Words Can Deceive Unless The Reader Is Prepared To Use A Little Logic

By THE READING LABORATORY, INC.

The fellow who said that the pen is mightier than the sword has a lot going for him. However, the sword is a lot more honest than the pen; it has one clear purpose.

One who wields the pen has any of three purposes. Because words reveal, words conceal and words deceive. You have to be on much closer guard against language than against the sword.

Watch for and recognize biased words or "loaded language." Consider "book burners," "radical," "extremists," "leftists," "rightists," "ultra," and others from the long list of words intended to convey bias, not opinions, to deceive, not reveal.

Watch language! Watch the labels on those words!

Then too, since the beginning of time people have been saying things like "Every man has a right to his own opinion." The ever-lasting mother-in-law has said: "So me a father, he'll make it if he can't drive a nail." There has always been a teacher to say, "This school has had nothing but trouble since your Algorism enrolled."

If these statements are as old as the hills, let us venerate their age, not their logic.

In all such statements (and they will appear in the most respectable writing with some what more sophistication), ask yourself, "Is the statement so general as to be meaningless?"

In reading critically, learn to examine and question general statements. In a word, especially the cliches most people accept without thinking.

When a writer explains his views, he uses two pieces of equipment: facts and reasoning. Facts are the bones and only fourth-rate writers or special pleaders will distort them.

What you have to be on guard against is the writer's reasoning. You can take two truths — it's done every day in the week and arrive at a wrong conclusion.

If the reasoning follows logical rules, it is called "valid" reasoning; otherwise the reasoning is regarded as "invalid."

The following rules will help you steer clear of the fallacies that result from invalid reasoning.

4. Do not try to reason about a whole class of things from a more segment of it.

Another thing, don't worry about imposing too much on your memory; you won't collapse mentally from trying to retain as much as humanly possible from what you read. The more you exercise your mind, the bigger the load it can carry with ease.

Retention is no problem if you practice prereading, questioning, outlining and summarizing. In a nutshell: Get the right mental approach so that you are moved to retain the material for good; summarize each paragraph as you go; summarize in key words so that you will learn to spot key words as you continue. Practice: read a news story in your paper, then ask someone to quiz you on what you read.

You are as rich as what you retain; you retain as much as you motivate yourself to retain. In conclusion let us make a few suggestions to help you in your reading habits. Read more than one paper, and read papers with differing views on the social scene. The same with magazines. If you are proud of the fact that you are a dyed-in-the-wool conservative, try to find out why the other fellow is just as proud of being liberal.

If you love science, then don't carve a narrow niche for yourself the rest of your thinking like. Read all the science you like, but the world doesn't begin and end with it. Enrich your life with literature. There is nothing so boring as the man who limits his conversation to one topic.

Biographies—well-written biographies — are about the most adventurous reading experiences you will ever have. History will be seen as a personal thing, not as a dry collection of facts.

Reading outside your special interests gives you new insights, new vocabulary, new ways of thinking and writing. But read, and read with discrimination. Junk doesn't relax you, and it lowers your sights.

Ninety per cent of what you will ever know comes from reading. Make reading a habit; make it a relaxation; make it your floor and most stimulating companion; make it your great wealth.

And read The Reading Laboratory way: read faster, with better understanding, more critically and with retention.

1. Do not try to compare things that are not really comparable;

2. Do not try to draw a general conclusion from two statements as to what is general;

3. Do not try to deduce a general conclusion unless you begin with a general, universal statement;

Piano Damage To Be Paid By Students

GLENNS FERRY — Meeting with the Glens Ferry City Council Tuesday evening was Mrs. Ray Whitt and Mrs. Zoe Hull to inquire about repair to the piano in the Glens Ferry City Hall which was damaged at the senior class dance in the hall Nov. 28.

Policeman Ted Morphy reported that the senior class was to pay for the repair of the instrument which belongs to some of the women's groups that meet in the hall regularly.

There ensued considerable discussion on the conduct of some individuals at the school dance and it was stressed that the majority of the students were well behaved, but a few individuals attempted to disrupt the dance, started fights, and disturbed the peace. The piano damage resulted during the fracas.

The council ordered that this type of activity will no longer be tolerated in Glens Ferry and the police were instructed to enforce strictly the law to prevent further outbreaks.

Michelangelo Show Has Rare Qualities

By CYNTHIA LOWRY
AP Television-Radio Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Television viewers watching Thursday night's hour-long closeup of Michelangelo's Sistine chapel fresco in black and white missed, unfortunately, the best part — the ABC program consisted of a long and loving inspection of the 300 or so figures created almost 500 years ago by the great artist. It was filmed from scaffolding that brought the cameras almost as close to the ceiling as Michelangelo was when he painted it.

