U.S. speeds Viet pullout

WASHINGTON (UPI)—President Nixon, declaring his goal is "total withdrawal from Vietnam," pledged Wednesday night to accelerate the American troop pull-out, removing 100,000 men from the war zone during a seven-month period starting May 1.

In a 20-minute televised address, Nixon said the additional U.S. servicemen would leave Vietnam by Dec. 1, cutting American troop strength to 184,000. But he rejected demands of his critics that he set a definite date for an end to American involvement in the war, saying he intended to end the conflict "in a way that will redeem the sacrifices that have been made" by U.S. forces in more than 10 years of fighting.

"The issue very simply is this: Shall we leave Vietnam in a way that — by our own actions — consciously turns the country over to the Communists? Or shall we leave in a way that gives the South Vietnamese a reasonable chance to survive as a free people?"

"My plan will end American involvement in a way that would provide that chance," Nixon said. "The other would end it precipitately and give victory to the Communists."

Nixon said his program of Vietnamization — strengthening South Vietnamese forces to assume the burden of fighting the war — "has succeeded."

American forces in Vietnam will be reduced to 284,000 by May 1. The rate of withdrawal since pullouts started July 8, 1969, has averaged 12,500 men a month. The rate between May 1 and Dec. 1 will be slightly more than 14,200 monthly.

Potential Democratic presidential candidates criticized Nixon's speech. Sen. Edmund S. Muskie, considered the front-runner for the nomination, said he was "very disappointed" Nixon did not set a date to end U.S. involvement.

Sen. Edward M. Kennedy also expressed disappointment in Nixon's failure to set a definite date. He said Nixon's "grudging and allight" increase in the troop withdrawal rate could not conceal the failure of the recent American-supported campaign into Laos. Kennedy said he also was "shocked the President did not devote 'one word' to the 'violence that this war has visited upon the civilians of Southeast Asia.'"

But Sen. Robert Dole of Kansas, the Republican national chairman, said the President's announcement meant 365,000 Americans will have come home from Vietnam by Dec. 1.

HEAVIEST FLOW of water over Shoshone Falls in 20 years, placed at 21,000 cubic feet per second, has attracted hundreds of spectators to viewpoints near the falls this week. Here two persons watch the thunderous plunge of water over the rim of the falls. Clouds of spray rising above the cataract reached as high as the canyon rim Wednesday evening, sprinkling visitors.

Absorbs St. Edward's 310 parochial pupils press T.F. school budget upward

By BONNIE BAIRD JONES
Times-News Staff Writer
TWIN FALLS — An additional enrollment of up to 310 parochial school children plus higher costs of operation have boosted the Twin Falls School District budget for 1971-72 by nine per cent to $3.05 million.

Dr. Ernest Ragland, district superintendent, said the proposed budget for the coming year is an increase of $254,631.86 over last year, reflecting the closure of St. Edward's Catholic School and the need for the public school system to absorb the additional enrollment.

The proposed general fund budget this year is $3,053,746.38, compared to $2,798,835.52 budgeted for the current year and $2,569,873.20, the actual expenditures for the 1969-70 school year. Expenditures for the 1970-71 year are not yet completed. The total plant facilities budget this year is $75,000 and the bond and redemption budget, $122,000.

Dr. Ragland said state foundation program funds will be available to the district to meet a large share of the additional cost. The school district's proposed budget is based on a levy of $3.90 per each $100 of assessed valuation compared to $3.52 last year. Included are the levies of $3 for general school purposes, 40 cents for bond redemption; 20 cents for plant facilities and a special 30 cent levy this year for emergency purposes. Dr. Ragland said this emergency levy will provide the local district's share of costs for the increased enrollment. Estimated 1971 assessed valuation of the district is set at $30 million.

"We are basing our budget on an estimated $340 per pupil in the district, and we have to prepare for an increase of $10 from the St. Edward's closure alone," he said.

Dr. Ragland said a study has been made of the St. Edward's enrollment revealing pupils are scattered throughout the district. This will give the district an opportunity to work them into the regular program adding some to each of the district's five elementary schools.

Dr. Ragland said most of the present elementary school classes are under 30 pupils and can easily handle the one to two more in the various rooms. Should it develop some classes, already over 30 pupils, are being pushed to accept numerous new pupils, Ragland said, it may be necessary to acquire an additional class room or two in some location around the city. This, he said, will increase costs. The budget is prepared, he added, on the basis of normal absorption of the children into existing class rooms.

Ragland said teacher salaries are still in the negotiation stage but he believes a moderate salary increase with possible additional insurance benefits can be provided the district's staff. He said the budget has been prepared on this basis.

A public hearing on the school budget will be held April 19 at 8 p.m. in the school administration offices. Dr. Ragland said copies of the proposed budget are now being prepared at the school offices and will be available for public review prior to the hearing. He urged all interested taxpayers to attend the hearing.

Adoption of the budget, late this year because of delayed legislative action on a state funding program, is scheduled following the public hearing.

In the plant facilities fund, the district has budgeted $60,000 which will provide necessary new roofing on the original part of the senior high school building and some work on O'Leary Junior High School roofing. Ragland said no new building programs are contemplated in the coming year. Dr. Ragland said the bond redemption fund levy this year is the smallest in many years and reflects the reduction of bonded indebtedness of the district. About $122,000 will be paid this year, leaving the total debt just over $1 million.

Viets claim kills

SAIGON (UPI)—The South Vietnamese command today reported 320 North Vietnamese killed in renewed fighting near Fire Base 6 along the Laotian border. U.S. spokesmen announced the heaviest weekly American death toll since the Cambodian incursion last summer.

UPI correspondent Stewart Kellerman reported that a U.S. armored unit which covered the withdrawal of American troops from bases along the Laotian border had pulled out of Fire Support Base Vandergrift, 12 miles southeast of Khe Sanh.

In Cambodia, heavy fighting was reported Wednesday in the Pich Nil Pass area, 57 miles southwest of Phnom Penh, after North Vietnamese troops overran a Cambodian paratroop battalion. Military sources in Saigon said the Communists lost 200 men to ground fire and air strikes.

UPI Phnom Penh bureau manager Catherine M. "Kate" Webb and four other persons were missing on Highway 4 near the scene of the action.

The U.S. command said 88 Americans were killed in combat in Vietnam in the week ending April 3 and 347 wounded. The toll included 33 GIs killed and 72 wounded in a Communist attack March 28 on Fire Support Base Mary Ann, 50 miles southwest of Da Nang.

District deadlock broken

BOISE (UPI) — The Senate broke its own stalemate late Wednesday night and sent to the House two reapportionment bills and one re-districting measure.

The House, meantime, debated one hour and five minutes on another reapportionment bill, then broke for a dinner recess with plans to return later in the evening.

"The log jam has broken," said Sen. Wayne Kidwell, R-Boise, announcing that both sides of the aisle had agreed to consider the three measures.

The change about came after a Cay of Caucus and a late afternoon floor session which saw Democrats still Republicans 10 times on motions to suspend rules. Republicans then balked at two Democratic motions, one to recess to draw up more reapportionment plans and one to adjourn until the next morning.

The upper chamber also acted under a threat from Sen. James Ellsworth, R-Leadore, Senate President Pro Tem, to introduce a resolution to suspend legislative pay to senators at midnight.

After the measure were approved, Ellsworth said he would decide Thursday morning whether to introduce the resolution. When he first attempted to introduce the pay suspension, Democrats kept him from doing so, with only Sen. Richard Egbert, D-Tetonan, moving across party lines to vote with Democrats.

There-districting bill approved by the upper chamber would move Elmore County and precincts from four Ada county legislative districts into the Second Congressional District. (Continued on P. 15)

Pakistan fears Indian strike

NEW DELHI (UPI)—Pakistan's government said today India may be preparing "to invade East Pakistan, where Bengali separatists have been waging civil war against the federal government" for two weeks.

The broadcast from Lahore, West Pakistan, monitored here, said there were reports that the two battalions of the Indian border security force had been moved to points along the frontier used by other Indian troops for infiltration into East Pakistan. The radio also said the Indian air force bases to the west and north of East

Pakistan has been placed in the highest state of combat readiness.

Pakistan earlier had claimed that India had moved six army divisions — or about 60,000 men — into the state of West Bengal, which forms its western border with East Pakistan. The west and east wings of Pakistan are separated by about 1,000 miles of Indian territory.

Today's radio report appeared to be the most serious in a string of accusations of interference Pakistan has made against India since the civil war broke out on March 25.

Reds bomb club

SAIGON (UPI)—Communist terrorists exploded a bomb tonight in a waterfront nightclub frequented by American soldiers, then opened fire with automatic weapons from across the Saigon River when the GIs stumbled from the wrecked building.

Military police said the explosion in Saigon's top acid rock nightclub killed one U.S. Air Force serviceman and a Vietnamese bar girl and wounded as many as 20 other Americans.

They said terrorists exploded 40 pounds of plastic explosive in the first terrorist incident in the capital since bombs ripped through two bachelor officers quarters on consecutive nights last before Christmas.

The blast occurred at 9:10 p.m. (8:10 a.m. EST) and ripped out one whole wall of the CBC night club fronting on a circle where stands a huge statue of a South Vietnamese naval hero beside the Saigon River.

Immediately after the explosion, which was felt for at least three blocks in the crowded downtown area, automatic weapons were heard firing from across the river.

The Viet Cong used similar tactics in March, 1967, when they attacked the My Canh floating restaurant on the Saigon River, a ship channel leading from the Mekong River. In that case they fired on U.S. officers fleeing the smoking restaurant.

Cassia drug raid nabs 6

BURLEY — A continued crackdown on the drug problem in Magic Valley brought arrests Wednesday night of four Burley people on charges of illegal dispensation of drugs.

One other was arrested for assault with a deadly weapon and two others for illegal possession of drugs.

Gordon Nielson, Cassia County prosecutor, said the arrests followed a raid held Wednesday night at several residences in Burley.

The raids were the combined effort of Cassia County, Burley City, State Police and Idaho Bureau of Drug Control authorities.

Nielson said an undercover agent from the state bureau had been operating in Cassia County since November.

Arrested are Ralph Sam Evans, 23, charged with illegal dispensation of a prescription drug, illegal sale of a narcotic (marijuana), and illegal sale of an enumerated drug; Bert Holland, 18, three counts of illegal dispensation of a narcotic (marijuana); Robert Hollinger, 25, two counts of illegal dispensation of a narcotic, (marijuana), and a 17-year-old male, charged in a juvenile petition with two sales of marijuana.

Nielson said one juvenile and four adults still are at large.

The two arrested for illegal possession of a drug, James Bigelow, 34, and Keith L. Perry, 19.

FBI probe nears

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Momentum is building for an extraordinary congressional investigation into the wiretapping operations of the FBI. The House of Representatives, meantime, has decided to hire experts to make sure its telephones aren't bugged.

Calls for the investigation of the FBI came from both friends and critics of Director J. Edgar Hoover in the trail of charges by House Democratic Leader Hale Boggs that House and Senate members have been telephone-tapped and spied on by the FBI.

Rep. Emanuel Celler, D-N.Y., chairman of the House Judiciary Committee, said he would discuss an investigation of the growing controversy with members of his panel.

Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., said he asked Sen. Sam Ervin, D-N.C., to expand his probe of Army snooping to include the FBI monitoring practices. If Ervin does not enlarge his investigation Kennedy said he would consider an investigation by his Senate Judiciary Subcommittee on Administrative Practices and Procedures.

The House Administration Committee announced Wednesday it would hire an electronics firm to check all House telephones in the next few days to see if any eavesdropping devices are attached. The committee said it would retain the firm to make occasional checks of an irregular basis in the future.

Guerrillas withdraw

By United Press International
Palestinian guerrillas faced with an ultimatum from Jordan's King Hussein left Amman today, taking their heavy weapons with them.

Hussein had set today as the deadline for the guerrillas to get their arms out of the Jordanian capital or they would be described as "terrorist" groups.

Reds laud new plans

MOSCOW (UPI)—Delegates to the 24th Soviet Communist Party Congress today acclaimed Premier Alexei N. Kosygin with shouts of "glory!" and "viva!" in a response nearly equaling that accorded party chief Leonid I. Brezhnev on Monday.

Sources inside the Congress said the 5,000 delegates applauded lustily and cheered at the conclusion of Kosygin's brief summary of the consumer-oriented economic plan for 1971-75. He had outlined the plan in a 30,000-word speech Tuesday.

Murderer gets 2,500 year term

DALLAS (UPI)—A jury Wednesday sentenced a convicted murderer to 2,500 years in prison—the longest sentence handed down in Texas judicial history.

Despite the length of the sentence, however, Robert Floyd Angle, 28, will be eligible for parole in 20 years.

Angle was convicted of killing Jack Katz, 64, during a holdup of an auto supply store in Dallas two days before Christmas, 1969.

The term surpasses Texas' previous high sentence of 1,800 years assessed in Odessa, Tex., to a man convicted for selling heroin.

nothing the Soviets have to a Western-style election. The afternoon session was closed to all but the Soviet party delegates.

The 360-member Central Committee governs the Soviet Communist Party between congresses, which meet every four to five years. After its election by secret ballot, the new committee in turn elects its own executive body, the Politburo, which is the real day-to-day ruling body.

The Politburo is the group which actually wields supreme power over 240 million Soviet citizens.

Congress sources said the response to Kosygin's summation fell slightly short of being as long and loud as the 90-seconds of tumult that followed Brezhnev's summation of general party policy on Monday.

The sources saw it as a reflection of the trend that while Brezhnev is solidly "first among equals," Kosygin still is politically healthy.

It was also announced at this concluding session of debate at the Congress that detailed directives to execute the new five-year economic plan would be ready by Aug. 1, indicating a full meeting of the new Central Committee would take place in August along with a regular session of the Supreme Soviet (Parliament).

The congress today also passed two foreign policy resolutions, the sources said.

Appealing for the United States and its allies to end the Indochina War.

Appealing for "a just peace" in the Middle East.

Widow asks interest

BOISE (UPI)—City officials have rejected a widow's request for interest on a local improvement district payment she made last year for road work not yet started.

Mrs. Bertha Waterhouse, Boise, wrote the mayor and city council last week asking for interest on $613.10 she paid Sept. 4 for street paving supposed to have been completed last fall.

"It has been six months and no work has started yet," Mrs. Waterhouse wrote.

"You have been using my money for six months now," she said.

"Had I not paid you I would have collected interest on the $613," she added that "I did not vote to have the street (Victoria Drive) paved in the first place."

City Attorney Elbert E. Gass confirmed that Mrs. Waterhouse would be paying 6 1/2 per cent interest to the city had she not paid in advance. But he referred newsmen to the public works director for the reason the project fell behind schedule.

"I had I not paid you I would have collected interest on the $613."

"Additionally, I am accused of approving involvement of the city in federally-funded programs 'requiring local tax commitments which effectively increase the property tax load without a vote of the people.'"

He also stands accused of approving city spending for a development planning budget not adequately substantiated by previous years' records and approving a city budget increase in disregard of taxpayer protests.

Ceremony enacted by Pope

VATICAN CITY (UPI)—Pope Paul VI led Roman Catholics today in the most solemn stage of Holy Week with a moving ceremony in which he re-enacts Christ's gesture of washing and kissing the feet of his disciples at the Last Supper.

The ceremony was being held at the Basilica of St. John in Lateran.

The Pope's action in washing the feet of 12 seminarians representing the disciples is a custom instituted by Pope Gregory the Great 1,400 years ago. After falling into disuse for centuries, it was revived by the late Pope John XXIII in 1959. Christians also believe Holy Thursday to be the day on which Christ instituted the Eucharist, and the Pope's Mass tonight therefore had a special significance.

Following the Holy Thursday Mass, crucifixes are covered and altars are stripped bare to remind Christians of Christ's condemnation and execution. They remain bare until the Resurrection is celebrated Easter Sunday.

Recall planned in Boise

BOISE (UPI)—Members and supporters of Taxpayers' Voice, Inc., a private organization, voted nearly unanimously Wednesday to seek recall of Boise mayor Jay Amyx and Ada County Commissioner Jack Barney.

Proposed recall petitions against the two officials accuse them of acting in general disregard of the best fiscal interests of the taxpayers within their jurisdictions.

"Additionally, Amyx is accused of approving involvement of the city in federally-funded programs 'requiring local tax commitments which effectively increase the property tax load without a vote of the people.'"

He also stands accused of approving city spending for a development planning budget not adequately substantiated by previous years' records and approving a city budget increase in disregard of taxpayer protests.

A separate petition being prepared against Barney accuses him of "being a party to the purchase of one arts and commerce building at a price substantially higher than interested appraisals."

Barney also is accused in the petition of approving expenditures of county funds for a development planning budget.

Leeper elected

BUHL — Joe Leeper, Wendell, is the newly elected president of the South Central District of the Idaho Funeral Service Association, Robert F. Dickard, Buhl, secretary-treasurer, said today.

He said Leeper, who operates Leeper Mortuary at Wendell, was named at a district meeting at the Ramada Inn at Burley. Dickard was elected secretary-treasurer.

Funeral services will be conducted at 7:30 p.m. Friday at Pocatello. Graveside services will be held at 2 p.m. Saturday at the Jerome Cemetery.

Question...

It is my belief that medical science is on the verge of perfecting the technique of organ transplants. Following my death I would like to have my kidneys and eye corneas transplanted if they are useable. I know you must have experienced this situation before. Please tell me what to do.

Answer...

There is a common law concept that a man's mortal remains are not his to dispose of — that his body after death belongs to his survivors. Certain states have altered this concept by adopting specific legislation authorizing tissue, organ or whole body donations by a simple written statement witnessed by two persons, or by a Will.

IDAHO has such a law and we have the necessary forms in our office. The crucial factor in grafting is time. Although some progress has been made in preserving whole kidneys, doctors in major medical centers prefer to remove and graft the organ within 30 minutes after its owner had died.

Medical techniques estimate that only one person out of every ten who die in hospitals can supply an organ for transplant. It is essential, therefore, that you make your actions known to your physician and family so that should you be an acceptable donor no time will be lost.

Snowmobile ban eyed in Tetons

JACKSON, Wyo. (UPI)—Rangers at the Grand Teton National Park in northwestern Wyoming said Wednesday they may ban snowmobiles from the area because some snowmobilers are using the vehicles to chase and kill coyotes.

