7,000 Marines Head Home As Army Takes Command

By WALTER WHITEHEAD
SAIGON (UPI)—The U.S. Marine Corps relinquished command of South Vietnam's five northernmost provinces to the Army today and 7,000 more Leathernecks prepared to leave for home.

Most of the departing Leathernecks have been in Vietnam at least nine months. All will have departed by March 20 for bases at Camp Pendleton and Twenty-Nine Palms, Calif.

The troop withdrawal reduced American strength in Vietnam by 2,650 last week. U.S. Military spokesmen said there were 464,700 American servicemen in the war zone as of March 6.

American and five South Vietnamese were killed Sunday morning when an American helicopter crashed northeast of the Duc Lap Green Beret Camp in the Central Highlands. The cause of the crash was unknown.

Idaho Democrats Hear Warning From Senator

BOISE (UPI)—A California U.S. senator Saturday night told a gathering of Democrats that Idaho stands today where California stood several decades ago "with your pure air, clear water and healthy children."

Sen. Ajan Cranston said in his address to the Jefferson-Jackson day banquet, "the ever-accelerating quest for a material affluence unrivaled in the history of mankind is leading us toward the degrading of our surroundings into an environmental poverty which threatens even man's very ability to survive."

Twin Falls and surrounding area were Mr. and Mrs. Vincent Smazal, Leo Lechlitter, Joe Hackney, Hazel Wilder, Mike Gray, Mr. and Mrs. Harley Williams, L. James Koutnik, Mr. and Mrs. Lloyd Walker, Tommy Walker, Joe Clements, Mr. and Mrs. Herman Jewell, all Twin Falls; Frank Benson, Jerome, and Mr. and Mrs. Carroll Holloway, Filer.

Tax Limitation Disappointing

Disappointment in the Idaho Legislature's failure to provide some relief of taxing units under the 4 per cent limitations of House Bill 304 was expressed Monday by Twin Falls City Manager Jean Milar.

Cranston lauded the efforts of Idaho Sen. Frank Church for his work in the area of conservation of resources. He added Idaho is fortunate to have the team of Church and Republican Sen. Len Jordan "working for the best interests of Idaho and the nation."

Mr. Walker was among several announced or prospective candidates for the Democratic gubernatorial nomination in attendance. Others were Sen. John Evans, Rep. Vernon Ravenscroft and Sen. Cecil Andrus.

Slim Chance Is Seen For Legislation

WASHINGTON (UPI)—Rep. Wilbur D. Mills, D-Ark., expressed doubt today that Congress would pass any substantive tax legislation this year.

At a news conference earlier in the day, Cranston expressed "grave concern" for the growing U.S. involvement in Laos. Among those attending from Between 500 and 600 attended the dinner at the Crystal Ball room of the Hotel Boise. Young Bill Smazal and John Schwarz accompanied the area group and attended youth activities.

Bill Glenns Ferry Basketball Player Killed

WASHINGTON (UPI)—Sen. Thomas J. McIntyre, D-N.H., introduced a bill today to protect consumers from "misleading, undecipherable and untrustworthy" warranties and guarantees.

Under his measure, manufacturers of appliances, cars and other products would be required to register their warranties with the Federal Trade Commission.

Glenns Ferry — A star high school basketball player was killed early Sunday morning in a one-car accident in Glenns Ferry.

Hearing Planned

SHOSHONE—A second public hearing on the sewer bond election to be held here on March 17, will be held at 8 p.m. Monday, March 16, at the courthouse, reports Mayor Ellwood R. Werry.

The revenue bond election in amount of $580,000 would be paid off over a 30-year period on a monthly fee basis per unit user. This would not be an assessment against the property, he said.

Murphy said the body was pinned in the auto after smashing around a large tree trunk on First Street. The accident happened shortly after 4 a.m.

BEATEN

OKLAHOMA CITY (UPI)—Herbert Hyde, 72, a former federal attorney who prosecuted George "Machine Gun" Kelly in the 1930s, was reported in fair condition Saturday after being beaten with a blunt instrument in a downtown hotel room Friday night. Police said no motive had been determined for the attack.

The youth had played at Shoshone Saturday night in which Glenns Ferry was runner-up in the tournament and was attending a family gathering at relatives when he reportedly said, "I need some fresh air," and left.

Other potential candidates being mentioned on the Democratic side are Sens. Cecil Andrus of Lewiston, and John Evans of Malad, Rep. Vernon Ravenscroft of Tuttle and Paul Boyd, a Boise attorney.

Biggest Oil Fire Rages In Gulf Area

VENICE, La. (UPI)—An oil fire described as the biggest in the history of offshore oil platform operations in the Gulf of Mexico raged on Sunday while bad weather warded off attempts to snuff it out.

Surviving are his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Chester A. Carpenter, Boise; a sister, Mrs. Lynda German, Burley; a brother, Chester Carpenter, with the Army in Vietnam, and a grandmother, Mrs. Irene Macomb, Boise.

Surviving are his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Chester A. Carpenter, Boise; a sister, Mrs. Lynda German, Burley; a brother, Chester Carpenter, with the Army in Vietnam, and a grandmother, Mrs. Irene Macomb, Boise.

Snipers Attack Helicopter Carrying Cypriot President

NICOSIA (UPI)—Terrorist snipers Sunday shot down the helicopter carrying President Archbishop Makarios in an assassination attempt against the 55-year-old head of the Mediterranean island republic of Cyprus.

Makarios escaped unhurt but his black clerical robes were stained with blood from his critically wounded pilot.

An official government statement said "an attempt on the life of the president of the Republic, Archbishop Makarios, was made . . . at 7:10 a.m. today. The president did not suffer injury."

'Slow' Quake Forces Many To Flee Port

POZZUOLI, Italy (UPI)—"It's like sitting on a bomb," said housewife Carmela Genaro.

There was fear in the words spoken by the woman as she helped her fisherman husband load mattresses and other belongings onto a tiny truck to join the mass exodus from Pozzuoli.

Parts of this ancient seaport on the Bay of Naples already resemble a ghost town. More than half of its 70,000 residents have fled the city which threatens to blow up like a bomb, or the lid on a pressure cooker.

Some two miles below the surface is an expansive sea of lava bubbling furiously at temperatures of more than 1,000 degrees, and pushing Pozzuoli upwards in a phenomenon scientists call bradyseism or "slow earthquake."

The "safety valve" on the pressure cooker is a volcano called the Solfatara at the top of the town.

A constant reminder of its presence is the rotten egg stench of sulphur from hissing fissures in its crater. Domenico Rocco Jr., a guide at the volcano for the past 10 years, pointed to fissures which have opened up in recent days and said, "It's acting up—I've never seen it as violent as this before."

A fissure opened under the surface of the sea last week, poisoning and boiling fish, and there were several barely perceptible earth tremors.

These geological jitters threaten to bring down houses in the old waterfront part of Pozzuoli—an area which used to be under the sea—and city officials last week ordered evacuation of 6,000 persons from the area.

Another 30,000 persons fled Pozzuoli on their own, even though their houses were not considered to be in immediate danger.

Pozzuoli is a sad sight, with windows and doors of abandoned homes banging in the wind, stores shuttered, police patrolling to prevent looting and a steady stream of outbound vehicles laden with household goods.

Leaking Oil Kills 10,000 Alaskan Birds

KODIAK, Alaska (UPI)—Federal pollution officials in light planes flew Sunday along the eastern edge of the Kodiak Island chain, where the bodies of an estimated 10,000 sea birds have washed up on oil-smeared beaches.

Officials said the oil, which began streaking 1,000 miles of coastline Feb. 6 probably came from tankers legally discharging dirty ballast water 50 miles at sea before entering Cook Inlet.

High winds and heavy seas which carried the oil to the beaches normally free from pollution, "have prevented any extensive search of the area."

Ray Morris, member of the Federal Water Pollution Control Authority, said the estimate of 10,000 dead birds was conservative because the bodies were being eaten by scavenger animals.

"This is not like Santa Barbara where the beaches were black with oil," Morris said, "but this thing is of major proportions and if it had occurred during the commercial salmon season, it would have been a major disaster."

Officials said nothing could be done to get rid of the oil, which reached a peak about two weeks ago.

"It will just have to go away by itself," one said.

