Laird Says Russia Has More Missiles

High 1970 Stakes

It takes a long time to work changes in the membership of the United States Senate since there is a turnover of only one-third of the members in any given election.

bert Gore, Phillip Hart, Edward Kennedy, Mike Mansfield, Eugene McCarthy (who has indicated he may retire), Gale McGee, Frank Moss, Edmund Muskie, William Proxmire, Joseph Tydings, Harrison Williams, Ralph Yarborough and Stephen Young, who at 80, has announced he will retire.

WASHINGTON — Melvin R. Laird, the secretary of defense, has advised Congress that the Soviet Union has now moved ahead of the United States in the total force of intercontinental ballistic missiles (ICBMs).

Weeks ago Laird testified, "The Soviet Union can deliver more megatonnage upon the United States than we can deliver upon them."

"Mind If I Join You?"

In his closed-door testimony, Laird said the Russians have been pushing the development of multiple warheads for their large missiles.

Laird also stated that the Russians have been pushing the development of multiple warheads for their large missiles. He said a U.S. destroyer has monitored at least three such Soviet tests in the Pacific.

The secretary stresses that the Kremlin has been rapidly building its strength, in advance of the disarmament talks, while the United States has followed a policy of comparative restraint.

Shades Of 1984

A national registration system, with everyone given a number and fingerprinted, has been proposed by Frances G. Knight, director of the U. S. Passport Office.

It's difficult to see how a fingerprint would make things any simpler. More to the point is Miss Knight's explanation that airlines have been exerting pressure for creation of a "credit card" type of passport which can be scanned electronically by a computer.

I like to wear shorts in summer and don't want to have to wear support hose from now on as I am only 26. Should I wear them or not?

MR. SPECTATOR

That Old Moon Again

Just 10 days from now three Americans will be on their way to the Moon in Apollo 12.

And, although this flight is the second in the series, it will be different from the first one in several instances. The biggest difference is something which will create another "first" for the United States — will be that it marks the first use of nuclear electric power on the Moon.

The device is one of a series of radioisotope thermoelectric generators (that ought to stop most of Mr. Spectator's readers right there) or atomic batteries.

The fuel (the plutonium 238) is still supplying half of its original heat at the end of 90 years.

Nuclear heaters were used in the seismometer package on Apollo 11 but these gadgets on Apollo 12 will mark the first use of a nuclear electrical power system on the Moon.

And that's the problem! It was bound to happen, and now it has. The airlines are going to go the same way the passenger trains went.

The unit to be used on the Moon is designed to produce at least 63 electrical watts of power for the experiments. It is a cylindrical generator fueled with radioisotope plutonium 238.

It is about 18 inches high and 16 inches in diameter, including the radiating fins. The generator, making maximum use of the material beryllium, is lightweight — about 28 pounds.

T.F. Man Is ISU Speech Student During Winter, But In Summer He's River Guide

POCATELLO (ISU)—"I have a love affair with the river," says Roy L. "Nick" Nicholson, an Idaho State University senior who has become a professional guide taking visitors down a wild and challenging stretch of the Middle Fork of the Salmon River during the summer.

"NICK" NICHOLSON

"I've jumped off the 40-foot high Big Creek Bridge on the Middle Fork of the Salmon and this makes me a qualified River Rat," said Nicholson, who lives in Twin Falls.

Bearded and sporting a tattoo on his left forearm, the 39-year-old Nicholson is a man who loves the outdoors and has spent a great deal of time in it. His briefcase has a sign on it saying "Save the White Clouds."

"The stretch of river in the Idaho Primitive Area, 'The river changes every day,'" Nicholson said. "And each day represents new challenges."

Nicholson said he first became acquainted with the river seven years ago. He learned to be a professional river guide from Elwood Masoner, Twin Falls. Masoner is a veteran guide and Nicholson describes him as "one of the best river men in Idaho—in 16 or 17 years he's never had a boat upside down."

