U.S. Suspends Bombing Of South Viet Targets

Nixon, Top Strategists Ponder Viet War Policy

SAIGON (UPI)—The U.S. command today suspended B52 bombing missions over South Vietnam on direct orders from President Nixon in a show of willingness to de-escalate the war. The U.S. command in Saigon did not comment on the B52 suspension, saying only that no raids had been flown today. "We report them as they are flown and will continue to do so in the future," a U.S. command spokesman said of the bombing raids.

WASHINGTON (UPI)—A dozen top government strategists and a grim-faced president Nixon met at the White House today for crucial discussions on Vietnam strategy. The conference started as a major decision took effect—a halt in American B52 raids in South Vietnam. The Vietnam review session started in the cabinet room shortly before 10 a.m. EDT and was expected to run much of the day. A Nixon spokesman said in advance there would be no immediate announcements on what was discussed or what decisions might be made. Photographers were permitted in the room briefly to snap pictures just before the doors were closed.

Sen. Frank Church Reports Finances

WASHINGTON, D.C. (Special) — Sen. Frank Church Friday reported another year's worth of periodic voluntary disclosures of income and financial assets.

The statement covers the holdings of his wife, Bethine, as well as himself, his children and two associations in Boise.

In delivering the statement to the Senate, Sen. Church said, "Prospects seem to be improving for legislation which will one day require all high officials of the Federal Government, both elected and appointed, to make a periodic disclosure of their income and assets. I personally feel the enactment of such comprehensive disclosure statute, applicable to the Executive, Legislative and Judicial branches of the Government, is long overdue. It would go far toward restoring healthy public confidence in political institutions and in the men who hold public office."

The Idaho senator said the principal source of his income is his salary, amounting to $42,500 a year. "Like many other senators, I must dig deeply into my salary to try to meet the out-of-pocket expenses of office for which there is no government allowance or reimbursement," he said.

"I supplement my salary with earnings from lecture fees and publication of articles. Since 1967, this supplementary income has averaged about $1,000 a year, although I anticipate the figure will go considerably higher this year," he said.

"This combination of salary and supplementary earnings has enabled me to close the gap between income and outgo, I am now able to add to my savings each year. At the time of my

Higher Interest Rates May End

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The era of record interest rates may be ending as the nation enters the "tail end" of an inflationary period, according to William McChesney Martin Jr., chairman of the Federal Reserve Board.

"We may be getting at the end of this period of very-high interest rates," Martin Wednesday told a Senate banking subcommittee considering a bill that would empower the Federal Reserve Board to put a ceiling on interest rates of federally-supervised banks.

As indicators of the slowdown, Martin cited decreases in the demand for bank loans, declines in the stock market and a modest capital expansion plans.

Idaho Educators Must Agree On Goals In Planning For The 1980's

By PAUL M. QUINN
United Press International

The road ahead in Idaho education is one of decisions and "somewhere between now and 1980 someone has to decide what priority is to be given to the goals for 1980.

And one of these major goals is a topic that frequently touches off bitter reaction, is school district reversion.

This probably as much as any other facet on educational change, is a major item and extremely controversial.

It has been well established that in order to assure and sustain quality education with a degree of economy, school districts must have an adequate population base. Idaho's projected re-inmigration is predicted to continue toward establishing population centers.

Thus, the need is obvious for school district reversion.

The administrative structure and organization subcommittee Force on Education has set up specific criteria for what should constitute a school district in Idaho:

1. The districts should have from 10,000 to 15,000 pupils in total population.
2. If school district reorganization creates a substantial number of school districts below the optimum size of 10,000, special programs and services should be provided from regional educational service agencies.
3. In a few isolated situations it may be wise to establish districts with fewer students than those recommended — but it would be unwise to establish districts of less than 7,000 students.

4. It does not seem reasonable to create school districts of more than 30,000 pupils in Idaho.
5. The criteria for elementary schools stipulates a minimum of at least one teacher per grade.
6. Travel time should not exceed one hour each way for 80 per cent of the students transported to an elementary school center.

The report states that the present school district structure cannot effectively and efficiently provide a full range of educational opportunities.

"Small schools and school districts generally offer fewer educational opportunities."

The report maintains that three potentials exist for Idaho will find solutions. These are interested citizens, professional educators willing to provide leadership at a stable population.

It is recommended that the State Board of Education establish a commission for school district reorganization. When a tentative statewide plan is adopted, public hearings should be held. The commission would refine the statewide plan following the hearings and then the revision plan would be adopted.

On a suggested timetable basis, hearings would be held between January and July of 1970. The transition would begin in January of 1971 and by July 1 of 1972 the mission would be accomplished.

And, since the process of state department business with local districts.

By 1980, half of the population of Idaho will be under 25 years old.

Idaho presently ranks second in the nation in the percentage of literate youth, 16th in the nation in the number of selective service draftees, who pass the pre-induction mental test and eighth in the nation in the median years in school by its residents.

"But the state has not yet been able to develop effective, long-range planning arrangements to insure educational change.

The current gap between educational investment and educational planning suggests that the important questions during the next decade will relate more to the direction and manner of educational change than to its rate and scope," the report said.

Idaho has had a multitude of reports on almost every phase of government and education. Many are read, talked about and then placed on the shelves to gather dust and fade into obscurity and become outdated.

The Idaho Citizens Advisory Council on Education and the Idaho Task Force Committee FOR Education do not want dust on their report on "Idaho's Future In Education."