As noted in the narration, Michelangelo combined four religious themes in the huge work: creation, temptation, repentance and redemption. In handling them he created a magnificent gallery of forms and faces — prophets and fools, very young and very old, exalted and vernal, beautiful and ugly.

He told stories in his pictures, including the ones about David and Goliath and Noah and the flood. The cameras always moved slowly, but occasionally they lingered over some special detail — an extended hand, the wrinkles or beard on an old man. Sometimes modern lighting equipment dramatically concentrated on a single figure while the rest of the work was in darkness.

Apparently, the producer of the show, who put in a year on the job, had "entitled" the man's dream," since that was the way it appeared on the TV screen. ABC apparently tried to add a little dash by calling it "The Secret of Michelangelo," although no one ever quite explained just what that was.

The entire pictorial treatment of the masterpiece was extremely reverent, and it was apparently thought necessary to handle the sound portion in the same way. Thus for the hour we had the rich voice of actor Christopher Plummer and the stage accents of Zoe Caldwell reading portions of the Bible and other suitable fragments appropriate to whatever pictures were on screen.

The hour would have been considerably less somnolent had there been, instead, a brisk, informative commentary, by a student of the arts or the artist, instead of a theatrical reading.

It would have been interesting to know more about the man, the manner in which he worked and also about preservation of the masterpiece — in most of the closeup shots, the cracks on the printings seemed alarmingly long and large.

Generally, it was a worthy educational effort of a type and quality rarely seen on commercial television.

NBC's change of format in its news show has been in effect for the past few nights. Chat and Dan now work at twin desks in the same New York studio.

The big change seems to involve Brinkley. He used to specialize in material involving government and politics. That Washington-based choice seems to have shifted to John Chancellor, who, though without Brinkley's dry humor, handles it very smoothly, indeed.

Author Ron Cowen Expresses Feelings In His Drama "Saturday Adoption"

By CYNTHIA LOWRY
AP Television-Radio Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Ron Cowen, the 23-year-old author of "Saturday Adoption" feels strongly that it is unfair to give money, time, affection and expect something in return.

In his 90-minute play drama, the second in this season's "CBS Playhouse" on Wednesday night he phrased and rephrased this thesis in the dialogue and plot: "You give something to somebody and you want a little piece of him."

Cowen's story was built around a disaffected 20-year-old prelaw student who, needing some meaning in his own life, volunteers as a Saturday tutor to a boy in a slum neighborhood, Rich Meridan, from a middle class suburban home, assigned to Macey Stander, a bright 12-year-old Negro who is encountering trouble reading.

Macey's background is the source of his unhappiness and loneliness—recollections of an out-of-work father now dead, a hard-working, ambitious mother who is determined to get better things for herself and child. And an older brother, Paul, hostile and suspicious of do-gooders, who has left his family to make his own hard way alone in a small job.

Rich has been sold by his father on becoming a lawyer and in spite of his personal doubts, he turned right around and sold the same idea to the little boy. He also hammered away at the boy's reserve and finally persuaded him to share some of his boyish dreams—cutting out to the South Seas and painting, jumping into a red sports car and running away to look at sunsets and forests in the Midwest.

But Rich was dreaming and knew it. The younger boy, once he had been reached and believed Rich, accepted the dream quilo literally.

Of course, there was no way a happy ending for Macey. But when Macey's mother laughed off his request for money to send Macey through college, that was reality and Rich was forced to deliberately and cruelly disillusion the youngster and send him, crushed, out of his life.

Cowen did not make any particular point about the black and white relationship, but his play did attempt to point up the differences between comfortable middle class existence and the bleak, hard life of low income families.

His characters seemed a little fuzzy. The 20-year-old was infantile in his yearning to go back to age 13 and be a pirate. The little boy was extremely mature in his initial resistance to making plans that probably would not materialize.

It was 90 minutes of little action and much talk and would have benefited by editing down to one hour. It moved slowly as Cowen circled around and worried at his theme from various angles. However, the performance of the two young leads were most impressive. Rick Gates played the college student. Eric Laneuville was effective as the lonely little boy. Delbert Mann's direction was sensitive, although his device of having Rich walk on camera from scene to scene—once there was supposed to be a lapse of a year in time between the scenes—was a little arty and self-conscious.