"Masoner is an old pro—the secret is in learning to read the water—it always tells you a story," Nicholson said. "An amateur constantly fights the river but watching a pro work is a thing of beauty."

Nicholson completed his first summer as a licensed and bonded river guide last summer. "I can't think of anything I've done in 39 years that gives me a greater sense of satisfaction," Nicholson said. "You get to a point where you feel the river is challenging you personally—there is a right way and a wrong way to run a particular section of water and you strive for perfection."

"You start the river trips at 6,500 feet at Dagger Falls, and in six and one-half days you drop to 3,200 feet—you get a complete change of scenery almost every other day," said Nicholson. "The challenge of the river itself is fantastic—river running technique changes—for instance, one of the major obstacles is Pistol Creek Rapids."

or falls and then boils back. "In a falls," Nicholson said, "if you hit the boil, it can suck you back up under the falls and fill the boat with water."

"Haystack," a swell in the top of a rapid. "Sleeper," a rock above the normal level of the river but covered by water due to the force of the river.

"Rooster Tail," a spray of water hitting a sleeper and spraying up as much as six feet into the air. "These are 'no-no's,'" Nicholson said. "One misconception about the river is that people visualize it as 106 miles of churning rapids and falls and this is not so," said Nicholson. "You have miles of beautiful, calm water."

The calm water sometimes puts you, Nicholson notes. "Once when I was in calm water I was about half asleep and wrapped a boat around a rock," he said. "But there's a lot of time to relax—you're not constantly fighting the elements. Generally speaking, after each bad piece of water, if there is an accident, the river gives you time to recover."

"About the worst that can happen," the guide said, "is that you get damn good and wet—we require everybody to wear life preservers."

Nicholson said, "You are in a canyon all the way—the farther down you get the more rugged it gets—you start 6,500 feet high in timber and wind up in almost sheer rock walls—the last 30 miles of the trip there is no way out except by boat. You see deer, sheep, elk and occasionally mountain goats."

Among the persons who have made a trip down the river are Commander Lloyd Bucher of Pueblo spy ship notoriety and members of the Kennedy family.

"There are probably a dozen outfitters regularly running the river," Nicholson said. A speech and drama major at ISU, Nicholson had been a salesman most of his life. He attended ISU until 1958, when he quit to go into sales.

"The speech interest led me into sales," he said, "but I always felt there was something else I wanted to do." He plans to go to graduate school and ultimately to teach at the college level. "I think many problems result from a lack of communication and I want to teach communication in the theatre and everyday life," Nicholson said.

Running the river in the summer is what he plans as a career in addition to academic work. Nicholson lives in Pocatello during the week while attending ISU and goes to his acreage at Route 3, Twin Falls, on weekends. He is married and has five children. He is a past president of the Twin Falls Civitan Club.

"I may be prejudiced," Nicholson said, "but I think everybody should take this river trip whether it's with me or some body else—because someday it'll be gone—people always tell me at the end of the trip that they'd like to do it again."

"As long as I can run the river I'm going to be on it," Nicholson said. "What keeps my adrenaline running is the challenge of the river itself."

Thieu Claims Victory Over Reds Is Near

SAIGON (UPI)—South Vietnamese President Nguyen Van Thieu said Monday victory over the Communists was near and declared that anyone who advocates neutralism at this point is "stupid."

"Thieu made the statements during the course of a long speech to local officials attending a training course at Vung Tau, 40 miles southwest of Saigon.

"We are near victory," Thieu was quoted as saying by officials at the meeting. "There is no reason for us to lose to the Communists now that victory is so close. Anyone who advocates neutralism now is stupid."

Thieu again stressed the point that South Vietnam should not rely too much on the United States and other allies but should develop a strong spirit of self-reliance.

Vaccines For Cancer Will Be Tested

WASHINGTON (UPI)—The director of the National Cancer Institute says the government is developing plans for test vaccines to combat viruses which cause some forms of cancer.

Dr. Kenneth M. Endicott told a Senate appropriations subcommittee recently increasing new evidence links some human cancers with viruses.