U.N. To Hear Nixon

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Nixon will address the 24th session of the United Nations General Assembly Sept. 15, in New York, on Thursday, and may meet with Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei A. Gromyko.

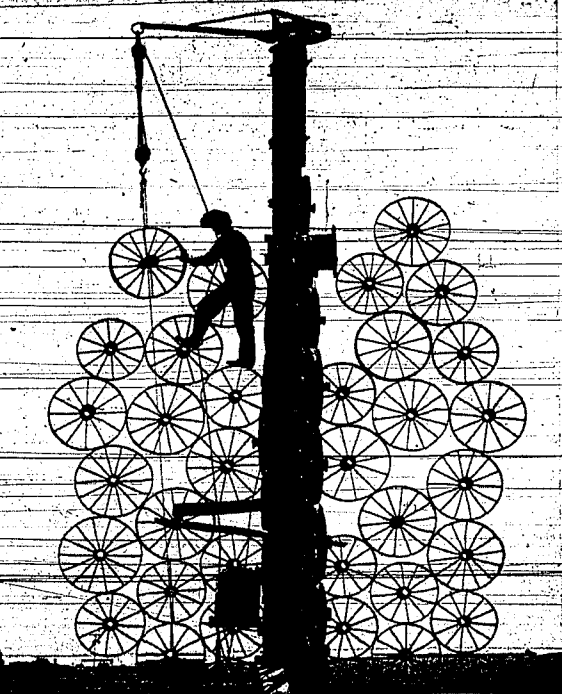

Secretary of State William P. Rogers had been expected to make the American speech at the General Assembly begins its 24th session, but White House Press Secretary Ronald Ziegler said Nixon would continue the custom of presidential addresses.

Rogers will attend the session and confer with Gromyko, but Ziegler would not confirm reports that Nixon would also meet with the Soviet Foreign Minister for the first time since becoming President last January.

Ziegler did say that Nixon would probably use the occasion for private meetings with representatives of other countries, although he said he knew of no specific plans for any such meetings.

The full session of the General Assembly begins Tuesday, and Nixon will speak sometime before noon on Thursday. Ziegler declined to speculate what the President will talk about, but he said he likely he would deal with one of the country's two most pressing foreign problems — the war in Vietnam and hostilities between Israel and Arab nations.

Ziegler also announced: Nixon's far-reaching review of the Vietnam War would be held at the White House Friday — not at the Camp David presidential retreat in the Maryland mountains. But Ziegler said Nixon would go to Camp David Friday afternoon to spend the night.

'Obscene' Classification May Halt Flow Of Junk Mail

ANN ARBOR, Mich. (UPI) — Most people just complain about junk mail, but Roger Staples did something about it.

He declared it obscene.

Staples, tired of the food and department store advertising pamphlets that flooded his mail box, sent the stuff back to his post office with a demand that no more be delivered to his home because it was obscene.

He ran into an argument from the assistant postmaster at Ann Arbor, Richard Schmeberger, who returned the mail to Staples.

"The department store and food ads for which you signed cannot be considered as pandering in nature," Schmeberger wrote.

Staples pointed to the law which defines obscenity as resulting squarely in the eyes of the beholder.

He (Staples) was offended, Staples wrote back, by "advertisements for beds, sheets, pillows, grades, intimate feminine articles."

"A picture of a lingerie model in a provocative pose is just as obscene as anything I ever saw from so-called pandering," Staples said.

Staples' complaint was passed on to the post office

Unique 'Medicredit' Plan Provides Help For Citizens With Medical Bills

NEW YORK (UPI) — This might be called "profile of a young man in action" or "budget for the first million at 37."

Take a basic economic fact, one creating problems for the average American family, as did John Fixler of Philadelphia. In this case it was the rapidly rising cost of health care which today has a national annual bill of about $50 billion, or $200 for every man, woman and child. Come up, as Fixler did, with an imaginative way for the average family to cope with the medical cost problem, and you could be on the way to a fortune.

Three years ago, at the age of 24, Fixler, formerly with Insurance Company of North America, became intrigued with medical cost figures. He surrounded insurance statistics showing himself with some prestigious names. On his board of directing healthy in 1948 ran to $7.5 billion, to $16 billion in 1958 and to a whopping $37.5 billion in 1968.

How to spread those costs within the average family's credit line and budget was the question, as Fixler saw it. His solution, which goes on trial this month in Berks County, Pennsylvania, was to combine computer technology with the latest in insurance techniques. His plan — formalized under today's name — is a national health system — offers convenient payment of all types of medical bills, a comprehensive health insurance program and that average family to combine with the medical cost problem, and you could be on the way to a fortune.

Fixler, executive vice president of Medicredit, surrounded himself with some prestigious names. On his board of directing healthy in 1948 ran to $7.5 billion, to $16 billion in 1958 and to a whopping $37.5 billion in 1968.

American Medical Association, and Evan William Mandel, president of Revlon Development Corp.

Here's how the system works. A subscriber who meets the local bank's credit requirements receives a line of credit at that bank. He also gets a Medicredit identification card. By presenting the card to participating members in the system he can pay for all types of services — physician, dentist, pharmacist, nurse, hospital, nursing home and laboratory fees. He can choose to repay the bank promptly or budget payments over a period of months at a charge slightly lower than department store credit financing. There are no initiation costs or membership charges.

Tribunal Considers Bond-Law Appeal From Pocatellans

POCATELLO (UPI) — The Idaho Supreme Court heard an appeal Thursday that Idaho's requirement for a two-thirds majority for revising bond elections could eventually lead to "extinction" of voting procedures.