Caroling Set By Adventists

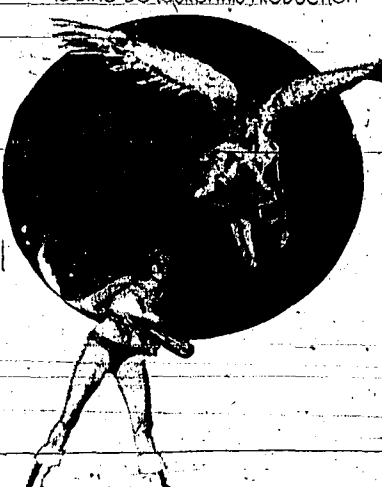

The Twin Falls Seventh-day Adventist Church begins its Christmas Caroling Saturday night as a part of its 65th annual World Service Appeal. In asking his members to participate as volunteer workers in the appeal, Pastor John Boyd said that the work of gathering funds to be used in the relief of want and human suffering throughout the world is in keeping with the true spirit of Christmas.

The Twin Falls Health and Welfare Center, operated by Seventh-day Adventists, reports that for the first 11 months of this year 8,192 articles of clothing have been given away. Other items given to those in need include 31 quilts, 30 pieces of furniture and 360 pairs of shoes. 647 persons received this help.

Volunteer workers at the center donated 2,184 hours of time to the benefit of those in need in the local community. The center, located on Falls Avenue West, is open every Tuesday afternoon.

Funds collected will go toward extending medical, welfare, and educational services in 100 countries, including the United States. On a worldwide basis, the church last year aided more than 8.3 million persons, distributed more than 11.4 million articles of clothing, donated 9.5 million hours of volunteer time, and contributed $4.2 million in food and cash to the church's welfare program.

Buhl Methodists Slate 60th Anniversary Event

BUHL.—The 60th anniversary of the Buhl United Methodist Church will be observed on Sunday, Dec. 8, according to Paul V. L'Abbe, pastor.

A special worship service at 9:30 a.m. will be followed by a period of historical remembrance and recognition at 10 a.m., and a "Birthdays party" at 10:30 a.m.

Early records indicate that the Buhl religious community was organized in the early summer of 1905 with H. S. Hobson as superintendent.

The first sermon in Buhl was preached by Rev. P. E. Bartlett, a Methodist minister who had taken up residence northwest of Buhl. Rev. Osterhout, pastor at Twin Falls, also conducted services.

The first resident pastor, preaching at Buhl and Filer, was a Rev. Mr. Hitchcock, who was here from September, 1907, to September, 1908. By this time the Methodists had grown to sufficient numbers to justify the organization of a class, which was done in the summer of 1908. This is the anniversary which

Christmas Music Will Be Presented

The Buhl High School Music Department in cooperation with the Buhl Ministerial Association will present a special service of Christmas music for the community in the First Christian Church at 8 p.m. Sunday.

The featured presentation of the program will be "A Ceremony Carols" by Benjamin Britten. Although written by a contemporary American composer, the music of "A Ceremony of Carols" is medieval in sound and style, written to support Latin and Old English texts which are, for the most part, many centuries old.

The presentation of this unusual Christmas carols, and is sponsored by the churches of the community to encourage thinking about the true meaning of the birth of Jesus which we celebrate at Christmas.

The program will also include participation by the audience in the singing of several of the more traditional Christmas carols, and is sponsored by the churches of the community to encourage thinking about the true meaning of the birth of Jesus which we celebrate at Christmas.

The Weekly Sermonette

KENNY C. HIMPLE, Pastor
Tyler Street Baptist Church

"Children, obey your parents in the Lord, for this is the Lord's commandment, that if you love the Lord, you shall love your father and your mother, which is the first and great commandment, and the second, like unto it, is, that you shall love me, which you shall love above all, and with all your heart, mind, strength, and might, and your neighbor as yourself, which is the second and great commandment, on which hang all the law and the prophets."

We are living in a day when one finds a large per cent of children and young people who do not obey their parents and just as great a number of parents who provoke their children to wrath. Because of the situation created, and parents not speaking terms with their children, parents provoke their children by not being fair with them, not listening to their problems, and their side of the story. Parents often demand certain standards from their children and they do not live up to those standards themselves. How can there be a conflict in the thinking of the young person when such conditions exist. How many parents have ever admitted to their children that they were wrong in decisions that were made. In the thinking of too many young people one will find that mother and father often make it clear that they are right and the children are wrong.

Children will obey and respect their parents when they see a good example set in the daily life. No one fools the children of the home, for they can see through sham, pretense, hypocrisy and just plain double-talk. All the words said mean nothing to a young person when the love of the parent is not true. Young people want to be proud of their parents and deep within there is a desire to express that mother and father are the finest in the world, yet how many can never say this because the parents just don't live up to the image. As parents we should never say anything that we do not intend to keep or enforce.