Park officials said there have been at least five such incidents this year alone and estimated as many as 30 coyotes may have been slaughtered by snowmobilers in the past few years.

The coyote is legally considered a predator in Wyoming except in national parks where it is protected.

Park Supt. Howard Chapman said the coyote is considered "one of the most visible and interesting predators in the park," and is considered "as much a part of the wildlife show as deer, elk or moose."

Betts said the present coyote population is "in balance with the available food supplies," and he does not intend to see the balance destroyed.

"Most snowmobilers want to protect their sport," he said, "but it takes only a few to ruin it for everyone."

Cyclist injured in crash

'Welding job' success

By LEE TREMAINE
Times-News Staff Writer
TWIN FALLS — Problem: Take 195 diverse voices from three Magic Valley high schools, taught by different instructors, and weld them into a harmonious whole, sounding as if they had always worked together . . . and do all this in just one day of instruction.

Result: Marvelous music . . . the kind that thrills the heart and renews your faith in young talent.

Dr. Will Elliott, music director at Boise State College, was the "magician" who performed this feat on Wednesday, when a one-day music clinic brought high-school choir members from Burley, Minico and Twin Falls together at the College of Southern Idaho's Fine Arts Center.

Dr. Elliott had the essential help of the three choir directors, Richard Smack of Twin Falls; Eldon Wood, Burley, and Alan Hale, Minico, who worked with their students for many weeks to learn the complex series of numbers presented at a public concert Wednesday evening.

The students worked on the program at their respective schools, training their voices for the intricate passages of Vivaldi's "Gloria"; a rollicking spiritual, "Soon Ah Will Be Done," by William L. Dawson; a quatrain of selections from the Broadway musical "Funny Girl," and the concluding "Battle Hymn of the Republic."

During a day-long music clinic at CSI, the students studied under the able baton of Dr. Elliott, who honed, harassed, insisted and inspired the students to do their best. And do their best they did, in a two-hour concert that blended orchestral, band and vocal numbers into an evening of pure pleasure for the audience.

accompanied the 195-voice student choir in the lengthy but enjoyable "Gloria" by Antonio Vivaldi. During the day's studies, it was found that the entire vocal symphony was too long, so it was trimmed slightly.

Joyce Guyer and Debbie Heller presented a lovely duet during the 30-minute "Gloria"; then Miss Guyer returned for a solo aria, accompanied by Marieta Bastian on the flute.

The veteran Twin Falls choir accompanist joined the group to accompany the vocalists in the tricky "Funny Girl" selections, and was rewarded with hearty applause from the audience.

A Minico student, Tom Clark, was accompanist for "Battle Hymn of the Republic," arranged with a rolling, rhythmic piano background which the young man performed to perfection.

He noted the animals were more openly seen in the parks because they are protected.

"I guess they are a temptation to some people," he said.

Two Star Valley men recently were convicted of molesting and killing coyotes in the park. Craig Laker and Michael Ivie chased coyotes until the animals were exhausted, then killed them by repeatedly running their machines over the animals, park officials said.

Both men were fined $250 each, with $150 suspended, and placed on a year's probation.

Betts said he fears the incidents are increasing this year.

"We have investigated five incidents so far this year," he said, "and there may be more."

He estimated between 25 and 30 coyotes may have been deliberately killed in the last few years by snowmobilers.

Betts said he felt it was very unsportsmanlike to kill any animal with a snowmobile.

"The animal doesn't have a chance," he said. "Once it is in the open it is easy to kill. You just run the coyote until it is exhausted."

Park officials indicated they may have to take some action against snowmobilers if the incidents continue.

Probation ordered revoked

TWIN FALLS — A probation order on a 20-year-old Twin Falls man was revoked during a hearing in Fifth District Court before Judge James Cunningham Wednesday.

Clinton Lloyd Huston was convicted last year on a plea of guilty to a charge of receiving stolen property. Sentence was withheld at that time and he was placed on probation.

Since then, the court records show, Huston has violated his probation by committing a petty larceny and by leaving State Hospital North at Orofino without permission.

Judge Cunningham sentenced Huston to not more than three years in the Idaho State Penitentiary and then commuted the sentence to 90 days in the county jail.

Shoshone services set Friday

SHOSHONE — Good Friday services will be held at 8 p.m. Friday at the First Baptist Church, sponsored jointly by Shoshone Protestant churches.

Speaker will be the Rev. Herbert Morris, Twin Falls, First United Methodist Church pastor, using the topic "Something to Die For."

Laymen from churches participating will be Mr. and Mrs. Howard Adkins, E. I. Terry, Kenneth Crothers, Carl Kinney, Mrs. George Kenaston and Gary McDonald.

The public is invited.

Director traces program

PAUL — The Paul City Council met Wednesday night with Gerald Mays, a West, Minico Junior High School teacher, to discuss the city's recreation program for this year.

Mays has been hired as the city's recreation director for this summer. When he isn't working as recreation director, he will be working then as a regular city employee at $2 per hour. Altogether he will work 40 hours per week for the city.

He asked the council's permission to conduct the recreation program in the morning instead of in afternoons as in the past. The council tentatively approved this request if he can find coaches, and umpires who will participate in the mornings.

The mayor also told Mays that he would like to have enrollments in the program completed before the end of school.

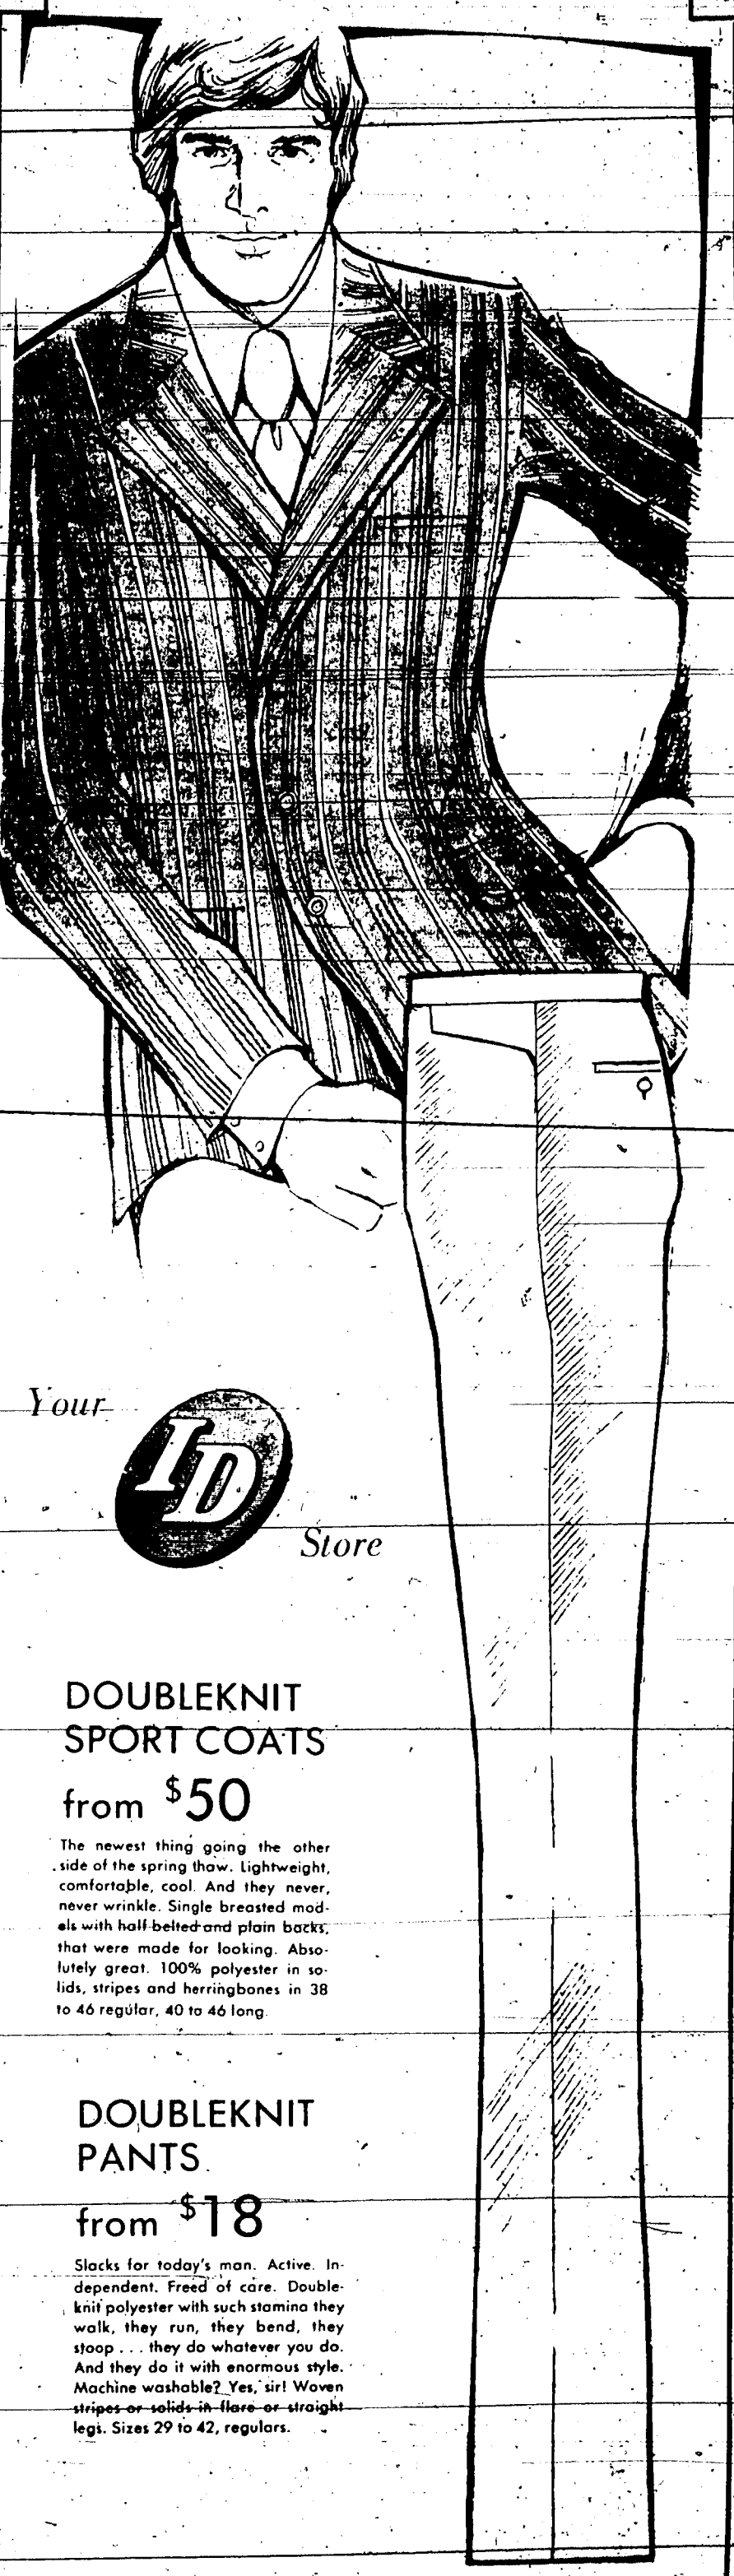

The council instructed Mays to draft a proposed recreation program and bring it back to the council before June 1.

A request by William Lewis to park his mobile home on Don March's property where March previously had his mobile home, was denied by the council for his failure to comply with the city's ordinance.

Environment

Everyone seems to be giving a vast amount of lip service to a clean environment, and very little personal effort to keep our waters and the air we breathe free of our own trash and noxious fumes.

Millions of Americans are ready to begin the vacation season soon, and if past practice is any criterion, they'll leave tons of debris on the beaches, in the lakes and streams and around their camps.

When each and every one of us does his own part and persuades his neighbor to do the same, there can be hope for a cleaner, better environment.

Nature's mighty forces will provide the salubrious ecology all pine for, if only we let Nature work its way without Man's overwhelming interference. Pollution, already dangerous, will require the best efforts of us all, from vacationer to scientist, to arrest.

Congress, in its decision to kill the SST, was motivated to a considerable degree by illogical fears of the unknown — the possible irrevocable pollution of the atmosphere. Yet, it is probable that only in an airplane the size of the SST can clean, atomic fuel ever be utilized.

Jet planes trail dark stripes of dirty, unburned fuel across the azure heavens — azure, where not the dirty gray of smog. We've endured the ear-shattering roar of jet engines destroying the normal, harmonious sounds we associate with peaceful living.

Our automobiles which have meant so much to the American way of life spew poisonous vapors at a rate we have determined must be drastically reduced and quickly. Mankind has no choice but to press forward in the search for clean and plentiful fuel.

It is archaic now to burn finite fossil fuels for our sources of energy.

Our technology bridged countless centuries of groping to that blinding flash when science split the atom. That awesome, fearful explosion opened the door to civilization of virtually limitless power. That power, millions of times greater than anything ever known before, holds the key to destruction and ruin or to a new golden age of the harnessing of the energy of the sun for peaceful purposes.

That age may be only a few steps down the road ahead. Scientists must and will harness clean atomic power so that it can drive planes and automobiles, heat and cool our cities without recurrent dimouts or blackouts, and in effect bring a force of the sun to earth to solve our ecology problems.

Man must press on toward positive scientific solutions and true progress, rejecting the nostalgic longing for time gone by and beauties lost beyond recall.

The renaissance may be just ahead.

Spending

Congress appears to be moving toward adoption of a ceiling on the amount candidates may spend in campaigning for office.

The Administration, through Richard L. Kleindienst, Deputy Attorney General, stated its support for a "workable and realistic" ceiling on total outlays and for repeal of the "equal time" provision which inhibits television debate by major party candidates by requiring equal time for other nominees.

Most important, Kleindienst told a Senate committee, was the requirement for "full and timely disclosure of the sources and amounts of contributions" received by a candidate.

He also recommended enactment of a deduction or tax credit for contributions to a political party in order to broaden the base of political support.

The bill under discussion apparently does not cover the possible loophole of large sums being spent on behalf of a candidate but not contributed to him.

The Easter Story

The Easter Story that Christendom has been re-telling during Holy Week will reach its triumphant climax in churches bright with flowers and ringing with joyous music. So it has been for nearly 2,000 years. So it will be Sunday.

For where in all the annals of the human race, where in the works of any age, is there a story of equal power to move the hearts and minds of men? It combines simplicity with majesty, hope with deepest despair, the ordinary stuff of everyday life with the highest aspirations.

It moves from victory to bitter defeat and then soars to even greater victory. And through it all the courage and compassion and unyielding faith of the Son of Man shine with a luminous light for men of all time to mark and wonder at and humbly seek.

The story has been told time and time again. The language differs in the translations of the New Testament that have appeared from time to time down the years. The reason for the new translations and the revised versions lies in the impact of the story. Scholars cannot rest when they know that the older telling lacks even a little of the meaning and vitality of what took place.

Yet the drama, as long as it retains the main outline of the passion, never fails to stir our wonder. It speaks of our deepest instincts.

Man must live. Yet we know in our deepest beings that we can lose our lives by saving them. We know that the highest conquest is the conquest over self even at the price of death.

These same truths are reflected in other Christian symbols. Men have sensed them, often dimly, from time immemorial. But in the Easter story they are explicit, not to be forgotten once understood.

The story will be told again in the churches of Magic Valley on Sunday.

NOTE OF THANKS

Mrs. Wayne (Loretta) Strickling of Wendell, who is seriously ill at the Magic Valley Memorial Hospital, has sent a note to her many friends through Mr. Spectator. She writes that "each flower, card, message and kindness of the past several weeks has brought me such pleasant memories. I may not be able to thank each of you personally but I want you to know how I love each and every one."

"Thank you for being so kind to my family always."

WASHINGTON — In the wake of the heavy fighting in Laos, North Vietnam will continue to step up the pace of localized fighting in northern South Vietnam and elsewhere in Indochina.

That is the prediction of top administration officials who have been assessing the drive into Laos by South Vietnamese forces. They believe that Hanoi will now want to make a very visible show of strength, no matter what losses it suffered in Laos.

Last week's attacks on U.S. firebases and on the district capital of Ducduc were viewed as the tip-off for such a policy. In the latter instance the attacking North Vietnamese troops apparently came by forced march from the trail area in Laos to make the assault and raze the town.

Generally speaking, administration officials believe most of the anticipated local activity by the North Vietnamese will be against U.S. troops; in order to swell U.S. casualty lists and thus fuel demands here at home for a more rapid U.S. withdrawal.

Despite the likelihood of such high-visibility attacks, administration officials are convinced, as we previously reported, that the thrust across the Ho Chi Minh trails in Laos has forestalled any sustained major effort by the communists in Indochina this summer.

All in all, administration officials think the balance of strength in Indochina has now swung to favor the South Vietnamese. That is the conviction which is to be reflected in President Nixon's TV report tonight on the war, Vietnamization and withdrawal.

The continuing administration assessment of the operations in Laos also serves to stress that, if the war has been expanded geographically, as charged by Mr. Nixon's critics, it is nevertheless the same war against the same enemy.

It is noted by administration officials that the North Vietnamese used the 304th, 308th, 320th and 324-B divisions to repel Lam Vong 719; the South Vietnamese drive across the supply trails in Laos. During the 1968 Tet offensive all those units fought in Hue or assaulted Da Nang.

Similarly, the coincident Toan Thang operation north of Route 7 in Cambodia is being opposed by the North Vietnamese and Viet Cong First, Fifth, Seventh and Ninth divisions. Those units were operating in and around Saigon during the spring of 1968.

In the Vietnamization context, administration officials find it significant that these enemy units which manaced the population centers of South Vietnam in 1968 are now being engaged by South Vietnam's own armed forces in the enemy's own sanctuary areas — and with a greatly reduced U.S. garrison to assist.

It is also noted that South Vietnam was generally quiet through the operations in Laos and Cambodia during the months of February and March, which have, in the past, seen the Communists undertake major military operations.

In a prior television appearance, President Nixon reported that four of the 18 South Vietnamese battalions engaged in the Laos operation were hard hit by the Communist counterattacks. Administration officials now estimate that 13 enemy maneuver battalions were similarly smashed as combat units.

