liver transplant patients here, but the transplant team has emphasized it is preliminary, and no immediate attempt with man is foreseen.

However, Dr. Gilbert Blount Jr., head of the university's cardiology department, said in a speech in Texas the university should be capable of conducting a heart transplant by spring.

Dr. Christian Barnard, who has performed two human heart transplants in South Africa, said he and his associates "have thought a lot about this serum. We have carried out a lot of experiments with it, but have not used it clinically. There is still a lot of uncertainty and danger in it. In a new operation we do not want to risk complications."

The most common weapon used to head off rejection of new organs have been the drugs azathioprine and prednisone.

But massive doses of prednisone can open the way to diabetes, decalcification, ulcers, Cushing's—Bisness and high blood pressure. It can mask infection until the body is ravaged, and throw body chemistrials drastically out of balance, azathioprine, or "imuran," is also heavily toxic in large doses.

Doctors here found that by giving ALG just before and up to four months after transplant, the prednisone dosage often could be halved, and the amount of azathioprine significantly reduced without harming function of the new kidney.

Antilymphocyte globulin is obtained by injecting horses with human lymph nodes, spleens and thymus, then extracting the serum from the immunized animal and purifying it.

Twin Falls Times-News A-7 Sunday, Jan. 28, 1968

The drawbacks to its use include evidence that overdoses can lead to nephritis in the transplanted kidney. That is the same disease that in many cases destroyed the patient's own kidneys. However, biopsies of the first eight kidneys implanted in patients getting ALG showed no sign of this.

ALG, like other known immunosuppressive agents, is not selective. While it dampens the body's capability of fighting off

Mrs. Mabbutt Leaves For New Position

SHOSHONE—Mrs. Helen Mabbutt and daughter, Andrea, left Shoshone Wednesday afternoon for their new home in Pocatello.

Mrs. Mabbutt, who has lived here for 32 years and has taught school in this area for 23 years, has accepted a position with the Learning Laboratory for the Diagnosis and Treatment of Learning Disorders.

In recent years here she has been well-known and recognized for her work with the exceptional child and a class which she has taught in the Gooding school system.

Mrs. Mabbutt began teaching in Lincoln County in the Cottonwood District in 1937. She taught in Shoshone for several years and for the past 10 years has taught in Gooding.

She attended Alhambra Normal school and received her B.A. degree from ISU. She spent four summers at San Francisco State earning her special education credentials. She also has Librarian's credentials from the University of Utah. Summer school teaching includes a workshop for BYU and ISU.

Paris Spring, Summer Style Showing Held

By LUCIE NOEL
PARIS (AP) — Pierre Cardin presented an extensive and sensational collection at the spring and summer fashion showing Friday. It was brimful of ideas, proving that real haute couture is his specialty.

"I am no revolutionary," he says. "I am just ahead of everyone else by 10 years. To me, it is surprising to see women dressing conventionally and living in modern cities and keeping up a modern tempo. I am thinking of the future, of cities with architecture like Brasilia. The violence of our age explains my violent colors."

Capes are a leading theme. For street wear they top a blouse and skirt made of a softer or ray plaid tweed. For afternoon they become a cape dress. Fabrics favored were soft wool crepes, in light pastels.

The collection opened with a series of silver kid capotes with matching boots. Topcoats, windjackets, suits, capes with hems in red or green, and shaggy millinery in rhomboids and platinum caps, stepped from a stage made to resemble a flying saucer.

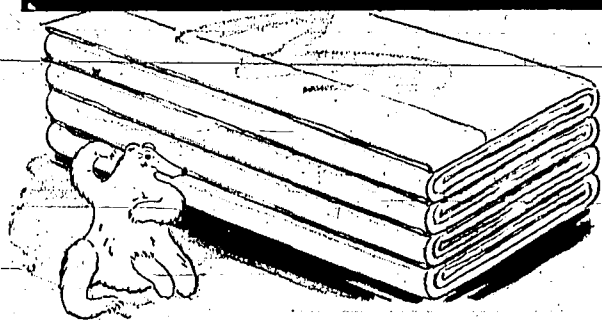

Next came a group of checked plastic raincoats with goblin hoods—yellow, red and brown. Cardin likes juxtaposing the same idea—in different colors. In groups, A dress with three black stripes edging the neckline, armholes and flared hemline was shown in six different colors.

Fabulously beaded gowns glittering with jeweled embroidery are shown, one made entirely of 24,000 Japanese cultured pearls.

Smell Of Old Russia Lingers In One Popular Soviet Institution--Pawnshop

By MICHAEL JOHNSON
MOSCOW (AP) — The smell of old Russia lingers in at least one popular Soviet institution—the pawnshop.

The "Soviet man" depends on the pawnshop for extra cash just as his pre-revolutionary ancestors did.

"We'll take furs, radios, almost anything of value," said Aleksey M. Zolotov in an interview in his bleak, cubbyhole office in a Moscow industrial district.

Zolotov heads the sales end of the Moscow pawnshop system. The lending is done at separate receiving stations.

On a winter afternoon, the pawnshop just off Zolotov's office was jammed with Russian workers and their wives.

"Yes, We Have No Bannanas" blared in the background as a young man tried out a big tape recorder selling for the equivalent of $46.

Other customers sniffed used clothing, inspected cameras and shouted for service.

The odor was musty and the lighting was bad, giving the place the feel of a scene in an old Russian novel.

Communism has not eliminated the necessity for the pawnshop. It survived the Bolshevik Revolution and is thriving today. The Peking People's Daily newspaper, recently cited the pawnshops as evidence that the Soviet Union is a capitalist country in disguise.

The pawnshop is just one step short of setting up a stock market in Moscow, the newspaper contended.

But the pawn system as conducted here is defensible as a Communist institution. Zolotov is only the manager, not the owner. His profits go to the state.

Sitting under a portrait of Lenin, founder of the Soviet state, Zolotov explained that Soviet people today must often use the pawnshop system to finance vacations and large purchases.

