

Bombing Halt Will Likely Be First Order Of Business At Paris

WASHINGTON (AP) — North Vietnam's demand for a bombing halt set opposite a U.S. call for curbing infiltration shaped up Saturday as the likely first order of business when envoys of the opposing sides begin talks in Paris.

President Johnson's special peace emissary and former ambassador, W. Averell Harriman, plans to leave for Paris on Sunday to begin the talks. Harriman's number one priority is to get the bombing halt agreed to as soon as possible, according to the U.S. State Department.

Under a Johnson administration officials were keenly aware of the U.S. position in the Vietnam conflict, said a State Department spokesman. He said the U.S. will not accept a negotiated settlement of the Vietnam conflict, "in the hope that we can convince North Vietnam that its best future lies in peaceful cooperation in development of the entire southern region rather than in a costly and wasteful effort to overcome the South by force."

Speaking at the University of Georgia, the U.S. foreign-affairs chief said it is now important to "achieve a negotiable peace in Southeast Asia." And he said this means more than peace in Vietnam alone.

Vietnam's neighbor, Laos, is cited under the 1962 Geneva accords to withdrawal of all foreign troops, "the cessation of infiltration by North Vietnamese forces through Laotian territory and access in all parts of the country by the International Commission for the Control of Cambodia and Burma, too, are considered to live at peace with the infiltration of arms and agents from the north.

North Vietnam currently has some 45,000 infiltrators in Laos, according to U.S. intelligence sources. More Communist forces are reported moving along the Ho Chi Minh trail used for sending military materials against South Vietnam.

The Reds have presented inpection throughout Laos by the three-nation I.C.C. — a supervisory group set up to police the Geneva accords for Laos' independence and neutrality.

North Vietnam made plans to "step toward broad-scale peace negotiations," the Paris talks, its No. 1 item is "the unconditional bombing halt and other acts of war against the Democratic Republic of (North) Vietnam."

After arrangements for a bombing halt, Harriman said, diplomats could then hold talks on other problems of concern to the two sides.

U.S. sources are pressing for a halt by North Vietnam on its infiltration against the South in return for an end to the U.S. air campaign against the north.

The White House had no list yet of just who will accompany Harriman. Gen. Vance, former deputy defense secretary who is to advise Harriman on military affairs, is expected to be in the delegation.

Presidential press secretary Goush said that Alexander Thompson, U.S. ambassador in Moscow, will be available to go to Paris if needed. Johnson previously had named Thompson, along with Harriman, as available for the direct contact with the North Vietnamese.

George Ball's Biggest Problem May Be Words He Spoke As Private Citizen

By MAX HARRELSON
Associated Press Writer

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. (AP) — When George Ball takes over as U.S. representative at the United Nations his biggest problem may turn out to be some of the words he has spoken as a private citizen.

He is an articulate man with strong views and, during the few months since he left his post as undersecretary of state, he has lashed out in blunt language at a lot of policies and individuals.

As he accepts the appointment as successor to Arthur J. Goldberg, Ball apparently accepted the necessity to subordinate his personal views on Red China, South Africa and other key U.N. issues, but the question is: will opponents of the United States feel him forget what he has said in his private capacity?

He will not be the first U.S. delegate to back policies he has criticized, but he has caused dissent on so many issues and done so in such a short time before taking over the task of speaking in support of these policies.

Some of Ball's views have been expressed in speeches, but U.N. diplomats are mostly aware of those contained in his newly published book, "The Discipline of Power," in which had a lot of harsh things to say about a lot of subjects.

In his book, Ball said the position of Nationalist China was "despicable" and "in a word, deranged." He said the United States still clung to the "fanciful proposition" that the Chiang Kai-shek government ruled the 750 million Chinese people.

"It is undignified for the United States, holding as it does a unique position of prestige and responsibility, to employ its political muscle to perpetuate a myth in which no other nation believes, and we have paid in hard political coin for our sponsorship of the nationalist regime," he wrote.

Despite his remarks, however, there is no sign that U.S. policy will be changed before the fall session of the General Assembly when Ball will be expected to deliver the U.S. policy speech on China.

Ball was equally outspoken on the U.S.-backed U.N. efforts to forest South Africa, through isolation, to drop its apartheid policies. He said the actions taken so far are creating "a siege psychology which impels people to areas in which the black population would have 'segregationism'." "Apartheid," he said, "is a plague of the mind and it can be cured only by healing ideas and that means opening the windows, and closing them."

Some of Ball's views which are likely to attract attention at the United Nations deal with such diverse questions as communism and Vietnam bombing.

On communism: "The United States should take a more relaxed attitude toward possible Communist expansion. 'For the life of me, I cannot see how we would be endangered by a Communist regime in Mali or Brazzaville or Burundi; its most likely effect would be to cost Moscow or Peking some money.'"

On Vietnam bombing: "The bombing has, as I see it, seriously impaired the moral authority of the United States, increased our alienation from other free nations, exacerbated internal strains and fissures, and generally increased the dangers of intervention by the big Communist powers. At the same time I doubt that it has had much effect on the war in the South."

Sources Say Moorer Being Prepared

By BOB HORTON AP Military Writer WASHINGTON (AP) — Some Pentagon sources believe Adm. Thomas H. Moorer, chief of naval operations, is being prepared to take over as chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff in 1969.

Appointment of the 56-year-old Mount Willing, Ala., native would make Moorer the nation's top uniformed military figure for the first time in more than a decade. Army men have filled the slot since 1959.

President Johnson recommended in March that Gen. Earle G. Wheeler be kept on an additional year.

Wheeler, 62, will wind up his two-year term in July and can be retained only through special action by Congress.

Moorer became chief of naval operations only last August and apparently was considered for now to take over the demanding chairmanship this year.

Gen. Harold R. Johnston, army chief of staff, might have had an outside chance for the JCS chair, frankly did not want the post, it can be reported positively. He is said to have regarded the assignment as one of tremendous responsibility without commensurate pay.

Johnson is retiring in July to be succeeded by Gen. William C. Westmoreland, present commander of U.S. forces in Vietnam. It may be surprising to some, but Westmoreland apparently wasn't even considered as Wheeler's replacement.

Assuming Congress goes along with the required legislative exception, Wheeler will be retiring in November. This year as head of the Joint Chiefs.

Secretary of Defense Clark M. Clifford already has sent a proposed joint resolution authorizing Wheeler's retention to Rep. John W. McCormack, speaker of the House, and to Vice President Hubert H. Humphrey, president of the Senate.

Hallowell Seeks Bid On Camas Post

FAIRFIELD — Doug Hallowell, well-known rancher and cattleman, has filed as a Republican candidate for the 3rd district Camas County commission.

Hallowell, 52, is active in politics. Incumbent commissioner Earl Wilson, Democrat, has not filed his petition but is expected to retire before Tuesday deadline.

Another incumbent, Corral and Faring, former printer and cattleman, has filed as a Republican candidate for the 2nd district commission.

Asmhed has been active in community affairs, but this is his first try for office. Lonzo Baldwin, incumbent 2nd district commissioner, has filed for the Democratic nomination.

Mrs. John (Sharon) Crowe, wife of a local school faculty member, has filed for the Republican nomination for county treasurer. Incumbent Loy Vanarsdale has filed on the Democratic ticket.

Fred Wilson, former state legislator, has filed as Democratic precinct committee man from district 1.

Cowan Rice, Hill City, has filed as Republican precinct committee man from District 2.

Other incumbents filing include Robert Newhouse, Republican, for prosecuting attorney; Edward Reagan, Democrat, for county treasurer; Bruce Hovland, Republican, for probate judge; Mrs. Estelle Vaughn, county recorder, says that she expects more candidates to file before the deadline on Tuesday.

200-Pint Quota Set For Monday Blood Drawing

A quota of 200 pints has been set for a Red Cross blood drive, from 1 to 5 p.m. will be held in Kimberly.

In stressing the importance of giving blood, Rev. Riley said that it is "impossible to hang a price tag on a pint of blood, for it's impossible to hang a dollar value on a human life—and that's what blood is—human life."

The United States is one of the few countries of the world that believe in helping to save the lives of its citizens through blood transfusions, he continued.

With this in mind, Red Cross collects more than 2,000,000 units of blood each year to help ill and injured citizens.

There are six drawings a year in Twin Falls, six in Kimberly and two in Filer.

Lassen received second in talent competition and Gene Bollinger was elected new lieutenant governor, replacing Lassen. Ron Bollinger, secretary, received an outstanding service award. CSF competed with 15 colleges and universities at the convention.

North Idaho Chamber Passes Series Of Resolutions

LEWISTON (AP)—The North Idaho Chamber of Commerce has passed a series of resolutions on the final day of its annual Cascades Chamber meeting here today, in seeking to have Idaho included in a listing of "lambing" counties. Other resolutions ask continuation of the Idaho inventory tax and a revision of the executive order of 1965 which limits import quotas for lead and zinc, and passage of legislation on the Snake River. Conservation groups have been fighting the construction of a dam and the proposed site says it would interfere with the annual river and its tributaries migration of fish.

The chamber also urged that no method of extracting mineral resources, including dredging, be established without further study. An anti-dredge movement was organized recently in North Idaho to combat a proposed dredge operation on the upper St. Joe River. Another resolution urged the secretary of agriculture to expand his executive

Poverty War Has New Foe To Fight

By JAMES R. POLK
WASHINGTON (AP)—The war on poverty has a new foe to fight: uncertainty over its future. Bertrand M. Harding, acting head of the Office of Economic Opportunity, met with his staff this week in an attempt to dry up what he called rumors the agency may be carved up and canceled away.

Job to dissolve this agency... change... Harding... OEO... but each time Harding promised OEO would not be dismantled, he was careful to begin service in another temporary job that lasted half a year... The uncertainty starts with the White House... President Johnson, creator of the program, has said he will pour... Harding said in an interview... the internal Revenue... command of OEO... the nation's capital... plans for a massive search of protest by the... the poor and the poverty workers... Qualified electors in the other three zones and those in zones 3 and 4 can vote on a two-mill plant facility levy, but only those residing in zones 3 and 4 can vote on trustees for their respective districts. The election will be from 1 to 8 p.m. May 14. Seven candidates have filed for the two posts.

Richfield Parents Discuss Rules For Student Dress, Conduct, Absence

RICHFIELD — Richfield students' dress, conduct, and intentional unexcused absences were principal subjects discussed and ruled on by parents at a public meeting Thursday evening at the grade school cafeteria. A capacity crowd attended.

Neil Anderson, a faculty member, presided and preserved order. Charles Butcane acted as secretary and Jay Ward assisted with vote counting. The rules, many after amendments, will be considered by the Richfield school board at a special meeting Friday night.

Principal discussion centered around student absences. Excused absences adopted are sickness, death in the family, hardship in the family and pre-arranged permits for absence between the parents and administration. A 2 per cent grade penalty per day or writing of a theme was favored for unexcused absences with penalty to be decided by the administration.

Permitting children inside the school building at recess, noon, etc. in inclement weather was favored as well as assigning seats on the school buses with more bus supervision.

Mr. Anderson, who has been acting superintendent at Richfield while Superintendent E. R. Briggs was convalescing from surgery, closed the meeting with remarks that the Richfield school and students were not nearly as hard as one faction of the area had painted it, or nearly as good as another faction had pictured it.

Twin Falls Men Talk To Chamber

HAGERMAN — Lloyd Webb and Harry Lemoyne, both Twin Falls, addressed the Hagerman Chamber of Commerce Wednesday on the development of the Bruncan Desert.

Mr. Lemoyne spoke on the delays individuals and groups have encountered in getting approval on Bruncan development and Mr. Webb on the inadequate and outdated public land laws.

Ralph Sullivan, chamber president, said Webb and Lemoyne made with the Idaho Water Resource Board, Aldrich how he represented the travel clinic held in Twin Falls.

Douglas H. Wood will talk on Hagerman Pioneer Day at the June 5 meeting.

Ferry Mill Ends Business Opens

GLENN FERRY — Mr. and Mrs. Jack Gording, Hammett, have opened a new business in Glenns Ferry, the "Ferry Mill Ends," which will be managed by Mrs. Marilyn Robertson, assisted by Mrs. Theodora Henry and Mrs. Lillian Massey.

The business which specializes in "faded" fabrics is located in the Strum building next door to the Opera Theater in the second block of East Idaho Street.

The Gordings, who own and operate the Roffee Kup Cafe and Motel in Hammett, are both natives of the Ferry.

Precinct Conventions Held In Texas

DALLAS, Tex. (AP) — The Texas Democratic and Republican faithful headed for precinct conventions Saturday to begin deciding how to elect presidential nominees. The conventions followed day-long voting in party primaries to nominate and in some cases elect delegates for offices from the precincts to the Governor's office.

Poll close at 7 p.m. and the counting of two million or more votes was a lengthy process. Showers slowed voter turnout in the early morning hours but it picked up steam as the weather improved in the afternoon.

party held conventions at various times starting in mid-tanned morning. Object was to obtain certifications from 1,250 per cent of the major parties that they are party members to select delegates to the presidential-nominating conventions.

This number was needed to get Wallace's name on the Texas ballot for president in November. Wallace officials said the state conventions generally might be Monday before it can be determined by actions taken in the precincts.

But the eventual outcome of the state conventions generally can be determined by actions taken in the precincts.

41 Cash Awards Given At Idaho Women's Conclave

BURLEY — Forty-one cash awards amounting to $1,500 were given at the 30th annual convention of the Idaho Federation of Women's Clubs which concluded Friday at the Ponderosa Inn.

Sponsoring the awards were the state organization, Sears Roebuck and Co., Shell Oil Co., and Mrs. Marjorie Vogel Boise.

Local winners include Bonnie Newbert, Higburn, second in division I; Sherrel Stumm, Declo, second in division II; and Steve Wondal, Declo, third in division III.

The Art competition was also broken into four divisions for grades 1-3, 4-6, 7-9, and 10-12. Three place winners and an honorable mention were given in each division.

Local winners are Jeff Lee Weber, Hevburn, third place in division I; and John Taylor, Twin Falls, second place in division III.

Mrs. Vogel presented cash awards to those clubs and districts who had made the highest membership gains in the past year. These awards went to District 1, for the district with the highest gain in new members, $20; District 1, for the district with the highest per-

Kennedy Has Front Tooth Repaired
 INDIANAPOLIS, Ind. (AP)—Sen. Robert F. Kennedy has his chipped front tooth repaired by a dentist Saturday, then went on a motor tour of Indianapolis street corners and shopping centers.

The long motorcade marked the end of his campaign in the State capital before Tuesday's Indiana primary, his first solid test of public support.

Already widely exposed in the news through extensive television and public appearances, the New York Democrat still attracted sizable crowds at street corners in Negro neighborhoods. But most were hysterical and few appeared to be listening to his words.

He touched only briefly at each stop on his standard campaign themes—an end to lawlessness, an end to the war in Vietnam, and racial reconciliation. He concentrated on trying to get out the vote.

In the Negro precinct at Blake Street and Millant Avenue, he asked them in the crowd, "Did you vote in the last election?" They all shouted "Yes," and he said:

"Let's be frank about it. Many of the people who live in this neighborhood don't vote in elections and have not voted in past elections. I need your help on Tuesday. Give me your hand."

It took Kennedy but one day to mend a minor campaign embarrassment: the left front tooth that was chipped when he was pulled from his open car in South Bend Thursday night. Visibly self-conscious about the smile-gap Thursday, Kennedy called on an Indianapolis dentist Saturday morning and came away with a temporary cap and an unbroken smile.

Farmers Beat Up Maoist Guards
 HONG KONG (AP)—Farmers in southern China's Kwangtung Province beat up Maoist guards before they could force them to wear uniforms and carry rifles. The guards thought they were being taken to a training camp in China last Saturday.

The traveler said the farmers had gone to see a traditional opera but when the curtain was lifted, there were only Red Guards singing. "The East is Red."

Highway Department Works Hard For Bridge Safety

By FRED DODDS, Times-News Staff Writer

Chances that the 41-year-old Perrine Memorial Bridge will someday crash into the Snake River Canyon are very slim. But the possibility always remains. To narrow the margin, structure inspections are made annually and such inspections are under the supervision of licensed engineers who make living out-of-bridge design and construction.

These inspections are under the guidance of the Idaho Department of Highways, and today, 41-year-old Perrine Memorial Bridge is under the supervision of the state highway department. The bridge rises 476 feet from the canyon floor, is 1,403 feet long and is an attraction talked about in foreign lands. Its design accounts for daily stress, winter temperatures, and the wind.

The Perrine Memorial Bridge, however, is just one of nearly 1,000 bridges in the state and the Department of Highways is responsible for each one.

Last Dec. 15, the Silver Bridge over the Ohio River at Point Pleasant, W. Va., collapsed and 46 people died. Four are still missing.

This tragedy brought about a program designed to analyze the safety of some 700,000 highway and railroad bridges in the nation.

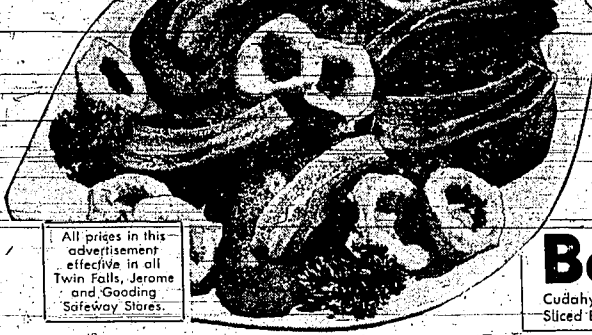

Top priority in the nationwide bridge study program is a look at bridges built before 1935 and which are carrying highway traffic and which pass over dangerous ravines, water or other critical bridges, such as those built after 1935, are to be checked on a secondary phase.

Those taking part in the nationwide bridge study program are members of the American Association of State Highway Officials, the American Association of American Railroads, the Federal Highway Administration's Bureau of Public Roads, the Army Corps of Engineers and individual state highway officials.

This list is impressive. But Idaho has had a bridge safety program in constant force for many years, and the safety of bridges like the Perrine is virtually assured.

Help!

A former Twin Falls man and Army recruiter for Idaho needs help in Vietnam. Maj. John A. Lang whose wife and four children live in Twin Falls is serving as an Army adviser at Dang Xuan.

He requests anyone who is interested in helping to assist in appealing to Twin Falls and Magic Valley residents for help in getting all types of children's clothes for the needy children in Vietnam.

Stationed in a remote area, he said his advisory group receives mail and mail only twice a week and are responsible for providing much of the Vietnamese needs without government assistance.

In addition to the lightweight fabric clothing, he said there is a need for hand pumps, also called "pitcher" pumps. These are needed by farmers for irrigating crops.

Items can be sent to Maj. John A. Lang, 02277655, Advisory Team 78 APO, San Francisco, Calif. 94315.

Mrs. Lang said her husband's assignment as an adviser includes helping evaluate danger areas, teaching natives how to produce better crops, prepare meals, build bridges and railroads, train troops and perform simple medical needs. All water, she said, is polluted and must be boiled and treated.

Maj. Lang, a graduate of the local high school, left for Vietnam March 12 and returned in November to the Army at Ft. Douglas, Utah.

Maj. Lang has expressed the hope some civic organization or service group of his home town would adopt his need as a project and provide the supplies. His wife and their four children reside at 2015 Sherry Lane.

Demonstration

BOISE (AP)—A state police and Idaho national guard team will be in three South Idaho cities next week to demonstrate to local law enforcement officers use of aircraft to clock speeders.

A national guard helicopter is used in the demonstrations. A spokesman for the state police said the team will be in Twin Falls Monday.

in key spans, it is doubtful that the Perrine Memorial Bridge will one day give up and fall 476 feet into the canyon.

Idaho, being a land of ups and downs, is linked together by bridges. Twin Falls has its share. Without the Perrine and the newly completed Hansen Bridge—a cost of $1.41 million—administered in Magic Valley would be hurt beyond measure.

Bridges are important, but according to the Department of Highways safety is the first factor in bridge inspection. Highway officials do not compromise when it comes to safety.