Current estimates are that the South Vietnamese lost 1,400 men killed in the Laos action as against 13,000 North Vietnamese dead — a somewhat narrower margin than the estimates we reported earlier, but one which remains overwhelmingly to the advantage of the South Vietnamese.

"YOU CALLED, SIR?"

ART BUCHWALD

TV In War

WASHINGTON — President Richard Nixon said recently that the Vietnamese war would probably be the last war the United States would ever fight. He's probably right.

The reason for it is television. It's obvious no country can ever fight a war again if its television commentators keep interviewing enlisted men about the battles.

I thought of this the other evening as I watched several enlisted men talking to a television correspondent in Vietnam.

My mind went back to World War II and I tried to imagine what the guys in my Marine Corps outfit would have said if someone had stuck a microphone in THEIR faces and started filming their reactions to the landing in the Marshall Islands.

"This is Terry Bartlett here at Eniwetok with the U.S. Marines. Standing next to me is Cpl. Zeh Kingbury of Zenith, Tenn. How's it going, corporal?"

"It's going real bad. I don't know if we can hold out the night with the ammunition we have. The Japs are dug in and we're getting a lot of heavy fire, a lot of it."

"What is your name, sir?"
"Pfc. Roger Bernstein of Brooklyn, N.Y."

"Roger, do you think the United States should have tried to take Eniwetok?"

"No, it was a mistake. Washington doesn't know what's going on. We're taking a lot of casualties out here for a worthless piece of coral."

"Then you don't think you should be here?"

"No, sir, I really don't. And neither do any of the other guys."

"How's the morale of the troops?"

"It's not good. We haven't had a warm meal in three days, and there are flies everywhere. We have to sleep in foxholes and the heat is fierce in the daytime. I have nothing good to say about this place."

"What's your name?"

"Pvt. Tony D'Amato of Chicago."

"Tony, why do you think

President Roosevelt insisted on an invasion of Eniwetok?"

"It's hard to say. I've been against Roosevelt's strategy from the start. We should be bombing Tokyo and Osaka instead of wasting our time on these islands. I also think we should forget about Europe and concentrate everything in the Pacific. After all, the Japs bombed Pearl Harbor — not the Germans."

"What is your name?"

"Pfc. Tim O'Brien, Waco, Texas."

"How do you size up this operation, Tim?"

"I think all we're doing is trying to make Gen. MacArthur look good. He lost the Philippines and now the Marines have to get it back for him. Most of the guys in this outfit are pretty sore about always having to bail out the Army. We're thinking about getting a petition together to send to our congressmen complaining about doing everybody's dirty work."

"And your name, sir?"

"Pfc. Charles Hildegard, Butte, Mont."

"What do you do?"

"I'm a cook."

"How do you see the big picture?"

"It seems to me that Adm. Nimitz is not getting maximum effort out of the Pacific fleet. I would replace Adm. Halsey with a younger man and bring more pressure on the Japs by U.S. Air Force strikes on Truk and Okinawa. The Pacific command knows I have never been for taking Eniwetok."

"Thank you. And so you have heard from the men of VMF 113 on Eniwetok. They are all agreed that nothing could be gained by this invasion. Whether they are correct or not, only time will tell. This is Terry Bartlett in the Marshall Islands."

RAY CROMLEY

Barrier To Peace

WASHINGTON (NEA) — The major immediate obstacle to a Mideast settlement is the inability of the Israeli government to agree within itself on what it would settle for.

And until the Israelis do reach some consensus on basics, there can be no meaningful peace talks with Egypt.

This is how the problem is viewed by men at the highest levels in Washington. These U.S. officials believe the Israeli have become so inured to Arab hard-line extremism that when Egypt's Anwar Sadat came up with extremely reasonable proposals, the Israeli found they had no contingency plans for such a situation.

The hawks and doves in the Israeli cabinet are now so divided it is impossible for our top men to get a reasonable fix from the Israeli government, even in confidence, on what it wants or for what it would consider settling. High Israeli officials, who have in the past talked very frankly indeed to their American counterparts in private, now talk in evasive riddles.

But the time to act is now. Factors in the Arab world which have been adverse to a decision for years, now seem to be under control, at least temporarily. Sadat has wide backing among Egyptian intellectuals, government officials, businessmen, students, and even in the military, in his moves for peace.

The Egyptians in almost all circles are tired of this war and want peace so that they can go about their business. They see little value in prolonging a conflict with Israel which threatens to go on endlessly to no purpose and which would, in any event, bring them little, even if Egypt won.

Sadat, if sources close to the White House are correct, badly wants to resume diplomatic relations with the United States and to build up a close, friendly relationship.

GEORGE C. THOSTESON, M.D.

Ignorance

Dear Dr. Thosteson: There can be no doubt, I am sure, that tuberculin testing is a very useful tool. Yet I cannot help but feel that it has caused much grief and unhappiness.

In fact, this letter is the result of a case I am familiar with. One parent, over 40, had a mild reaction to the test recently. The rest of the family was found negative.

X rays on this parent were normal. Yet the test has caused alienation between the couple themselves and the children to the point where I fear a break-up of the family is a real possibility.

What does the test mean? Could a person who came in contact with the germ 30 years ago still harbor the germ inactively, and can it become active in later life? Maybe if they read something about it in the paper it would help. — A.R.

I've written several times before about the tuberculin or "skin" test, but I'll do it again. I'm at a loss to understand why this family you mention should get into what seems to be a savage uproar instead of asking for some information that could clear up the fuss.

The tuberculin test does NOT tell whether a person is harboring tuberculosis germs — active or inactive. All it tells is whether he has ever come in contact with TB.

A negative tuberculin test is proof that you don't have TB. A positive test, however, is not proof that you do.

All it proves is that, having been in contact with the germs, you need further tests to see whether you do or you don't have TB.

In the case you describe, the parent with the positive test has had such a further test — the chest X ray — and no evidence of TB was discovered.

So what is the family so upset about? He was exposed once, but he didn't get the disease.

The way the test works is this: when one is exposed to TB germs, the body's protective mechanism goes to work, and antibodies are created in the blood. The antibodies are substances which are designed to combat that particular germ.

These antibodies, once created, remain in the blood — a positive tuberculin test will show them. But whether they were originally from 30 years ago or three is a question.

Anyway, the person who has had a positive tuberculin test thereafter should have periodic chest X rays, because if he ever does contract TB, he wants to find out without delay.

As for the rest of the family, as long as they continue to have negative tuberculin tests, they don't need chest X rays. (Not to test for TB, anyway.) Because you may or may not get TB when exposed, but you can't have TB without exposure to the germs.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: Can a baby (or adult) catch asthma by being in close contact with a person who has asthma? — R.L.S.

No. That is, as a vast generality, the answer is no. Asthma is a wheezing, caused by congestion in the breathing passages, and in almost all cases, this is related to allergy, which is not "catching."

There might be an occasional case in which the "asthma" is the result of infection which could be transmitted, but that in any event would be a temporary condition, and not what we usually refer to as asthma.

Note to A.C.: Unrecognized diabetes? A lot of it. "Disease Detection Newsletter" reported a drive in Florida with 3,989 people tested and 143 found with abnormal sugar levels.

Hemorrhoids can be cured! If troubled with fissures, fistulas, itching, and other rectal problems, write to Dr. Thosteson in care of this newspaper requesting a copy of the booklet, "The Real Cure For Hemorrhoids," enclosing a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope and 25 cents in coin to cover cost of printing and handling.

Dr. Thosteson welcomes all reader mail, but regrets that, due to the tremendous volume received daily, he is unable to answer individual letters. Readers' questions are incorporated in his column whenever possible.

Nixon intervention attacked

WASHINGTON (UPI)—Influential Democratic senators criticized President Nixon's intervention in the Calley case Wednesday. One of them accused him of playing politics with the issue and said he should "keep his mouth shut." The debate over the first degree murder conviction of Lt. William L. Calley Jr. for killing 22 South Vietnamese civilians at My Lai intensified after disclosure that the young army captain who prosecuted the case had written Nixon opposing his intervention: Sen. Birch Bayh, D-Ind., considered a likely 1972 Democratic presidential contender. "Reluctantly, I have concluded that the President is determined to play politics with the Calley decision and the entire My Lai tragedy. "I realize the gravity of such charges. I do not make them lightly, but only after the most serious consideration," Bayh added. Bayh, asked what Nixon could do now, said: "He can keep his mouth shut until the final review."

At the White House, Press Secretary Ronald L. Ziegler said the President had read Daniel's letter, but would have no comment on it. Sens. George S. McGovern, D-S.D., and Robert C. Byrd, D-W. Va., said Nixon should have remained silent.

Calley emerges hero, prosecutor contends

WASHINGTON (UPI)—The Army officer who prosecuted Lt. William L. Calley Jr. has charged President Nixon weakened the judicial system and helped make a hero out of a convicted murderer when he responded to a public outcry by intervening in the case.

Capt. Aubrey M. Daniel III also told Nixon in a letter it would be a tragedy if "political expediency" dictated a compromise of a "fundamental moral principle" involved in the slaying of Vietnamese civilians at My Lai in 1968.

"I have been particularly shocked and dismayed at your decision to intervene in these proceedings in the midst of the public clamor," Daniel wrote. "Your decision can only have been prompted by the response of a vocal segment of our population, who while no doubt acting in good faith, cannot be aware of the evidence which resulted in Lieutenant Calley's conviction."

Sen. Robert Taft Jr., one of the senators who received a copy, criticized Daniel today. Taft said that while he believed the reaction against Calley's conviction was "ill informed and in error," he believed Nixon had "shown courage" in deciding to make the "ultimate decision."

Daniel said he believed that, instead of intervening in the case, Nixon should have reminded the nation of the purpose of the American legal system and the respect it should command.

"I would expect that the President of the United States, a man whom I believed should and would provide the moral leadership for this nation, would stand fully behind the law of this land on a moral issue which is so clear and about which there can be no compromise," Daniel said.

"For this nation to condone the acts of Lieutenant Calley is to make us no better than our enemies and make any pleas by this nation for the humane treatment of our prisoners meaningless."

Daniel said he believed respect for the legal process had been "weakened" by Nixon's act.

"The image of Lieutenant Calley, a man convicted of the premeditated murder of at least 21 unarmed and unresisting people, as a national hero has been enhanced while at the same time support has been given to those persons who have so unjustly criticized the six loyal and honorable officers who have done this country a great service by fulfilling their duties as jurors so admirably," he said.

Daniel said Nixon would have done better to say something in the behalf of the jurors, "the men who since rendering their verdict have found themselves and their families the subject of vicious attacks upon their honor, integrity and loyalty to this nation."

Cockpit check

ASTRONAUT Jack Swigert of Apollo 13 crew sits in full-scale mockup of cockpit of space shuttle. Crew station is small part of 210 foot long Orbiter craft which will serve as two stage, fully reusable transportation system, eventually replacing almost all existing launch vehicles for commercial, military and scientific missions by NASA. Swigert is assigned to program. (UPI)

Independence move growing

Independence of each party and non-interference in one another's affairs," he said.

MOSCOW (UPI)—Three more foreign Communist parties joined a movement for independence from Soviet-style communism Wednesday in speeches before the 24th Soviet Party Congress.

This brought to seven the number of speakers opposing the comments of the Byelorussian party leader, Pyotr Masherov, who a week ago scorned any deviation from the Soviet model of Communist structure.

The Belgian, Chilean and Japanese party leaders joined in opposition to Masherov's position Wednesday with Romanian party leader Nicolae Ceausescu, Italian deputy leader Enrico Berlinguer, Yugoslav delegation leader Mjalko Todorovich, and Spanish party leader Dolores Ibarruri.

Masherov, an alternate member of the ruling Soviet Politburo, had attacked Communist China in his speech as a "particularly repulsive" example of revisionism from the left and also heaped scorn on "rightists" who "talk of pluralism and numerous national models of socialism."

He presumably was referring to Yugoslavia and to such "reformist" non-ruling parties as the Italian, Belgian and British. In Chile, the party is included in a coalition supporting President Salvador Allende, a Marxist.

The strongest plea Wednesday against monolithic leadership came from Tomi Nishitsawa, leader of the Japanese delegation.

"Relations between parties must be based on respect of the

Japanese maritime defense force faces major buildup

YOKOSUKA, Japan (UPI)—More than any other branch of Japan's armed forces, the navy in its present status — demonstrates the sincerity of the country's pacifist constitution in prohibiting aggression.

The navy—officially titled the Maritime Self Defense Force (MSDF)—is essentially a coast guard. Compared with the powerful imperial navy of World War II, the MSDF is, for an island nation, little more than a bathtub fleet.

More important, Japan is an island and as such has been traditionally a maritime country.

A third reason for an MSDF buildup is that Japan, a country which is woefully short of natural resources, has to import huge amounts of oil and other necessary resources. Most of the imports come by sea and with the United States lowering its profile in this part of the world, Japan will probably see the need to take steps to protect its sea lanes.

Presently, the seas in this part of the world are protected by the U.S. 7th Fleet with little or no assistance from Japan.

Total tonnage in the MSDF stands now at just over 130,000 tons. The fleet is made up of 39 destroyers, 11 submarines, 46 mine sweepers, 20 submarine chasers, 15 patrol boats, three landing ship tanks (LST), eight torpedo boats, one oil tanker and a variety of smaller craft.

The MSDF also is equipped with close to 200 aircraft, including over 50 P2V7 long-range patrol planes, 50 S2F1 short-range patrol craft and various other outdated trainers and rescue planes. There also are 25 HSS2 helicopters and several larger helicopters. Manpower currently hovers at the 40,000 level.

When the buildup plan is completed, however, tonnage will be nearly doubled to 250,000 tons at a cost of $15.6 billion.

Osamu Nagano, vice president of Ishikawajima-Harima heavy industries, one of Japan's greatest potential weapons manufacturers—including ships —said there are simply no profits in building ships for the navy.

"The present national expenditures for construction of military vessels do not match the costs of general goods and labor," he said. "Profits from building Japanese warships are very low, almost zero, but continued military construction is needed to keep shipbuilding techniques up-dated."

Thus, if the government hopes to build up its navy, one suspects that the buildup will have to be larger than presently indicated.

Twilight hymn touches troops

By IDELLA CARRUTH
Maplewood, N.J.

It was a quiet summer evening, and my minister husband was to deliver the baccalaureate address for a school in the wide-open spaces of Texas. The service was held in a lovely country church, snow-white and nestled among the sparse and stunted trees, its slender spire reaching high toward heaven.

Our son was young, so I was sitting with him in the car at the outer edge of the churchyard. The lovely vesper hour had come. The wonderful hymn, "Now the Day Is Over," was being sung.

Suddenly the quiet was shattered by the tramp, tramp, tramp of marching feet. The church was located in the Camp Wolters army training area, and out of the flaming sunset came a battalion of marching men, carrying full field packs. They were on their way to night maneuvers.

I became anxious that the noise of their marching would break the spell of the hour, distracting the students and interrupting the service.

As the soldiers neared the church, they heard the singing, and slowed their pace. Suddenly one young soldier moved away from the marching line, ran to the barbed-wire fence separating the road from the churchyard and knelt there. Others followed. The commander ordered the troops to halt, then shouted, "At ease, men!"

I watched as the young men crowded close to the fence. The singing and the sight of the lighted church at twilight visibly moved them, and I saw some cross themselves as they knelt. Others removed their helmets and bowed their heads. Still others stood quietly where they were.

The words of the hymn came sweet and clear.

When the singing ended, the men silently rose from their knees and fell into line again. Then, almost reverently, they marched away into the darkening twilight.

Far from causing a disturbance, the young soldiers had brought a solemnity to those moments. From inside the church a prayer had gone forth in song, and it had stilled soldiers' hearts and united them in spontaneous worship.

For minutes more, I sat there in the fading echo of their feet as they marched away. Then all was still again.

Symphony conductor due award

NEW YORK (UPI)—Maurice Abravanel, conductor of the Utah Symphony, will be awarded the 1971 Alice M. Ditson Conductor's Award by Columbia University, it was announced Wednesday.

The award, which is accompanied by $1,000, annually honors a conductor for encouraging contemporary American music. It will be presented to Abravanel at a ceremony next Saturday in Salt Lake City after the symphony's last regular concert of the season.

Toothpick starts big wood products industry in Maine

STRONG, Maine (UPI)—The housewife hanging the laundry out to dry and her son eating an ice cream bar at the local theatre matinee probably are using wood products made in Maine.

It all started with the toothpick.

After the Civil War, an exporter's agent named Charles Forster visited South America and sent his wife some of the "toothpicks" whittled by natives.

When he returned, Forster invented a machine to make the picks and began marketing them. To help sales, he staged publicity stunts in Boston restaurants. Eventually restaurants there started supplying them as a matter of course to the diners.

Today three companies with plants in Strong and nearby

West Peru spew forth more than 100 million toothpicks a day. There are flat picks, round picks, flavored picks, and picks colored red, white and blue. They are the only American toothpick producers.

Other items produced at these plants are popsicle sticks, tongue depressors, clothespins, wooden ice cream spoons, croquet sets and baseball bats.

Forster Manufacturing Co., the largest with 800 employees, cranks out 56 million to 60 million toothpicks per day. Diamond Wood Products Division of Diamond International makes about 43 million a day, while Strong Wood Turning Co. has a capability of about 25 million per day.

Competition comes mainly from the Japanese who have penetrated this stable field.

Almanac

By United Press International Today is Thursday, April 8, the 98th day of 1971.

The moon is between its first quarter and full phase.

The morning stars are Venus, Mars and Jupiter.

The evening stars are Mercury and Saturn.

Those born on this day are under the sign of Aries. Movie star Mary Pickford was born April 8, 1893.

On this day in history: In 1513 Ponce de Leon of Spain landed at what is now St. Augustine, Fla., in his search for the Fountain of Youth.

In 1917 Austria and Hungary severed diplomatic relations with the United States, two days after America declared war on Germany.

In 1952 President Harry Truman ordered government seizure of the steel industry to avert a general strike.

In 1963 President John Kennedy made Britain's Sir Winston Churchill an honorary citizen of the United States.

Talented impressionist not used to seeing self perform

HOLLYWOOD (UPI)—Take Barbara Streisand, Mae West, Phyllis Diller, Peggy Lee and the late Judy Garland, add them all together and what do you have?