If they don't pay back the money within four months, their hocked goods are trucked out to his store and put on sale.

Zolotov said he gradually lowers the price on slow-moving items until they are sold.

Most of his merchandise seemed expensive, by capitalist standards and considering that the ruble is officially worth $1.11.

A broken-down refrigerator was priced at 170 rubles. Tiny-screen, used television sets went for 17 to 75 rubles and shaggy fur coats were as high as 357.

New synthetic fiber raincoats, imported from Italy, were on sale here because of slight manufacturing defects. They went for 65 rubles. A bicycle with two flat tires was priced at 9.

Customers are willing to pay these prices for used goods because such items are scarce and even more expensive in Moscow department stores.

Book Review

"THEIR SHINING ELDORADO"
By Elspeth Huxley

Armchair travelers will welcome a recently published passport to a land that is at once brutal and mysteriously beautiful.

"Their Shining Eldorado" by Elspeth Huxley, is the happy result of a four-month extensive exploration of the continent down under, and it promises to be a standard work on Australia for years to come. Vividly written, of absorbing interest, has escaped the author's observation, and her style is pleasant and easy, laced with bits of humor, and replete with excellent descriptive passages. And for those who have never heard of "pompines" or "pinkroosts" there is a helpful glossary of Aussie terms at the end.

It is unlikely that any book on Australia could be dull. Here is a continent stigmatized by some primordial wrath with extremes that stagger the imagination. Where else, for example, would one find such antediluvian anomalies as earthworms that grow up to 12 feet long and gurgle as they writhe through the ground? Here—the spectre of the harsh land broods over every province of man's endeavor, ready to nullify by drought, flood or fire the prodigious efforts of years.

The country is roughly comparable in size to the U.S., but most of its some-eleven million inhabitants are concentrated in coastal cities. A large portion of the land is desert, scarcely habitable by humans, let alone human beings. This is the formidable outback where a single cattle ranch covers five million acres, and where 50 acres might be required to raise one sheep. And, yet, confronting these odds the Aussie's miraculously and passionately optimistic, his camaraderie and intense vitality.

Mrs. Huxley's travels commence in Sydney, the burgeoning east coast city of well over two million people with its controversial opera house.

Thereafter her itinerary covers Canberra, Australia's pleasant capital planned by Chicago architect Walter Burley Griffin, the mining community of Broken Hill with its miner-artists, Melbourne, Adelaide, and the island of Tasmania. From here she travels west by train across the sore Nullarbor Plain to Perth, Western Australia, then to the Northern Territory, and, lastly, to tropical Queensland.

The author discusses countless topics from politics to architecture, but she is perhaps at her best when describing the people. This country is a melting pot for people of virtually all nationalities. Undaunted by the hard work awaiting them, immigrants are attracted to Australia by its sunshine, wide open spaces, and plentiful opportunities. From the outback rancher to the flying doctor, Aussies are a hardy and enthusiastic lot, developing a country long inhabited only by aborigines. Robbed of their cultural heritage, are slowly becoming "civilized," and the color, like the Indian war dance, is becoming part of a colorful past.

The local fauna is an endless source of fascination to the author. There are koala bears, platypuses, kangaroos, and a host of marsupials from rats to bats. There are the resplendent denizens of the Great Barrier Reef, and the strange lyrebirds and bushybody Mallee fowl. The author deplores the indiscriminate extermination of some species. For example, kangaroos, considered vermin by ranchers, are mercilessly shot for meat and skin. But she seriously doubts that many of us who live in suburbs and winterfeed robins would take kindly to emus and eagles with seven-foot wing spans perched on our bird baths demanding dead lambs!

All considered, there is simply no describing the experience of this book. From cover to cover, its topics from magnetic anthills to traveling schools demand attention.

Servicemen Get Benefits On Income Tax Returns

By RAY DE CRANE
NEA Publications

"Serving in Vietnam" will be a magic phrase on income tax returns filed this year.

If the Vietnam serviceman is filing a return calling for a refund this will be a signal for Internal Revenue Service to give priority treatment.

If the wife of a Vietnam serviceman is filing a joint return with her husband, his signature is not needed on the return. She will include all the income of each of them, claim all the proper deductions and then sign only her name. In the space provided for the husband's return she need only write "Serving in Vietnam."

This is the only situation where IRS will accept a joint and return with the signature of one of the living spouses missing.

This is just the first of many tax advantages to be enjoyed by Vietnam servicemen. Others are:

- None of the pay received by enlisted men and warrant officers for service in a combat zone is taxable. It need not be reported on their return.
- If hospitalized as a result of wounds or disease suffered in a combat zone none of the pay received while hospitalized is taxable.

For purposes of the two preceding paragraphs, any part of a month is treated as a full month. Therefore one day spent in combat or in a hospital as a result of combat excludes the full month's pay from taxable income.

Other notable military and veterans' pay includes: Pay not equal to six months' pay to beneficiaries of servicemen who died on active duty; veterans' benefits paid by the Veterans Administration to veterans where IRS will accept a joint return with the signature of one of the living spouses missing.

Shriver Backed For Senate Race

Antiquity chief Sargent closest to Mayor Richard J. Daley, Shriver reportedly has the informal backing of leading Illinois Democrats to run this year's Senate. Republican Kennedy, met with Daley last Friday. Shriver hasn't revealed any political plans.

Elsewhere on the political scene, a Reagan-for-President group developed in Texas, two announced presidential candidates campaigned in New Hampshire and another novel author plunged into elective politics, as did a prominent civil rights figure.

And a pollster said the people have more faith in the Vietnam war than in President Johnson, there, followed by a walking tour of candidacy in Concord and participated that an informal poll showed Shriver had the backing for the senatorial nomination in Illinois among a dozen members of the Cook County (Chicago) Democratic Committee who were Michigan Gov. George Romney, a candidate for the GOP presidential nomination, was in Nashua, N.H., discussing the North Korean seizure of the intelligence ship Pueblo.

The indicated facts have tended to change some in the last 24 hours or so," Romney said. "Unfortunately on the basis of past experiences in this country we can't always believe what our government tells us."