Correction is needed in every child's life, but be sure that the child or young person knows why it is given or administered. No youngster likes to be unnotified, therefore the parents must take time to talk work and play with their children in the homes where the parents yell at the children and the child is given or administered. No youngster likes to be unnotified, therefore the parents must take time to talk work and play with their children in the homes where the parents yell at the children and the child is given or administered.

Social Security Question Box

If you have any questions about your social security, address them to Jim Davis, Box 1930, Twin Falls, Idaho 83401.

Q. My husband is disabled and we have been notified that we will soon be receiving social security disability benefits. We have two small children and I have been working full-time and earning about $350 a month. If I continue working will we lose any benefits?

A. Only your benefits as a wife of a disabled worker will be affected if you continue working. The benefits your husband and children are receiving will not be affected no matter how much you earn.

Q. What kind of proof will I have to have that I am 65 years old when I come in to sign up for my social security?

A. The best proof of your age of course is a birth certificate recorded at the time of your birth. Many people have delayed birth certificates which is a certificate issued by the State of your birth after your birth submitted other documents and statements which prove your date of birth to their satisfaction. The people at the Social Security Office evaluate these delayed registrations by the state they were published and the evidence used to establish them. Another proof which is almost as good as a birth certificate recorded at the time of birth is a Baptismal Certificate or other church record established before your birthday. If you are unable to obtain one of these documents, U. S. Census Record, old insurance policy or family Bible, and other public records such as voting records, marriage license affidavits, military records, court records, naturalization records and your child's birth certificate.

Giant Dairy Farm Planned

CHICAGO—A former St. Louis industrialist, Robert Lamkin, is planning a plant $2.5 million, 1,100-cow dairy farm.

It will cover 1,140 acres and be known as Lamkinland. The facility is already under way. At the farm, near Watson, Ill., 700 cows are now being milked. Here, cows are moved to the milking barn in herds, and two herringbone parlors handle 10 cows at a time.

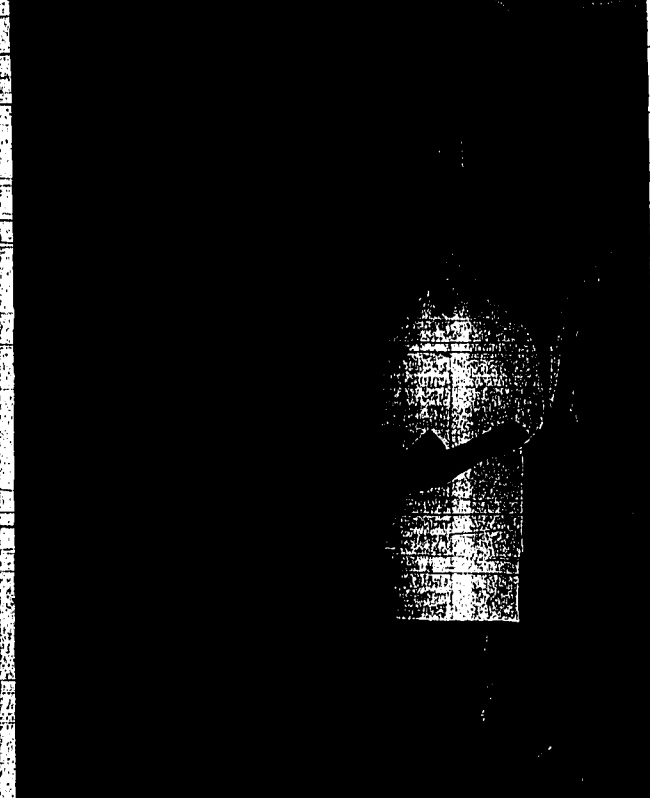

The facility plans to average 15,000 pounds of milk per cow each year.

Gem Apples Are Marketed In East

BOISE (AP) — Idaho apples occupy a competitive place on the fruit market as far away as southern and eastern states, according to the chairman of the Idaho Apple Commission, Mary Sanders.

Sanders, of Emmett, spoke to the Idaho Horticulture Society Monday, praising the state's apple industry to about 300 delegates from the northwest.

He said apples travel "a minimum of 1,000 miles."

Both universities have honored him as a distinguished alumnus, Maryland by conferring on him an honorary degree in 1945 and California by awarding him the Elize and Walter Haas International Award in 1967. From 1932 to 1938, Plaza managed his family's farm holdings which consist of 12,000 acres and 4,000 head of cattle. One of the farms, La Avelina, which is located south of Quito near Latacunga, has been in Plaza's family for four centuries since 1570.

On these lands Plaza raised wheat, barley, corn, potatoes, dairy cattle, and sheep. He introduced improved breeding, feeding and calving practices. He established a purebred Holstein herd for upgrading the native cattle with stock selected and imported from Carnation Farms in the state of Washington and from the state of Maryland. Some of this stock is descended from the distinguished bloodline of the Doolittle family.