An impressionist named James Bailey.

For several years Bailey attempted to make good as a male vocalist. But inasmuch as everyone except Andy Devine is a male vocalist, Bailey couldn't get arrested singing straight.

Less than two years ago he was told by his agent to find a gimmick.

Bailey employed one of the wildest gimmicks of them all.

He bought dresses, wigs, makeup and exercised his talent for mimicry to imitate the singing voices of the above feminine stars.

Not only has he copied their voices, but their gestures, mannerisms and facial expressions to an uncanny degree.

But don't call Bailey a female impersonator or you're liable to come away with loose dentures.

"I do impressions," Bailey said forcefully. "So does Frank Gorshin. Would you call Flip Wilson a female impersonator because he does Geraldine? I just happen to do impressions of female vocalists."

"At first I thought of imitating male stars. But I'm a tenor to begin with. And everybody imitates Gable, Stewart, Bogart, Cagney, Peter Lorre and Edward G. Robinson. I had to have something new going for me."

Bailey appears principally in night clubs although he recently played guest star on the "Carol Burnett Show" and with Ed Sullivan.

"People tell me I sing well enough that I don't need the impressions," Bailey said. "But I remember the 10 years I tried to make it without a gimmick, and I stay with it. At the end of every show I appear as myself and sing in my own voice and style.

Bailey gets touchy when queried about taunts from the audiences about his masculinity.

"I was prepared for heckling from men in the nightclubs," he said. "But so far it hasn't happened."

Bailey's performances are so striking, his Burnett show will be rerun April 26, and the Sullivan appearance May 2.

"That's the other big hang-up," Bailey concluded. "I really can't get accustomed to seeing myself perform on the screen. I can't believe it's me."

Neither can anyone else.

Idaho Power change involves 3 managers

TWIN FALLS — Changes involving three Idaho Power Co. district managers in Magic Valley were announced by the utility today, including an extended medical leave of absence for veteran Buhl manager Lloyd E. Smith.

Smith, whose company service totals more than 45 years, already has begun his leave, says southern division manager, E.E. Haroldsen.

Appointed Buhl district manager is Hal W. Walker, Hazelton district manager since 1969 who began his career at Twin Falls.

Simultaneously, Rupert district manager George R. Haynes has assumed responsibility for operations in the Hazelton district and is dividing his time between the two offices.

Oregon broadcaster director of Gem utility

BOISE — Gordon Capps, Ontario, Ore., president of Inland Radio Inc., owner of KEEP Radio Station, Twin Falls, has been elected a director of the Idaho Power Co.

T.E. Roach, president of the power firm, said Capps succeeds Dr. C.E. Palmer, Ontario, who resigned after 36 years on the utility's board.

Capps, who started as an announcer-operator with a Bellingham, Wash., radio station in 1933, established a radio station in Ontario 25 years ago for Inland Radio and in 1960 purchased the broadcasting company, which also operates a station in LaGrande, Ore., and the Twin Falls station.

He also is director of Tele-Vue, a cable television company operating systems from San Francisco to Everett, Wash., and of Weemo Inc., an Ontario plastics firm.

GORDON CAPPS

Capps is a past president of the Oregon Association of Broadcasters and a member of the National Association of Broadcasters.

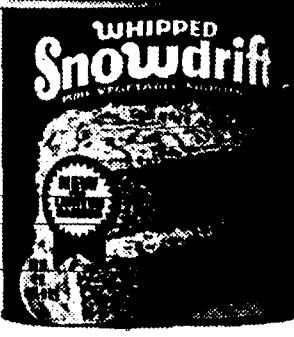

He has continued to live in Hazelton since being appointed Rupert district manager.

Walker, an Oakley native, joined the power company in 1948 as a meter reader at Twin Falls.

Foster home needed

TWIN FALLS — A foster home is needed for an 8-year-old mentally handicapped boy. The Twin Falls Department of Public Assistance is in need of the home and officials say the boy is able to care for his own physical needs and is in good health. However, he is in need of stability, love and security. The department of public assistance is responsible for the child's clothing, medical and dental needs as well as paying for his room and board. Anyone interested in giving care for this type of child should contact the DPA at 733-2323 or call at office, 634 Addison Ave. W.

Quake area unemployed to Oregon

PORTLAND, Ore. (UPI)—California earthquakes are among factors swelling Oregon's unemployment ranks, state officials said Tuesday. The Oregon Employment Division said 5,700 applicants for jobless benefits in the week ending March 28 said their last employment was in another state. Most were from neighboring California and Washington. Interviewers said a number of workers indicated the recent Los Angeles earthquakes and the possibility of more caused them to move north. Others blamed the recession in the California and Washington aerospace industries, while some expressed general dissatisfaction about job opportunities and modes of living in other states.

Gangs jar Ceylon idyll

By PHIL NEWSOM
UPI Foreign News Analyst
The island of Ceylon sits off the southeast coast of India, outside the main stream of world events, its voice scarcely audible outside the earshot of its own 12 million people.

It is easy to forget that Ceylon gave the world its first woman prime minister, on July 21, 1960, in the person of Mrs. Sirimavo Bandaranaike and that, for better or for worse, Mrs. Bandaranaike must rank among the earliest of today's women's lib leaders.

While still the wife of a prime minister and not the prime minister herself she had dedicated herself to the rehabilitation of Ceylon's rural women, helping to provide them with know-how and financial assistance to set themselves up as handloom weavers, or makers of mats, baskets and handbags.

Many a young woman owes her independence from masculine domination to her.

Before Mrs. Bandaranaike demonstrated her own iron will, she was known along Ceylon's campaign trail as the "weeping widow."

Mrs. Bandaranaike inherited problems in which religion and language played prominent and divisive national roles—the differences between the Tamil and Sinhalese languages and the Hindu and Buddhist religions—along with chronic unemployment, rising dissatisfaction among the newly educated youth and the growing pains associated with the transition from colonialism to independence.

Care bill passed

CARSON CITY, Nev. (UPI)—A bill requiring parents to pay for their children's care at state reformatories was passed Tuesday by the Nevada Senate.

The measure, which was sent to the Assembly, makes it mandatory for judges to order parents to pay bills for their committed youngsters. Hardship cases may be exempted.

Communion rite set

KING HILL — Communion services will be held at 8:15 p.m. today at the King Hill United Presbyterian Church with Rev. Edward Bawden officiating.

Community Good Friday services are planned for 8 p.m. Friday at the church under the direction of Rev. Larry Maxwell.

Blackout ban asked Hearing requested

WASHINGTON (UPI)—Rep. Sherman P. Lloyd, R - Utah, joined Wednesday in co-sponsorship of a bill to prohibit nationwide TV and radio blackouts of major professional sporting events.

Lloyd said local blackouts of major events would not be affected by the legislation.

He charged that the promoters of the recent Frazier - All heavyweight fight "went so far as to try to restrict wire services and the broadcast media from reporting the progress of the fight."

"This bill will insure that in the future the public will have the opportunity to witness major or spring events on all types of electronic media," Lloyd added.

The Utah Republican said the bill would "head off the possibility of allowing promoters to use professional sports to make a financial killing."

No inquest set in death

BOISE (UPI) — Coroner Ed Paris says no inquest or autopsy is planned into the gunshot death Tuesday of Dr. Robert E. Lloyd, 55, Boise.

Paris said Lloyd's body was found in his home by his wife when she returned from an hour-and-half absence late Tuesday afternoon.

"Violets in May" show set by Saintpaulia Club

TWIN FALLS — Suggestions on their forthcoming show, "Violets in May," were discussed when members of the Magic Valley Saintpaulia Club met for their April meeting at the home of Clara Walton.

The show is set May 1 and 2 at the YM-YWCA building, 1751 Elizabeth Blvd. The show is open to the public from 1 to 8 p.m. May 1 and from noon to 5 p.m. May 2.

Admission to the show is free and entries are open to any interested person. Entries will be received from 8 to 10:30 a.m. May 1. Only clean, healthy plants will be accepted and must have been grown by exhibitor at least three months. Exhibits must remain until 5 p.m. May 2 and must be removed by 6 p.m. that day. Entries received after books close will be for display only.

Judging by merit system by accredited judges will begin at 11 a.m. The judges' decision shall be final.

Exhibitor is allowed more than one entry in each class No. 1 through 35 provided varieties are different and the exhibitor may enter plant of same variety in classes No. 35 through 39 as those entered in classes No. 1 through 35.

Each variety must be correctly named or subject to correction by classification committee and classes according to the master list. Plants entered in classes No. 1 through 39 must be single crown plants and will be judged on quality.

No flared top pots, supports or collars under foliage will be permitted. Any shape pots permitted. All pots must be covered with dull side of aluminum foil. Exhibitor is to print own name on adhesive tape and attach to bottom of foil-covered pot.

Only necessary show personnel will be permitted on the floor while judging is in process. The club will afford all possible protection to exhibits, but cannot be responsible for any losses. Additional classes may be made if necessary.

Mrs. Ray Fike will serve as general chairman of the show. She will be assisted by Mrs. Leo Gepner, staging; Mrs. S.W. Smith, schedule; Mrs. William Chancey, entry and register; Mrs. Eilyn Paulsen, classification; Mrs. Alice Prescott, judges; Mrs. Paul Prochnow, publicity; Clara Walton, posters; Mrs. Elvis Utley, hospitality; Mrs. S.R. Greene, guest book; Mrs. C.B. Requa and Mrs. D.J. Dorton, tea table, and Mrs. Carol Utley, sales table.

The horticulture division features specimen plants, section No. 1 — single blossoms, classes No. 1 through 9; section No. 2, double blossoms, classes No. 10 through 18; section No. 3, semi-double, classes No. 19 through 27; section No. 4, plants, supports, amazons, supremes, classes No. 28 and 29; section No. 5, any type or size blossoms, any foliage, classes No. 30 through 35; section No. 6, single or double, any foliage, in unusual or decorative container holding one plant, classes No. 36 through 38; section No. 7, large specimen plant, class No. 39; section No. 8, collection, class No. 40; and section No. 9, specimen plant, classes No. 41 through 44.

Design division includes section No. 10, artistic plantings, classes No. 45 through 47; section No. 11, arrangements, classes No. 48 through 57; section No. 12, educational exhibits.

The sales table will include plants and various supplies, hobbycrafts and weathered wood.

During the club's April meeting, a leaf exchange was held and Clara Walton presented a program on driftwood. The next club meeting is set for May 10 at the home of Mrs. Sam Porter.

Mrs. Dale Bowman, president, conducted the business meeting and the opening thought was given by Mrs. George Easton of Jerome. Members reported on the sick calls made and community services given.

Mrs. Bowman reported Idaho has filled its quota of young people to attend the United Nations Pilgrimage for Youth in Washington, D. C. in July.

In commemorating the 152nd Anniversary of Odd Fellows, Mrs. Goldie Ridgeway gave a reading, "When I Was Young," and Mrs. Myrtle Bair read a poem by Edgar Guest, "When Mother Cooked With Wood."

The closing thought was given by Mrs. Bowman.

The refreshment table was decorated in an easter theme by Mrs. Bair and Mrs. Ridgeway.

Dear Abby

DEAR ABBY: My daughter is 18. She is marrying the boy she went steady with all thru high school. He is 19. We are managing the wedding but must limit the number of guests to 125 because my husband has been out of work and we are not in very good shape financially.

I told the groom's mother that she could invite 63 people and we were inviting 62. She said that wasn't nearly enough for her as she is presently separated from her husband and she wants to invite her boyfriend and his family, which is very large. I told her in a nice way that she could invite whomever she wanted but not more than 63 people as we had to hold down the expense.

Guess what she said? "Either I have as many people as I want or I'll refuse to sign for my son!"

Abby, he is only 19 and he can't get married unless she signs for him. So what do I do now?
SAD MOM

DEAR MOM: Don't let her blackmail you. In some states the signature of only one parent (or guardian) is sufficient. Look into it. Also tell the lady (?) that if she wants to pay for her own guests she may have as many as she wants.

DEAR ABBY: A few weeks ago my husband died, and right after the funeral my children insisted that I go visit my sister in another town to get away for a while.

Today I came home to an immaculate, but very empty house. I have two wonderful daughters and I love them dearly, but sometimes I wish they wouldn't be so helpful. They came in and cleaned my house from top to bottom. Every closet, every cupboard, every shelf had been scrubbed. My house shines from one end to another.

But what bothers me most is that they disposed of all their father's belongings! There is not a trace of him in this house. It's as tho he never lived here. There are no socks to darn, no buttons to sew. My sons in law even divided up his tools. I suppose they did this so I wouldn't feel so bad sorting thru his things and doing it myself.

I could say something, but the deed is done, however well-meaning it was. But now I have nothing to do except dust and wash my own few dishes.

Thanks for listening, Abby. I feel a little better now. —
LOST AND LONELY

DEAR LOST: I understand your feeling of uselessness, but I assure you your daughters meant well. They spared you what is usually the most painfully heart-breaking task a widow must face.

DEAR ABBY: On my next birthday, I will have to register for the draft. I am opposed to the war in Viet Nam and I want no part of it. If necessary, I will go to prison. I can't honestly say my "religious convictions" are responsible for my feelings, which I understand one would have to swear to under oath in order to become a conscientious objector.

In order to become a conscientious objector, what steps must I take? I do not want to be in violation of the law by refusing to register. But I know positively that my conscience will not allow me to take part in this war. Can you help me?
FOR PEACE

DEAR FOR: After you register, request a special form for conscientious objectors from your draft board. You will have 30 days in which to gather character references from your neighbors, teachers, your clergyman and anyone who will vouch for your sincerity in this connection. Your draft board will then review your case and decide whether or not you qualify as a conscientious objector. (There are standards set down by the national Selective Service and the Supreme Court.)

If you are classified I-A, in spite of your objections, you can request a personal appearance and appeal it.

What's your problem? You'll feel better if you get it off your chest. Write to ABBY, Box 69700, Los Angeles, Cal. 90069. For a personal reply enclose stamped, addressed envelope.

Job's Daughters plan Easter lily sales

BURLEY — The Easter Lily sales for the Easter Seal Society for Crippled Children and Adults will be conducted Saturday in downtown Burley by members of the Job's Daughters for-Cassia County.

The lily sales are under the direction of Trudy Sherrod, honor queen of the Bethel. Mrs. Glen Breeding, Job's Daughters adviser, will assist with the day's event.

Mrs. Charles J. Sutton and Mrs. Dennis Teachout, co-chairmen for Easter Seal Society for Crippled Children and Adults for Cassia County, reported that some 300 volunteers are working throughout the county on the Easter Seal Fund Drive.

The co-chairmen reminded residents that 90 per cent of funds raised in the state remains in the state and is used for various programs to aid and rehabilitate Idaho's handicapped.

Some of the programs sponsored by the Easter Seal Society is the Speech and Hearing Center, Twin Falls, with Mrs. Merie Stoddard, supervisor and therapist in speech and hearing treatment. The center cares for handicapped in Cassia, Gooding, Jerome, Minidoka and Twin Falls counties.

Other services include wheel chairs, crutches, braces, corrective shoes and other orthopedic devices for youngsters. Funds for transportation to medical centers are made

DEBRA WEEKS

April lessons outlined

SHOSHONE — LDS Church Relief Society lessons for April will follow a regular weekly meeting schedule.

The visiting teacher message will be on the subject of responsibility and urging members to follow the teachings of the Apostle Paul who taught "to walk as children of light."

For the spiritual living lesson from the text "The Pearl of Great Price," the subject of the "Atonement of Christ" will be studied. Women are encouraged to increase their faith in the Savior Jesus Christ, with an explanation of the atonement and ways this may help in daily life.

"Thy Speech Betrayeth Thee" is topic of the homemaking lesson, wherein the members are urged to take advantage of knowledge for using proper grammar and having a voice that is pleasing.

The social relations lesson is on the subject of self-control and discipline. Mothers are told that sometimes saying "no" to their children will indicate that they care. The mothers are encouraged to teach their children discipline in their youth.

For the cultural refinement lesson, a study will be made the topic "An Affirmation of Spiritual Values," through a study of art and literature. The works of William Wordsworth will be studied in some detail and "The Little White Girl," by James Abbott McNeill Whistler, is the art subject of the month.

Junior-senior prom slated

RICHFIELD — Music for the Richfield High School Junior-Senior Prom Thursday night will be furnished by a 15-piece orchestra from Burley High School. The dance theme is "We've Only Just Begun."

The grand march will be led by the prom king and queen chosen from the senior class, and prince and princess, chosen from the junior class.

"Who's Who"

Paul OK's new code on building

By JERRY HERRMANN Times-News Correspondent
PAUL — The city of Paul Wednesday night joined the many cities in Idaho which have adopted the uniform building code.

Young McClung also is a building contractor and has helped his father inspect buildings in Heyburn that have been constructed since he was hired to enforce that city's uniform building code.

Paul City Council, as its meeting last night decided it was having too many problems enforcing the city's old building code.

McClung will receive $5 per hour as building inspector.

The council unanimously waived three readings on the proposed code, and approved the ordinance unanimously.

The council approved four building permits — two for houses and two for remodeling projects — that had been filed under the old building code.

To enforce the ordinance, which officially will take effect Wednesday, the council hired Bill McClung. The council tried to hire Elery McClung, Bill's father, and present building inspector for Heyburn.

Under the new code, the inspector will approve permits. Even though the new uniform building code doesn't officially take effect until Wednesday, no building permits will be issued until then, the councilmen decided.

However, the senior McClung told the council that he had all he could handle now, therefore, he recommended his son who lives near Paul.

The council also discussed with Jim Martin, Martin-Roal Estate, Burley, and David A. Besel, Besel's plan to develop a subdivision on the southside of Highway 25, about one-eighth mile west of Paul's city limits.

Paul eyes new sewage plant site

PAUL — Paul City Council at its meeting Wednesday night was informed by Larry Harper that he is willing to sell about 32 acres of his farmland to the city.

Martin told the council that Besel plans to put in a subdivision like that found in big cities and not one found in this area.

This land is needed by the city for the new lagoon type sewage plant it is planning to build in the foreseeable future.

The subdivision will have a minimum of 1,200 square feet per lot and no alleys and the utilities will all be underground and connected to the city," he said.

The council plans on putting a reserve bond on the ballot this fall to see if the residents of Paul will approve of this.