A vote may be debated by two-thirds, what is to keep it from going to three-fourths, 80 per cent or even extinction, attorney Clark Gasser of Pocatello asked.

The high court heard oral arguments on the constitutionality of the Idaho two-thirds law. The proceedings involved an appeal filed by the city of Pocatello in connection with a decision earlier this year by Sixth District Judge Gus Carr Anderson who ruled in favor of two Pocatello residents who sought a writ of mandamus forcing the city to certify as approved a municipal general obligation bond election.

The election was to construct a new air terminal and two swimming pools.

Businessman Dee Bogert and the late John Rogers contended because a majority of voters cast affirmative ballots in the election in October of 1968, the election should be certified as approved by the city.

City officials did not approve the issue because of the two-thirds requirement in state law and applied the case to the Supreme Court.

The Bogert and Rogers action claimed that a "no" voter has twice the power of a "yes" voter which discriminates against the "yes" voter.

It was also contended that the resulting discrimination contradicts recent Supreme Court rulings endorsing the one-man one-vote concept.

In appealing Anderson's ruling, Pocatello city attorney Gerry Olson argued that even if the two-thirds requirement may be shown unconstitutional, the state supreme court cannot issue the writ.

Olson said the high court can only decide whether or not the two-thirds requirement is constitutional. He contends the two-thirds law must be changed by legislative action and, if the Supreme Court handed down the writ of mandamus, it would be usurping the authority of the legislature.

Atty. Gasser and Tom Dial, arguing on behalf of the plaintiffs, contended the city had "no precedent" for not issuing such a writ.

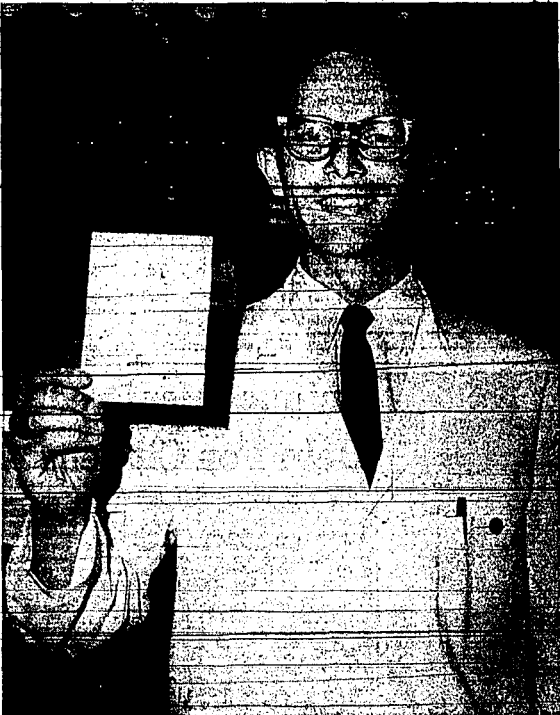

Dial contended that the high court has the authority to issue mandamus proceeding on such grounds.

"I intend to show you that this law prevents an invidious discrimination," Gasser said.

Associate justice Alan Shepard asked Gasser if the one-man one-vote concept could be applied to voters cast affirmative ballots in the election in October of 1968, constitutional or the unanimous majority of the legislature.

Gasser said although this might be a logical conclusion, it was not an issue in the proceedings underway.

An amicus curiae, Joseph Leggett representing the Idaho Education Association, pointed out that there is no market for Idaho bonds and there will not be until after the matter is settled.

THE RED CROSS BLOODMOBILE comes to Twin Falls next Monday and Twin Falls police officers are honorary chairman of the drive. Since Twin Falls has managed to meet its quota at each drawing this year, the emphasis is on meeting the quota this time. Dave Nelson, chairman of the Red-Cross blood program in Twin Falls, is seen here holding a free parking pass. A pass will be given to each donor Monday. The pass may be used for a day's free parking in downtown Twin Falls. Although the pass is good only for a day, it may be used anytime between next Monday and Sept. 23. The drawing will be from 2 to 7 p.m. at the American Legion Hall. Police officers will present the free parking passes to each donor.

Constitutional Ideas Asked

By LINDY HIGH CALDWELL (UPI) — Members of the Idaho Constitutional Revision Commission has proposed that persons attending hearings on the revision suggest alternatives if they offer criticism.

James E. Schiller, Nampa, commission member, said Thursday he realized most persons opposed the short ballot but asked, "how long do you want the ballot and what do you want to do with the various offices and functions?"

Carl P. Burke, Nampa, another commissioner said, "we did not come to sell a constitution, we came to listen."

Schiller pointed out that under the existing constitution the state auditor has no specific functions.

"Does it make sense to elect an official that has no duties? If you go to seven elected officials do you want their duties described?"

When asked why the commission kept the vehicle registration fees, Schiller said, "We're a child of the legislature. We have no powers. Where we found a recent vote of the people, we tried not to change things."

Sen. Phil Batt, R-Wilder, said, "you say you want to know how the people feel about the short ballot. Don't you feel they have a graphic illustration last November when they favored keeping the superintendent of public instruction and Lamar Bollinger professor of economics at the College of Idaho, questioned the part of the law providing that no more than a 60 per cent majority may be required in a bond election."

"When the president wins by a 53 per cent vote we call it a landslide. In Idaho a 58 per cent vote on a bond election is a defeat."

"I have yet to observe the need for a facility to vanish with the defeat of a bond issue."

Several of the 50 persons at the hearing suggested there might be easier passage of the proposed revision if it were presented section by section.