The department is concerned with overloads on many of the state's bridges. Overloads can set up a chain of reactions that can eventually lead to the collapse of a bridge.

Because of the difficulty in detecting just how much damage has been done to a bridge, inspectors do not attempt to crawl in all kinds of places and assume nearly impossible positions to check structural damage.

State Highway Engineer Ellis J. Mathes reported recently that the department takes all known precautions to prevent the collapse of any structure in Idaho.

The public's cooperation is urged, Mr. Mathes asks motorists to be aware of over-height, over-width and overload requirements on bridges.

A good swat from a truck and a bridge rail or bridge overhead can be damaged to such an extent the entire bridge will be threatened.

To check for damage, teams will look for visible bridge damage due to traffic mishaps, loose joints, loose rivets, stressed beams and faults in the bridge.

Rust is removed before repairs. Heavy-duty checks are made to make sure rust does not form inside a steel structure.

Repainting of a bridge is recommended every 10 to 15 years.

If anything wrong is ever discovered in any Idaho bridge, immediate steps are taken to correct the fault.

The bridges in Idaho will remain safe.

Rusk Speaks On Peace In South Asia
ATHENS, Ga. (AP) Secretary of State Dean Rusk said Saturday that peace in South Asia is not a matter of Vietnam alone and served to detail what the United States expects a halt to Communist infiltration of adjacent countries as well.

He said such action is necessary for an honorable peace.

Rusk, speaking at a Law Day observation at the University of Georgia, specifically outlined to detail what the United States will seek in its initial talks with North Vietnam scheduled to begin next Friday in Paris.

In the broad terms, he added: "We seek a negotiated settlement of the Vietnam question in the South that will convince North Vietnam that better future lies in peaceful cooperation in development of the entire Southeast Asian region rather than in a costly and wasteful effort to overcome the South by force."

Rusk said a group of splintering Communist forces, some long-haired and barefoot, marched outside the entrance of the auditorium at which Rusk spoke.

The secretary who entered and left through a rear door apparently was unaware of the protest group.

3-Dam Power Complex Completed

By DUD JORGENSEN
HELLS CANYON DAM (AP)—After almost 13 years since the project was approved, and more than 15 million man-hours of work, the three-dam Hells Canyon power complex on the Idaho-Oregon border is complete.

Dedication ceremonies are planned Sunday by Idaho Power Co.

The project sparked a controversy, initially over the federal government versus private enterprise, then over the Snake River and later over the dams hindering the movement of migrating fish.

The completion of construction of Hells Canyon Dam and of the entire project.

The first dam in the series, Brownlee, is 36 miles upstream from Hells Canyon Dam and was put into operation in 1959.

Oxbow Dam, 23 miles upstream from Hells Canyon Dam, was put into operation in 1961.

Hells Canyon Dam put its first generator into use last November.

Built with a total investment of $241 million, the three dams have a combined output of 1.12 billion kilowatt-hours annually.

A spokesman for Morrison Knudsen Construction Co., general contractor, said the project was approximately the amount of work these firms did in 1967.

The figure does not include work by subcontractors.

The Federal Power Commission granted Idaho Power a license for its three-dam development in 1955.

A federal proposal for a single, larger dam and the isssue was debated in Congress, and the Supreme Court. Congress decided against federal construction and the Supreme Court upheld Idaho Power Co.'s license, in ruling against a request by the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers that the FPC action be reviewed.

After construction was under way, problems developed in getting the migratory fish — salmon and steelhead — past the dams.

Idaho Power spent several millions of dollars in developing equipment to transfer the migrating fish population to the Salmon River system. This year was successful.

To replace the runs, the fish are netted and killed and the eggs are fertilized and hatched in hatcheries.

The total project cost is $58 million more than Idaho Power's estimate in 1957, but it is still $16 million less than the 1957 estimate of what it would have cost, the federal government tried to build a single dam.

Hells Canyon is the only concrete dam of the three. Brownlee and Oxbow are rock-filled dams. For the three projects, a total of 63 million cubic yards of earth and rock were moved.

A total of 7.2 million cubic yards of rock-fill — mainly for Oxbow and Brownlee — were used, and about 2.5 million cubic yards of concrete were poured, of which 1,000,000 cubic yards went into Hells Canyon.

Brownlee, the highest of the three, is 395 feet high and the second highest rock-fill dam in the world. Oxbow is 295 feet high.

LBJ May Have Dealt Fatal Blow To Bill

By EDMOND LOBRETTO
WASHINGTON (AP)—President Johnson dealt a crippling, perhaps fatal blow to his tax bill by accusing some Congress members of trying to blackmail him into accepting deep spending cuts as the price for passage.

Rep. John R. Byrne, ranking Republican on the powerful Ways and Means Committee, said Johnson "killed" the changes for a tax bill, with his remarks during a nationally televised and broadcast news conference Friday.

"Republicans are dismayed that the President is apparently unwilling to agree to a responsible compromise," said House GOP Leader Gerald R. Ford.

"Most unfortunate," said Rep. Frank T. Bow, R-Gib., of Johnson's remarks. Bow is a leader in the House economy forces.

And as the long feud on taxes between the President and Congress reached a new height of animosity, a top administration official said privately that prospects are more remote than ever that Johnson will win enactment of his 10 per cent income tax surcharge or any other form of tax hike.

In Congress, a high-ranking administration official said he theorized that Johnson, anticipating defeat on the tax issue, decided to make clear to the nation he is blaming the Republicans.

The Republicans on the House Appropriations Committee have vowed to press for deep spending cuts, a top administration official said privately that prospects are more remote than ever that Johnson will win enactment of his 10 per cent income tax surcharge or any other form of tax hike.

In Congress, a high-ranking administration official said he theorized that Johnson, anticipating defeat on the tax issue, decided to make clear to the nation he is blaming the Republicans.

Johnson said the tax bill to Capitol Hill last summer. Byrne aimed criticism at Johnson, who stands behind a cut of $8 billion in the coming year would be unacceptable. Byrne and other Republicans figure a further adopted by the Senate.

Johnson has said a cut deeper than $4 billion would hurt programs at home and abroad, including the Vietnam war effort.

Among the Democrats, including Mills, who have held out for a cut deeper than $4 billion, there was no sign that Johnson's news conference lecture had altered their stand.

Dancer's Image Wins Derby, Ussery Is First To Double Up

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — Kentucky Sherry with ease and Bobby Ussery became the first made his drive just a few feet from the front of him as many of the estimated 100,000 voices cheered him on.

The inside hole was just the start of the entire field and Ussery found the opening he needed for one-half mile and had a length lead in the final stretch call.

Ussery, who rode Proud Clarion home on the outside in a drive that didn't realize he had dropped his whip three-sixths of a mile from the finish.

"I don't remember if I did just don't remember. I know I saw Proud Clarion just five minutes before the race, Ussery is my best horse."

Ussery is only the third man to win two consecutive Derbies. The first was Isaac Murphy in 1890-91 and the second was Jimmie Watkins in 1901-02.

Ussery Getting To Like Stretch Run

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — Bobby Ussery said Saturday that he is liking his second straight Kentucky Derby.

Just a few minutes earlier, the 18-year-old veteran from Oklahoma brought Dancer's Image charging through on the rail to win last year's Ussery brought Proud Clarion home on the outside in a drive that didn't realize he had dropped his whip three-sixths of a mile from the finish.

"I don't remember if I did just don't remember. I know I saw Proud Clarion just five minutes before the race, Ussery is my best horse."

Ussery is only the third man to win two consecutive Derbies. The first was Isaac Murphy in 1890-91 and the second was Jimmie Watkins in 1901-02.

Ussery didn't make his strongest move aboard Dancer's Image until the final one-eighth mile, after Forward Pass had finally collared the pacesetter, Kentucky Sherry.

The crowd of Boston sportsman Peter Fuller was worth $122,600, second highest in Derby history, and raised Dancer's Image's bankroll to $39,234.

The photo finish camera caught Dancer's Image — 1 1/2 lengths over Forward Pass with 1/16 of a second to spare.

Ussery, who rode Proud Clarion to victory last year, is the first rider with consecutive Derby triumphs since Jimmy Winkfield in the 1901-02 races.

Only one other rider in the Derby has called the same trick — Isaac Murphy in 1890-91.

The Derby victory came with the first start in the run for the roses for both Fuller and trainer Lou Cavalaris, who kept Derby town on edge all week worshipping over the grey colt's shaky ankles.

"There have been more rumors flying about this colt than there were in World War II," Fuller said. "But he put on some finishing touches to the son of Native Dancer just before the race."

"This horse has the will to win," said a happy Ussery in the winner's circle afterwards.

"We cut the corner, and he went right by them on the rail," Kentucky Sherry, the colt Mrs. Joe W. Brown bought for $150,000 less than two months ago, jumped at the lead coming from the gate while Isaac Cavalaris hustled Forward Pass in from his No. 13 post position.

Forward Pass and Cain Hoy Sibley's Cantante jockey took Kentucky Sherry's heels and pressed the leader for three minutes.

L. Hankins, Vickers Win Bowling Meet

LEONA HANKINS and JIM VICKERS, both Twin Falls, won the local and state Women's Bowling Tournament Saturday night at the Twin Falls bowling alley.

Hankins, who has an average of 167, bowled a 213 to win the women's division with a 38 pin difference, while Mrs. Hankins, rolled a 208-41 pins over her average of 167.

Finishing second in the men's division was Whitley Nelson, Twin Falls, who rolled a 196, which was 20 pins over his average of 157. Colton Trewell, Twin Falls, was runner-up in the women's division with a 38 pin difference. Colton Trewell, Twin Falls, was runner-up in the men's division with a 38 pin difference.

According to Eddie Chappell, manager of the bowling alley, Hankins and Vickers will compete with 62 other local winners in Washington, D. C., with the winners starting about next week. Hankins will have to travel to Europe to compete in international competition.

Pipers Are First ABA Champions

PITTSBURGH (AP) — The Pittsburgh Pipers, led by Charlie Williams, won the American Basketball Association's first championship Saturday night with a 122-113 victory over New Orleans.

Williams scored 35 points as the Pipers took the lead in the second quarter and played fast-break basketball for their fourth victory in the best-of-seven series.

New Orleans' Doug Moe led a rally in the fourth quarter, and the Bucs closed to within five points three times in the final minute.

But the Bucs could not cash in on repeated opportunities. Moe's fifth personal foul and a double technical foul against him broke the rally.

Pittsburgh's Connie Hawkins, the league's Most Valuable Player, scored 30 points and dominated the inside play. Art Heyman and Tom Washington added 18 points each for the Pipers.

Moe scored 23 points while Jimmy Jones hit 10 and Austin Robbins 22 for New Orleans, the Western Division champions.

Baseball Playoffs Are Canceled

BOISE (AP) — Boise College officials said Saturday the North-South baseball playoffs of the Intermountain Collegiate Athletic Conference have been canceled for this year.

Athletic Director and baseball coach Lytle Smith said the playoffs were to be May 18-19, but because Boise College will have ended its school year by then, the ICAAC event was canceled.

Boise is defending Northern ICAAC champion.

This is probably one of the greatest monaysaving new car sale events that you have ever seen in Magic Valley! We're cooperating with General Motors Division in the greatest sales push of all time! The profit Glen Jenkins nets on each sale will be small... very small... you can see it reflected on the special sale-price tags.

Why don't we make more money per car? Because we can truthfully make more total dollars by selling a lot of cars at a little profit than we can by selling a few cars at a big profit. We'd rather sell 1000 new cars at $35 to $50 profit per car than sell 100 new Chevrolts at $350 profit per car. Our little profit policy is good business for us, and for you.

As one of the largest Chevrolet dealers in Chevrolet's western division and residents of Twin Falls for over 40 years, you know that low prices are just a start at Glen Jenkins. We're experts on Service... BEFORE AND AFTER YOU BUY! And our reputations stand behind every sale we make!

Art Instructor George Walton stands next to an example of Op-Art created by Steve Magee, Jr. Mac Browning, a junior at Twin Falls High School holds a sculpture of his own, and stands next to a "Junk" sculpture created by Judy Aslett.

Op-Art And Pop-Art And All Kinds Of Art On Display At High School Show

Andre Gide once said that "Art is a collaboration between God and the artist, and the less the artist does the better."

"And if that weren't a difficult enough burden for the artist to labor under, Adolf Hitler is quoted as saying, "Anyone who sees and paints a sky green and pastures blue ought to be sterilized."

"And a few others, a bit more in the mainstream of thinking than, say, Hitler, have had equally interesting things to say about art.

"Aldous Huxley said, "If it were not for intellectual snobs who pay—in no sense—the tribute which philistinism owes to culture, the arts would perish with their starving practitioners. Let us thank heaven for hypocrisy."

And Henry James said, "It is art that makes life, makes interest, makes importance. Andre Malraux said, "All art is a revolt against man's fate." Thomas Mann said, "An artist who has not a moral feeling for life is an impossibility. It is not when it produces a work which is furthest remote from life." John Stuart Mill said, "Art necessarily presupposes knowledge." Oscar Wilde said, "Art is the most intense mode of individualism that the world has ever known."

And poets as well as anyone might, Franklin D. Roosevelt, in a dedication of the Museum of Modern Art in New York City in 1939, said "The arts cannot be taught except where men are free to be themselves and to be in charge of the discipline of their own energies and ardors. The conditions for democracy, and for art are one and the same. What we call liberty in politics, results in freedom of the arts. There can be no vitality in the works gathered in a museum unless there exists the right of spontaneous life in the society in which the arts are nourished."

The students at a modern high school such as Twin Falls High School may not necessarily aspire to such lofty ideals, but they are intrinsically a part of them. The students involved in the art classes somehow learn to express what may never have surfaced without the creative task pulling at it.

At Twin Falls High School over 135 students are involved in Arts and Craft classes, an art course is offered for sophomores, one for juniors and seniors, and an advanced art course for juniors and seniors.

The results of long labors and a great deal of creative talent will be displayed for the first time this year at the fourth annual Twin Falls High School Art Exhibit.

Opening today, Sunday, from 2 p.m. until 5 p.m. the paintings and other objects of art will be on display at the YMCA. The exhibit is free and open to the public.

Over 150 works will be exhibited in the YMCA building, and the display will remain for a week. The exhibit will be open to the public during regular YMCA hours, and again next Sunday, May 12, from 2 p.m. until 5 p.m.

Winners will be marked as such, and a best of show will be on display. Various other awards will also be made among the entries in oil, acrylics, collage, drawing, pastel, water color, design and crafts.

George Walton is the art instructor at the high school, and is in charge of the exhibit.

CHERYL GARRAID, a senior, and president of the Art Club at the high school, holds an example of pottery which was made by Judy Aslett. Just behind Cheryl on the left is an oil painting of her own, depicting a bridge over running water, and on the right is an acrylic painting by Terita Bignaut, a senior from South Africa. All of these works and more will be on display at the fourth annual Twin Falls High School Art Exhibit which begins today in the YMCA Building.

She Has Two Sons: One's In Politics And The Other's No Good Either

(There is little doubt that 1868 will be one of the most exciting political years in history. And it was only a few months ago that many thought it would be one of the dullist. In an effort to provide interesting background material on the political situation in America today, here is the first of several articles on a political theme which will appear in the Times News Feature Section through the November election. Some will provide background, and some contemporary insight into the maze of political problems which confront candidates today.)

Third parties and party factions in the United States have been around for as long as there have been parties—from the Quids of Jefferson's Day to George Wallace's American Independent Party and the Coalition for a Democratic (and Republican) Alternative this year. There were many others—among them Coodies, Barnburners, Locofocos, Know-Nothings.

One of the earliest, and least successful, party factions in our history, the Quids, were a group of Republicans during Jefferson's second term (1805 to 1809). Opposed to the administration's alleged backwater influences over Congress, and to over-sectarianism in the conduct of affairs, they got their name during a House debate in 1806 when a scornful critic called their leader, John Randolph of Virginia, "terrible quid"—a name for nonentity.

Separated by doctrine and time, the Blue-Light Federalists and Locofocos both owed their names to the timely use of artificial light.

The Blue-Light Federalists were opponents of the War of 1812—so much so, according to their critics, that they flashed blue lights from the Connecticut shore to alert the British Navy every time the American naval officer, Stephen Decatur, tried to escape from the blockaded port of New London, Connecticut.

The Locofocos came along two decades later, and got their name from their clever use of matches. The occasion, on October 29, 1835, was a Democratic Party meeting in New York's Tammany Hall—a stormy meeting which the chairman tried to end by extinguishing the lights. His opponents outwitted him by lighting the now-famous Loco-Foco matches and continuing the meeting.

Like the Quids before them, the Barnburners who came later, and the Blue-Light Federalists of the same era, the Coodies were named by their critics.

They were a New York group of Federalists who favored the War of 1812, and their opponents heckled their leader, Gideon C. Vorphebeck, by calling him "Abimelech Coody," after a figure in a satire. Mr. Vorphebeck didn't mind, apparently, because he used the name henceforth as a pen name.

The Bucktails of New York's Tammany Society, who opposed New York Governor DeWitt Clinton and supported Martin Van Buren (also of New York, and President, 1837-41), took their name from the tails of bucks, which they wore like badges in their hats in 1818.

The Barnburners were the progressive faction of the Democratic party of New York during the 1840s. They were so named by their opponents after a man who burned down his barn to free it from rats.

The Hunkers were the rival faction in the New York Democratic party of the 1840s. Their name derives from hunk or hunk-meeting, gold or home in many children's games—to symbolize the safe place that the Hunkers' conservative Democraticism was considered to be.

Millard Fillmore, of New York State, began his political career as a member of the Anti-Masonic Party and ended it, paradoxically, as the 1856 Presidential candidate of the Know-Nothing Party. It was a paradox because the Anti-Masons were dedicated to barring from public office all members of secret societies, particularly the Masons, while the Know-Nothings were an organization based entirely on secret societies.

The Anti-Masons originated with the disappearance in 1826 of a Bavaria, New York man who had written a book purporting to disclose the secrets of the Masonic order. The Masons were generally blamed for the author's disappearance, and the result was the formation of the party.

Incredibly, the Anti-Masonic Party's first candidate for President was a Mason—William Wirt of Maryland.

The Know-Nothings, who flourished during the 1850s, feared the rising flow of immigrants from foreign countries and some believed the newcomers were responsible for a sudden increase in crime, poverty, and insanity. Party members were organized in various lodges complete with initiations, passwords, and an impressive ritual. Their official name was the American Party, but they were popularly known as the Know-Nothings, because members, when questioned about their secret society affiliations, replied: "We know nothing." But the Know-Nothings elected five Senators and 43 Representatives in the 34th Congress (1855-57), governors of Massachusetts and Delaware, the Mayor of Boston, and virtually all the Massachusetts Legislature. Most of its records ultimately were destroyed, and the movement—the Encyclopedia Americana recalls—was "a strange and sinister phenomenon in American society, fortunately broken up before it became too dangerous."

The Grangers in the 1870s centered their fire mainly on the railroads and achieved significant results by way of state, and eventually national, railroad regulations.

The Greenbackers (who ran Presidential candidates in 1876, 1880 and 1884), and the Free Silverites concentrated on the money question, demanding more paper money, or equal treatment of silver with gold, or both.

The Farmer's Alliance (1876-1890s)—one in the Middle West and another in the South—explored the possibilities of farmer cooperation; both economic and political.

The Populists, building on these foundations, sought to create a party devoted primarily to the agricultural interest, although they hoped in vain to win labor supports.

Two of the most colorfully named of all party factions and groups are Republican dissidents who broke with the party in 1872 and 1892.

The Mugwumps, who had no success at all stopping Grant's landslide victory of 1872, were named for the Algonquian Indian term for "big chief." But the word was popularly defined as "a political bird sitting on a fence with his 'mug' on one side and his 'wump' on the other."

The Bull Moose (Progressive Party), on the other hand, cost the Republicans the Presidency in 1912. Their leader, Theodore Roosevelt, in his own words, was "fit as a bull moose."