There will be 89 residents in the subdivision when finished. It will also have a playground in it, Martin said.

Therefore it needed to find out if Harper was willing to sell his land, which is adjacent to the city's present sewage plant, and what type of price he is asking for it.

Martin then told the council that they wanted this property annexed to the city of Paul. He also said that Ralph Snyder, who owns the property between the proposed subdivision and the city limits is willing to be annexed into the city.

Harper told the council he was unable to put a price on the land at this time. Therefore, the council directed him to decide what he thought the land was worth and to let them know at one of the council meetings.

However, Snyder will want an amnesty from the city on taxes of his property until it is subdivided, Martin said.

The council pointed out that it only could take an option on his land when a price is agreed on.

"This subdivision would be a big addition to the city of Paul," he said.

Mayor Harold Wilson said the evaporator sewage plant would cost about $100,000 plus the cost of the land. The city expects to get state and federal funds to help finance this project.

The councilmen then reminded the men that the developer must pay for the utilities in the subdivision.

Through this lagoon sewage plant, the city would be able to handle effluent from about 10,000 residents and the plant would be big enough so no effluent is discharged into the Snake River and drainage canal.

After this, Mayor Harold Wilson instructed the city attorney, Larry Duff, to draw up letter of intent, telling Besel what the city will do and what is expected of him.

This letter is needed for the County Planning Commission meeting that Besel must appear before.

Malad mishap still probed

By PEGGY CHU Times-News Correspondent

GOODING — Investigation into the death of a Mountain Home airman whose car went into the Malad River Canyon March 21 will continue, Pros. Atty. Andrew James said today.

where criminal action is being considered, any publicity might influence the proceedings." The inquest was called to determine if the death was suicidal, accidental or homicidal. James said the verdict had no effect on his office and "we will keep the investigation open."

Verdict of an inquest Wednesday afternoon was that Sgt. Charles S. Booker's death was a "possible accident."

Officers there will determine if further investigation is necessary, according to Second Lt. George S. Ferrua, one of the investigators.

Bureaucracy fouls bright walk hues

GOODING — The Gooding Traffic Safety Council wants to paint crosswalks in front of the schools in bright colors, but the state bureaucracy disapproves.

Instead, Johnson recommended that the crosswalks and pavement markings be repainted in the same white color. He made several other suggestions for improved safety in the town and these will be presented by the safety group to the Gooding City Council.

Burley councilman improves

TWIN FALLS — A Burley City councilman who was injured March 12 in a motorcycle accident in Burley is in improved condition at Magic Valley Memorial Hospital.

Johnson recommended "school crossing ahead" signs be installed and said the state does not object to a movable flashing light being placed in the street during school hours.

Rex Stanley, 50, remained in critical condition for several weeks after the accident, but Thursday his condition was reported as fair. Driver of the cycle on which Stanley was riding, Dennis Johnson, 35, Burley, was killed in the mishap.

Other suggestions are: curbing and guttering of Orchard Street and placing a "No U-Turn" sign there; a 30-inch instead of 24-inch stop sign at the intersection of Main and Third Avenue West, and also at Fifth Avenue East and Main; new stop signs at Seventh and Main and a "Signal Ahead" sign at Eighth and Main.

Shoshone sewer lagoon site purchase passes

By MELBA THORNE Times-News Correspondent

SHOSHONE — Shoshone City councilmen have signed an option agreement to purchase land for a sewer lagoon site and right of way easement for the sewer pressure lines, Mrs. Claude Chess, city clerk, said today.

Mayor Elwood R. Werry and Mrs. Chess were authorized by councilmen Tuesday night to work with Howard E. Adkins, city attorney, to make corrections necessary to complete an ordinance dealing with the sale of the sewer bonds.

Werry said the council is awaiting approval of final plans on the sewage system project by the Idaho Board of Health and the Federal Environmental Agency before calling for construction bids and sale of bonds.

Werry said the council is awaiting approval of final plans on the sewage system project by the Idaho Board of Health and the Federal Environmental Agency before calling for construction bids and sale of bonds.

The land runs from the city limits to the lagoon site and is owned by the LDS Church. The area where the lagoon is to be built includes land owned by three different people. The city previously has signed option agreements with the other owners, Mrs. Chess said.

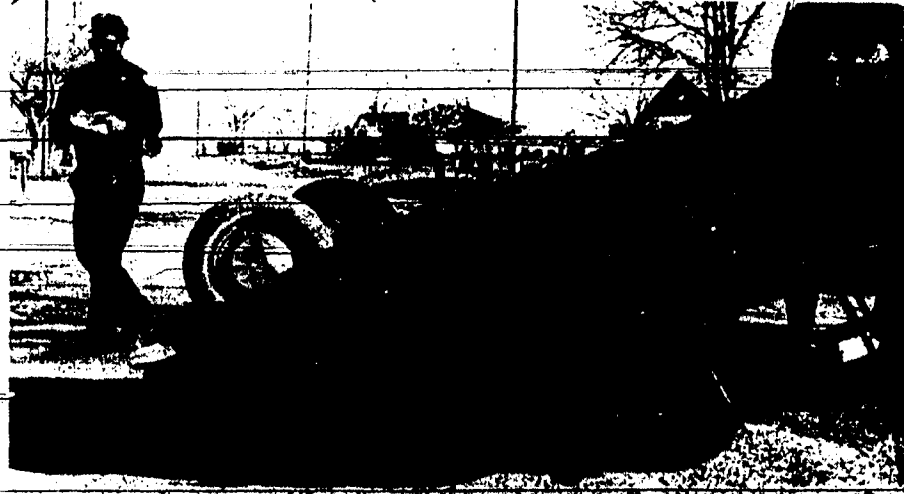

Werry said the council is awaiting approval of final plans on the sewage system project by the Idaho Board of Health and the Federal Environmental Agency before calling for construction bids and sale of bonds.

Survey attracts interest

BOISE — Residents of four counties in the Wood River area are showing great interest in the future of their communities, said Howard Tankersley, Boise community and resource development leader of the University of Idaho Extension Service.

Nearly one-third of more than 5,000 families in Camas, Blaine, Gooding and Lincoln counties have replied to an attitude survey sponsored by the Wood River Resources Area Association and conducted by the extension service in cooperation with county commissions.

Really flipped

UPSIDE DOWN on Madrona Street North is this small car which flipped as it was traveling east on Falls Avenue East Thursday morning. The car was driven by Helen Morgan, 14, Twin Falls, who was treated and released from Magic Valley Memorial Hospital. The accident started in the city limits, but the car landed outside the city limits, so city and county officers combined the investigation. Shown in the photograph is city Patrolman Pat Birmingham. The driver, who was alone, told officers a vehicle pulled in front of her and she swerved to avoid a collision.

The questionnaire concerns the residents' attitudes about needs and priorities for development of the Wood River area counties.

The driver, who was alone, told officers a vehicle pulled in front of her and she swerved to avoid a collision.

The survey was divided into three main categories. The first part concerned the people's attitudes about normal community services. The second section included questions concerning the entire four county area, said Tankersley. The last section deals only with specific problems of the individual counties to pinpoint local problems.

Filer bans old junk cars

FILER — The Filer City Council barred junk cars from private property in the city at its meeting Tuesday night.

Gem logjam said broken

(Continued from P. 1) Kildwell said the plan had already been approved by Gov. Cecil Andrus and Idaho's two congressmen, adding since all were in "substantial agreement the die is pretty well cast."

He said he meant to keep his promise and said the papers had already been drawn.

The action makes it unlawful to keep junk cars on private property for resale purposes. The ordinance provides for removal of the junk car bodies should owners fail to comply.

The Senate first approved 23-12 a reapportionment measure which floor sponsor Sen. Warren Brown, R-McCall, said he felt could be justified in the courts even though the deviation from the mean was as high as 8.9 per cent and as low as 10.6 per cent.

Objections to the plan came from Sen. Nels Solberg, D-Grangeville, who argued against moving Legislative District Nine — now composed of Adams, Gem, Valley and Boise counties — up into Idaho County.

He said 30 of the 35 districts had deviations of three per cent or below, two had four per cent deviations, two had five per cent deviations, and the highest had a deviation of 8.9 per cent.

The survey data will tell if the people will support dams or if they want river beds to go unaltered, he said.

Dog owners were reminded that April 15 is the deadline for dog license renewal. Fees are set at $2 for males and $5 for females.

City trustees discussed plans for a proposed swimming pool at the city park, but deferred action.

However, he said, the highest district — Fremont and Madison counties — was high because Ricks College students were included and said if the 1,839 students included who were not even Idaho residents were removed the deviation would be only 0.55 per cent.

Albion approves $26,600 spending

ALBION — No one protested the 1971 Albion city budget at a public hearing Tuesday night, according to Mrs. Gaila Mahoney, city clerk.

Councilmen adopted the $26,600 budget which is just $50 higher than last year's budget.

Items remaining the same both years are $50, travel; $50, dues; $250, auditing, and $150, legal.

Revenue received last year included $2,474.63 for electricity and water; $355.75, property taxes and interest; $2,095.80, liquor apportionment; $2,058.50, highway apportionment; $1,449, television cable system, and $865.04, miscellaneous.

The new jury law stipulates the jury list shall be drawn from a "master list" from voter registration books.

New jury-selection law leads to trial delays

By BONNIE BAIRD JONES Times-News Staff Writer

RUPERT — A new state law regulating jury selection has left Idaho courts without juries to hear scheduled cases and has caused jury trials in one part of the Fifth Judicial District to be postponed.

declined to stipulate the existing jury panels were legal and suitable. If both sides will so stipulate, he said, other scheduled jury trials could be heard.

mission. The new law says a jury commission shall be appointed in each county, one member to be the county clerk and the other to be selected by the senior judge. Lancaster said he understood the senior judge, Charles Scoggin, Gooding, had delegated appointment authority to Judge Ward for this part of the district.

Under the new law there are no exemptions until the individual whose name is drawn appears in court and is granted exemption by the court.

The law became effective upon signature by Gov. Cecil D. Andrus. The bill was signed March 22 by the governor.

He said he issued orders Wednesday afternoon to the clerks of Cassia and Minidoka counties to begin immediately to prepare new jury lists under the new law, SB1140.

The new jury law stipulates the jury list shall be drawn from a "master list" from voter registration books.

The law provides each county must have an approved master jury wheel and jury wheels for each court. In Twin Falls County, Lancaster said, this could mean up to four jury wheels.

Those who misrepresent facts on the juror qualification forms are subject to $300 fines or 90 days in jail.

There are between 13,000 and 14,000 registered voters in Twin Falls County who would comprise the "master jury list," Lancaster said. He said additional help will be hired and the jury list selected from these as prescribed by law. He said the county maintains a voter index card system and plates must be made up on all new registrations from the last election before the jury list can be prepared.

Judge Bellwood said if a district court or lower court continued to hold jury trials before juries selected under the old law and without stipulation by attorneys in the cases the verdicts could be ruled invalid.

Judge Sherman Bellwood, Rupert, said today he has postponed two jury trials in the Mini-Cassia area because the legality of jury panels selected under the old state law is in question.

In Twin Falls County, Clerk Harold Lancaster said on the advice of Judge Theron Ward, he has begun preparing new jury lists and hopes within two weeks to meet requirements of the new law.

These will be selected by establishing a "key number" larger than 1 and selecting each key number name on the

Both cases, he said, were postponed because attorneys

One of the steps yet to be taken, he said, is the appointment of a jury commission. The new law says a jury commission shall be appointed in each county, one member to be the county clerk and the other to be selected by the senior judge. Lancaster said he understood the senior judge, Charles Scoggin, Gooding, had delegated appointment authority to Judge Ward for this part of the district.

Under the new law there are no exemptions until the individual whose name is drawn appears in court and is granted exemption by the court.

these plates are prepared by regular workers in spare time.

House starts early on remap try

BOISE (UPI)—With final adjournment straight before them, Idaho's representatives returned to their chambers three hours before the Senate today to try to agree on a reapportionment plan.

But it was uncertain whether the plan approved by the House would be one of the two passed by the Senate late Wednesday—which would mean final adjournment today—or one of those still being studied in the lower chamber when it adjourned Wednesday.

The legislature had three more days in which to wrap up its work under the 20-day limitation placed on special sessions. Gov. Cecil D. Andrus has indicated he would not ask the lawmakers to return to another special session.

The Senate gave the house its choice between the two bills approved when the upper chamber broke for dinner, then returned to kill its reapportionment measure—formally recognized the Senate measure before it left for the night, but House Minority Leader Edward V. Williams, D-Lewiston, said some of his colleagues wanted one more night to work on various plans in hopes of making them more palatable to themselves.

For a while Wednesday it appeared the lawmakers could meet final adjournment.

Work in both chambers had been stalled on a Democratic-Republican dispute. Senate President Pro Tem James Ellsworth, R-Leadore, at one point threatened to introduce a resolution suspending Senators' pay as of midnight unless the internal problems were straightened out.

The Senate met Wednesday afternoon and ran head-on into its problems when Democrats 10 times blocked Republican attempts to suspend rules for consideration of measures. Republicans used their majority muscle to thwart two Democratic attempts to recess and suspend.

At one point, Ellsworth rose to his feet and charged there had been a "concerted effort on the part of the minority to not only slow down, but to stop, if possible, the ordinary wheels of legislative machinery. "All of the tactics can be summed up: The minority does not wish to reapportion, notwithstanding the laws and the rulings of our courts," he said.

But Senate minority Leader John V. Evans, D-Malad, disagreed, saying reapportionment could have been completed by the first week of the special session "if there had been any reason in the minds of the majority."

But while the House began its debate on the reapportionment bill, a measure eventually killed 3-25 after a dinner break, the Senators returned to caucus and on a "gentlemen's agreement" decided to send the two reapportionment bills and one redistricting measure to the lower chamber.

Both houses worked until the late evening hours, the Senate straight through until shortly before 9 p.m. and the House until 10:20 p.m.

Strain telling on Gem solons

BOISE (UPI)—The strain of a special session back-to-back with a lengthy regular session is beginning to tell on Idaho's 105 legislators, according to their physician, hostesses, and attaches.

Rep. John Edwards, R-Council, a physician in private life who acts as legislative physician, said since the pressures of reapportionment have begun to mount he has had "quite a little increase in requests for tranquilizers and aspirin."

Edwards said he had also had a stepped-up demand for antacids, but added he was not certain whether ulcers caused the increase.

"It's all this sitting around," Edwards said, noting he had had several cases of high blood pressure.

"It's just deadly. Their nerves and tempers start getting short."

"At least everybody's still here," he added.

Mrs. Mack A. Redford, hostess in the House lounge, said her food bill has increased dramatically in recent days along with more demands for hard-boiled eggs, relishes, coffee, juice and pickles.

In both the Senate and House, members contribute to a fund for the lounges. Mrs. Redford said each representative has paid about $20 since the regular session began Jan. 11.

"This week there's a lot of frustrations," she said. "They wonder what people are thinking."

"The businessmen are getting a little panicky because their partners or families running things never thought they'd run things this long. The farmers are worried about getting their crops in."

Mrs. Redford's counterpart in the Senate, Mrs. Virginia Smith, said mounting tension "causes them to want to eat and the solution we seem to have is to peel carrots by the barrel."

She said she has also begun making "old fashioned soup" for lunches in an effort to "take them away from rolls and bread and starchy sorts of things."

Mrs. Smith said there are more requests for coffee, but added she has begun pushing milk and fruit juices "because we feel this is a little better for their health."

Mike Franklin, Cambridge, who came as a senate page during the regular session, said he noticed more than anything the "terrible strife between the two parties, sometimes to the point that compromises are hard to come by."

He said the lengthening special session had caused problems for some of the attaches, who had found other jobs on the assumption the special session would not last this long and then were unable to make it to their new positions.

"Everybody wants to go home but they can't until these things are solved," Franklin said.

Reed Christensen, Senate sergeant-at-arms, said the reapportionment disputes are causing morale problems among Senate attaches.

"There is a certain amount of strain anytime someone's going to be cut up (in reapportionment) because someone's going to get hurt somewhere," he said.

"As attaches we've learned to like and appreciate all of these people, regardless of what party or what part of the state they come from."

Dismissal requested

BOISE (UPI)—Idaho's Board of Regents has asked for dismissal of a lawsuit testing its non-resident tuition practices, contending the plaintiff has failed to exhaust all appeal remedies available to him.

John W. Orwick, 23, brought the suit last December. He contended he has been enrolled continuously at the University of Idaho since September, 1964, but has been denied resident status.

Orwick contends he has been forced to pay a total of $2,195 tuition in violation of his rights. In an affidavit Tuesday, the board contended an administrative hearing board was established last May at the university to review appeals from decisions in tuition cases by school officials.

Permit reserve plan in limbo

BOISE (UPI) - An attorney general's opinion said Wednesday the Fish and Game Commission is neither specifically authorized nor specifically prohibited from setting aside blocks of out-of-state hunting and fishing licenses for specific uses.

Deputy Attorney General Richard Greener, however, noted the Fish and Game Commission could promulgate a rule to provide for reservation of the blocks for non-resident hunters who contract with Idaho outfitters and guides.

Greener wrote his letter in response to a query from Richard Woodworth, director, Department of Fish and Game, who asked whether a bill enacted by the legislature would authorize the commission to set aside blocks of 5,000 to 6,000 non-resident fish and game licenses to be reserved for individuals who contract with Idaho outfitters and guides.

Greener said the language of the bill authorized the commission to establish a limit as to the number of each "kind" of license sold or to limit the number or prohibit entirely participation by non-residents in controlled hunts.

But Greener said while the commission is not expressly authorized to set aside such blocks it is not prohibited from doing so, and added under its statutory authority the commission could provide for such a move under its ability to set rules and regulations "as may be necessary to carry out the purposes and intent of all laws pertaining to wild animals, wild birds, game fish and other wildlife."

Laos police foil right wing coup

VIENTIANE (UPI)—Laotian police have foiled an attempt by a right-wing faction to topple the neutralist government of Prince Souvanna Phouma, a security source revealed today.

Acting on an informer's tip, the government put down an attempt by supporters of former Laotian strongman Gen. Phoumi Nosavan to stage a coup at midnight Tuesday, the source said.