Plaza put into operation a modern milk processing plant for butter, cheese and ice cream. He raised the yield of crops substantially through the use of fertilizers, soil conservation practices, improved seed, and mechanization.

He introduced the first seed drill to Ecuador, and the first combine. Many of the innovations Plaza pioneered in Ecuador, have become standard procedure throughout the nation.

From 1950 through 1967 Plaza managed his own farm Zuleta, and in 1964, he rented another, La Chimba. Both are located about 70 miles north of Quito, Ecuador's capital, and just south of the Andean town of Ibarra, about 10 miles from the equator.

Plaza inherited Zuleta from his grandfather. The lovely homestead of white washed, three-foot thick walls and stone columns, with a large stone cross in the main patio, is of classic Castilian style. Zuleta was built by the Jesuits in the seventeenth century.

Plaza's lands are in sight of snow-covered Mount Cayambe, one of Ecuador's highest peaks. The mountain illustrates the extremes of Ecuador's climate and topography, for what is grown on its uplands, and tropical crops on its lowland slopes.

Plaza's landholdings are at an average elevation of about 10,000 feet. Their soils consist mainly of volcanic sandy loams. The soils are fertile, with good drainage, and, in the main, well suited to the use of agricultural machinery.

At his two northern farms, Plaza milks 550 grade Holsteins (some with one purebred parent). He maintains his purebred herd of 120 head at Zuleta.

One of the bulls being used to improve his herds was bought by a group of Ecuadorian cattlemen for $27,000, at seven months of age. This bull, named "Cris-Crown"—the only brother of the famous "Crisa Cross"—was raised at Gray View Farms, operated by Harvey Nelson, in the state of Illinois. It is about four and one-half years old, and still maintained at Curtis Breeding in Illinois. His semen is flown from Illinois to Ecuador.

Another bull, which Plaza has used extensively in the improvement of his dairy herd, is "Treasure Sovereign Supreme," a grandson of the famous Canadian bull "ABC Reflection Sovereign." Although Treasury Sovereign Supreme died a little over two years ago, Plaza continues to use the bull's semen in improving his dairy herd.

Plaza purchased another of ABC's grandsons. Plaza has received many honors and distinctions in agriculture. As President of Ecuador (1948-1952), Plaza raised his nation's banana exports from a value of less than two million dollars in 1948 to more than twenty million dollars in 1952. When he left office, Ecuador had become the world leading

Wool Growers Aide Raps Proposed Grazing Fee Hike

U. S. Farmers Are Facing Soybean Price Dilemma

Twin Falls Times-News - 11
Friday, Dec. 6, 1968

SALT LAKE CITY—A serious economic threat to many western sheepmen who are dependent on the wool market is being raised by the National Wool Growers Association.

Overton made this statement in response to what he termed a "capricious and shocking" hike in grazing fees proposed by the outgoing Secretaries of Interior and Agriculture. He referred to the Nov. 14 announcement of the proposed increase in fees for livestock that graze on National Forest and Federal Grazing District lands.

Overton estimated 45 per cent of the sheep in the Western states would be affected by this proposal and many communities that depend on sheep production for taxes to build roads, schools, and other necessities will be adversely affected if this proposal is implemented.

Overton said the proposal would mean an eventual increase in some grazing fees on public lands to "almost" four times the present fee level and probable continued hikes after this is reached. He said the economic condition of the industry will force many growers to liquidate their sheep if this proposal goes into effect.

The wool association leader who raises sheep on his ranch near Yesso, N. M., said that livestock producers cooperated fully on a study in 1969 and 1967 to determine the relationship between costs of grazing on private lands and costs on National Forest and Federal Grazing District lands. Overton said sheepmen entered into this study cooperatively, even though they realized that a comparison of grazing costs on private versus public lands was not completely sound.

He observed, for example, that those grazing on Federal Grazing District lands are required by law to furnish and operate, under strict regulations, material investments in dependent private ranch property and/or water resources, and to meet other conditions and qualifications involving extraordinary expenses in order to obtain a grazing permit.

None of these conditions and investments are required by law for graziers on private leased lands, he said.

Overton said this study showed, without a doubt, that for grazing on U.S. Forest Service lands, total non-fee costs exceeded costs for grazing on comparable private lands by 50 cents per animal unit month, or an "animal unit month" denotes grazing for one month for one cow or five sheep. He said this means that sheepmen and cattlemen grazing on U.S. Forest Service lands are already paying more than full market value for the forage.