Homer Hooban, Caldwell, said the constitution of 1890 was passed in 1890 but it has been revised and reinterpreted ever since. He pointed out that the constitution would be a long ballot and said, "how can we expect us to vote on this when we need a shorter ballot?"

Schiller said, "we just felt we had to do some housekeeping. This constitution of ours is not a wide heaven from the old one, heaven forbid."

State Prison Draws Sharp Criticism For Lack Of Adequate Security System

BOISE (UPI) — A special investigation based on recent escapes at the Idaho State Prison, in a "no holds barred" report has staped at the institution's security system, lack of trained personnel and classification system.

The investigating team said State Prison Ranch Three, at the new reentry site, had "window dressing rules" and came up with a series of recommendations to try and plug the holes and keep the prisoners where they belong — inside.

The report followed a rash of recent walkaways from the Boise-based institution. Also, recently, there was an attempted break during which shots were fired by a guard from a sub machine gun over the heads of prisoners who were holding a guard.

The report of the special board concentrated mainly on the escapes of convicted murderer Frank Grooms and his fellow convicts Leonard Ortega and Truman Watson.

They were captured separately following a series of incidents that involved stolen cars, a robbery and a "high speed" chase that saw law enforcement officers shoot out the tires on the vehicle Grooms was in.

"Basically, the problem seems to bill down to the sending of medium security prisoners to a medium security prison with a minimum security coverage," the report said.

It was stated that rules at the prison ranch were "not followed in any way."

The investigating team traced the history of the prison over the past several years and revealed an earlier report that also cited a complete breakdown of security and a total lack of appropriate in-service training of board personnel.

"During the year of 1968 the penal system of the State of Idaho disintegrated into a path or chaotic state. The operation was characterized by a series of walk aways and escapes, a succession of wardens and a general disorganization, tardiness and lack of communication in the entire penal system," the investigating team said.

It was stated that Grooms was possibly the ringleader of the escape and the report "the supposed reason for Ortega's being at the ranch Three was an alleged friendship or reward from a prior warden."

The investigating team was headed by William J. Dee, of the Board of Correction. Other members were Dan Slaving of the attorney general's office and Carl Shaver of the Commission of Pardons and Paroles. The report was submitted Thursday to the Board of Correction at its regular meeting. The breakdown was attributed to "Countermanding of previous orders and procedures. A complete breakdown in communications and procedures between the main institution and Prison Ranch Three. A lack of medium security counts. Lack of personnel. Failure to follow security procedures. Lack of adequate fence checks and head counts. And failure to institute regular checkdowns or strip checkdowns."

Rep. Hansen Asks Change To GI Bill

WASHINGTON, D.C. (Special to the Times-News) — Fifty-five members of Congress have joined with Rep. Olin Hansen in introducing legislation to extend GI bill benefits to national guardsmen and reservists called to active duty in the Vietnam conflict.

Rep. Hansen wrote the proposed legislation after learning that national guardsmen and reservists in the 1st Infantry Division were denied the same benefits extended to members of the regular armed forces.

Rep. Hansen said this condition exists in spite of the fact that the year of active duty in Vietnam.

Under the present law, members of the national guard and reserve units called into active service cannot count their months of training to qualify for education benefits under the GI bill.

The guardsmen and reservists responded to the call of duty and served in many cases as front-line personnel. In many instances they interrupted their education and left their jobs and families on short notice. Many have served under the most difficult combat conditions, suffering wounds and loss of life.

Rep. Hansen said when he introduced the bill, "Fairness requires that all who serve our country be treated equally under the law. The purpose of the legislation is to correct the inequity of the present law and to achieve equal treatment for all."

Woman In Kimberly Nabs Youth

KIMBERLY — A 17-year-old boy was nabbed by a woman here Thursday when county deputies could arrive and take charge of the situation.

Sheriff Paul Corder said Mrs. Jimmy Full, 47, lives in a trailer around her house. She went outside to investigate, found the boy and grabbed him, he said.

"She's on high alert," too, Sheriff Corder said. "When we got the call we sent a man out."

When officers arrived, they charged the boy with prowling. The case has been turned over to the sheriff's office juvenile officers and is pending. The boy has been released to the custody of his mother.

... may look back at the year 1969 and classify it as "the year of the scarf," because from all reports it's obvious the scarf is going to continue to cause plenty of fashion excitement this fall. Indeed fashion designers, have become scarf addicts because it is the natural accompaniment to this year's long, easy lines. And from Echo comes a bevy of suggestions for body scarfing this fall as shown in the pictures. The scarf wraps up a totally new look in fashion, especially with all the new ways to wear it like, double wrapped around the waist and knotted in front; strangling the neck with end flying free; tied like a man's four-in-hand; or belted around the waist with fringe to the knees. A scarf and a sense of creativity are all one needs to be a fashion conscious woman.

Dear Abby

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: My daughter is being married at a fairly large church ceremony here in Portland, Oregon. Her grandfather (my father) lives in Seattle, and my problem is what to do about Lottie, his third wife. Lottie is a coarse and vulgar woman, who doesn't need champagne to tell dirty jokes. You can tell that I'd rather not have her, but an invitation went out to Mrs. and Mrs. so there is a good chance that my father will bring Lottie. I am having nightmares, Abby. What courtesies must we extend to her—she comes. She's never met the bride and I don't feel that she should be there as a "grandmother." The other grandmother (my husband's mother) is also from Seattle, and she doesn't speak to Lottie. There's so 'n' doubt if things will be any different in Portland. I don't want this occasion spoiled for my daughter or any one else, but I want to do the right thing. Naturally, my father is not aware of what is so obvious to the rest of us. My father is a "grandmother" if the other grandmother doesn't speak to Lottie. It's their affair. Relax and don't preoccupy yourself with the anticipated misconduct of any one guest.