The plotters sought to return to power the general, who now lives in exile in Thailand, the source said.

plotters reportedly were arrested Tuesday and Wednesday but many of them were released today.

The security source said a small force of "Thai mercenaries" tried to cross the Mekong River into Vientiane Tuesday night but government police, acting on information received from an informant, began making arrests and the plot was foiled.

Water fund boost asked

WASHINGTON (UPI) - Legislation to double the funding for federal water resource research programs has been introduced into Congress by Idaho GOP Reps. James A. McClure and Orval Hansen.

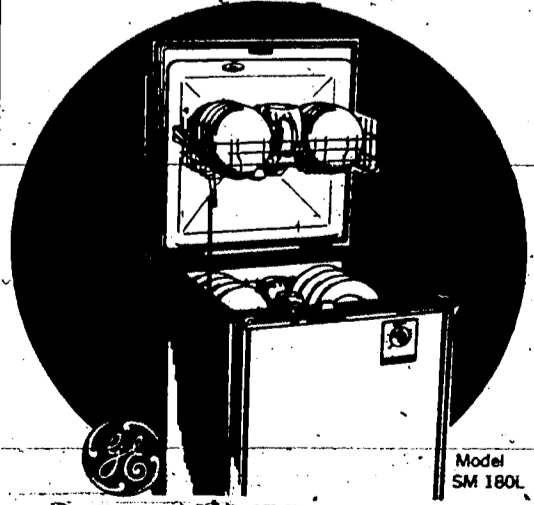

In joint statement the lawmakers said the proposed legislation would mean an increase in funds for the Idaho Water Resources Research Institute.

"The institute has worked closely with the Idaho Resources Board in conducting water needs studies and in developing the wild rivers methodology study," they said. "But, the board can no longer continue major funding of university research. Therefore this measure would enable the government to pick up the slack."

Ghetto scouts helped

CHICAGO (UPI)—"We can't guarantee that a Chicago Boy Scout won't slice up a grocery store, shove heroin or turn into a bum—but we'll give you odds," a Boy Scout advertisement reads.

James White, a former Chicago teacher of the year, is trying to improve the odds for black kids in the ghetto.

White, 36, is the driving force behind the expansion of scouting at the Cabrini-Green Homes, a crime-infested high-rise ghetto housing project on Chicago's Near North Side.

"I've lived in this neighborhood all my life," White said. "I know what these kids go through just to make it through the day. They deserve a lot of credit, and they deserve a lot of help. We'd only be hurting ourselves if we didn't try to work with them."

White began with five Boy Scouts a year and a half ago. Today, he is one of the leaders of over 330 cub scouts, boy scouts and explorer scouts in the Cabrini-Green project.

There are 33 scouting units with 850 scouts in Cabrini-Green, but White proudly referred to his as "the" Boy Scout troop in the housing project.

"We have the most well rounded troop in Chicago," he said. "We strive for the things that are going to help a boy later in life."

Athletics are a big part of the scouting program in White's troop. Scouts participate in every phase of athletics, from table tennis to advanced gymnastics. They have won nearly 30 team and individual trophies in athletics, including the YMCA physical fitness championships for Chicago.

"We try to keep the youngsters busy and involved," said White, who played Triple-A baseball in the Pacific Coast League for eight years, and four seasons of basketball at Alabama State Teachers College.

"The Ghetto Gunners," White's Scout basketball team, represented Chicago in the National Explorer Olympics last summer at Fort Collins, Colo. Eighteen scouts earned $50 each working with the neighborhood youth corps to help pay for the trip.

Currently, the Scouts are getting in shape for the National Canoe and Kayak Racing Championships (Olympic style) this August near Rockford, Ill.

White takes his Scouts into other parts of Chicago as often as possible—the ghetto being the only place they knew before joining the Boys Scouts. Also into the country. Recently, 35 of his Scouts, along with a Scoutmaster from Wisconsin, visited the Wisconsin with 25 white Boy Scouts from another Chicago troop.

White takes his Scouts in shifts to Ojibwa Scout Reservation in Michigan, which is owned by the Chicago Boy Scouts. And 150 Scouts have twice traveled to Echo Valley in Kalama, Mich. for ice skating and tobogganing.

"We have something for everybody," White said, making the point that his troop is involved in more than athletics and Scout skills.

"We've even been able to get some of our kids involved in ballet," White said. Ed Parish, the owner of a Chicago dance studio, teaches ballet to five Scouts from Cabrini-Green free. Parish said they are "doing very well."

Two of the activities White's Scouts like the most are the troop's drill team and color guard. The units have performed at the Chicago Stadium twice and in many parades.

"Kids in the ghetto worship uniforms," White said. "They wear their uniforms proudly and they cherish them."

Uniform inspections are conducted at each weekly meeting. Personal hygiene—including hair cuts, clean fingernails and shoe shines—is stressed during the inspections.

White's concern for his Scouts goes beyond Scout activities. "I take this thing personally. When a kid gets in trouble in school, he's in trouble with me," said White, who teaches at Schiller Grade School in Chicago.

States attack prices

NEW YORK (UPI)—Three of the nation's biggest states—California, New York and Massachusetts—apparently are getting ready to do something about the high price of prescription drugs.

Bills have been offered in the legislatures of all three to give pharmacists the right to substitute the same drug sold under a generic label for a branded drug prescribed by a doctor.

The rules of pharmaceutical boards in most states presently insist the branded drug be used, even though more and more state and municipal hospitals are refusing to pay the higher prices for branded drugs.

The price savings by using generic drugs, or forcing the manufacturer of branded drugs to slash prices, can be dramatic.

Miltown, the widely used tranquilizer, lists at $5 a thousand pills, but it can be bought for 47¢ under its generic name, meprobamate. Acromycin, a branded tetracycline antibiotic, lists at $12.60 a hundred, but the same tetracycline can be bought for $1.85 under the generic name, Ampicillin, another antibiotic, is $12.50 a hundred generically but lists at $22.10 under the brand name.

These examples were cited by President Jerry Zelin of Generics Corp. of America of Monachville, N.J., and Adolph Storch, president of Purepac Co. of Elizabeth, N.J.

The 300 makers of generic prescription drugs in the United States can give other examples of dramatic price gaps.

Ordinary ferrous sulfate, given for iron deficiency, sells for about $1.50 a thousand pills, but you might pay $5 to $9 for it under a brand name.

Predisone, an anti-arthritis, can be bought for $8 a thousand tablets, but may list at over $100 under such brand-names as Medicon and Arthritisol. A brand name for an anti-tubercule drug packaged at $20.50, but it can be bought for perhaps $1.95 as chlorpromazine maleate.

Digifon, prescribed for cardiac patients, can be bought for $2.50 but may cost $6 or more under brand names such as Crystol and Gen-Oxyl.

Other drugs sell generically for $3.30 but list under the tradename Terramycin at $20.48. However, Zelin and Storch agreed, it is well to remember that these brand prices are list prices.

Actually, they said the big pharmaceutical firms are being forced to sell an increasing share of their branded output at big discounts to hospitals and clinics. In many cases, federal Medicare officials and state and local welfare officials refuse to pay more than the generic price for the drugs used in prescriptions even if the branded drug was used in obedience to state pharmacy board rules.

FAIRFIELD — Dick Humphreys, district game biologist in Baker, Ore., has returned from a trip to Jasper National Park, Canada, where he and others collected 20 big horn sheep and trucked them to a site on the Oregon side of Hells Canyon dam where they were released.

Humphreys is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Ellsworth Humphreys, Corral and Fairfield. He is a graduate of Camas County High School and Oregon State University. Part of the sheep had to be caught by the group in the park and subdued by tranquilizers.

Humphreys was also featured in the March 24 special issue of the Baker Democrat-Herald. A full color picture of Elkhorn Mountains taken by him covers most of the top half of the front page of the issue. A close-up of a coyote taken by him is used in the second section.

Pictures and an article on Humphreys appears in the 10th edition. He runs with the Game Department, and La Grande before coming to Baker four and a half years ago. He took up photography and writing about the time he was working with the game department.

Nicklaus established as 3-1 favorite in masters

AUGUSTA, Ga. (UPI)—Lean and bronzed Jack Nicklaus, determined to blaze a trail of major tournament victories few men will be able to follow, was established as a 3-to-1 favorite Wednesday to win the 35th Masters golf championship.

The blond bomber, most recent winner of both the British Open and PGA Championship, now holds 11 such titles—two less than all-time leader Bobby Jones—and thus has set his sights on a double goal for 1971.

Appeals court rejects Flood's suit against reserve clause

NEW YORK (UPI)—Curt Flood's first appeal on the Federal Court dismissal of his challenge to baseball's reserve clause Wednesday was rejected by the United States Court of Appeals, leaving the Washington Senators' outfielder with only one more swing.

The U.S. Court of Appeals upheld a decision by Federal Judge Irving Ben Cooper a few months ago. Cooper had dismissed Flood's complaint that the reserve clause violated federal and state anti-trust laws.

Security, money led Joe to Canada

TORONTO (UPI)—Notre Dame quarterback Joe Theismann said Wednesday "family security and monetary values" led him to spurn a verbal agreement with the Miami Dolphins in favor of playing Canadian football with the Toronto Argonauts.

Flood's suit was filed last year against Commissioner Bowie Kuhn and all the clubs in organized baseball after he was traded from the St. Louis Cardinals to the Philadelphia Phillies. Flood objected to being sold or traded, claiming that this was "bondage" and that it violated anti-trust laws in both this country and in Canada.

The runner-up to Stanford's Jim Plunkett for the Heisman Award, as college football's most valuable player in 1970, Theismann said contractual difficulties with Miami had nothing to do with his decision to join the Argonauts.

Nicklaus first won here in 1963 at the age of 23 to become the Masters' youngest champion; set a Masters record of 17-under-par 271 when he won here in 1965; and became the only man to win two Masters back to back when he won again in 1966.

Two repeat on ABA's dream team

NEW YORK (UPI)—Only two of last year's American Basketball Association's all-stars—Rick Barry of the New York Nets and Indiana's Mel Daniels—managed to retain their spots on the 1970-71 team.

Pointing that he had depended upon the fact that the ball clubs were bound because of an initial holding that baseball is not interstate commerce within the Sherman Act...

26-year-old trying for Olympics

LONG BEACH, Calif. (UPI)—Jim Kemp, the nation's best college quartermiler six years ago, is still going strong and he may even have a new event—the 100-yard dash.

Club owners had claimed that under the federal labor laws, the reserve clause is a subject of mandatory bargaining between players and owners and that this policy exempts the reserve system from state regulation.

Orr nearly blows self out of playoff

By MARTIN LADER, UPI Sports Writer. Bobby Orr, behaving more like a precocious 23-year-old youngster than hockey's best all-around player, came close to answering the dreams of several rival teams by knocking himself out of the Stanley Cup playoffs.

Judge Waterman noted that "Flood had brought a comprehensive attack on the reserve system which effectively restricted a player, if he wants to play ball at all, to contract negotiations with that club in organized baseball which first employs or reserves him or with that club's assignee team and any other clubs to which he has been sold or traded."

Hansen stars sign with BSC

HANSEN—Quarterback Walt Freestone and end Lynn Pearson, both four-year lettermen on Hansen's football team, have signed football letters of intent with Boise State College.

It appears to be without question that, today, pro baseball, with its complex web of franchises, farm teams and recruiters, and its multi-million dollar contracts with TV and radio networks, is interstate commerce," Judge Waterman said.

Hansen stars sign with BSC

Freestone is 6-1, 185 pounds and Pearson is 6-3 and 210 pounds.

Martin signs old sparmate

DETROIT (UPI)—Pitcher Dave Boswell, a 20-game winner for Detroit Tigers manager Billy Martin when he was manager of the Minnesota Twins in 1969, signed a contract with Detroit Wednesday.

Boswell, who was released by the Twins during spring training, had been working out with the Tigers at their spring training camp in Lakeland, Fla. During his seven seasons with the Twins, Boswell ran up a lifetime mark of 67 wins, 54 losses and a 3.49 earned run average.

Giants use power to rip Padres

SAN DIEGO (UPI)—Willie Mays clouted his second home run of the year and Ken Henderson and Dick Dietz each chipped in with their firsts of 1971 as the San Francisco Giants behind Gaylord Perry's four-hit pitching, trimmed the San Diego Padres 7-3 Wednesday night.

Pacers nip Pros in overtime, gain semi-finals with Utah

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (UPI)—The Indiana Pacers edged by the Memphis Pros 102-101 in an overtime effort Wednesday night to clinch a match against Utah in the American Basketball Association Western Division finals.

Center Mel Daniels led the Pacers with 29 points to their fourth win in a row in the best of seven series.

Nets square series with Virginia 2-2

HEMPSTEAD, N.Y. (UPI)—Bill Melchioni scored 35 points Wednesday night to pace New York to a 130-127 victory over the Virginia Squires as the Nets evened their American Basketball Association Eastern Division semi-final playoff series at two games each.

Forwards Bob Netolicky and Roger Brown hit for 24 points and 21 points respectively. Jimmy Jones led Memphis with 22 points, followed by Charlie Williams at 17 and Wilbert Jones with 15.

Three-bout closed TV card set

NEW YORK (UPI)—Plans were announced Wednesday for a boxing tripleheader to be shown on closed circuit television on May 3 from three different cities.

The Squires cut the lead to 106-105 with 8:00 left in the fourth quarter, but New York center Billy Paultz hit on two straight dunks to build the Nets' lead back to 110-105.

Braves 2, Reds 1

CINCINNATI (UPI)—The Atlanta Braves bunched three of their six hits, one a home run by Hank Aaron to score twice in the seventh inning and beat the Cincinnati Reds, 2-1, Wednesday night.

Astros 2, L.A. 1

HOUSTON (UPI)—Jesus Alou, who replaced an injured Jim Wynn in the second inning, lashed a one-out single in the eighth to break a 1-1 tie and give the Houston Astros a 2-1 victory over the Los Angeles Dodgers Wednesday night.

We find ourselves back in Glamis Castle for another bridge game. Macbeth didn't really have enough for his jump to three-clubs. Macduff, the best player in Scotland, sat North. He knew that the thane of Glamis was an overbidder but he still Blackwooded to six clubs. Banquo opened the queen of diamonds. Macbeth won, cashed his ace of spades, played ace-king and a third trump, discarded his second diamond on the king of spades and led dummy's queen of hearts. East put on his ace and led a diamond. Macbeth ruffed with his last trump and played his king of hearts. East showed out and Macbeth went down two. "Murder most foul!" exclaimed Macduff. "What means that?" asked Macbeth. "I couldn't help it that hearts broke 4-1." "Yes, you could," replied Macduff. "Draw just two rounds of trumps, take your discard of a diamond on the king of spades and then play a heart. Ruff the diamond return, lead a second heart to dummy's jack. Return to your hand with your last trump and claim your slam. You risk nothing by this. If the singleton heart and long trump are in the same hand you have no play for it." "Call it!" cried Macbeth. "All right," said Macduff, "but play up first! You owe seven pounds."

"I do," asked Macbeth. "In that case, play on Macduff. This only four in the morning."

IT'S A FACT that families with television sets in Italy far outnumber families with bathrooms there. YOU know those little jars of baby food? Just 36 cents out of every $1's worth pays for the glass. ... NO ACTIVIST in the Women's Lib should forget the female halibut outweighs her husband by 10-1.

BARNYARD CHICKENS taste better than those birds raised mechanically in antiseptic coops. That's the claim of a Wisconsin scientist. Germs are why. Chickens that are immaculate inside and out, he reports, tends to be somewhat flavorless. He prefers those with a smidgeon of bacteria. Can understand that. Pure distilled water tastes pretty flat.

"WHEN THE WOMAN who opens the door squeaks at me," says a direct salesman who makes his living cold-canvassing neighborhoods, "I know she won't let me in the house. Squeakers never say yes." ... HOW MANY DISHES did you break last year, young lady? Nine, I presume. That's the national average among married girls in their twenties. ... JOE JOHNSON of Temple, Texas, contends no horse ever won the Kentucky Derby. Might say that. The Derby is for 3-year-olds. It's not a horse until it's 5, technically.

CUSTOMER SERVICE: Q: "No doubt a highly traveled old boy like yourself has been to Fish, Ga., and Turtle, Mo., and Oyster, Va., right?" A: No, sir, have not yet made it to those fascinating municipalities. Nor to Rice, Kans., or Corn, Okla., or Pie, W. Va., or Tomato, Ark., or Cucumber, W. Va. Intend to get to them all someday, however. ... Q: "How much do we spend on the various gambling games every year?" A: About $7 billion, not counting weddings.

OUR HOUSEHOLD HINTS specialist is troubled. Looking for answers to: 1. Is it better to clean a little every day or make one big job of it once a week? 2. Can some routine cut down refrigerator leftovers so you don't feel so guilty when you throw good food away? 3. How do you arrange a linen closet so you don't wind up using the same towels all the time? Please advise.

TRANSLATE a book from English into Spanish, French, German or Russian, and it will come out about 25 per cent longer. Translate a book from any of these languages into English, and it will come out about 25 per cent shorter. Quite concise, English, really.

A STUDY OF the statistics over the last 10 years shows the young men and their ladyfingers seem to be waiting just a little bit longer to get married. Average groom used to be age 22 plus. Now he's age 23 plus. Average bride used to be just a shade over 20. Now she's just a shade under 21. Why the change?

Your questions and comments are welcomed and will be used in PASS IT ON wherever possible. Please address your letters to L.M. Boyd, P.O. Box 177076, Fort Worth, Texas 76102.

No extra water, Andrus declares

BOISE (UPI) — Water rich Idaho "has no surplus of water to be siphoned or tunneled elsewhere," Gov. Cecil D. Andrus told the 11-state Western Water Council meeting here Wednesday.

The council, formed in 1965 through the Western Governor's Conference, has the responsibility of finding a suitable means of finding a water formula for cities, states and the federal government.

Also addressing the second day session of the two-day meet was Warren D. Fairchild, assistant commissioner - resource planning, Bureau of Reclamation.

He said states should establish priorities for investment water studies and prospects with the federal government.

States should become "full-time partners" with the federal government on these projects, he said.

Another problem, said Fairchild, is the lack of information on water problems in the West reaching the public. He urged a concentrated effort to involve individual citizens.