"The probability is very high that viruses responsible for at least some human cancers have been found and that it will be possible to develop measures, including test vaccines, for the prevention or control of these diseases," Endicott said.

"More than 80 different viruses have now been isolated which are known to cause in animals virtually every kind of cancer that occurs in man," he added.

Endicott said "there is excellent evidence" that one of the viruses is associated with Hodgkin's disease, a cancer which attacks the lymph glands. Evidence is also mounting, he said, that a virus is associated with some cancers of the reproductive organs.

"Prevention of cancers caused by viruses or other presently unaccounted but suspected organisms and chemical agents is a likely possibility in the 1970's," Endicott said.

Decision Coming Michigan State's Disgruntled Signal Caller Removed From Starting Spot

On Washington's Black Athletes

SEATTLE, Wash. (UPI)—Eight black football players at the University of Washington who missed Saturday's UCLA game returned to the practice field Monday to resume work-outs.

Joe Kearney, director of sports programs at the university, told the eight athletes to skip a trip to Los Angeles last Friday after it was rumored they and their families had been threatened with violence if they played against UCLA.

A spokesman for the eight players later denied that any of them received threats of harm.

Last Thursday head football coach Jim Owens suspended four black players for what he called "lack of a 100 per cent commitment" to the football program.

Kearney, meanwhile, was given the task of investigating the situation and trying to resolve it. The task was turned over to him Sunday following a meeting attended by Owens, Kearney, black assistant football coach Carver Gayton, school administrators, student leaders and the board of regents.

"I hope to be able to make an announcement by Tuesday," said Kearney Monday.

UCLA scored at will in handing the Huskies a 57-14 shellacking for their seventh straight loss this season.

Meanwhile, attorney Gary Gayton called for reinstatement of the suspended players within 24 hours. The attorney, also black, and a brother of assistant coach Gayton, said if the four EAST LANSING, Mich. (UPI)—Barring totally unforeseen circumstances, Bill Triplett is through playing quarterback at Michigan State.

The 193-pound junior from Vicksburg, Miss., was removed from the starting quarterback role Monday, at his request, by Head Coach Duffy Daugherty.

In his place against Purdue next Saturday, Daugherty will start sophomore Steve Piro, who has thrown only 19 passes in varsity competition this year and completed nine.

Triplett will play either as a flanker or a split end, where Daugherty said he should have no trouble adjusting because he already knows all the pass plays and pass patterns. He won't play quarterback again unless something happens to Piro and to third-string quarterback Don Werner.

Triplett has been having trouble with the quarterback position all season. But his worst day ever came last Saturday against Indiana when he was unable to complete any of 11 pass attempts as MSU (lost by MSU 54-21) he came to ground.

At the start of this season Daugherty was saying Triplett could be the finest quarterback we've ever had."

But things never clicked for Triplett this year.

Saturday Triplett was booed loudly and repeatedly by the nearly 78,000 fans in the stadium. When he finally was lifted in the fourth quarter they cheered loudly.

It was the boogie which upset Daugherty.

"If the boogie is directed against me then I accept it," Daugherty said. "I get paid and I figure I'm a professional. I expect to get criticized if we play poorly."

"But if it's directed against our players then it's unfair," he said. "These kids are doing the best job they can. They're not trying to lose."

"These players are amateurs," he said. "They're 18, 19 and 20-year-old boys. They don't deserve treatment like that."

Daugherty said he had called the squad together Sunday night and told about the change.

"He's been very unselfish in his attitude and he's tried to help the team as much as he can," Daugherty said. "I felt so badly about Triplett becoming a scapegoat for the team's troubles, I'm not going to see him crucified any more."

Baltimore 'Garbage Can' Keeps Rolling Up Yards

By DAN RIKER

BALTIMORE (UPI)—A few years ago, tough defensive tackle of the Detroit Lions sneered at a young Baltimore cutback who had just scored.

"How can a garbage can like you score a touchdown?" Alex Karras asked Tom Matte.