Senator Muskie Says Pollution Is Inevitable

BRUNSWICK, Maine (UPI)—Sen. Edmund S. Muskie, D-Maine, said Sunday night "environmental pollution is a product of our standard of living."

In an address at Bowdoin College, Muskie said, "We have learned there's an environmental cost to economic activity. It isn't a question of whether we have a choice, it's the balance between economic growth and environmental control."

The senator said such a condition could mean small industries might leave a community because they couldn't meet anti-pollution standards.

"Somebody's toes are going to have to be stepped on," Muskie said. "Some marginal industries may have to be stepped on. We want environmental progress, but not at too high an environmental cost."

Well-Behaved

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI)—A drug expert says school teachers are so naive about drugs "the whole class could be stoned and they would think they were just well behaved." Dr. David Smith, director of the Haight-Ashbury Clinic and a University of California professor, told a weekend meeting on the drug culture that youngsters who think school intolerable "get stoned" on their way to class in the morning and stay high all day with a supply of pills carried in their lunch. "It's a whole new pattern," he said.

MEET SLATED
KING HILL—An organizational meeting to form a senior citizens club is scheduled for 1:30 p.m. Thursday at the King Hill Grange Hall, sponsored by the Elmore County office of the GEO.

Murdered

HOUSTON (UPI)—Mrs. Ruth O. Bowman was charged Sunday with murdering her husband while one of their seven children held him pinned to the floor. Police said Mrs. Bowman, 34, and her husband, William 33, were fighting late Saturday night when the son walked into the room and the father turned on him. The son managed to pin his father down and Mrs. Bowman shot him with a .22 caliber pistol held a few inches from his head, police said.

The Alcatraz, the island in San Francisco Bay, was discovered by the Spanish in 1769, says Coilier's Encyclopedia.

Gravediggers, Cemetery Operators Reach Tentative Accord In N.Y.

NEW YORK (UPI)—Gravediggers and cemetery operators reached a tentative agreement Sunday night to end a seven-week-old strike which has left 15,000 dead unburied in metropolitan area cemeteries.

The settlement was reached after a 33-hour bargaining session and under the threat of compulsory arbitration mandated by the state legislature if no agreement was reached this weekend.

Union Vice President Sam Cimaglia, who earlier in the night said the bargaining was turning into an "endurance test," said the settlement was almost unanimously approved by the union executive board and would be submitted to the 1,700 rank and file members at a meeting tonight.

The chief issue blocking an agreement was money. The union had demanded $32 a week raise in each year of a two-year contract. Members now average $127 per week.

The union later scented down its demands but terms of the agreement were not released pending the ratification meeting.

The last reported stumbling block was a dispute over extra pay to bury the bodies which have accumulated in 44 cemeteries since the strike began. Cimaglia said the men would not go back to work until after the ratification meeting today. State Mediation Board Chairman Vincent McDonnell said the agreement concerned wages and all other issues to be negotiated would be submitted to voluntary binding arbitration. The state legislature last week passed a bill which would have imposed such arbitration. Union leaders vowed to go to jail rather than accept binding arbitration mandated by the legislature.

The legislature had acted under a section of the state constitution authorizing emergency laws to cover public health hazards. Because of the strike, the bodies of the 15,000 persons who have died in the area have been stacked in their caskets in tents and vaults on cemetery grounds or in funeral parlors.

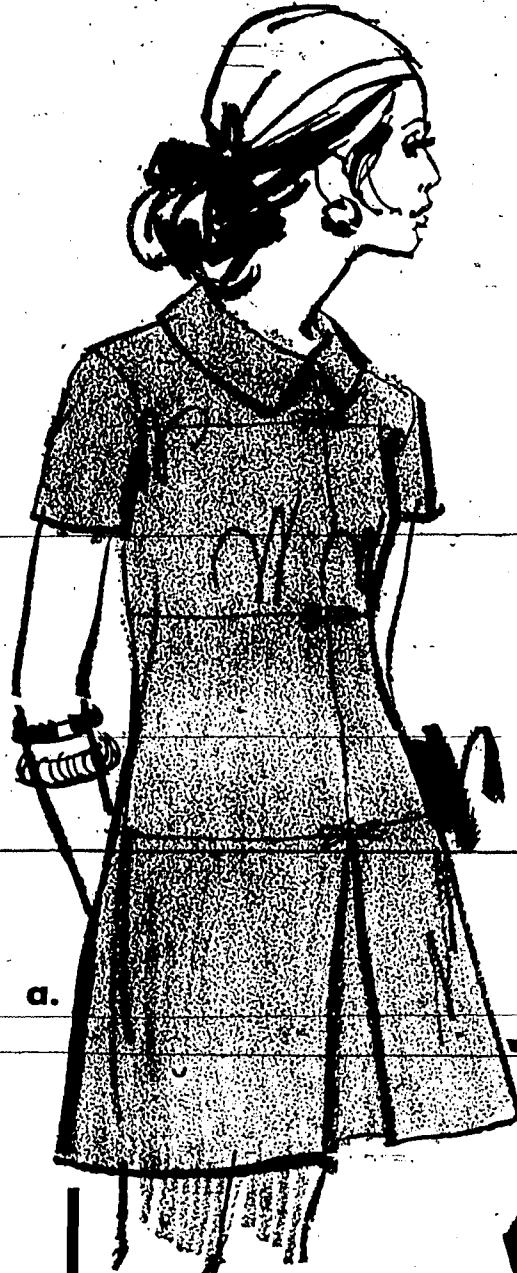

The expression "showing the white feather" denoting cowardice, derives from the fact that gamecocks lift their hackles edged with white feathers when they do not wish to continue fighting.

RET FORD, England (UPI)—A Retford headmistress has banned the maxi-coat and ordered her pupils to wear minis.

"Maxicoats look most un-gainly," said Miss Margaret Townsend, head of Retford High School. "I've told my 80 pupils they must wear minicoats—but not too short."

CARRIER RETURNS
KING HILL—Cyle Sloanaker is back on the King Hill mail route after an absence of three weeks spent in the Veteran's hospital, Boise, and convalescing at home. Mrs. Richard Hoagland carried the mail during his absence.

Assessment Needed

The Post-Register
 A proposed bill to establish a Hells Canyon-Snake National River is a commendable effort to preserve a scenic wonder of the nation, but it stands little chance of approval. In the tier of Northwest states, only one of its authors, Oregon's Senator Robert Packwood, is supporting the legislation. Others in the Idaho, Washington and Oregon Congressional delegations, for example, support either the authorization of the big high dam being advanced in that stretch of the river or a 10 year moratorium on any new developments. This newspaper has supported and still supports a 10-year moratorium to allow the nation to assess the most serviceable national need in Hells Canyon. We would ardently hope that the 10 years would demonstrate the higher national need to preserve the Hells Canyon section as a national river with appropriate preservation legislation in the adjacent Seven Devils region. But the nation is not in a position at this time to foreclose against a dam which might be urgently needed to fulfill the food needs of the nation. A largely un-assessed erosion of food production land is being inexorably applied every day of the year in America as cities spread out, highways are laid down, airports are built and people push out to claim farm lands for diverse reasons. Of course, all of these reasons, in one singular way, argue for preservation of Hells Canyon in order that the few remaining islands of untrammled wonder in America are kept for future generations. But these generations must also be fed. Ten years may be most critical in determining what is the best course on the Middle Snake. Oceanography and development of new hybrids, some of them nuclear-treated, and new techniques of food production, we sincerely hope, will save the magnificent Hells Canyon area — an area which not only offers the deepest gorge in the North American continent but the beautiful Seven Devils high country around it as well. The ocean's food potential, especially, has not even been tapped. May 10 years allow us to make a prudent decision.

Opposition

The Oregonian
 The nature of the opposition to the nomination of Judge G. Harrold Carswell to the U.S. Supreme Court should be considered by thoughtful Americans. We need to consider these trends in government philosophy which affect us all. The liberal Democratic senators, plus Republican Sen. Charles Goodell of New York, obviously are fighting to prevent slippage in the "liberal" interpretations of laws and the Constitution which marked the era of the Warren Court. President Nixon has clearly shown that he wants "strict constructionist" as appointees and a majority of conservatives on the court. The Supreme Court is charged by conservatives with having taken legislative powers into its own hands, improperly and in conflict with the Constitution, by its liberal constructions. Liberals say it has only been setting to right the rigid constructions of the past — as in school desegregation — which earlier courts had neglected. Like Judge Clement Haynsworth, whose nomination was rejected in the Senate, Judge Carswell is a southerner and a conservative. A main line of attack charges him with being anti-civil rights. But the federal district court decisions in which he has participated do not support that. He has not been far from the center of the political road in judicial opinions. Sen. Harold E. Hughes, D-Iowa, and others charge, additionally, that this record does not show the "high professional qualifications" which should be required of a Supreme Court appointee. This may be true.