Andrus said, "We can make certain that our natural resources are developed for the benefit of all in a way that our precious lands and waters are not exploited for the benefit of a few."

He left little doubt as to the course his administration would follow on water sharing between states.

"As you deliberate the problems facing the Western States Water Council, let me leave you with one strong observation," the governor said. "We do not regard Idaho as the watershed of the West. Idaho has no surplus of water to be siphoned or tunneled elsewhere."

Idaho and possibly Alaska are the last frontier basins of inherent natural resources, he said.

"We recognize that Idaho has been a little slow in growth, but we recognize that this slowness has resulted in the retention of what other people now want," Andrus said, looking directly at water representatives from states like California, Arizona, New Mexico and others.

"Quite possibly the decade of the seventies is our last chance to reverse the mismanagement of our land and water. It is time now to draw new guidelines for the years ahead," Andrus said.

Donel J. Lane, chairman of the Pacific Northwest River Basin, told the water council his group was preparing a program for the Pacific Northwest River Basins Commission's projects for the years ahead.

He outlined these steps to prepare the necessary material "to insure accomplishment of the commission's plan and at the same time provide needed detailed guidance to the western United States water plan."

Examine the plan of study for the western states in detail and prepare supplemental material on authority and objectives; examine completed and ongoing studies to determine contributions they will make; describe unresolved problems; and prepare cost estimates.

The council tentatively agreed to meet in July of this year in Arizona, probably Phoenix, but no firm date or time has been set, and agreed to a $125,000 budget for the next year.

Assessments to states for the coming year to participate in the council will be $6,500, down from the $10,500 paid by states for participation during the current year.

The western states water council includes Montana, Wyoming, Colorado, New Mexico, Arizona, Utah, Idaho, Washington, Oregon, Nevada and California. Representatives from Texas were in attendance as observers.

He added, "Price fixing, deceptive advertising, adulterated food products and kickbacks take far more from the public than any so-called other criminal activity."

He said it is in these

Echoes pleasing

DENVER (UPI)—Vice President Spiro T. Agnew said Tuesday he was always glad to visit Colorado.

"There is one point overlooking a valley that I've been to in the Rockies where you can actually create an echo of your own voice," he told Colorado legislators.

"To me that's very good. It's the only place I know of where I can make a speech and hear the words come back exactly as I said them."

District judgment reversed

BOISE (UPI) — The Idaho Supreme Court reversed a Fourth District Court judgment Wednesday on grounds the jury on the case was not properly instructed on a point concerning specific intent.

The lower court had entered the judgment against the Adjustment Department Credit Bureau, Inc. A jury had found the firm guilty of extortion and District Judge J. Ray Durtschi had imposed a fine of $1,500.

The case arose out of attempts by the firm in August, 1967, to collect a promissory note. Evidence at trial showed an Adjustment Department employe had threatened to institute a criminal prosecution against the debtor unless the note were paid.

Deposits up

LANSING, Mich. (UPI)—Michigan's 31 state-chartered savings and loan associations recorded a 171 per cent increase in net deposits during 1970, reports the State Financial Institutions Bureau.

The bureau said the associations had a net increase of $103 million in savings during 1970, compared with $37.9 million during the previous year.

Meany assails labor label

WASHINGTON (UPI)—AFL-CIO President George Meany accused the Nixon administration Wednesday of trying to make labor "the scapegoat for the economic mess" it had created.

"We want inflation ended," as much as anyone, for as long as anyone, Meany declared.

"We want full employment restored. We are prepared to sacrifice to meet these goals — as anyone, for as long as anyone, Meany declared.

"But we will not be the scapegoat for the economic mess created by this administration's ill-conceived 'game plan.'"

In his first public statement since President Nixon set up machinery intended to control labor costs and prices in the construction industry, Meany denied a White House claim that labor had voluntarily acquiesced to the establishment of controls. They were "forced" on labor, he said.

The gruff-spoken, balding labor leader testified before the Senate subcommittee on financial institutions. He endorsed a House-passed bill to extend for two years the President's authority to impose controls on prices, wages and salaries at levels not less than those that prevailed May 25, 1970.

But Meany quickly converted his appearance into an attack on Nixon's economic policies as well as on Dr. Arthur F. Burns, chairman of the Federal Reserve Board.

His words dripping with sarcasm, Meany said "Arthur, my good friend, the doctor," had performed "an economic miracle" through money-control policies by driving up both prices and unemployment by the Fed's money-control policies. Economists thought it couldn't be done, Meany said.

Aide named

BOISE (UPI) — Thomas C. Frost, a former chief deputy Idaho attorney general, has been named an assistant U.S. attorney in Boise.

Frost, 34, a 1965 graduate of Washburn University school of law, Topeka, Kan., is a member of the Idaho and Kansas Bar Associations.

During the 1st Idaho Legislature he served as consultant to the House Revenue and Taxation Committee.

Early start asked

SALT LAKE CITY (UPI) — Ralph Nader, self-appointed consumer protectionist, challenged students at the University of Utah law school today to enter public interest law work while still in school.

Speaking during the university's annual Challenge Week, Nader said the greatest strides in consumer protection are being made by a few public interest lawyers, and he added the action today is not in politics. He said it is in these citizen-lawyer reform groups.

Nader said "crime is our society has been defined in the most primitive terms such as murder, rape, robbery, or assault. But most crime committed against the public is carried out by businesses, unions and governments."

He added, "Price fixing, deceptive advertising, adulterated food products and kickbacks take far more from the public than any so-called other criminal activity."

Electric Heat Is Quiet Heat

In today's mobile homes

it's pure comfort!

Scientists have proven that our world is getting to be a noisier place to live. This noise presents a very real hazard to the physical and mental health of mankind.

Jet airplanes, trucks, lawnmowers, and even today's popular music, all turn out large quantities of noise to bear down upon our senses.

The effects are easily seen. Tension rises, nervousness is on the upswing, tolerances for petty annoyances plummet, sleep is lost and resistance to disease drops as man is affected by the noise levels around him.

Because of this, it is an absolute necessity to reduce household noises to a minimum. Carpeting, draperies and acoustical ceilings can all work to absorb a large part of the sound.

In addition, sound fatigue can be cut considerably by using quieter mechanical systems in the home.

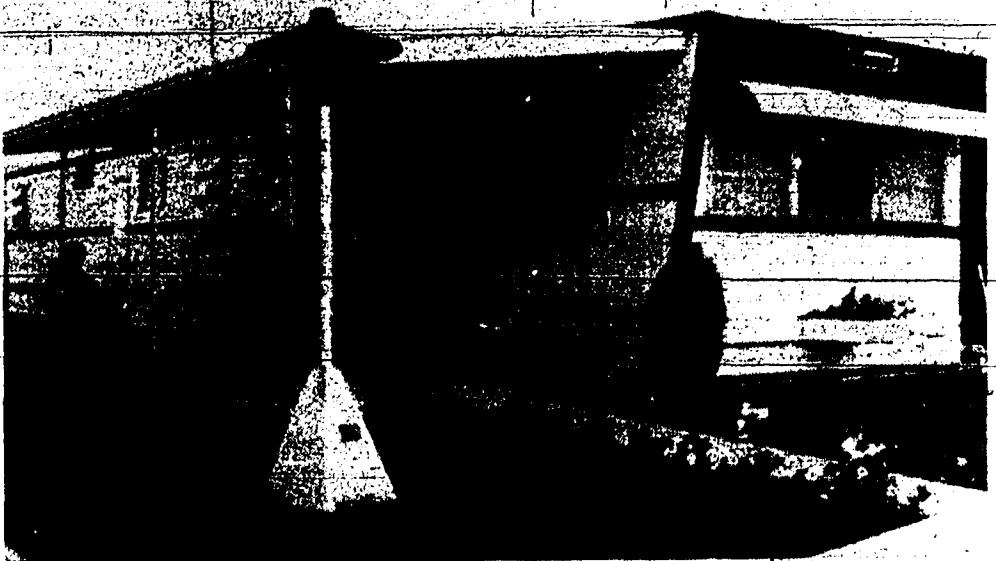

In a conventional house, for instance, the old-fashioned furnace can clank, groan and snort almost as it pleases, in an isolated basement space. Since the fiery burner is in a distant part of the house, no one hears the roar of ignition as the flame is lighted every few minutes in the furnace chamber.

But in a mobile home, says the Edison Electric Institute, you can't isolate your furnace. It lives where you do. This is one main reason why flameless electric heat is becoming so popular in modern mobile homes. With this modern heat source, there is no burner to ignite. There is no fuel to burn. There is no noisy mechanism. With a flameless electric heating system, the only evidence of its quiet, efficient operation is the gentle, flow of warm comfortable air through the mobile home.

With flameless electric heat and the air conditioning which can be installed as part of the same system, the noisy outside world can be shut out.

Even though our world is getting noisier and noisier outside, life inside the modern mobile home is getting quieter and quieter—thanks to flameless electric heating and air conditioning.

Easy To Change To Electric Heat

If you're already living in a mobile home and are dissatisfied with the heating system, there's good news for you. You can convert your mobile home to electric heating. Once you do you will have a home that's more comfortable, cleaner, and safer than any you've ever had.

And it's easy to convert to electric heating. Although the wiring system in your present home may be inadequate for the installation of electric heat and air conditioning, additional wiring can usually be added to the service pole at a minimum of expense to you.

The old heating system can be removed and a new electric one installed with ease by a competent electric heating installation contractor. One electrical contractor who does about 25% of his electric heating work converting existing heating systems in mobile homes reports that most of his customers feel the cost of changing is more than offset by the comfort and convenience they gain.

What does it cost to convert to electric heat? Of course the individual cost of switching to an electrically heated mobile home depends on the type of equipment selected, the size of the home, and also if any storm doors, windows, insulation or weather stripping are added, but in one survey, 87% of the homeowners who converted to electric heat found that it cost less than $500, including the cost of any storm doors, windows, insulation or weather stripping.

If you'd like to have the heat pump, it will cost you somewhat more. The cost for switching to the heat pump, according to a survey, averaged $1,160, but the owners received the benefit of central heating and cooling automatically.

In each case, those who changed said the conversion was quick, easy and caused practically no inconvenience. When properly planned the switch to electric can be completed in only one day.

So if you're living in a mobile home with one of the other types of heating, you should consider making the move to electric heat. Those who did have found a new way of living comfort, according to the Electric Heating Association.

Electric Heating Association.

People Like Mobile Home Living

"Ask the man who owns one," went the saying in a long-ago ad for an automobile. Though this particular car is no longer on the American scene, there are plenty of sparkling models of other manufacturers which are parked in driveways all over the country. And more and more of these new cars are being seen in front of mobile homes. For mobile homes are the fastest growing form of housing in the country today. In 1969, 412,690 mobile homes were sold, or 46% of all single-family home starts.

Fiberglas Corporation showed that 70% of those people now living in mobile homes were either "extremely satisfied," or "very satisfied." Some of the things they particularly liked about their mobile homes were the floor plan, the appliances, the wall paneling material and the exterior siding and trim. Advantages of mobile home living included less maintenance, more economical than other types of housing, and mobility.

But you might ask just what does the automobile slogan have to do with mobile homes? Well, just as that car manufacturer encouraged drivers to ask the owners of his car how they liked it, mobile home dealers and manufacturers also want homeowners considering a mobile home to ask the people now living in them. They know the present owners are satisfied customers.

And speaking of satisfaction, one of the most satisfied groups of people are those who live in total electric mobile homes. They like them, they say, because electric heating is cleaner, more convenient, provides more comfort and is safer than any other type of heating system, according to the Electric Heating Association.

If you are in the market for a mobile home, these distinct advantages might be just what you want, and if so, you should shop for a total electric mobile home.

A survey of present mobile home owners, made by Owens Corning

Mobile Home Helps Beat Inflation

Electric Mobile Home Well Insulated

Housing costs have been steadily on the rise for the past several decades. Homes which at one time cost $15,000 are now in the $30,000 to $40,000 price range in most areas.

Mortgage payments, taxes and rentals have all been soaring to a point where many Americans are turning to mobile home living to trim large amounts from their household budgets.

Prices on mobile homes are but a fraction of those you would pay for a similar amount of living comfort in a conventional house. Starting with a purchase price, which runs an average of about a third the cost of a house, mobile home prices are lower in almost every respect.

For instance, prices for fully equipped mobile homes including all modern appliances, furniture, rugs, draperies and even lamps run from about $3,000 to around $15,000 for the palatial, king-size models. The average two bedroom luxury mobile home is usually under $8,000.

Beyond the purchase price of your mobile home, more savings can await you. You might want to purchase a lot for your home in a "condominium type" mobile home park for a fraction of the price you would pay for a house lot. Or you might rent a space in a professionally planned and operated park at average prices ranging from $25 to $50 per month.

Mobile home taxes are generally far less than those on a regular house. Some states tax them on the same basis as automobiles; others, on the basis of cash value. But no matter which way they are assessed, taxes are almost always lower.

Design of your new mobile home can be extremely important in determining the cost of its normal operation. One major factor is the type of heating system installed.

If flameless electric heating is used, it provides sure cold-weather comfort and saves dollars in many ways. First, installation costs are low, because no fuel supply lines are necessary, no chimney must be cut through the roof, and no special cabinet work must be built around a bulky furnace. Flameless electric heat produces clean, gentle warmth from electricity brought in by regular power lines and distributed by wires hidden within the walls or ceiling construction. And, because flameless electric heat units are so small and compact, building them into a mobile home presents no problem at all.

Another major saving comes from the fact that flameless electric heat is practically maintenance-free. No seasonal service calls are necessary to make sure burners are adjusted, pilot lights are lighted and furnaces are cleaned. The only seasonal work required is done by the mobile home owner, when he adjusts his thermostat for a season of pleasant comfort.

Cleaning bills can be trimmed considerably when flameless electric heat takes over in providing comfort in the home. Because flameless electric heat uses no fire or fuel to do its work, it produces no soot or grime or grease which can cling tenaciously to your furniture, draperies and walls.

Housing costs have indeed been on the rise for many years. But, with a mobile home heated by flameless electricity, you can reverse the trend and push the cost of living downward again.

In ever increasing numbers, American families from all age and income groups have been choosing mobile homes, to cut down on the amount of housework they need for leisure living. The emphasis is on the satisfying and enjoyable use of spare time, and mobile home living can provide just that.

Beginning with the exterior of today's modern mobile living units, the pleased home owner finds there is no longer a need for complete house painting every few years. The mobile home's baked enamel finish takes care of that.

Also, there is no longer a need to be concerned about leaking basement walls or the settling of a house as seasons change and years pass.

The wall, floor and ceiling materials inside these modern marvels of compactness are generally made of prefinished, easy-to-care-for materials such as hardwood paneling and tough, stain-resistant plastics.

Mobile home designers have concentrated on built-ins. There's no need for a housewife to pull heavy dressers and storage cabinets away from walls for floor or wall cleaning. Now, these storage units are built right into the walls.

In kitchens, under-counter dishwashers, recessed refrigerators and garbage disposal units make after-meal cleanup easier than ever. And clean, flameless electric ranges and ovens keep the kitchen much cleaner. With no flame, there is no soot or flame-produced grease to mar the gleaming kitchen walls.

To achieve the ultimate in comfort and ease-of-maintenance, the most progressive mobile home builders have gone a step beyond commonplace construction with the installation of flameless electric heating. Flameless electric heat produces clean, gentle warmth and eliminates the frequent house cleanings that are necessary with fuel-burning heating systems.

With flameless electric heat, there is no combustion, and therefore there is no soot, no grease and no dirt to settle on draperies, rugs and furniture.

Unlike fuel-burning systems, flameless electric heat requires no oxygen or air supply to make it work. Thus, windows can be kept shut to keep out airborne dirt and there is no danger of reducing the supply of oxygen inside the home. All of these features have made flameless electric heat the most logical solution in the design of modern mobile homes. And the mobile homeowner appreciates this most of all, because freedom from maintenance and housework leaves his family with more time to enjoy life.

Mobile Home Park For Good Living

Most of today's mobile homes are located in mobile home parks. Today the modern mobile home park is not only well designed and adequately constructed, but it is better managed and the mobile home occupants take a pride in their environment. They have a concern about the interior, too, and those who have an electric heating system can point with pride to the unmatched cleanliness and comfort.

When you choose a total electric mobile home you get a wide choice of equipment. Total electric mobile homes come with various types of heating equipment, and some of the basic ones are baseboard, ceiling heat, wall heaters, heat pumps, electric furnaces, and electric boilers. Whatever type of heating equipment you prefer you can get it with electric heating, according to the Electric Heating Association.

Good Living Plus Economy For Newlyweds & Retirees

The generation gap which is so much in the headlines these days seems to have faded in at least one instance. Many senior citizens share a common desire with an increasing number of young families who are turning to mobile homes for a preferred way of life. They are all attracted to the economy, the comfort and the worry-free living offered by mobile homes.

Money, or the lack of it, is often just as big a problem to families just starting out as it is to those on retirement incomes. The old learn just as quickly as the young that the lower initial cost of a mobile home dwelling can ease the strain on their budgets. Furthermore, this is only part of the savings offered by mobile homes.

Mobile homes generally enjoy a lower tax rate than conventional forms of construction and they also cost a great deal less to maintain.

Manufacturers of today's modern mobile homes are striving to build into their products a high degree of maintenance-free performance, to assure their customers a long worry-free ownership.

One of the most effective ways they guarantee this performance is in the choice of flameless electric heating for their mobile homes.

Although flameless electric heat is surprisingly economical to operate, its contribution to worry-free living goes far beyond economics, according to the Edison Electric Institute. Flameless electric heat puts to rest a large number of the homeowner's fears and worries which older, fuel-burning systems often produce in mobile homes.

For instance, with flameless electric heat, the mobile homeowner's fear of mechanical breakdown in his heating equipment is a thing of the past. Breakdowns in the fuel-burning equipment always seemed to come at a time when the heating system was most needed. And they could come in a number of ways. A burner could get clogged or dirty, a valve might freeze or stick, a pilot light could blow out or a fuel line could break, necessitating a complete shutdown for repairs.

A typical fear of the mobile homeowner with an inefficient fossil-fueled heating system is the threat of not enough heat for comfort. With a properly engineered flameless electric heating system, this worry is eliminated. Instead of an inefficient flame, which wastes a great deal of heat up the chimney, flameless electric heat is practically 100% efficient and it burns no fuel. It produces gentle warmth by the flow of an electric current through a resistance wire; and every bit of the electricity is used.