Actor Gary Merrill announced he will seek the GOP nomination for Congress as a "space candidate" in Maine's First District. Merrill, who switched last month from Democrat to Republican, said domestic problems are more important than fighting the Vietnam war.

Charles Evers, a Negro leader in Mississippi, said he'll seek the congressional seat left vacant when John Bell Williams became governor. A special election will be held Feb. 27. "I admit we've got to have white folks to win," he told newsmen. "We've got to have a lot of white folks."

Former Florida LeRoy Collins launched his campaign for the Senate. He's seeking the Democratic nomination for the seat to be vacated by retiring Sen. George Smathers, D-Fla.

Urges Caution Twin Falls Times-News A-9 Sunday, Jan. 28, 1968

NEWARK, N.J. (AP) — Sen. Charles H. Percy, R-Ill., said Friday night that the United States should be "very cautious" before it takes any definitive action in the Pueblo crisis.

"I agree with the President cautious in what we say and must be taken to rectify this atrocity that has taken place," the Illinois Republican said. "I think it is time to keep cool heads and a time to be very diplomatic measure."

Cost Of Living Is Causing Concern In Election Year

By NEIL GILBRIDE
AP Labor Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Living costs, climbing at a 10-year record pace and more than wiping out wage gains of many Americans, are causing White House concern in this election year.

For all Americans, a White House source said Thursday, the rising prices mean "you've got trouble and it's not on the horizon, it's all around you."

Nuclear War Is Plotted Against Crime

TUCSON, Arizona (AP) — Potential criminals beware: time is running out. Nuclear energy may soon be hot shot trail.

The day may not be far off when nuclear energy is used to solve crimes, says Dr. Vincent R. Guinn, technical director of the Activation Analysis program of the General Atomic Division of General Dynamics Corp., San Diego. Dr. Guinn is pioneer in the field of activation analysis, which involves finding minute bits of elements in materials by bombarding them with neutrons.

"If someone fires a gun, some of the material is blown on his hand," Guinn explained. "We have found that we can detect small quantities of barium and antimony that are used in all primers of cartridges. This method is far more efficient than the usual paraffin technique now employed."

Guinn noted that by using 10 trace elements, scientists can find a different pattern in nearly everyone's hair.

And nuclear energy also harbors great potential in the battle against narcotics. By identifying like material, it can detect whether a sample is "being" spread throughout a community comes from one or more distributors.

"Crime is tremendously expensive," Dr. Guinn concluded. "If a criminal beats a major felony because of lack of evidence, the trial will have cost the community about $100,000. Improved methods of obtaining evidence are our only solution."

Farmers Getting More Insurance

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Agriculture Department reports more farmers are turning to insurance for protection against crop losses caused by hailstorms.

This increase was said to reflect rising costs of farm-crop insurance. Crop insurances covering more than $1 billion were covered by such insurance last year. This compares with about $1.1 billion in 1956.

While the department offers such insurance under its crop insurance program, most farmers buy hail insurance from private companies, the department said in a report.

I've been a part of Cain's since 1955 and have seen big increases each year. We are shooting for a $1,000,000.00 in 1968. Each January we try to clear out all odds and ends, demo models, etc. I've marked down 7) color TV sets, (6) console stereos and (8) color TV home entertainment centers so we can get rid of them by Saturday night. Come and look at these — you'll like what you see — such as a color TV console for $328.00 or a big home entertainment center for $598.00.

I'll be looking for you!

CARPET AND LIVING ROOM

LES HAZEN

I am new in Twin Falls and with Cain's. I have been in the furniture and carpet field all my life — in management, purchasing, advertising and sales. I just moved from Spokane to be a part of the most aggressive Furniture Store in the Intermountain area. Mr. Cain and Jerry will be buying all week at the market, which I have attended many times. In order to take advantage of all the volume buying incentives, it will be necessary for them to buy 20 rolls of Mohawk carpet and Van loads of living room furniture from at least 3 manufacturers.

It is my responsibility to clear at least 8 part rolls of Mohawk carpet and 14 living room sofas or suites. Come in and look at this merchandise. If you like it, you will buy it, at the price I'll quote you.

LES HAZEN

Before Mr. Cain and Jerry left for the Furniture Market last week they bet EACH of us a steak dinner that we couldn't sell $4,000.00 each during this week... while they are at the market. The 5 of us got together, talked it over, and accepted their bet.

We also got a promise out of them that each of us will receive a liberal bonus if, together, we sell $20,000 in merchandise this week.

We know how important it is to the management and all of us to move hundreds of other items from our inventory... odds & ends... floor models... display items... slightly scratched and rubbed items... 1967 Frigidaire appliances... Mohawk drop patterns.

We are determined to win our bet so we had a meeting and decided there would be NO HOLDS BARRED. We decided to divide responsibilities.

We have decided on a quota for each department. It is up to the man in charge to see that the quota is reached... If any one falls short of $4,000.00 or his department quota he will eat beans.

Come in and see us... look at the values we have for you... and we will make our quota easily. Read the FEW EXAMPLES on this page that are awaiting you.

trump and made the last three tricks with the king of hearts and dummy's last two diamonds. "It was perfect defense up to that ace of clubs lead. If East had simply led a heart, I guess I would have had to go down. How would I have played the hand against some other leader? We know Buzzie well enough to answer that question. In one word, the word is "Slowly." The hand is most interesting in that while the contract is a reasonable one it is almost sure to fall unless the defense comes to declarer's rescue.

We also think that East made a serious mistake when he hurried to cash that ace of clubs. East was looking at five hearts to the queen so that he didn't have to worry about Buzzie making more than two heart tricks and one heart ruff. Then West's Buzzie held six spades, he would not be able to come to 10 tricks without getting a club. East should have waited with his ace and saved the rubber.

with a void or two diamonds with only three small. Then when my partner gave me that jump preference in spades, I decided there was no point in chieftaining out one short of game and made a third bid.