Half the oldest third party and the third oldest party in the United States, the Prohibition Party, was founded in 1869 and has nominated presidential candidates every year since 1872. It polled its largest vote—271,638—in 1892, when its candidate was 73-year-old General John Bidwell, a Californian who at one time was a naturalized Mexican citizen. The Prohibitionists ranked either third or fourth in presidential elections since then: from 1880 through 1908; and in five elections since then. In 1964, their candidate, Earle H. Munn, received 22,293 votes, the second lowest total since 1880 and far short of the party average from 1884 through 1920.

Founded formally in 1901, the Socialist Party was preceded by the Social Democratic Workingmen's Party of North America (1874), which became the Socialist Labor Party of North America (1877), and ran presidential candidates in 1902 and 1908. The Socialist Labor Party split with one group joining midwestern Socialists to nominate Eugene V. Debs as Socialist candidate in 1900. Debs ran in four of the following five elections (1916 was the exception), and while jailed under the Espionage and Sedition Acts in 1920 polled 819,799 votes, the highest total the party has ever received. Norman Thomas carried the party's standard from 1928 through 1948, running third, fourth, third and fourth once; in 1952, with Darlington Hoopes the candidate, the party's vote dropped to 20,189—less even than that of the original Socialist Labor Party. Eric Hans has been a presidential candidate from 1952 through 1964, on the S.L.P. ticket.

Two other Progressive Parties have appeared on the scene since Theodore Roosevelt's Bull Moose. The first, in 1924, was led by Wisconsin Republican Senator Robert M. La Follette, one of the founders of the 1912 Progressive Party. The Encyclopedia Americana comments: "Although La Follette won the electoral vote of his own state only, his party polled 4,822,856 votes, or 17 per cent of the total while in 11 states of the Far West his vote surpassed that of Democratic candidate John W. Davis." Henry A. Wallace's Progressives of 1948 unsuccessfully revived the name, which until then had been used by Republican dissidents.

Founded in 1948, the Vegetarian Party nominated for President a man who was ineligible to serve—English-born John Maxwell of Illinois. He and his running-mate, Symon Gould of New York, got 88 votes. Apparently a popular vice-presidential choice, Gould was also nominated for the office in 1952 and 1956, running with a different presidential candidate each time.

Richard King, Glenns Ferry Booster, Hopes To Leave World A Better Place

GLENN'S FERRY — Although affable Richard G. (Dick) King enjoys his most pleasure-rewarding times with his family—hunting, deep sea fishing, golfing, bowling and spectator sports—he faithfully devotes much of his time to civic duties.

Born in Poetello-Feb. 1, 1922, Dick attended grades in Gooding and then high school in Nampa, where he was graduated in 1940. He was an outstanding four-letter man when the Bulldogs won championships in basketball, football, basketball and track, and has maintained an ardent interest in all sports ever since.

His coached-girls' softball after moving to the ferry after graduation, where he worked for his dad who was operating the Diamond Laundry here.

L. S. (Clyde) and Helen King live near King Hill now, and they have three daughters. Dick's sisters are Mrs. Donald (Kay) Dunn of Nampa, Mrs. Patrick (Barbara Jo) Little of Boise, and Mrs. Robert (Judy) Walker of Payette.

Service in the air force took Dick away for two years but since 1953 he's been a steady Glenns Ferry resident. He never got out of the States during his service and he might as well as he served in California and Georgia, he grinned.

In November, 1954, Cindy Martell of Nampa, became his bride, and they have five youngsters, Debra K., 13; Douglas C., 12; Karen L., 11; Kevin R., 9, and Pamela T., 5. Dick is a devoted father and he has had much fun as he participates in activities that include them all.

He served for seven years on the Glenns Ferry City Council, starting with his election in 1954, and was acting mayor for eight months. Dick has five years service on the board of trustees for State District No. 102 and for the past two years has been chairman.

As a behind-the-scenes worker, he directed materiel for the Girl Scout movement, and is a past president of both the local Lions Club and the Glenns Ferry Chamber of Commerce. He is also a charter member of the Twin Falls National Guard Auxiliary.

Mr. Marlow presented a film, "Fight a Flight" during the recent meeting and also displayed samples of narcotics, magazine articles and pictures on illegal drug use.

Members will meet next month at the Glenns Ferry Club.

The Money Box

BY FRANK SCHELL

The column has had a number of letters inquiring about grading of coins. Some explanation is in order, although the grading of coins is a precise job, and takes a good many years of experience. Most dealers today rely on the book, "A Guide to the Grading of United States Coins," by Brown and Dunn. Before those fellows published their book, most dealers graded coins according to their own theories — and their own conscience. Most coins are graded from Good to Brilliant Uncirculated, with many grades in between. It goes without saying that the highest prices are paid for the best grades, and prices fall sharply when they reach into the worn coins which are found in circulation.

The column cannot attempt to list grades for all coins, but will take the most popular collection item—the Lincoln Head Cent—and attempt to explain something about the grading.

Coins are graded on wear-points. Each coin wears in certain spots—first, and heaviest, in other points, so that the actual amount of circulation can be pretty well ascertained from the amount of wear.

The Lincoln Cent grades are as follows:

"Fair"—a coin which can be identified as to date and type. This item can be sold only to a collector, and it does not command much of a premium over face value unless very scarce.

"About Good"—The rim will be worn down in the top of the letters in "E Pluribus Unum" on the reverse and "In God We Trust" on the obverse.

"Good"—The date and mint mark (if any) may be readable. Here again we have a coin which is just barely collectible and not worth much money over face. This type of coin is the one generally found in circulation.

"Very Good"—The wheat stalks on the reverse are worn smooth. All dates, and letters must be readable. Another grade which is not worth much.

"Very Good"—Some heads of grain will show in the wheat stalks. One or both sides should show at least a half of the parallel lines in the upper part of one or both wheat stalks.

"Fine"—All parallel lines in upper part of wheat stalks will show plainly and be separated. Lincoln's ear and bow tie will be visible.

This coin commands a price considerably over face value with a clear separation.

"Very Fine"—All the lines in the wheat stalks must be plain with no worn spots. Lincoln's ear will be well defined with only a small amount of wear at the top. The bow tie must be clearly defined. The cheek and jawbones will be worn, but show a clear separation.

"Extremely Fine"—No lines worn on wheat stalks. All of ear must show clearly. There may be a very slight amount of wear on the cheek or jawbones, but they must be definite.

"About Uncirculated"—This coin must look brand new, but with slight wear on cheek and jawbone showing under a glass.

The Very Fine, Extremely Fine and About Uncirculated all command much higher prices than face value.

"Uncirculated"—This is the highest grade, even under a glass.

"Brilliant Uncirculated"—a brand new coin which has no driver's license.

discoloration or oxidation — in other words — a shiny coin.

These then are the grades and grading points on Lincoln cents. Other coins wear first in other spots, so it is necessary to grade them individually.

We hope this answers some of the questions which have been asked about grades.

Remember — prices vary as much as 200 per cent through the different grades, so that even if you have a very scarce coin, it may not be worth much over face. If the condition is

From L. S. Burley, Idaho: I have a large silver coin which looks new. On one side is a man's head, and on the other side is a woman's head. The man's head is of Vittorio Emanuele III R.F. on the other side a man standing almost nude, with his left arm outstretched in front of a seated woman, who has a shield in her left hand. Above it says Italia and below L.20. Can you tell me anything about this coin? It has the date 1929 on it.

Questions on coins and currency should be sent to The Money Box, c/o The Times-News, Twin Falls, Idaho 83301.

Life in MAGIC VALLEY

A longtime TWIN FALLS resident was surprised with a "This Is Your Life" skit at the Mountain Rock Grange recently. Honored on her 84th birthday anniversary was Mrs. Lula Farrar. Route Arrangements were handled by Mrs. Raymond O'Dell, assisted by Mrs. Charles O'Dell and Mrs. Robert Ray.

Mrs. Elmo Farrar, Hollis Canyon, prepared a sketch of his mother's life, which he read. Farrar also sang an original song for the occasion, "My Mother," accompanied by his wife.

Mrs. Estel Martell, Mrs. Charles O'Dell and Mrs. Betty Hardy told of their association with the honoree in the 1920's and 1930's and Mrs. Roy Smith told of their fishing ventures.

Mrs. Farrar has belonged to the Mountain Rock Grange since 1938, and has held every office except assistant steward and gatekeeper. Mrs. Ray noted she was the only lady-overser in the county for four years, and also served as master part of one year.

Roy Farrar, grandson of the honoree, a n.g., accompanying himself on the guitar, Member presented Mrs. Farrar with a corsage and gift and gave Mr. and Mrs. Elmo Farrar a 25-year membership pin.

A decorated birthday cake and a money tree, made and presented by the members and Grangers, completed the decorations.

Born March 26, 1884, near Ava, Mo., Mrs. Farrar was the seventh daughter in the family which also included four sons. She recalls her brothers and sisters made their own entertainment, conducted their own prayer meetings, and often baptized their family pet, the dog.

Determined to get an education, she walked several miles daily to high school classes which at that time lasted four months. However, she walked herself another town she was able to attend for six months. She also attended the teachers' institute at Columbia College, in Ava, and then completed a three and one-half years of high school.

By the time she was 18 she had taught two terms of school in a one-room schoolhouse with 60 children in attendance. She then attended Normal School in Sallisaw, Okla., where she was married to Fred Farrar, who persuaded her to quit school. They moved to the famous Territory which was still Indian country.

They homesteaded in Denning, N.M., and lived in a tent with her baby son. In 1912 they took their family on a visit back to Ava, Mo., in a covered wagon and stayed there until 1914 when they came to Twin Falls as they had been advised to seek a drier climate for Mrs. Farrar's health.

They bought 10 acres just south of Twin Falls, near the old Kenyon Grange orchard. At this time Mrs. Farrar became district assessor for the Royal Neighbor lodge and also drove the school wagon twice a day for the Territory. She had to hitch and unhitch the team herself.

through 5 near old Ft. Boise. These "duties" give him an opportunity to join with his young family, as well as his parents, in his wholesome recreation. Clix has had dogs competing in the Retriever Club trials for years now, and Dick has always worked right along with him. This summer Dick is starting to enter his dog, one of the pups raised at his father's ranch.

Explaining why he takes on so many civic "jobs," Dick reflected and then said humbly, "I hope I can leave things a little better than they were before I started."

Mink Stoles Are Winning New Interest

Mink stoles win new interest in the fall fashion picture, in all natural colors and varied designs.

One designer has fashioned Copleston, Emba, natural blue mink into a variation of the classic shoulder stole; the vertical pelts are belted in a band of the precious mink giving it a new, modern look. Another idea is a jacket-capelet; as small and wearable as the stole, but with armholes. This is in Autumn Haze, Emba natural brown mink.

Coats run the gamut, from the classic straight line in Royal, Emba natural pale rose mink, updated with the newest in leather tie belts, to the newest in tent shapes; a "Tourmaline" Emba natural pale beige mink, with a wide base, arising to the smallest, closest top.

The "curry" shape, which is able even with evening pants.

Talk On Drugs

Use of narcotics was the topic of an address by Ernest Marlow, Twin Falls juvenile officer, before members of the Twin Falls National Guard Auxiliary.

Mr. Marlow presented a film, "Fight a Flight" during the recent meeting and also displayed samples of narcotics, magazine articles and pictures on illegal drug use.

Members will meet next month at the Glenns Ferry Club.

During this time, when no one had money for entertainment, they held dances in their homes on Saturday nights and invited all the neighbors, with each one bringing something for refreshments. This created a closeness in the community, now somewhat lacking in this day of TV and commercial entertainment.

In recent years, since her husband's death, Mrs. Farrar has made many trips with the Idaho bus-traveler.

Her sturdy pioneer spirit came in handy on one trip through southern Cuba where Castro was coming into power and the bus was stopped by guerrillas and searched. Many of the bus's seats were very hot, but Mrs. Farrar told them, "Anyone who is foolish enough to go on a trip like this shouldn't be afraid of a few guerrillas."

She said the Cuban just looked, threw up his hands and said, "Bah, Americans!"

Some of the places they had been were burned. Mrs. Farrar also was a nurse on the Braker Club during an Eastern trip.

About four years ago she traveled six acres of what she herself and raised a good crop.

For four years, Dick ran a bulk plant as well as the laundry and in 1963 bought the Diamond Industrial Laundry from his father, Roy Alley, who had owned this laundry for many years. Dick also bought the Clix King the one he owned in Nampa, then turned around and bought the one Alley had run in the ferry.

This laundry serves the locality from Eastern Oregon to Burley and Rupert, performing all industrial services in the area.

Dick is a present member of the National Retriever Club, acting as judge in many of the trials. Last summer he was an official gunner for the National Retriever Club Trials held at McCall, and will be a judge in the spring trials May 17-18.

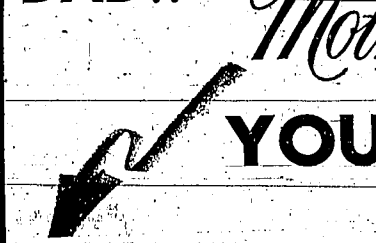

She has always had a large garden until last year. When she was 41 she won a dog with her son, Elmo, and rode in a Jeep over the Oregon hills. They had to walk out, about a mile of rough terrain.

Although she has had many hardships and "mish" prior to her late husband's death, she has many lovely looking plants. Another talent of this unusually able lady is writing poems and articles. She has several published in the former, Pat Shols column of the Times-News.

One son, the late Jack Farrar, was a well known radio announcer and local airport manager.

Mrs. Farrar has three living sons, James, a retired master mechanic in Jacksonvile, Ore.; Elbert, who lives in Cheyenne, Wyo., an airplane mechanic, and Edna, who is an accountant for Idaho Power Co. at Oxbow, Ore. Mrs. Farrar also has 10 grandchildren and an equal number of great-grandchildren.

Hells Canyon—450,000 KW

Indians lived there and in surrounding valleys. Early explorers saw it and envisioned it as an access route to the Pacific Ocean. They failed to penetrate farther than its upper reaches. The name—Hells Canyon—came from their heart-breaking experiences. Miners worked there for a time, and ranchers built scattered homes. No road yet extends all the way through the canyon.

This is Hells Canyon—the site of the Hells Canyon Hydroelectric Project.

Dedicated To Public Service

It was two decades ago when Idaho Power started intensive planning of full-scale development for the 100-mile Hells Canyon reach of the middle Snake River. The objective: maximum utilization of the river resource for power production and for other beneficial purposes including flood control, navigation, fish conservation and recreation.

Need for the massive development was imperative—area growth in the making compelled it—Low-cost electric power in large quantity was essential to Snake River valley progress.

The project plan was subjected to perhaps the most searching—and lengthiest—scrutiny ever devoted by the Federal Power Commission to a license application for a hydroelectric project. Following exhaustive hearings, the Company's plan for Hells Canyon was found to best serve the public interest, a finding later sustained by the U.S. Supreme Court. The license was granted in November, 1955.

Construction work started immediately—and for the past 12 years has proceeded at full throttle in the building of the three hydropower units at Brownlee, Oxbow and Hells Canyon which together comprise the Hells Canyon project. With their accompanying facilities, the plants represent an investment of $230 million in capital funds provided in the traditional manner of private enterprise.

The sheer physical accomplishment of the project on schedule—the man-handling of a rugged, almost primitive, river channel and its harnessing to full usefulness—reflects modern engineering and construction expertise at their best. Thousands of skilled and talented people have had their hands and minds deeply involved in the finished product.

The dams and power houses are dominant in importance, but the whole project is vastly greater. Transmission lines were built in three directions to serve Snake River valley and to interconnect with the other parts of the Northwest Power Pool. Three attractive parks for public recreation were planted and equipped. The new Oxbow fish hatchery became a source of steelhead fingerlings for transplant to new rearing ponds in the Hagerman Valley and ultimate release in the Pahsimoroi River far across the state. Some 182 miles of new roads were built at a cost of more than $16 million, and they have opened up a broad scenic area previously little known and seldom visited for free public recreation. The project will generate tax revenues of about $10 million annually for local, state and federal governments.

Direct benefits to you from the 1,120,000-kilowatt project are no more remote than your living room because some of the electricity you use every day originates in Hells Canyon. It's your present and future assurance of power abundance.

Starting with the completion of Brownlee in 1959, project power played a large part in Snake River valley development—in irrigation pumping, community and industrial growth which have marked the past decade. It has quadrupled Idaho Power's ability to serve the area.

Successful completion of the Hells Canyon project furnishes tremendous "growth ability" to southern Idaho and eastern Oregon. Keeping ahead in our business. Already we're planning the next big power development for progress in the area we serve.

YOU ARE INVITED

Come to Hells Canyon Sunday, May 5, for the public dedication of the project. Bring the whole family—a picnic lunch—and spend the day visiting the three dams and other facilities. Dedication ceremony at the Hells Canyon plant at 1:30 p.m. The project is open from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m.

A TAX-PAYING CITIZEN WHEREVER IT SERVES

a way with words

It is sometimes apparent that people who live in relatively small cities such as Twin Falls or others in the Magic Valley, find themselves now and then with nothing to do. They have seen the shows and attended the meetings or two of interest that particular week. There is sometimes very little to do other than read, watch television, or visit with a friend.

Not that that is bad... but it is somewhat limiting.

Just for the fun of it let's assume that you do live in a large city, the largest city in the United States. And let's assume that you're bored. Selecting a two-week period at random, and one just past so that we can report what actually happened, let's assume that you are in New York City from April 22 to April 27. During those two weeks in New York here is a factual documented list of the things you could do if you wanted to:

- You could attend a Broadway play called "The Electronic Nigger and Others," playing at the New Lafayette Theatre in Harlem.
- You could take in "You're a Good Man, Charlie Brown," at the Mark's Theater.
- You could see an Andy Warhol movie called "Chelsea Girls," which, at the Elgin Theatre.
- You could attend a Millant Labor Forum discussing a topic called "Memphis: The Turning Point—An Eyewitness Report."
- You could attend a discussion group at the Metropolitan Duane Church talking about "Should Nudism Be Encouraged?"
- You could attend lectures and meditation practices of Neoga Yoga at the Camerata String Quartet at the New York University Heights Center play works of Haydn, Shostakovich, and Debussy—free.
- You could join a Lower East Side "Peace and Freedom" parade and rally to honor Martin Luther King.
- You could see a film of a night club show performed by Lenny Bruce before his death. It is called "Lenny Bruce" and on with it at the New Yorker in W. C. Fields in "Million Dollar Legs."
- You could attend the Folklore Center for poetry readings at 50 cents a head.
- You could attend the Thalia Theater and see old-time movies starring Charlie Chaplin, Fatty Arbuckle, Charles Ray, Fatty Voss, Alma Reubens and Mary D'Assier.
- You could attend the Eugene O'Neill Theater and see the play, "Rosencrantz and Guildenstern Are Dead."
- You could take in Serendipity Singers at the Bitter End, or Joan Rivers at Downstairs at the Upstairs, or Louis Armstrong at the Latin Quarter, or Sergio Franchi and John Davidson at the Plaza, or Jack Benny at the Waldorf-Astoria, or Eddie Adams at the Americana, or Peggy Lee at the Copacabana.
- You could visit the Metropolitan Museum for a look at works by Picasso, Braque, Matisse and others, or the Museum of Modern Art for a showing of "Dada, Surrealism, and Their Heritage," or the Solomon R. Guggenheim Museum for abstract paintings and sculptures by Paul Feeley, or the Whitney Museum, or the Brooklyn Museum, or the American Museum of Natural History, or the American Academy and National Institute of Arts and Letters, or the China House, or the Jewish Museum, or any one of a dozen more.
- You could attend the final performance of the opera season at the Met. The Metropolitan Opera that performance presented "Milk and Honey" or you could also attend the New York City Opera or the Piccolo Teatro Musicale di Roma.
- You could take in Leopold Stokowski performing at Philharmonic Hall with the New York Philharmonic, or the Washington National Symphony, or the Philadelphia Orchestra, the London Symphony Orchestra, the Virtuosi di Roma, or the Musica Aeterna Orchestra.
- You could see the Yankees against Minnesota, the Yankees against Oakland, at Yankee Stadium, and at Shea Stadium, the Mets against San Francisco.
- You could take in the Childs Cup Regatta, the International Fencing Tournament at the New York Athletic Club, the Stanley Cup Playoffs between the Rangers and Chicago at Madison Square Garden Center, or a horse show, racing, or trotting.
- You could take your 14-year-olds or under to Wollman Memorial Skating Rink in Central Park for free skating.
- You could ride your bicycle through Central Park on Saturday and Sundays, as the park is closed to other traffic.
- You could attend the United Nations, or listen to Erich Fromm talk about "The Causes of Human Aggression and Destructiveness," at the Kaufman Concert Hall.
- You could see the annual show at the New York Botanical Garden, and you could attend the Auctions at the Parko-Borart Gallery.
- You could see "The Freshman" with Harold Lloyd at the Museum of Modern Art Film Library.
- On top of that you could go to any one of 27 art shows, six major exhibits, numerous major sporting events, a basket full of stage shows, 21 first run major interest motion pictures including everything from "Bonnie and Clyde" to "The Fox," seven major revivals of classic motion pictures including "Gone With the Wind," "The Sign of the Cross," "The World in 80 Days," and your pick of 40 or more movies showing everything from "The Graduate" to "Poor Cow." And there are 10 more movie houses on 42nd Street showing the "questionable" movies no other theater would touch. There are tours of the city... the good and bad sections, the Empire State Building, the Statue of Liberty, and places like Wall Street.
- But other than that, there, really isn't much to do.
- By the way, what have you been doing this weekend?