DEAR ABBY: I am a 35-year-old widow with two children, ages 12 and 7. I've been a widow for three years. I had a wonderful husband and all the 10 years we were married I never looked at another man. I was a good wife and I am still a good mother. My children and I live alone and I have not spent one night away from them since my husband's death. Six months ago I met a man I'll call Bill. He divorced, care a lot for Bill and he says he cares for me and my children. He's in the service now, stationed in Thailand. He is getting a few days leave this summer and has asked me to meet him in Hawaii. I want to, but my parents are old fashioned and they say no respect. Able woman would go to Hawaii to meet a man. Abby, we are not going to LIVE together. I am sure there is more, than one hotel in Hawaii. My sister has agreed to keep my children. Do you think it would be improper for me to meet Bill in Hawaii? He has offered to pay my expenses. If I go, should I let him? I can afford to pay my own way without much strain. Thank you. DIXIE

DEAR DIXIE: I've often "Go." But since you aren't effectively engaged and can pay your own expenses without much strain, do so. Have a wonderful time and aloha!

DEAR ABBY: I can really sympathize with that woman who was afraid of birds. When I was young, I attended a huge family gathering, and several chickens were decapitated in preparation for the dinner. One of the older boys picked up a feathered chicken and chased me with it. I became so frightened, I fainted. Regular meetings are held the second Monday of each month at 1 p.m. in the Colonial Room of the Regeron Hotel. response to "WAITING," regarding his status as a widow or wife. In some states it the wife does not hear from her husband (or if his body is not recovered) within five years, she may acquire from the court a declaration of presumed death. In the meantime, she is still a wife. LAWYER

Public Concern On Pesticide Use Due To Incomplete Information

MOSCOW—Increasing public concern about the use of chemical pesticides, especially DDT, is an over-reaction based on incomplete information. This is the opinion of Roland Portman, Extension entomologist, and Dr. Lambert Erickson, agronomist, University of Idaho.

Portman is concerned about defining terms. "A pesticide," he explained, "is an agent that is used to kill a pest. It is a broad term that covers insecticides, herbicides, rodenticides, etc."

"Persistence is a term which refers to something lasting or permanent," he said, "but no pesticide is really permanent. They all eventually break down, but at different rates."

The persistence of DDT and other pesticides is relative to the dosage used, pointed out Portman. "If a strong concentration of DDT is applied to a crop, it may persist on the plant for two weeks and in the soil for as long as ten years. But if a light concentration is used, it may last for only a half-hour on the plant and a few weeks in the soil," he said.

"There is no accurate way of predicting the build-up rate of DDT," emphasized Portman, "because the different forms of life (animals, plants, and Microorganisms) under varying conditions react at different rates to break it down."

Constant research is being conducted to determine the safe usage level of chemical pesticides. Typical of this research is that being done by Dr. Lambert Erickson. For the past three years he has been studying the effects of residual build-up of herbicides resulting from continued re-treatment of a given herbicide on the same piece of ground.

The project has involved five chemicals: Lysol, Linapex, Dicamba, Silvex and a combination of 2,4-D and Tordon. They are being applied to five crops: peas, barley, wheat, flax and sunflower.

"The purpose of the study is three-fold," said Erickson. "First, we want to determine the efficiency of the various herbicides in weed control. We are also trying to find out if the chemicals being used have any secondary effects on crop yield.

Finally, we want to determine the level and effect of residues in the soil and the seeds of crops grown on these soils. Also, as part of this, we want to find out if there is a any chemical alteration in the chemical composition of the crop."

"So far, we have found a soil residue build-up only with Tordon," said Erickson. "It has a very low level of toxicity to animals or humans," he emphasized, "but it is very effective for killing many varieties of harmful broadleaf plants."

"Dicamba and Tordon have been found to build-up in the seeds of peas," he said. "This build-up is not harmful to humans or animals, but it does prevent a high percentage of the seeds from germinating. The ones that do are affected by a mosaic-like disease appearance."

Erickson's project will continue for four more years. "Chemical manufacturing concerns always cooperate with us fully," he said, "because they are very concerned about the safe use of their products."

Public interest in possible misuse of pesticides became widespread with the publication of "The Silent Spring" by Rachel Carson. The best-selling book linked the use of pesticides with fish-kills, birds becoming extinct, decrease in the wildlife population and possible genetic mutations in many life forms. Many pesticide opponents base their opinions on the book.

"I believe 'The Silent Spring' had a good overall effect," Erickson stated. "We needed to be shocked into an awareness of the potential dangers of unwise pesticide use. But I think it is time we recovered from the shock and began to take a more calm and logical look at the problem," he said. "We aren't going to wipe out any species of plant or animal beyond our power to do so."

The belief that DDT has caused mutation in flies and mosquitoes is not correct, said Portman. "When we first used DDT on flies there were a few that had the ability to break down DDT before it became toxic to them. Our spraying killed flies that did not have this ability, leaving the ones that did to multiply and repopulate the species," he said. "This is why flies today are largely resistant to DDT. It is not because DDT caused any genetic changes."

Portman pointed out that there are pesticides being used today that have been shown to cause genetic change. When administered to test animals in excessive quantities, there was a genetic change. "Because the changes caused the death of the animal, there was no chance of a new mutant species," he said.