West opened a spade. East won with the ace and returned a diamond. West took his ace and gave East a ruff. East continued with nature and laid down his ace of clubs. I ruffed happily, led a heart to dummy's ace, discarded one heart on the king of clubs, ruffed another club, drew West's last

A Girl's Plea: You Tell Me!

Dear Ele and Walt: My problem is not rare, but I've never heard of a solution so far. I've been going with this guy 16 years old for four months now. He's a sweet guy and I really like him, but he leaves all the decisions up to me. I hate making decisions, and I think this is up to the guy anyway. It's not just where we're going, but everything—like the guy to be with him, but when I'm with him I feel part dictator and part mother. Do you have any suggestions on how I can get him to be the one to tell me?—Lender.

Dear Lender: Don't jump to the conclusion that because the boy defers to you all the time, he's an unmanly guy. It's likely he simply grew up in a super-perfectionist family, where nothing he did suited his folks. Many third people are attracted because of this. You can do him a lifelong favor, if you'll encourage him to occasionally take the lead. Dialogue: "Oh, I'm out of ideas. You tell me where we're going." "Surprise me, I love surprises!" Then whenever he does manage the course, praise him heartily for his lead. Worth a patient try?—Ele and Walt.

Dear Ele and Walt: Do you approve of open-mouth kissing or is it dirty? I am having an argument with my girlfriend due to this. Please answer.—Simon Says.

Dear Simon: Open-mouth kissing is not dirty; but it certainly is intimate. And it's definitely physically arousing. But if you're too early in a relationship and putting the focus on sex-sex-sex rather than getting to know each other as two human beings with ideas and feelings—if we knew your romance first-hand, would we consider such kissing a help or a hindrance to a real relationship?—Ele and Walt.

Dear Ben: Do you think there is anything to a relationship when the girl tells the boy everytime they have a disagreement, "If you don't apologize in 24 hours, I'm going to call Mike and go out with him!" Mike is her ex, and as you probably guessed already, I am the boy. So far she hasn't followed up on her threat. But then I've always come to see her of done something to heal the situation, even though the fault is not always mine.—Ben.

Dear Ben: I don't dig this "blackmail" scene at all! Your girl-friend is using sand box tantrums, "either I get my way, or you'll be sorry!" with no attempt at all to sort out the reasons for the problems or to share the lesson I learned from one such caller. A man had plagued me for months until I was exhausted. Finally, I decided to try being human with him, and tearfully asked if it were his intention to make me ill, for that was what he was doing. I further said that I had always tried to help anyone with a problem, so I could not understand his brutality.

Months passed, and one day that voice was on the phone again, but this time he said, "I just wanted you to know, I'm fine now. I'm going home and wanted to say 'thank you' before I left. I'm a serviceman and asked my chaplain for help. Thank you again for caring about me."

I wouldn't recommend everyone's trying what I tried, but never the less it worked, and made finer people of both of us.—A.M.

We wouldn't recommend A.M.'s method to everyone either, but don't you feel a little prouder to be a human being after reading her letter?

Here's a good question. What's the most important thing in your car? The engine? The brakes? The steering mechanism? Obviously all of these items should be in tip-top condition every time you wheel out onto the road. But if you've selected any one of them for your answer to the question, you're wrong.

The most important thing in your car is you.

Most drivers forget especially those of mature years who take themselves for granted. They feel that they have the experience to deal with any situation as long as the car is running smoothly. It's easy to get that feeling after years of driving without a serious accident.

Some never think of having their ability checked, and their states haven't yet insisted on it. Well, a big change may be coming. The Highway Safety Act may cause all of the states to test their drivers every four years. That's because refusal to agree on testing could cost a state a percentage of its federal highway subsidies. And, not only is it sensible to answer the question, but it's also sensible to answer it in the affirmative.

It's of drivers' to get especially those of mature years who take themselves for granted. They feel that they have the experience to deal with any situation as long as the car is running smoothly. It's easy to get that feeling after years of driving without a serious accident.

Anglican Churches Are For Sale

LONDON (AP) — Are you in the market for a church? If so, contact the commonwealth and Continental Church Society.

The Society, which operates about 100 Anglican churches and other buildings throughout Europe, recently called in a property consulting firm for advice.

As a result, plans are under way to demolish churches in areas where Anglican congregations are small or nonexistent. Their sites will be sold and the proceeds will be used to build or enlarge churches in areas of expanding Anglican population.

In Spain, the ruined church in the Plaza del Museo in downtown Seville will be sold to business interests. The money will go toward expansion elsewhere, possibly in Barcelona.

Plans call for razing the Paris embassy church and rebuilding it with its chaplaincy center on an enlarged site.

Canon George Tibbatts, secretary for Europe of the United Society for Propagation of the Gospel, said there are less English people living in France, Germany and Switzerland now than before the two world wars. At some vacation resorts, churches are used only a few weeks each year. Besides, he pointed out, in these countries and days both Roman Catholic and Protestant churches are ready to provide facilities for Anglican chaplains to conduct services.

These colors are guaranteed not to run . . .

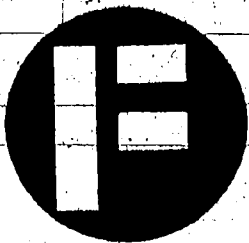

They didn't run in '1776 . . . they've never run since . . . and they never will . . . not as long as we back this Beautiful Flag with the guts and devotion it deserves. Let's show the world we love it!!! Sounds old fashioned? Not the sophisticated pick-and-choose patriotism that seems to be fashionable these days? Well, then, we at Fidelity National Bank are old fashioned. Our 60 years have seen men bleed and die for these Stars and Stripes . . . just as they're doing now. Let's wave the flag instead of burning it or running from it.

LET'S REMEMBER IT'S STILL THE FLAG THAT GIVES OUR FREEDOM. LET'S HAVE MORE OF THAT GEORGE M. COHAN SPIRIT. . . AND "RALLY ROUND THE FLAG." AFTER ALL . . . IT'S A GRAND OLD FLAG.