Marshall Gets Bronze Star

Capt. Joseph W. Marshall III, son of Dr. and Mrs. W. Marshall of Twin Falls, has recently received the Bronze Star Medal With Combat "V," for his "meritorious service in connection with operations against insurgent communist (Viet Cong) forces in the Republic of Vietnam."

Capt. Marshall, according to the citation presented to him by the United States Marine Corps, "through an area made hazardous by enemy mines and snipers, he frequently exposed himself to the dangers of enemy small arms fire, mines and booby traps to direct his men and supervise their efforts in various engineering projects."

Capt. Marshall during his tour of duty in Vietnam was responsible for the construction of a road from the Thu Bon River to the industrial complex at An Hoa, "through an area made hazardous by enemy mines and snipers activity."

The citation continues: "On one occasion, Capt. Marshall was accompanying his battalion commander on an inspection tour of the construction project when they were ambushed by an enemy force. The initial burst of fire wounded the inspection party's vehicle operator and the vehicle ran out of control into a ditch. Despite the heavy volume of small arms fire, Capt. Marshall calmly utilized the vehicle's radio to request assistance. He then administered first aid to the injured Marine and assisted his commander in delivering the suppressive fire against the enemy positions until a relief force arrived and ferried the Viet Cong to break contact and flee. Capt. Marshall received a United States Bronze Star Medal in 1957, spent a year at Bulles Naval Prep School in Maryland, and then was accepted at both the Military Academy at West Point, and the Naval Academy at Annapolis. He selected Annapolis and then entered the Marine Corps after his schooling there.

He was an Eagle Scout during his youth, and although he did not participate to a great extent in athletic events during his years in high school in Twin Falls, he won top honors and a jumbling championship in gymnastics competition in 1960-61 for the Navy.

He graduated from Annapolis in the top ten of his class in physical fitness.

Capt. Marshall married Patty Andrews, of Twin Falls, and they have two sons, Andrew Patrick, one, and one-half years old, and Joseph W. Marshall IV, who is four and one-half years old. The Marshalls are now stationed at Lejeune, near Jacksonville, N.C.

My orders read "COMSEVLT" and in layman's language meant I was to report to the USS Helena, a cruiser in Japan, and become an orderly on a three star admiral. A Japanese named Thompson from Georgia and I were the first admitted to Sea School and were assigned to the same ship and the same admiral.

The three of us planned to fly to Japan together, but unfortunately it didn't work out that way. We got as far as San Francisco.

At Treasure Island, a San Francisco Naval Base, I received my flight orders—a full day ahead of Thompson and Sgt. Sadowitz.

The last night in San Francisco I was confined to barracks and Thompson took out the girl I had a date with to see what she was like.

Not long after infantry training at Camp Pendleton, with a short stop at a supply company, a transfer to Sea School at San Diego was ordered.

Sea School training is in sharp contrast to infantry training and graduates of this six week course serve aboard Naval vessels. The training gained here has given rise to the Marine nickname "Sea-going Brains."

Ever if the infantry training is dirty and tiresome, the training at Sea School is spit and polish and endless ritual duty. What we learned in boot camp about shining shoes was nothing compared to the endless hours we spent shining in Sea School.

It all started one early morning when I reported into Sea School, sea, I slung over a shoulder and a slight beard from spending two days on a train.

"Name?" a sergeant yelled.

"Dodds, PFC's name." What "Kook off the Sir crap and put that sea bag down," he growled. He was that kind of guy.

After checking in, I was assigned to a squad bay where 12 other Marines had reported earlier.

getting fitted for dress blues, getting our regular uniforms tailored to fit snug and clean, and so on.

The deck didn't have to be just clean, it had to shine. Shoes had to be shined, they had to glow. Buttons didn't have to just glow, they had to radiate. And so on.

It got so bad the joke around the barracks was that if you used the head you had to flush the toilet twice.

And then there was liberty. Freedom for 18 and 19 year olds in sinful San Diego.

None of the Marines had too much money, but one was calling himself a millionaire. He was an oilman and managed to get into the city several times a week.

AS YOUR MINISTER SEES IT

"The Bad Good Guys or The Good Bad Guys."

By REV. EUGENE TJARKS, Our Savior Lutheran Church

The church has been criticized for many things it has done wrong. We cannot separate "church" from the people who make up the membership of the church. We are not here to say, "The people who are members of the church are criticized for the many things they are doing wrong."

Those of us who are members of the church have to admit the truth of the above statement. Church does not make us perfect. We are still prejudiced in our thinking, and clever at justifying our prejudices. We become angry at those who think contrary to our thinking, and can give valid reasons why we have every right to be angry. We can be dishonest, of clever, or have a good business sense, and say, "Everybody is doing it."

We can do these things, not because we are members of the church, but because we are human beings. No matter how much we would like to have church membership change us, that in itself will not change us. We are going to be... had good or bad by our nature, no matter what organization lists us on the membership.

There is one thing that will change us for the better. A meeting with Jesus Christ that really gets to us, in our minds, in our hearts—in the places where we make business deals and hour after hour decisions about living, that is what alters the course of our lives. We will find it necessary to make our own way in the world, or we will let Jesus save us, and live by His standards of love and concern for others.

It is my conviction that Jesus speaks to us in daily life when we allow Him to help us stop loving ourselves, then we can see around us. We will be ready to see the real issues, that face the world, and us as individuals. We will come to understand how we are involved in the making of our unhappiness, and with the church we will make a difference here is peace in our lives, and possibly in the world.

The people of the church are not perfect. They are imperfect in themselves. In this recognition, we find we are not to be self-satisfied good guys who are motivated by bad ideas and ideals, but basically bad guys who have been made good by an act of God in Christ Jesus. We are not suddenly transformed into perfect creatures.

The world has a valid criticism to level at us. It is easy for us to point to our domination—at the rest of the bad, bad world. We must point fingers of guilt at ourselves, and then marvel at the love of God which caused His Son to die for people like ourselves. In thankfulness, let us be concerned about the bad world of people around us, as He was concerned about his good guys.

It was an election year, May, 1968.

John V. Lindsay, the popular and liberal Republican, was President of the United States. Most political critics prognosticated that he would win again in November against the South from Texas, Patrick Nugent, states, and the 51-star flag had been chosen. The design was fact that Nugent failed to make difficult, and the old 51-star design adopted in 1912 when Puerto Rico became a state, still flew over our buildings.

The young crop of dynasty politicians were constantly in the news. Rockefeller and Kennedy and Eisenhower were all involved in national politics, each waiting their turn to move in on the uses of power, capitalizing on the quality of their names.

Lindsay was confident in May, 1968. He had defeated the ultra-conservative element representing strength in the general election, according to the polls, but it was Nugent who had the edge. Church had made too many enemies during his five terms in the Senate. The political writers time and again mentioned Church in the glowing term, "Statesman," and compared him with Borah, a man forgotten by most in this leap year, 1968.

And besides, Church was an old man as the modern politicians were viewed. Nugent was younger, and yet not too young.

The Democrats had hope that the youthfulness which had disappeared from presidential politics since the death of John Kennedy nearly 25 years earlier would work against the hagered, tired face of the once better Lindsay in the general election.

The convention at Denver would decide for the Democrats. The Republican convention held even less interest than the last time before it was executed last year in Salt Lake City. Lindsay was a sell-out to the whites.

With Brooke's death the face of the party had been uncontrolled. Sections of Chicago had been evacuated, and Harlem had been burned to the ground.

The John Birch Society had nominated Reed Benson for the third time as its presidential candidate on the Conservative Party ticket.

Early in the year, Benson, despite his age, would campaign for his second year, but he had a nation wide speaking tour in North California was planning been assassinated by an ultra-conservative American diehard, and since then the relations between France and America had surpassed the difficulties of the late 1960's.

And as always the cities were falling apart.

New York State and California had both been divided into two states, and the 51-star flag had been chosen. The design was fact that Nugent failed to make difficult, and the old 51-star design adopted in 1912 when Puerto Rico became a state, still flew over our buildings.

With Brooke's death the face of the party had been uncontrolled. Sections of Chicago had been evacuated, and Harlem had been burned to the ground.

The John Birch Society had nominated Reed Benson for the third time as its presidential candidate on the Conservative Party ticket.

Early in the year, Benson, despite his age, would campaign for his second year, but he had a nation wide speaking tour in North California was planning serious, campaign for its favorite son, and because of the natural enmity between North California and South California, a national channel debate-but South California would almost assuredly nominate its favorite son, Governor Robert Vaughn, after all this was happening in May, 1968. Only a few years earlier the last Irons had been with a heavy "from Vietnam" after nearly a quarter-of-a-century of aggression.

Four experimental colonies were being living on the moon under the control of the United Nations Revised Charter of 1976. The United States, Russia, China, France, and Africa each had small groups of not more than 20 people living in separated colonies on the moon's surface. It was the only place where they speak some English, although their parents may not.

The lots learn it at Freedom House, the halfway house in Miami between the Communist island they left and their new home somewhere in the United States. Cubans call the classroom and adjoining sand playground a refugee kindergarten. The unusual kindergarten is observing its first anniversary this month. Since its establishment in April, 1967, it has amassed more than 1,000 alumni, scattered throughout the United States.

It is amazing how they learn," said Conchita LaVita, director of the child care center. "Just say a word and they take it in."

In November, then, it would be a new ball game. And now players would swing at everything in sight.

Plans were made for new convention activity. The conservative element was in its glory. And Senator Patrick Nugent believed that "Brooke was a sell-out to the whites."

With Brooke's death the face of the party had been uncontrolled. Sections of Chicago had been evacuated, and Harlem had been burned to the ground.

The John Birch Society had nominated Reed Benson for the third time as its presidential candidate on the Conservative Party ticket.

Early in the year, Benson, despite his age, would campaign for his second year, but he had a nation wide speaking tour in North California was planning at case on television, and seemed nearly as capable in the medium as Governor Vaughn.

Vaughn was already mapping out his own television campaign complete with a revamped image of the Man from U.N.C.I.E. Older, Vaughn was nevertheless as danger as when he ended his television career in 1970 in favor of a political chairmanship.

Frank Church, excellent on national channel, had arranged for several interviews, and the invitations for debates were being accepted with little screening. Church knew his ability, and now felt that his chances were as good as anyone's.

Nugent was in a hurry too. It was still a long way to the convention. And the mountain air at Denver could do strange things.

Lindsay was now swinging a mallet at everything in his way. The role of statesman was now to him, but now it was possible. He cried for "Politics Aside," and moved for tax cuts and an end to the aggression. It would be a hard act to follow.

There was nothing left to do then, but wait. Wait for November—and the hottest political year since 1968.

BRIDGE

DECEPTIVE PLAY CREATES IMAGE

Fred Karpin points out in "Winning-Play-in-Tournament-and-Rubber Bridge" that part of good deceptive play is to create an illusion for your adversaries.

Today's hand is from the 1948 Masters' Individual Championship and shows how South

Then he paused for a moment before leading out his deuce of spades. This pause gave West a good chance to count the hand. South had shown four clubs and the diamond play indicated six diamonds. So South had started with 6-4-2-1 distribution.

Had it included two spades and one heart or two hearts and one spade? If it had included two hearts, it behooved West to take his ace of spades and save the overtrick. South would just be trying to "sneak" that spade through. Had it included two spades and one heart, South would be delighted to see the ace of spades appear and save the guess.

In rubber bridge West would duck quickly. He wouldn't mind the overtrick. But this was match point duplicate. Furthermore, South had played the hand just as if he had started with two hearts. West went right up with his ace of spades and South had eliminated his spade guess.

CARD SENSE

The bidding has been:

West North East South
Pass 3 Pass 4 NT
Pass Pass Pass
Opening lead - ♣

South, South held: ♠A8764 ♠A10532 ♣54 ♣3

What do you do?

A bid four spades. Your partner's two spade bid has shown a minimum type hand with a decent suit. You want to be in game but have no hand interest.

TODAY'S QUESTION

The bidding has gone the same way except that East has bid three clubs before you bid four spades. Now East bids five clubs. What do you do?

Answer Next Issue

created an illusion which saved him from a bad guess.

South's two diamonds was a slight overbid and we don't approve at all of his four- or five-trump call. We just don't bid four-trumps with a worthless suit in our hand unless our partner has bid that suit. However, there was nothing wrong with the final contract.

The play started out automatic. South took dummy's ace of hearts and cashed his ace and king of trumps. Then he led his four top clubs and discarded three of hearts on the fourth club.

Young America's Date-Line

By EILE AND WALT DULANEY

We Want Citizens, Not Subjects

This is... Walt. The subject is that anything that helps smooth high-school student rights and the transition from childhood to its creating quite a flag. To adulthood, therefore, the true purpose of student rights is to help students grow into the "new left" and see to it that I'm suggesting that adults and be part of a general conspiracy to work for a codification of student rights, privileges and immunities. One whole educational process is geared to building men to meet the demands of a democracy, to ask questions, to view and search for justice. We don't want to see a generation of adults who would endorse the bayting robots.

Adults must grant students the right to question, push and prod a high school student and find out: Of course, such a process clearly infringes on the rights, failures and oversteering of liberties and privileges? Or is he it, but if the process is arrested to pick his way through because of a few mistakes, the greyland of never codified movement will be driven under-ground to ferment real trouble.

It's unfortunate that the initial focus of the student rights movement was on superficialities, such as dress and hair. The matter as inconsequential unless he glimpses the deeper. The student is asking un- without clear-cut limitations on its use, make it possible uniform and do I have some to him - dictate curriculum, right to please myself? Even limit student freedom to shake more basic is the question: Is learning just a process that you only when the costume.

Of course, there are school administrators who smile at students in an atmosphere of mutual respect, who encourage student involvement in school affairs, but these officials understand the need to the rest of the class, is shocking to student identity and legally guarantee the individual student's status. The administrators who have intruded student freedom as a gift certainly would not wish a successor to erase their work.

History sets a precedent here. Certainly there must have been enlightenment among those long before the Magna Carta, kings who realized that respect, changing concept of their own better, then fear, but it took a codification of these guidelines to shape the conduct of future kings.

Student rights advocates are asking for a definition of the students' position on campus. Such a definition would eliminate confusion and provide a firm basis for establishing the process of law and indicate avenues of appeal. No human being is logical and desirable outgrowth of the dating education, our nation is committed, the student should know where he can seek help. This would keep him from dropping out of a seemingly unjust society.

In each discussion of student rights that we've been privileged to audit, the young participants have always been aware of the corollary: Rights of some of the special - and - bringing responsibilities.

From time and formal parties need to audit, don't occur very often, but when they do, they want to be aware of some of the special - and - bringing responsibilities.

For Eile and Walt's help full of age spells marriage for over "Prom Newsletter," send your request to Teenage Date-Line, when the draft boards meet in the care of this newspaper, accelerated demands of war closing a dime and a self-ad with June grads, it is obvious dressed envelope.

CAMPUS EMPIRE?

The phrase "little-king" of the campus is often a principal. The campus into his empire. The centralization of power, without clear-cut limitations on its use, make it possible uniform and do I have some to him - dictate curriculum, right to please myself? Even limit student freedom to shake more basic is the question: Is learning just a process that you only when the costume.

Of course, there are school administrators who smile at students in an atmosphere of mutual respect, who encourage student involvement in school affairs, but

Waning Friendship, Generation Gap Challenge Munoz Grip On Puerto Rico

By HAROLD LIDIN — Inoc, the party founder and still clinging to the ranks of the walking dead—but so far, he has refused to lie down and die.

On the other hand, the younger generation feels the time is ripe for a new political nomination is that Munoz doesn't want to run, instead, he wants to see the younger generation take over. He is pitted against youth and blood rivals, who have been more active in the legislature. He has been discredited by the party's inability, or unwillingness, to wrest more autonomy from the United States.

From the start of the Sanchez administration, one of the most influential advisers to the 55-year-old governor was a young lawyer, Ramon, Sr. He is an attorney, and the daughter of a deceased speaker of the House of Representatives. He was the general secretary to Sanchez, the general secretary to the governor's successor to the office.

Yet within a year after Munoz won the political machine had begun to crack, and the personal relations between veteran party leaders and Gov. Sanchez had begun to chill.

For a time, Sanchez seemed almost indifferent to the erosion of his party ties. A civil servant by profession and a methodical civil servant by instinct, Sanchez remained aloof behind the iron gates of the government's offices.

In contrast, the government's aides proceeded energetically to remake the image of the Popular Party. Eventually, even Munoz went into retirement. His powerful political machine had begun to crack, and the personal relations between veteran party leaders and Gov. Sanchez had begun to chill.

Popular Food Label Of Future May Read "Processed By Irradiation"

By NORMA HERZINGER

Hear no weevil, see no weevil, eat no weevil—could be the slogan for an up-and-coming flour company.

Ridiculous, you say? Not so!

How would it be to have flour that could set on the shelf for a long time without being full of weevils, or potatoes that would not sprout before the family could use the entire sackful, or bacon that would not mold even if not refrigerated and left out on the counter. Not bad, huh?

It's not impossible. Great grandma learned to prepare salt pork many, many different ways; grandma graduated to canned venison; mom learned the convenience of frozen foods, and this generation may soon be serving radiation processed foods.

Several foods have already been approved by the Federal Food and Drug Administration, including wheat and wheat flour, potatoes and bacon. With a process of this kind, storage of fresh fruits, etc., could be increased to reduce spoilage losses for the homemaker. Think what this could do for the food budget. For example, the shelf life of fresh strawberries can be extended 10 to 12 days, supposedly with absolutely no change in the natural or fresh qualities of the products.

The process of low dose radiation pasteurization of foods was demonstrated recently with a portable cesium irradiator which was open to the public at the Snake River Trout Farm, Buhl, through the cooperation of the Twin Falls Chamber of Commerce, Idaho Nuclear Energy Division and Bob Erkins, owner of the trout farm.

What in the world is a portable cesium irradiator, one might ask? Well—on first sight it looks like a large stainless steel oven, only this oven-like device is surrounded with eight inches of lead and is encased in steel. It weighs about 18 tons and is positioned in a 33-foot-long, 8-foot-wide trailer. The irradiator is being shown throughout the United States to demonstrate the potential uses of gamma radiation in pasteurization and sterilization for food preservation. The stop at Buhl was the only one scheduled in Idaho.