But the same charge could have been leveled against quite a few present and past members of the court. These include former Chief Justice Warren, the former Alameda County district attorney and California attorney general and governor, whom President Eisenhower appointed. Yet Justice Warren became the patron saint of the liberals, who never criticized his lack of professional background or judicial record. Sen. Birch Bayh, D-Ind., who also led the fight against Judge Haynsworth, added another, almost incredible charge against Judge Carswell. His appointment, said Sen. Bayh, would "encourage violent extremists and lend credence to their argument that the system cannot or will not act to make freedom and equality for all Americans a reality." In other words, Supreme Court justices must be chosen from among those who are acceptable to extremists. The facts seem to be that Judge Carswell may be neither the best nor the worst selection for the court; that he is a competent but not very distinguished judge; that he repudiates a 22-year-old political speech favoring segregation (at a time when the Supreme Court had not yet reversed itself on "equal but separate" facilities for Negroes) and that the liberals have not found any sound reasons for opposing him. The 13-to-4 vote of the Senate Judiciary Committee approving Judge Carswell's nomination forecasts Senate ratification of President Nixon's choice. There is no reason to believe that he will be a discredit to the court.

Too Little

Lewiston Tribune
 Oregon Sen. Bob Packwood, trying to find some way to discourage people from having large families, has introduced a bill that would allow a taxpayer to claim no more than three children as exemptions. The idea is to make the typical couple think twice before having that fourth child. Senator Packwood's premise is right: Most people have large families because they want them, not because they don't know how to prevent them. But why did he settle on three as the maximum number that the tax system should encourage? Studies have shown that most American couples want three children, which is one child too many. If Senator Packwood's bill should become law, and if it should succeed in serving the purpose he intends it to serve, the birth rate would still be running out of control. Barring an almost inconceivable cataclysm, the human race must find some way to stabilize its numbers before it breeds itself into disaster. Thanks to modern medicine and sanitation, too many of us are reaching the age of reproduction; we cannot afford the luxury of having lots of babies unless we are willing to accept the necessity of doing as the early Greeks did and put the surplus out on the mountain. Senator Packwood's proposal, ineffective as a compromise as it is, probably hasn't got a chance and that is a pretty good measure of the problem. L.H.

Vaulting Costs

Portland Oregonian
 College athletic departments, just like other budgeteers, have been complaining about the higher and higher costs of staying in business. Such visible sports as football and basketball are not the only money-grabbers. In fact, they often must be counted on to make the profit that carries sports less attractive at the box-office, like track and field. An idea of some of the problems involved may be gleaned from the following statement made by a college athletic director at the recent annual convention of the National Collegiate Athletic Association: "When I watch one of my pole vaulters running down the track carrying a $70 pole (two or three of which he'll break in a season), place the end of it in a box that costs $100, vault over a $10 bar resting on a set of $400 standards, and land in a $2,400 portable pit, I realize that things have changed." So they have. It wasn't like that back in the sawdust pit era. But then vaulters weren't topping 17 feet then, either. The extra feet on the record have apparently come at premium cost.

WASHINGTON — In the matter of the continuing rise in the cost of living, President Nixon is on the political spot. The irony is that this pragmatic man of politics doesn't seem to realize it. No one should argue with the lofty statement Nixon offered the AFL-CIO Executive Council that it is "immoral to allow a worker to be robbed of his money by inflation." But the President seems to be arguing with himself in an apparent obsession with his policy of non-interference with profits and wages. Yet, the Labor Department's Consumer Price Index continues to climb. It rose 4 of 1 percent in January, and the annual rate of price increases now stands at 7.2 per cent. That is the highest rate of increase since the Korean War year of 1951. Perhaps worse, the Labor Department also reported a 9.6 per cent increase in the Wholesale Price Index, which always signals further price boosts for the retail consumer. Meanwhile, a member of the President's Council of Economic Advisers, Herbert Stein, tells the Investment Bankers Association the country does not face "a flat choice between recession or inflation." Stein is right. We're going to have both, which is a neat trick, unless Nixon gets cracking. It has been reiterated ad nauseam that nobody wants price and wage controls. But a small army has formed, some of its members doing business in the White House, which says they are the only solution. It was therefore predictable that Sen. Fred Harris, D-Okla., should add his voice to the hue and cry. Harris, recently resigned as Democratic National Chairman, is demanding Federal authority to freeze prices and wages for up to six months. In the fashion of the times, Harris carefully noted, "I do not like the idea of wage and price controls any more than the next person." But he thinks a six-month freeze would "give the economy time to cool off and get back to normal." If Nixon heretofore has refused to face up to the facts of political life, Harris' proposal — and the utterances of other leading Democrats — should convince him that the opposition is poised to make the President's failure to curb inflation a leading issue in this election year. This was inevitable. The voter who may not understand the wrangle over anti-ballistic missiles, needs little reminding that he's paying a lot more for a pound of hamburger than he did prior to November, 1968. This voter was Sen. Teddy Kennedy's target in his attack on Pentagon spending before the Democratic Policy Council. Kennedy used language for which Main Street needs no interpreter, and cited cases calculated to inflame the most casual citizen. There is, for example, a juicy flavor to the figure of $17 billion Kennedy says could be saved by Defense Department cuts. In particular, the average voter is receptive to Kennedy's suggestion that 20 years after the end of World War II it is time to withdraw a majority of the 310,000 U.S. troops in prosperous Europe. Kennedy had other bread-and-butter items to offer: The Pentagon spends $39 million a year for press agency, compared to the $5 million spent by the Justice Department on civil rights enforcement. The cost of operating one aircraft carrier task force is more than what is spent by the entire legislative branch of the government. Defense is assigned 86 chauffeur-driven cars for its bigwigs, including "ten limousines." The relevance of these figures to the cost of living is clear. Government spending is the biggest contributor to inflation. Ergo, government should lead the penny-pinching parade — and in areas other than those concerned with health, education and welfare. Besides, generals and what the electorate has always viewed as their lush life style are unpopular this year. Fred Harris may be right. Price and wage controls now may be the only answer. In any event, the buck stops at Richard Nixon. Long-range, his anti-inflation policies may turn the tide, but the consumer wants relief tomorrow morning at 8 o'clock. High-minded though they may sound, Presidential pronouncements about "immorality" of inflation buy no parsnips.

"There Must Be A Culprit Around Here Somewhere!"

BRUCE BLOSSAT

O'Brien Turned Off

WASHINGTON (NEA) — By late afternoon on Tuesday, Feb. 24, campaign expert Lawrence F. O'Brien knew that his private business consulting activities would not be an obstacle to his taking the Democratic national chairmanship if he wished it. Two days of hopping about for personal encounters with his clients in and near California eliminated that problem to a large degree. He was assured his new firm's services would be helpful even if he devoted himself heavily to national politics in Washington. That Tuesday night he came to grips with Hubert Humphrey's offer of the post in terms for the first time almost wholly political. When he went to bed, his decision was not to take the job. Next morning it was still "No." He telephoned Humphrey at midday to report his decision. Reports which suggest O'Brien was adversely affected by a rustling of discontent among nine Democratic governors attending a midwinter governors' parley here are off the mark. The little caucus did not begin until a half-hour after O'Brien gave Humphrey his decision. The fundamental fact is O'Brien never was fully persuaded the heralded "consensus surge" for him as national chairman was much more than a surface manifestation. The evidence was conflicting. Sen. George McGovern of South Dakota telephoned to offer warm support. Influential intermediaries speaking for Senators Edmund Muskie of Maine and Harold Hughes of Iowa conveyed comforting messages. Though early reports had it that Lyndon Johnson, whom he served in various ways for five years, opposed him, believable word came that LBJ did not object and was staying out of the battle. According to Humphrey, AFL-CIO President George Meany was reported favorable. Young leftist lawyers said they might find time to help draft issue papers. Yet there were also disconcerting signs. Southern Democrats, led by Gov. Robert McNair of South Carolina, were reported still wrathful over retiring Chairman Fred Harris' alleged neglect of them. They advanced their own candidate, lame-duck Gov. Buford Ellington of Tennessee. Intellectuals who keep formally aloof from most party affairs but often mix in during election campaigns added to the doubts. O'Brien, in his formal rejection of the post, observed that his opposition included some "with whom the party traditionally has had close relationships." Then there was the case of Sen. Edward M. Kennedy. Though Kennedy at the outset announced a "hands off" policy on the chairmanship issue, O'Brien was hurt that his old friend never called. Humphrey and Kennedy did talk to each other Feb. 23. Kennedy's silence had no acknowledged role in O'Brien's decision. After deciding, however, he was surprised to hear from Humphrey how cool Kennedy seemed on the matter when the latter two talked. The big thing that turned O'Brien off was his conviction that too many party well-wishers cared too little about their fractured party to dig deep for needed money or do the tough work required to make the vital repairs for the great 1972 presidential test.