Another major fear associated with fuel-burning heaters is the possibility of a fuel line leakage. With flameless electric heat, of course, the only "fuel" is clean electricity.

Because old-fashioned fuel-burning heating systems heaters require oxygen to support combustion, a faulty system can deprive the air of oxygen and become a hazard. With flameless electric heat, there is no combustion, and no oxygen is consumed.

The elimination of these and many other fears, worries and maintenance problems has made mobile home living attractive to millions of young and old Americans.

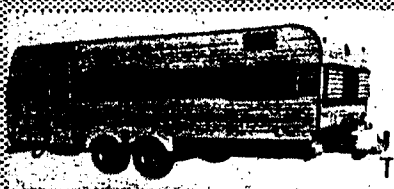

Whether they are newlyweds, or retired couples, the purchasers of a modern electrically-heated mobile home have bridged the "generation gap" in their common desire for a worry-free, satisfying life.

Kitchens in today's miraculous total electric mobile homes include all the conveniences a family needs—flameless electric ranges, dishwashers, refrigerator/freezers, and well-planned lighting. This super-sized kitchen was formed by combining two mobile homes into one.

Modern Mobiles Use Space-Age Materials

A-House Trailer Is Not A Mobile Home!

Manufacturers of today's modern mobile homes have reached new heights in providing the ultimate in convenience, low upkeep costs, dependability and ease of maintenance for their customers.

In many ways, the mobile home has advanced into the age of modern living much faster than its cousin, the conventional house. It took many generations for the conventional house to change from history's rough log cabin to the comfortable family home we know today. But it took mobile home technology just a few decades to make almost the same strides.

The house trailer of yesterday was generally found perched on a couple of wooden beams or pieces of broken rock in a weed-cluttered vacant lot. And its owner was usually finishing a temporary job in one place and preparing to move on to another in a remote location. Inside, the trailer was just as primitive as its surroundings. In design, it was a cross between early airplanes and boats. Windows were generally permanently mounted in rubber similar to those on a plane; interior woodwork was almost always plain varnished marine plywood, which yellowed and darkened as it aged, as on a boat.

Stoves were usually fed from a fuel tank or bottle carried next to the stove or outside the trailer.

Cooking was done with fire, which produced both unwanted heat and greasy dirt for the housewife.

The trailers were cramped and crowded. A space heater, which burned the same dirt-producing fuel as many of the early stoves, jutted unpleasantly into a hallway or living room. Kitchen and bath facilities were primitive, at best.

But today, modern design has come to mobile home living. Space-age materials—porcelainized steels, pressed, laminated and plastic-coated woods, anodized aluminum, foamed plastics, etc.—are used in the important areas of construction.

Kitchens are now completely equipped for the ease and comfort of the housewife. For instance, the best-selling mobile homes today have automatic dishwashers, scientifically planned lighting and clean, flameless electric ranges and ovens.

The greatest advancement in living technology, however, is the recent introduction of flameless electric heating and central electric air conditioning systems in mobile homes. Mobile home manufacturers, as well as homeowners, have found that flameless electric heating and air conditioning is the most modern and most economical means of providing luxurious, all year-round living comfort.

The manufacturers and home improvement contractors like flameless electric heating and air conditioning particularly, because of the ease and economy of installation. They, as well as the homeowners, also appreciate the fact that it takes up very little space and permits fuller utilization of the available living area in the home.

Mobile home owners have found that flameless electric heating and air conditioning offers them a great many more advantages, according to the Edison Electric Institute. Because flameless electricity burns no fuel, it produces no soot or grime to soil interior furnishings. Because there are no burners to adjust or clean, it eliminates the need for seasonal adjustments and preparation, and periodic repairs or maintenance.

Mobile home owners know that their dwellings are constructed to provide for snug and draft-free living. Windows need not be left open in cold winter weather to guarantee a fresh air supply for breathing. And, with flameless central electric air conditioning the supply of air for breathing during the summer months is always cool and fresh as springtime.

A mobile home, like a conventional house, is only as good as the basic construction methods used in its construction. Only a well-built, well-insulated home will give you the living pleasure you desire. Total electric mobile homes are well-built, and well insulated and this will enhance the convenience and economy of mobile home living because of the clean, quiet, dependable electric heating system found in all total-electric models.

When you choose a total-electric mobile home you get a wide choice of equipment. Total-electric mobile homes come with various types of heating equipment, and some of the basic ones are baseboard, ceiling heat, wall heaters, heat pumps, electric furnaces, and electric boilers. Whatever type of heating equipment you prefer you can get it with electric heating, according to the Electric Heating Association.

Guide To Mobile Home Buying

Millions of Americans have turned to mobile home living and, within the next few years, millions more will discover this new and better way of life.

Whether you are newly married, have a growing family or have reached the date of retirement, you may be planning to soon become the proud owner of a mobile home. If so, there are a number of points to consider as you shop around for the best buy.

Mobile homes are built by scores of manufacturers in this country. Most look somewhat alike on the outside. But it often takes a sharp eye and careful judgement to choose the completely modern, totally livable mobile home which offers the most for your dollar.

Ask yourself the following questions when you look for the "right" mobile home.

1. Is the exterior attractive? Is it designed with eye appeal, and has it been engineered as a complete package to include everything you need for comfort and convenience?

2. Does it have awning windows, rather than casement types which can bind, or jalousies, which have a tendency to leak air?

3. Is the plumbing adequate to carry the needs of the home, including the necessary modern accessories which make any home complete? Does it have an adequate electric water heater, or does it have the old-fashioned type that requires frequent burner adjustments and separate fuel supplies?

4. Is interior lighting well planned, and sufficient for modern living needs?

5. Is the kitchen equipped with a modern refrigerator-freezer, dishwasher, disposer and, of course, a clean, flameless electric range and oven?

6. What kind of heating system does it have?

This is one of the most important factors in choosing a completely modern mobile home, according to the Edison Electric Institute.

If the mobile home you are considering has flameless electric heat, it has the most modern, and the cleanest heating system possible.

Flameless electric heat takes up practically no space in a mobile home, so it does not rob the home of valuable living area. Since it does not use fuel and does not heat with a flame, it does not produce soot or greasy dirt to soil the sparkling new interior of your modern home. With no fuel tanks, fuel bottles or fuel supply pipes, there is no danger of leakage, smells or running out of fuel.

Flameless electric heat can be part of a total system which provides year-round heating and cooling comfort. This type of engineered package is your best guarantee that the mobile home, will provide you with luxurious comfort and live up to your greatest expectations.

If you are indeed planning to make the happy change to this new way of life, make sure that the mobile home you purchase is the most up-to-date one available. If is a wise move for your family's comfort now, and for the future when you might be considering the resale value of your mobile home.

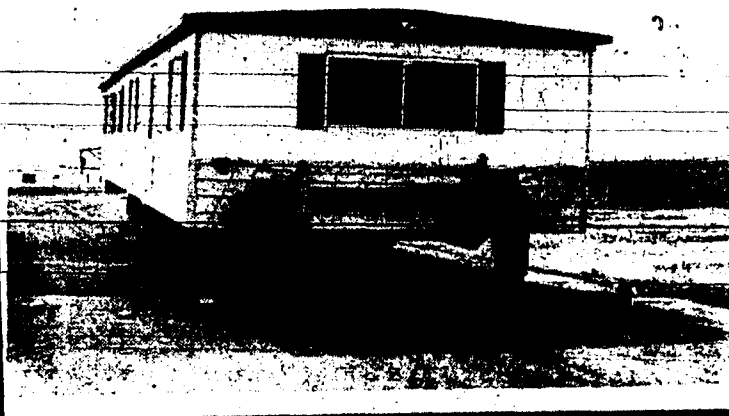

When buying a mobile home, make sure the kitchen is equipped with a clean, flameless electric range and self-cleaning oven and a dishwasher and refrigerator/freezer, too. A home with all of these conveniences starts modern and stays modern.

Here Are Some Things To Look For

Are you shopping for a used mobile home? Here are a few points to consider in your efforts to get the best buy for your money, and to have a mobile home which will retain its resale value.

1. Take a look at the general condition. On the outside, is the siding torn or badly dented? Are nails or rivets pulled out or missing? Are there large wrinkles in the siding? If so, have the frame checked for proper alignment. It could be sagging.

On the inside, is the woodwork scarred? Are the kitchen work areas, including sink, faucets and counter top corners clean, or is there a heavy buildup of grease and dirt? A heavy buildup indicates poor care of the home by its previous occupant. And be a little suspicious of stain-darkened counter tops, which indicate the first good cleaning they had was probably just before the "for sale" sign went up.

If the mobile home has a flameless electric range and oven, chances are the dirt and grease buildup will be much less in this area.

2. Check doors and windows for ease of opening. If outside doors stick or jam, it could be an indication of bad frame alignment, or it could be something as harmless as improper blocking.

Check inside closet doors and drawers for ease of operation. They can be fixed if they stick, but they will be a great annoyance until the repairman comes.

3. Check the plumbing. A dripping faucet which has badly discolored a sink can indicate lack of care and maintenance in previous months or years. Ask the age of the water heater. A good water heater can be expected to last at least five to 10 years, depending on make. If the heater is a flameless electric one, burner maintenance is not a major factor, since the electric units require none.

4. Check for the necessary built-in kitchen helpers. Does the mobile home have such modern day necessities as automatic dishwasher and garbage disposer? These will add to the value now and to the resale price later.

5. One of the most important items to check is the heating system. If it is a fuel-burning system, which requires a fuel supply, burner, valves, chimney and piping, it is a sure bet that it will require concentrated yearly doses of maintenance. If the heating system is a modern flameless electric type, however, maintenance is not a problem, according to the Edison Electric Institute.

With flameless electric heat, the only yearly work which has to be done is the adjustment of a thermostat, and perhaps cleaning of a filter.

If the previous owner has neglected to perform all the maintenance chores needed on his heating system, the fuel-burning type in the mobile home could be a financial liability to you, ready to go haywire and expensively at any time.

Since flameless electric heat needs no periodic maintenance, it cannot be damaged by neglect as other systems can.

If the mobile home you are appraising has a completely engineered comfort system in it, it will boast both flameless electric heating and air conditioning in a total plan.

If you are looking for the greatest value in a used mobile home, be sure to give careful consideration to the comfort systems it contains.

With a flameless electric heating and air conditioning system, your mobile home life will be far more pleasurable.

And, looking toward the future, you will find that both the saleability and value of your mobile home will be increased appreciably, compared to mobile homes with old-fashioned, high maintenance fuel-burning systems.

This two-walled glass shower is a very popular space-saver found in mobile homes of today.

All-Electric Mobile Homes Give Lots of Living Space

Mobile homes are designed for maximum efficiency with a minimum investment in space. The manufacturers of these modern dwellings have gone to great lengths to utilize every square inch of space for living comfort.

For instance, hallways have been kept to minimum lengths. Many of the inside doors slide into the walls, rather than swinging into a room in a space-consuming arc. Efficient flameless electric water heaters are mounted in space which would normally be wasted under counters. Closet sizes are tailored to the size of their contents to give ample room for the storage of clothing, but not to waste a single inch of unused space.

Older types of insulation, which dictated the use of very thick outside walls to reduce heat transfer, have been replaced by new, more efficient types of insulation such as foamed-in-place plastic.

With the use of these new space-age materials, wall thickness can be reduced by several inches. Every inch saved in this way means another several square feet of available living space when measured along the total wall length of a mobile home.

One of the most outstanding and up-to-date improvements being used by modern mobile home manufacturers is flameless electric heat. Unlike a fuel burning system, which needs a closet or basement to hide the bulky furnace, ducts and piping, flameless electric heat takes up practically no space.

With flameless electric heat, the total heat source for the entire mobile home is contained in one small unit which can be mounted under counters, in otherwise hard-to-get-at corners of storage areas, or even underneath the mobile home.

And with the use of radiant electric heat in ceilings or in walls, there is no loss of living space at all.

Radiant ceiling heat is completely hidden within the ceiling itself. The wall-mounted heaters fit flush within the wall, and take no floor space away from the rooms.

According to the Edison Electric Institute, flameless electric heating units can be built into mobile home additions more easily than any other type, because a simple wiring job is all the hookup these modern-age heaters require.

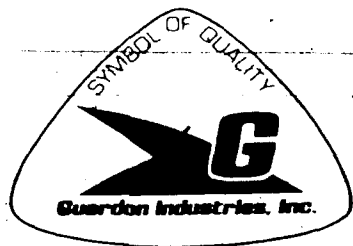

With this more convenient and efficient method of heating the modern mobile homeowner gains extra living space. And all that's lost is the noise, bother, expense and dirt which come with old-fashioned fuel burners, blowers and fossil-fuel supplies.

There is no basement in a mobile home but with flameless electric heat, there is no need for one at least as far as home comfort is concerned.

... Where Gracious Living Begins

Living in a total electric mobile home can be one of the most carefree, enjoyable ways to spend retirement years without dozens of back-breaking household chores that formerly demanded your time.

For Carefree Retirement Years

Buy A Total Electric Mobile Home

When you are ready to retire, you should be preparing yourself for a totally different way of life. Your many years of productive work have earned the right to enjoy yourself for years of comfortable, carefree living.

In your retirement years you'll want to live life at its fullest, giving more thought to enjoying yourself than to the dozens of back-breaking household chores which have always demanded your time.

As your retirement years approach, it's a good time to make a few plans for your future, to assure for yourself the care-free existence which your golden years should allow.

Mobile home living, if properly planned, can be one of the most care-free, enjoyable ways to spend your retirement years.

You won't want to worry about such chores as house painting; mobile homes, with their factory baked-on finishes, need none. You will want to escape the physical work required for roof maintenance; the roof on your mobile home is constructed of tough materials which need no periodic replacing.

You'll want to escape the chores forced upon you for these many years by your old-fashioned fuel-burning furnace. Retirement years are no time to have to worry about damper or flue adjustments, burner cleaning, flame regulation, fresh air supplies for the furnace and fuel reserves during the winter months. And you shouldn't be expected to tolerate a hot, sticky indoor environment during the summer months.

Up-to-date mobile home manufacturers are on your side, says the Edison Electric Institute. More and more of them are installing flameless electric heating and central electric air conditioning systems in the modern mobile homes they are producing, to give you the ultimate in care-free living and comfort.

The man of the house finds satisfaction in flameless electric heating because there are no fuel supplies to worry about, no burners to adjust, no service man to hire and pay out of limited retirement funds and no worries about fuel-line leakage.

The lady of the home is fond of flameless electric heat because it produces no soot or greasy dirt to soil her decor and furnishings. She likes the fact that a flameless electric furnace is so small it takes practically no room from the compact living space in a mobile home. If she has flameless electric radiant ceiling heat, slim baseboard heaters or recessed wall panel heaters, she surrenders no space to her safe, efficient comfort system.

Both husband and wife like the fact that flameless electric heat is quiet. The only evidence of the heating system is the warm comfort it provides.

And most of all, they both like the health benefits of the clean, comfortable, controlled environment provided by central electric air conditioning during the hot summer months. Clean, fresh air all year-round is particularly important to retirees in their golden years when sensitivity to fumes and dirt in the air increases and respiratory problems are more common.

As you approach retirement age it becomes a necessity to consider a new way of life that is geared to your needs. In a mobile home equipped with flameless electric heating and air conditioning, your retirement years can be comfortable and carefree in every sense of the word.

Fireplace In A Mobile Home?

If you're looking for a mobile home and want the comfort and joy of a fireplace, it's possible to get a mobile home with one. It provides warmth and beauty while doing away with log cutting, log carrying and hauling away the ashes. And there's no wasted heat, all the warmth stays in the room where you are. Depending on the model you buy, it can be used as a portable, hung on the wall or placed into frame sections. For romance and beauty in your mobile home you should consider an electric fireplace, according to the Electric Heating Association.

The Four Most Asked Questions About . . .

mobile home living

1. IS IT DIFFICULT TO OBTAIN FINANCING ON A MOBILE HOME?

Not any more! Mobile homes can be financed in much the same way as an automobile, except for a longer period of time. The growing popularity of mobile home living recently brought the Federal Housing Administration and the Veterans Administration into the picture. Under the new rulings, FHA and GI loans are now applicable to mobile homes. Federal savings and loan associations have also been authorized to participate in the mortgages on mobile homes, and many financial institutions offer financing programs through local mobile home dealerships. Not only do you get more living space for your money when you choose the mobile home way of life, but you are able to buy your home for as little as 5% down and pay for it at a reasonable monthly rate.

2. ARE MOBILE HOMES REALLY ROOMY ENOUGH FOR FAMILY LIVING?

Indeed they are! In fact, there is really no "top" limit on the amount of space a family can have in a mobile home. The average unit built today is 14 feet wide and over 60 feet long. In addition, expandables, add-a-rooms and double-wides (two units combined) make mobile homes even more spacious. With modular units and triple-wides coming into the picture, and one large manufacturer already building a 16-foot-wide unit, roominess is no problem. And there's never any lost space in a mobile home unit. It's all engineered into comfortable, orderly family living space!

3. IS MOBILE HOME LIVING HERE TO STAY, OR IS IT JUST A FAD?

Growing in popularity each year, it is estimated over 435,000 new mobile homes will be sold in 1971. Official sources indicate over 75% of all new dwellings selling for under $20,000 will be mobile homes. One of the prime reasons for their popularity is cost. While the cost of conventional housing continues to soar, modern production methods have lowered the cost per square foot for today's mobile home. Mobile home living is not a fad, but rather is a comfortable, convenient and economical way of life which is destined to grow in popularity in the years ahead.

4. DO YOU REALLY PURCHASE A "COMPLETE PACKAGE" WHEN YOU BUY A MOBILE HOME?

New mobile homes are sold fully equipped; range, refrigerator, furnace, water heater, furniture, draperies, lamps and floor coverings are all included in the original purchase price. Optional features may also be included such as air conditioning, dishwasher, garbage disposal, washer, dryer, built-in vacuum system, intercom sets and fireplaces. So, with the exception of the cost of the site and insurance coverage, the buyer does indeed get a "complete package" of convenience, comfort and economy when he chooses the mobile home way of life.