Ask Them Yourself

FOR J. EDGAR HOOVER

Why are you in favor of more stringent gun laws?
—P. J. Neumann, Quincy, Ill.

● Because strong measures must be taken to protect the public. The use of firearms in crime is one of the most serious problems in our country today. In 1966 more citizens were killed or assaulted with guns in American streets and homes than were killed in battle during the entire Korean conflict.

FOR HANS GUEGAST

of "The Rat Patrol"
I heard you entered show business in a most unusual manner. True?
—B. M., Lancaster, Pa.

● During the summer of 1960, a fellow student at Montana State University and I conquered the "River of No Return," Idaho's Salmon River, covering the 420 miles both ways in a 15-foot aluminum boat powered by a 40-horsepower motor. It was the first time it was ever done. As a result, I went to Los Angeles to attend a press conference, settled there, and joined the Santa Monica Playhouse.

FOR PIERRE SALINGER

Are you a part owner of a pro-football team and a pro-basketball team?
—Elmer Starks, Palmdale, Calif.

● Yes. I hold interests in the San Diego Chargers of the American Football League and the Seattle SuperSonics of the National Basketball Association.

FOR VIRGINIA GRAHAM

of "Girl Talk"
Are the topics for discussion on your show prearranged?
—Mrs. Marcia H. Phillips, Gastonia, N.C.

● The guests have some idea of the subjects for discussion, but the actual conversation is unrehearsed.

FOR SEN. ROBERT F. KENNEDY

Are you upset by the many imitations of your speech and mannerisms?
—C. P., Mischowich, Los Angeles, Calif.

● No. I think many of them are quite funny. Besides, I learn new mannerisms.

FOR DON KLOSTERMAN

Gen. Man., Houston Oilers
Why are there no Negro quarterbacks in pro football?
—Clarence O. Hollis, Atlantic City, N.J.

● There have been a number of Negro quarterbacks—rookies Willie Thrower, Hank Washington, and Jim Kearney, for example—who have tried out with different pro teams. Unfortunately, none made the grade. Since these boys were drafted as quarterbacks, the clubs felt they had their chance to make the team in that position.

FOR CLAIRE BLOOM

How did you and your husband Rod Steiger meet, and was it love at first sight?
—L. D., Niagara Falls, N.Y.

● We met when posing for publicity pictures for "Rashomon," a play in which we costarred. It was hardly love at first sight, though—it was more like mutual indifference. During "Rashomon" I found Rod wasn't so bad. In fact, I began finding him a pretty nice fellow. We were married within the year.

FOR GILBERT HICHT

author and professor of Greek and Latin, Columbia Univ.
What would you say to those who claim that Francis Bacon actually wrote the works attributed to Shakespeare?
—Dorothea Kent, Cincinnati, Ohio

● Such people must be unable to read. Anyone who has read both Bacon and Shakespeare knows that Bacon was incapable of making the many foolish blunders in matters of learning that Shakespeare committed. He also was incapable of producing such marvelous flights of poetry and imagination.

FOR BOB NEWHART

You use the telephone for most of your comedy material. Do you personally use the telephone a lot?
—J. M., Waco, Texas

● I do use the telephone constantly—but that's not the reason the telephone bits were created. I was part of a comedy team once, and when the team broke up, I needed a straight man. The telephone has turned out to be a great substitute, and it doesn't get half the salary.

WHAT IN THE WORLD!

Silent Movie Around Hollywood, they're saying that "The Silent Treatment" will be either the sensation of the year—or the biggest bomb. It's the first full-length silent film since the good old days. "I've got something Chaplin and Valentino didn't have, though," says its star, comic Marty Ingels. "I'm speechless in technicolor." For insurance, he also has 21 name stars, including Jerry Lewis, doing "bit" parts. "Some of the scenes are a little daring," Marty admits. "We may have to advertise it, 'For Adult Lip Readers Only!'"

Marty Ingels

Upstaged Though he's now a recording star, Sen. Everett A. Dirksen hasn't learned to keep show-business hours. He left a recent political gathering at 11:30 because it was past his bedtime. Perry Como, who was em-

Cost of Living A good loaf of bread now sells for about two cents an ounce, but if you look around the supermarket, you can find ready-mix fruit pie for less than one, and a half cent an ounce. Maybe Marie Antoinette really had something when she said, "Let them eat cake!"

New recording star—Sen. Everett Dirksen

Down with Decay Phosphate may be the next chemical to enter the war on tooth decay. In Houston, Texas, 500 school children were given a breakfast cereal fortified with phosphate. At the end of two years, they had 30 percent fewer cavities.

Bonus Year The ladies can expect to live a year longer than they used to. The National Center for Health Statistics says their average life expectancy has risen to 74.7 years. Male longevity is up only about one-third of a year and is now put at 67.6 years. Sorry about that, men.

ceasing the entertainment, called out after the orator: "I wouldn't walk out on one of your albums!"

The First Flower Children Where do flower children come from? It's possible they were invented by author Benj. Montessoro. In 1953 he published a children's book, "The Witches of Venice," all about two children born of a flowering plant. They had trouble with adults because they were "different." "Today's flower children are like that," says Montessoro. "They are young people who have to fight against being devoured by the Establishment." Ben's own flower children continue their adventures in "I Saw a Ship A-Sailing," the first psychedelic Mother Goose.

Will De Gaulle

Use

He has been attacking the U.S. at every opportunity, and next month at Grenoble

IN THE NEXT few weeks, Charles de Gaulle is going to take advantage of a unique opportunity to stagger French and international public opinion and, once again, cause consternation in the diplomatic world.

This is a guess, but the situation is so predictable that statesmen already are uneasy. The occasion will arise when he opens the winter Olympics in Grenoble, France—the last Olympics over which he will preside as President of France.

To understand why this particular occasion is so dangerous, one must understand two themes, normally unrelated but now subtly intertwined.

One is de Gaulle's genius and growing relish for calculated indiscretion—his constant attacks on American foreign policy, for example. The other is the special circumstances surrounding France's part in the games themselves. Statesmen, both in Paris and abroad, have recognized how explosive the combination is, yet they can do nothing but wait.