ART BUCHWALD

"How's That?"

WASHINGTON — There have been some frightening figures coming out of the Pentagon lately on Soviet missiles. They have been released by pure coincidence at the very moment that the Defense Department is asking for the second down payment on the antiballistic missile system. We have been told that the nuclear balance is in danger and by 1975 the Soviets will have five times as many nuclear weapons as the United States. What does this all mean? To find out, I visited the Pentagon and talked with Hiram Hempleweather of SHOT which stands for Scaring the Hell Out of the Taxpayers. Hempleweather was perspiring when I walked into his office. "It may be too late even now to catch up with the Soviets," he said. "How's that?" I asked. "The Soviet ratio of four missiles to our one could easily change by 1975 to five missiles to our one. We won't have a chance." "What do you mean we won't have a chance?" "At the moment the Russians can kill each American four times, and we can kill each Russian only once. In five years they can kill us five times and we can only kill them once. This puts us at a terrible disadvantage. We must maintain the four-to-one ratio or we'll be at the Kremlin's mercy." "But surely our Polaris-Poseidon submarines can protect us." "Not for long. By 1975 we'll have only 650 Polaris missiles available for launching, while the Russians will have 950 submarine missiles to launch at us." "This means we can kill each Russian only two-thirds as many times as they can kill each American?" "How did it happen?" "The Americans have been lulled into thinking that as long as they can kill Russians once, they have a defense." "They don't?" "Of course not." Hempleweather said. "Suppose we go to the disarmament talks in Vienna and say to the Soviets, 'We have enough weapons in our stockpile to kill every citizen in the USSR three times,' and they come back and say, 'So what? We have enough missiles to kill every American 15 times.' That will put us at a disadvantage. But if we have parity and we can say that we can kill every Russian 10 times for every American they kill 10 times, we'll be in a better bargaining position, and they'll think twice about starting something." "The problem with your argument as I see it," I told Hempleweather, "is that Americans don't want to spend money on weapons that can kill the Russians more than once." "Right you are, and the Soviets are well aware of this. That's why they're winning the missile race. Someday we're going to wake up and discover the Russians can kill us as many times as they want to, and there won't be a damn thing we can do about it." "Will building an antimissile ballistic system really help us?" "It's bound to. If we're willing to spend the money, we could cut down the danger of Soviet missiles to a point where they could kill us only two-and-a-half times." "The Soviets wouldn't dare start anything if they knew they could kill us only two-and-a-half times. But if we don't spend the money and they know they can kill us five times, then we could have the greatest nuclear crisis in history." "All I'm trying to do is wake up the American people to the fact that in the nuclear arms race it isn't how you are killed, but how many times you are killed that counts."

GEORGE C. THOSTESON, M.D.

Indigestion

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I sent for a booklet on acid indigestion. I presume you didn't have such a booklet, as you sent me one on ulcers. I suppose treatment is similar, but will you comment on food and treatment for acid indigestion?—R.M.D.

"Acid indigestion" means different things to different people and, from a medical standpoint, it doesn't really mean much of anything. It's a handy phrase to use in advertisements to intrigue pill-poppers, though. (Which character was it in "Alice in Wonderland" who insisted that, when he used a word, it meant whatever he wanted it to mean?) Anyway, and obviously, there can be three degrees of acidity in the stomach: normal; too much (hyperacidity); or too little (hypoacidity). Both of the latter can have symptoms very similar to those of an ulcer: burning sensation, and gnawing discomfort at the pit of the stomach. Often the burps. One difference is that lack of acid also may result in diarrhea. This is relieved by giving the patient a few drops of very dilute hydrochloric acid (the normal stomach acid), or some medication that produces the acid. For excessive acidity, treatment is virtually like that for an ulcer—since excessive acidity is something that you expect to go along with an ulcer. This means a bland type of diet, avoiding spicy foods or those high in roughage; small feedings between meals; use of an antacid to counteract some of the acidity; avoiding tobacco, and in many cases avoiding coffee. Of course, keep alcohol within very modest limits. And learn not to let your nerves get in a turmoil. Really, the one difference between hyperacidity and ulcers is the absence or presence of an ulcer. I will warn you, and anyone else whose complaint is "indigestion," that acidity isn't automatically the source of your humeral hernia, "nervous stomach," gastritis, bowel defects all are possibilities and found

Dear Dr. Thosteson: Can chewing gum hurt anyone? I have an aunt who chews bubble-gum all the time and goes to bed with it in her mouth. She is almost 70 years old and everyone tells her to stop it.—Mrs. R.K.

Chewing bubble-gum isn't going to hurt her, and I don't imagine you can get her to change her ways at 70. Except for one thing, that is. If your aunt won't throw away her bubble-gum at night, at least urge her to put it on the bedpost where it belongs. She may snore or cough, and get the gum in her windpipe, which naturally could be very dangerous for her. Swallowing it will not hurt.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: Is it proper to have a patient stand up against the wall to take blood pressure? There was a table and chair in the office. No emergency. In my 30 years of nursing this is the first time I have ever witnessed this.—C.A.S.

There's always something we haven't run into before, isn't there? Yes, if a physician suspects orthostatic hypotension, the reading is taken with the patient standing, and then usually compared with one taken reclining or sitting. Orthostatic hypotension is a drop in blood pressure when the patient is standing upright. Hemorrhoids can be cured! If troubled with fissures, fistulas, itching, and other rectal problems, write to Dr. Thosteson in care of this newspaper requesting a copy of the booklet, "The Real Cure For Hemorrhoids," enclosing a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope and 25 cents in coin to cover cost of printing and handling. Dr. Thosteson welcomes all reader mail, but regrets that, due to the tremendous volume received daily, he is unable to answer individual letters. Readers' questions are incorporated in his column whenever possible.

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: I am a 28-year-old divorcee, and very attractive. I'm told. A handsome, middle-aged, never-married man recently joined our organization, and what a gorgeous hunk of man he is! Six feet 2, 190 pounds, shoulders and chest like you wouldn't believe, plus a 33-inch waist and narrow, narrow hips. He was obviously very proud of his physique and removed his jacket every chance he got. Word soon got around that weight-lifting and muscle control were his hobbies. He also gave the impression that he was a big man in the "love department."

I couldn't wait to find out how "great" he was, so I invited him to my apartment for a candlelight, wine, and "music to love by" dinner. Well, this gorgeous hunk of man turned out to be the world's biggest disappointment. After dinner he stripped to the waist, and spent the rest of the evening in front of the mirror flexing his muscles!

Question: What's wrong with these muscle men? I knew another "Adonis" who looked like a real lady-killer, and when I kissed him, he FAINTED! STRUCK OUT

DEAR STRUCK: Generalizations are unfair, but most men who are inordinately pre-occupied with building beautiful bodies are trying desperately to build the image of a he-man. They are usually disappointed in the "love department" because they love only themselves — or their mothers.

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I have lived in this little cottage for nearly 10 years. We do not OWN it, we are renting. When we moved in, there were no flowers, plants or shrubbery, so we put in our own, which improved the appearance of the property 100 per cent.