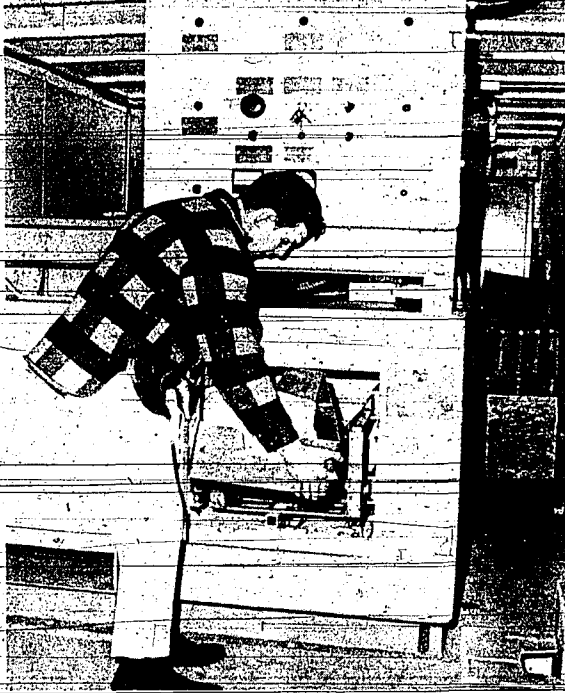

The irradiator was designed by Vitro Engineering Co. (now Parsons-Jurden Corp.) and is operated by Isotopes, Inc., Westwood, N. J., under contract to the U. S. Atomic Energy Commission.

One of my first questions when talking to William Grant, Westwood, assistant project director for the irradiator for Isotopes, Inc., reflected the general comment of the average homemaker concerning the process—is she afraid of the word radiation? Does the word conjure up feelings of fear concerning eating foods subject to radiation?

He explained this is one of the primary purposes of the scheduled tours showing the device and it DOES NOT make food radioactive. He noted many authorities believe radiation processing of many kinds of foods will be widespread within a few years.

According to a fact sheet from Isotopes, Inc., radiation preservation of food is accomplished by pasteurization or sterilization. Pasteurization, used for tomatoes and other vegetables, fruits and seafood, requires relatively low dosages which retard the growth of microorganisms in the food and thus delay spoilage. Sterilization used principally for meats, requires a higher dosage and destroys all bacteria or microorganisms, allowing storage of

PREPARING TO PROCESS some wheat in the portable cesium irradiator is Les Sine, Hatfield, Pa., chief operator of the irradiator, during demonstration showings recently at the Snake River Trout Farm, Buhl. The irradiator is being shown throughout the United States to demonstrate the potential uses of gamma radiation in pasteurization and sterilization of perishable foods.

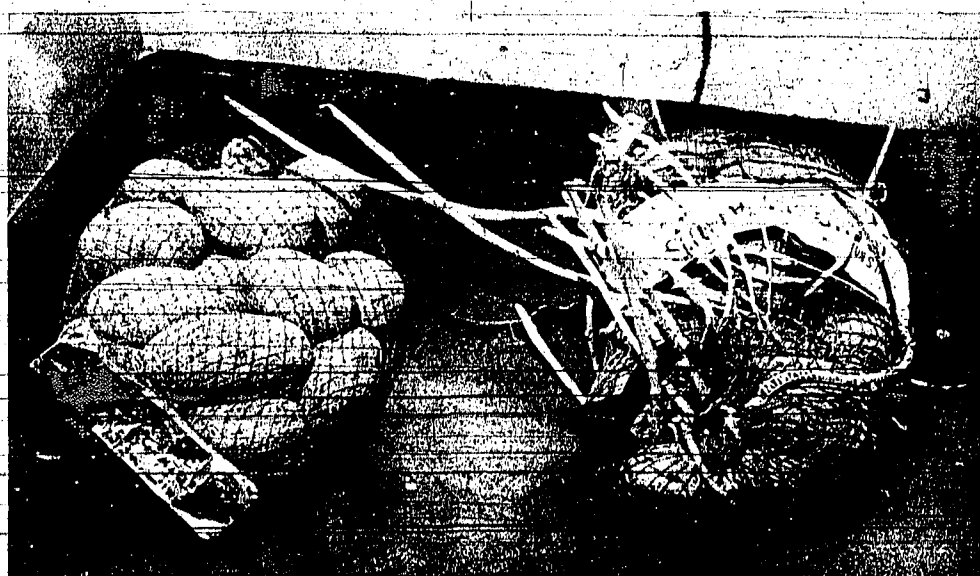

BAGGED PINTO BEANS, brought to the Snake River Trout Farm by a local business to be processed in the irradiator, are displayed by Kenneth "Ding" F. Wayner—Indr, driver of the portable cesium irradiator. The irradiator is operated by Isotopes, Inc., Westwood, N. J., under contract to the U. S. Atomic Energy Commission.

MANNING THE CONTROLS of the portable cesium irradiator is Les Sine, chief operator. The large ovenlike device is surrounded with eight inches of lead and is encased in steel. It weighs about 18 tons and is positioned in a 33-foot-long, 8-foot-wide trailer.

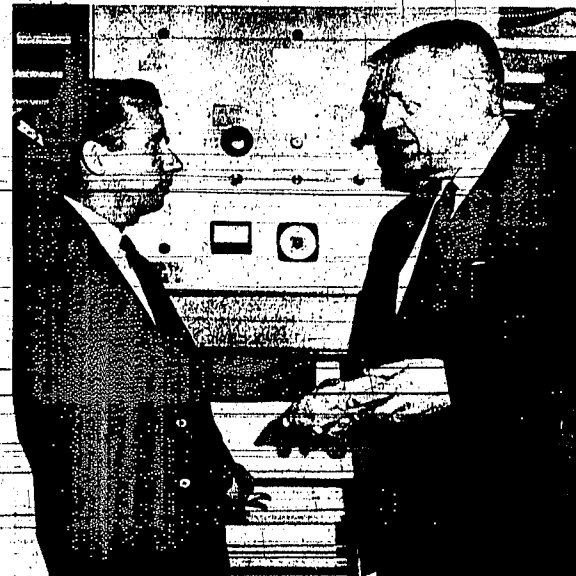

STACKING SACKS of beans and flour processed during the recent demonstrations in Buhl is the chief operator of the irradiator. The process of low dose radiation for pasteurization of foods is being introduced as a new way of food preservation providing a longer shelf life for perishable items.

RETARDATION OF SPROUTS on the one sack of potatoes is due to a radiation preservation process. Both sacks of potatoes are the same age. The pasteurization process used for tomatoes and other vegetables, fruits and seafood, requires relatively low doses of radiation which retard the growth of microorganisms in the food and therefore delays spoilage. William Grant, assistant project director for the irradiator for Isotopes, Inc., stated the radiation preservation of foods does not make food radioactive. Magic Valley residents viewed the potential uses of the irradiator.

DISCUSSING ADVANTAGES of the irradiator with William Grant, Westwood, N. J., assistant project director for Isotopes, Inc., is Gov. Don Samuelson. Gov. Samuelson and other state officials made a special visit to the Snake River Trout Farm where the irradiator was on display to learn of its present accomplishments and future possibilities.

Idaho Residents View Process
 Of Irradiator

 The food indefinitely without refrigeration.

Mr. Grant noted that in past utilization there is a loss of vitamins than in canning, freezing or drying and the loss of vitamins due to sterilization is comparable to losses in canning.

Les Sine, Hatfield, P. chief operator of the irradiator, noted that 10 food irradiators, ranging from research to production facilities, are operated by the AEC in support of its food irradiation program. Preserving food by radiation has not been completely accepted by the Federal Food and Drug Administration. However, as mentioned before, it has approved three radiation processed foods for unlimited public consumption. None of these foods have as yet been commercialized for civilian or military use, but the Department of Defense has provided quantities for these items to troops feeding in the Alamo. Enemy Commission is confident that the process will prove both effective and safe and has commissioned the demonstrations for interested persons and food processors.

While demonstrating the machine in Washington, a paper bag containing Washington state potatoes, treated and marked "treated with radiation," was distributed to interested residents. A full explanation of the radiation process was written on the back of the paper and the residents were asked to try the potatoes, and fill out an enclosed card and return it. According to the irradiator officials, all comments were favorable, noting no change in color or taste.

Large bags of Pinto beans and bags of flour were taken by Magic Valley businessmen to be put through the process. The beans, if couldn't understand as dry beans already can be stored for an indefinite length of time. But preservation for storage was not what they had in mind. According to Mr. Grant, "when conditions allow it to be so, seeds processed tend to yield better crops for the farmer," and a local company wanted to experiment a potato.

Another interesting use of the irradiator is a recent test for Jantzen Co. officials on nylon fabrics they find difficult to hold a dye. During the test it would seem only natural the process would work similar to the sun and bleach the fabric.

Joe Varadi To Speak At Special "Men's Nite" Fete

Joe Varadi, a well-known speaker and former Communist, will be featured speaker for the Magic Valley Christian Women's Club "Men's Nite" program, set for 7 p.m. Thursday at the YM-YWCA building.

Mr. Varadi, who now resides in Portland, is faced with the charge of 19 accused of conspiracy against the Hungarian People's Republic. He was arrested and imprisoned for almost six years in Budapest, getting his freedom when the people of Hungary rose in spontaneous revolution against their Communist masters.

A local barbershop quartet will present special music. Reservations must be obtained before 11 a.m. Wednesday. For reservations call Twin Falls, 733-0144; Filer, 326-5180; Buhl, 543-4528; and Jerome, 324-5256.

A smorgasbord will be featured, catered by Leo Soran from the Depot Grill.

Preservation Workshop Set

SHOSHONE - A preservation workshop by Kerr Canning Co. will be held at 7:30 p.m. May 16 at the Ada County office, 6115 Fairview. Mrs. reports Mary Lou Ruby, Extension Home Economist in Blaine, Camas and Lincoln counties.

Homemakers, 4-H and home economists leaders are invited to attend. This training session will be handled by Hattie Kilgore, Kerr Co. educational director. She will answer questions as well as strengthen each homemaker's information in food preservation.

Contact the extension home economist in the area and or pools will be formed for those who would like to attend.

but it did not. It worked just the opposite.

So many questions are still unanswered concerning the possibilities of the radiation process in fields other than food preservation. "But developing peaceful uses of atomic energy is a great step forward. Lots of experiments are being made with the irradiator," Mr. Grant noted. "The unit was designed primarily to retard spoilage of foods." This seems to be the beginning of a whole new era of operation for preservation of foods and can be a terrific boon to the American homemaker.

So instead of looking for the "simmered in butter" or "fresh frozen" labels, you may soon be searching for grocery products marked "processed by irradiation." That's it - radiation!

Music Students
 Give Recital
 In Hagerman

HAGERMAN - Music students of Mrs. Pearl Brown presented a recital recently at the Hagerman Methodist Church.

Presenting piano solos were Darla Nelson, Linda Thornton, Ranae Hoskins, Cathy Jones, Barbara Simonsen, Shell Larson, Nancy Jones, Connie Lutner, Brad Nelson, Debbie Jolley, Linda Neal, Kirk Thornton, Joy Linda Neal and Debbi Larson. Music Week Observances Set In T.F.

"Music—A Keystone for Living" is the theme for the 45th annual observance of National Music Week set for May 5 through 12, sponsored by the National Federation of Music Clubs. The Twin Falls Music Club, affiliated with the National Federation of Music Clubs, has received a proclamation from Egon H. Kroll, mayor of Twin Falls, in regard to this special week. He asks all citizens of this community to observe and take part in activities recognizing the importance of music, musicians and musical organizations to the cultural life of our city, state, nation and world.

Two distinctive displays will be featured, courtesy of Mr. Page and Ray Herbert. A portable organ made by Mr. Page will be displayed in the window of the Idaho Department Store and a harpsichord made by Mr. Herbert will be shown in a display in the window of the Boy Scout office.

The Twin Falls Music Club, Mrs. David Mead, president, has provided music programs for various music organizations in Twin Falls during the month of May in honor of this special week. Among the programs are the Twentieth Century Club, Fredwin Hansen, soprano; Mary Kinney, piano, and a ballet group, May 7; Elks Lodge, Presbyterian Men's Chorus, Methodist Church of Twin Falls, Cong. State Four Bart Hirsch, Emery Wiser, Fred Burkholder and Joe Hutchinson, American Association of University Women, piano duo; Jean Sutcliffe and Vera Arness; Exchange Club, string trio; Bruce Conington, Kathy Murray and Mary Kinney, May 7; Kravans, double quartet from the high school and Charles Lassen, baritone, May 7; Soprano, Juliette Boone, soprano, May 28, and Rotary, Velma Guver, soprano, April 24.

Other musical events dedicated to National Music Week is a Pops Concert by the Twin Falls High School Band, May 9, and "Arlita Galombi," concert—piano, saxophone and various other instruments by a 14-year-old boy May 4. The performance was free and open to the public.

Tealia Belline scheduled three piano recitals, the first being piano and voice, the second piano and voice, and the third piano and voice. The piano and voice recital was presented by Bonnie Bray, Christine Peterson, Cindy Herzinger and Mary Kinney, assisted by Bruce Conington, violinist, student of Julieene Slaughter.

The second recital is May 5 and features Laura B. U. L. S. and Sheryl Houston, Jay Bink, Mary Terrie, Kay Martin, Jeanne Burkholder, Brenda Pergam, Syd Coleman, Donna Lance, Lynn Ramseyer, Martin Wright, Sun Ann Johnson, Kathy McCandless, Kris Annis, Cathy Kinney, and the program will be presented by scholarship winners Kenesley and Mary Kinney, pianists; Nancy Wilk, cellist, and Beverly Hackett's ballet group. Reservations for the luncheon can be obtained by calling Ruth Heller, 733-4789, or Mildred Wilson, 733-1888.

Kathy Brackett, Fredwin Hansen, Sharon Reid, Miss McCandless, Linda Kelley and Mary Kinney.

The Gold Cup Awards presentation is slated for 3 p.m. May 12 at O'Leary Junior High School, with Laura Vincent and Wayne Corey, pianists, and Julie Westendorf, violinist, presenting the program.

The annual Twin Falls Music Club Rose Luncheon will be held at 1 p.m. May 13 at the YM-YWCA. The program will be presented by scholarship winners Kenesley and Mary Kinney, pianists; Nancy Wilk, cellist, and Beverly Hackett's ballet group. Reservations for the luncheon can be obtained by calling Ruth Heller, 733-4789, or Mildred Wilson, 733-1888.

British Say Thumbs Down On Mini-Skirts

LONDON (AP) The mini-skirt is indeed on its last legs. The British—ready-to-wear trade, which invented it, gave it the coup de grace in their autumn sample show Wednesday for foreign buyers.

Ronald Gersten, one of Macy's buyers here, at the opening said approvingly: "Well, they've killed off the mini for us. Most of these skirts are about the length we're wearing at home—two inches above the knee."

Some 40 manufacturers of ready-mades showed half a dozen day and evening dresses each, under the auspices of the Clothing Export Council of Great Britain. Top trends: shirtwaisters and shifts. Only a few prints and lots of shadow plaids and checks, stripes, and contrasting plain colors.

Black came back in what almost amounted to a landslide. Very fitted short jackets, trousers, known as "oxford hovers"—were a popular line in suits.

While London streets are still full of miniskirt wearers, British haute couture houses had already tried to shoot short skirts down in their spring collections. It was uncertain whether the "miss" market, ready-to-wear manufacturers were ready to fall into step, but they did Wednesday with the exception of two or three die-hards.

A large number of houses included one maxiskirt or culotte in their sample, but without much conviction. A sprinkling of trouser suits were mostly high-waisted with slightly flared bottoms.

Bonnie and Clyde have faded into the background, but the bonnet has not disappeared entirely. In dozens of variations it topped nearly every outfit in the show. Only the cloche made any dress with choice, checking a fair showing by comparison. Evening wear never found a place in many evening collections, with formal modishly medieval with ornate, ruffled, lace and cutouts, ribbon-tied.

MR. AND MRS. DICK-KLEINKOPF

Cinda Evans,
Dick Kleinkopf
Wed In Alaska

BURLEY — The Central Lutheran Church, Anchorage, Alaska, was the setting for a double-ring ceremony marking the marriage of Cinda Marie Evans and Dick Lee Kleinkopf, both Anchorage.

Miss Evans is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harold Evans, Tacoma, Wash., and Mr. Kleinkopf is the son of Mr. and Mrs. H. K. Kleinkopf, Heyburn.

A. E. Abrahamson performed the evening wedding March 16 before a background of white chrysanthemums and pink gladioli bouquets flanked by candelabra.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore an organza gown appliqued with a neon lace raze featuring a sweet heart neckline and short bell sleeves. The floor-length chapel train fell from her shoulders and was appliqued with matching lace roses.

Her shoulder-length silk veil of illusion was held by organza leaves, seed pearls and jewel fasteners. She carried a bouquet of white chrysanthemums and gardenias.

Patricia Sue Evans, sister of the bride, was maid of honor. Lynn Barrett was flower girl. George Barrett was best man. Ushers were Wayne Boedecker, Charles Mortimer, Ralph Cent and Joe Lastufka.

Mrs. Arlyn Yurman played the traditional wedding music. After the wedding ceremony the couple was honored at a wedding reception at the Anchorage Elks Lodge. Guests were registered by Mrs. Charles Mortimer.

The bride's table was centered with a three-tiered all-white wedding cake which was divided with white pillars, accented with pink roses and topped with a wedding cross and a miniature bride and bridegroom. A decorating accent was the champagne fountain. The cake was cut and served by Mrs. Wayne Boedecker. Kathy Diehl poured, assisted by Mrs. Joe Lastufka.

Gifts were displayed by Mrs. Kevin Christian.

Guests attended from Idaho, Washington and Alaska. After a wedding trip to Mt. Alyeska, Alaska, the newlyweds will reside at Anchorage, where the bride is employed at Anchorage Community College and the bridegroom is employed at Physicians Optical as an optician.

Coral J. Dalos
Is Bride Of
G. McAdams

Buhl—Coral Jo Dalos, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edwin A. Dalos, Buhl, became the bride of George McAdams, son of Mr. and Mrs. Earl McAdams, Twin Falls, in an afternoon ceremony April 6 at St. John's Lutheran Church, Buhl.

The double ring ceremony was as matter of honor performed by Rev. Henry Trent. John Qualis, Twin Falls, served before baskets of blue and white ed. as best man. Ushers were arranged by Bruce Thompson, brother-in-law of the bridegroom's father. He also of the bride, and Dennis Dalos arranged all the corsages for brother of the bride.

The wedding, the bride's sister, Evelyn Boyer, Hagerman, was Dalos, Mrs. Art Akland, Mrs. Eddy Schultz, and Mrs. Gene Gilck, all aunts of the bride, made by Mrs. Elvin Brown.

Given in marriage by her father, Jan Boyer, Hansen, the bride wore a white registered the guests.

short-sleeved, and a full-length, which was covered with lace. Her center with the wedding cake, which was baked and decorated by Mrs. Leonard Walcott. The bride's bouquet, carried on a white heart, butterflies, lovebirds and swans and topped with white sugar bells with lace and ribbon.

The table was decorated with blue and white streamers. The couple took a wedding trip to Sun Valley. They will reside in Twin Falls, where they are both attending the College of Southern Idaho.

Reception assistants were Mrs. Bertha Dalos, Mrs. Carl Dalos, Mrs. Art Akland, Mrs. Eddy Schultz, and Mrs. Gene Gilck, all aunts of the bride; Mrs. Fred Oppinger, and Mrs. Helen Boyer, in the church, Ted Johnson.

Girl Scouts Are Honored

RICHFIELD — Richfield Girl Scout groups were honored at a banquet recently at the Methodist Recreation Rooms. Patricia Meeks, Kathy Meeks and Marie Sirucek, all Twin Falls, were in charge of the girls.

The couple took a wedding trip to Sun Valley. They will reside in Twin Falls, where they are both attending the College of Southern Idaho.

Reception assistants were Mrs. Bertha Dalos, Mrs. Carl Dalos, Mrs. Art Akland, Mrs. Eddy Schultz, and Mrs. Gene Gilck, all aunts of the bride; Mrs. Fred Oppinger, and Mrs. Helen Boyer, in the church, Ted Johnson.