DDT has been made since 1940. The manufacturers have kept extensive medical records on their employees and their families since that time. "We are now in the second generation," Portman said, "and there see PESTICIDE, Page 10, Col. 1.

Federal Crop Insurance Program Outlined By Aide

The federal government is in the crop insurance business because it is a risky business threatened by the hazards of both weather and disease. This is the explanation of Lyle P. Shafer, Southern Idaho District Director from Buhl, when he was asked about the Federal Crop Insurance Corporation program.

"All-risk general crop insurance presents two great differences that make the writing of it a more risky undertaking than the already established types of insurance such as fire, liability, life and others," he said.

These two elements are the unpredictability of nature and price fluctuations. It is possible for an insurance company in this field to operate successfully for a few years and then to have a severely damaged crop or a drastic drop in price that would wipe out all profits and capital.

Last year for example, Shafer says, the Corporation paid back over $379,000 to insured farmers in the State. He said in spite of these risks the need for U. S. Department of Agriculture is the desire for it so strongly expressed that several companies have tried it.

In the last 63 years, these companies closed their doors after a short period of operation. Because private companies did not succeed in providing an all-risk type of crop insurance and because of the need, Congress created the Federal Crop Insurance Corporation in 1938.

"Private companies have been content since then to watch the experiences of the federal government in the crop insurance field before risking their capital."

The present charter of the Corporation provides for re-insuring any private company willing to undertake all-risk insurance. Congress limits the amount of these administrative costs were charged to the farmers the cost of the program would be prohibitive and beyond the policyholder's ability to pay.

The Corporation insures wheat, barley, beans, peas, potatoes and sugar beets in the Gem State. The District Office at 628 Blue Lakes Blvd., N. Twin Falls, handles the program for Camas, Cassia, Gooding, Jerome, Lincoln, Minidoka and Twin Falls County farmers.

Shafer said Monday is the deadline this year for signing up for the winter wheat program.

Summing up, Shafer said, when low yields and/or low quality reduce crop value below insurance guarantees, Federal Crop Insurance Corporation (FCI) makes up the difference.

Pesticide Controversy Due To Incomplete Information

Continued From Page 9 — is no evidence of genetic change or other harmful effects from the constant exposure to DDT received by these workmen. "There is undoubtedly a slight DDT build-up in all life forms on earth," said Portman, "but the important point is this: we are certain that it is detrimental."

The Peregrine Falcon is fast becoming extinct, he explained. One of the possible reasons for this is the loss of eggs having excessively thin shells. Researchers have found traces of

DDT in the birds and their eggs, so many people believe that DDT has caused the thin shells. "This cause and effect relationship being assumed by so many people cannot be supported," said Portman. "Anything from malnutrition to sonic booms can cause thin shells," he said, "but people are jumping to conclusions and blaming DDT for it."

Some groups are also blaming DDT for the decrease in many varieties of fish. Traces of DDT can be found in fish, but people are making the same mistake here that they made with the birds. They are not looking at the complete picture," Portman pointed out.

"They are ignoring the fact that we have built dams that interfere with the spawning habits of fish, that we are pouring industrial wastes and human sewage into our water resources and polluting them, and that we have logged off large areas of land causing erosion that has changed the temperature and chemical make-up of our streams. All of these things contribute to the death of wildlife, but DDT is getting all the blame for everything," he said.

Portman and Erickson both agreed that because the use of pesticides would be a disaster, not a sensible solution to the problem.

"We often hear that in the 'good old days' before pesticides everything just grew naturally and we managed to get along fine," said Erickson.

"People don't realize that we could not get along today without agricultural pesticides."

Before agricultural chemicals, the majority of the population was employed in food production," said Erickson. "Today, with the use of pesticides, less than one fifth of our people can produce more than adequate food supply. We can't do away with them."

"The average consumer would not be able to purchase most fruits and vegetables in the stores today without chemical pest control. These pesticides are not economically produced."

"If we do ban DDT," said Portman, "what are we going to replace it with? All suggested alternatives are more expensive, require more frequent application, are less effective and are much more toxic to man and animals than DDT."

"The largest part of DDT production is used to make people comfortable and to make life programs throughout the world. Most of the DDT to control insect spread epidemics of yellow fever, typhoid fever, and encephalitis," he said.

Both men agreed that pesticides should be used only when necessary and that pesticides should be carefully selected and applied so as to minimize pollution. Erickson and Portman were emphatic in their contention that it would be "foolishness" to ban the use of pesticides.

"They do infinitely more good than harm," concluded Portman.

Blight Control Group Has 23,172 Acres In Pool Plan

JEROME — The South Central Idaho Bacterial Blight Control Association now has a total of 23,172 acres of beans under its pooling program in Magic Valley.

W. G. (Bill) Priest, Jerome, secretary-treasurer, said there are three pools under the program — garden seed beans, 20,400 acres; dry-eye beans, 2,291 acres. Mr. Priest said this is a substantial increase over last year's acreage.

There also are four new seed companies participating in the association's blight control and pooling program this year, adds Mr. Priest.

"At the end of 1968, 'We were able to report a season with no known halo blight in the Magic Valley bean fields for the first time in a number of years,'" said Mr. Priest.

"This year, to date, the State Department of Agriculture, has reported three fields of beans, with a total of 36 acres, in which they have found a halo blight. Control measures were immediately taken and the blight was contained in the original fields and has not spread to any adjacent fields."