Our landlord has told us that when our lease expires (in about 6 months) we will have to move, because his daughter wants to move into this house. Of course, that is his right, but our question is this: Since we put in all that shrubbery and so many lovely flowers and plants, are we entitled to dig up what can be moved and replanted? WANTS TO KNOW

DEAR WANTS: It is possible that anything affixed to the

Dior Shows Calf-Covering Hemline Styles

PARIS (UPI)—Christian Dior designer Marc Bohan came out with a uniform calf-covering hemline today.

The look was not one which will prompt many women to clean out their closets and fill it with new Dior-designed or inspired clothes.

The long droopy-silk dresses, printed in polka dots, were the sort of clothes women who dress to impress other women will love. But most of the men in the audience looked bored.

The audience reaction to one after another of the outfits with hemlines hanging around the calf-bottom was tepid. Almost no applause was heard for the daytime clothes—with the exception of one trouser suit—and there was little, by comparison with recent seasons, for the evening clothes.

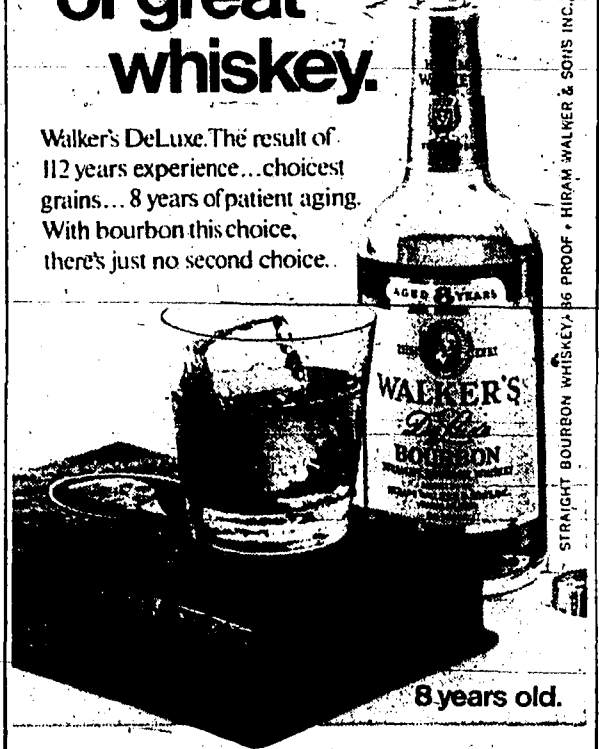

Most of the daytime clothes were in all the brown shades from ivory through cinnamon, havana, khaki, fawn and copper to dark brown. It was relieved from time to time by a medium blue which Bohan calls boat-blue and by mauve.

The designer was absolutely dotty for polka dots—as are several other Paris houses—stockings, low shoes and almost Bohan uses a navy-and-white polka-dot shirt under a long-skirted navy suit and waist-length jacket, printed in giant polka dots which in turn are printed with tiny polka dots. The models wore dark face.

Square

Remember the word?

Remember when you gave a man a "square deal" . . . if you were honest? And you gave him a "square" meal when he was hungry? You stood foursquare for the right, as you saw it . . . and "square" against everything else. When you were out of debt, you were "square with the world." And that was when you could look your fellow man "square" in the eye.

Think about it next time someone asks you why you get a little misty-eyed when the band starts "trooping the colors" and the flag is run up . . . after all, you're a square. And so are we.

Black Leather-Bound Book Is Battered And Is Small

PARIS (UPI)—The black leather-bound book is battered and small—five inches by three inches. It is compact enough to fit easily into the pocket of an American GI's battle fatigues. On its well-thumbed pages are printed the words of the New Testament. The book now, in a sense, is the last testament of a U.S. serviceman named Larry to a beloved wife or fiancée or sister named Thelma. In the strange vagaries of the Vietnam War the book is now in Paris, waiting to be claimed. The testament was found by a Viet Cong unit on a muddy battlefield in South Vietnam. The commander, a 28-year-old Vietnamese named La Hong Nho, had the dedication in his front translated by one of his men who learned English in a Saigon school. He then decided to send it to the one person he knew who might have a means of finding Thelma. She was Madeline Riffaud, a correspondent for the French Communist newspaper L'Humanite who had travelled with his unit five years ago to report the war from that side of the battlelines and with whom he had corresponded ever since. "Thelma," it began simply, "I want you to have my Bible. Maybe it'll remind you of me when you use it. I'm sure God will take care of you. He always takes care of His own children, even if it kills them. He knows all and does what's best for all. Don't worry about me, Thelma. God has taken me home for a reason, maybe to get me away from this war. It is signed in the same carefully printed handwriting. "See you at home, Larry." Throughout the obviously well read pages of the gospels, passages were underlined with a red pencil as if to call them to Thelma's attention.

Utah-Idaho Beet Growers Agree

SALT LAKE CITY (UPI)—Sugar beet growers in Utah and Idaho have reached agreement with Utah-Idaho Sugar Co. on all terms of a purchase contract for the 1970 crop of beets. Spokesmen said that although agreement was only for one year, it also included the basis for installation of a system of individual sugar content determination in Idaho for 1971. Utah growers have had individual sugar content determination since 1967. Under the agreement, basically similar to the one for 1969, the 1970 beet crop will be grown under acreage allotments imposed by the U. S. Department of Agriculture. The department recently increased individual allotments by about seven per cent. Sugar beets grown for U-I are processed at factories located at Garland and West Jordan in Utah, and at Idaho Falls, Idaho.

Governor Samuelson Asked For And Got Several Things During 55 Day Session

The governor asked for and got:

- A tight budget because of "the national effort to slow the economy and control inflation." He eventually sought a figure of $5.2 million and the legislature exceeded this by only an estimated $30,000.
- Funding of reclamation projects in a "major way" and the legislature gave him $37,500 for the Lemhi River Adjudication Study, $175,000 for the Water Resource Board for water development studies in general and $37,500 for the Rafter River water study.
- Water pollution control and the lawmakers passed three bills, including one paring down the amount the counties get from the inheritance tax, and ended up creating a State Water Pollution Control Fund with immediate monies totaling $500,000 and a potential of $10 million through bonding. (The federal government will pay 50 per cent of the cost.)
- An increase in non-resident hunting and fishing licenses, raising the total cost from $100 to $135.
- More state troopers for the Idaho State Police. The legislature authorized spending enough money to hire 10 more and a federal grant of $1.25 million spread over three years for a study will give Idaho 20 more in addition to those the legislature okayed.
- Tightening up of the "criminal law enforcement of drug and narcotics." The legislature passed and sent to the governor a proposal aimed at "pushers" and making it more clear to the courts what should be done with narcotics violators.
- Relief for conditions of "financial distress" in higher education institutions. The legislature, after much hassling, passed a bill appropriating a lump sum of $1.35 million for higher education — giving relief to mainly Boise State College, because of unexpected enrollment increases, to the tune of $228,992, and $95,000 for Lewis Clark Normal. The governor said that "relief is mandatory."
- An average five per cent increase for state employees because "salary increases are fully justified." He also received a bill that raises his salary to $25,000 along with other raises for most of the state employees. Samuelson did not specifically ask for this.
- Reorganization of the state Board of Correction and "improvements" in the state penitentiary. The legislature appropriated $512,000 for the state prison.
- A supplemental appropriation for the State Department of Health. The governor only asked $900,000. The legislature topped this to $1,221,000.
- Tightening of Idaho laws in the areas of industrial safety, pipeline safety and changes in employment security.
- The governor did not get a complete straightening out on Idaho bonding election laws.
- Outside of the governor's suggestions, the second half of the 40th Idaho Legislature ran into problem after problem — most of them centered around appropriations measure.
- Senate Democrats and Republicans — with just two weeks left in the session — decided to start a 25 per cent across the board "economy drive" and this particularly on the higher education measure, ended up throwing the Senate headlong into a dispute with the House.
- The matter was finally resolved after a special quasi-conference committee met and the House declined to accept the Senate's proposals.
- It was a case of the Senate trying to get from the House Finance, Appropriation Committee requests for $5.97 million to $4.5 million.
- The final figure came out like the governor wanted it — $5.2 million.
- There were also these other developments during the session:
  - Both the Senate and the House passed a watered down anti-sex education bill to give parents the say-so as to what their children are taught.
  - An attempt was made to set up public school kindergartens, but it failed in the House after the governor threatened to veto the proposal because of a lack of money.
  - The legislature setup a State Fire Prevention Board and created the office of state fire marshal.