"A grazing fee increase on Forest Service lands is clearly not justified by the study above mentioned and yet the Forest Service is proposing an extreme hike in grazing fees. The National Wool Growers Association President said that the charges proposed are far from reasonable, being generally far beyond the reasonable ability of the graziers to pay. In fact, Overton added, many sheepmen for some time have been and still are operating at a loss.

Overton also charged that the Public Land Law Review Commission is being ignored completely through this proposal to jam outrageously large grazing fee increases down the throats of sheepmen and cattlemen while the Commission's study of the grazing fee problem is still underway. He said the Commission was established by the Congress to determine and to provide proper guidelines for use of all resources of our Public Lands.

Overton said the proposed extreme escalation of almost four times the present fee would adversely affect and in many cases completely ruin the economy of those sheep and cattle producers who must depend on Federal Grazing District and National Forest lands for a part of their year-round grazing. If important grazing fees on public lands, the government officials found it convenient to ignore that study and are now trying to justify the increase through a 1959 Bureau of Budget circular calling for "fair market value to be obtained for all services and resources through a system of reasonable fee charges."

The National Wool Growers Association President said that the charges proposed are far from reasonable, being generally far beyond the reasonable ability of the graziers to pay. In fact, Overton added, many sheepmen for some time have been and still are operating at a loss.

Overton also charged that the Public Land Law Review Commission is being ignored completely through this proposal to jam outrageously large grazing fee increases down the throats of sheepmen and cattlemen while the Commission's study of the grazing fee problem is still underway. He said the Commission was established by the Congress to determine and to provide proper guidelines for use of all resources of our Public Lands.

Overton said the proposed extreme escalation of almost four times the present fee would adversely affect and in many eastern Europe, Middle East. "American farmers must realize that the soybean price level is a major influencing factor on the price level of oils throughout the world," says Jan Randag, London-based Senior Vice President of the International Association of Seed Crushers.

"A too-high price level for U. S. soybeans provides an incentive to increase production where," he points out.

New Zealander Changes Art Of Shearing

NEW YORK (ED) — The knock-em-dead couture dress and military wares, the impeccably tailored suits and pants on the morning, a cozy blanket on the bed, and the luxurious carpet on the floor, all come from one of the largest harvests in the world.

Each year, more than one billion sheep are sheared to provide the pure wool products that have become our necessities. And with wool in great demand for comfort and style in all seasons, this harvest is increasing by important.

As a result, the art of shearing has had to change — from the laborious chore that dated back to Biblical times to today's swift scientific art. One of the men responsible for keeping us sheep-shape is Godfrey Bowen, field director of the New Zealand Wool Board and holder of the world's record for shearing. On July 15, 1960, at Manod, Wales, Bowen sheared 559 Welsh Mountain sheep in a fantastic nine hours. Bowen is also holder of another world's record — 483 Perendale sheep in New Zealand in 1962.

Bowen began his wild and woolly career at the age of 18. Practicing on New Zealand's 80 million sheep, he developed a technique that not only set world records, but, more importantly, revolutionized the craft of shearing. By perfecting a method of holding and shearing a sheep, Bowen has enabled the world's farmers to increase their flocks by millions more sheep, using the same, or an even smaller labor force.

Since he began shearing, Bowen has visited nearly a very country in the world to teach his skill — and in the process he's been honored. In 1960, Queen Elizabeth invested him with the M.B.E. for his services to the sheep industry. When Bowen visited the Soviet Union, ex-premier Khrushchev made him a Hero of Soviet Labor. Bowen has also taught his technique in Canada, South Africa, India, Japan and South America.

Recently, he became acquainted with 12 million Americans when he made an appearance on the "Tonight" show on national television. Johnny Carson, host of the show, expressed amazement when Bowen sheared a full-grown Cheviot ewe in one minute flat. During the show, Carson tried his hand at the sheep-shearing, too. But he soon discovered that there's more to wool-gathering than meets the eye — as the ewe bucked and squirmed through his attempt. But with Bowen controlling the sheep, Carson was able to complete several strokes with the high-speed shearing handpiece.

For his 15-minute appearance, Bowen was dressed in a machine-washable Woolmark knit shirt. When asked what the Woolmark symbolized, he replied, "It's the international wool symbol registered throughout the world for pure wool products made to quality standards."

Carson and the studio audience were particularly impressed by Bowen's unique ability to control the sheep. He demonstrated how the animal can be made completely gentle under his handling. As Bowen manipulated the animal's nerve centers, the camera revealed how each leg can be moved from a bent to a straight position, enabling the shearer to control the sheep during the shearing.

Bowen's appearance on the "Tonight" show culminated a month's visit to the United States. While here, he gave daily shearing demonstrations to thousands of spectators at the Oregon State Fair in Salem. He also appeared as a featured speaker at a number of Rotary International meetings including Oakland, Los Angeles and Santa Monica.