Wives of the girls were other guests. Mrs. Frank Cliff, Girl Scout leader, announced the program of song by the Brownies, Girl Scouts and Cadets. Cadets served as candlelighters while the laws were recited by Girl Scouts. Mrs. Max Behr was accompanist for song numbers and group singing. Mrs. Cliff read a list of achievements to earn awards.

Largest Hats In Fashions History Top List For 1968

NEW YORK (AP)—Rooms must be bigger, doors wider, once nearly put the hat people too high to top it with anything.

The architecture was properly grandiose at the Americana Hotel on Sunday where the Millinery Institute topped off the New York Couture Group's press-week activities with perhaps the largest hats in fashion history.

The calendar girl is back. Though not the type that boy fans are used to, she could carry her floppy, wide-brimmed hat and cover more than she does with her minidress. The portrait-hat is back, though by its size it seems more appropriate for wall murals. Some were four feet in diameter.

Queen Mary's big garden-hats will be in full bloom this spring, too. Indeed, there will be enough things growing on the tops of women's heads dangling down their backs, or flowing around their shoulders to satisfy the birds and bees.

By propping curls of sorts among the posies, hatmakers encroached heavily on the hair stylists' domain. But turn about

Heart Monitoring Equipment Demonstrated For T. F. Guild

Mrs. Elizabeth Linde and Mrs. Marilyn Blackburn, both registered nurses representing Magic Valley Memorial Hospital, spoke at the monthly meeting of the local hospital guild and the heart monitoring equipment was demonstrated.

The unit, which consists of three parts, a diffuser which sends an electric shock through the patient's chest, in case of cardiac arrest; a monitor which shows the beats of a heart on a screen, and an electrocardiograph that traces the heart's activity on paper. It is a portable machine that can be used in any room.

Until the intensive care and coronary care units, which are reportedly to be finished by late fall, are in use, the monitoring equipment is kept in the emergency room.

Mrs. Blackburn stated that a few weeks ago they had tried run to estimate the time it would take to move the equipment to another part of the hospital and set it up ready to use. It took exactly four minutes to

Home Storage Is Problem

SHOSHONE — "Do you have adequate amount of storage in your home?" Mrs. Mary Lou Ruby, home extension agent here, asks.

The home economist will visit at request and present a storage plan through the house's flimsy strip and lesson for club meetings.

Families own so many different things of varied sizes and shapes, finding a storage place where it is convenient to get to them is sometimes difficult.

Many storage places can be improved through inexpensive ideas discussed in the "Kitchen Storage" and "Storage Throughout the Home" bulletins and the filmstrip.

The Halley Homemakers Club and the Burmah Club members suggested additional ideas their husbands had built for storage.

The basic storage principles are store where first used, store where easily seen, store where easily reached, store safely to avoid accidents, store to avoid bad strains.

The extension home economist agent recommends adequate storage for another reason, "it makes housekeeping easier."

MR. AND MRS. MURRAY BARKMAN (Dudley photo)

Kathie Hills, Barkman Wed In Candlelight Ceremony

Kathie Hills, daughter of Mrs. Gladys Hills, Twin Falls, became the bride of Murray Barkman, Abbotsford, British Columbia, Canada, in a candlelight ceremony performed by Rev. D. Miller at the Carillon Apartments.

The bride, given in marriage by Dick Shaffer, wore a Chantilly lace Bridal Original with full-length long sleeves and enhanced with a chapel-length train. Her elbow-length vest of English silk illusion was held in place by a circle of seed pearls.

She carried a bouquet of pink roses and white satin streamers on a small white Bible.

Attending the bride was her sister, Mrs. Gene Bowlin, Susan Skilton, sister of the bride, flower girl, Candlelighters were Linda Skilton, niece of the bride, and Marian Barkman, sister of the bridegroom.

John Teichrob served as best man with Gene Bowlin and Russell Mikel as ushers.

Singers were Howard Larsen, and Richard and Carole Shaffer, who were accompanied by Mrs. Don Hoffman at the organ.

A reception was held immediately after the ceremony. Mrs. Dwight Skilton, sister of the bride, presided at the guest table, which was skirted in ruffled lace and centered with pink roses and white carnations.

The bride, bridegroom and wedding party, with Mrs. Gladys Hills and Mrs. Irene Barkman, received guests in the main parlour of the Carillon before a background of tulle and Grecian scrolls, satin bells and streamers, enhanced with Hered candalaria and rings of pink and white blindfold and carnations.

The bride's table highlighted the decor, using a three-tiered white tulle table skirt topped with white satin and held in place by large pink satin bows. A four-tiered wedding cake, trimmed with double hearts and pink roses and topped with an original pearlized heart, centered the table.

The quartet tables were covered with white nylon lace over pink and centered with pink floral tulle and seed pearl hearts around centers, each containing one floating pink rose.

After a short honeymoon to Sun Valley, the couple returned to Vancouver, British Columbia, Canada, to reside, where the bridegroom is employed by Calthe and Dowling Ltd.

Program On Salads Stated

SHOSHONE — Prairie home, salads and dressing is a chef-makers members will discuss. The homemaker is asked to bring "Salads and Salad Dressings" her favorite salad and recipe at their regular meeting to be held at the meeting Wednesday, held at 2 p.m. Wednesday, at the home of Mrs. Loy Vanskite, Fairfield. All homemakers are invited to attend the extension home-makers club meeting according to president Mrs. Sandy Thomas. "Salads are becoming more and more important in our lives," Mrs. Mary Lou Ruby, home extension agent, states. Wise homemakers realize that by using salads, meals are more attractive, nutritious and better tasting. Precious vitamins A and C, iron and other minerals can be added to our food by eating salads. By adding meat, poultry, fish, cheese and eggs, more protein is provided.

Camp Fire Girls Visit Capitol On Boise Tour

Members of the Ki Lo Ta Camp Fire Girls group participated in a Fun Day at Boise recently.

Fifty-one girls traveled to Boise by bus and visited the capitol building. They prepared their own lunch at these at the Ann Morrison Park.

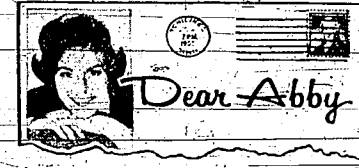

Later they visited the art gallery and viewed paintings done by children from Hong Kong and some done by high school students of Boise.

They viewed things in the Historical Museum they have currently been studying in Idaho history at school. They toured the zoo where new facilities are being constructed and are particularly in use now, showing more realistically the true surroundings where animals are found.

Those making the trip along with the girls were Mrs. Paul Ross, guardian of Ki Lo Ta group; Mrs. Burt Hulsh, guest; Mrs. Harold Pralgo, assistant guardian of Tando To Wank group; Mrs. Paul Eastman, guest; Mrs. Robert Dohse, guardian of O Ki Ki Ya group; and Mrs. Marvel Garson and Mrs. Robert Inke, guests.

Dear Abby

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: Since the wedding season is upon us, once again, I would like to address a plea to all parents who plan big, showy weddings for their daughters.

The bride who is the star of the show, asks several of her friends, they are usually lifelong friends, they can't easily refuse.

My daughter is a serious student and is making her own way through school. She now has EIGHT useless bridesmaids' gowns hanging in her closet. They average about $30 each. She had no choice as to color or style, and no matter what the bridegroom says, not one of these dresses is suitable to be worn later on.

Abby, since these big, flashy weddings are put on by the bride's parents as a "show" for their friends and relatives, don't you think it's only fair that the bride's parents should pay for the expenses, including the gowns?

MOTHER OF A BRIDESMAID

DEAR MOTHER: Few parents can afford to buy gowns for the entire wedding party, no matter how rich a girl can stand the financial strain of being a bridesmaid once — or five times, is up to the girl to decide.

Most "lifelong friends" who are invited to be attendants somehow manage to accept, expense and all. And I doubt if many have ever regretted it.

DEAR ABBY: This may seem like a silly problem to you, but it is a very serious one to me. I like this boy very much, but every time I kiss him I get a bad headache. This is very unusual for me (getting a headache means, not kissing a boy) and I wonder, maybe I could

Salad Bar Is Featured At May Fellowship

KING HILL — Approximately 45 persons attended the Salad Bar May Fellowship luncheon held at King Hill United Presbyterian Church, sponsored by women of the churches in the area.

Mrs. Karl Curnham was in charge of serving the luncheon, with Mrs. Dave Shenk, president of the association, as mistress of ceremonies.

Mrs. Richard Kincaid, Glennis Perry, was elected president for 1968-69, and Mrs. William Peterson, secretary and treasurer.

Rev. Dwight Wilcher gave the invocation at the program. Songs were presented by Mrs. Jim Hamilton; Mrs. Jerry Ginterich and Mrs. Wesley Hooley.

Indian Cover — Mrs. Vaughn Spanier with Mrs. Wes Lee Hoast as accompanist, and Rev. James Post, Fairfield.

Mrs. Cecil Bott registered the guests and spring flowers decorated the luncheon tables. Proceeds from the fellowship meal will be sent to the Ministerial Association.

Church women from Bruneau, Indian Cove, Hammett, Glenns Ferry and King Hill attended the luncheon and meeting.

Beta Sigma Phi Members Tour Weber-Residence

BURLEY — Xi Omega Chapter, Beta Sigma Phi, members toured the home of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Weber which is furnished with antique.

The members returned to the home of Mrs. Ed Bailey for a business meeting and a pledge ritual for Mrs. Marvin Fraiser, Presiding at the ritual table were Mrs. Gene Morton, chapter president; Mrs. Ransom Brown, Mrs. Clyde Bowers and Mrs. Don Worthington, Mrs. Fraiser was presented a long-stemmed yellow rose.

It was announced that new chapter officers will be installed Wednesday at the home of Mrs. Leo Weber, Hevburn. "Exemplary Ritual" will be held for Mrs. Marion Walker the same evening.

The annual birthday party covered dish dinner, will be held May 16 at home of Mrs. Marvin Fraiser. Secret sisters for the past year will be revealed.

The cultural lesson was presented by Mrs. Odessa Redman on "Table Equipment." Topics discussed were decorative table accessories, table cloths and place mats, silverware, glassware and chinaware.

Refreshments were served by Mrs. Bailey and Mrs. Fraiser, co-hostesses.

Shower Held

KING HILL — Mrs. Clyde Cox hosted a bridal shower for Phyllis McCleary at her home recently, with Mrs. Lynn Sherman, Mrs. James Kling and Mrs. Hugh Sugg as co-hostesses.

Mrs. Cox was in charge of games, with Mrs. Cecil Bott winning the prize. Each guest brought her favorite cooking recipe to the party for the honor.

Mrs. McCleary was assisted in sending her gifts by Mrs. Cecil Watson and Mrs. Kling.

Guild Meets

KIMBERLY — The Reader's Guild held its regular meeting at the home of Mrs. John Feldhusen Jr., with Mrs. Mildred Burton serving as co-hostess.

Mrs. June Emerson was accepted as a new member. The program was presented by Mrs. June Haggart. She displayed the traveling art exhibit of paintings, painted by children participating in the special education program.

Discussion On Wills Set

SHOSHONE — Do you need a will? What is Community Property? What would happen to you if you were suddenly left alone, business, bank account, home, insurance and such?

These are a few of the questions Mary Schmitt, attorney-at-law, will discuss at 2 p.m. Tuesday at the Lincoln County Courthouse at the homemakers meeting.

The matter will be handled under the chosen topic of the month, "Women's Rights and Responsibilities." All homemakers who would like to take part in a learning type program are welcome to attend and participate in these meetings, according to Mrs. Mary Lou Ruby, home demonstration agent.

Through such program, the University of Idaho hopes to provide educational material to homemakers.

Persons with questions may call Mrs. Ruby, 886-2852, or Mrs. Ivan Hopkins, 886-7544.

FORGET ABOUT LOVE WHEN YOU'RE BUYING A DIAMOND RING

This is it. The moment you've been waiting half a lifetime for. And we're taking you not to get emotional about it? Well, excuse us for sounding like a Dutch Uncle, but if you're not careful you could make an expensive mistake. We've spent a lot of years learning about diamonds, so we know how confusing it can be to you to hear words like "carats" and "facets" and "points."

Maybe you've even heard that some flaws in a diamond can't be detected by the naked eye, and you're worried someone will sell you a dud.

And after all, how will you know if it's a value or not? If you buy at Sterling Jewelry you'll know for sure.

We'll show you rings that will be worth getting emotional about for the rest of your life.

The all-student event was presented to enable the public to view the abilities of the students as well as note the current popular hair styles and trends. A. B. Parker is director for the college and Spencer Parker is co-director. This type of open house is presented semi-annually.

FHA Officers Are Installed At Banquet

BUHL—Installation of officers was the highlight of the annual FHA Mom, Pop and Me banquet held at the Rebekah Lodge. New officers include: Karen Cope, president; Becky Williamson, vice president; Karmn Shaver, secretary; Margie Atkins, treasurer; Vicki Tvedy, parliamentarian; Pam Beard, degrees chairman; Sandy Grayens, assistant degrees chairman; Connie Hicks, public relations; Jackie Miracle, concessions; Kathy Ruyts, assistant concessions; Cindy Fultz, devotions; Cathy White, refreshments; Connie Carson, national project; Mary Rice, state project. Deane Wagner, outgoing president, served as mistress of ceremonies. Miss Williamson, former degrees chairman, presented degree certificates to Cindy Fultz, Kay Freeman, Margie Atkins and Nancy Roberts, all junior degrees. Janice Stahlman and Miss Hicks both received their chapter degrees. Miss Hicks, Miss Tvedy and Karmn Shaver reported on the recent convention in Pocatello. Vicki Erb presented gift of appreciation to Edith Matthews, home economics instructor, and the three chapter mothers, Mrs. Conrad Wagner, Mrs. G. A. Shaver and Mrs. William Tuitz. A skit, presented by the outgoing officers, was a summation of the years activities. All of the outgoing officers participated in the presentation.

New Members Named For Unit

FILER—Mrs. Martin Rooster and Mrs. William Reppert were named new members of the Clover Literary Guild at the home of Mrs. John Lutz. Mrs. Elmer Fischer presented a book review. Members each drew a book to keep in their own libraries and the rest of the books were circulated among the group. It was voted to join the Fern Journal Book Club for a year.

Weekly Lessons For Relief Society Conclude In May

SHOSHONE—The month of May is the last of this season for weekly lessons at the LDS Relief Society.
The spiritual living lesson for May is entitled "The Church and Its Purpose," giving a study whereby women of the church may examine themselves and determine the purposes of the church are fulfilled in her life and to help her make her life a light standard to her family and associates.
"In the scriptures, the words of gospel and church are synonymous. In purpose, note is made and the purposes of the church are then outlined as a means to perfect the lives of members.
The visiting teacher message is "Have-Is-Achieve" and stress is placed on aims of the Relief Society to give aid wherever need is found.
The homemaking lesson will feature the topic, "An Invitation to Learning," whereby women are encouraged to read good books as a means to enrich their own lives and those of their family. The members are asked "Are my children being encouraged to love good books and reading by association with them at home?"
Parents can teach their children, by constant association with good books in their home, that learning is part of the privilege of living and also part of

How to Protect Your Family
The Millionaires' Way

DIARY OF A VIETNAM
72 Hours in F

By Brig. Gen. S. L. A. MARS

Ask Them Yourself

FOR WERNHER VON BRAUN,

pioneer rocket expert
Is it theoretically possible to travel at the speed of light—186,000 miles per second?—Rem Hunter, Walla Walla, Wash.

● No. When a material object approaches the speed of light, its mass increases enormously. According to Einstein, if an object were to reach the velocity of light, such an object would be infinite. Because an object of infinite mass would offer infinite resistance to motion, it follows that no object could ever attain the velocity of light. Actually, this principle of relativity (increase of mass) has been verified by atomic scientists many times in the so-called "atom smashers." In fact, these machines won't work properly unless they are designed to allow for the increased mass of superenergy particles, as their velocity nears the speed of light.

FOR PATTI PAULSEN,

World Superdancer Queen
Are girls who wear glasses accepted as airline stewardesses?—D. N., Danamong, Iowa

● Girls who are accustomed to contact lenses are accepted. Standard requirements are 20/50 vision in each eye.

FOR LAWRENCE O'BRIEN,

ex Postmaster General
Can we expect additional raises on postage rates?—Mrs. Roth E. Smith, Mountain Home, Idaho

● The Postal Policy Act states that postage rates shall be adjusted by Congress from time to time as may be required to produce revenues approximately equal to operating costs, less the cost of public services. Since 1932 the average hourly earnings of manufacturing workers have risen 540 percent, first-class postage rates only 100 percent.

FOR MIKE CONNORS of "Mannix"

What make car do you drive on your show? Was it designed especially for you?—Kim Manuel, Gulfport, Miss.

● The car is unique. The raw material for the "Mannix Car" was a 1967 Oldsmobile Toronado, but the resemblance between it and the showroom product ended there. Custom designer George Baritz redesigned it into what he calls "an open-air, two-passenger roadster."

FOR MALCOLM BRADY,

author of "On the Yard"
Do you find people scary of you because you're an ex-convict? How did you feel when your apartment was burglarized?—D. R., Lancaster, Pa.

● Usually it's quite the contrary—people go out of their way to help me. A sign times have changed: I was annoyed at the burglar, but I was amused when police stormed my apartment and weren't after me. That was a new experience!

FOR RED SCHOENDIENST,

manager, St. Louis Cardinals
Whom do you rate as the best all-around infielder in the National League?—T. L., Durham, N. C.

● Ron Santo of the Chicago Cubs. He still is young, hits for a high average, has good power, and is a good fielder.

FOR BARBARA STANWYCK of

"The Big Valley"
I have heard you plan to leave to and return to movies. True?—Clyde C. Porter, Kennecook, Wash.

● I am satisfied with both my role and "The Big Valley" series. I have no movie plans at present.

FOR TIMMY FAAS, 1968 March of Dimes

Poster Child
What gift memento did President Johnson give you when you visited him?—Mrs. C. Voorhes, West Trenton, N. J.

● President Johnson was kind enough to give me a sterling silver replica of the Presidential seal.

FOR JESS STEARN, author of

"The Sleeping Prophet"
How did you become interested in the famous seer Edgar Cayce?—Marianne Johnston, Newport Beach, Calif.

● The answer is in the book. To me, Cayce was no new phenomenon. I had "discovered" him five years before I had prepared my book, "The Door to the Future." I had become familiar with many of his prophecies, his remarkable way of apparently traveling in time and space to treat the ill, his concept of reincarnation, with its concept of many lives for the same soul/spirit.

WHAT IN THE WORLD!

"Living" Dolls—Would you believe a doll that actually grows? How about one that runs or another doll that stumbles? At the recent Toy Fair, true-to-life dolls did all that and more. One new doll can blow up a balloon or tooth a horn. Still another doll cuts a tooth—but comes guaranteed not to bite the hand that feeds it.

Dressing the Part—Richard Nixon is "unstylish" and "fashionably so," says men's designer John Wertz. "No one would design the fashionable Nixon." Writing of leading political figures in the college magazine, Wertz notes that Bobby Kennedy has dropped his "justly Madison Avenue look" and is now counting on his hairdo to appeal to the "wish-I-were-you voter." Nelson Rockefeller dresses like "Mr. Clean," blacking out all symbols of wealth. Ronald Reagan looks uncomfortable out of sports clothes, says Wertz, but he also looks "a lot better now than he did as a movie actor."

Sugar n' Spice—Swedish-teen-ager Ewa Aulin, who stars in the film version of "Candy," won the Miss Teen International contest in Hollywood three years ago. She got into the contest because an antihulabug boy friend submitted her photo. Now 18, she's still dating the same boy, a painter. "Right now, it's very serious," she says, then shrugs, "but who knows what will happen tomorrow. I might meet someone else and that will be that." According to Ewa, the role of Candy is "just like any other role"—but that may be because she hasn't taken the time to read the book.

Quiet Killers—What sort of man commits murder? "Oddly enough, it is the meek and mild who often seem to be the dangerous types," says Dr. W. Lindsay Keastetter of London. "Those who indulge in deliberate violence probably have their wits enough about them to avoid the ultimate crime. It is only in the meek and mild there is an overspill of aggression with a sudden, violent outburst of passion."