Robert Aron, one of France's most distinguished historians, has said of de Gaulle: "He wears a mask, but it is to hide his lack of confidence. He has invented a manner for himself that makes him seem most self-confident when he feels it least. Since de Gaulle never moves in a straight line, one never knows what he is doing until he has finished."

This is one reason why General de Gaulle has such a passion for wildly enthusiastic audiences. He needs the reassurance and, to make them more enthusiastic still, he sometimes says the first thing that comes into his head. Nor is it anything new. His first and bloodiest blunder occurred in June, 1958, shortly after he came to power, and I was present to witness it.

It was in Mostaganom, Algeria, in the middle of the Algerian war. The Europeans there had a slogan which they repeated endlessly, "Algeria Française" or "French Algeria." It was daubed on walls, chanted, and even sounded on car klaxons by three short blasts and two long. It was a kind of declaration of faith.

Charles de Gaulle had been brought back to power with the hope that he could settle the Algerian war and keep Algeria as a part of France. His reception was hysterical, and there were thousands of Moslems as well as Europeans in the audience. They even uttered a new chant,

"Au pouvoir de Gaulle" ("de Gaulle to power"). De Gaulle loved every minute of it. "We are all Frenchmen here," he said, to thunderous cheers. At the end he cried, "Long live Algeria!" More cheers. "Long live France!" Greater cheers. It could and should have ended there, but then de Gaulle capped it with the ultimate, "Long live French Algeria," and there was pandemonium.

Foreign correspondents could not believe their ears. Unlike the crowds, they could see the situation with detachment and realized that de Gaulle had endorsed with his own name a blank check called French Algeria. Almost everyone agreed that he had not intended to utter that deadly slogan, but had been carried away by the crowd.

He never uttered the expression again, but the damage was done. The war went on for another six years, accumulating bitterness until de Gaulle declared Algeria independent. Then a million Europeans fled Algeria for France with hatred in their hearts for the man they believed had betrayed them in two words.

In the elections of 1955 and 1967, de Gaulle and the Gaullist party lost heavily. In the 1966 presidential election, de Gaulle had to endure the humiliation of running a second time because he did not get an absolute majority on the first ballot. In 1967 the Gaullist party kept its majority by an eyelash. Far from sobering the government of General de Gaulle and his prime minister, Georges Pompidou, the administration became more arrogant and is ruling by decree.

The result has been that there are no more cheering crowds in France to stir de Gaulle's blood. He makes fewer and fewer visits to French cities and keeps his public display for tv, on which his performances are masterful.

But the crowds reappear when he makes his trips abroad—and so he came to Quebec. Once more he saw the cheering mobs, and he shouted, "Long live free Quebec!" Such an untimely remark angered not only English-Canadians who died by the thousands at Vimy Ridge in World War I and at Dieppe in World War II for a free France but also French-Canadian intellectuals like Mayor Drapeau of Montreal, who understands that the remark did incalculable damage to relations between the English and the French in Canada.

It was summed up naively but neatly by the 14-year-old son of a French author, who was visiting the Expo and staying with the French-Canadian friends of his father. He wrote home: "Since General de Gaulle's visit, I have never in my life heard so much bad language." And he was not referring to the provincial French-Canadian accent!

No one really knows if de Gaulle said "Long live free Québec" as a part of deliberate policy or in the heat of the moment, but since he said it, it has now become part of official French policy. De Gaulle thus has fiercely alienated himself and his government from the Canadians, as he already had done from the Americans, British, and Germans.

Le Monde, France's most influential newspaper, in a remarkably savage editorial, attacked de Gaulle's "senile gloe" in stirring up excited # the Olympics to Insult America?

the man and the occasion will meet in one volatile moment By GEOFFREY BOCCA crowds. Historian Aron, while praising de Gaulle, said, "He is a man who listens to himself when he writes but does not always listen to himself when he speaks." That was written before the lamentable Quebec incident.

A. de Gaulle speaks—extemporaneous, explosive.

What has all this got to do with the Grenoble Olympics? To answer that, one must, for the moment, embark on a complete change of subject and study the current position of France in the world of sport.

Athletically, France is a third-rate nation in a state of deep crisis, financial and moral. In her most important sport, soccer, she is rated one of the weakest countries in Europe, capable of beating very few opponents. In tennis, golf, and sailing, she goes nowhere. She has not had a world-class boxer since 1949, when Marcel Cerdan was killed in a plane crash.

Her much-vaunted athletes, such as the temperamental track star Michel Jazy and the excellent swimmer Kiki Caron failed lamentably in the Tokyo Olympics.

In track and swimming, which are the only summer Olympic contests that matter, the French did not win a single gold medal. Such was the poverty of France's Tokyo performance that the newspapers played up as a triumph France's single gold medal—for horse jumping.

France's rugby team is good, but the only important rugby countries are France, the British Isles, South Africa, New Zealand, and Australia. The rest of the world couldn't care less. Even in the one sport France should dominate, bicycle racing, she doesn't.

So the sporting pages make depressing reading. French sports fans want their teams to win as much as other people, and they suffer from a profound, potentially dangerous inferiority complex. They have, however, one bright spot—skiing expertise.

Here, the French are supreme. There are the two fabulous Goitschel sisters, Christine and Marielle, who are constant winners of international trophies and whose tomboy antics enchant the French public.

There is the extraordinary Jean-Claude Killy, whose practice of meditation as part of his training is widely copied. Daredevil slalom racer Guy Perillat is the idol of French youth. In 1967, for example, the world downhill racing championship was won by Killy, at an average speed of 64 miles an hour. Frenchmen also finished third, fourth, and fifth.

It is impossible to exaggerate how utterly the French bestride the snow slopes. Their names, their manner, their very uniforms—all lend to an air of French superiority.

But what has this to do with Charles de Gaulle's psychological problems?