Since then many other defensive linemen have asked the same question. The "garbage can" just keeps rolling along and seems to get bigger with age.

Now 30 and in his ninth National Football League season, Tom Matte may finally shake that nickname. It won't be easy, however.

Against the Washington Redskins Sunday he scored three touchdowns and gained 117 yards in 21 carries. That gave Matte 11 TDs for the season, along with 473 yards in 113 carries for a 4.1 average.

With the season half over Matte has a chance to reach the 1,000 yard rushing mark and maybe lead the league in scoring. His best year previously was last season when he gained 662 yards.

Somewhere, along the line Matte also acquired the reputation of being a good bad weather runner and Sunday was no exception as the game was played on a soggy field during a light drizzle.

"Don Shula woke up this morning, looked at the rain and said 'This is one of Tom Matte's days,'" the halfback

Landry Won't Study Films - Squad Made Too Many Errors To Pick Up

DALLAS (UPI)—Dallas Cowboys Coach Tom Landry said he would study the films of his club's 42-10 collapse against Cleveland Sunday, but "not to study the mistakes—there were too many of them."

Landry almost smiled as he talked Monday about the game in which the Cowboys gave the Browns two quick touchdowns on fumbles and return did anything right from then on.

"What you do with a game like this," he said, "is forget it. It was just one of those things in which something happens to a team every three or four years—I don't know what it is and probably never will."

"It is the reason coaches worry before every—and I do mean every—game. It is something you cannot foresee. The third time it has happened in our history and I can remember three times it happened with the New York Giants when I was with them."

"When you look as bad as we did there's not much else you can say but 'forget it,'" Landry continued.

"We'll look at the film, mainly to see what happened...but to study all the mistakes, it would not be worth the time. There were just too many of them."

Landry said he wasn't even really worried about the collapse.

Commissioner Meets With Black Group

DENVER (UPI)—Western Athletic Conference Commissioner Wiles Hallock met Monday with six representatives of the Black Student Alliance as the WAC began a regular conference-wide meeting.

One of the expected topics of discussion was the recent dismissal of 14 Negro athletes at the University of Wyoming, although WAC sources speculated there would be no strong action taken in the matter.

Willie Hysaw, one of the dismissed players, served as spokesman for the six students who met with the commissioner at noon.

Conference officials had two requests for representation at the meeting by black groups, a spokesman said. One request came from the University of Arizona Black Student Union and the other from the alliance at Wyoming.

The spokesman said the request from the Arizona group was given approval but the Wyoming group was turned down since the conference does not feel it is in a position to consider requests from either individuals or groups to "review the circumstances of the suspension of 14 athletes at the University of Wyoming since the matter is now the subject of litigation in federal court."

Hallock made no statement after the meeting with the Wyoming representatives.

Knicks Stop Lew And Bucks 109-93

MILWAUKEE, Wis. (UPI)—Wilt Chamberlain scored 35 points and snatched Lew Alcindor most of the way Monday night to lead the striking New York Knickerbockers to their 11th National Basketball Association win in 12 starts, 109-93 over the Milwaukee Bucks.

Alcindor, the Bucks' million dollar rookie, had one of his lesser nights in face of the Knicks' tagging defense. He finished with 17 points and 16 rebounds, but made only seven of 20 field goal attempts.

The Knicks led for all but the early moments, taking a 34-23 lead after one period. The Bucks closed to within 56-52 at the half but New York quickly regained a 10-point margin in the third quarter and Milwaukee was never closer than three points again.

It was the second time in three nights Milwaukee had lost to the Knicks. Lew Alcindor never been beaten in a regular season game by the Bucks in their two and a fraction seasons in the NBA.

Bill Bradley added 19 points and Dave DeBusschere 16 for the Knicks, while rookie Bob Green, playing in his first regular season game, topped Milwaukee with 18. Green, the Bucks' No. 2 draft choice, had been set back because of an injury but made seven baskets in 33 attempts.