A Penny Saved—Comedienne Carol Burnett beams a wholesome, queen-size smile and explains why her generous mouth is usually unfiltered. "My husband says if I started buying lipstick we'd go broke."

Medical First—Recently, Dr. Maurice Levi of Tel Aviv, Israel, replaced the damaged aortic valve of a woman's heart with one from a calf. It's not the first such operation in history, but it was the first time a patient asked for a kosher valve—and got one.

72 Hours in Hell—The Diary

Searching the swamplands had taken its toll of this weary platoon; now it was heading

Patrols were brought in and out of the swamps of Rong Sat on Mike boats, which were vulnerable to underwater mines.

THERE WAS a common saying among the Swamp Rats who patrolled the Rong Sat Zone night and day that anything seen moving there except the tide was bound to be Viet Cong, and a soldier had better shoot first and question later.

All Americans who went into Rong Sat agreed that it was the worst possible place to fight a war. They either plodded through calf-deep sludge, waded through the fide, or swam. There was no solid earth anywhere. Yet the area is vital, for through it runs the Saigon river—the main commercial channel supplying the capital city. The enemy could not be allowed to control this zone.

The Americans who go on patrol in Rong Sat do not stay longer than 72 hours. Such a stretch is enough to wear them down. Should they risk a longer tour, the medical people figure, losses from jungle rot, foot infection, drowning, and mental fatigue might become excessive.

By early morning, the patrol from Charley Company, First Battalion, 18th Infantry, 1st Infantry Division (our cover shows men of the 100th Light Infantry Brigade, another of the units fighting in such terrain) had completed its three days and nights in the Rong Sat.

The leader, Lt. Turner L. Owens, a short, balding, 34-year-old native of Durant, Okla., realized that the patrol, though it had not found the underwater-mine factory, which was its main object of search, had done well. Engaged several times, it had not lost a man. Much credit for this goes to Owens, steady as a rock under pressure.

Owens' real peculiarity was that he loved to fight in the Rong Sat. "Here, most of the time you are fighting nature more than man," he explains, "and it's certainly a better kind of battle."

Though they were a weapons platoon, they could not carry their mortars into the swamp: The weight was too much. So they had gone armed as a rifle unit. There was trouble enough with the M-16s and the ammo. Salt from the sea water built up around the metal, and the rifles malfunctioned unless the weapons were carefully rubbed with Vaseline. The ammo had to be lugged along in boxes, or it also would corrode speedily. Such claymore mines as they totaled were cased in waterproof bags. Things had gone well for the patrol. The night before an ambush party had knocked off two well-loaded sampans. Just before hvoacue time, they had discovered a VC base camp, not abandoned, but temporarily without tenants, and Owens had called for an artillery strike against the camp. The shelling blew down a few of the houses, but though there were hills square on the entrenched bunkers, they did no damage whatever. The rounds exploded, but the metal harmlessly bounced off.

Owens ruminated on these things in early morning as he awaited word that the patrol would be relieved. At 0700 the message came over the radio. For a time, the platoon would halt in place. Along about noon, or a little earlier, a Mike boat would arrive to bring the 23 men out of the diamal swamp.

At 1100 hours, they saw the Mike boat approaching along the one rough still-running enough water to float it. The tide was out. They threw out yellow smoke to lead the craft in, and it got to within 50 meters of their assembly and tied up there. The boat was one of a small fleet; three other boats idled nearby.

As best they could, they made it to the stream and boarded. The brief journey across the mud flat, with each man striking out to the boat over whatever ling looked most favorable, had taken 10 minutes. All the way they had tolled through muck up to their thighs. Some of them slucked all equipment at once. M/Sgt. John W. Artrip, a 35-year-old regular from Clintwood, Va., Pfc Bill Byam, and Sp/4 Larry Bailey stood naked on the deck even before the Mike boat was under way. All of the others stripped to the waist and doffed their steel pots.

There was a certain method in this. Save for the pilot and crew, the platoon had the boat all to itself. The boat was low in the water. All of the men's clothing was mud encrusted. As the boat backed its way upstream, they could lean from the deck and wash out their things.

Owens sat at the foot of the boat, looking out a porthole. The whole flotilla had moved about 100 meters upstream. Save for the roar of the engine, things were quiet enough. Then, in a split second, Owens saw just ahead of the boat, and on his side of it, an object that almost stopped his heart: It was a floating log, and it was not moving with the current. The three boats on ahead had somehow avoided it.

Owens yelled: "Mine! Mine!" But the pilot evidently couldn't hear him: A long, long second passed. Owens said to himself, "Thank God, we missed it." In that second he remembered also that the gunboat in the front was supposed to be fitted with sweepers to secure the convoy against submarine mines.

That was his last conscious thought as a tremendous explosion lifted the whole craft nearly 10 feet out of the water, breaking its back. Owens had backed out from the concussion, and for the next three or four minutes, he knew nothing of the platoon's fate.

Sgt. John M. Stewart, Tampa, Fla., had been hanging over the side, washing his boots in the tide. The blast blew him to rear in the air; he fell the concussion but stayed, as of a Vietnam Patrol

back to base—and to death By Brig. Gen. S. L. A. Marshall (Ret.)

he remembered it, strangely calm as he went up and down again, to land in the middle of the stream.

On the way down, he had seen Sgt. Joseph Jannetto and two others whom he did not recognize already in the stream. That worried him—as he broke the surface, he knew that Jannetto was rated a non-swimmer. Looking about, he was astonished to see that Jannetto had already beaten him to the shore.

Sergeant Artrip was almost directly above the mine when it went off. He heard the roar, had a sense of the boat being lifted, but felt no concussion. With him were Byam and Bailey. The explosion tossed all three of them into the air and out into the stream. Byam was strong as a young bull and known as the best swimmer in the company. Now Artrip saw him paddling along feebly, his eyes closed, his arms barely moving.

Artrip saw that the tide was carrying him away; he could not know that Byam's abdomen had been blown open by the blast. Artrip swam over to him. It was hellishly difficult. His arms weren't functioning. He got hold of Byam's shoulder, but then it slipped away. His next pass fell short, and the mine startled him. Nausea swept over him, and he realized belatedly that he, too, had been wounded and crippled, though up till then remaining unaware. Either he would strike for the shore while some strength remained or he would drown trying to rescue Byam. The first instinct took over, and so Byam was lost to the tide.

Pfc Agapito Ramirez, 21, Premont, Texas, called "Tex" by his mates, lay flat on his back atop the roof when the mine blew. He, too, was hurled into the air. The roof belloyed upward, then collapsed downward as he descended. He landed on it as lightly as if he had hit a featherbed, felt no jar, escaped unscratched.

Gleaming downward, he saw five men struggling in the water, recognized one of them: Bailey was going down for the first time. Ramirez dove and swam for Bailey, got hold of him, felt the tug of the current, and lost his grip. Bailey went down for the second time. Ramirez tried again, failed. His strength ebbing fast, Ramirez turned toward the boat and barely made it.

Sgt. Guy E. Staley, 25, La Junta, Colo., lay sprawled next to a cabinet on the bottom of the boat at the moment of explosion. Staley saw, heard, and felt nothing; the blast knocked him cold and erased all memory of the incident. Ultimately, his mates pulled him from the wreck.

Making it to the shore, Sergeant Stewart looked back and saw Ramirez struggling to save Bailey. Next, Pfc Lewis Haddock, Jr., trying to paddle in midstream, caught his eye. He was just coming to the surface. Then Stewart saw Haddock go down for the second time. Stewart was 50 meters from him, standing in deep mud. It was too late—another nonswimmer was lost to the tide.

From near where Haddock went down, Sp/4 Ralph Martin called to him: "Stew, come help me. My back is messed up. I can't swim." Stewart, who weighs 160 pounds, jumped into the stream and saved Martin, who weighs 210, by sideslipping him through the water "to keep from hurting his injured back." Next he rescued one of the Vietnamese crewmen who had managed to stay afloat, even with a crushed chest.

Pfc Torivio Martinez, 21, Kingsville, Texas, blacked out at once and remembered no explosion. When he came to, the aid man, Sp/4 John Zermetta, was leaning over him. He asked, "What's the matter with you?" Martinez said, "Nothing, except I can't move." Zermetta said, "Wait for a stretcher."

Pfc Robert Jaynes, 23, Mason-town, Pa., also was knocked cold and had no recollection of the blast. On regaining consciousness, he found himself flattened out under a pile of debris which so pinned him that he was looking into the engine room. The engine was still running, which struck him as curious. There was no pilot; the Vietnamese skipper had been blown from the craft and had scrambled ashore.

Lieutenant Owens must have blacked out during these happenings. Count it five minutes. His first impression when he came to was that many bodies were pinning him down. As his mind cleared, he reduced the number to two.

He heard a faint voice calling: "There's someone on top of me. Get off me." He wondered whose voice it was. Then he suddenly realized it was his own.

Cpl. George Bellows, the forward observer, was sprawled across his chest. Bellows had a broken arm. Sp/4 William Miller lay across his legs. He also had a broken arm.

Bellows asked: "What's the matter? What's wrong with you?" Owens said: "Just that you're holding me down. Get up!"

As Owens arose, his vision cleared. For no reason at all, he first looked for his pot, found it, and clamped it on. As he moved, he twice stumbled and fell heavily, out of sheer weakness, which galled him badly. Some of his thoughts were very clear; he knew there had been an explosion and the boat was sinking.

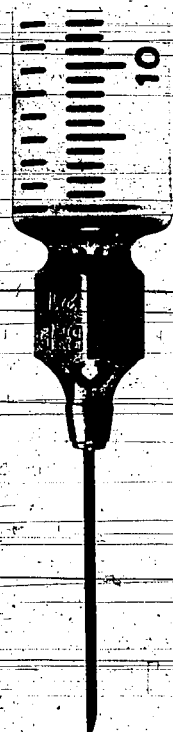

So he slid under the collapsed roof and began searching for anyone trapped. He found the medic, Zermetta, was already there.

He said, "There's no one under here, sir. I felt all around, but I can't see a damned thing." Zermetta had lost his glasses.

Owens asked, "How many wounded we got aboard?"

Zermetta said, "Eight, sir." Owens pondered, then said: "Don't

For two hours the marriage counselor listened to the husband and wife as they told him what was wrong with their wedded life. Finally the counselor stood up, swept the wife into his arms, and kissed her soundly.

"Now," he told the husband, "this is the treatment your wife needs on Mondays, Wednesdays, and Fridays."

"Sounds okay to me," the husband answered. "I can bring her here on Mondays and Wednesdays, but on Fridays I play golf."

waste time on first aid; we've got to clear them from the boat, or we'll all drown."

He was not right about that. The engine was at an idle, and under its power the boat had veered to hang up on the bank. Even so, the boat kept sinking.

The other boats thus far had played no part in the rescue. The boat just ahead had bucked and was now moored to the opposite bank. Its platoon unloaded to search for the Viet Cong who had "hand-detonated" the mine.

A second boat returned to Owens' side of the stream too late to be of any real service. Its platoon simply secured the shore from which the evacuation was to be made. By now, four helicopters were overhead.

Owens and the two men with broken arms, Miller and Hollows, aided by Zornetta, carried the six immobilized casualties from ship-side to the waiting choppers' 150 meters of hard going through deep muck. Moving one man at a time, it took them an hour.

The tide was coming in fast. The water rose, loosening the boat's hold on the bank. It sank from sight while Owens still watched.

He was sitting on the evacuation pad writing, for lack of a paper, on his hand with a ballpoint pen. He lifted the men he had blown out, and those the other boats picked up.

After one half-hour's work, the total left-three men missing. But he wrote down their names last, knowing that he could at least account for them. So did the tide—four days later.

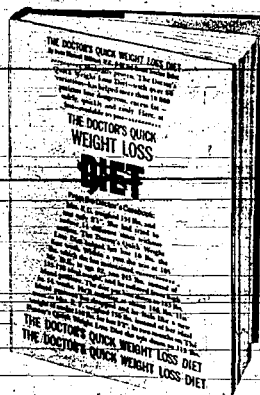

Rong Sat in one of the most hostile places to fight a war—and consequently one of the most strategic. That's why patrols like Lt. Owens' spent 72 hours in hell.

The day after, another patrol took up where his had left off—so tragically.

Get That Weight Off Quickly!

You can lose 5, 10, 15 or more pounds the first week!
Dr. Irwin Stillman's Quick Weight Loss Diet debunks the myth that the only way to lose weight is to lose it gradually. He proves with facts not theory that rapid weight loss is the most effective reducing method.

- IN JUST ONE WEEK you can see the weight on the scale drop rapidly, and the fat melt away. Dr. Stillman's records show that... patients averaged a loss of 6 to 7 pounds in the first 3 days on the Quick Weight Loss Diet.
- IN JUST ONE WEEK you can get rid of the pounds suddenly gained from too much "good living." Sudden slimming is yours with the Quick Weight Loss Diet.
- IN JUST ONE WEEK you will be delighted and impressed by your decided drop in weight. If you have failed with other diets, the big loss of weight the first week from the Quick Weight Loss Diet will give you the confidence you need to continue.

DEAR IRWIN STILLMAN: developed the Quick Weight Loss Diet in the course of his 45 years of medical practice. The diet has been tested and proved by over 10,000 patients. It works!

His first rule is: GET THAT WEIGHT OFF QUICKLY!
 The diet helps you do that by burning up 275 extra calories of body fat a day! And that is a secret of its success. This diet requires no will-power after the first week. As soon as you see that you've lost 4, 10 or even 15 pounds in just your first week, you'll have all the encouragement you need right from your scale.

EAT AS MUCH AS YOU WANT

The amazing thing about the Quick Weight Loss Diet is that you get all the nutrition you need... you do not lose your appetite... you eat as much as you want... actually by sticking to permitted foods, you put a "brake" on your appetite so that—without bothering to count calories—you eat far less than usual.

But should you suddenly feel the urge for a midnight snack, go ahead. You don't have to put up with hunger pangs. Nor do you have to feel guilty if you eat "a little bit extra." With permitted foods, you may eat as much as you want (that don't suit yourself).

NOT JUST ONE DIET... BUT 60!

In addition to the basic Quick Weight Loss Diet, there are 60 different quick-reducing diets that cover a range of emotional and medical needs. For example, there's an Ank-Acne Diet, Anti-Allergy Diet, 6-Meal-A-Day Nibbler Diet, Bread-Cheese-Wheat Diet, High Fat/High Protein Diet, etc. And every one is a quick-reducing diet that fits you down in a hurry. And if you're the type who must have variety, you can switch from one Diversión Diet to another... lose weight... and never eat a boring meal!

HELPS PEOPLE WHO COULDN'T REDUCE BEFORE
 Hundreds of Dr. Stillman's patients were "veteran dieters"—people who have tried to lose many times before, and failed. Here are a few case histories:

MRS. F. G.: Five years ago she weighed 124 and was only 5'1". She had tried to reduce 14 times before without success, losing a few pounds at first, then gaining them back. With the Quick Weight Loss Diet, she lost over 10 pounds the first week, so she encouraged she continued eagerly. In a year she got to her desired weight of 105 and has maintained it ever since.

MRS. E. E.: At 5'2" she weighed 155 instead of her ideal of under 110. She vowed to reduce after overhearing people call her "butterball." In just two months she was down to an ideal weight. 115! Eating up too quickly, she gained nine pounds in a month, went back to the diet, dropped back to 115 in two weeks, and to 110. If her weight goes up, she knows that a few days on the Quick Weight Loss Diet will bring it down again.

M. D. E.: He was 5'11", weighed 215 pounds and had the fat on his old nose. He was only 32. His blood pressure was a dangerous 210/135. In 14 weeks he went down to 183 and his blood pressure dropped to a safer 150/100. He says he feels like a "new man." After holding this interim weight for a while he will lose about 20 pounds more, then stabilize at his ideal weight of 165.

WHY THE DOCTOR'S QUICK WEIGHT LOSS DIETS WORKS

You, too, can lose weight fast. No matter how many times you've tried other diets and failed, this program will work. Everything you need to know is in the book, The Doctor's Quick Weight Loss Diet. Read it and you will learn:

- How to figure your ideal weight.
- What foods will start you losing at the amazing rate of 5, 10 or even 15 pounds a week.
- Dozens of hearty meat, fish, egg and cheese dishes which you may eat to your heart's content.
- Why this program works where gradual loss programs fail.
- Why calories count, but you don't have to count them.
- How to hold your ideal weight after reaching it.
- Gourmet foods that help you stay slim.
- Facts to help "scare" the fat off you.
- How to help children, teenagers and the elderly to lose weight fast.
- Why overweight people must DIET OR DIE YOUNGER!

READ IT ON THIS "MUST-SLIM" BASIS
 Send for the book... read it... put the Quick Weight Loss Diet to work for you. If you are 100% satisfied with your weight loss and satisfied that the loss is permanent—return the book and get your money back. Give us 15 days!

Mail the coupon today. You have everything to gain—better health, greater vitality, a slim, young-looking figure. And nothing to lose but fat!

HAILED BY REVIEWERS

For example, the medical reviewer for King Features Syndicate, himself a physician, writes: "This is a no-nonsense approach to losing weight; it cannot help but work if you follow the author's directions... this book is probably the best medicine as well as the best friend a fat person could ever have... It also offers encouraging aid along with exercises, these two factors are so important as diet; the three together, written in such a pleasant style, set this particular book apart from being just another diet plan."

"This diet saved my life"

The author, Dr. Irwin Maxwell Stillman, was a "fat" man himself when he suffered a severe heart attack. Realizing that his life depended on losing 50 pounds fast, he used the Quick Weight Loss Diet to do it. His reducing method saved his own life and has kept him healthy and fat-free ever since. Dr. Stillman is a Diplomat in Internal Medicine, has been Clinical Instructor in Medicine at Long Island College Hospital, and is a Fellow in both the American Geriatric College and the American College of Angiology.

INDIVIDUAL SERVINGS

That say "Just for you!"

■ It's so flattering to feel that food set before you was prepared "just for you." Let every family member or guest alike feel that personal touch when you present individual servings dramatized in casseroles, as petite salads, or even as cupcakes or miniatures loaves.

African-Rocket Lobster en Casserole

- 5 (3 oz. each) frozen South African rocket lobster tails
 1/4 cup butter or margarine
 1/2 cup regular all-purpose flour
 2 cups chicken broth
 2 egg yolks fork beaten
 1/2 cup cream
 2 to 3 teaspoons Worcesterhire sauce
 1 teaspoon dry mustard blended with about 1 tablespoon cold water
 1 or 2 pkgs. (10 oz. each) frozen asparagus spears, cooked according to pkg. directions and drained
 1 pkg. (8 oz.) spaghetti, cooked and drained
 Parmesan-Romano cheese
 1/4 cup toasted sliced almonds
- Drop frozen lobster tails into boiling salted water. Return to boiling and simmer 8 minutes.
 - Remove cooked lobster tails and place under running cold water until cool enough to handle. With scissors, cut along each edge of bony membrane on the underside of shell; remove meat.
 - Dice half of the meat and cut remainder into chunks; set aside.
 - Stir flour into hot butter or margarine in a heavy saucepan. Cook until bubbly. Add broth gradually while blending thoroughly. Stirring constantly, bring rapidly to boiling and cook 1 to 2 minutes. Immediately blend about 3 tablespoons full into egg yolks and stir into the hot sauce. Cook 3 to 5 min., stirring constantly.
 - Blend in cream, Worcesterhire sauce, mustard, and diced lobster. Heat thoroughly.
 - Divide cooked asparagus equally among 8 individual casseroles. Sprinkle with Accent. Spoon over spaghetti-and-hot-lobster sauce. Generously shake cheese over all. Top with lobster chunks and almonds. 8 servings

Sloppy Joe-Corn Casseroles

- 1 can (15 1/2 oz.) barbecue sauce-and-beef for "sloppy joes"
 1 can (12 1/2 oz.) corn with seasoned butter
 1 cup dairy sour cream
 Potato chips, coarsely crushed
 Canned Vienna sausages
- Mix the barbecue sauce and beef for "sloppy joes," corn with seasoned butter, and sour cream. Divide equally among four individual casseroles. Sprinkle each generously with the crushed potato chips. Gently press 3 or 4 sausages into the chips, radiating from near center.
 - Place in a 350°F. oven until casseroles are thoroughly heated, about 20 minutes.
 - At the center of each casserole, tuck in a small bouquet of parsley and a carrot curl for garnish. Place casserole on a large dinner plate along with fresh fruit salad drizzled with a sweet dressing and nestled in a lettuce "cup." Stack a small bundle of cheese straws prepared from refrigerated cheese-flavored snack dough to one side of salad. 4 servings

Lima-Meat Ball Stew with Flaky Topping

- 1 can meat ball-stew
 1 can (14 1/2 oz.) lima beans with seasoned butter
 1 1/2 cups (about 6 oz.) dried apricots
 1 cup dairy sour cream
 1/2 teaspoon ground turmeric
 1 pkg. (8 oz.) refrigerated crescent rolls
- Mix the first five ingredients. Divide equally among four individual casseroles.
 - Separate roll dough into four squares and cut each diagonally into fourths. Slightly overlapping tips, cover each casserole with four of the triangles.
 - Bake at 375°F. 25 min., or until topping is lightly browned.