Make The Opportunity Less For Kooks Turned Prophets

By ARNOLD SAWISLAK
WASHINGTON (UPI) — In his professional way, Dr. Daniel P. Moynihan seems to be saying much the same thing as Vice President Spiro T. Agnew about the way sensible people ought to deal with extremists. Moynihan, in his now-famous "benign neglect" memo to President Nixon, advises giving "hysterics, paranoids and boodlers on all sides" less opportunity to make themselves into heroes or martyrs.

Agnew, speaking at the National Governors' Conference, proposed that people, especially television people, stop giving so much attention to "kooks" of the kind that once were "chased with butterfly nets."

There certainly was a big difference between the two proposals. Moynihan was advising Nixon how he could move the spotlight from his critics to his accomplishments. Agnew was advising the news media simply to turn off the spotlight. The question of whether Agnew is trying to intimidate the news media has been and probably will continue to be discussed in print and on the air until long after it has become clear that if he so intended, they didn't succeed.

But what about the question of whether it is a good idea to ignore extremists? If we do, will they go away or at least shut up? Is publicity all they want and peace and quiet all we want? Isn't there some possibility that people who sound crazy today might be the prophets of social or political change that will seem perfectly reasonable—even desirable—tomorrow?

For example, Margaret Sanger was regarded by many as a dangerous person when she said people ought to practice birth control. Now, sex without the risk of pregnancy is called family planning and the main question about it is how to make it effective and safe.

In the 1930s there were those who thought Dr. Francis Townsend was a candidate for the butterfly net when he suggested that the government

Up And Away Into A River

BAY CITY, Mich. (UPI) — The car didn't slow down and didn't swerve as it moved steadily to the end of the road, onto the connecting boat ramp and soared 60 feet into the chilly Saginaw River.

"It stayed aloft for about four seconds," said Terry Bond, one of the young men who saw what happened. "Then the whole car sunk a little, then a couple of seconds later it just tipped up straight and went down."

Spurred into action, two men dove into the water and rescued two children. But a third child, her mother and grandfather died.

While rescuers searched for the bodies, they fished another car out of the river. Inside it were the remains of a young woman who disappeared two years ago.

Bond said he and a few other young men were standing near the Veteran's Memorial Bridge in the downtown section of the eastern Michigan city Friday night when they noticed the car approaching at about 40 miles an hour.

"I just saw it come in from where the road ends and I saw it go off doing close to 40," Bond said. "It just kept going and made no attempt to turn away or anything. It just kept going straight."

The group saw the car doors open and three bodies tumble out.

Marshall Bennett, 19, jumped in and pulled out Timothy van Ochten, who celebrated his 14th birthday Friday.

Alexander Baldwin, 28, tore off part of a wooden boat ramp to use as a raft. He jumped into the river—only recently thawed out after the severe winter—and rescued Timothy's sister, Debbie, 12.

By that time, a police launch had arrived. A little way downstream at the Third Street bridge, they pulled out the body of Susan van Ochten, 10.

Saturday morning, divers again plunged into the river and recovered the bodies of two adults from the car—Mrs. Betty van Ochten, 42, the mother of the three children, and her father, Raymond Daage, 75. The whole family was from Bay City.

As rescuers sought to find the Van Ochten car Friday night, they came across another vehicle in the river. In it, they found the remains of Sandra Beson, then 25, of Bay City, who disappeared in May of 1968.

Bank Holdup Suspect Held In Illinois

PEORIA, Ill. (UPI) — Accused bank robber Joseph Lloyd Thomas, 58, one of five men ever to be named twice to the FBI's most wanted list, was arrested here Sunday night.

FBI agents said he was armed but offered no resistance.

Thomas, who was using the alias James Senior, is charged with the armed robbery of the Farmers Plaza branch of the Merchants' National Bank, Terre Haute, Ind., on Feb. 26, 1968. He escaped with $22,000.

The FBI said Thomas previously appeared on the most wanted list from Oct. 21, 1959, to Dec. 10, 1959, when he was arrested at Pelzer, S. D., on charges he robbed a Shreveport, La. bank.

He was given a 25-year sentence on that charge, but it later was reduced to 15 years. He was paroled March 27, 1967.

Thomas was being held at the Peoria County jail. Arraignment was scheduled Monday before U.S. Commissioner Bernard J. Ghiglieri, Jr.

Brothers Face Bombing Charge

NEW HAVEN, Conn. (UPI) — The FBI announced Saturday the arrest of the second of two brothers wanted in connection with a bank robbery in Danbury where thieves used bombs to blow up police headquarters and throw the city into confusion.

James Pardue, 23, was arrested without incident, according to the FBI, in Rockville, Md., where he was visiting relatives. His brother, John, 27, had been arrested earlier in Danbury.

John Pardue was charged at the time of his arrest with robbery of the Union Savings Bank, "by the use of force, violence and intimidation, by the use of guns and explosives."

Father Of Six Told To Abstain

FALL RIVER, Mass. (UPI) — A Superior Court judge told a 35-year-old father of six children Friday he must either undergo sterilization or go to jail.

Judge Joseph Mitchell Jr. made the ruling against Richard Aguiar of Fall River, an unemployed factory worker who was charged with failing to make court-ordered support payments for an illegitimate child.

Kenneth L. Sullivan of the Massachusetts Defenders Office, Aguiar's lawyer, said his client fathered three illegitimate children while married to another woman who had already borne him two legitimate children.

Aguiar later divorced his first wife and married the mother of his three illegitimate children. Subsequently, he was arrested on a charge of fathering yet another illegitimate child. He was convicted and ordered to pay $30 weekly for the support of the child. He also was given a two-year suspended jail sentence on condition he make the weekly payments.

When Sullivan pleaded with the judge Friday not to activate the jail sentence, Mitchell told Aguiar, "I'll give you two weeks to get sterilized or you'll go to jail."

Sullivan said later he was not convinced sterilization was the answer to the problem.

"I am going to advise my client to seek spiritual counsel, and I will explore all avenues of the law," Sullivan said. "I won't advise him to take this step (sterilization), but of course the decision is up to him."

Merger Of Churches Is In Making

ST. LOUIS, Mo. (UPI) — Delegates from nine denominations of American Protestant churches with a total membership of about 25 million will begin formulating a specific merger at a meeting starting Monday.

The churchmen will discuss a merger plan worked out by a commission of theologians, pastors and laymen for the eighth annual Consultation On Church Union (COCU). If the plan of union is approved, other possible amendments, the proposal will be submitted to the nine denominations for vote study.

No target date has been set for the merger, but COCU spokesmen say it is hoped the final form of the plan is drafted by the end of next year. Voting on the proposal would begin in the mid-1970s, with the nine denominations and other church bodies that may wish to join the union merging by about 1980.

The participating churches are the African Methodist Episcopal Church, the African Methodist Episcopal Church Zion, the Christian Methodist Episcopal Church, the Christian Church (Disciples of Christ), the Episcopal Church, the Presbyterian Church U.S. (Southern), the United Church of Christ, the United Methodist Church and the United Presbyterian Church.

Lo, This Poor Indian Is One To Side With Custer

By VERNON SCOTT

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Lo, the poor Indian—especially actor Burt Reynolds (part Cherokee) who would certainly have sided with Custer at the Little Bighorn with his unerring judgment.

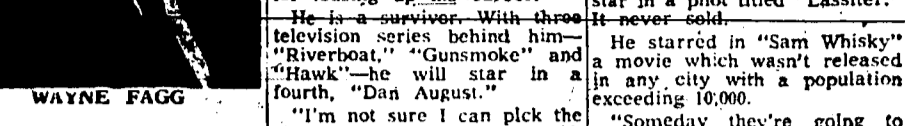

A former college football star, accomplished actor and musclemann, Burt has a genius for losing up his career.

He is a survivor. With three television series behind him—"Riverboat," "Gunsmoke" and "Hawk"—he will star in a fourth, "Dan August."

"I'm not sure I can pick the right property," he said, grinning.

"I tested for a movie years ago and turned it down for the Riverboat series. I was fired after 23 shows. The movie was Home from the Hill and made a big star out of George Peppard.

"My next strategic move was to quit Gunsmoke because I was tired of playing Indians. I went to Italy and immediately starred in Navajo Joe, wearing a wig that made me look like Natalie Wood.