Only this: that the man and the occasion are meeting. The politics of General de Gaulle from the beginning has been to present France in the most powerful light possible. Usually he has been forced to do it by his own personality and will power and at the expense of other nations, particularly the U.S., because, in terms of real power, France is weaker than West Germany, Japan, or Great Britain, let alone the superpowers.

But suddenly, as de Gaulle rises to speak, everything he loves will fuse together for the very first time in his eight-year reign. There will be huge crowds—French crowds, not French-Canadian or Polish crowds. The fact that they will be cheering for their skiing heroes rather than for de Gaulle will not matter. They will be assembling to celebrate and to praise the heroes of the one sport in which they are unrivaled in the world. At the same time, they will roar away the searing sense of inferiority they generally feel toward other countries in the world of sport.

There will be enthusiasm, power, and the taste of victory—French victory—in the air, and de Gaulle's nostrils are hypersensitive to such an atmosphere. He will not miss an opportunity like that. He also has come to know that Americans wince every time he rises to address a volatile audience, and he enjoys the sensation.

No one has the slightest idea of what he will say. Most probably he does not know himself. Possibly he will not know until the moment he mounts the podium.

Of one thing, however, we can be fairly sure—we are not going to like it. ♦

NOW! Run Your Car Without Spark Plugs

NEW JET-FIRE FUEL IGNITERS

Will deliver up to 30 more horsepower,
 5 more miles per gallon
 using only regular gas!
THEY NEVER WEAR OUT

YOU'LL NEVER CLEAN, ADJUST OR REPLACE PLUGS AGAIN!

- get up to 5 more miles per gallon of gas
- add up to 30 more horsepower to your engine
- save $100 each year for you, year after year while you use the cheapest grades of gasoline!

Spark plugs are obsolete! Now there's a far better way to run your car. With conventional spark-plugs, only a fraction of the fuel that enters your cylinders is turned into power. The rest escapes through your tailpipe as unburned vapor. This is because their spark is so narrow—only 1/32 of an inch wide—that it cannot possibly ignite all the fuel mixture in the cylinder. As plugs get older, their sparks get narrower and less efficient till they have to be replaced.

New Jet-Fire Fuel Igniters do a far better job of turning gasoline into power. Instead of a narrow spark, they send out a wide swath of flame that "fills" the entire combustion chamber. The narrower spark in all directions and exploding far more fuel in the cylinder.

Read The Way Jet-Fire Fuel Igniters Work

Jet-Fire Fuel Igniters look like spark plugs merely because they have to be screwed into the spark plug socket. But what they do is far different. Here's how to prove it!

1. Stop your car till it's fully warmed up.
2. Stop on a perfectly level stretch of road.
3. Put the car in Drive (at least with manual transmission), and see how fast the car rolls at idling speed.
4. Remove the old and install Jet-Fire Fuel Igniters in (8-cylinder job).
5. Now let the car roll at idling speed. You can expect it to go 4 to 6 MILES PER HOUR FASTER without touching the gas pedal. At the same time, you'll notice a decrease in the amount of gas consumed. (At this speed, M.P.G. increases by 20 to 30%.)
6. First thing you can reduce the gas flow by adjusting the idling screw, and start saving money before you've even driven a mile!
7. (At the same time, you can make your air-to-gas mixture leaner. Fuel Igniters require only a 15:1 ratio instead of the conventional 11:1. It's a simple adjustment that you or your mechanic can make in one minute. It provides even greater economy.)

Start driving and you'll notice even more improvements—up to 30% more horsepower, 40% acceleration power, climbing power, and passing power—all with little burning gas!

SWITCH TO REGULAR

The next time you get "stuck" near the "Empty" mark, tell the attendant to fill it up with REGULAR. (ARI Changes are you'll no longer need premium which costs four to eight cents more than regular gas.) And this second saving is only the beginning. Jet-Fire Fuel Igniters provide easier cold-weather starts... and that means less drain on your battery... and no drain on your patience as you try to get started.

REBURNING OF RESIDUES

The more you drive, the better your Jet-Fire Igniters perform. They don't become clogged, wear out or require adjusting. And carbon build-up—the major cause of "flooded" cylinders—actually makes fuel igniters perform better. Carbon becomes an additional carrier for the igniter's big jet flame.

So there you have a third saving. One set of fuel igniters will last the life of your car!

- Save $100 a Year With Jet-Fire Fuel Igniters!

If you drive 18,000 miles,

you can expect to save:

• $50 by switching to regular gas.

• $40 on your better mileage.

• $10 by not replacing plugs.

Wanted To Save Air Force Lives - Now They Can Save You Money
 Jet-Fire Fuel Igniters were first developed to save airmen's lives. During World War II, there were times when more men were killed by spark plug malfunctions than by enemy action. A failure-proof replacement was needed, and Fuel Igniters did the job. Both the Navy and Air Force have approved them for jet engine use.

Now that they have been modified for automobile use. They won't save your life, but they can save you big money—up to $100 a year with ordinary driving.

Some day, all cars may come equipped with Fuel Igniters like these. But why wait when you can install a set yourself now. Just mail the coupon with the "check" and "order" for your car, and we'll return you a set of fuel igniters. Just $12.50 per set of 8. $24.50 per set of 16.

THE IMPORTANT DIFFERENCES BETWEEN ORDINARY SPARK PLUGS AND JET-FIRE FUEL IGNITERS
 Your car's power comes from tiny explosions of gasoline vapor and air in your cylinders. The bigger the explosion, the faster you go.

SPARK PLUG NARROW SPARK

CONVENTIONAL PLUGS explode this mixture with a spark jumping across an air gap. The spark is just 1/32 of an inch across - not wide enough to explode all the fuel in the cylinder. Unburned gas escapes through your exhaust. In time, the electrodes become eroded and spaced with carbon. The gap widens, the spark gets narrower, you lose more power, waste more fuel... and finally have to replace your plugs.

JET-FIRE FUEL IGNITER WIDE SWATH OF FLAME.