- For garnish, pare long strip of tomato (as for an apple) and roll strip to resemble a blossom. Place one blossom at center of each casserole nestled between half slices of notched cucumber. If desired, quarter a ripe olive and poke a quarter into center of each tomato garnish. 4 servings

Frozen Fruit Salad Delicious

- 2 1/2 cups dairy sour cream
 2 1/2 tablespoons lemon-juice
 1 cup sugar
 1 teaspoon salt
 1 cup drained crushed pineapple
 1/4 cup finely chopped maraschino cherries
 1 large banana, diced
 1/2 cup chopped walnuts
- Mix the first four ingredients. Stir in fruits and nuts.
 - Spoon mixture into twelve 2 1/2-in. muffin-pan wells lined with paper baking cups. Freeze until firm.
 - For buffet service, arrange 12 "leaves" of Boston lettuce on a chilled serving tray. Top each with a small or spinach leaf, invert salads onto greens (paper cups removed). Place sprays of water across between servings.
 - Or arrange as suggested above on individual chilled salad plates for a luncheon course and accompany with piping hot rolls. 12 servings

Banana Fudge Cupcakes

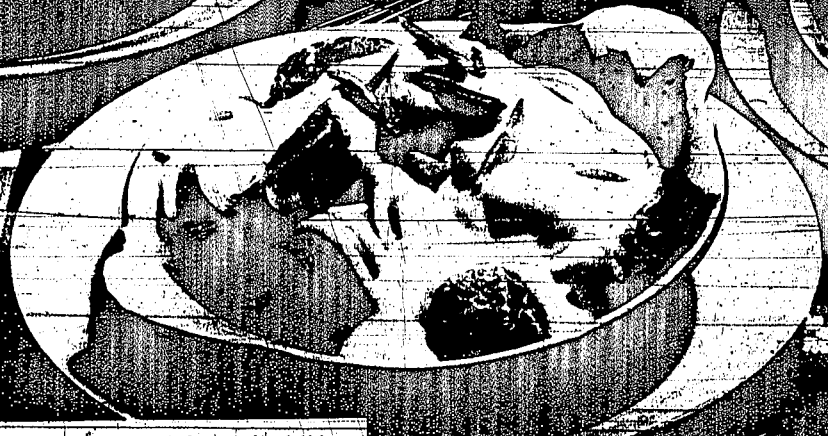

- 1 pkg. chocolate fudge cake mix
 2 cups mashed fully ripe banana
 1/2 cup water
 1 teaspoon banana extract
 1 cup chopped salted pecans
 1 pkg. frosting mix (chocolate fudge or buttercream)
 1 1/2 to 2 teaspoons banana extract
- Generously grease and flour bottoms only of 24 deep 2 1/2-in. muffin-pan wells. Set aside.
 - Following cake mix pkg. directions, using mashed banana and 1/4 cup water for the liquid. Mix in 1 teaspoon extract and the pecans. Fill prepared wells to within 1/4 in. of top. Bake as directed for cupcakes, about 18 minutes. Cool.
 - Prepare frosting mix according to pkg. directions, adding 1 1/4 to 2 tablespoons extract, with butter. Frost cooled cupcakes. Spoon 1 teaspoon chopped pecans onto center of each cupcake and wreath with unsweetened chocolate shavings. 2 doz. cupcakes

Miniature Butter Cream Loaves

For a Morning Coffee serve each loaf on a small bread board with a slicing knife and accompany with individual carafes of coffee.

- 1 pkg. hot roll mix
 Butter-Cream Filling (see recipe)
 1 cup chopped nuts
- Follow hot-roll mix directions on pkg. through first rising.
 - Meanwhile, prepare Butter Cream Filling and spread about 1 tablespoon of the filling over bottom and sides of each of four 6 1/2 x 3 1/2-in. loaf pans. Cover remaining filling; set aside.
 - When dough is doubled, punch down, turn onto a lightly floured surface and divide into 4 portions. Roll each portion into an 8 x 4-in. rectangle.
 - Reserve 1/4 cup filling for topping. Spread one fourth of remaining filling over each dough rectangle and sprinkle with one fourth of the nuts. Beginning with a shorter side, tightly roll up dough; pinch edges and ends to seal loaves.
 - Place sealed-edge down in prepared pans. Brush tops with melted butter or margarine.
 - Cover; let rise until doubled.
 - Bake at 375°F. 20 to 25 min., or until golden-brown.
 - Immediately remove loaves from pans and set on wire racks. Spread reserved filling over hot loaves. 4 small loaves
- BUTTER CREAM FILLING: Prepare 1 pkg. frosting mix (chocolate fudge or buttercream) according to pkg. directions adding an additional 2 tablespoons butter and 1/2 teaspoon vanilla extract with the butter.

Small endive-onion salads and little casseroles of African rock lobster meat layered with asparagus tips and richly sauced spaghetti are colorful supper temptations.

VANESSA REDGRAVE: Troublemaker OR Troubled Star?

By PEER J. OPPENHEIMER

MUCH of the success of the movie hits, "Camelot" and "Blow-Up," is attributable to tall, willowy, veddy British 30-year-old Vanessa Redgrave.

She excelled in both films yet was virtually ignored in the Oscar nominations. Why? How is it that such an obviously talented actress could alienate the Hollywood voters who select the nominees?

Most insiders reply that she lacks the one quality necessary to be truly liked by her coworkers—warmth.

But Vanessa really is neither unfriendly nor hard to get along with. In fact, when one meets her, she is polite, very proper. Of the persons I talked to about her, not one had an unkind word for her—but she was unenthusiastically described as "polite," "aloof," "withdrawn."

This may be her own doing because there really are two Vanessas. The first is the "public" Vanessa, daughter in one of England's most illustrious theatrical families (her father is Sir Michael Redgrave, her mother, actress Rachel Kempson, her equally talented sister, Lynn, and her brother, also an actor, Corin).

This Vanessa happily will discuss acting or will protest vigorously for what she considers worthwhile causes, whether it means participating in "ban the bomb" or "end the Vietnam war" marches.

Vanessa, who once spent her free hours in California studying political science at UCLA, has been looking for "causes" since she was 14. "It's a kinky part of my nature—to meddle," she says.

In spite of the fact that she is an outspoken liberal, pomp and circumstance as well as public recognition mean a lot to her. Vanessa was notified recently, for instance, that she would be made a Commander of the British Empire.

It is rare that an actress gets this honor at such a comparatively young age, and when her secretary read the news to her, it was one of the few times Vanessa lost her composure. "I don't believe it!" she screamed. "I really don't!"

Vanessa, though, is still the dissenter.

"I've changed my mind about many things I used to take for granted," she says. "I've gotten fed up with the Labor Party. I now tend to push for the individual."

The other Vanessa is an equally attractive but much less outgoing woman who hates talking about anything that concerns her private life, from the failure of her marriage (to director Tony Richardson) to her romance with actor Franco Nero, her costar in "Camelot."

When in England, Vanessa usually stays at home in Hammersmith. To help her take care of the house and her daughters, Natasha, 4½, and Joey Kim, 3, Vanessa has a nanny, a cook who comes in during the day, and a part-time cleaning girl. "I don't care to have a lot of people around me all the time," she insists.

Vanessa's biggest problem is her near-sightedness which has added to her reputation for aloofness. New acquaintances are miffed when Vanessa walks right past them without saying hello. "Actually," says Vanessa, "I simply don't see them!"

This Vanessa does not seem overly fond of her fellow actors—with the exceptions of Nero and David Hemmings, her costar in "Blow-Up" and "The Charge of the Light Brigade." "I adore her," says David, "but like all actresses, she's insecure. She's really a gentle person. She also is clever, more aware than most people."

That became evident to director Josh Logan when he first met her—to discuss "Camelot." Unwilling to take a chance that someone else would do the songs, Vanessa had her agent stipulate in her contract that her voice could not be dubbed.

At this point, her life is focused on her work, her children, and Franco Nero. "She's in love with him," a close friend says. "Don't quote me by name, but I can't see why. But then, I never understood Vanessa's taste in men."

Asked about marriage, Vanessa says she has no plans as of now. "There is so much to do in life that is exciting."

That is probably the "public" Vanessa talking. The other Vanessa yearns for a happy life for herself and her children—and that most likely includes a husband.

Formula for relief of Bronchial Congestion, Bronchial Asthma.

Helps Rid Lungs of Excess Phlegm

Helps clear air passages, restore free breathing, relieve distress... coughing and wheezing.

This clinic-tested preparation is called BRONKAID. In one tablet, Bronkaid combines an expectorant and bronchodilators to attack the two major causes of congestion and wheezing. Bronkaid Tablets actually start acting to soften and loosen excess phlegm. This direct action helps rid your air passages of sticky, stringy phlegm. At the same time, Bronkaid helps relax tightened bronchial muscles and eases the distress that results from stagnant air trapped in the lungs.

With Bronkaid Tablets, you enjoy amazing two-way help in one combination tablet. Bronkaid helps you cough up phlegm, clear clogged air passages, restore free breathing. You cough less; you breathe more freely, easily. For rapid relief of coughing and wheezing of bronchial congestion, even bronchial asthma, for relief that lasts for hours, get BRONKAID TABLETS today. No prescription required. Available at all major drug stores. Dr. J. B. Pharmaceutical Co., Inc., New York 10016.

YOU MAY HAVE PIN-WORMS AND NOT KNOW IT!

Ageless, insect-like and a tormenting itch are often the main signs of Pin-Worms. Usually, parasites that medical experts may infer if a bit of your stool is examined. Entire families may be victim and not know it. Experts rid the Pin-Worms, they must be killed in the large intestine where they live and multiply. That's exactly why Jayne's P-W Tablets do . . . and here's how they do it. First, a scientific coating carries the tablets into the bowels before they dissolve. Then—Jayne's modern, medically approved ingredient goes right to work—kills Pin-Worms quickly, easily. Ask your pharmacist. You must take your medicine with dangerously, highly contagious Pin-Worms which infect entire families. Get genuine Jayne's P-W Vermifuge . . . small, easy-to-take tablets . . . special also for children and adults.

LIKE MOST Americans of ordinary means, you probably believe that an "estate" is only for the very rich.

Count up your life insurance, home equity, bank accounts, job benefits or business, even antiques, and you may be pleasantly surprised to find how much you will ultimately leave to your family.

I know of one salesman with a modest income who pooh-poohed the notion of financial planning, yet upon his death he ended up with an estate of $120,000. He also left his family entangled in several legal problems that could have been avoided by careful planning.

So, to avoid headaches and save money later on for your heirs, start by having a competent lawyer draw, or update, your will. (Every week nearly $100-million left by people without wills piles up in state probate courts.)

With your objectives clearly in mind, analyze your current and expected future assets, then consider how to best conserve those assets and pass them on to your family—with the least amount of shrinkage. Many people rely solely on life insurance for an "instant estate," but in many cases other solutions may be available to the prudent family.

Today more families are turning to trusts, in one form or another. Even if you bequeath no more than $25,000, a trust can provide many benefits. In fact, a trust is the most flexible instrument in estate planning. Essentially, it's an arrangement whereby property is legally transferred to another person, bank, or trust company (the trustee) who handles it for you or your beneficiaries.

A young couple in their 30s, for instance, can start an estate easily with a "Life Insurance Trust." This is administered by your bank or other trustee, not an insurance company. In this elastic program, a trustee is named to manage the insurance proceeds after death for heirs inexperienced in handling large sums. They then will receive both income and principal as needed.

If it's set up as a "Funded Trust," other assets (such as securities) can be coordinated with the insurance to receive the same expert management. Such a trust does not have to be mentioned in a will or go through probate. Estate administration expenses can be reduced considerably and double taxation can be averted; that is, taxes need not be paid first by the wife and then again by the children who inherit the same funds from her.

You can have a trust tailor-made for you. Under a will, for example, you can create a "Testamentary Trust" to make certain your property is managed expertly and used as you desire. The trustee, usually a bank, is given broad investment powers, with directions for paying income and principal to your heirs.

If you want to control your assets during your lifetime, consider the increasingly popular "Living Trust." With this kind of arrangement, you can make the income payable to yourself while you are alive or

Family Estate

An expert offers tips on protecting them have it reinvested for your future benefit. This type of trust will not be subject to probate.

In an emergency, you can withdraw part or all of the money from the "Living Trust." At your demise, the trust can be continued for other members of your family. It has all the advantages of a will with none of the shortcomings (disappointed relatives rarely will challenge it). Nevertheless, you should have a will, too.

A "Living Trust" can be revocable—altered or cancelled at any time—but this type is subject to estate taxes. You can, however, make the trust irrevocable, unchangeable for a specified term. Here, taxes on income are at the lowest rates. Often, the Federal estate tax can be bypassed or substantial savings made by removing assets from the estate.

When a "Living Trust" is handled by a bank as trustee, you also have experienced investment management at a modest cost. If you become seriously ill, the trustee can pay the bills for you. Settlement of the estate is simplified, no delays are incurred. For minor children in a family, the "Living Trust" can provide guardianship protection.

I am convinced that even young couples can start a "Living Trust," if they develop a pattern of financial strategy and build up the trust regularly. Instead of "blowing" a year-end bonus, an inheritance, or windfall, part or all of it can be put into the trust.

Lately, a number of banks have introduced what may be called "Budget Trusts," which permit people of modest means to build year-by-year for their family's future. Under one such plan, you begin with an investment of $100, then follow with monthly installments as low as $25.

Sure, trusts have some drawbacks. An irrevocable trust allows up property you may need later. Amending a revocable trust yourself, without the guidance of professionals, can foul up the arrangement. Attorneys and bank trust officials usually recommend extreme flexibility, so that you do not run into complications.

Is estate planning worth all the thought and trouble? Just look at the Federal taxes. If you have a total estate, including life insurance, of $150,000 or more, $16,000 can be saved in Federal estate taxes alone for the ultimate benefit of your children after the death of your surviving spouse. To do this, consult your attorney and develop an estate plan that will take full advantage of the so-called marital deduction.

Most states also have inheritance taxes. Here, again, proper planning can result in important savings. In some states, for example, life insurance payable to your spouse or any specific beneficiary (other than your estate) is exempt from state inheritance taxes.

In choosing an executor and trustee for your estate, consider the many legal, investment, and tax questions your spouse will be facing for the first time. Many widows find it difficult to take care of even simple financial duties, such as keeping records for tax purposes. A bank with a well-staffed trust department is uniquely equipped to assist beneficiaries facing such problems, in cooperation with your lawyer, accountant, or insurance man.

In planning your estate, here are some cardinal points to keep in mind:

- Make sure your program is flexible, able to meet whatever contingencies may arise.
- Do not choose a plan solely to reduce taxes; though you should take advantage of all savings. The primary purpose is to fulfill your family's needs and objectives.
- This is not a do-it-yourself project. Consult a competent lawyer and choose a bank with a well-equipped trust department.
- Review your estate plan and your will at least once every three years.

Remember, without a well-conceived estate program, the more you are worth, the more your dependents may lose; the less you are worth, the less they can afford to lose.

Projected wisely, your estate plan may turn out to be your most enduring monument. ♦

NOW! Run Your Car Without Spark Plugs

NEW JET-FIRE FUEL IGNITERS

... get up to 5 more miles per gallon of gas
 ... add up to 30 more horsepower to your engine
 ... save $100 each year for you, year after year
 ... while you use the cheapest grades of gasoline!

Spark plugs obsolete! Now there's a far better way to run your car. With conventional spark plugs, only a fraction of the fuel that enters your cylinders is turned into power. The rest escapes through your tailpipe as unwanted vapor. That is because the spark is so narrow — only 1/32 of an inch wide — that it cannot properly ignite all the fuel mixture in the cylinder. As plugs get older, their sparks are narrower and less efficient till they have to be replaced.

New Jet-Fire Fuel Igniters do a far better job of turning gasoline into power. Instead of a narrow spark, they send out a wide swath of flame that "wicks" across a semi-conductor tip, fanning out in all directions and exploding far more fuel in the cylinder.

Proof That You Get Up To 30 Horsepower More

Jet-Fire Fuel Igniters look like spark plugs merely because they have to be screwed into the spark plug socket. But what they do is far different. Here's how to prove it:

1. Run your car for 15 to 20 minutes.
2. Stop on a perfectly level stretch of road.
3. Put the car in Drive (1st gear with manual transmission), and set Rev. limit at 2000 RPM.
4. Remove plugs and install Jet-Fire Fuel Igniters (to 16-cylinder job).
5. Now we know that your car runs in better speed. You can expect it to be a 100 or 200 RPM's faster. Without touching the gas pedal — dramatic proof that Jet-Fire Fuel Igniters increase engine RPM's at 100 to 150 with less increase in gas consumption. (All tests made; RPM's reduced to 300 to 360.)
6. So that time, you reduce the gas flow by adjusting the idling screw, and start saving money before you've driven a mile!

At the end of your test run, you'll get a mini turbine burner. Fuel Igniters require only a 1/2" hole instead of the conventional 3/16". It's a simple adjustment that you or your mechanic can make in one minute.

Replaces an old-fashioned carburetor. Starts driving and you'll notice even more improvement — up to 30 more horsepower of accessible power. Add passing power. All this while burning less gas!

SWITCH TO REGULAR.

The next time your gas gauge gets near the "Empty" mark, tell the attendant to fill it up with REGULAR! Chances are you'll no longer need premium which costs four or eight cents more than cheap regular.

And this second saving is only the beginning. Jet-Fire Fuel Igniters provide easier cold starts — and that means less drain on your battery, and no drain on your patience as you try to get started.

NO REPLACING OR ADJUSTING EVER.

The more you drive, the better your Fuel Igniters perform. They don't become clogged with dirt or require adjusting. Carbon buildup — the natural enemy of spark plugs — is actually melted fuel igniters perform better. Wear becomes an additional "trimmer" for the igniter's tip.

So there you have it! Third saving. One set of fuel igniters will last the life of your car!

THE IMPORTANT DIFFERENCES BETWEEN ORDINARY SPARK PLUGS AND JET-FIRE FUEL IGNITERS

Your car's power comes from the expansion of gasoline. The bigger the explosion, the faster you go.

SPARK PLUGS NARROW SPARK

CONVENTIONAL PLUGS explode this mixture with a sharp, narrow spark — an air wedge. The spark is but 1/32 of an inch wide on each end — and it widens as it travels all the fuel in the cylinder. Unburned gas escapes through your tailpipe. In time, the electrodes become eroded and coated with carbon. The gaps widen, the spark gets narrower, you lose more power, waste more fuel — and finally have to replace your plugs.

JET-FIRE FUEL IGNITER WIDE SWATH OF FLAME

JET-FIRE FUEL IGNITERS use no sparks. Instead a flaming "wick" of flame — the semi-conductor bridge from one electrode to another, expands far more fuel, writes far more power. There is no gap that can widen. Carbon deposits actually improve performance. They are not to be adjusted or replaced — ever!