Astros Nip Kansas City By 20-19

HOUSTON, Texas (UPI)—An unbelievable marathon which would have erased some of the all-time major league hitting records had it been a regular-season game, the Houston Astros outlasted the Kansas City Royals, 20-19, Sunday.

Eighteenth-inning doubles by Denis Menke and Doug Rader, who drove in 12 runs between them, put Houston on top for good in the three-hour and 21-minute struggle played on a wet diamond and on a windy afternoon.

Rain measuring 4.51 inches fell in the 24 hours prior to the game, but it was decided to play after the rain stopped, which had virtually submerged the outfield. What followed was something the 139 customers weren't soon forget.

The two teams combined for 54 hits and 100 total bases — bettering the highest totals for any regular-season game. The Royals would have tied another mark with their 14 doubles, many of which were the result of the erratic wind blowing toward center field.

Rader had a perfect 6-for-6 afternoon, including three doubles and a homer. He drove in five runs, Menke drove in seven with two doubles and a homer, and Johnny Edwards had four hits for the winners.

Stan Smith Has Indoor Singles Win

HAMPTON, Va. (UPI)—Stan Smith zipped past Thomaz Koch of Brazil to win the singles title and teamed with Arthur Ashe to win the doubles championship in the U. S. Indoor Tennis Championships Sunday.

Smith's lightning-like serve was good for 12 aces against his long-haired Brazilian opponent. Smith picked up $4,000 in first-place prize money. "I hit a few at the right time to the right place," Smith said. The scores were 6-3, 6-2, 7-5.

Smith and Ashe dominated the Nastase and Ion Tiriac of Romania 15-13, 6-3. The Americans collected $400 each in the $25,000 tournament, which is the last indoor tournament this year on the U. S. circuit.

Smith lost only five points while he was serving. A forehand shot down the sideline broke Koch's serve in the sixth game of the first set and he broke the Brazilians' serve twice in the second set, once with a lob that landed just inside the baseline and again with a backhand that zipped past Koch so fast he couldn't get his racket on it.

Smith tied in the final set, and did not break serve until the 11th game, when he drilled Koch's service shot down the sideline. Smith has won $12,500 on the indoor circuit this year, placing him second in winnings in the U. S. Lawn Tennis Association's rankings of independent professionals.

Palmer Fires Second 64 4-Footer To Give Lunn Citrus Win

ORLANDO, Fla. (UPI)—Arnold Palmer shot his second 64 in three days Sunday but missed a fourfoot putt at the end of a 36-hole grind and burly Bob Lunn, 16 years Palmer's junior, won the $150,000 Florida Citrus Invitational golf tournament.

The 24-year-old Lunn and the obviously tired Palmer, coming to the final hole of the golf tournament all even at 17 under, both had extremely long putts for their third shot.

Lunn placed a 70-footer within a foot of the hole while the 40-year-old Palmer ran his 60-footer four feet past, and then missed the four-footer.

Lunn sank his par putt to wind up with a 70 for the round and a 17-under-par 271 that earned him $30,000 in his first victory since the Hartford Open six months ago.

Palmer, who had shot an 8-under-par 64 in the morning round of the eight-hour grind, finished with a 72-272 and $17,100.

Palmer fretted ahead of time that the burstinis in his hip might start acting up while playing two straight rounds without rest. But he stormed into a one-stroke lead over Lunn at the end of the morning round by equalling the course record again—a feat he first accomplished in Friday's opening round.

But the golfing millionaire, looking for his third victory, was unable to hold his edge. Lunn, showing considerably less fatigue in the closing holes, was all even midway through the final round, although Palmer moved ahead again shortly after the turn.

The first real sign that Palmer was weakening came on the 68th hole of the tournament when Arnold came out of a bunker too strong and then missed his putt for a bogey that enabled Lunn to pull even again.

Both parred the next two holes but it appeared that Palmer might yet pull it out on the final hole when Lunn put his drive into trees edging the fairway.

But the 210-pound Californian laced an iron shot out of the trees onto the green, laid his long putt up close enough for a "gimmie," and then stood, hands on hips, watching as Palmer was in and out on the putt he needed to put the tournament into a sudden-death playoff.

Dick Lotz shot a 69 Sunday for a 13-under-par 275 to take four place money of $7,050 and Tom Weiskopf, with a 69-276, was alone in fifth.

"I made two bad shots," a weary Palmer said when it was over. "I tried to beat down on a five iron on the last hole when I should have used a six. I used too much club, but I didn't want to be short.

"My only other bad shot of the day was when I took that bogey a few holes earlier."

Palmer said the wind gusty and carried his ball into trap there.

As for that last putt which cost him the tournament: "I thought I had made it."

Finley and Jackson Are At Impasse

MESA, Ariz. (UPI)—Oakland Athletics owner Charles O. Finley Sunday broke off contract negotiations with star outfielder Reggie Jackson and said, "We have reached an impasse."

"I stayed with my offer of $45,000," said Finley. "I told him that it would be unfair of me to string him along and suggest that I would go any higher."

Jackson informed Finley that he is studying for a real estate broker examination that he will take March 17.

"That's all right," said Finley. "Put on a uniform and pinch hit, then work out a little Monday morning. We'll excuse you for Tuesday's trip to Tucson."

That didn't excite the holdout, who belted 47 home runs last season and started negotiations at the $75,000 plateau.

"Reggie has come down to $60,000," disclosed Finley, who emphasized negotiations have been amicable. The A's owner said that he is offering Jackson a 125 per cent increase, "which is exceptional considering he has played only two years in the major leagues."

Finley was scheduled to leave immediately for home, La Porte, Ind., after two days in the Phoenix area negotiating unsuccessfully with Jackson. He will return here next weekend for further discussions with Jackson.

The A's owner will attend Tuesday's American League meeting at Tampa, Fla., where a reappraisal will be made of the Seattle Pilots' status.

Haywood, Denver Rockets Win In Double Overtime

DENVER (UPI)—Paced by Spencer Haywood's 46 points, the Denver Rockets downed the New Orleans Buccaneers 108-103 in a game that saw two overtime periods Sunday afternoon.

The Bucks held the edge through most of the first quarter and led 23-14 going into the second stanza, but Denver bounced back to take the lead 45-43 at the end of the first half.

A slim four-point margin Denver held, 72-68, at the end of the third quarter dwindled to an 87-87 tie at the end of regulation play. Both teams scored seven points during the overtime, but in the second Julius Keye opened with a two-pointer to gain the Rockets the lead they never relinquished.

For the Bucks, Steve Jones led their scoring attack with 25 points, followed closely by James Jones with 23.

Haywood, who had 43 points, shadowed the career high point scoring of Boston's John Havlicek.

With 1:32 left and Milwaukee down by two points, Alcindor dunked a basket to tie the game 128-128.

Moments later Bucks rookie Bob Landridge blocked a Havlicek shot, scored around the Celtics playmaker and went the length of the court for a layup.

 Oswald: "It's remarkable to see how much information may be placed at declarer's disposal before he has played to trick one."
 Jim: "West opens the six of diamonds. Dummy plays the eight and East the three. The fact that West has opened the bidding marks him with almost all the missing high cards. His six-spot lead was an obvious fourth best and, while it might be from a six- or four-card suit, South will assume it was fourth of five until proven otherwise. He may go one step further and assume the actual spot card holding in the diamond suit."
 Oswald: "Whatever he does and regardless of how good a player he is, the chances are that he will run off five heart tricks before he gets down to deciding about where to go after his ninth trick."
 Jim: "South's discards will probably be a couple of clubs. The average West player will probably discard one card in each suit whereupon South will be able to concede a spade-trick and make the last three after West cashes the three remaining diamonds."
 Oswald: "An expert West will hang onto all his diamonds and the blank one of his kings."
 Jim: "This is the type of defense which shows why bridge experts age early. It will be up to South to figure out which king is singleton. If it is the spade king, then South can run three spades; if it is the king, South must take dummy's ace of clubs and throw West in with a diamond. West will take four diamond tricks and finally have to lead away from his king of spades."

Gen. Doolittle Believes Strongly In 'Divine Purpose'

A VISIT WITH JIMMY DOOLITTLE

Guidепosts: General Doolittle, we Americans seem to be living through trying times. Wars, assassinations, riots. People are looking for guidance and reassurance. Do you have any personal philosophy that you might pass on to our readers?