JET-FIRE FUEL IGNITERS use no sparks. Instead a fanning swath of flame reaches across a semi-conductor bridge from one electrode to another, exploding far more fuel, getting far more power. There is no gap that can widen, and carbon deposits actually improve performance. They do not have to be adjusted or replaced - ever!

Whatever Happened to Vince Edwards?

Vince Edwards—the new James Bond!

FIVE YEARS ago, as the star of tv's popular "Ben Casey" series, Vince Edwards was at the top of his profession. He commanded a weekly audience of nearly 32 million viewers and a salary in excess of $250,000 a year.

But then the ratings slowly went downhill, and the show was cancelled. Almost overnight, the muscular, 36-year-old actor, all but dropped from sight.

Why? The answer is complex. First, most actors who make it big on tv rarely establish themselves in movies. Second, many top producers refuse to consider tv actors on the same level with movie-actors. "When the series went off the air, I did receive some movie offers," Vince admits. "But all in-expensive films."

Edwards feels he deserved a better break from producers since, before going into tv, he had made a number of movies, most slightly above "B" quality. Vince began his acting career in a strange way. On a summer vacation from college (he attended on an athletic scholarship), he worked as a lifeguard at a mountain resort. Part of the job called for him to help in the presentation of the diander show. The acting bug bit him.

After a stint at the University of Hawaii, Vince enrolled at the American Academy of Dramatic Arts—in New York. "In those days," he says, "I wore the dirtiest T-shirt of all the dirty T-shirt actors. A gimmick? No, it was all I could afford."

His first show-business job came in the Broadway musical, "High Button Shoes." Movie producer Hal Wallis saw him and hired him. Edwards now admits that he was hired not so much for his acting ability but as a threat to Burt Lancaster, with whom Wallis was having trouble. Finally he was fired and joined the army of Hollywood hopefuls.

Edwards was signed by Columbia in 1955, a period which he now calls "my low point. I had very little to do, and I just got by." Then came the break in tv.

When the show was dropped, Edwards was convinced that the movie people would be lining up at his door. He waited for the right roles, but all that was offered were roles he considered "beneath" him.

Unable to get choice film roles, Vince turned to the night-club circuit as a singer. He even got rid of the moody scowl, his "Ben Casey" trademark. "That was last year's bag," he confesses.

It took more than a year to land a role in an important movie, "The Devil's Brigade." But finally a real break came, producer Irwin Allen signed him to play Charles Hood, a Bogart-type character, in Columbia's "Hammerhead." Vince is the only "name" in the cast.

He is more relaxed—even smiling. He feels that the Charles Hood role will do for him what James Bond did for Sean Connery and what Matt Helm did for Dean Martin. Dean is Vince's idol. "I met my second wife (actress Linda Foster) at Dean's home."

(Vince's first marriage to actress Kathy Kersh ended in divorce.) Vince is modeling his career after Dean's, too. He hopes to continue the night-club tours while making movies and to step up guest shots on tv variety shows. His first commitment after "Hammerhead" is a guest appearance on Martin's show.

Whatever happened to Vince Edwards? He has been away for a while—but he's back now.

SWIMSUITS: PRINTS THAT GO POW!

By ROSALYN ABBREVAYA

With exposed skin an evident part of the American landscape, it's refreshing to report that the latest swimwear designs are covering women up! But lest girl watchers despair, a number of suits are taking the plunge in back.

Expected to make the resort and summer scenes: suits in bright, bold prints in styles including one-piece maillots (usually with low backs and halter-effect necklines), new tunic designs, and suits in two parts that sometimes sport coverups.

Because of improved print technology, you'll see new color combinations that are frankly eye-stopping (see cover) and a crisper approach to the monochromatic look of white paired with fashion's darlings, mocha or black. Prediction: If you've never worn a print swimsuit, on land or sea, this season's crop just may prove irresistible.

The slimming tunic suit will make news this season. This one by Sea B is in a gay Banlon multi-print.

QUIPS AND QUOTES

One thing wrong with the younger generation is that a lot of us don't belong to it any more.

—Sam Ewing

"Darling," the husband groaned as he went over the monthly bills, "you promised you wouldn't buy any more dresses."

"I know, dear," the wife said. "But I just happened to be in this store, and I guess the devil tempted me."

"Then why didn't you simply say, 'Get thee behind me, Satan!'"

"Oh, I did," the wife replied. "And then he whispered over my shoulder, 'My dear, it fits beautifully in the back, too.'"

—Scott Keller

The professor exhibited a diagram to his class of future doctors. "The patient shown here limps," he told them. "One leg is shorter than the other." Then, turning to one of his students, he asked, "Now, Mr. Jones, what would you do in such a case?"

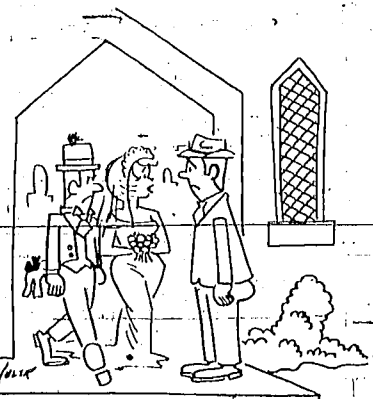

Young Jones thought earnestly for a moment.

"Well," he announced at last, "I think that, under the circumstances, I would limp, too."

—Frances Benson

When there's smoke, there's usually somebody too excited to remember the phone-number of the fire department.

—Dan Bennett

"Sorry about that dinner date, Fred."

Never Take a Laxative Again!

New Miracle Regulator Helps Relief Come Naturally

New York, N.Y. (Special)—Research has discovered a wonder-working substance that helps correct constipation without laxatives!

Doctors say most constipation occurs when waste loses moisture in the colon. To give relief, laxatives have to force action—flush, irritate or distend the intestine.

The new miracle substance works in a completely different way. It helps natural moisture in the colon work more effectively. Thus by working on the problem, not on you, it helps correct constipation as no laxative can.

This discovery is now available under the name REGULATOR. It is not habit-forming. No warning on the label—no prescription needed. Try REGULATOR—you may never take a laxative again!