Mr. Priest concluded, "The control measures for halo blight that are being enforced in Idaho and the pooling program that is offered to the grower-members of the association have proven to be very effective in controlling bacterial blight."

Cantaloupe Harvester Developed

FALLON, Nev. — A cantaloupe harvester designed especially to handle the fragile Fallon Hearts of Gold cantaloupe has been invented and developed by two Churchill County business men according to information received by the College of Agriculture, University of Nevada.

The harvester, which will be used for the first time this month, is also adaptable to Greenhaws and Honeydew melons.

The Hearts of Gold variety known for its flavor is marketed mainly in Reno and outlying areas, but is shipped as far as London, England by air freight. But growers and grocers have been hesitant about the necessity to market the variety as soon after picking as possible as the delicate cantaloupe deteriorates quickly.

Immediate picking, sorting, crating and transporting processes have in the past required considerable manpower and time as most processing stages have required the pickers melons to lie in the sun and be handled numerous times.

The idea of a harvester specially for the Hearts of Gold variety originated with Rex and Ted Workman of Soda Lake District in Churchill County, owners of the county's largest vegetable business.

Forbush working closely with Ted Workman, designed a harvester which is the first of its kind in the Northern Nevada area and is completely different from harvesters in California where heavier melons are grown.

Along Fences And Canals

A number of Richfield gardeners have tried to trap raccoons eating in the cornfields. Mack Proctor was one of the successful ones, catching a large mother raccoon who had been getting away with about 30 ears of corn each night. It is hoped her family won't start raiding this year, also. Harley Pate gave up trapping this year after the skunk incident.

Mr. and Mrs. D. S. Hiatt, north Shoshone, have sold their farm and moved to Twin Falls. Hiatt was a Republican candidate for senator for the legislative district Primary election, opposing Mary Brooks at the last election. He sold real estate along with his farming operations, and has served as Blaine state president of the LDS Church for more than five years. Mrs. Hiatt has been active in church and community affairs. Their daughter, Mrs. Lawrence Schwager, lives in Jerome.

Walt Schumacher of the Tri-C ranch, west of Adams Ferry, has cut pasture grass at the East Mills place and is preparing to cut the 75 acres of beans on the home ranch. His third cutting of hay is all up and the corn is ripe. He also notes that an unusual thing this year is that the peas are maturing before the peas.

Mr. Ray Blair of the Reservoir Ranch at Adams Ferry reports they finished the wheat harvest at Little Canas but have grass seed to harvest yet. Alfalfa seed also was ready for harvest at the home ranch.

Mrs. James W. Powell received a fractured right elbow in a farm accident at their ranch one mile west of Richfield. Mrs. Powell and daughter, Christa, were standing nearby as her husband and a neighbor, Sig. Lazzam, worked on a corn chopper. The chopper funnel started to fall and threatened to fall on Mr. Lazzam's head. Powell knocked the chopper away from the man causing it to swing over and strike Mrs. Powell. She received medical treatment at Sun Valley hospital and a cast put on the arm.

Cutting corn for silage has been finished at the farm of Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Taylor, Tuttle, and a new milk room has been added to their milking barn. Corn for silage is being harvested at the farms of Mr. and Mrs. Dean Williams, Mr. and Mrs. Walter Solders and Mr. and Mrs. Ed Larson, also Tuttle.

Economists Predict Milk Production To Drop 1%

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Government farm economists predicted milk production will dip about one per cent this year, and warned consumers to expect higher prices toward the end of the year.

This year's drop, officials said, was caused by a continuing — though slowed — decline in the number of milk cows. Export, experts predicted production would go down between one and two per cent. But output in July was closer to the year-ago level than in June, and the forecast was found to predict a drop for the year to "around" one per cent.

This proves accurate — the nation's dairymen will produce about 116 billion pounds of milk, lowest since 1952. And 1969 will be the fifth consecutive year in which milk output has declined after reaching a peak of about 127 billion pounds in 1964.

Cow numbers in June were 2.8 per cent below a year earlier while January-July production per cow was up about 1.5 per cent from a year ago.

In spite of the production downturn, officials said in a "dairy situation" report the government is still taking sizable quantities of surplus milk foods off commercial markets under its price support program. Support purchases through August were equal to 4.1-billion pounds of milk compared with 4.7 billion at the same time a year ago. For the rest of the year, purchases were expected to decline seasonally as the summer production flush slackens.

Department economists said farm milk prices probably will increase — seasonally — but late fall. For the remainder of 1969, experts said, farm-level prices were expected to average about three per cent above a year earlier after holding a 4.3 per cent advantage during the first half of the year.

Comfort For Bossie Pays Off

LAFAYETTE, Ind. — It may cost more to keep Bossie and her bovine friends in an even, dry, warm temperature with low humidity, but it pays off in higher milk production and lower feed consumption, and attracts more competent employees in the competitive labor market.

These findings were reported by James S. Boyd, professor of agricultural engineering at Michigan State University, East Lansing, before the 62nd annual meeting of the American Society (ASAE) at Purdue University, Lafayette, Ind. ASAE is the professional, technical, and educational organization of engineers working in and for agriculture.

"Air temperature and relative humidity affect the amounts of water dissipated, the production of milk, growth, feed consumed, and reproduction of dairy animals," Boyd said.

The relatively new, warm-enclosed and cold-covered buildings and the more conventional open-lot housing, now used by Michigan dairy farmers, were the three types of free-stall housing studied for their comparative environmental conditions by Michigan State agricultural engineers.