When he's home, Bowen is responsible for the training of about 2,500 shearers a year in all districts of New Zealand and personally supervises senior instructional courses which last about 200 top class shearers and instructors each year. He is also specialist adviser to many overseas instructional programs. In addition, Bowen supervises his own ranch with 4,000 sheep and 400 beef cattle. Throughout history, wool has been used for protection, for warmth, and enduring beauty, running the gamut from a simple garment to haute couture. Wool can be thick, thin, nubby, smooth, colorful or machine-heavy for cold weather and woven lightly for warm days — in its versatility, wool is infinite.

Today, thanks to modern shearing methods and men like Godfrey Bowen, more wool than ever is available. And because of wool's continuing popularity, more people than ever will be in sheep's clothing.

Prospects For Better Fruit Exports Seen

WASHINGTON (AP) — This year's larger output of fruit—particularly citrus, cling peaches and grapes—raises prospects for improved exports of these commodities, says an Agriculture Department official.

Richard B. Schroeter, a foreign agricultural service—FAS—analyst, said in a report today that despite a larger supply the United States will require aggressive efforts to regain sales lost because of short crops last year.

In 1967-68, Schroeter said, the total value of U.S. fresh and processed fruits totaled $287 million, a four-year low and 12 per cent less than the record $327-million shipped in 1965-66. Reduced sales of canned fruit accounted for much of the decline, he said.

Exports maintained their position as the leading dollar earner in U.S. fruit exports last year, Schroeter said, totaling $40.2 million, and canned orange juice jumped from seventh to second last year with $25.6 million, a gain of 21 per cent from the previous year.

With a large U.S. citrus crop in prospect, and traced by an intensive promotion effort, exports are expected to register increases this year, he said.

The FAS and the Florida Citrus Commission are cooperating with 10 European countries and 32 foreign distributors to boost sales of chilled juice and frozen concentrates, Schroeter said.

Stiffer competition from foreign citrus producers is developing, Schroeter said. These include Italy and Israel among the Mediterranean producers, and a number of Latin American countries.

Gov. Samuelson Tells Of Trip To Japan

JEROME — "J. R. Simplot feeds one and one-half times more cattle than the total number of cattle in Japan," Gov. Don Samuelson said in speaking at the annual Jerome County Farm Bureau banquet.

"I learned this while visiting Japan recently while on a trade mission with the State Department. The total number of cattle in Japan is about 60,000 head and two days prior to leaving for Japan, I was talking with Mr. Simplot and asked him how many cattle he feeds. He said he is feeding some 90,000 head this year."

Gov. Samuelson said he spent 16 days in Japan with 11 other governors and Secretary of State Dean Rusk and Secretary of Agriculture Orville Freeman.

Gov. Samuelson said he was asked to go on the mission to improve trade relations with Japan after the Governors Conference in the Virgin Islands because Idaho exports wheat to Japan.

Gov. Samuelson said the United States exports $10 million worth of wheat to Japan annually and some of it is from Idaho.

While in Japan, Gov. Samuelson toured several areas of the country, both in cities and in rural areas. On farms, Gov. Samuelson learned that the size of cattle herds ranged from one cow to 25 animals. No herd was larger than 25 animals, with most numbering five animals.

One interesting thing Gov. Samuelson learned from the Japanese was in the way they finish out beef cattle. He said the beef are kept in stanchions the last six weeks before slaughtering and are hand fed two quarts of beer a day along with other feed. At the same time, he said, the loin area of the cattle is massaged. "This causes a marbling effect and after slaughtering, the loin is cut into thin strips—like bacon—and sells for $10 per pound."

Gov. Samuelson added that this would not be practical in the United States because of the expense of buying beer for the cattle as well as for the hired hands. This remark drew laughs from the audience.

Japan has a population of 105 million people—Idaho has 700,000—and while touring the country, Gov. Samuelson said, there was no trash anywhere to be found. Also, he added, there is no unemployment in Japan.

Another item he learned on the mission was that the water in Japan has been developed for the past 300 years, while here in the U.S. we are still developing our water resources.

"But the best part about the trip was when I got off the plane in Boise and breathed Idaho air and walked on Idaho soil."

to match the 76 million shipped abroad last year.

The situation today first includes a problem of world plenty, the department said.

The report stated there has been a slackening of imports by big customers in the world market, notably the Soviet Union and Red China. Food aid recipients, including India and Pakistan, also have reduced their requirements from previous levels.

"Thus, at least for the current year, the world not only has more than enough wheat for its needs, but the grain is so adequately distributed that trade expansion is not expected," the report said.