Doolittle: My own personal philosophy is really quite simple. I believe we were all put here on this earth with just one purpose: To serve our fellowman.

It doesn't matter what form this service takes. You can build a bridge or write a poem or paint a picture or have a house by the side of the road for the weary traveler. The criterion is this: If a man leaves the earth a better place than he found it, then his life has been worthwhile.

Guidепosts: What about young people today? They seem to have their problems.

Doolittle: To begin with, they are paying a debt contracted a generation ago, a debt of permissiveness. Permissive education in the schools and lack of discipline at home. For quite a while it was fashionable not to deny children anything.

The result was, part of a generation grew up without discipline. And where there is no discipline, you don't find well-balanced or well-integrated people.

Another difficulty was that even in "integrated" families, the emphasis was on the accumulation of material objects. Parents were concerned with giving children all the things they wanted; but in the process, they forgot to give of themselves, and so the children had no models to imitate, nothing on which to form character.

Guidепosts: Why do you think today's youth are so restless?

Doolittle: Well, it's natural for young people to see the flaws in things as they are, and to want to change them. But change is not necessarily good.

Nor is changing to the status quo necessarily good either.

When Bill Knudsen, that marvelous old Danish engineering genius, came to Washington in 1941 and wanted to make some badly needed changes, a lot of the bureaucrats warned him not to unsettle the status quo.

"Well, gentlemen," said Bill, "if by this status quo you mean the helluva fix we're in, we'd better change it." But change should be orderly.

Guidепosts: Do you think that the over-all trend is downhill?

Doolittle: I think we're in a momentary dip in the graph. We've made mistakes. In our zeal to protect the rights of everyone, even criminals, we've lost sight of the rights of others.

From a broader perspective, we know that man, as a tool-making animal, has been on the earth at least a million years, but that it's only in the past 5,000 years that he has shown any concern for anyone but himself.

The great Teacher only appeared on this earth 2,000 years ago — practically yesterday — to change the Law of Expediency to the Golden Rule.

Slavery was with us until a little over 100 years ago. Our national conscience has really emerged only in the last decade.

No, I think the over-all trend is up and I think this upward trend is a part of God's plan, or purpose, for mankind.

Guidепosts: In your career, General Doolittle, have you noticed certain attributes required for a leader to be well-rounded? Can you think of a person who displayed the attributes you consider most important?

Doolittle: Yes, One man who had an intense sense of patriotism combined with extraordinary discipline and courage was Douglas Bader, the great World War II pilot.

We both went to work for the same oil company in 1930, so I knew him well. He had lost both legs in an airplane crash, but he was still a great pilot.

When the war came, he was not permitted to fly combat. Somehow Bader managed to persuade someone in the RAF to let him take up a Spitfire. He put on such a dazzling show of acrobatics that the brass — who didn't know who was in the airplane — rushed to congratulate him when he landed.

After that, there was no stopping him. Doug Bader was the most eager, aggressive flier I ever saw. As I recall, he shot down about 15 German aircraft — and they never got him; he got himself.

He was pursuing an enemy plane so closely that when it exploded, the debris came flying back and wrecked Bader's plane.

When he tried to bail out, one of his artificial legs got caught in the cockpit canopy. Bader just uncoupled the leg and left it behind.

When he hit the ground, his other artificial leg collapsed, and so the Germans captured him quite easily.

The Germans had heard about some things, however, and sent word to the RAF that they could send a new set of legs for Bader.

As soon as Bader got his legs, he escaped. They caught him, but he escaped again. They caught him once more, but he escaped a third time. This time when they caught him, they took away his legs, so from then on escape was impossible.

Guidепosts: Do you think religion plays a role?

Doolittle: I'm sure that it does. I don't see how any person of intelligence can look around him without a realization that a universe as vast and orderly as this must be ruled by a Divine Purpose. And once you acknowledge this, then it becomes your duty and obligation to live according to God's plan. That's the ultimate answer to all our problems, I think.

How Cold Is The Snow Over Your Way?

By FRED DODDS
Times-News Staff Writer

"How cold does the snow get over there at your place? I am fine. Are you fine? I like you. If you were in Hawaii I would be your friend."

Sound like a child's writing? Well, it is and it's all in the process of learning, with perhaps a new twist for incentive. Recently second graders in Mrs. Harold Gilbertson's class at Harrison School were asked if they would like to write to other second graders in the United States.

The response from the youngsters was overwhelming, and in a matter of minutes students were busy printing notes to various points in America. The second graders were allowed to write to any second grade class in any city in the United States. Concentration was intense. The usual scene is youngsters' tongue in the corner of mouth, pencil upright and eyes glued to the paper. There may have been few literary masterpieces written that day, but the intent was good and Mrs. Gilbertson accomplished, in a subtle way, what she wanted and that was to get her students to work on their writing.

But it isn't the work done in the classroom that day that makes it so interesting. It's what came back that counts. One girl got 40 letters from a grade school in the east, another boy got 26 and one, who chose to write Hawaii because "it was way out there someplace," got 27 answers and the letters have proven to be almost as interesting to the parents as to the students.

The Hawaii letters came from students in room B-1 of the Moanalua Elementary School in Honolulu, Hawaii.

One reads: "Dear Steven, I have been living in Hawaii for one and a half year. I like it here. We swim in winter. We have flowers all year round. The only studding we can do is riding down grassy hills on boxes." It was signed, "Your friend, Jennifer."

Lillian Chong of the same grade wrote, "We do not go to the beach every day because my father has flowers to take care of."

Another, signed by "Your pal, Edwif," read, "I do not go swimming every day because my father doesn't want to go to the beach because my father always sleeps. That's why we don't swim everyday."

A letter signed "Your friend, Lou," wrote, "We can go to the beach mostly every day because we do not have snow."

Another, "Dear Steven, How are you? I see your place is cold, our place is hot. I like to play in the hot sun. Some times I like to swim and the water is cold. I think you have fun in the snow. Our school is a big school."

Susan Siu wrote, "I can go swimming every day. The water is cold. Sometime the water is warm. Sometime the water is hot. Love, Susan."

Another student, listing the points he wanted to make by number, wrote, "I like you. You like me. I do not go to the beach. The sun is hot. Some days are warm. Some time the water is cold. Some time it is very warm."

A girl, missing the cold climate of her native state of New York, compromised by writing, "I live on top a hill so some times it's very cold."

Nancy Lee asked Steven if he would come to Hawaii. There were two question marks following Hawaii.

An optimist wrote she goes swimming everyday but she wasn't worried because "summer is coming pretty soon."

A realist wrote, "The weather here is warm. In my house we use fans to keep us cool."

Diana Roy wrote, "I wish that I was there. What do you do there?"

Another wrote he can't go swimming every day because it rains sometimes and he gets wet that way.

Apparently it isn't warm in Hawaii all the time because one girl wrote, "We do not get to go to the beach every day because it is windy in Honolulu. When I get up from bed it is so cold that sometimes I have

Spring Weather Beckons Joggers To Come Outside

Spring weather is beckoning joggers to the outdoor phase of the YMCA's "Jog For Your Life" program now underway at the Twin Falls High School track.

Chet Bartlett, executive director of the YMCA, said the program begins each morning at 7 o'clock, Mondays through Friday. During winter months the jogging program is held in the Presbyterian gym as a noon-time program only. This will continue through April, Mr. Bartlett said, if sufficient interest is shown.

Mr. Bartlett said the outdoor program is well underway and participation is increasing each week.

"Jogging is just one step faster than walking, but it could be your passport to a longer life," Mr. Bartlett said.

The YMCA recommends persons see their doctor for a physical examination before enrolling in the jogging program and the doctor should be told the patient plans to take up such new exercise.

Within the coming week, the YMCA plans to launch a unique new program to seek out the "men most wanted men" in Twin Falls. This will be on a basis of 10 individuals the public feels need to pay more attention to their fitness.

Almost all the letters dealt with the weather, but when the original letters went out from Harrison School weather questions were asked.

In fact talk about the weather could be a universal icebreaker for any situation, and for any age group.

"And now the students in the second grade at Harrison School are faced with the huge problem of answering all the letters they have received to date.

The words contained in quotation marks here are exactly as written by the students in Hawaii.