"The warm, insulated buildings," according to Boyd, "provided a relatively uniform temperature difference, although the level of this temperature difference went up or down depending on outside conditions."

He reported that the humidity in this structure was much too high for animal comfort but that "this condition was altered by allowing the cows to go outside on warm days during the year."

The study showed that the cold-enclosed, uninsulated building was unsatisfactory for Michigan conditions, and that "even though the temperature might be in a very satisfactory range, the humidity in this building was extremely high causing excess fogging and moisture condensation on the metal roof."

The open-lot building "provided adequate shelter for maintaining temperatures well above minimum where feed consumption goes up and milk production goes down," it was revealed by the research. "During the hot summer months the temperature in the building tended to go above the outside temperature. This could be rectified by building natural ventilation into the structure," Boyd told a panel session of agricultural engineers with special interest in structures and environment, one of the six divisions of ASAE.

The Michigan agricultural engineer pointed out that "even the open-lot buildings give enough protection to maintain temperatures well above the critical low temperature for efficient production," and that temperature-wise "all of the buildings studied would be very adequate."

All temperature and relative humidity were compared by placing hydrometers and recording thermometers near the center of each test-barn, usually six feet above the floor, away from the animals. The instruments were checked from August, 1968, until February, 1967, so that both warm and cold weather conditions would be covered.

Agriculture In Hungary Unsuccessful

MOSCOW Idaho (UPI) — "Even though 30 per cent of Hungary's population works on farms, agriculture is not successful there," Dr. Zoltan Kiraly, an internationally known plant pathologist from Budapest, stated in a talk at the University of Idaho here.

In Hungary, 60 per cent of the farms are collectives; 19 per cent are co-operatives; and 11 per cent are privately owned, Kiraly said. "On the privately owned farms the farmer usually has a plot of land on which to raise a few vegetables, a cow or a pig. These divisions are a part of the reason that Hungarian agriculture isn't modern and successful."

"Plant pathologists in Hungary are not called plant pathologists, but plant doctors," Kiraly continued. "They are like the veterinarians based on the collective farms which take care of the animals. The only difference is that the plant pathologists are there to take care of plants."

SHOULD YOU SEED OR SO? It's lawn time and many are asking if it's best to put in a seed lawn or sow seed. Sod costs more than seeding for the same area.

You pay someone else to start the grass along a roadside and marker line. What you save is your own time. Don't be misled into thinking you can get an "instant lawn" with less soil preparation than by seeding. Sod cannot succeed on a hard, packed soil any better than can seed.

A loosened and fertilized/sodded is important in either case. It takes sod about six weeks to take hold, and it must be watered regularly. A seeding doesn't have to be watered unless the seed has just started and plants are tiny.

CHARCOAL KEEPS PEACHES FRESH. Times states you can inhibit decay of fresh peaches about a week or 10 days with activated charcoal. A new home version encapsulates a packet of charcoal in a card to be laid or hung in the refrigerator and can keep the contents fresh and sweet.

DIAMONDS ARE A FRIEND INDEED
Here is a Victor Mollo hand that presents a tough problem. Instead of a "one-trick-one-whistle" hand, this is a hand that needs careful planning should solve. Not that there is any sure-fire way to make six spades but merely that there is one line of play that is decidedly best.

The line is to work on "setting" up dummy's diamond suit. Instead of the "one-trick-one-whistle" hand that trumps will break 2-2 but doesn't really care. As long as all four don't show up in one hand, South is almost sure to succeed.

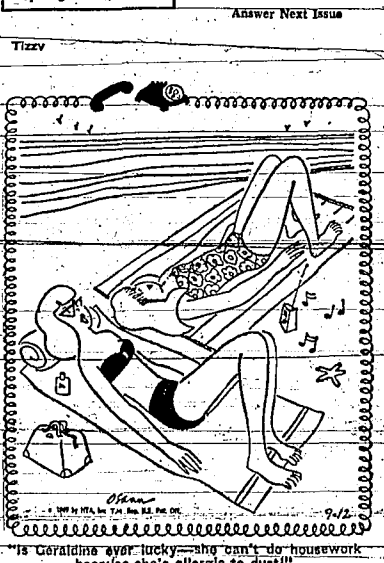

When West shows out on the second spade, South leads a third spade to dummy's queen and plays a diamond. West leads the ace South will ruff but let's assume that East ducks. Now South ducks a low heart. West is in with the king of diamonds and plays another heart. South is back in dummy and leads another diamond. If East plays the ace South ruffs, plays the ace, king and another club, ruffs that third club in dummy and discards his last heart and club—on good diamonds.

If East ducks the second diamond, South discards and keeps on with diamonds.

Why did we say that this line was almost surely going to work? It depends on finding at least one high diamond in the East hand. Is that almost certain?

On this hand it is. If West held both ace and king of diamonds, he would have led one of them.

WENDELL—City officials announced this week that they have received delivery of a new modern American LaFrance fire truck which was purchased from the Starline Equipment Co. of Boise.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Ireton went to Elmira, N.Y., to pick up the truck.

Other features includes a 500 gallon water tank, 200 feet of 3/4 inch booster line hose, 400 feet of 1 1/2 inch hose, 1,200 feet of 2 1/2 inch hose, aluminum ladders, two 30-pound extinguishers and a foam attachment for gas and oil fires.

The new truck replaces the American LaFrance truck that was purchased by the city in 1939 and has served for the past 30 years. It will continue in service as a tank truck as well as a fire truck and will be used as an all-purpose emergency truck.