A speech by the administrator of the Agency for International Development offers an explanation for the excess in wheat and other products.

In a talk prepared for the International Development Conference, William S. Gaud cited India, Pakistan, Turkey and the Philippines among the nations that have launched a "green revolution" through the use of new high yielding seeds, better use of water and fertilizer and more effective economic policies to double and triple their yields of rice and wheat.

He said the green revolution is more than a hope, it is now here in parts of east and south Asia and the Middle east. The question is whether it will be sustained and will spread, he added.

The preliminary report also said the department's 1968-69 export target of 750 million bushels "looks increasingly difficult to attain" and that exports definitely are not expected to match the 76 million shipped abroad last year.

DECLARER LOSES 10-1 CHANCE!

South's three no-trump call was the winning bid. It was also well-thought-out. He did have five pretty good hearts and his partner had raised him but his distribution was 5-3-3-2.

needed two club tricks for his contract. He made a valiant effort to get them but brilliant defense was too much for him. After winning the spade lead South played out two rounds of trumps. Then he cashed his remaining top spade and dummy's ace of diamonds. A second diamond lead put East in East took one more diamond and was left with just spades and clubs. A spade lead would give South a ruff and discard and East wasn't going to fall into that trap. He led his deuce of clubs.

South played the jack and right there is where West showed his mettle. Ninety-nine players out of 100 would have covered the jack with the queen but West played the four. The Detroit expert, Chuck Berger, sat West. He had counted the hand and knew that South still held two clubs and was sure to lose both unless one happened to be the ace. In that case, Chuck might have lost a trick but it would have been an over-trick, not the contract trick.

and he felt that the hand would probably produce as many tricks at no-trump as at spades. North almost let the hand play there but North kept looking at his four good hearts and finally took the hand back to the suit contract.

At three no-trump South would have eventually got around to leading his jack of clubs. If West covered South would have a sure club trick. If West played low South would lead the jack and make his club trick that way. Since South had eight top tricks, one in clubs would have been all he needed.

SAN FRANCISCO (AP)—The negotiator for baseball's owners denied Thursday that delaying tactics had been used in pension discussions with rebellious players but ignored allegations that the players were being coerced into signing contracts.

John Gahrer, the owners' negotiator, brushed aside the statements made Wednesday by the Players Association by issuing a statement over his signature that said, in part: "The only part of the statement (by the players) which warrants comment at this time is the charge that the club owners' negotiating representatives have been engaged in delaying tactics."

Television Programs In "Poor Health" Are Easily Spotted

By CYNTHIA LOWRY
AP Television-Radio Writer
NEW YORK (AP)—It is becoming easy to spot programs in such poor health that they probably will not survive. Poor health in television terms is any network program that routinely fails to attract at least one-third of the TV audience.

A scrutiny of the Nielsen rating reports indicates that it will take a miracle cure to boost such shows as "The Guns of Will Sonnet," "The New Adventures of Luck Finn" and "The Avengers." Other programs that are in good shape now include "The Outcasts," "The Jerry Lewis Show," "Star Trek," "N.Y.P.D." and "The Big Valley." "Hawaii Five-O," "Buddie," "Judith for the Defense," "That's Life" and "The Jonathan Winters Show" and "Hollywood Palace" also look trail.

While NBC and CBS see-saw back and forth weekly in toppling the list for the network with the highest average rating, ABC trails by several points weekly in terms of audiences for its product. Death in the springtime usually comes to those series which come in third in their time periods in the three-network battle for audience attention. Sometimes, however, a show that was weak one season manages to get stronger if moved to a different time. This season, for instance, "High Chaparral" appears to be doing nicely in an early Friday night position while last season it was dying in a late Sunday spot.

"The Good Guys," the new Bob Denver situation comedy, started out dimly but now seems to have picked up steam in the last Nielsen, it climbed into the top third. "The Doris Day Show," which bobbed around alarmingly early in the season, now seems to have established its niche—23th in a list of 86 shows in the last report—and so is assured of a safe return.

With increasing production costs—half hour shows now cost between $75,000 and $100,000 per program, and hour shows twice that—it is necessary for the average series to have three seasons of network exposure before it can be considered a success.

ABC—trails by several points weekly in terms of audiences for its product. Death in the springtime usually comes to those series which come in third in their time periods in the three-network battle for audience attention. Some-its producers can be assured of much profit. ABC has not made the formal announcement but "The Dick Cavett Show" will wind up its brave, short-lived morning run at the end of January. It is a victim of small audiences and, as a result, little sponsor support and the network has been losing money with the show.

NBC has signed Andy Williams to a contract, and he will return next season in a weekly variety hour.
